The island is traversed from E. to W. by a great military road, 700 miles in extent, constructed by General Daendels, a governor of the island, before it was taken by the English. The year, as is usual in tropical climates, is divided into the dry and the rainy seasons; or into the east, which is called the good monsoon; and the west, or the bad monsoon. Thunder storms are very frequent, especially towards the conclusion of the monsoons, when they occur almost every evening. The heat of the climate is various. Along the sea coast it is hot and sultry. At Batavia, from July to November, the thermometer generally stands in the hottest part of the day between 84. and 90., which it rarely exceeds; and in the greatest degree of coolness in the morning, it is seldom lower than 76. In some parts, particularly among the hills, and in many of the inland towns, it is often so cold as to make a fire desirable. Java possesses a soil of extraordinary luxuriance and fertility. In the forests, especially in those on the north-east coast, is found an abundance of lofty trees, fit to be converted into masts; while forests of teak supply the place of oak for building ships, adapted to all purposes. Palms and cocoa trees are found in great variety, and are distinguished by their luxuriant growth, sometimes reaching to the astonishing height of 100 feet. Fruits of all kinds are also abundant, many of them of exquisite delicacy and flavour. In the high ground in the interior, they are found to dwindle and degenerate in that equinoctial climate. The various kinds of plants and great abundance of herbs found in Java, would afford ample scope for the researches of the botanist, as flowers exhale their perfume at all seasons of the year. Garden plants are produced in great variety, such as cucumbers, chuliflowers, beans, cabbages, pumpions, melons, patatoes or water melons, yams, potatoes, &c. Maize, or Indian corn, is a favourite article of food with the natives, who eat it roasted. The natural fertility of the soil of Java supercedes the necessity of laborious tillage. The staple produce of the island is rice. Great quantities of sugar, to the amount of 10 millions of pounds annually, are also made. Pepper is produced in great abundance and perfection; also indigo of a very superior quality. Cotton is cultivated in almost every part of the island, and the coffee plantations are extremely abundant. The soil is also very favourable to the growth of tobacco. There are many other herbs and plants, both medicinal and balsamic, that are but imperfectly known to Europeans. Wheat and barley are only grown in small quantities on the hilly tracts, chiefly in the middle parts of the island. Oats and Bengal grain thrive likewise in these parts of the island, and would be produced in great abundance, were due attention given to their culture. The domestic animals in Java are buffaloes, and cattle of every description, and sheep, goats, and pigs. Game, however, does not abound here so much as in other countries, though hares and rabbits are pretty common; and deer and antelopes are also plentiful. The horses, which are very numerous throughout the island, are small, but active. Wild hogs and monkeys are found in all the jungles. The forests abound with tigers, as powerful and as large as in Bengal. A species of black tiger, which is often found, is very ferocious. The rhinoceros is sometimes met with. Snakes are found here, as in all other hot countries, in great numbers, and of various kinds. Some of these are from 25 to 30 feet in length. Lizards of all kinds, from the variable camelion to the gunna tribe, frequent the bushes, trees, and roofs of the houses. Scorpions and mosquitoes abound in the marshes. There are, besides, various other sorts of dangerous and disgusting vermin. Of the great diversity among the feathered tribes found in Java, we may remark the cassowary, a very large and powerful bird. White eagles have been seen here; and every kind of bird of prey is continually on the wing. The aquatic tribe is equally diversified, and the extensive fisheries along this great line of coast are highly productive. At the mouths of the rivers, numbers of alligators, or caymans, are continually lurking for their prey. In the several bays, numerous shurks swim about the ships; and many animals, unknown in natural history, abound in these seas. There are manufactures of cotton, leather, and saddlery; also of iron, brass, and tin. The principal articles of exportation are rice, sugar, coffee, pepper, indigo, teak timber and planks, spices, which are brought from the Moluccas, tin from Banca, cotton, yarn, salt, edible birds' nests. The imports are European articles of every description, chintzes and muslins, silks, hats, which are a favourite dress with the Chinese and native chieftains, boots and shoes, cabinet ware, fire-arms, gun-powder, shot, haberdashery, hosiery, mathematical and musical instruments, &c. &c. The population of Java has been variously estimated; by a census said to have been taken by General Daendels, governor of the island, when it was in possession of the French government, in 1803, at 3,000,000; and by the latest surveys of the British, at 5,000,000. The inhabitants are chiefly composed of Javaneses; the Malays also form a large class; and on the coasts and in the seaports there is a considerable proportion of Chinese. The professed religion of both the Malays and Javaneses is Mahometanism, but mixed with many superstitions. For more than a century the Dutch remained in undisputed possession of this large and fertile island. An expedition was dispatched from India, under Sir Samuel Auchmuty, which landed on the 4th August 1811; and after some severe actions with the Dutch troops, the island was conquered. It was surrendered to the Dutch at the peace of Paris in 1814.

JAYA SEA, that part of the Eastern sea which lies between the island of Java to the south, Sumatra to the west, the islands of Banca, Billiton, and Borneo, to the north, and the island of Celebes to the east.

JAWOROW, a town of Galicia, 25 miles W. Lemberg. Population 4000.

JAET, a river of Germany, which runs into the Neckar.

JAYME, SAN, a city of the Caracas, province of Varinas, 180 miles S. by W. Caracas. Long. 68. 10. W. Lat. 7. 49. N.

JEAN D'ANGELEY, St., a town of France, department of the Lower Charente, on the Boutonne, with manufactures of serge and woollen stuffs. Population 5400. 17 miles N. E. Saintes.

JEAN D'ALPHE, St., a town of Savoy, on the Drac. Population 2000.

JEAN DE BOURNAY, St., a town of France, department of the Isere. Population 2000.

JEAN DE BREUIL, St., a town of France, department of the Aveyron. Population 2150.

JEAN DE GARDONNEQUE, St., a town of France, 27 miles N. W. Nîmes. Pop. 3200.

JEAN DE LOSSE, St., a small town of France, in Burgundy, 15 miles S. Dijon.

JEAN DE LUC, St., a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees, at the mouth of the Nivette, near the confines of Spain, 14 miles S. W. Bayonne. Pop. 2300.

JEAN DE MARBENNE, St., a town of Savoy, 27 miles S. E. Chambéry. Pop. 2400.

JEAN DE MONTS, St., a village of France, in La Vendée. Population 2800.

JEAN DE PIED DE PORT, St., a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees, on the Nive, on the Spanish frontier, 23 miles S. E. Bayonne. Population 1500.

JEAN EN ROYANS, St., a town of France, department of the Drome. Population 2900.

JEAN RABEL, a town of the island of St. Domingo. Long. 73. 7. W. Lat. 19. 55. N.

JEBENHAUSEN, a village of Germany, in Württemberg. Population 2400.

JED, a river of Scotland, in Roxburghshire, which falls into the Teviot about 2 miles below Jedburgh.

JEDBURGH, a parish and royal burgh of Scotland, of great antiquity, and the chief town of Roxburghshire, on the water Jed. The town consists of four principal streets, which cross each other at right angles, and terminate in a square or market-place. Jedburgh was one of the most noted border towns; and after the union of the two kingdoms, it became the centre of an extensive contraband trade, which being checked by the vigilance of the English excise, the population and industry of Jedburgh began rapidly to decline. About the year 1770 it began to revive; and within the last 10 or 12 years more especially, great improvements have taken place. There are no remains of the castle of Jedburgh. The abbey, a large and magnificent fabric, in the form of a cross, was founded by David I.; and part of it has been fitted up for a parish church. There are, besides, three dissenting meeting-houses. The town is governed by a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, and a treasurer, assisted by a select council of the principal citizens. Population in 1821, 3251. 11 miles W. Kelso, and 45 S. Edinburgh.

JEDO, or JIMBO, a great city of Japan, the capital of the empire, situated at the head of a great bay of the same name, and at the mouth of a large river. It contains many splendid palaces of the nobles and princes. All these are eclipsed, however, by the palace of the emperor, which may more properly be called a great fortified city. Besides being the residence of the monarch, Jedo is the seat of an extensive commerce, and contains many flourishing manufactures. Long. 140. E. Lat. 36. 30. N.

JEFFERSON, a county of the United States, in Indiana, on Ohio river. Population in 1815, 4093. Chief town Madison.—2d, Of Kentucky, on Ohio river. Population 13,390. Slaves 3347. Chief town Louisville.—3d, Of Ohio, on Ohio river. Population in 1815, 15,000. Chief town Steubenville.—4th, Of East Tennessee, on the south side of the Holston. Population 7509. Slaves 783. Chief town Dandridge.—5th, Of Mississippi, on the river Mississippi. Population in 1816, 4906. Slaves 2354. Chief town Greenville.—6th, Of Virginia, on the Potomac. Population 11,051. Slaves 3532. Chief town Charlestown.—7th, Of Georgia, on Ogeechee river. Population 6111. Slaves 2336. Chief town Louisville.—8th, Of the north-west part of Pennsylvania. Population 161.—9th, Of Alabama.—10th, Of Illinois.—11th, Of Missouri.—12th, Of New York, on Lake Ontario and the river St. Lawrence, bounded E. by St. Lawrence and Lewis counties, and S. by Oswego county. Population 15,144.

JEFFERSON, a post township of the United States, and capital of Ashtabula county, Ohio, 10 miles N. Lake Erie, 35 N. Warren.—3d, A township of Schoharie county, New York, 20 miles S. W. Schoharie. Population 1740.—3d, A post township of Lincoln county, Maine, 23 miles N. E. Wiscasset. Population 1205.—4th, A township of Morris county, New Jersey. Population 1201.—5th, A post township of Greene county, Pennsylvania. Population 1114.—6th, A township of Ross county, Ohio, on Scioto river, 5 miles below Chillicothe. Population in 1819, 1538.—7th, A post township and capital of Camden county, Georgia, on the Satilla, 50 miles S. W. Darien.—8th, A river of Missouri Territory, which unites with Gallatin and Madison rivers, to form the Missouri.

JEFFREY'S CREEK, a river of the United States, in South Carolina, which runs into the Great Pedee.

JEFRUMOV, a town of European Russia. Population 2200.

JEUX, a town of France, department of the Gers. Population 2100.

JEZAR, a town of Hindostan, province of Bejapore. Long. 74. 17. E. Lat. 18. 10. N.

JELLAGORE, properly JELASIR, a town of Bengal, on the Suddurecka river. Long. 87. 25. E. Lat. 21. 50. N.

JELLISGHUY, a town of Bengal, district of Raupsy. Long. 88. 42. E. Lat. 24. 8. N.

JEMETI, et c., a town of Tunis, in Africa, the ancient Tadm, noted for remains of antiquity. 90 miles S. Tunis.

JENA, a small but well known town of Germany, in the grand duchy of Saxe-Weimar, on the Saale. It has 5000 inhabitants, who derive their subsistence from the university, from the three yearly fairs, which are well frequented, and from some small manufactures of linen and hats. The principal public building is the ducal castle. It has also a council house, a riding-school, five churches, and three hospitals; and in the vicinity is the old castle of Kirchberg, now in ruins. It is noted as the scene of the great battle of the 15th October 1806, in which, by one blow, Bonaparte overthrew the Prussian monarchy. 43 miles S.W. Leipzig. Long. 11. 37. 15. E. Lat. 50. 56. 24. N.

JENEAHUR, a town and celebrated fortress of Hindostan, province of Bejjapore.

JENIKALEH, a fortress of European Russia, government of Taurida. Long. 36. 23. E. Lat. 45. 21. N.

JENTZKA, or JENIDSCHIE VARIAN, a town of European Turkey, in Macedonia. It has extensive manufactures of woollen stuffs. Population 6000. 20 miles E. Edessa. Long. 22. 30. E. Lat. 40. 48. N.

JENKIN'S BAY, a bay on the back part of the island of St. Eustatius.

JENNE, a city of Central Africa, situated on the Niger, and on the road from Sego to Tombucton. 125 miles N. E. Sego.

JERMINE CAVE, a cave on the coast of Hispaniola. Long. 71. 15. W. Lat. 18. 16. N.

JERICHO, an ancient city of Judea, now a poor dirty village, perpetually exposed to be plundered by the Arabs. 116 miles E. N. E. Jerusalem.

JERICHO, a post township of the United States, in Chittenden county, Vermont, on Onion river. Population 1135.

JERICHO, a town of Saxony, 3 miles N. N. E. Magdeburg. Population 1200.

JERSEY, isle ou, a thriving and very populous island in the English channel, the largest and most southerly of that group on the coast of France which form an appendage to the English crown. Its figure is nearly an oblong square, stretching in an easterly direction 12 miles, with a breadth nowhere greater than 7, and at a medium 5 miles. It contains about 40,000 acres, 12 parishes, 2 towns, St. Helier the capital, and St. Aubin; and several villages and fortresses. Its coast is surrounded by a natural barrier of rocks, which nearly encircle the whole island. The climate is exceedingly mild, the soil fertile, and the situation well adapted to commerce. The inhabitants, though subject to England, still speak the French language; &c. &c. since the influx of strangers during the late war, it is now on the decline. They make their own laws, are exempt from naval and military service, and from the dominion of the English church; have the benefit of a free port, and trade with the enemies of England, even in time of war; above all, they are free from the taxes with which the mother country is loaded. They live almost entirely by the produce of the soil, or by what they receive in exchange for it. They are almost wholly occupied, therefore, in agriculture and commerce. The land is sufficiently adapted for all the common crops, and also for the pasture of cattle, which is practised to some extent; but the singular mildness of the climate has decided the inhabitants to apply chiefly to the produce of the orchard, and to trust in a great measure to their trade for a supply of grain, at least for one-third of their consumption. The fruits, therefore, are of the highest flavour; and great quantities of cyder, the common beverage, are made annually. Besides apples, the principal fruit, and pears, of which the chou-montell is particularly in repute, private gardens produce peaches and apricots of great size and beauty, melons in profusion, and strawberries of superior flavour. In 1812, 59 vessels, altogether of 6000 tons burden, and navigated by 550 seamen, belonged to the island. During the subsequent year, 734 vessels arrived at the ports, and 813 cleared out. The island having been occupied as a great military depot, various fortresses have been erected on it, viz. Elizabeth castle, Mount Orgueil, Fort Henry, La Rocca, and several others. The coast is also defended by a chain of martello towers, and by numerous redoubts and batteries. The government consists of a court of judicature, and an ecclesiastical body, acting separately, and at the same time uniting with 12 constables and a military governor to form the Assembly of the States, the legislative body of the island, without whose approbation no law made in England is binding. The governor is appointed by, and in a manner represents, the crown; convokes the assembly, and has a negative voice, which, however, is merely nominal, except where the interest of the crown is concerned. The court of judicature consists of a bailiff and a president, chosen by the crown; 12 jurats, chosen by the householders; and various officers; the clerical court, of a dean and 11 rectors. There remains of antiquities, principally Druidical, are found in different parts of the island. The architecture of all the churches is the pointed or Gothic. Various attempts have been made by the French to possess themselves of the island, but without success; the most remarkable was in 1781, when they were repulsed by the brave Major Pierson, who was unfortunately killed in the action. Pop. 25,600. 75 miles from Weymouth, the nearest shore of England; and from Carteret and Boil, the nearest of the French ports, 17. Long. of St. Aubin, 2. 11. W. Lat. 49. 13. N.

JERSEY, New, one of the United States of America, situated between 33. 56. and 41. 20. N. lat. It is bounded N. by New York, S. by Delaware bay, E. by the state of New York and the Atlantic ocean, W. by Pennsylvania and Delaware. Its length from north to south is 169 miles; its greatest breadth towards the north is 70, and towards the south 75 miles. Its area is 6600 square miles, or 4,224,000 acres. It contains 13 counties, and 116 townships. On leaving the Pennsylvania frontier, the whole country is flat. The southern parts, extending 100 miles along the sea coast, are also level, for the most part. A ridge of the Alleghanies crosses the state in the parallel of 41 degrees; and to the north is another ridge, from which diverge several other chains, in a southerly direction. Among the mountains, and in the interior parts, the soil is very fertile; in other places it is almost barren, being composed of a loose sand, and small rounded pebbles; and it is in general very inferior to that of New York or Pennsylvania. The sandy lands yield an immense quantity of bog iron-ore, which is worked up to great advantage in the iron-works in these counties. The hilly and mountainous parts produce wheat, rye, Indian corn, buck-wheat, oats, barley, flax, and fruits of all kinds common to the climate. The orchards in many parts of the state equal any in the United States; and their cyder is said, and not without reason, to be the best in the world. The principal rivers in this state are the Hackensack, the Raritan, the Passaic, the Maurice, and the Musconunk, a branch of the Delaware. The sea coast is besides indented with a number of small streams or creeks; and there are several bays in this state. There are no less than seven rich iron mines in this state, from which might be taken ore sufficient to supply all the demands of the United States. Copper ore is found in different parts. Anthony is said to have been discovered in 1808. There are also found others of different sorts, which are employed as paints; lead ore, black lead, native copper, limestone, soapstone, magnesia, coal, gypsum, slate, freestone, &c. In the progress of cultivation, the native animals of the country have nearly disappeared, such as the cougar, the bear, and the wolf. There are rattle-snakes, black snakes, wampums, and other species. Along the coast, in the rivers and streams, are various kinds of fish. The inhabitants are a collection of Low Dutch, Germans, English, Scots, Irish, and New Englanders, and their descendants. This state includes the various religious sects of Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Baptists, Quakers, Methodists, and Moravians. Population 245,502. Trenton is the largest town, and the capital of the state. The other principal towns are Brunswick, Burlington, Amboy, Bordentown, Princeton, Elizabethtown, Newark, and Morristown.

JERUSALEM, an ancient and celebrated city of Asia, capital of the ancient Judea, and the modern Palestine. It belonged to the Jebusites, who, after its conquest by the Israelites, still retained a castle or fortified eminence, from which they were not expelled till the reign of David. That monarch made Jerusalem the capital of his kingdom. Solomon, on succeeding to the throne, not only protected, but enlarged this new capital; he surrounded it with stronger and better walls, and adorned the interior with that temple, the splendour of which was so much admired in the ancient world. It was taken in A. C. 417 by Nebuchadnezzar, who put an end to the kingdom. carried king Jehoiachin captive to Babylon, and established Zedekiah as his viceroy; but that prince making an attempt to re-establish the independence of his country, Jerusalem was again taken, and was then razed to the ground, the temple demolished, and all the inhabitants carried into captivity. After the conquest of Babylon by Cyrus, the Jews were permitted to return to their country, and to rebuild their temple; and Jerusalem soon resumed all its former splendour. After the conquest of Persia by Alexander, and after his empire had fallen to pieces, it was first surprised and plundered by Ptolemy, king of Egypt, and afterwards exposed to a long series of cruel attacks from the kings of Syria, which were, however, bravely repelled by the Maccabees, after many obstinate conflicts to repel the invader. Judea was conquered by the Romans, who did not, however, interfere with the religious rites, or even municipal government of the Jews. In this state were the affairs of that nation, when our Saviour appeared and suffered at Jerusalem. During the reign of Nero, the Jews rebelled against the tyranny of the procurators, and Jerusalem was finally reduced, after a long siege, by Titus; the city was burnt, and the inhabitants sold into slavery. In the reign of Adrian the city was razed to the ground, and on its ruins a Roman town was erected, called Aelia Capitolina. This name remained till, by the conversion of Constantine, Christianity became the ruling religion of the Roman empire. Jerusalem then resumed its original name, and became an object of pious veneration. As the empire became more generally Christian, Jerusalem was held always in increased veneration. It afterwards fell into the hands of the Saracens and Turks in 1076, who committed such outrages on the Christian pilgrims visiting the city, that the country was invaded by the crusaders, and the holy city taken in 1099, by the army under Godfrey of Bouillon, who, in reward of his valour, was created king of Jerusalem. That city, with the surrounding territory, was ruled, during upwards of 60 years, by five Latin kings, when it yielded to the arms of Saladin. After changing successively its Master masters, it was annexed in 1617 to the Turkish empire, of which it has ever since formed a part.

Though Jerusalem, under the oppression of the Turks, has gradually declined, yet Dr Clarke, in his visit to that city, was deeply struck with the spectacle which it exhibited. Instead of a wretched and ruined town, he beheld as it were a flourishing and stately metropolis, presenting a magnificent assemblage of domes, towers, palaces, churches, and monasteries; all of which, glittering in the sun's rays, shone with inconceivable splendour. The country surrounding Jerusalem consists of numerous hills, from whose heights there is a view of the lake Asphaltites, a noble expanse of water, surrounded with prodigious mountains; and to the north they look upon the fertile pastures of the plain of Jericho, watered by the Jordan. The streets are cleaner than those of any other city of the Levant, but very narrow. The houses are lofty; and as no windows appear on any of the lower stories, and those above are latticed, the passage appears to be between blank walls. The bazars or shops are in a most unwholesome situation, being covered over, and in all appearance a nursery for every species of contagion. Hardly any thing is exposed to sale: the various articles being secreted, through fear of Turkish rapacity. The present population is estimated, though by vague conjecture, at 20,000 or 30,000 inhabitants.

The most splendid edifice in the modern city of Jerusalem is the mosque, erected in the 7th century by the Caliph Omar, and bearing his name. It appeared to Dr Clarke superior to any other example of modern architecture in the Turkish empire, even to the celebrated mosque of St Sophia. The Church of the Holy Sepulchre was built by the Empress Helena, the mother of Constantine. It is a very handsome building, 300 feet long, and nearly 200 broad, and professes to comprehend within these limits the scene of all the great events of the crucifixion, entombment, and resurrection of the Messiah. Close by the entrance to the lower chamber are the tombs of Godfrey of Bouillon and of Baldwin, the modern kings of Jerusalem, with Latin inscriptions in the Gothic character. It seems to have been clearly proved, however, by an eminent modern traveller, that this spot cannot possibly have been the theatre of the great events which have been so often commemorated upon it. Dr Clarke, when at Jerusalem, riding out of the city by what is called Sion gate, came to a deep dingle or trench, at the bottom of which he discovered a series of subterraneous chambers, hewn with marvellous art, each containing one or many repositories for the dead like cisterns carved in the rock, on the sides of these chambers. Some of these tombs, from their magnificence, and the labour necessary to form the numerous repositories contained in them, may seem to have almost a regal destination. As the place of crucifixion appears to have been a public cemetery, and as it was without the city, the present spot appears to agree with it better than any other yet assigned. For the same reason, this seems the most probable spot for the entombment of the Messiah. A number of inscriptions on these tombs indicated that they belonged to Mount Sion; and, accordingly, a number of ruined walls, and the remains of sumptuous edifices on the hill above, seemed to point out this celebrated citadel of the ancient Jerusalem. Farther to the east, and in the place called Aceldama, were found some other sepulchres. At the foot of the Mount of Olives, and on the eastern side of the brook Kedron, are the sepulchres of the virgin, and those of the patriarchs. It seems impossible to determine when and by what people these sepulchres were hewn. They form part of a vast cemetery, which extends along the foot of all the hills which surround Jerusalem to the south and east. These, however, do not compose the whole of the sepulchral antiquities of this city. On the north-west side, by the gate of Damascus, are seen the sepulchres of the kings. This place exhibits a series of subterraneous chambers, extending in different directions, so as to form a sort of labyrinth. This princely place of sepulture has occasioned considerable difficulty to antiquaries; but the prevailing opinion seems now to be that of Pococke, who supposes it to have been the tomb of Helena, queen of Adiabene, which is much celebrated by ancient writers. To the east of Jerusalem, beyond the brook Kedron, is found the Mount of Olives, which, by the abundance of that plant, still vindicates this ancient appellation. Jerusalem, though in possession of the Moslems, has long been the abode of numerous monks. These consisted originally of various nations and professions, each of which had a quarter assigned to it; but the number has of late been reduced to four, the Latins, Greeks, Armenians, and Copts, of which the last are reduced now almost to nothing. Besides appropriate apartments, each fraternity has alters and a sanctuary specially allotted to their own use. The great object of ambition to each has been the possession of the holy sepulchre; a privilege often contested with such fury and animosity, especially between the Greeks and Latins, that in disputing the entrance, they have sometimes proceeded to blows and wounds. The manufactures of Jerusalem are confined almost exclusively to beads, crosses, shells, and other objects, supposed to derive sanctity from their local origin. Jerusalem is politically included in the pachalic of Damascus; but the surrounding territory forms a species of independent district. Long. 35. 26. E. Lat. 31. 47. 47. N.

JESI, a town of Italy, on the Esino, 16 miles W. S. W. Ancona. Population 5000.

JESSNITZ, a town of Germany, 30 miles N. Leipsic. Population 1700.

JESSE, or MATSMAI, a large island off the eastern coast of Asia, situated immediately to the north of the islands of Japan, being separated from Nippon only by a narrow strait. It is 150 miles in length and 80 in breadth. Population 50,000.

JESSORE, the capital of a district of the same name in Bengal. Long. 89. 16. E. Lat. 23. 7. N.

JESPA, ISLE OF, an island of Canada, in the St Lawrence, 21 miles in length, and 6 in breadth.

JETTINGEN, a neat town of Bavaria, on the Mindel. Population 1500.

JETZE, a river of Prussia, which falls into the Elbe, in the principality of Lüneburg.

JEVER, a town of the grand duchy of Oldenburg. Population 3500.

JHANSI, a town of Hindostan, province of Alahabad. Long. 71. 45. E. Lat. 25. 31. N.

JINNEL AGRASS, or AGRASS, an extensive chain of mountains in the southern part of the province of Constantina, and territory of Algiers.

JENNA, or JENNA, a considerable commercial haven of Arabia, on the shore of the Red sea. It may be considered as the port of Mecca, and is supported partly by maintaining the trade with India and Egypt, and partly by the concourse of pilgrims from the coast, and of those from the opposite regions of Africa, who cross at Suakia to reach this famed seat of Mahometan pilgrimage. It is situated in a barren sandy district, destitute of water. The streets are very narrow. The entrance to the road is full of shoals, and it is dangerous to attempt going in without a pilot. The landing place is in front of the Vizier's palace, which is pleasantly situated close to the sea; the custom-house likewise faces the sea, and is a lofty handsome building. The English are the only European nation who carry on a trade here, and it was formerly considerable; but the numerous exactions to which they were exposed have now reduced it to a low ebb. The imports consist almost exclusively of piece goods from the coast of Coromandel; to which is added a small quantity of spices, beetle-nut, opium, sugar, tin, and tobacco. Almost the only export is coffee; and the returns are made chiefly in Spanish, Venetian, and German coins, and occasionally a few pearls. Long. 39. 15. E. Lat. 21. 29. N.

JIGITOMONHA, a river of Brazil, in the extensive country of Minas Geraes, and district of Cerro do Frio, famed for the diamonds found in its bed, to collect which great works have been established on its banks. It flows into a larger river called Rio Grande.

JILLOOTIA, a town of Hindostan, province of Oude.

JIN-ENNE, a river of Algiers, which loses itself in an extensive plain.

JINKETT, a seaport town of Algiers, 33 miles E. Algiers.

JOACHIM, ST., a village of France, department of the Loire Inferieure. Pop. 2000.

JOACHIMSTHAL, a mining town of Bohemia, among the Erzgebirge mountains, 60 miles N. E. Dresden. Population 3700.

JOANA, a fort and town of the island of Java. Long. 111. 10. E. Lat. 6. 40. S.

JOANNA, or ANJOUAN, the largest of the group of islands, situated off the eastern coast of Africa, called the Comorro islands. It is entirely mountainous, and exhibits a very picturesque appearance. The sovereign of Joanna takes the title of sultan, and formerly bore away over the whole group of the Comorro islands, from which he still makes a claim of tribute, but with little power to enforce it. This island is considerably frequented by Europeans, and particularly by English vessels, for the sake of procuring water and provisions. Long. 44. 30. E. Lat. 12. 54. S.

JOANNES, also MARAJÓ, a large island, at the mouth of the Amazon.

JOANNINA, a flourishing city of European Turkey, the capital of Allania, on a lake. The situation and environs are extremely beautiful. The houses and minarets of the town appear to rise amid groves of orange, lemon, and cypress trees. It has two principal streets, which, as well as several others, are tolerably paved. The bazaar, or place of business, is large, and full of good shops. On a peninsula, jutting into the lake, and surrounded with walls and fortifications, is situated the palace of the pacha. Some of the mosques and churches are likewise worth notice as public buildings. The inhabitants are chiefly Greeks and Albanians, and about a tenth of Turks and Jews. For public education there are here two academies. Many of the better class of merchants pass several years of their youth at Trieste, Venice, Vienna, and other mercantile towns. As to manufactures, there is hardly any in Joannina, except of Turkey leather; but works of embroidery are carried to a high degree of perfection. It is the capital of the celebrated Ali Pacha. Population 35,000, or 10,000. 70 miles W. Larissa, 400 W. by S. Constantinople. Long. 21. 30. E. Lat. 39. 30. N.

JOANPORA, chief town of a district of the same name in Hindostan. The fortress was founded in 1370, and was afterwards greatly improved by succeeding sultans; so that Joanpore was the most celebrated city of Hindostan, and the resort of all the learned men of the age. Many of the mosques, and some of the caravansaries and colleges built at that period, are still in existence. It is now the station of a civil establishment, of judge, &c. and of a battalion of native infantry. Long. 82. 39. E. Lat. 25. 43. N.

JOAO DE PESAQUEIRAS, a strong town of Portugal, province of Beira. Pop. 1500.

JOAO DEL REY, a town of Brazil, in Minas Geraes, on the Rio dos Mortes.

JODAN, a town of Spain, province of Jaen. Population 3200.

JOHANNESBERG, a village of Germany, famed for the best Rhenish wine. 18 miles W. Mentz.

JOHANN-GEORGEN-STADT, a town of Saxony, circle of the Erzgebirge, 64 miles S. W. Dresden. Population 2650.

JOHANNESBURG, a village of Germany, 8 miles N. by E. Carlsruhe. Population 1700.

JOHN, ST., a village and fort in Canada, on the Richien river, 20 miles S. E. Montreal.

JOHN, ST., a lake of Lower Canada, 103 miles N. N. W. Quebec.

JOHN'S ISLAND, an island on the coast of South Carolina, 30 miles in circumference: Long. 80. 10. W. Lat. 32. 42. N.

JOHN'S, ST., one of the chief towns of Newfoundland island, on the east coast, on a bay of the same name. It has a good harbour. This town has suffered severely at different times from fire; in February 1816 and November 1817. On the 21st of the same month, another fire broke out, which consumed the greater part of the western half of the town, that had escaped the conflagration of the 7th. It was again visited by fire on the 21st August 1818, by which great loss was incurred. 18 miles S. E. Cape St Francis. Long. 52. 29. W. Lat. 47. 32. N.

JOHN'S, ST., a bay and island on the west coast of Newfoundland island.

JOHN'S, ST., an island in the gulf of St Lawrence, near the northern coast of Nova Scotia, to which government it is annexed. It is 117 miles in length from north-east to south-west. The medium breadth is 20 miles. Its capital is Charlotte town, the residence of the lieutenant-governor, who is the chief officer on the island. The chief towns, besides the capital, are George town and Prince's town; besides which are Hillsborough town, Pownall town, Maryborough town, &c. Population 5000. It lies between 45. 46. and 47. 10. N. lat. and between 44. 22. and 46. 32. W. long.

JOHN'S, ST., one of the Virgin islands, about 12 leagues east of Porto Rico. Long. 64. 32. W. Lat. 18. 7. N.

JOHN'S, ST., the capital of Antigua island, in the West Indies, a regular and well built town. Long. 62. 4. W. Lat. 17. 4. N.

JOHN'S, ST., a small island in the West Indies, belonging to Denmark, north of St Croix, and south of Tortola.

JOHN'S, ST., a large river of North America, in the British province of New Brunswick, which falls into the bay of Fundy, in Long. 66. 30. W. Lat. 45. 20. N.

JOHN'S, ST., a river of East Florida, which spreads into broad bays and lakes, of which Lake George is the chief. Long. 81. 42. W. Lat. 30. 32. N.

JOHN'S, ST., a river of West Florida, which falls into Apalache Bay.

JOHN'S, ST., a town of the United States, in Sussex county, Delaware, 70 miles S. Philadelphia.

JOHN'S, ST., a river of Lower Canada, joins St Lawrence, 30 miles below Montreal.

JOHNHAVEN, a fishing town of Scotland, in the county of Kincardine, 9 miles S. E. Montrose.

JOHNSON, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, watered by Neuse and Little rivers. Population 6367. Slaves 2330. Chief town Smithfield.—2d. Of Illinois, on the Ohio. Population in 1818, 678.

JOHNSTON, a township of the United States, in Providence county, Rhode Island, 5 miles N. Providence. Population 1516.

JOHNSTOWN, a village of Scotland, in Renfrewshire. Cotton spinning is the only business carried on. Population in 1811, 3617. 4 miles W. Paisley.

JOHNSTOWN, a newly settled village of Upper Canada, 3 miles E. St Lawrence, with 70 houses.

JOHNSTOWN, a post township of the United States, and capital of Montgomery county, New York, on the Mohawk, 41 miles W. Albany. Population 6225.

JOIGNY, a walled town of France, in Champagne, department of the Yonne. The streets are steep, winding, and narrow. It has a magnificent castle. The culture of the vine is the principal object here. Population 5400. 34 miles S. W. Troyes.

JOINVILLE, a town of France, in Champagne, on the Marne. It has manufactures of woollen stuffs and stockings. Population 3200. 70 miles S. S. E. Rheims.

JONES, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, on the Trent. Population 4908. Slaves 2375. Chief town Trenton.—2d. Of Georgia, on the east side of the Ocmulgee. Population 8397. Slaves 2587. Chief town Clinton.

JONES'S CREEK, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania, which runs into the Delaware.

JONSKOPING, capital of a government of the same name in Sweden, province of Smaland, containing 117,000 inhabitants. It has no walls; but is protected by a castle. 86 miles E. Gottenburgh.

JONSAC, a town of France, department of the Lower Charente. Population 2500.

JOONIA, a populous and thriving seaport of Hindostan, province of Gujerat. Long. 70. 40. E. Lat. 22. 40. N.

JOFFA, a town of the United States, in Hartford county, Maryland, 20 miles E. by N. Baltimore.

JORDAN, a celebrated river of Palestine, in Judea. It rises in the mountain called Jebel Sheik, the ancient Hermon, and passing by Caesarea Philippi, called now Panias, forms a small lake, after which it enters the northern side of the great lake called the Sea of Tiberias.

JOROK, ST., a town of Brazil, in St Salvador. Long. 22. 40. W. Lat. 14. 45. S.

JOSEPH DEL PARRAL, ST., a town of Mexico, intendancy of Durango. Pop. 5000.

JOSEPH, ST., a town of South America, province of Buenos Ayres, to the north-west of Monte Video. Long. 56. 53. 22. W. Lat. 34. 22. 17. S.

JOSEPH, ST., a river of South America, in the province of Buenos Ayres, which joins a branch of the Plata.

JOSEPH'S, ST., a river of the United States, which enters Michigan lake.

JOSEPH'S BAY, ST., a bay on the coast of West Florida, of the figure of a horse-shoe.

JOSEPH, ST. RIVER, a small river of Lower Canada, which falls into the St. Lawrence.

JOSIMATH, a town of Hindostan, province of Serinagur. The town consists of 150 houses. Long. 73. 31. E. Lat. 30. 31. N.

JOSSÉLIN, a town of France, department of the Morbihan, on the Ouste. Pop. 2700.

JORDRONK, a fortified city, and capital of a principality of the same name, in Hindostan. Long. 73. 18. E. Lat. 28. 27. N.

JOKE, a town of France, department of the Loire Inferieure. Population 1900.

JORGUES, a village of France, department of the Mouths of the Rhone. Pop. 1600.

JOVIN, ST., a town of France, department of the Vienne. Population 2000.

JOWA, a tributary of the Mississippi, in the United States, territory of the Missouri.

JUAN, ST. DE BAPTISTA, a town of Mexico, province of Sonora.

JUAN, ST. DEL REY, a town of Brazil, province of Rio Janeiro.—St. Juan is the name of several other inconsiderable settlements of the same name in Brazil; also of some islands, bays, and points of land, on the coast of South America.

JUAN, ST., a large river of Nicaragua, kingdom of Guatemala.—It is the name of various other small rivers of South America.

JUAN DE ULUA, an island on the coast of Mexico, in the bay of Vera Cruz, on which is a strong fortress, with a fine light-house.

JUAN DEL RIO, SAN, a town in the intendency of Mexico, 100 miles S. Mexico.

JUAN DEL RIO, SAN, a town of Mexico, intendency of Durango, to the southwest of the lake of Parras. Population 10,200.

JUDENBURG, a town of Upper Styria, capital of a circle of the same name, on the Muhr. Pop. 2000. 108 miles S. W. Vienna.

JUDOIGNE, a town of Brabant, on the Geelc. Pop. 2000. 24 miles S. E. Brussels.

JUC, a river of European Russia, which uniting with the Suchona near Ustiug, forms the Upper Dwina, which flows into the White sea at Archangel.

JUILHAC, a town of France, department of the Corvex. Population 2000.

JUILLAC LE COQ, a town of France, department of La Charente. Population 1500.

JUJUL, a city of the province of Tucuman, in South America, 61 miles N. N. E. Salta. Lat. 23. 19. S.

JUJUL, a river of the same province, which enters the Vermejo in Lat. 24. 50. S.

JULIA, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Demona. Population 3500.

JULIEN DE CHATEAUL, ST., a village of France, department of the Upper Loire. Population 2150.

JULIEN DE CONCELLERS, ST., a village of France, department of the Loire Inferieure. Population 1600.

JULIEN DU SAULT, ST., a town of France, on the Yonne. Population 2950.—Julien is the name of several small villages in France.

JULIENS, a duchy of Westphalia, now forming part of the Prussian province of the Lower Rhine, government of Aix-la-Chapelle. It lies adjacent to the territories of Liege, Aix-la-Chapelle, and Cologne; has a superficial extent of 1000 square miles, with 200, 000 inhabitants.

JULIENS, a strong town of the Prussian states. Pop. 2150. 15 miles N. E. Dusseldorf.

JUMBOO, the capital of a district of the same name in Hindostan. Long. 74. 6. E. Lat. 33. N.

JUMBOOSIER, a town of Hindostan, province of Gujerat. Long. 72. 56. E. Lat. 22. 6. N.

JUSSET, a town of the Netherlands, province of Hainault. Population 5000. 3 miles N. Charleroi.

JUMIESE, a town of France, in Normandy, on the Seine. Population 1700.

JUMILLA, a town of Spain, in Murcia. The streets are straight and wide. On an adjoining hill are the ruins of an ancient castle. Pop. 6000. 65 miles N. by W. Cartagena.

JUMILLAC LE GRAND, a town of France, department of the Dordogne. Pop. 2500.

JUMNA, or YUMNA, a celebrated river of Hindostan, which has its source in the Himalah mountains. It enters the province of Delhi, and passing the cities of Delhi and Agra, falls into the Ganges at Allahabad. Its length may be estimated at 700 miles.

JUNCAL, a seaport of Chili, province of Copiapo, at the mouth of a river of the same name. Lat. 26. 42. S.

JUNGRAU, a lofty mountain of Switzerland, canton of Bern, 13,600 feet above the level of the sea.

JUNGPORE, a town of Bengal, district of Rangeshy, on the Bhagerutty river. This is the principal silk establishment of the East India company. The buildings will contain 3000 persons.

JUNIATTA, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania, which unites with the Susquehanna, about 16 miles above Harrisburg.—The name also of a village.

JUNIX, ST., a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne. It has manufactures of woollen, leather, and hats. Population 6000. 20 miles W. Limoges.

JUNIUS, a post township of the United States, in Seneca county, New York, at the north end of Seneca lake, 20 miles N. Ovid. In this town are the villages of West Cayuga, Seneca, and Waterloo. Population 2251.

JONVILLE, a village of France, department of the Ardennes. Population 1000.

JUNKSEYLOM, a considerable island at the south-east extremity of the bay of Bengal, and situated on the western coast of the Malay peninsula. The centre of the island is in the 8th degree of north latitude. It is 54 miles long, by 15 broad, but has several small islands adjacent to its coast. The inhabitants are a mixture of Malaya, Chinese, Siamese, and Birmans.

JUNOSBUVANDO, a small town in Norwegian Lapland, with an extensive iron mine and smelting furnace, the most northern in the world. Lat. 67.30. N.

JUNQUELA, or JENQUIERA, I.A., a town of Spain, in Catalonia. Population 700. 10 miles W. by N. Rosas.

JUPILLE, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 1500.

JURA, one of the Hebrides, or western islands of Scotland, situated to the north-east of the island of Islay, and opposite to the district of Knapdale, in Argyleshire, to which county it is annexed. It extends fully 26 miles in length, and is on an average 7 broad, containing 58,500 Scots acres, of which only 3000 are arable. It is the most rugged of the western isles, being composed chiefly of huge rocks, piled on one another in the utmost disorder, naked, and incapable of cultivation. The mountainous ridges terminate in four similar peaked mountains, called the Paps of Jura. All the inhabitants live on the east side. Here, along the margin of the sea, the coast is pretty level. The only crops are oats, barley, potatoes, and flax; the chief manure is the sea-weed which is cast ashore. There is only one small village, called Jura, on the east coast of the island, inhabited by a few fishers. The Gaelic is the only language spoken in the island. Pop. 1264.

JURA, a great chain of mountains on the continent of Europe, which commences near Geneva, and extends northward along the frontier of France and Switzerland, separating the departments of the Ain, the Jura, and the Doubs, from the cantons of Geneva, Vaud, Neuchâtel, and Bern.

JURA, a department in the east of France, which comprises the south-east part of Franche Comte, and is bounded by Switzerland W. and by the French territory in every other direction. Its superficial extent is about 2050 square miles; its population fully 300,000.

JURUENA, a head branch of the great river Tapayos, in Brazil.

JURULLO, a remarkable volcano of Mexico, in the intendancy of Valladolid, 55 miles N. W. by S. from Valladolid. Long. 103. 51. 48. W. Lat. 19. 9. N.

JUSSEY, a town of France, department of the Upper Saône. Population 2800.

JUST, ST., two parishes of England, in Cornwall. Population 3636—1648.

JUST EN CHEVALET, ST., a town of France, department of the Loire. Population 2350. —The name of several other small towns in France.

JUTENACK, a town of the Prussian province of Brandenburg, on the Rohrbeck, 29 miles S. Potsdam.

JUTLAND, a large province of Denmark, which comprised formerly the whole peninsula forming the mainland of the Danish dominions; but the name of Jutland is now confined to the northern half of the peninsula, extending from the 55th to the 58th degrees of N. lat. The southern half is better known by the name of Sleswick, and will be found described under that article. Jutland, in this circumscribed sense, is still 180 miles in length, and from 70 to 95 in breadth. Its extent is about 9200 square miles; its population 410,000. Its form is that of an oblong, with the addition of a triangle towards the north. It has few rivers, and none of great size; but the want of them is amply compensated by a number of bays, or inlets of the sea, which run up a great way into the country. On the north coast of Jutland is an immense range of sand-banks, which often rise almost to the surface of the water; and, with the numerous currents, render the navigation extremely hazardous. The east coast, particularly from Aarhus southward, presents a succession of fertile elevations. The west coast of Jutland faces the German ocean for more than 200 miles, extending from north to south. The degree of its fertility is various; in some places the pasturages are excellent; but they are bordered by a chain of small hills of moving sand, which does infinite mischief. The southern division of the west coast of Jutland, particularly below Ribe or Rypen, consists of alluvial soil, deposited by the ocean, of surprising fertility, but marshy and unhealthy. Dikes are necessary, as in Holland, to prevent the inroads of the sea. The climate is similar to that of the north of England; and rye is the kind of corn most generally cultivated. The pasturages of Jutland are rich and extensive. Game is abundant; and a few bears are still found in the forests. The culture of potatoes is progressively extending, but in general the state of agriculture is very backward. The bulk of the inhabitants speak Danish, but very incorrectly. The gentry speak German, and many understand English and French. The prevailing religion is the Lutheran. The chief exports are corn and cattle: of the former, the great articles are rye and oats. The other exports are stockings, woollens, and earthenware.

JYENAGUR, the capital of a principality of the same name in Hindostan, reckoned one of the handsomest and most regular towns of India. The houses are built of stone; and the streets, which are large and spacious, intersect each other at right angles. A citadel, which commands the town, is situated upon a steep rock; and the fortifications are carried round the whole city, a distance of nearly four miles. It is a great mart for horses. Long. 75. 40. E. Lat. 25. 56. N.

JYTHPOOR, or JAYTPOOR, a town and fortress of Hindostan, province of Allahabad. Long. 80. 50. E. Lat. 25. 14. N.

K.

KAADE, a village of Yemen, in Arabia, 12 miles N. Tuas.

KAARTA, a kingdom of considerable extent in Western Africa, to the west of Hambarra.

KAHRUANG, an island in the Eastern seas, about 111 miles in circumference. Long. 126. 30. E. Lat. 3. 55. N.

KADEN, a town of Bohemia, on the Elbe. Population 2700. 44 miles S. Dresden.

KADOM, a town of European Russia, government of Tambov. Population 5000. 229 miles E. S. E. Moscow.

KAFFRARIA, a territory of Southern Africa, extending along the coast in a north-east direction, from the Great Fish river, which separates it from the colony of the Cape of Good Hope, to the Key's river, which divides it from the country of the Tambookies. It is still entirely independent, and is inhabited by a native people, called Kaffres, or Kossis. The Kaffres are a fine race of people, tall, robust, and handsome; they are considerably more addicted to agriculture than the Hottentots, though this pursuit is often interrupted by war and intestine dissension. Millet, and a very large species of water melon, are their principal culinary plants. A species of wild palm is sometimes employed as a substitute for millet. They use also different species of roots, berries, and leguminous plants. Pasturage, however, is a much more favourite and general occupation. They breed no horses, and are equally unacquainted with sheep and goats. Cattle, therefore, constitute almost their sole possession. They devote their leisure to the chase. They are very ingenious, and manufacture iron with surprising dexterity; their clothes are also of their own manufacture. Every individual of this country, besides being a tradesman, is also a soldier, and is ready to take up arms at the call of the community, to punish injustice, and to repel aggression. The government of this country is in the hands of a number of little chieftains, who pay obedience to a general chief, and consider themselves as his captains. This, however, scarcely takes place, unless among the stationary Kaffres; for among those who emigrate from place to place, each chief is nearly independent. Their intellectual attainments, unless so far as relates to the immediate concerns of common life, are extremely limited.

KAHLA, a town of Germany, on the Saale. Population 1800. 8 miles S. Jena.

KAHLWANG, a large village of the Austrian states, in Styria, 17 miles W. Leoben.

KAI, a town of European Russia. Population 1400. 124 miles N. E. Viatka.

KALA, a small village near Lutzen, in Prussian Saxony.

KALM, a small village of Scotland, in Morayshire.

KAIN, a large fortified town of Hindostan, province of Aurungabad, on the Godavary.

KAIRA, a town of Hindostan, province of Gujerat. Long. 72. 45. E. Lat. 22. 45. N.

KAIRWAN, or KATHUAN, a city of Tunis, in Northern Africa, second only to the capital in population and commerce. The great mosque here is esteemed at once the most magnificent and most sacred in Barbary. Long. 9. 57. E. Lat. 35. 36. N.

KAISARIUM, a large city of Asia Minor, the ancient capital of Cappadocia, called Cæsarea. Its external appearance is mean. It is resorted to by merchants from all parts of Asia Minor and Syria, who come to purchase cotton, which is here cultivated in great quantities. At the distance of about a quarter of a mile is Eski Sher, or the Old Town. Long. 35. 18. E. Lat. 38. 41. N.

KAISERBERG, a town of France, on the Weiss. Population 2500.

KAISERSLAUTERN, a fortified town of the Bavarian province on the Rhine. It is the chief town of a district. It was the scene of much hard fighting in 1792 and 1793. Population 2360. 34 miles W. N. W. Spire.

KAISERSUTZL, a town of Switzerland, canton of Argau, on the Rhine. Pop. 1700.

KAKUNDY, a town of Western Africa, on the Rio Nunez. Major Peddie and Captain Campbell died there.

KALATOE, an island in the Eastern seas, about 30 miles in circumference. Long. 122. 15. E. Lat. 7. 15. S.

KALDENKIRCHEN, a town of the duchy of Juliers. Population 1900.

KALE, a river of Scotland, in Roxburghshire, which falls into the Teviot.

KALISCH, a town of Poland, on the frontier of the Prussian territory. It has manufactures of cloth, linen, and leather. Population 6400. 66 miles N. W. Breslau.

KALKAS, a Tartar nation of the Mongol race, who occupy extensive tracks to the north and west of China.

KALLIEK, a town of Pomerania. Population 1700. 34 miles E. Stargard.

KALLUNDORF, a seaport of Denmark, on the west coast of the island of Zealand. Population 1400. 69 miles W. Copenhagen.

KALMYCK, a tribe of Tartars inhabiting the country south of the Altai mountains, between Long. 70. and 90. E. Their wealth consists in their cattle.

KALUGA, an extensive government of European Russia, bounded by those of Moscow, Smolensk, Tula, and Orel, lying between 35. 48. and 37. 22. E. long. and 51. and 54. 30. N. lat. Its territorial extent is 8540 square miles. Its population was in 1796, 853,000.

and is now considerably increased. The chief products are corn, hemp, and flax. The chief rivers are the Oka, the Upa, and the Schidra. This province contains iron mines.

KARGA, capital of the above government, on the Oka. It has some very good public buildings, such as the high church, government house, &c.; but in other respects it is irregular, most of the houses being of wood, and ill built. Population 17,000. 107 miles S. W. Moscow. Long. 36. 6. E. Lat. 64. 3. N.

KALWARY, a neatly built town of Poland. Population 2700. 76 miles W. by S. Wilna.

KAMA, a large river of European Russia, which enters the Volga 24 miles below Kasan.

KAMBORS, a village of European Russia, government of Perm. Population 1200.

KAMENITZ, a town of Bohemia. Population 1550. 24 miles N. N. E. Tabor.

KAMENITZ, a town of Slavonia, near the Danube, with 1500 inhabitants.

KAMENSK, a town of Russia, government of Perm. It has a cannon foundry. Population 2000. 42 miles E. Ekaterinburg.

KAMENZ, a town of Upper Lusatia, on the Schwartz Elster. Population 2250.

KAMINIEC, an old town of Russian Poland, the capital of the palatinate, and now of the government of Podolia, to the north of the Dniester. It has a castle situated on a rock, which is one of the best fortifications in Poland. The houses are generally built of wood. The town has a good trade, particularly in peltry; and has a high school. Population 5600. 110 miles W. Braclau. Long. 27. 1. 30. E. Lat. 48. 40. 50. N.

KAMLAGH, a small river of Suabia, which falls into the Mindel.

KAMNITZ, a town of Bohemia, 30 miles S. E. Dresden. Population 2200.

KAMP, a river of Austria, which falls into the Danube.

KAMTSCHATKA, a large peninsula on the north-east of Asia, forming part of the Russian government of Irkoutsk, and district of Okhotsk, to which it is joined at its northern extremity. On the east it has the North Pacific ocean, and on the west that large gulf of it called the sea of Okhotsk. It extends from north to south, between the 51st and 63d degrees of north latitude, and is reckoned upwards of 600 miles in length, and nearly 300 in breadth. It is remarkable for its extreme cold, which is heightened by a range of very lofty mountains, extending the whole length of the peninsula. Several of these mountains are volcanic; but the most remarkable is one situated near Nijni Kamtschatsk, the volcano of which is very active, and two years seldom elapse without some violent eruption. Kamtschatka scarcely enjoys three months of an imperfect summer, and is incapable of producing grain, even in the smallest quantity. It has a great variety of animals, which produce the richest and most valuable furs. The sable is more plentiful here than in Siberia, though its fur is not quite so beautiful. There are several varieties of the Arctic fox, or fitch of Kamtschatka. Other common animals are the beaver, the hare, the marmot, and the argali or wild sheep. The bear is the most formidable wild animal, and the hunting of it the most serious occupation of the Kamtschadale. The coasts and rivers swarm to a most extraordinary degree with fish, which form the main article of food to the inhabitants. The excellence of the salmon, herrings, and different kinds of shell fish, is particularly remarked. The air also is filled with game, particularly woodcocks, snipes, grouse, wild geese and ducks, the eggs of which last are collected by the natives, and preserved in the fat of fish. The only vegetable productions are a stinted birch, and dwarf pines and cedar. Shrubs are more plentiful, such as the mountain ash, wild rose, and raspberry; there is also a variety of berries. There are no mines, except a small one of iron. Sulphur abounds; and many mineral sources are found in the mountains.

The inhabitants are in general below the common height; have broad shoulders, and a large head. The face, and particularly the nose, is long and flat, the eyes small and sunk, the lips thin, and they have scarcely any beard. Their legs are short, yet they walk much, and with rapidity. They are like all savages, indolent, and addicted to coarse sensuality. Formerly they carried on frequent wars against each other. Their arms are clubs, lances, and arrows, pointed with sharpened bone. Since they have been subjected to the dominion of Russia, these wars are no longer permitted. Their principal food is fish, which they devour with eager avidity, and without the least regard to cleanliness or delicacy. They use dogs, for the purposes of labour and draught; they are trained for these purposes with great skill; and are used both for travelling and for conveying all sorts of commodities from place to place. In 1706, all Kamtschatka was surveyed and occupied by the Russians. The sway which they have established is exceedingly mild; notwithstanding which, the Kamtschadales, like all savage nations coming in contact with civilized, have suffered deeply from the connection. From the introduction of ardent spirits among them, their avidity for which knows no bounds, and from the effects of the small pox, their number, which at first was estimated at 15,000, does not, by the last census, exceed 2343, of which 1530 are men, and 1313 women. Besides the natives, there are Cosacs and Russian soldiers, to the number of 300. There is, besides, a class of criminals, banished to this remote and inhospitable region. They amount to about 1000. There is also an occasional and varying population of merchants, hunters, and seamen.

The trade of Russia with Kamtschatka is carried on from Irkoutsk by the difficult and tedious route of Okhotsk. The imports, besides brandy, are nankeens and other Chinese stuffs, together with various commodities of Russian and foreign manufacture, as ribbons, handkerchiefs, stockings, caps, shoes, boots, and in general all articles of European consumption, but in small quantity, and bearing a very high price. The only export is furs, the amount of which is valued at from 50,000 to 100,000 rubles. Kamtschatka, since 1783, has been divided into four districts: 1. Bolcheretsk; 2. Tigulok; 3. Nijni Kamtschatk; 4. Vershnei Kamtschatk.

KAMYACHIN, or DEMITREFSK, a town of European Russia, on the Wolga. Pop. 2000. Long. 45. 24. 15. E. Lat. 50. 5. 6. N.

KANDAHAR, an extensive province of Afghanistan, situated between the 31st and 34th degrees of northern latitude, and between the 66th and 68th degrees of eastern longitude. This country, for its extent, contains very few towns, the natives in general preferring their Nomade habits, and moving from place to place, to procure pasture for their numerous flocks of sheep, and herds of cattle and camels: but although agriculture is thus discouraged, many parts of it are very fertile, and produce grain of all kinds. The Helmund and Argandab run through this province, the principal towns of which are Kandahar and Sufia, or Sufta, besides innumerable castles or fortresses. It was long understood in Europe, that Kandahar was a mountainous province, and formed a complete barrier on the side of Persia. It is now known to be a level, though elevated country, and that it does not present any obstacles to prevent its being entered by the west.

KANDAMAR, the capital of the above province. Also a celebrated fortress, which stands two miles N. of the city, in Lat. 39. 20. N. Long. 66. 30. E. on the top of a precipitous rock, and before the introduction of cannon, was considered as impregnable. The town is said to be three miles in circumference; and standing on the great road between Persia and India, continues to be a flourishing and populous city. It is chiefly inhabited by persons of Persian or Hindostany descent; but the natives of most countries of the east are there to be met with.

KANGAROO ISLAND, an island on the south coast of New Holland, discovered by Captain Flinders. Long. of Kangaroo Head 137. 58. 31. E. Lat. 35. 43. 0. S.

KANGELANG, an island in the Eastern sea, about 24 miles from E. to W. Long. 115. 44. E. Lat. 3. 37. S.

KANORAH, a celebrated fortress of Hindostan, province of Lahore, surrounded by a district of the same name, covered with wood. It stands on the river Beavy, and is very unhealthy. Long. 75. 55. E. Lat. 32. 20. N.

KANITZ, a town of Moravia, on the Igla, 10 miles S. W. Brunn. Population 1600.

KANIES, a large river of the United States, in Louisiana. It rises in the vast plains between the Arkansas and the Platte; and after a course, generally towards the east, of about 1500 miles, falls into the Missouri, Lat. 38. 31. 13. N.

KANZACH, a small river of Suabia, which falls into the Danube.

KAO, one of the Friendly islands, in the South Pacific ocean.

KAPLITZ, two towns of Bohemia, with 1400 inhabitants each.

KARAGILAR, a town of European Turkey, in Romania. Population 7000.

KARAK, an island in the Persian gulf. Population 400. Lat. 29. 14. N.

KARAMAN, a city of Carmania, in Asia Minor. It covers, with its squares and gardens, a large area; but the houses are mean. Population 3000 families of Turks, Turkmans, Armenians, and Greeks. It trades with Cæsarea, Smyrna, and Taurus, and has an extensive manufacture of blue cotton cloth, worn by the lower classes. 65 miles S. Konieh.

KARANG SAMBONG, a considerable inland town of the island of Java, 108 miles S. E. Batavia.

KARASCH, a river of Hungary, which joins the Danube at Uj-Palanka.

KARASJEE, a town of Hindostan, in Benjapore. Long. 75. 20. E. Lat. 17. 20. N.

KARASU, a river of European Turkey. It falls into the Archipelago, opposite the island of Thasos.

KARASE, a considerable river of Asia Minor, which rises in Mount Taurus.

KARASUBAHAR, a town of the Crimea. Population, Russians and Greeks, but more Tartars, 2500; they manufacture Turkey and other leather.

KARBACH, a village of Germany, in Wirtemberg. Population 1200.

KARDANAH, a river of Palestine. It falls into the Mediterranean, 8 miles S. Acre.

KARDINZAG, a scattered town of Hungary. It is noted for its melons, and the land tortoises reared here and in the environs. Population 2500. 43 miles N. by W. Baken.

KARGALA, a town of European Russia, government of Orenburg, on the Sakmara. Population 2000.

KARGE, or KARGOVA, a town of Prussian Poland, 49 miles S. W. Posen. Pop. 1750.

KARGOZOL, a town of Russia, government of Olonetz, on the Onega. Population 5000. 196 miles E. Olonetz.

KARICAL, a town of the south of India, district of Tanjore. There are some extensive salt-works in its vicinity. Calicoes and chintzes are also manufactured here. Long. 70. 54. E. Lat. 10. 55. N.

KARLSBURG, or LOWER WEISSENBURG, a palatinate of Transylvania, in the part belonging to the Hungarians, lying along the Marosch and the two rivers called Kockel, on the east border of Hungary. Its area is about 1800 square miles, and its population nearly 100,000.

KARLSBURG, ALBA CAROLINA, or BELGRADE, a town of Transylvania, on the Marosch, the only regular fortress of the country, and a bishop's see. Population 6500. 32 miles N. W. Hermannstadt. Long. 28. 34. 35. E. Lat. 46. 4. 21. N.

KARLSTADT, a circle or district of Austria, in Croatia. Pop. 100,000.

KARLSFEIN, a small town of Lower Austria, on the Theya.

KARLOVSKA, a town of European Russia, government of Kursk. Population 4000.

KAROLLY, a town of Hindostan, province of Arrah. Long. 77. E. Lat. 26. 35. N.

KARSTEN, KORPONA, or KRUPINA, a mining town of Hungary, in the palatinate of Solik. Pop. 3000. 96 miles E. Vienna.

KARS, a city of Turkish Armenia, on the Arpalcheri. Population about 30,000 Turks, Armenians, Georgians, and Kurds. 120 miles N. E. Erzerum.

KASAN, a town of European Russia, 60 miles W. S. W. Simbirsk. Population 3500.

KARTELI, or KARTALINTA, the most western province of Georgia, in Asia, bordering on Imiretia.

KAS, EL, or RAS KASABON, a cape of Egypt, on the coast of the Mediterranean.

KASAN, an extensive province or government of European Russia, lying between 46. 20. and 49. 40. of E. longitude, and 54. and 57. of N. latitude, and surrounded by the governments of Viatka, Orenburg, Niznei-Novgorod, and Simbirsk. Its territorial extent is 22,000 square miles; its population about 850,000, partly Russians and partly Tartars, though of very mixed origin. The rivers are the Volga, the Kama, the Sura, the Viatka, and the Kasanka, besides smaller streams, and a great number of lakes.

KASAN, a city of Russia, on the Kasanka, about four miles above its junction with the Volga. It consists of three parts: an antique Tartar fortress, the town proper, and the surrounding villages. The fort is built of stone, the rest of wood. It is a bishop's see, and the seat of a small university, founded in 1663. It has also several other schools. Here is large soap-works and tanneries; also manufactures of woollen, cotton, lace, and earthenware. Being in a manner the central point between St Petersburg, Archangel, Tobolsk, Astracan, Moscow, and Orenburg, it carries on an extensive trade. At a little distance from Kasan is a new admiralty establishment, with a navigation school, magazines, and a dock-yard, where galliots are constructed, and sent down the Volga to the Caspian sea. Population 17,500. 208 miles E. by S. Niznei-Novgorod. Long. 49. 21. 9. E. Lat. 55. 47. 51. N.

KASCHIN, a town of European Russia, government of Tver, on the Kaschinka, 117 miles E. Moscow. Population 3600.

KASCHIRA, a town of European Russia, on the Oka, 73 miles S. by E. Moscow. Population 1600.

KASHGAR, a kingdom of Asia, on the western limit of Chinese or Independent Tartary.

KASHIMOV, a town of European Russia, on the Oka, 160 miles E. by S. Moscow. Pop. 6200.

KASKASKIA, a town of the United States, in the Illinois territory, on the river of the same name. Population 622.

KASKASKIAS, a river of North America, which rises between the Illinois and the Wabash. It enters the Mississippi 100 miles above the mouth of the Ohio.

KASMARK, or KAISERSHARK, a town of Hungary, on the Poprad. It has manufactures of linen. Population 4300. 164 miles E. N. E. Presburg.

KASTON, a kingdom of Central Africa, on the upper part of the Senegal.

KATERLY, a town of Asia Minor, on a fine bay of the sea of Marmora.

KATZBACH, a river of Silesia, which rises at Ketschdorf, and joins the Oder.

KAUPBECKEN, a town of Suabia, on the Wertach, with manufactures of cotton and linen. Pop. 4200. 38 miles S. by W. Augsburg.

KAUFFUNGEN, a village of Germany, in Hesse-Cassel, on the Looze. Pop. 7500.

KAUFUNG, a straggling village of Silesia, on the Katzbach. Population 1650.

KAURZIM, a circle of the Austrian dominions, in Bohemia, lying between the Elbe and the Muhlau, and traversed by the Sazawa. It is 1030 square miles in extent, with a population of 142,000.

KAURZIM, an old town of Bohemia, 28 miles E. S. E. Prague. Population 1550.

KAYSCHANI, a small town of European Russia, in Bessarabia, 12 miles S. Bender.

KAYE'S ISLAND, in the North Pacific ocean, near the west coast of North America, 30 miles long and 4 broad. Long. of S. W. point 216. 38 E. Lat. 59. 49. N.

KAZEROON, a town of Persia, in Persia. Long. 51. 43. E. Lat. 29. 44. N.

KAZIMIERZ, a town of Poland, on the Vistula. Population 990.

KEA, ST, a parish of England, in Cornwall. Population 3200.

KEACH, a river of England, in Cardigan-shire, which falls into the Tyvy.

KEADY, an indifferently built village of Ireland, in the county of Armagh.

KEAL, EAST and WEST, two parishes of England, in Lincolnshire. Pop. 347-502.

KEASLEY, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1633.

KEBBY, a river of Wales, in Monmouth-shire, which falls into the Uske.

KEDDLESTON, a village of England, county of Derby, noted for its mineral springs. Population 102. 5 miles N. Derby.

KEDGEREE, a town of Bengal, near the mouth of the Hoogly. It is esteemed healthier than Diamond harbour, and has a good bazar. Long. 88. 16. E. Lat. 21. 55. N.

KEELE, a parish of England, in Stafford-shire. Population 1661.

KEEN, or KAYDUEM RIVER, is supposed to have its source in the mountains which divide Assam from Ava, as it enters the latter country from the N. W. and falls into the Irrawaddy at Mienap, in Lat. 21. 45. N.

KEENE, a post township of the United States, in Essex county, New York. 140 miles N. Albany. Pop. 642.—2d. Capital of Cheshire county, New Hampshire, on Andue.

lot river, 14 miles S. E. Walpole, 55 W. S. W. Concord, 95 W. Portsmouth, and 79 W. N. W. Boston. The village is one of the handsomest in New England, and contains a court-house, jail, bank, meeting-house, and about 60 dwelling-houses. Population 1646.

KEERPoy, a town of Bengal, district of Burdwan. Long. 87. 44. E. Lat. 22. 46. N.

KEETEN, GROOT AND KLEIN, two villages of North Holland, the one 4, and the other 6 miles S. the Helder.

KERR, a considerable town in the territory of Tunis, 79 miles W. S. W. Tunis.

KEGWORTH, a parish of England, county of Leicester. Population 1672.

KEIL, a town of Germany, on the Rhine, opposite Strasburg, 2 miles to the E. Population 1400. It is of great importance in a military sense, as well by the bridge across the Rhine, as by the well known fort in the immediate vicinity, which was built on the present plan, by the French engineer Vauban, in the year 1688. It has often been besieged and taken. It made an obstinate defence against the Austrians, who took it in 1797. It was taken by the French next year, who retained it till 1814.

KEIGHLEY, a parish and market town of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, near a branch of the river Aire, over which is a stone bridge. The church is a spacious and handsome building. The inhabitants are chiefly supported by the cotton, linen, and worsted manufactures. Pop. of the town and parish 9223. 40 miles W. York.

KEIR, a parish of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire. Population 937.

KEISKAMMA, a considerable river of Kaffaria, in Southern Africa.

KEITH, a town and parish of Scotland, in the county of Banff. The town is regularly built, and consists of three parallel streets, intersected by lanes. The chief manufactures are the spinning of yarn, flax-dressing, weaving, and bleaching of linen cloth. The old town of Keith is now reduced to a small village. Ferguson, the celebrated astronomer, was born in this place. Population of the parish 3926. 46½ miles N. W. Aberdeen.

KEITH-HALL and KINKELL, a united parish of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire. Population 838.

KEJ, a town of Persia, the present capital of the province of Mekran. Long. 62. 30. E. Lat. 26. 10. N.

KELAT, the capital of Belouchistan. It contains above 4000 houses, and has several good bazars and excellent gardens in its vicinity. Long. 67. 57. E. Lat. 29. 6. N.

KELAT, a town and strong fortress of Afghanistan, 60 miles E. N. E. Kandahat.

KELAT, a fortress of Khordman, in Persia, 40 miles E. Meched.

KELLET, NETHER and OVER, two townships of England, in Lancashire. Population 354-531.

KELLHEIM, a town of Bavaria, at the junction of the Altmühl and the Danube. Population 1600.

KELLS, an ancient market town of Ireland, county of Meath, on the Blackwater, 32 miles N. W. Dublin.

KELLS, two small villages of Ireland, counties of Kilkenny and Antrim.

KELLY-BURN, a small rivulet of Scotland, in Ayrshire.

KELSALL, a township of England, county of Chester. Population 599.

KELSEY, NORTH and SOUTH, two parishes of England, in Lincolnshire. Pop. 573-623.

KELSO, a parish and market town of Scotland, in the county of Roxburgh, on the Tweed, opposite the junction of the Tyviot; over both which rivers handsome bridges are built. In the centre of the town is a square, from which six streets diverge in different directions. This square, with the principal streets, contain many neat shops and houses. A new town-hall has been lately built. The old abbey, great part of which still remains, is the great ornament of Kelso. It was founded by David I. in 1128, and fortunately escaped the havoc of the reformation, being used as a Protestant church, till 1771, when a report being spread abroad that the building was giving way, it was never again made use of. Since this period all the modern alterations have been removed, by which means the transept, and many windows and side arches of the original abbey, are displayed. The style of the building is Saxon, with a slight mixture of Gothic. The central tower is 90 feet high. The modern parish church is a very large octagon. Besides the established church, there are places of worship belonging to the Episcopians, Cameronians, Burghers, Antiburghers, and Relief. It has also a dispensary, three subscription libraries, a grammar school, and two newspapers. It has a weekly market for grain, and six yearly markets, at which farm servants are hired. Kelso is often mentioned in the histories of our border wars. 42 miles S. by E. Edinburgh, 5 W. from the English border. Pop. 4800.

KELTIE, a small river of Scotland, county of Perth, which falls into the Teith.

KELTON, a parish of Scotland, stewartry of Kirkcudbright. Population 2416.

KELTON, a village of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, on the Nith.

KELVEDON, a parish of England, in Essex. Population 1208.

KELVIN, a river of Scotland, which has its rise in Stirlingshire, and falls into the Clyde 2 miles below Glasgow, under a remarkable aqueduct bridge of the great canal.

KELYN, a river of Wales, in Merionethshire, which falls into the Troweryn.

KENPACK, a parish of Scotland, county of Fife. Population 634.

KEMBERG, a town of Prussian Saxony, with 1900 inhabitants.

KEMLET, a river of England, in Salop, which falls into the Severn below Chirburg.

KEMLET, a river of Wales, in Denbighshire, which falls into the Tanot.

KEMMOO, a town of Western Africa, kingdom of Kaarta. Long. 7. 46. W. Lat. 11. 20. N.

KENNATH, a town of Bavaria, 26 miles N. of Amberg. Population 1460.

KEMPE, a town of Prussian Westphalia, 17 miles N. W. Dusseldorf. Pop. 3000.

KEMPE, a town of Prussian Poland, 32 miles S. Kalisch. Population 3500.

KEMPSEY, or KEMSEY, a parish of England, in Worcestershire. Population 1129.

KEMPSFORD, a parish of England, in Gloucestershire. Population 638.

KEMPTON, a parish of England, in Bedfordshire. Population 1419.

KEMPTEN, a town of Suabia, on the Iller. It has manufactures of cotton and linen. Population 5300. 66 miles W. S. W. Munich.

KEN, a river of Scotland, in Galloway, which expands into Kenmuir lake.

KEN, a river of England, in Westmoreland and Lancashire, which enters the Irish sea.

KEN, a river of England, in Devonshire, which falls into the Ex below Exeter.

KENART, a small island of Hindostan, about 13 miles S. Bombay.

KENCHESTER, a parish of England, in Hereford, 5 miles W. N. W. Hereford.

KENCHEK, the ancient Cenchrea, a small seaport of the Morea, 7 miles W. by S. Corinth.

KENDAL, a market town and parish of England, in Westmoreland on the Ken or Kent. It consists of two principal streets, the one spacious and well built. The church is a large Gothic structure, 180 feet long and 99 broad. Here are likewise meeting-houses for Presbyterians, Quakers, Roman Catholics, and two for Methodists. The town-hall is an elegant building; and the butcher market is neat and commodious. A new jail has been lately built, with cells underneath. At present there are three bridges over the Kent. There are several charitable institutions. The remains of Kendal castle stand on a hill, on the east side of the town and of the river. The principal manufactures are Kendal cottons, a sort of coarse woollen cloths, and lineseys for the North American market; knit worsted stockings, flannels, hats, serges, &c.; also smaller manufactures of fish-hooks, wool cards, scouring waste silk, &c. The leather trade is still very considerable. Cotton mills and muslin weaving have lately been established; and several hands are employed at a marble manufactory. Population 8084. 24 miles N. Lancaster.

KENDAL, a flourishing village of the United States, in Stark county, Ohio.

KENE, or KENNE, a considerable town, which forms now the centre of the trade of Upper Egypt. Lat. 26. 9. 36. N.

KENNAWAY, a large and important river of the United States, in Virginia, which is formed by two branches, the Kenhayway proper, and the Green Briar rivers. The Kenhayway rises in North Carolina, in 36. N. lat. and falls into the Ohio at Point Pleasant, in Lat. 36. 55. N.

KENNAWAY, LITTLE, a small river of the United States, in Virginia. It joins the Ohio.

KENILWORTH, a market town of England, county of Warwick, principally noted for its magnificent castle, the remains of which still present one of the most splendid and picturesque wrecks of castellated strength to be found in England. Population 2577. 5 miles N. Warwick.

KENINGHALL, a parish of England, in Norfolk. Population 1273.

KENLOWIE, a small river of Scotland, in Fifeshire, which falls into St. Andrew's bay.

KENMARE, a neatly built town of Ireland, county of Kerry, 12 miles S. S. W. Killarney.

KENMARE RIVER, a river, or arm of the Atlantic ocean, on the coast of Ireland, situated at the S. W. side of the county of Kerry. Long. of the mouth 9. 57. W. Lat. 51. 40. N.

KENMORE, a parish and village of Scotland, in Perthshire. Population 3347. The village is situated on the Tay, 23 miles W. N. W. Dunkeld.

KENN, a parish of England, in Devonshire. Population 806.

KENNARTH, a parish of Wales, in Caermarthenshire. Population 1635.

KENNEBEC, a large river of the United States, the largest in the district of Maine next to Penobscot, which flows into the Atlantic, between Phippsburgh and Georgetown.

KENNEBUNK, a flourishing village and port of entry of the United States, 18 miles N. by E. York.

KENNETHMONT, a parish of Scotland, county of Aberdeen. Population 974.

KENNET-PANA, a village of Scotland, in Clackmannanshire, with a large distillery.

KENNETT, a river of England, in Wilts and Berkshire, which falls into the Thames.

KENNICOMI, a river of the United States, in Indiana, which empties itself into Lake Michigan.

KENNOWAY, a parish and village of Scotland, county of Fife. Population 1649.

KENSEY, a river of England, in Cornwall, which falls into the Tamar.

KENSINGTON, a large and populous village of England, county of Middlesex, nearly two miles from Hyde Park corner, and chiefly distinguished for its royal palace and gardens. Until the last reign, Kensington palace was a favourite royal residence; and King William, Queen Mary, Queen Anne, and George II. died here. Kensington gardens, attached to the palace, are well known, and much frequented as a fashionable promenade in summer. They form also a great ornament to this side of the metropolis. These gardens contained originally only 26 acres, and 30 acres were added by Queen Anne. Pop. 14,428.

KENT, a maritime county of England, forming the south-eastern angle of the kingdom. It is bounded N. by the Thames, which divides it from Essex, E. and S. E. by the German ocean and straits of Dover, S. by the county of Sussex, and W. by that of Surrey. It is at a medium 66 miles long and 28 broad, lies within the parallels of 50. 55. and 51. 31. N. lat., and between 0. 5. W. and 1. 25. E. long.; and contains about 900,000 acres. It is divided into 5 large divisions, called lathes; these are subdivided into 63 hundreds, 16 liberties, 414 parishes, 2 cities, and 24 market towns. The two cities are Canterbury and Rochester. The principal towns are Deptford, Woolwich, Gravesend, Sheerness, Margate, Ramsgate, Faversham, Deal, Sandwich, Dover, Folkestone, Hythe, Chatham, Maidstone, &c. The county of Kent sends two members to parliament. The general aspect of this county is very beautiful, from the extreme diversity of the surface, and the richness and variety of the scenery, which in many places, particularly near Maidstone, Tunbridge, and Sittingbourne, is uncommonly fine. Two principal ridges of hills traverse the whole county from west to east, keeping generally about 8 miles asunder. These are termed the Upper and the Lower hills. The former, which is sometimes called the Hog's Back, is of chalk; it is part of the extensive ridge which runs from Hungerford, through Hampshire and Surrey, to Dover, forms the beautiful white cliffs on the coast there; and, from the identity of the strata on the opposite side, is supposed to have once extended quite across the channel to Calais. The Lower hills, or southern range, is chiefly of ironstone and ragstone. The chalk ridge rises in some parts to near 700 feet. The principal rivers, after the Thames, are the Medway, the Stour, the Darent, and the Rother. The inferior rivers are the Ravensbourne, the Cray, the Little Stour, &c. Kent is essentially and almost solely an agricultural county; and every department of husbandry is here prosecuted to a great extent, and with great ability and success. Besides the usual agricultural products, of which the wheat is peculiarly famed, Kent produces excellent hops; fruits of various kinds for the London market, especially cherries, filberts, and apples; wool and madder for dyers; with plenty of samphire, hemp, and sainfoin; also canary seed, and various other esculent plants, as seeds for the gardeners, and in the woody part timber and birch twigs for brooms. The Isle of Thanet is a district of remarkable fertility. In the Isle of Sheppey, only one-fifth of the land is arable; the rest consists of marsh and pasture lands. These are entirely devoted to the breeding of sheep and fattening of cattle. The cattle are of various breeds, principally Welsh and Sussex. Kent has been long famous for its fine breed of Romney Marsh sheep, one of the most valuable in the kingdom, as they produce a large fleece of fine long wool, and become very fat at an early age. The Dorset, Wilt, and South Down sheep, are also kept in most parts of the county.

Kent has but few manufactures, and these mostly of the coarser kind. The clothing trade, formerly extensive, is now nearly forgotten; and silk, which was long manufactured at Canterbury, is now yielding to cotton. At Maidstone and Dover are extensive paper-mills; also at Deptford. Near Sandwich, and the Isle of Grain, there are salt works; large copperas works at Deptford and Whitstable; and various iron furnaces in the Weald, bordering on Sussex. Gunpowder is manufactured extensively at Deptford and Faversham, especially in time of war. At Craigford are great works for the printing and bleaching of calicoes; and sacking and hop bagging are made in different parts of the county. At Canterbury is one of the largest flour mills in the kingdom. The various dock-yards at Deptford, Woolwich, Chatham, &c. employ numerous hands; and ship-building is also carried on at the coast. The minerals of Kent are not very important; chalk, flint, ragstone, and pyrites, are the only ones that are worked. The most extensive and important chalk-pits are those of Northfleet and Greenhithe, near Gravesend. The pits here are from 100 to 150 feet deep. The oyster fisheries of Faversham and Milton, and of the Sivalas of the Medway, have been long noted; and at St. Margaret's bay, near Dover, large quantities of small but very delicate lobsters are caught. Population 420,016.

KENT, a county of Lower Canada, between the rivers Sorel and St. Lawrence.—21, Of Upper Canada, on Lake Erie.

KENT, a county of the United States, in Rhode Island, on the West side of Narraganset bay, bounded N. by Providence county, S. by Washington county, and W. by Connecticut. Population 9834. Chief town Warwick.—2d, Of Delaware, bounded N. by Newcastle county, E. by Delaware bay, N. by Sussex county, and W. by Maryland. Population 20,495. Slaves 720. Chief town Dover.—3d, Of Maryland, bounded N. by Cecil county, E. by Delaware, S. by Queen Anne county, and W. by Chesapeake bay. Pop. 11,450. Slaves 4249. Chief town Chestor.—4th, A post township of Litchfield county, Connecticut, on the Housatonic, 45 miles W. Hartford. Population 1794.—5th, An island in Chesapeake bay, annexed to Queen Anne county, Maryland.

KENT, or BLENZWICK, a township of the United States, in Putnam county, New York, 20 miles S. E. Poughkeepsie. Pop. 1011.

KENTISH TOWN, a hamlet of England, county of Middlesex, 2 miles N. London. It has of late greatly increased in size and population; a number of new streets and squares have lately been erected, so that it is now nearly joined to the metropolis.

KENTON, a village and parish of England, in Devonshire. Population 1691.

KENTON, EAST and WEST, a township of England, in Northumberland. Pop. 1204.

KENTUCKY, one of the United States of America, bounded N. by the Ohio river, W. by the Mississippi, S. by Tennessee, and E. by Virginia. Its length from east to west is 326 miles; breadth from north to south 163 miles. Its area is 40,110 square miles, or 25,670,000 acres. Its southern boundary is in 36. 39. ; and its northern extremity (which is in the north bend of the Ohio), 39. 10. N. lat. With regard to the general aspect of the country, the flats which border the shores of the Ohio, from its mouth to that of Big Sandy river, average about 1 mile in breadth, and produce wheat, sugar, maple, sycamore, cotton-wood, hackberry, pawpaw, and honey locust. These flats are in some places subject to periodical inundation, but are nevertheless susceptible of cultivation. About one-sixth part of this land is cleared. Parallel to the Ohio, and in the rear of these flats, lies a strip of country, from five to twenty miles wide, and as long as the state, which is cut into deep valleys and high hills, by the numerous creeks which enter the Ohio. This soil, however, is rich, and the greater part capable of improvement. Between this strip, Big Sandy and Green rivers, and the eastern counties, lies the garden of the state. It is about 150 miles long, and from 50 to 100 miles wide, and comprises the counties of Mason, Fleming, Montgomery, Clarke, Bourbon, Fayette, Scott, Harrison, Franklin, Woodford, Mercer, Jessamine, Madison, Garrard, Logan, Casey, Lincoln, Washington, and Green. This extensive tract is intersected by Little Sandy, Licking, Kentucky, and Salt rivers, and their numerous forks. It has the happiest surface, gradually rising and descending alternately. The principal rivers which water this state are the Ohio, which washes its northern margin for the space of 638 miles; the Mississippi, which forms its western limit for 74 miles; the Big Sandy, which forms its eastern limit for nearly 200 miles; the Licking and the Kentucky, which fall into the Ohio, the one opposite the town of Cincinnati, and the other 77 miles above Louisville; the Salt river, Green river, Tradewater river, Cumberland river, all tributary to the Ohio. The Tennessee runs about 75 miles in Kentucky, and then joins the Ohio; and the Kaskinampas, which falls into the Mississippi, waters the western end of the state. There are, besides, numerous smaller streams, which are principally tributary to the Ohio. Domestic animals are large and beautiful, particularly the horse. Cattle are raised in great numbers in every part of the state. Wild turkeys are still numerous in the unsettled parts. Bear, deer, wolves, and foxes, are numerous in the eastern and southern counties. Rabbits and grey squirrels are very plentiful in the settlements. Wheat, rye, maize, oats, barley, and buckwheat, are cultivated in Kentucky. Maize, however, is the principal grain raised for home consumption. Hemp and flax succeed in many parts extremely well. The Irish potatoe grows abundantly, as does a great variety of garden vegetables. Apples, pears, cherries, peaches, and plums, are the fruits most commonly cultivated. The manufactures consist of cloths and stuffs, bagging for cotton and hemp, iron, castings, nails, earthenware, glass, leather, cordage, paper, distilled spirits, oil, salt, saltpetre, gunpowder, and maple sugar. There are about 60 rope-walks, 7 paper-mills, 6 furnaces, and upwards of 20 powder-mills. Between 200 and 300 bushels of salt are yearly made at the different stations. The quantity of maple sugar annually produced in the state, is supposed to exceed two millions of pounds. In 1790, the population was 73,677; in 1800, 220,960; in 1810, 405,692. Present population, 527,000; viz. 420,000 free whites, and 107,000 slaves.

KENTUCKY, a river of the United States, which has its rise towards the south-east corner of the above state, in the Laurel mountains, and after a course, generally to the north-west, of 200 miles, falls into the Ohio at Fort William, in Lat. 36. 20. N.

KENTZ, a town of Austrian Poland, in Galicia. Population 2000.

KENWYN, a parish of England, in Cornwall. Population 6221.

KENZIGEN, a town of Germany, in the Brisgau, on the Elz. Population 2200.

KEPPEL'S ISLAND, one of the Falkland islands, in the South Atlantic. Long. 60. 15. W. Lat. 51. 24. S.

KEPPEL ISLES, a group of islands and rocks, lying off Keppel bay, on the east coast of New Holland.

KERAH, a river of Persia, which enters the Shit-el-Arab, about 20 miles below Koria.

KERBELA, a large and populous town of Irak Arabi, near the Euphrates, with which it is connected by a noble canal. The town has five gates, a well supplied bazar, and seven caravanseras. 50 miles S. S. W. Bagdad.

KERCOLANA, an island in the Eastern seas, between the 4th and 5th degrees of N. lat.

KERENSK, a town of Russia, government of Penza. Population 4500.

KERERA, an island of Scotland, in Argyleshire. It forms the harbour of Oban.

KERESOUN, a seaport of Rumiayah, in Asiatic Turkey, consisting of about 700 ruinous houses.

KERESTER, a town of Hungary, palatinate of Semplin. Population 4000.

KEROETEM, a town of Moravia, 14 miles S. Olmutz. Population 2800.

KERGUELEN'S LAND, or ISLAND OF DESELIATION, an island in the Southern Indian ocean, discovered by Kerguelen, a Frenchman, and visited in 1779, by Captain Cook, who gave it the latter name, from its appearance. Long. 69. 30. E. Lat. 49. 20. S.

KERROO, a river of Wales, in Denbighshire, which falls into the Dee.—24. In Merionethshire, which falls into the Dory.

KERROOK, a town of Asiatic Turkey, in Lower Koordistan. There are 12 mosques in the town and suburbs; but the streets are narrow and filthy, and the houses mean. Population 13,000, or according to some 10,000. Long. 43. 42. E. Lat. 35. 29. N.

KERMAN, a province of the Persian empire, the ancient Caramania. It has Meksran and Seistan E.; Laristan and Fars W.; and is bounded S. by the Persian gulf.

KERMAN, called sometimes SIRJAN, capital of the above province, formerly a great city, and a noted emporium of trade, but has been desolated both by foreign and domestic war. The most dreadful disaster befel it in 1794, when, after a brave defence, it was taken by Aga Mahomed Khan, and given up to plunder for three successive months. The city never has, and perhaps never will, recover from this disaster. Its aspect is desolated and ruinous, and the buildings fill only a small part of the space inclosed by the fortifications. Its manufactures and trade are still very considerable. The bazar is handsome, and well supplied with articles of every description. Population 20,000. Long. 46. 10. E. Lat. 29. 30. N.

KERMANSRAW, a flourishing town of Persia, province of Irak. It contains 12,000 houses, and is adorned and supplied with many gardens and public baths. 149 miles N. E. Bagdad. Long. 48. 30. E. Lat. 34. 20. N.

KERREN, a town of Prussian Westphalia, duchy of Juliers. Population 1690.

KERRY, a county of Ireland, bounded by the Shannon N. W., which separates it from the county of Clare, N. E. by the county of Limerick, S. E. by Cork, and by the Atlantic W. Its greatest extent from N. to S. is about 63 Irish miles, and from E. to W. 41 Irish miles, containing 1,040,407 statute acres. Its soil is as diversified as its surface is irregular, some particular spots being very fruitful, and equally adapted for tillage and pasture; but a very great portion of the county is dreary, desolate, encumbered with very lofty mountains; while other parts are intersected by tracks of bog. Agriculture is in a low state. The principal lake is Lough Lane, generally known under the name of the lake of Killarney. This county is well watered. The principal rivers are the Cashing, the Lane, the Roughy, the Mang. Ventry bay, the roads of Dingle and Valentia, and Ballynakelly's bay, are small but commodious harbours. Kenmare river is a secure and capacious haven. The principal towns are Tralee, where the assizes are held, Killarney, Milltown, and Dingle. Population 140,000.

KERRY, a parish of Wales, in Montgomeryshire. Population 2035.

KERRY HEAD, the south extremity of the mouth of the river Shannon, county of Kerry, Ireland.

KERRY POINT, a cape of Ireland, in the county of Down.

KESHAW, a district of the United States, in South Carolina, on the E. side of the Wateree. Population 9876. Slaves 4547. Chief town Camden.

KENMORE, a small river of Scotland, county of Roxburgh, which falls into the Liddel.

KERTSCH, a seaport and fortress of European Russia, government of Taurida, on the coast of the Crimea. Population 400. 60 miles N. N. E. Caffa.

KESH, a town of Great Bukharia, 30 miles S. Samarcand.

KESSEL, a town of the Netherlands, province of Antwerp. Population 1250.

KESSELBOURG, a village of Silesia, principality of Jauer. Population 1100.—24, Of Saxony, 7 miles W. Dresden.

KESWINGLASS, a parish of England, in Suffolk. Population 579.

KESTAVAN, a considerable range of mountains in Syria, branching off from Mount Lebanon, and reaching the sea, 20 miles S. Tripoli.

KETTESBURY, a town of Hungary, palatinate of Sala, on the Platten see, with 3000 inhabitants, who are supported partly by woollen manufactures, partly by the culture of the neighbouring vineyards.

KESWICK, a market town of England, in the county of Cumberland, on the lake of Derwentwater. It is a very neat little town, and is much visited by strangers who make the tour of the lakes. A cotton manufactory has lately been established; and in the town and its vicinity are also manufactured coarse woollen goods, carpets, blankets, kerseys, and some linens. About a mile and a half to the south of the town is a remarkable piece of antiquity, of the Druidical kind. Population 1901. 17 miles W. Penrith.

KESZDI VASARHELY, a well built town of Transylvania, district of Haromszek. Population 5000. 72 miles E. N. E. Hermannstadt, 41 N. by E. Cronstadt. Long. 26. 7. 33. E. Lat. 46. 45. 45. N.

KET, a small river of Scotland, in Wigtonshire, which runs into the sea at Port Yarrack.

KETCH-NISMAN, a town of Caramania, in Asia Minor. It contains a large manufactory of gunpowder. 85 miles S. W. Kaisarieli.

KETSKEMET, a large town in the interior of Hungary, in the county of Pest. It is the residence of many families of rank and property. Here are manufactures of soap and leather; but the property of the district consists chiefly in cattle and sheep. Population 25,000. 50 miles S. S. E. Pest. Long. 19. 42. 26. E. Lat. 46. 54. 20. N.

KETTERIN, or CATHERINE LOCH, a beautiful lake of Scotland, in Perthshire, about 10 miles in length, and 1½ in breadth.

KETTERING, a market town of England, county of Northampton, near a rivulet that runs into the Nen. The church has a handsome tower and spire, and there are three dissenting chapels. It has manufactures of tammies and lutestrings. Population in 1811, 3242. 74 miles N. W. London.

KETTUS, a parish of Scotland, in Forfarshire. Population 1218.

KETTLE, or KING'S KETTLE, a parish and village of Scotland, in Fife-shire. Population 2046.

KETTON, a parish of England, in Rutland. Population 797.

KETTWAY, a town of Prussian Westphalia, on the Roer. Population 1400.

KEVEUS, St., a parish of England, in Cornwall. Population 2505.

KEULA, a town of Germany, in Saxony. Population 1600.

Kew, a village of England, in the county of Surrey, and neighbourhood of London, on the banks of the Thames, opposite to Old Brentford, where is a very elegant stone bridge of seven arches. Near this is Kew palace, the favourite retreat of his late majesty, who enlarged the gardens, and connected them with those of Richmond. The botanic garden here, chiefly for exotics, is one of the finest perhaps in the world. Population 603. 6 miles W. London.

KEYNSHAM, a market town of England, county of Somerset, on the Avon, over which is a stone bridge. It consists chiefly of one street, about a mile long. Population 1761. 6 miles S. E. Bristol.

KEYSOK, a parish of England, in Bedfordshire. Population 649.

KHANAKEE, a handsome little town of Irak Arabi, 98 miles N. E. Bagdad.

KHANDESH, a province of Hindostan, situated between Lat. 21. and 23. N.; bounded N. by Malwah, W. by Gujerat, S. by Aurungabad, and E. by Berar.

KHANGAH, EL., a town of Egypt, 12 miles N. E. Cairo. Population 1000.

KHANUM, a region of Tartary, S. of the Persian province of Korassan, and E. of the Caspian. It consists of immense tracks of desert, amid which Urgench, Khieva, and other towns, are scattered.

KHOEE, a town of Aderbijan, in Persia, on Lake Urumea. The walls are in good repair, and the streets regular, and shaded with trees. Population 25,000. 150 miles W. Ardebil.

KHOJEND, a large city of Great Bukharia. KHONSAR, a town of Irak, in Persia. It has 2800 families. 92 miles N. W. Isfahan.

KHOORDAH, a fortress of Hindostan, and capital of a district of the same name, 30 miles S. W. Cuttack.

KHYRABAD, capital of a district of the same name in Hindostan. Long. 60. 45. E. Lat. 27. 29. N.

KIARITA, a town of Asiatic Russia, government of Irkoutsk, the centre of all the trade carried on between the Russian and Chinese empires. The great fair is held in December, when merchants flock thither from every part of the Russian empire. They bring cloths, furs, beavers, Russia and morocco leather; and receive in exchange nankeens, silk stuffs, tea, rhubarb, &c. 330 S. Irkoutsk.

KIANGAN, a province of China. Pop. 61 to Sir George Sturgeon, 32 millions.

KIANGSEE, a fine province of China, extending S. from Kiangnan to Quangtung.

KIRKSTOWN, a township of England, in Staffordshire. Population 1009.

KIRKLESWORTH, a township of England, in Durham. Population 237.

KIRWORTH, HAMCOURT OF UFFER, a hamlet of England, in Leicestershire. Pop. 306.

KICKAPOO, or PLEIN RIVER, a river of the United States, which enters Lake Michigan.

KIDDERMINSTER, a market town of England, county of Worcester, divided into two unequal parts by the Stour. The town consists chiefly of two very good streets, one parallel to the canal. The church is a handsome Gothic building, and contains several interesting monuments. There is a free-school, and 8 charity schools, besides 12 almshouses, and a dispensary. In the centre of the market-place stands the town-hall, a large brick building, one part of which serves as a prison. The Staffordshire and Worcester-shire canal, which was finished in 1774, passes within 100 yards of the market-place; and near this is a wharf and commodious warehouse for depositing goods, or sending away such as are intended for Liverpool, Hull, Bristol, &c. Kidderminster has long been noted for its manufactures. That of broad cloth prevailed in the reign of Henry VIII. This was succeeded by finey woollery; after which, woollen and worsted tammies, and flowered stuffs, were introduced; and since that period, crapes, bombasines, and poplins. But the carpet manufacture is that which has taken the firmest root here, has flourished best, and promoted most essentially the trade, wealth, and population of the town. Population 10,709. 15 miles N. Worcester.

KIDWELLY, a market town of South Wales, county of Caermarthen, in an inlet in Caermarthen bay. It is divided into the Old and New town, on both sides of the Lesser Gwendraeth, a handsome stone bridge over the river forming the communication between them. The parish church, which is in the New town, is a plain building, with a tower at the west end, and a spire 166 feet high. There is, besides, a meeting-house for Presbyterians, and a chapel for Methodists; and also a grammar-school. The trade consists mostly in the coal and iron which abound greatly in the neighbourhood. Kidwelly is noted for its castle. Population of parish, 1732. 16 miles S. Caermarthen.

KIEL, a walled town of Denmark, and capital of the grand duchy of Holstein, at the extremity of an inlet from the Baltic, called the Kielerfiord. It is regularly built, and has straight, well paved streets, which terminate in the market-place. The harbour is good. Ship-building and mercantile agency are the principal occupations here. The manufactures are hats, tobacco, starch, and sugar refining. A great annual fair takes place in January. It is the seat of a university. Pop. 7000. 51 miles N. Hamburg. Long. 10. 8. 18. E. Lat. 54. 10. 43. N.

KIELOZA, a town of Poland, palatinate of Cracow. Population 2400.

KIEMI, a small town of European Russia, in Finland, on the Kiemi, 11 miles S. E. Tornen. Long. 24. 27. E. Lat. 66. 49. N.

KIANGHING-YOU, a city of China, of the first rank, in the province of Fokien. Long. 117. 2. E. Lat. 27. 6. N.

KIEN-TCHANG-YOU, a city of China, of the first rank, in Kiangsoo. Long. 118. 30. E. Lat. 27. 35. N.

KISOUZIAN, a large city of the province of Kiangsoo, in China. Long. 118. 41. E. Lat. 29. 54. N.

KIERTIMUN, a town of Denmark, in the island of Funen. Population 1006.

KIEV, a large province or government of European Russia, comprising a part of the Ukraine, and bounded by the provinces of Podolia, Volhynia, Minsk, Tchernigov, and Poltava, from which last it is separated by the Dnieper. It lies between 28. 40. and 33. 20. E. long. and 48. 30. and 51. 50. N. lat. Its territorial extent is 21,000 square miles, and its population about a million.

KIEV, Кіев, or Кіу, capital of the preceding province, on the Dnieper, and consisting properly of three towns, viz. the Old town, Podol or the Lower town, and the fortress of Petcherski, the last regularly defended. Here are barracks for the garrison, also magazines, officers' houses, and several churches; likewise a government-house, and beautiful public gardens. The town possesses no manufactures. Kiev has a gymnasium, and an old established high school, erected into a university in 1803. The church of St Sophia at Kiev being the earliest Christian church in Russia, is an object of great interest, and of frequent pilgrimage to the followers of the Greek faith. Population 20,000. 270 miles N. by W. Cherson. Long. 33. 27. 45. E. Lat. 50. 27. 0. N.

KILBACIE, a village of Scotland, county of Clackmannan, noted for its distillery.

KILBEGGAN, a considerable village of Ireland, in Westmeath, on the Droic, 41 miles W. Dublin.

KILBRANNY, a parish and village of Scotland, in Ayrshire. Population 1333.

KILBURN, a village of England, in Derbyshire. Pop. 32.

KILCOCK, a village of Ireland, 11 miles W. by N. Dublin.

KILCONNELL, a decayed village of Ireland, in the county of Galway.

KILCONQUHAN, a parish and village of Scotland, in Fife. Population 2317. The village has an extensive tan-works.

KILCULLIN, or KILCULLIN BARROW, a town of Ireland, county of Kildare, on the Liffey, over which is a bridge. N. Old Kilcullen, formerly a. 7 miles E. Kildare.

KILDA, St. Under this general name is comprised a group of islands belonging to the Hebrides. The principal island gives its name to the rest, and is about 3 miles long from east to west, and 2 broad from north to south, and about 9½ miles in circumference. Next to St Kilda, Borer a the largest of the islands it also presents a beautiful verdure, and is adorned with the most picturesque groupes of rocks that are to be found in the Hebrides. Soa is the next in magnitude, and possesses also some pasturage; but Iacnieh, Stackly, and Stackemlin, are devoid of any. The islands altogether are supposed to be capable of pasturing 3000 sheep; but the quantity maintained scarcely amounts to one-third of this. St Kilda is about 140 miles from the nearest point of the mainland of Scotland. Population 1003.

KILDARE, a county of Ireland, in the province of Munster, bounded N. by Meath, E. by Dublin and Wicklow, S. by Carlow, W. by King's and Queen's counties. It extends from north to south 40½ miles, and from east to west 38½ (English) miles, and contains an area of 893½ Irish square miles. The county is mostly an extensive flat of fine arable soil, which for centuries has mostly supplied the capital with corn.

It comprehends, however, a considerable track of bog. The barony of Kildare, the celebrated tufty plain on which the heaves are held, is one of the most beautiful commons in the island. Its principal rivers are the Barrow, the Liffey, and the Boyne. The Grand canal and the Royal canal pass through it. The principal towns are Nias and Athy, alternately assize towns. Monastereven, and Kildare. The county sends two members to the imperial parliament. Population 110,000. Proportion of Catholics to Protestants 36 to 1.

KILDARE, a town of Ireland, in the above county; a small and ruinous place, of not more than 100 houses, but still retaining traces of its ancient importance. There is a very fine round tower, 130 feet high, in an excellent state of preservation, besides the ruins of two abbeys and the cathedral. Kildare is chiefly supported by the frequent horse races on the extensive common in the neighbourhood called the curragh, having little or no trade. Before the union it sent two members to the Irish parliament. 30 miles W. N. W. Wicklow.

KILBOURN, a small village of Ireland, county of Cork, 107 miles S. W. Dublin.

KILBOURNE, a small town of Ireland, on the Shannon, 123 miles S. W. Dublin.

KILBRANNY, a village of Ireland, in the county of Clare, 116 miles from Dublin.

KILBRANNY and KILVILLUP, a united parish of Scotland, Ayrshire. Pop. 3987.

KILBRANNY, a village of South Wales, Pembrokeshire. 92.

KILDA, St. a small and fishing town of Scotland, in the parish of Kildare, on the Dever, 84 miles S. W. Berdree.

KILDEAR, a county of Ireland, in the province of Leinster, bounded N. W. by Queen's county, N. by the county of Carlow, E. by the county of Wexford, and S. W. by the county of Tipperary. Its greatest length is 45½, and its greatest breadth 26 English miles. Its area contains 360,000

English acres. The soil is generally of a good quality. There is little of bog land; and where the hills subside into plains or valleys, the soil is of great fertility. There are very extensive dairies in Kilkenny, from the produce of which many farmers pay their rents. Agriculture is generally in a very backward state. In the northern parts of the county are excellent quarries for flint. Coal is produced in great abundance. In the limestone district of this county are many valuable marble quarries. Manganese, iron ore, lead ore, and some indications of copper ore, are perceived in different parts. The chief rivers of Kilkenny are the Suire, the Barrow, and the Nore. There is a chalybeate spa at Ballypaulin. The chief town of the county is Kilkenny. The other towns are Callan, Instige, Thomastown, Gowran, Knocktopher, Durrow, Castle Comer, and Freshford. The county sends two members to parliament. Pop. 101,000, of whom 95,000 were Catholics.

KILKENNY, the capital of the above county, on the Nore, on which there are two handsome bridges. It contains many handsome buildings. The venerable ruins of its churches, monasteries, and abbeys, still remain to attest its former importance; and its gates, towers, walls, and bastions, which are still to be seen, prove it to have been formerly a place of great strength. The most remarkable buildings are, the castle of the earl of Ormond, the cathedral, the bishop's palace, the celebrated college or free school, a theatre, an asylum for decayed housekeepers, &c. There are but two churches in the city; but there are several Roman Catholic chapels, each of which has congregations more numerous than both the churches. A woollen manufactory is carried on to a considerable extent. Here are also starch manufactories. Kilkenny, which formerly had four, has now only one representative. Pop. 14,978. Long. 7. 15. W. Lat. 52. 35. N.

KILKENNY, a town of the United States, in Grafton county, New Hampshire.

KILKERRAN BAY, a harbour of Ireland, in Galway.

KILLALA, a town of Ireland, county of Mayo, on a fine bay of the Atlantic, to which it gives name. It has a cathedral and palace. It was taken by the French in 1798. 127 miles N. W. Dublin.

KILLALOE, a town of Ireland, county of Clare, on the Shannon, over which is a bridge with 19 arches. It is a very old town, destitute of trade. The cathedral is a venerable old structure, which has been built about 600 years. 11 miles N. N. E. Limerick.

KILLARNEY, a thriving and well built market town of Ireland, county of Kerry, much frequented on account of the adjoining lake of Killarney, which is remarkable for its picturesque beauties. Killarney is the residence of the Roman Catholic bishop. Population 5000. 38 miles W. Cork.

KILLBEGAN, a town of Ireland, in the county of Westmeath, 44 miles W. Dublin.

KILLEEN, a town of Ireland, county of Meath, 7 miles S. S. E. Navan.

KILLESHANDRA, a village of Ireland, county of Cavan, 61 miles N. W. Dublin.

KILLICHRANKIE, a noted pass to the highlands of Scotland, in Athol, near the junction of the Tummel with the Garry.

KILLIN, a parish and village of Scotland, in Breadalbane, county of Perth. Pop. 2103.

KILLINGLY, a township of the United States, Connecticut. Population 2580.

KILLINGWORTH, a post township of the United States, Connecticut. Pop. 2244.

KILLMACDUAUGH, a village of Ireland, county of Galway. 13 miles N. Ennis.

KILLMALLICK, a town of Ireland, county of Limerick, formerly of great importance, which is now denoted by the ruins of the churches and monasteries, and the remains of its walls and strong gates. 16 miles S. Limerick.

KILLMOREN, a village of Ireland, county of Down, on the sea shore, with a good quay, and a fine harbour. 5 miles S. Downpatrick.

KILLWAGHYRA, a small village of Ireland, county of Antrim.

KILLWATER, a town of Ireland, county of Donegal, on Donegal bay, 124 miles N. W. Dublin.

KILLWORTH, a town of Ireland, county of Down, on an arm of Lough Strangford, where ships lie sheltered from all winds. The linen manufacture is established here. 15 miles S. S. E. Belfast.

KILMACHTOMAS, a village of Ireland, in Waterford, 83 miles S. S. W. Dublin.

KILMARNOCK, a village of Scotland, in Perthshire, about a mile W. Callander.

KILMARNY, a parish and village of Scotland, in Fifeshire, 5 miles from Cupar in Fife.

KILMARNOCK, a parish and town of Scotland, in Ayrshire. The town is on each side of a small river of the same name. The old part of it is irregularly built; but since 1802 many new houses of a very superior description have been built, with an elegant town-house, academy, and coffee-room. In the town are seven churches, namely, two of the Establishment, one of which is collegiate; a Relief, a New and Old Light Burgh, an Antiburgher, and a Methodist. There are also four public established schools in the place. A stone pillar, about nine feet high, called Seuls' Cross, erected in 1444, in memory of an English nobleman, Lord Seuls, who was killed on the spot by an arrow from one of the Kilmarnock family, is situated in the north-east part of the town. The corporation holds its present property in virtue of a grant obtained in 1700 from the Kilmarnock family. The articles chiefly manufactured are carpets, shoes, blankets, tartans, and other woollen cloths; bonnets, caps, mits, stockings, gloves, leather, and saddlery. There are besides two pretty extensive tan-works, two large and excellent breweries, a print-field for calicoes, and a foundry for cast iron. It has manufactures of muslins and silks. The harbour admits vessels drawing from 16 to 18 feet water, and at full sea it will admit frigates of the first class. Population 12,709. 22 miles S. W. Glasgow, and 12 N. E. Ayr.

KILMARNOCK, a post village of the United States, in Lancaster county, Virginia.

KILMORE, a small village of Ireland, in the county of Cavan, 3½ miles from Cavan.

KILMURRY, a small village of Ireland, county of Clare, 129 miles from Dublin.

KILPATRICK, NEW or EAST, a parish of Scotland, in Stirling and Dumbarton shires. Population 2539.

KILPATRICK, OLD and WEST, a parish and village of Scotland, in Dumbartonshire. Population 3692.

KILREA, a town of Ireland, in the county of Londonderry, 102 miles N. Dublin.

KILRENNY, a parish and royal burgh of Scotland, in Fifeshire, which, along with Crail, the two Anstruthers, and Pittenweem, sends a member to parliament.

KILRICH, a town of Ireland, county of Clare, on the Shannon, 142 miles S. W. Dublin.

KILSYTH, a village of Scotland, county of Stirling. The inhabitants are chiefly weavers. The place contains between 400 and 500 looms. 12½ miles E. by N. Glasgow.

KILWINNING, a town and parish of Scotland, in Ayrshire, on the Garnock, over which is a stone bridge of two arches. Adjoining to it is the small village of Byres. It is noted for being the seat of the first mason lodge in Scotland, from whence all the other lodges have taken their rise. The ruins of the monastery are to the south of the town. Population of both 3696. 3 miles N. N. W. Irvine.

KILWORTH, a town of Ireland, county of Cork, 104 miles S. W. Dublin.

KIMBERWORTH, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 3707.

KIMBOROX, a market town of England, in Huntingdonshire, noted for its castle. Population 1562.

KINBUK, properly KILBOK, a small fortress of European Russia, government of Taurida, on a peninsula of the same name, opposite Oczakow. Long. 31. 30. E. Lat. 46. 35. N.

KINCARDINESHIRE, or the MEARNS, a county of Scotland, bounded E. by the German or British ocean for about 35 miles, including the various indentations of a high and precipitous rocky shore; N. by the river Dee and part of Aberdeenshire; and W. and S. by the county of Angus, from which it is separated, in almost the whole line, by the river North Esk. It is of a triangular form, and extends 33 miles in length from S. W. to N. E., and 24 miles, where broadest, from S. to N., comprehending an area of 300 square miles, or 243,444 acres. The general aspect of this county is extremely diversified. It may be divided into the five following districts:—1st, The Dee side district, or the valley which lies on the north side of the Grampians, through which flows the river Dee; 2d, the district on the coast, south of the water of Cowie, which flows into the German ocean near Stonehaven; 3d, the coast district south of this water; 4th, the valley or How of the Mearns, to the south of the Grampians; and 5th, that part of the county which is occupied by the Grampians. Of the Dee side district, there is little more than one-eighth part in cultivation. The coast district, north of Stonehaven, which extends 14 miles along the coast, and is about 3½ miles broad, though it contains strips of fertile ground, is generally barren and unproductive. The district on the coast south from Stonehaven contains very fertile lands, with some that are not so valuable. The valley or How of the Mearns lies to the westward of the district last described, and immediately south from the Grampians. It is a low champaign country, well cultivated, and abounding in gentlemen's seats, villages, and plantations. The dreary regions of the Grampians stretches through the whole breadth of the county from east to west, with the Dee side district on the north, and the How of the Mearns on the south; and carries sterility of soil and ruggedness of aspect almost to the verge of the ocean. This bleak and hilly country, commencing where cultivation ceases, at about three miles from the coast, with a height of from 500 to 600 feet, increases rapidly in altitude, but on a pretty regular scale of gradation, among a vast congeries of dark brown hills, until, at the western extremity of the county, about 20 miles from the sea, Mount Battock, nearly 3500 feet high, rises above them all. The principal rivers are the Dee, the North Esk, Bervie water, and the Cowie. There are also the Carron, the Feuch, the Avon, the Dye, besides others of inferior note. The principal antiquities are Finella's castle, remarkable for vitrified walls, about a mile and a half west of Fettercairn; the Queen's castle, about a mile eastward from that town; the Kame of Mathers, about six miles from Montrose; Whistleberry castle, about two miles from Bervie; and Dunnottar castle, about a mile south from Stonehaven; all placed on the summits of lofty insulated rocks on the sea shore. Valued rent L. 74,931; real rent in 1813, L. 84,990. Kincardineshire contains only one royal burgh, namely, Bervie. Population 29,118.

KINCARDINE, a small town of Scotland, on the Forth, with a commodious harbour. Ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent.

KINCARDINE, a parish of Scotland, counties of Ross and Cromarty. Population 1811.

KINCARDINE O'NEIL, a parish of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire. Population 1793.

KINCLAVEN, a parish of Scotland, in the county of Perth. Population 906.

KINNEBROOK, a village and township of the United States, in New York. Pop. 3709. There are about 30 dwellings in the village.

KINBERTON, a village of England, in Cheshire. Population 489.

KINERON, a market town and parish of England, in Warwickshire. Population 1071.

KINGAN-FOU, a city of China, of the first rank, on the Kanian. Long. 114. 32. E. Lat. 27. 7. N.

KING AND QUEEN, a county of the United States, in Virginia, 25 miles long, and 20 broad. Pop. 10,900, including 6000 slaves.

KING GEORGE, a county of the United States, in Virginia. It is 22 miles long, and 14 broad. Pop. 6454, including 3876 slaves.

KING GEORGE'S ISLANDS, two islands in the South Pacific ocean, discovered by Byron in 1765. Long. 149. 2. W. Lat. 14. 35. S.

KING GEORGE THE THIRD'S ARCHIPELAGO, a large group of islands on the west coast of North America. Long. 223. 45. to 225. 37. E. Lat. 53. 10. to 55. 18. N.

KING GEORGE THE THIRD'S SOUND, a capacious bay on the S. coast of New Holland. Long. of Bald Head, the entrance into the sound, 113. 0. 45. E. Lat. 30. 6. 15. S.

KING WILLIAM, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 9263, including 5765 slaves.

KINGHORN, a parish and royal burgh of Scotland, in Fifeshire, of great antiquity, on the north shore of the firth of Forth. This town was erected into a royal burgh by David I. It joins with Kirkcaldy, Dysart, and Burntisland, in returning a member to parliament. A ferry over to Leith has been established here from time immemorial. 9 miles N. by E. Edinburgh. Population 2443.

KINGLASIE, a parish and village of Scotland, county of Fife. Population 1027.

KING'S-BARRA, a village and parish of Scotland, in Fifeshire. Pop. 930.

KINGSBRIDGX, a market town of England, in Devonshire, on the Salcombe river, with 150 houses. It has a harbour for boats; and here is a Latin free school. Population 1430. 206 miles W. London.

KINGSBURY, a post township of the United States, in Washington county, New York, on the Hudson. Population 2272.

KINGSCLERE, a market town and parish of England, in Southamptonshire. The church is a well built structure; and there is here a well endowed free school. It carries on a trade, in malt. Pop. 2698. 171 miles S. W. Reading.

KING'S COUNTY, an inland county of Ireland, bounded N. by East and West Meath, E. by Kildare and Queen's county, S. by Tipperary, and W. by Galway, from which it is separated by the river Shannon. It extends 43 English miles, and is 39 miles broad. Its superficial extent is 797 square English miles. The general soil of the arable lands is naturally very fertile, and chiefly consists either of a deep moor, or a shallow gravelly loam. Considerably more than a third part of the whole county is occupied by bog and mountain. Its principal rivers are the Shannon, the Little Brosna, and the Greater Brosna. There are also several smaller rivers. It sends two members to the imperial parliament. Population 130,000.

KING'S COUNTY, a county of the United States, in New York. Population 8303.

KINGSDOWN, a small fishing village of England, in Kent, 2½ miles from Deal.

KING'S FERRY, a post village of the United States, in Monongalia county, Virginia.

KING'S ISLAND, an island at the western extremity of Bass' straits; also on the west coast of North America.

KING'S KENNEL, a township of England, in Devonshire. Population 679.

KINGSLEY, a township of England, in Cheshire. Population 924.

KING'S RIVER, a river of Ireland, which joins the Liffy, 1½ mile S. Blessington.

KINGSTON, two townships of England, in Devonshire and Dorsetshire. Pop. 523—619.

KINGSTON, a seaport on the south coast of Jamaica, constituted a city in 1692, situated on a bay or inlet of the sea, in which there is safe anchorage. It was founded in 1693, after the destruction of Port Royal by an earthquake in the preceding year. It has been of late greatly extended, and has many handsome houses. It has two churches, one Episcopal, the other Presbyterian. There is besides, a theatre, a free-school established in 1739, a poor-house, and a public hospital. In the lower part of the town is the market-place, which is plentifully supplied with butcher meat, poultry, fish, fruits, and vegetables. Population—whites, 10,000; people of colour, 2500; free negroes, 2500; slaves, 18,000; total, 33,000. 10 miles E. Spanish Town. Long. 76. 33. W. Lat. 18. N.

KINGSTON, the capital of the island of St Vincent's, in the West Indies, situated at the head of a bay of the same name, on the south-western shore of the island, in St George's parish. Long. 61. W. Lat. 13. 6. N.

KINGSTON, a town of Upper Canada, and the largest and most populous of the province, seated on the St Lawrence, or rather at the eastern extremity of Lake Ontario. This town is regularly built. For the last 15 years it has obtained considerable mercantile importance, and now becomes the main entrepot between Montreal and all the settlements along the lakes to the westward. Kingston possesses one of the best harbours on the lake, which is defended by two batteries, and it is the naval arsenal of Great Britain in this quarter, where ships of war, even of the first rate, have been constructed. 190 miles N. W. Montreal. Long. 76. 40. W. Lat. 44. 8. N.

KINGSTON—There are numerous townships of this name in the United States, two in New Hampshire, one in Massachusetts, two in Rhode Island, one in New Jersey, one in Pennsylvania, two in Maryland, &c.

KINGSTON, a town of the United States, in Georgetown district, South Carolina, on Waccama river, 40 miles N. E. Georgetown.—2d. A village in Talbot county, Maryland, on the east side of the Choptank, 4 miles below its mouth.—3d. A post township and capital of Ulster county, New York, on the Hudson, 65 miles below Albany. Population 2510.—The village of Kingston is pleasantly situated on Esopus creek, about 3 miles from the Hudson.

KINGSTON UPON THAMES, a market town of England, in Surrey, on the Thames. It is of great antiquity, and noted for the historical events connected with it. It has a spacious market-place, at the north end of which stands the town-hall. The front is ornamented with a statue of Queen Anne. The church is a spacious building. On the north side of it is a large stone, on which, according to tradition, the Anglo-Saxon monarchs were placed during their coronation. The bridge here is the oldest on the Thames, except London bridge. Market on Saturday, a large corn market. Population 4091. 10 miles S. W. London.

KING-TCHENG-FOO, a city of China, in Houquang. Long. 111. 37. E. Lat. 30. 20. N. KING-RE-CHING, a large town of China, in Kiangsee. Long. 115. 50. E. Lat. 29. 25. N.

KINGTON, or KINETON, a market town of England, in Herefordshire, on the Arrow. It has manufactures of narrow cloth. Population 2313.

KING-YONG-FOU, a town of China, of the first rank. Long. 107. 20. E. Lat. 36. 0. N.

KING-YUEN-FOU, a city of China, of the first rank, in Quang-see.

KINHOA-FOU, a city of China, of the first rank, in Tchekiang.

KINROSS, a small river of Scotland, in Argyllshire.—Also a parish of the same name.

KINNAIRD'S-HEAD, the southern boundary of the Moray frith, in Scotland.

KINNEGAD, a long straggling village of Ireland, in the county of Westmeath.

KINNELL, a small river of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, which falls into the Annan.

KINNESSWOOD, a village of Scotland, in Kinross-shire.

KINNIKINICK, a river of the United States, which runs into the Scioto.

KINROSS-SHIRE, an inland county of Scotland, bounded N. and W. by Perthshire, S. and E. by Fifeshire. Its greatest length from east to west is 12 miles, and its greatest breadth from north to south about 11 miles. It contains an area of about 53 English miles, or 42,536 Scots acres. The middle part of this county is occupied by Lochleven lake.

From the banks of this lake the ground rises gently towards the north; but towards the south the rise is more abrupt and rugged. The soil in the low grounds is inclined to clay, and is well adapted for all kinds of crops; in the more elevated parts it is light and scanty; and in the hilly districts moorish and barren. Agriculture is greatly attended to, and the land is in a rapid state of improvement. Lochleven lake is chiefly supplied by three small streams, the North and South Quiche, and the Garney. It gives rise to the river Leven. The antiquities in this county are numerous and interesting. Kinross-shire divides with Clackmannanshire the right of sending a member to parliament. The only town is Kinross. Population 7762.

Long. between 0. 5. and 0. 21. W. Lat. between 56. 9. and 56. 13. N.

KINROSS, the county town of the above shire, on Loch Leven. It has much improved within these last 30 years. Cotton goods are manufactured.

KINSALE, a town of Ireland, in the county of Cork, on a bay at the mouth of the river Bandon, which forms a fine harbour, called the harbour of Kinsale, which is protected by a regular fort, begun by the Earl of Orrery in 1670. The town is built under Compass hill, and extends about an English mile. The situation is very singular, the chief street running round the hill, with others above it, communicating by steep lanes. The harbour is most compact, secure, and capacious. In time of war it has been exceedingly frequented, homeward and outward bound East and West India fleets often putting in here, as well as the largest squadrons of the royal navy. Its foreign commerce is now chiefly transferred to Cork, which it supplies most largely with fish. For carrying on its fisheries it employs 300 or 400 boats. It sends one member to the imperial parliament. In the bathing season it is a fashionable resort. Population 10,000. 136 miles S. W. Dublin.

KINSALE, a post village of the United States, in Westmoreland county, Virginia.

KINSMAN, a post township of the United States, in Trumbull county, Ohio.

KINSTON, a post township of the United States, in Lenoir county, North Carolina.

KINTAIL, a small river of Scotland, in Sutherlandshire, which falls into the Kyle.

KINTORE, an ancient royal burgh and parish of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire, on the Don. It unites with Banff, Cullen, Elgin, and Inverury, in sending a member to parliament. Population 1057.

KINTYRE, or CANTYRE, the southern division of Argyllshire, in Scotland. It is a peninsula, 40 miles long and 6½ broad, lying between the frith of Clyde and the Atlantic ocean, and joined to Knapdale at the narrow isthmus of Tarbert. Population 20,000.

KINTYRE, MUZZ, or, the southern point of the above peninsula. Long. 5. 46. W. Lat. 55. 21. N.

KINTYRE, a river of Wales, in Cardiganshire, which falls into the Dovy.

KINVALE PORT, on the coast of Ireland, 4 miles E. Kinsale harbour.

KINZO, one of the ten circles into which the duchy of Baden was divided in 1010.

KINZO, a river of Suabia, which joins the Rhine at Kehl, opposite Strasburg.

KIOGA, a seaport of Denmark, in Zealand, 10 miles S. Copenhagen. Population 1400.

KIRKAX, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 938.

KIRKBY, a village and parish of Scotland, 10½ miles W. Stirling, noted for distilling whisky.

KIRZWEIM, a town of Germany, 22 miles N. E. Strasburg. Population 1600.

KIRBY, or KIRKBY MOORSIDE, a market town of England, in Yorkshire, 22 miles N. by E. York. Population 1872.

KIRCHBERG, a town of Germany, in Lower Austria, on the Wecksel. Population 3000.—2d, Of Saxony, circle of the Erzgebirge. Population 2100.—3d, Of Switzerland, in the canton of St Gall.—4th, Of Lower Austria, on the Wagram.—5th, Of Lower Austria, 45 miles S. W. Vienna.

KIRCHDORF, a town of Hungary, in the county of Zips. Population 2800.

KIRCHDORF, a village of Germany, in Baden. Population 1700.

KIRCHHAYN, a town of Lower Lusatia, on the Bober. Population 3500.

KIRCHHEIM, a town of Germany, in Württemberg, on the Lauter. Population 4050.

KIRCHHEIM-POLAND, a town of the Bavarian circle of the Rhine. Population 2000.

KIRCUBBIN, a small village of Ireland, in the county of Down.

KIRENSK, a town of Asiatic Russia, government of Irkoutsk, on the Lena, 630 miles N. Irkoutsk. Houses 100.

KIRGHISZ, or KIRGUIS, a numerous and widely extended people of Independent Tartary, occupying a great part of the southern frontier of Asiatic Russia. They are estimated at 600,000.

KIRILOV, a town of European Russia, government of Novgorod. Population 2200.

KIRIN OULA, a very extensive government of Eastern Tartary, to the north of China, in the country of the Manchews, inclosed between the sea of Japan, the northern frontier of Corea, and the river Seghalien Oula. It is upwards of 700 miles long, and 200 of medium breadth. Long. 126. 24. E. Lat. 43. 40. N.

KIRKALDY, a royal burgh of Scotland, in Fifeshire, on the north shore of the frith of Forth, and stretching along the shore of a bay of the same name. It is irregularly built, consisting of one principal street, nearly a mile in length, having lanes opening from it on each side, and several streets recently built on a uniform plan, running parallel to the main street; and every exertion has been made to correct the original defect of the street, which seems to have been built according to the curvature of the shore. The only public buildings worthy of notice are the church, the town-house, and a handsome structure lately erected by subscription, containing assembly-rooms, library, mason-lodge room, &c. The church, which was rebuilt in 1807, is a handsome building; but the old steeple attached to it gives it an awkward appearance. The town-house (rebuilt in 1676), is a plain stone building of three stories, with a flat roof, and surmounted with a square tower and spire. Kirkaldy is of great antiquity. It was erected into a royal burgh soon after the year 1450. It rose to great consequence after the year 1644, and had 100 sail of vessels. Its trade, however, declined during the civil wars, and was gradually reduced, till, in the year 1700, it had only two ferry boats and two coasters. After this it began to revive; and has now 6500 tons of shipping, consisting of 42 vessels, viz. 3 whale fishers, 30 employed in the West India, North American, and Baltic trades; 6 coasters, and 4 ferry boats between Kirkaldy and Leith. These have now been nearly superseded by steam-boats, which regularly ply between Leith and this port. It has spinning-mills, and manufactures of checks and sheetings. There are two tan-works, four salt-pans, and a foundry on a limited scale, in the burgh; and an extensive distillery at the eastern extremity. Ship-building is carried on, but not to a great extent. Kirkaldy is the birth-place of the celebrated Dr Adam Smith. It joins with Dysart, Kinghorn, and Burntisland, in returning a member to the British parliament. Pop. 4452. Long. 3. 10. W. Lat. 56. 8. N.

KIRKBRATON, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 2163.

KIRKBY, a township of England, in Lancashire, 6 miles from Liverpool. Pop. 1035.

KIRKBY LODSDALE, a neat market town and parish of England, in Westmoreland, on the Lune, over which is a lofty bridge of three arches. The church is a handsome building. Pop. 1643. 12 miles S. E. Kendal.

KIRKBY MALZEARD, a township of England, in Yorkshire. Population 682.

KIRKBY SOUTH, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 633.

KIRKBY STEPHEN, a market town and parish of England, in Westmoreland, on the Eden, 23 miles N. E. Kendal. It has some woollen manufactures. Population 1312.

KIRK-CLISSA, a town of European Turkey, province of Romania. It carries on a trade in corn, wine, butter, and cheese. Pop. 16,000. 100 miles W. Constantinople.

KIRKCUDDRIGHT, a county of Scotland, or, as it is more frequently termed, a stewartry, comprehending the eastern district of Galloway, and extending from north-west to south-east about 45 miles in length, and from north-east to south-west about 30 in breadth, containing, according to the latest survey, 1021 square miles, or 449,312 Scots acres. It is bounded N. E. and E. by Dumfriesshire, where the rivers Cairn and Nith form its boundary; S. by the Solway frith and the Irish sea; W. by Wigtonshire, where the Cree is the boundary; and N. W. by the county of Ayr. The country is exceedingly diversified in its surface; it presents a continual succession of hills, more or less abrupt. On these, the land is for the most part capable of tillage; but it is only in a few places that it presents a smooth and uniformly arable surface. The shore, however, though broken into inequalities, has no considerable rivers nor mountains; and though studded with innumerable hills, no country is supposed to have less elevation above the level of the sea. The stewartry, widely different, often swells into mountains of large dimensions; a range of which divides it from Ayr.

shire, not much inferior in height to any in the south of Scotland. The mountains which range along the southern shore are also considerable, and form scenery highly picturesque, and sometimes grand and striking. Considerable tracks of smooth unbroken land are everywhere interspersed among the more elevated parts, of a generally, and sometimes of a clayey soil. Much of it is also composed of smooth rounded hills, which are frequently extremely barren; and the same bad character extends to lands of a stronger soil. The moorlands also, which form a considerable proportion of the county, are extremely barren; though there are detached tracks of alluvial soil interspersed through these unproductive parts of the county. Kirkcudbrightshire contains two royal burghs, viz. Kirkcudbright and New Galloway; and several considerable villages, as Gatehouse, Creechtown, Castle-Douglas, Dalbeaty, Newton-Stewart, and Rhonhouse. The chief rivers are the Cree on the west; the Plect, the Dee, formed by the union of the Ken, Deugh, and Dee; and the Orr or Urr. The county is divided into 28 parishes. Population 33,903. The medium real rental of 1812 and 1813, as ascertained by the property-tax commissioners, amounted to £201,745 sterling; and the valued rent is £114,507 Scots.—There is also a parish of the same name. Pop. 782.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT, the chief town of the above stewartry, on the Dee, about six miles above its confluence with the Solway firth. It is a neat and well built town. It has a large and elegant court-house, and a commodious new jail; also a large and elegant academy. The harbour is the most commodious on the south coast of Scotland. Kirkcudbright was erected into a royal burgh by king James II. in 1435. Revenue £1196. Population 2695. 28 miles S. W. Dumfries.

KIRKDALE, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1273.

KIRKHAM, a market town of England, in Lancashire, a few miles to the north of the Ribbles. It has manufactures of sail-cloth and cordage; also coarse linens. Here is a well endowed free school for three masters, a charity school for girls; and a well built and extensive work-house, lately erected. Population 735. 23 miles E. Lancaster.

KIRKSTILL, a village of Scotland, in the county of Edinburgh.

KIRKLAND, a township of England, in Westmoreland. Population 1378.

KIRKLEATHAM, a township of England, North Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 686.

KIRKLISTOWN, a parish and village of Scotland, on the Almond, 8 miles W. Edinburgh.

KIRKMICHAEL, a river of the Isle of Man, which falls into the Irish sea.

KIRKOSWALD, a market town of England, in Cumberland, on the Eden. The church is a very old and irregular building. Pop. 760.

KIRKSTALL, a small village of England, in Yorkshire.

• KIRKTON IN LINDSEY, an irregularly built market town of England, in the county of Lincoln. The church, of Norman architecture, is a large and massive building, with a tower at the west end. It has a bridewell, a court-house, and a free grammar school. Population 1480. 20 miles N. Lincoln.

KIRKWALL, a royal burgh of Scotland, and chief town of the stewartry of Orkney, in the island of Pomona, built on a neck of land projecting into the sea. It is nearly a mile long; but is of inconsiderable breadth, having only one street, which is narrow and inconvenient, and badly paved. The cathedral, or church of St Magnus, is a Gothic building, founded, it is said, by Rognwald, count of Norway, in the year 1130. It is 236 feet long, 66 broad, and 71 high in the roof, which is vaulted with a number of Gothic arches, and supported by 14 pillars on each side. The spire was originally 140 feet in height; but was destroyed by lightning. Opposite to the cathedral, on the west side of the street, stood the ruins of the king's castle; also the ruins of a building called the earl's palace; and almost adjoining to it is the bishop's palace, a ruin of very great antiquity. Kirkwall was erected into a royal burgh in 1496. It joins with Wick, Dornoch, Dingwall, and Tain, in sending a member to parliament. Of late years, the town has increased both in population and extent, and new manufactures have been introduced of linen, cotton, and straw plaiting. The harbour is excellent; it is commanded by a fortification, built by the English in the time of Oliver Cromwell. Population 2212. 172 miles N. Inverness. Long. 0. 25. W. Lat. 58. 33. N.

KIRKONDRY, NETHER, a village of Scotland, county of Aberdeen.

KIRRIEMUIR, a town and parish of Scotland, in Forfarshire, on a hill, from which there is an extensive view of the vale of Strathmore, through which flows the river Garrie. The parish church is a modern fabric, with a neat spire and clock; and there is an Episcopal chapel, with a handsome spire, which has a fine appearance. The staple manufacture of the place is coarse linens. Population 5666. 18 miles N. Dundee.

KIRSKOFF, a town of European Russia, government of Tambov. Population 3300.

KIRSEHNE, a small town of Anatolia, in Asiatic Turkey, 84 miles N. E. Konieh.

KIRTIPORE, a town of Hindostan, in India. Long. 85. 37. E. Lat. 27. 30. N.

KIRTLIE, a river of Scotland, county of Dumfries. It falls into the Solway firth.

KIRCHKAP, a town of Moldavia, on the Danister. Long. 29. 25. E. Lat. 46. 40. N.

KIRGARDUNA, a river of Hindostan. It falls into the Jhylium.

KIRGHANAGUR, a town and district of Bengal. Long. 83. 35. E. Lat. 23. 26. N.

KISHINE, or KISHITS, called also JESIRA DERAUZ (Long Island), an island in the Persian gulf. It runs 60 miles along the Persian shore, and is 12 broad. Long. 56. 50. E. Lat. 26. 57. 30. N.

KISITAC, an island in the North Pacific ocean.—Also one on the north-west coast of North America.

KISHITWAN, the capital of a district of the same name in Hindostan. Long. 75. 20. E. Lat. 34. 7. N.

KISKIMINTAS, a considerable river of the United States, which falls into the Allegany river, in Pennsylvania, Lat. 40. 40. N.

KISSEEN, a seaport on the southern coast of Arabia. Long. 51. 50. E. Lat. 15. 10. N.

KIMMINGEN, a town of Franconia, 32 miles N. Wurzburg. Population 1000.

KIRINA, or KUMINA, a celebrated river of the south of India, which being joined by the Malpurba, Gutpurba, Beemah, and Toombudra rivers, pours its prodigious volume of waters, by various mouths, into the bay of Bengal, S. of Masulipatam.

KITTAXING, a post township of the United States, and capital of Armstrong county, Pennsylvania, on the east side of the Allegany, 35 miles N. E. Pittsburg. Pop. 1500.

KITTATINNY MOUNTAINS, a ridge of the Allegany mountains, in the United States, which runs through the north parts of New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

KITTERY, a post township of the United States, in York county, Maine, at the mouth of the Piscataqua, opposite Portsmouth, New Hampshire, 5 miles S. W. York. Pop. 2019.

KITZINCKX, a town of Franconia, on the Maine, 10 miles E. S. E. Wurzburg. Pop. 3000.

KIUN-CHEU-FOU, a city of China, of the first rank, capital of the island of Huinan.

KIUTAIAN, a large city, capital of Anatolia, in Asia Minor. Population 50,000 or 60,000, of which number 10,000 are Armenians, and 5000 Greeks. There are 30 public baths, 50 mosques, 4 Armenian and 1 Greek church, and 20 caravanseras. Long. 29. 52. E. Lat. 39. 35. N.

KIU-TCHOU-FOU, a town of China, in Tcheking. Long. 118. 30. E. Lat. 29. 2. N.

KIZILERMAR, a large river in Asia Minor, which falls into the Black sea, Long. 36. 10. E. Lat. 41. 30. N.

KIZILOZEN, a considerable river of Persia, which enters the Caspian sea, near Reehd.

KIZLAR, a fortified town of the government of Caucasus, in Asiatic Russia.

KLATTAU, the chief place of a circle of the same name in Bohemia. Population 4000. 69 miles S. W. Prague.

KLEVE-BERG (Clèves and Berg), the name of one of the provinces into which the Prussian territory on the Rhine is now divided. It is on both sides of the Rhine, between the province of Westphalia on the N., and that of the Lower Rhine on the S. Pop. 330,000.

KLOHAUK, two towns of Moravia. Population 1500—2300.

KLOTTZ, a town of Prussian Saxony, 48 miles E. Zelle. Population 1550.

KLOPPENBURG, a town of Germany, on the Roste, 60 miles N. N. E. Munster.

KLOSTERLE, a small but well built town of Bohemia, on the Egra. Population 1000.

KLOSTER-NEUBURG, a town of Lower Austria, on the Danube, 6 miles N. Vienna.

KLUNDERT, a strong town of the Netherlands, in North Brabant. Population 700.

KNARESBOROUGH, or GNARESBOROUGH, a handsome and well built market town of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, on the Nid. The inhabitants are principally employed in the manufacture of linen, and also in that of cotton. The market place is a spacious building. Scarcely any thing now remains of the castle of Knaresborough, once so great an ornament to the town. Knaresborough, though not incorporated, sends two members to parliament. Market on Wednesday, one of the greatest corn markets in Yorkshire. Pop. 5283. 18 miles W. York.

KNIGHTON, a market town and parish of South Wales, in Radnorshire. Pop. 1191.

KNIGHTON UPON TEAME, a hamlet of England, in Worcester. Population 526.

KNIGHT'S ISLAND, an island in the Pacific ocean. Long. 106. 44. E. Lat. 43. 15. S.—The name of other two islands in Prince William's sound and Behring's bay.

KNIPHAUSEN, a seaport of Germany, 39 miles E. Emden.

KNIZIN, a town of Poland, 36 miles N. Bielsk. Population 1700.

KNITTLINGEN, a town of Germany, in Wirtemberg. Population 2100.

KNOCKROPERA, a town of Ireland, in the county of Kilkenny, 63 miles from Dublin.

KNOTTINGLEY, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 3763.

KNOWLTON, a township of the United States, in Sussex county, New Jersey. Population 2064.

KNOWSLEY, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 603.

KNOX, a county of the United States, in East Tennessee, on the Clinch, and intersected by the Holston. Pop. 10,171. Slaves 1271. Chief town Knoxville.—2d, In the south part of Kentucky. Pop. 5875. Slaves 1271. Chief town Harboursville.—3d, In the central part of Ohio. Population 2149. Chief town Mount Vernon.—4th, In Indiana, on the Wabash. Pop. 11,1015. 6000. Chief town Vincennes.—Also several townships.

KNOXVILLE, a post township of the United States, Knox county, Tennessee. Pop. 2000.

KNOTT, East, a township of England, in Wiltshire. Population 304.

KNOTTSTON, a market town of England, in Chester, situated on the Birken. It has manufactures of cotton, silk velvet, and thread. Pop. 3743. 33 miles E. by N. Chester.

KNOX, a river of Wales, in Pembrokeshire, which falls into the Tivy.

KOKI, or SUASHO, an extensive desert in the heart of Asia, which, after traversing a great part of Chinese Tartary, turns north, and forms the boundary between the Russian and Chinese empires. It is 2000 miles long, but the breadth is much less.

KOCKEN, a river of Suabia and Franconia, which falls into the Neckar.

KODIAK, an extensive group of islands on the west coast of North America, about 50 miles from the entrance into Cook's inlet, extending about 130 miles in length, and about 50 in breadth. Long 206. 12. to 308. 45. E. Lat. 56. 45. to 58. 28. N.

KOEI-TCHOO, a province of China, near the south-western extremity of the empire. Population 9,000,000.

KOEI-TCHOO-FOU, a city of China, of the first rank, in a province of the same name. Long. 109. 50. E. Lat. 31. 9. 30. N.

KOEI-YANG-FOU, a city of China, capital of the province of Koel-tchoo. Long. 103. 30. E. Lat. 27. 40. N.

KOGETEIN, a town of Moravia, 34 miles S. by E. Brunn. Population 3060.

KOKO, a river of Brazil, in the province of Seara, which runs into the Atlantic.

KOKORO, or BALRE, a river of Western Africa, which enters Brooko.

KOLASIN, a town of European Russia, government of Tver. Population 3500.

KOLLERA, a town of Prussian Saxony, on the Lössa. Population 1700.

KOLOCZA, a town of Hungary, 68 miles S. Pest, near the Danube. Population 4000.

KOLOKYTHIA, a small seaport of Greece, in the Morea, 25 miles S. E. Sparta.

KOLOMNA, a town of European Russia, government of Moscow, on the Oka. Population 3800. 65 miles S. E. Moscow.

KOLOMYIA, a town of Austrian Poland, in Galicia, on the Pruth. Population 2000.

KOLYMA, or KOVYMA, a considerable river of Asiatic Russia, which falls into the Frozen ocean, Long. 152. 24. E. Lat. 71. 25. N.

KOLYVAN, a district of Asiatic Russia, in the government of Tomsk, situated on the Obi. It is chiefly noted for its copper mines, containing a considerable proportion of silver, and a small quantity of gold. The town is small, on the Berda, near its junction with the Obi. Long. 81. 50. E. Lat. 54. 48. N.

KOMMOTAU, a town of Bohemia, 38 miles S. Dresden. Population 3000.

KONG, a kingdom of Central Africa, to the south of the Niger.

KONIGAR, a town of Sweden, 10 miles N. Gottenburgh. Population 900.

KONIGEN, a town of Germany, in Wirtemberg, on the Neckar. Population 1600.

KONIGSKA, a considerable town of Norway, government of Agderhus or Christiania, on the Lova. Pop. 6800. 30 miles W. Christiania. Long. 9. 45. E. Lat. 50. 37. N.

KONJEN, called also Cocyl, the ancient Icontium, a city of Carmania, in Asia Minor. Long. 32. 4. E. Lat. 37. 52. N.

KONIGHEIM, a small town of Germany, in Baden. Population 1750.

KONIGSBERG, one of the sixteen circles into which Bohemia is divided. It lies in the north-east of that kingdom, and is contiguous to Silesia, the county of Glatz, and Moravia. It has a superficial extent of 1300 square miles, with 263,000 inhabitants.

KONIGSBERG, or KONIGGATZ, the capital of the preceding circle, on the Elbe. It is neatly built, and is a place of some strength. Here is an elegant cathedral; also a public school. The chief manufacture is of woollens. In 1758, this place was taken by the Prussians. Population 5700. 139 miles N. Vienna. Long. 16. 39. E. Lat. 50. 10. N.

KONIGSBACH, a town of Germany, in Baden, with 1630 inhabitants.

KONIGSBERG, a considerable city of Europe, capital of East Prussia, on the Pregel, which falls into the great inlet called the Frisclic-Haff, at the distance of only 4 miles.

It has a bar at its mouth, which prevents the entrance of large vessels. A part of Konigsberg is built on an island formed by the Pregel. The houses have their foundations on piles, as at Venice and Amsterdam. Opposite to this island, and on the north bank of the river, stands the rest of the city, consisting of the Old town, and a quarter to the eastward called Lobenicht. The circumference of these three quarters, which form properly the city, hardly exceeds 2 miles; but the suburbs are very widely spread, and the wall that incloses the whole is no less than 5 miles in circuit; but more than half the space consists of gardens and corn fields.

The streets of Konigsberg are straight, and in general spacious. The Old town contains several public buildings, viz. the town-house, rebuilt in 1774, an anatomical theatre, an hospital for the widows and orphans of citizens, and large warehouses for the use of the merchants. The quarter to the east of the Old town contains a large hospital on the river side; a mint, a theatre, and an orphan-house. Here also is the royal palace. The insulated part of the town contains a council-house, an exchange, and the university buildings. Its orphan-house is also a conspicuous edifice; but none of these equal the cathedral, which, besides its architecture and ornaments, is remarkable for its organ, erected in 1721, and containing 5000 pipes. There are seven bridges over the arms of the Pregel. Of the manufactures of the town, the chief are woollens, leather, and gloves; other articles, as lace, wax, soap, refined sugar, &c. are also made; and there are breweries and distilleries on a large scale. Konigsberg is likewise the capital of East Prussia in respect to education. It has a university, founded in 1544, with 14 professors. There is also a number of good schools. The total number of churches is 23. Pop. 55,000. 70 miles E.N.E. Dantzic, 70 S. by W. Memel.

KONIGSBERG, a town of Bohemia, on the Elbe. Population 2000.—24, Of Prussia, on the Rorke. Population 3250.—The name also of several other small towns.

KONIGSBERG, a town of Bohemia, on the Elbe. Population 2000.

KONIGSLUTTEN, a town of Germany, duchy of Brunswick. Population 1600.

KONIGSTEIN, a town of Germany, 14 miles N. E. Mentz. Pop. 800.—24, Of Saxony, 16 miles S. E. Dresden. Pop. 1030.

KONIGSTEIN, a town of Germany, 14 miles N. E. Mentz. Pop. 800.—24, Of Saxony, 16 miles S. E. Dresden. Pop. 1030.

KONIGSTEIN, a town of Germany, 14 miles N. E. Mentz. Pop. 800.—24, Of Saxony, 16 miles S. E. Dresden. Pop. 1030.

KONIGSTEIN, a town of Germany, 14 miles N. E. Mentz. Pop. 800.—24, Of Saxony, 16 miles S. E. Dresden. Pop. 1030.

KONIGSTEIN, a town of Germany, 14 miles N. E. Mentz. Pop. 800.—24, Of Saxony, 16 miles S. E. Dresden. Pop. 1030.

KONIGSTEIN, a town of Germany, 14 miles N. E. Mentz. Pop. 800.—24, Of Saxony, 16 miles S. E. Dresden. Pop. 1030.

KONIGSTEIN, a town of Germany, 14 miles N. E. Mentz. Pop. 800.—24, Of Saxony, 16 miles S. E. Dresden. Pop. 1030.

KONIGSTEIN, a town of Germany, 14 miles N. E. Mentz. Pop. 800.—24, Of Saxony, 16 miles S. E. Dresden. Pop. 1030.

KÖNIGSWALD, a town of Prussia, 22 miles E. Kustrin. Population 1050.—2d, of Saxony, near Grunhau. Population 1850.

KÖNIGSWESTERHAUSEN, a town of Prussia, on the Salshe. Population 2100.

KÖNNERN, a town of Prussian Saxony, on the Saale. Population 1800.

KONSTANTINOGRAD, a town of Russia, 49 miles E. by S. Poltava. Population 1200.

KOOB, a village of North Holland, 6 miles N. Amsterdam. Population 1700.

KOOM, a city of Persia, built by the Sarracens in the year 804. It contains a beautiful college, with a celebrated mosque and sanctuary. Long. 50. 23. E. Lat. 34. 43. N.

KOORWEY, a town of Hindostan, province of Malwah, on the Betwah river. Long. 74. 17. E. Lat. 24. 11. N.

KOOTAHIE, or COCOA ISLAND, a populous island in the South Pacific ocean, separated from that of Neotabootaboo by a channel 3 miles broad. Long. 173. 43. W. Lat. 15. 54. S.

KOPPAUL, a town and fortress of Hindostan, province of Bejapora. Long. 76. 6. E. Lat. 15. 28. N.

KOPING, a town of Sweden, government of Westernas. Population 1250.

KOPRAINITZ, a town of Croatia, 73 miles N. E. Carlsstadt. Population 3200.

KOPYA, a town of European Russia, government of Mohilev. Population 1600.

KORASSAN, an extensive province of Persia, having Irak and Mazanderan W., Seistan S., Bukharia and Balk N. and E.

KORDOFAN, a country of Central Africa, to the west of the Bahr-el-Abiad, between the kingdom of Darfur and that of Sennar.

KORIANS, a rude people of Siberia, who inhabit part of the government of Okhotsk.

KORKA, a flourishing village of Irak Arabi, at the junction of the Euphrates and Tigris, with 300 families.

KORN-NEUBURG, a town of Austria, 10 miles N. Vienna. Population 1800.

KOROS (THE BLACK), a river of Hungary, which falls into the Theysse near Csongrad.

KOROTSCHA, a town of European Russia, government of Kursk, on the Korotscha. Here is a manufacture of saltpetre. Pop. 8000.

KORSCHENBROICH, a village of the Prussian territory, on the Rhine. Pop. 2300.

KOSEL, a town of Silesia, on the Oder, 73 miles S. E. Breslau. Population 3300.

KOSELEZ, a town of European Russia, 45 miles S. Czernigov. Population 3000.

KOSELSK, a town of European Russia, government of Kaluga. Population 2000.

KOBIE, a considerable kingdom of Western Africa, on the eastern bank of the river Lagos, about 60 miles from its mouth.

KOSMIN, a town of Prussian Poland, 20 miles W. Kalisch. Population 1700.

KOSTANICZA, a town of Austrian Croatia, on the Unna. Population 3300.

KOSTEL, a town of Germany, in Moravia. Population 1500.

KOTKLETZ, a town of Bohemia, 16 miles S. E. Koniggratz. Population 1000.

KOSTENDIL, a town of European Turkey, in Romania. Here are mines of gold and silver. Pop. 5000. 100 miles N. Salonica.

KOSTROMA, a considerable town of European Russia, and the capital of a government of the same name, on the Wolga. Population 9000. It has manufactures of Russian leather, linen, Prussian blue, salt, wax, and soap; and has also a trade in corn and wine. 435 miles E. by S. St Petersburg. Population of the government, 1,150,000.

KOTAN, a fortress of Hindostan, province of Ajmere. Long. 73. 43. E. Lat. 25. 11. N.

KOTKOWITZEN, a town of European Russia, on the Vistula. Population 4000.

KOTON, one of the small Friendly islands. Long. 165. 11. E. Lat. 19. 58. S.

KOTKAN, a large city of Independent Tartary, near the banks of the Sirr or Sihon, the ancient Jaxartes. 310 miles N. E. Samarcand.

KOTWA, a river of Asiatic Russia, which rises in the Caucasus, and loses itself in the sea, before reaching the Caspian sea.

KOUH ERIZ, a considerable town of Upper Egypt, on the left bank of the Nile.

KOUT, a town of Upper Egypt, on the Nile, nearly opposite to the ruins of Thebes.

KOUSNETZK, a small fortified town in the government of Tomsk, in Asiatic Russia. Pop. 500. Long. 87. 30. E. Lat. 53. 20. N.

KOWNO, a town of Russian Lithuania, government of Wilna, at the junction of the Niemen and the Wilna. Population 3400. 66 miles W. N. W. Wilna.

KOSTOV, a considerable town of European Russia, government of Tambow, on the Voronet. Population 7100. Long. 33. 22. 43. E. Lat. 45. 11. 54. N.

KRAKATOA, an island in the Eastern seas, in the straits of Sunda.

KRALINGEN, a village of the Netherlands, in South Holland. Population 2900.

KRASNOIARSK, a town in the government of Astracan, in Asiatic Russia, on the Volga. Pop. 1978. Long. 48. 30. E. Lat. 46. 29. N.

KRASNOYARSK, a town of Asiatic Russia, government of Tomsk. Population 3450. It has a trade in furs.

KRASNOYARSK, a town of European Russia, government of Charkov. Pop. 4000.

KRASNOYARSK, a town of European Russia, on the river Mookwa. Pop. 4700.

KRASNOYARSK, a town of Poland, palatinate of Lublin. Population 2500.

KRASNOYARSK, a town of European Russia, government of Tyer. Pop. 1800.

KRASNOY, an extensive palatinate of Hungary. Population computed at 200,000.

KRASNOYARSK, a town of Russia, government of Perm. Population 2500.

KRAMSKA, a town of Russian Poland, government of Volyhna. Population 3650.

KRAMETSKA, a town of European Russia, government of Tulara, on the Dnieper. Population 7400, Jews, Tartars, and Greeks. Long. 33. 59. E. Lat. 49. 3. 28. N.

KREMF, a town of Denmark, in Holstein, on the Kremppe. Population 1000.

KREMNER, a town of the Austrian states, 17 miles S. Olmutz. Population 3300.

KRESTZY, a town of European Russia, government of Novgorod. Population 1900.

KREUTZ, a town of Austrian Croatia, on the Gokoniczo. Population 1800.

KRILOV, a town of European Russia, government of Ekaterinoslav. Population 2200.

KRITSCHIEV, or KRICZEV, a considerable town of European Russia, on the Socha, 56 miles S. Mohiler.

KROMMENIE, a village of the Netherlands, in North Holland. Population 1800.

KROMY, a town of European Russia, 16 miles S. Orel. Population 2000.

KROPIVNA, a town of European Russia, government of Tula. Population 1600.

KROSEN, an old town of Galicia, circle of Jaslo. Population 4900.

KROTOSCHYN, a town of Prussian Poland, 28 miles W. Kalisch. Population 4100.

KROTZKA, a town of European Turkey, in Servia, 15 miles S. E. Belgrade.

KRULICH, or GRULICH, a town of Bohemia, 82 miles E. Prague. Population 2000.

KRUMLAU, a small town of Bohemia, on the Mulda, 70 miles S. Prague.

KRIZANAU, a town of Moravia, 23 miles N. W. Brunn. Population 1200.

KUNIN, a town of Hungary, in the Banat, opposite to Semendria. Population 2400.

KUNIN, a town of Hungary, district of the Tsaikists. Population 1900.

KUNDELSTAAT, a village of the Netherlands, province of Utrecht. Population 2000.

KURT, or KERT, an ancient city of Upper Egypt, formerly called Coptos. It is now in ruins, and a modern village has risen up in its place. Long. 32. 0. E. Lat. 25. 50. N.

KUJLA, a country of Central Africa, situated to the south-east of Wangara.

KULM, UPPER and LOWER, a large village of Switzerland, canton of Aargau.

KULPA, a river of Austrian Illyria, which falls into the Sava.

KULSHKEIM, a town of Germany, 40 miles E. by S. Heidelberg. Population 1900.

KUMANIA, the name of two districts in the central part of Hungary.

KUMBALIA, a populous and well built town of Hindostan, province of Gujerat, near the gulf of Cutch. Long. 69. 45. E. Lat. 22. 15. N.

KUNLINZ, a small island in the Baltic, belonging to Russia.

KUMAI, GEKEI, or MOPTAKES or TAM MOON, a great range of mountains in Central Africa, to the south of Abyssinia and Darfur.

KUNASHIR, an island of the Eastern seas, forming part of the small archipelago of the Kuriles, about 100 miles long, and 25 broad.

KUNDAPOOR, a seaport of the south of India, province of Canara. Long. 74. 47. E. Lat. 13. 33. N.

KUNEWALDE, UPPER, MIDDLE, and LOWER, 3 villages of Upper Lusatia. Population 2000.

KUNGUR, a town of European Russia, government of Perm. Population 6000.

KUNAGUR, the capital of a district of Hindostan. Long. 87. 5. E. Lat. 20. 50. N.

KUNOWITZ, a town of Moravia, 37 miles S. by E. Olmutz. Population 2500.

KUNSTADT, a small town of Silesia, 38 miles E. Breslau.

KUN SZENT MIKLOS, a town of Hungary, in Little Kumania. Population 4000.

KUNZELSD, a thriving town of Wirtemberg, on the Kocher. Population 2000.

KUR, the ancient Cyrus, the most considerable river of Georgia, in Asia. It empties itself by several mouths into the Caspian.

KURSKAHAN, a small river of European Russia, which falls into the Dniester.

KURBAT, a seaport of Ommon, in Arabia, 20 miles S. E. Muscat.

KURILES, a long range of small islands at the eastern extremity of Asia, extending from the southern point of Kamtschatka to the Isle of Jesso or Matmai, which belongs to Japan. The whole length of the chain amounts to nearly 900 miles. Twenty-two of these islands are now known. Some of them are not inhabited, and several are even uninhabitable, on account of the absolute want of water. Others are fertile, well wooded, full of game and fish. Some contain volcanoes; and they are all subject to frequent earthquakes. The archipelago of the Kuriles belongs to the Russian government of Irkoutsk, and the inhabitants pay a tribute of furs and sea calves, which the Russians collect every two or three years. The Russian authority, however, can only be considered as extending over nineteen; the three most southerly belong rather to Japan. Population supposed not to exceed 1400. It extends from Lat. 42. to 51. N.

KURSK, a great province or government of European Russia, lying between 35. and 39. of E. long. and 50. 30. and 52. 30. of N. lat. It is bounded by the governments of Orel, Voronez, Slobodsk, Ukraine, and Czerkassov. Its territorial extent is 15,000 square miles. Its population is about 1,200,000.

KURSK, on the river Tuskar, capital of the preceding province. The buildings are generally of wood. The chief articles of export are honey, wax, tallow, hemp, leather, and furs. Pop. 16,000. 240 miles S. Moscow. Long. 34. 57. 45. E. Lat. 51. 43. 30. N.

KURVANTSCH, a town of Russia, government of Orenburg. Population 2550.

KURTOVANY, a town of Russia, government of Vilna, 10 miles E. N. E. Miednikl.

KURKO-MEZARSK, a town of European Russia, on the Volga. Population 2000.

KURZEK, a town of European Russia, government of Saratov. Population 4500.

KURSMACHY, a neat town of Switzerland, canton of Schwetz, 5 miles N. E. Lucerne.

KURSMACHT, a village of Switzerland, on the lake of Zurich. Population 1700.

KUTNO, a town of Poland, with 2550 inhabitants. 54 miles W. Warsaw.

KUTTENBERG, or KUTNA HORA, a town of Bohemia, between Kollin and Czaslau. 13 has lead and copper mines. Population 6300. 40 miles E. by S. Prague.

KERTUBEDA, an island in the bay of Bengal. Long. of the north end 91. 48. E. Lat. 21. 55. N.

KUTY, a town of Austrian Poland, in Galicia, on the Czoremow. Population 4000.

L

LAA, a town of Lower Austria, on the Theys, 39 miles N. Vienna. Population 1300.

LAHIAU, a town of East Prussia, 24 miles E. N. E. Königsberg. Population 2500.

LAIBACHIN, a town of Prussian Poland, on an island in the Netze. Population 2000.

LAMOGAN, an island in the Eastern seas. Long. 115. E. Lat. 5. 20. N.

LABRADOR, a large country of North America, which has the form of a peninsula, and lies between the 50th and 60th degrees of N. lat. It is bounded S. by Canada and the gulf of St. Lawrence, E. by the Atlantic ocean, N. by Hudson's straits, and W. by Hudson's bay. The whole of this vast tract of country is of the most barren and dreary aspect, the surface mountainous and uneven, and covered with large stones, of a poor soil, covered only with coarse plants, adapted to the nourishment of deer and goats, and other wild animals. The native inhabitants are two distinct nations of Indians, Mountaineers and Esquimaux; the first inhabiting the interior, and the latter the coasts. Several settlements have been formed in this desolate country by the Maravian missionaries, in which are included about 600 inhabitants, who have been taught to read the scriptures in their own language.

LABUN, a town of European Russia, government of Volhynia. Population 3200.

LABY, a town of Western Africa, in the kingdom of Fouta Jallo. Population 5000.

LACCADIVES, an archipelago of low islands lying off the Malabar or western coast of India, between the 8th and 13th degrees of N. lat. There are 19 considerable ones. The largest is about 7 miles in length, and 3½ in breadth. Most of them are inhabited by a race of Mahometans called Moslams.

LACERT, a village of England, in Lincolnshire, 24 miles W. Grimsby. Population 523.

LACREDES ISLANDS, a group of small islands on the coast of New Holland. Long. 117. 8. E. Lat. 18. 43. 30. S.

LACHFORD, a township of England, in the county of Chester. Population 1252.

LACHNA, a considerable town, capital of a province of the same name in Arabia, and residence of the sheik. Long. 42. 34. E. Lat. 26. 56. N.

LACHIANA, a town of Hungary, in Kumania near the Danube. Population 2700.

LACRER, a village of Westphalia, government of Munster. Population 1800.

KRYNDER, a small seaport of Friesland, situated on the river of the same name, near its influx into the Zuider Zee.

KYRITZ, a town of the Prussian states, 46 miles N. W. Berlin. Population 2000. Long. 12. 26. E. Lat. 52. 26. N.

LACKENBURG, a town of Germany, in Baden, on the Neckar. Population 2000.

LADOGA, or LADOGA, a lake in the north of European Russia, lying between the Baltic and the Lake Onega, and surrounded by the governments of Petersburg, Viburg, and Olonetz, 130 miles long, and 76 broad.

LADOGA, New, a town of Russia, 56 miles E. Petersburg.

LAPES LAKE, a cluster of islands in the Eastern seas, off the Malay peninsula.

LADRONES, or MARIANA ISLANDS, a cluster of islands in the North Pacific ocean, stretching 450 miles from N. to S. They were originally discovered by Magellan. These islands are 14, or, according to some, 16 in number, namely, Guam or St. John, the largest, Zarpane or Rota, Agulman or St. Ann, Tinala, Saypan or St. Joseph, Anatachan or St. Joachim, Sarigan or St. Charles, Guguan or St. Philip, Amalagan or Concepcion isle, Pagon or St. Ignatius, Agrigan or St. Xavier, Assonsou or Assumption island, and Urac, a desert isle. They enjoy throughout most part of the year a serene and temperate climate, the heat of the sun being tempered by regular breezes from the sea. They have now a very barren and unpromising aspect. It was at Tinala, one of them, that Commodore Anson, in his voyage round the world, landed in 1742, and of which he gives such a luxuriant description. The same island has now become an uninhabitable wilderness. Long. 145. to 148. E. Lat. 13. to 21. N.

LADRONES ISLANDS, a cluster of small islands off the southern extremity of China. Long. of the Great Kadron, 113. 44. E. Lat. 21. 52. N.

LADRONES, three small islands in the Pacific ocean, on the coast of Yacagua, 3 miles S. E. Cape Borden. Long. 83. 10. W. Lat. 8. 20. N.

LANT, a town in the Atlantic, near the coast of America. Long. 80. 52. W. Lat. 42. 30. N.

LAROUSSE, an outlet of the Mississippi, in Louisiana, 70 miles above New Orleans, which flows into the gulf of Mexico.

LAROUSSE, a river of Ireland, which runs into Belfast Lough, at Belfast.

LASSER, a small lake and parish of Scotland, in Inverness-shire. Population 1234.

LACONIA, a town of France, 22 miles N. E. Lyons. Population 2300.

LANTY, a town of France, 15 miles E. N. E. Paris. Population 1900.

LACOA, a small town and river of Eastern Africa. The river enters the sea, Lat. 33. 10. S.

LAGO MAGGIORE, a well known lake of Upper Italy, separating part of the Austro-Italian government of Milan, from the states of Sardinia, and extending from Sesto northwards to Locarno; 30 miles in length, and 8 in breadth. It is traversed by the Ticino.

LAGO NEGRO, a town of Naples, at the foot of the Appennines. Population 5000. 12 miles E. Policastro.

LAGOON ISLAND, an island in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 139. 23. W. Lat. 18. 47. N.

LAGOON, MIDDLE, NORTH, and SOUTH, 3 gulfs on the Yucatan coast, bay of Honduras.

LAGOA, a very ancient well built town of Portugal, province of Algarve, defended by several forts. Pop. 4000. 134 miles S. Lisbon.

LAGOS, a town of Mexico, in Oaxaca, 60 miles N. E. the town of that name. Long. 101. 32. W. Lat. 21. 27. N.

LAGOS, a large river and bay of Western Africa. Long. 3. 30. E. Lat. 6. 20. N.

LAGO SALSO, a considerable lake of Italy, in Naples.

LAGO SANTO, a small town of Italy, in the Ecclesiastical state, 5 miles N. W. Cambricio.

LAGUNA, or ST CATERINA DE LA LAGUNA, the capital of Teneriffe, the principal of the Canary islands, situated on a beautiful hill, 2000 feet above the level of the sea, surrounded by gardens. Since the eruptions of the volcano have destroyed its port, it has declined from its former opulence. The town is surrounded by a great number of windmills, which indicate the cultivation of wheat in these high countries. Population 4000. Long. 16. 20. W. Lat. 28. 28. N.

LAHAN, a town of Hindostan, province of Agra. Long. 78. 59. E. Lat. 26. 13. N.

LAHNACK, the capital of a district in the north of Hindostan. It carries on a considerable trade with Cashmere, Tibet, and China.

LAHRN, a considerable river of Germany, which joins the Rhine near Upper Lahnstein.

LAHOLM, a seaport of Sweden, at the mouth of the Laga. Population 850. 30 miles N. Helsingborg.

LAHORE, an extensive province of Hindostan, situated principally between the 30th and 34th degrees N. lat. It has been estimated at 320 miles in length, by 200 in breadth.

LAHORE, the capital of the above province, on the Ravey. It was formerly a great city, the occasional residence of the Great Mogul, all of whose expended considerable sums on palaces, gardens, &c. It was taken in the year 1080 by a Mr Pich, who described it as a magnificent city, nearly ten miles in length, surrounded by a fortification having twelve gates. Of all its grandeur little now remains, except some handsome minarets. It is daily falling into decay, and the rich inhabitants are emigrating to Amrohtah. Nevertheless the city contains manufactures for all kinds of warlike instruments. Long. 73. 43. E. Lat. 31. 50. N.

LAHOU, a large and populous seaport on the Ivory coast of Africa. Long. 6. 6. W. Lat. 5. 20. N.

LAHR, an active manufacturing town of Germany, in Baden. It has manufactures of woollens, linens, cottons, tobacco, and leather. Pop. 4400. 18 miles S. S. P. Strasburg.

LAKE, CIRCLE OF THE SEKKURIS, one of the ten circles into which the grand duchy of Baden was divided in 1810. It contains 90,000 inhabitants, on the north side of the lake of Constance, bordering on Hohenzollern, Wirtemberg, and Switzerland.

LAKE OF THE HILLS, a large lake in the north-west part of North America, 200 miles long, and from 60 to 25 broad.

LAKE OF THE WOODS, or DU ROIS, a lake of North America, 70 miles long and 40 wide. Long. 94. 20. W. Lat. 54. 36. N.

LALAND, an island of Denmark, at the entrance of the Baltic, near the coast of Zealand. It is 60 miles long, and 14 broad. It contains four small towns, Naskow the capital, Maribo, Særbjording, and Nyestadt. Population 34,000.

LAMALMON, a lofty mountain of Abyssinia, on the road from Massuah to Gondar.

LAMBACH, a town of Upper Austria. Population 2000. 11 miles N. N. E. Vocklabruck.

LAMBAELLE, a town of France, department of the Cotes du Nord, on the Conesan. Population 2000. 43 miles N. W. Rennes.

LAMBAYEQUE, a town of Peru, Intendency of Truxillo, on the river Lambayeque. Pop. 6000. 93 miles W. N. W. Truxillo.

LAWRAT, or a small river of Lower Canada, which falls into the St Lawrence.—Also a town.

LAMERSE, a town of France, department of the Moselle of the Rhone. Pop. 3050. 12 miles N. W. Aix.

LAMBETH, a large village of England, in the neighbourhood of London, forming the western extremity of that portion of the metropolis which lies on the south bank of the Thames, being now united to the town by a continued range of buildings. The chief public building now is Lambeth palace, the residence of the archbishop of Canterbury. This is an extensive pile of buildings, situated near the Thames. The architecture is irregular, and exhibiting that of various ages. Attached to it are the gardens and park, extending to 15 acres, which have of late years been greatly enlarged and improved, and are laid out with great taste. Near the river, and close to the palace, is Lambeth church, the different parts of which have been built at various periods of the 14th, 15th, and 16th centuries, and the whole was repaired and embellished in 1708. Besides the church, there are in Lambeth two meeting-houses for Protestant dissenters, two Independents, and three Methodists, one of the latter, Lambeth chapel, being on a very large scale. Lambeth contains several very useful charitable institutions. In Lambeth parish are various places of public amusement, the chief of which are Vauxhall gardens. Lambeth contains extensive manufactories. Pop. 67,000.

LAMBTON, a township and parish of England, in Berkshire. Population 2200.

LAMEGO, a town of Portugal, province of Beira, on a tributary of the Douro. Population 6600. 46 miles E. Oporto.

LAMESLEY, a township of England, in Durham. Population 1720.

LAMIAST, an excellent harbour on the island of Arran. Also a small village at the bottom of the bay.

LAMMERMURE, a ridge of moorish hills in Scotland, 30 or 40 miles in extent.

LAMPA, the chief town of a district of the same name, in Peru, 60 miles S. Cuzco. Long. 81. 44. W. Lat. 14. 55. S.

LAMPEDORA, or LAMPEDUSA, a small uninhabited island in the Mediterranean, about 21 miles in circuit, 130 miles S. Sicily. Long. 12. 24. E. Lat. 36. 40. N.

LAMPERTHEIM, a village of Germany. Population 2000. 9 miles S.E. Worms.

LAMPETER, a township of the United States, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Population 2601.

LAMPONG, a district of country in the S. extremity of Sumatra. The bay of Lampong is wide and deep, and affords good anchorage.

LANSVILLE, a river of the United States, in Vermont, which joins Lake Champlain.

LANARKSHIRE, sometimes called CLYDESDALE, from the river Clyde, a county of Scotland, bounded N. and N.W. by the counties of Renfrew, Dumfries, and Stirling; N.E. by the counties of Linlithgow and Edinburgh; E. by Peebles-shire; S. by Dumfries-shire; and S.W. by Ayrshire. Its greatest length from N. to S. is 53 miles, and its greatest breadth 33. Its square contents are about 870 miles, equal to 556,800 English acres. This district is subdivided into three inferior divisions called wards. The Upper Ward, which is nearly two-thirds of the whole county, is mostly mountainous, or at least hilly and moorish. At the south extremity of the county, where it is bounded by Dumfries, there is a very elevated range of ground, rising in some parts to 3100 feet. In proceeding down the Clyde, the prospect opens; the hills stand at a greater distance from one another, and the ascents are less abrupt; villages, farms, corn fields, and plantations of trees, appear among the eminences; and the mixture of hill and dale forms a scene at once simple and sublime. Towards the lower part of the Upper Ward, though the soil is in general less fertile, the country becomes more interesting. The soil and climate seems to be much disposed to the growth of wood; and spontaneous copse woods everywhere fringe the hanging banks of the river. Numerous villages and hamlets contribute to enrich the scenery. Groves and orchards are sown in woods, stand all along the Clyde, by the foot of the rising slopes. The climate is rather moist. This county is celebrated for its minerals. It contains abundant supplies of excellent freestone, limestone, ironstone, coal, and granite. It is calculated that the coal measures through this county, in one solid mass, cover nearly 110 square miles, or 55,000 acres, and that its average thickness cannot be less than five yards. Among the mountains near the southern extremity of the county are the well known lead mines belonging to the earl of Hopetoun, which have been wrought for nearly two centuries. About 350 men are employed in the working of these mines. In the same district gold is sometimes found among the mountains, in veins of quartz, or worked down into the sand of rivulets. This county is greatly distinguished by its rapid progress in commerce and manufactures, in which it is decidedly pre-eminent over all the other counties of Scotland. At an early period some manufactures of coarse woollen were established in Lanarkshire; also fine linen and checks. The cotton and muslin manufactures were established, and have gone on ever since, increasing and flourishing. There are also various extensive manufactures connected with these, namely, the printing of calicoes, the dyeing of Turkey red, and the preparation of various dyes, and other necessary ingredients. Glass and crystal manufactures are carried on to a great extent; the pottery manufacture, the brewing of ale and porter, and the distilling of spirituous liquors, as well as various others which cannot be specified particularly. The principal river of this county is the Clyde. The other streams, which are tributary to the Clyde, are the Daer, the Coulter, the Methven, the Douglas, the Mouse, the Neithan, the Aven, the Calder North and South, the Rotten Calder, Kelvin, Cart, and Leven. It has also three canals, the Forth and Clyde canal, which connect, by means of the friths of Forth and Clyde, the German and Atlantic oceans; the Monkland canal, which connects the city of Glasgow with the extensive coal fields in the parishes of Old and New Monkland; and the Ardrossan canal, which was begun in 1805. There are three royal burghs, Lanark, the county town, the city of Glasgow, and the town of Rutherglen. The other towns are Hamilton, Strathaven, Douglas, Biggar, Airdrie, besides several thriving villages. Population 244,387. Long. between 3. 22. 51. and 4. 20. 51. W. and Lat. 55. 14. 42. and 55. 56. 10. N.

LANARK, a royal burgh of Scotland, and county town of Lanarkshire, within half a mile of the Clyde. It consists of several streets and lanes, and since the introduction of cotton manufacture, has been greatly improved. The public buildings are, the town-house near the centre of the town, a county-hall, a council-room, court-hall, and weigh-house; the prison; the parochial church, and two churches for dissenters, one Burgher, and one Relief. Cotton is the chief manufacture; also the weaving of muslins. Lanark is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, 6 merchant, 8 trades councillors, and 6 deacons of trades. It unites with Linlithgow, Selkirk, and Peebles, in sending a representative to parliament. It received its charter from Alexander I. Population 7085.

25 miles S. E. Glasgow, 30 W. Edinburgh. Long. 3. 5. W. Lat. 55. 34. N.

LANARK, NEW, a well built and populous village, about a mile to the south of the former, which owes its origin to an extensive establishment for the manufacture of cotton yarn, begun by Mr David Dale in 1784. Great attention is paid to the morals of the children, and to their education, by the present proprietor, Mr Owen.

LANCASHIRE, a maritime county of England, on the north-western coast. It is situated along the extensive bay of the Irish sea, which is formed within the isles of Anglesey and of Man, and has gradually risen up into one of the greatest manufacturing counties in the kingdom, containing Manchester, the centre of the cotton manufactures, and Liverpool, the emporium of the west. It is bounded W. by the Irish sea; E. by the mountains of Yorkshire; S. by Cheshire; and N. by Westmoreland and Cumberland. The greatest length of the whole county is 75 miles, and the greatest breadth 40. It is included within the parallels of 53. 26. and 54. 25. N. lat., and the meridians of 2. 1, and 3. 14. W. long.—contains 1800 square miles, or 12,000,000 acres. It has 27 market towns, of which, besides Lancaster, the county town, and Liverpool and Manchester, next to London the two largest in the kingdom, Bolton, Rochdale, Preston, Garstang, Wigan, Berry, Warrington, &c. are the chief. It is a county palatine, and returns 14 members to parliament. Lancashire is entirely made up of an extensive level, running along the sea coast on the west, and backed by a range of mountainous country, which accompanies it all the way on the east, the low land penetrating into the interior along the rivers, and the mountains, on the other hand, encroaching between these upon the coast. The principal rivers are the Mersey, the Ribbles, the Wyre, and the Lune. There are several lakes in this county, of which Windermere, Conistone, and Baskerville, are the chief. The rivers of this county tend all of them to form large estuaries as they fall into the sea, and they are in general much obstructed with sand-banks. These, however, which are not naturally navigable, have been rendered so; and such extensive canals have been formed, that all parts of the country are now united together in one continued water communication. The principal canals now in the county, besides the Sankey canal, which communicates between the Mersey and the coal and copper works near St. Helens, are the Leeds and Liverpool canal, the Lancaster canal, from West Houghton, near Wigan, to Lancaster, and thence to Kendal, in Westmoreland; the Ashton-under-Lyne canal to Manchester; the Rochdale canal, from near Manchester, to the Calder navigation near Halifax; the Manchester, Bury, and Bolton canal; and the Haslingden canal. The climate is temperate, but moist. The soil of Lancashire is very various. On the higher grounds it is in general moorish, rocky, and barren; but it improves along the vallies, rivers, and sea coast, where the land is sufficiently adapted for the ordinary crops; it is indeed in many places very fertile, and capable, under proper management, of becoming extremely valuable. Of the corn crops raised in this county, by far the most abundant is oats. Very little barley, pease, beans, or even wheat, were formerly grown; but in this respect an improvement has taken place. But Lancashire has been long famous for its potatoes. A variety of other vegetables are also raised, especially near the towns; and among garden crops much attention is paid to that of gooseberries, which are raised here of the best kinds. The most important production of the Lancashire are its minerals, or rather the single mineral, coal. This occurs chiefly in the southern and middle divisions of the county, where inexhaustible fields of it are found. Limestone, freestone, whin, slates, and flags, abound in this county. Iron ore abounds in Furness; also copper ore, but not in great abundance. At Anglezargh, near Chorley, is a lead mine. The manufactures of Lancashire are the most extensive in the kingdom, chiefly those of cotton, in all its branches; also of silk, woolen, and linen, hats, stockings, pins, needles, nails, watch tools and movements, tobacco and snuff, earthenware, porcelain, paper, &c. Manchester is the principal seat of the cotton manufacture. From thence it spreads on all sides. Around Manchester various of the principal towns and villages form subordinate stations of this extensive traffic, each being the centre of its own little sphere. Of these inferior towns the principal are Bolton, Blackburn, Wigan and Preston, W. and N.; Stockport S. and Ashton E. A variety of other employments, as those of bleachers, dyers, printers' tool-makers, engine and machine-makers, &c. depend for their existence on this manufacture; and there are also in the county large works for smelting iron and copper, for blowing common, and casting plate glass, and for manufacturing white lead, lamb black, vitriolic acid, &c. Liverpool engrosses nearly the whole of the export trade of Lancashire. The exports, besides the great branch to Ireland, are chiefly to America and the West Indies; also to the East India, Africa, the Mediterranean, Spain, Portugal, &c. The principal imports are cotton, wool, sugar, tobacco, rice, timber, corn, &c. Population 1,042,150.

LANCASHIRE, the chief town of the above county, on the Lune or Layne, over which there is a new and commodious bridge. Near the whole town is built from quarries of excellent freestone in the neighbourhood. Of the public buildings, the castle, now wholly occupied as the county jail, is the most important and interesting, and is still admired for its extent, and the peculiar character of its architecture. It includes within the walls an area of 380 feet from east to west, by 350 from north to south. The walls of the keep are of amazing thickness, and the apartments of uncommon dimensions. It has received some recent improvements, and is now supposed capable of containing 6000 men within the walls. The keep is generally ascribed to the Saxons. But the principal part of the building was erected by Edward III. and his son John of Gaunt, whom he created duke of Lancaster. A little to the west of the keep are the due-hall and county courts. Contiguous to the castle is the parish church, a spacious Gothic structure, dedicated to St Mary. There are besides two commodious chapels of ease, and places of worship for Quakers, Presbyterians, Roman Catholics, Independents, and Unitarians. The other public buildings are the town-hall, a large commodious building in the centre of the town, ornamented with a portico; the custom-house, a small neat building, with a portico supported by four Ionic columns; the assembly-rooms, the theatre, and the free school. The shambles, erected by the corporation, are neat and convenient. There are various charitable institutions. Among the modern improvements is an extensive quay, with large warehouses. The Lancaster canal passes close to the town; about a mile north-east of which is the great aqueduct bridge, by which the canal is carried over the Lune. The trade of Lancaster is principally to America and the West Indies. The exports are saddlery, hardware, mahogany furniture, woollen manufactures, soap, and candles. The manufactures are not very considerable: that of sailcloth has been long the principal. The cotton trade has been recently introduced. Here are also rope and twine walks, a sugar-house, two public breweries, several tobacco and snuff manufactories, a pipe, a hat, and two coach manufactories, &c. Ship-building has been carried on to a considerable extent. In the vicinity of the town is an excellent salt marsh. Lancaster is a borough, and the corporation consists of a mayor, recorder, 7 aldermen, 2 bailiffs, 2 capital burgesses, 12 common council men, &c. It sends two members to parliament, elected by nearly 3000 freeholders. Population 10,144. 64 miles N.W. Manchester, and 63 N. by E. Liverpool. Long. 2° 42' W. Lat. 54° 3' N.

LANCASTER, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania, on the west side of the Susquehanna, bounded on Maryland. Population 53,927. — 3d, A district of Virginia, on the western shore of Chesapeake Bay, bounded S. by the Rappahannock, 100 miles N. Norfolk. Population 44,000. — 3d, A town of Massachusetts, on a branch of Narragansett River, 44 miles N. E. Worcester. Pop.

LANCASTER, a post township of the United States, and capital of Coos county, New Hampshire, on Connecticut river, opposite Goshall, Vermont. — 3d, Of Worcester county, Massachusetts, on a branch of Narragansett River, 44 miles N. E. Worcester. Pop.

1694. — 3d, Capital of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 5105. 22 miles E. N. E. York. — 4th, A district of South Carolina. Pop. 6318. Slaves 1046.

LANCENOTA, one of the group of the Canaries. It is subject to volcanoes; and one took place in 1730, on so great a scale as entirely to change the face of the island. The inhabitants export corn, and a large quantity of dried goats flesh. Population 10,000. 30 miles in length and 8 in breadth.

LANCZESTER, a township of England, in Durham. Population 659.

LANCIANO, a town of Naples, on the Lancia. Population 9000. 84 miles N. Naples.

LANDARK, or ILLANDAY, an ancient city of Wales, county of Glamorgan, on the Taf, now a trifling village, though a bishop's see. The cathedral, in venerable ruins, is still an object of great interest. It was begun in 1120. The prevailing architecture is Gothic, though in some parts it is Saxon, with an occasional intermixture of Norman. The entire length of the body of the church is 300 feet, and the breadth 80. Near the cathedral are some remains of the ancient castellated mansion of the bishop. Population 1188. 2 miles N. W. Cardiff.

LANDAU, a strong town of the Bavarian circle of the Rhine, near the Queich, with a collegiate church, 2 monasteries, and 4250 inhabitants. It has been often taken and retaken. 56 miles N. N. E. Strasburg. — The name of other two small towns in Germany.

LANDECK, a town of Germany, in Hesse-Cassel. Population 2700.

LANDEN, a town of South Brabant, noted for an obstinate battle between William III. of England and the French. Pop. 700.

LANDENAU, a seaport of France, department of Finisterre, at the mouth of the Elhorn. Pop. 4000. 23 miles N. E. Brest.

LANDER, a department in the south-west of France, bounded W. by the Atlantic, and on its other sides by the departments of the Gironde, the Lot and Gers, the Gers, and the Lot-et-Garonne. Its superficial extent is 2000 square miles. The principal rivers that traverse it are the Adour and the Douse. Population 240,000.

LANDEREAU, a town of France, department of Finisterre. Population 2100.

LANDEREAU, a strong town of France, department of the North, on the Sambre, 30 miles S. E. Douai. Population 2800.

LANDEREAU, a town of East Prussia. Population 1000. — 3d, Of Upper Bavaria, on the Isar. Population 2000. — 3d, Of Lower Austria, 100 miles S. E. Vienna.

LANDEREAU (on the Wartha), a well built town of Prussia, in the province of Brandenburg, 14 miles on a brisk trade in woollens and cloth. Pop. 6000. 74 miles E. Berlin.

LANDEREAU, a town of Bohemia. Population 2700.

LANDEREAU, a seaport of Sweden, province of Schonen, with a citadel and a safe harbour. Here are manufactures of gloves, and a yearly fair. Population 3800. 14 miles S. Helsingborg. Long. 12. 46. 1. E. Lat. 55. 52. 27. N.

LAND'S-END, in Cornwall, the W. extremity of England. Long. 5. 45. W. Lat. 50. 6. N.

LANDSHUT, a considerable town of Germany, in Bavaria, on the river Isar. The main portion of the town consists of two long streets, which are tolerably wide and straight, and connected by a number of lanes. The chief edifices are the palace, the provincial house of assembly, the old town-house, and the hospital for decayed citizens. Here are three parochial churches; and one of them, called St Martin's, has one of the highest spires in Germany. The university of Ingolstadt was removed to Landshut in the year 1800. There is, besides, an academy and a divinity school. There are manufactures of cloth, leather, and watches; also breweries and distilleries. 32 miles N. E. Munich. Long. 12. 6. 55. E. Lat. 48. 30. 40. N.—2d, A town of Prussia, in Sillesia, on the Bober, 20 miles W. S. W. Schweidnitz. Population 3000.—3d, A town of Moravia, on the Theya. Population 1500.

LANE, a river of Ireland, county of Kerry.

LANE-END, a market town of England, in Staffordshire. Its chief business is the potteries. The church is a modern brick building. Population, including Longton, 7100. 4 miles E. by S. Newcastle-under-Lyne.

LANENBOROUGH, a town of Ireland, county of Longford, on the Shannon, over which is a stone bridge. 62 miles W. N. W. Dublin.

LANGDON, a river of England, in Durham.

LANGREIS, a town of France, on the Loire, 12 miles W. Tours. Population 2250.

LANGELAND, an island of Denmark, in the Baltic, between Zealand, Laland, and Funen; 35 miles long, and from 3 to 5 broad.

LANGEN, a town of Germany, 6 miles N. Darmstadt. Population 1500.

LANGENAU, a town of Bohemia, circle of Koniggratz. Population 2400.—2d, Also a village of Bohemia. Population 1500.—3d, A town of Germany, in Wirttemberg, 10 miles N. N. E. Ulm. Population 3600.

LANGENBERG, a town of the province of Cleves and Berg. Population 1600.

LANGEN-KARDEL, a town of Bavaria, 9 miles S. S. E. Landau. Population 2400.

LANGENLOIS, a town of Lower Austria, 4 miles N. Krems. Population 7000.

LANGENSALA, a town of Prussian Saxony, on the Salza, 14 miles W. Erfurt. Pop. 5400.

LANGENTHAL, a pleasant town of the Swiss canton of Berne. Population 1800.

LANGFIELD, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 2000.

LANGFORD BUDVILLE, a township of England, in Somersetshire. Population 584.

LANGHOLM, a town and parish of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, on the Esk, over which is a handsome bridge, which connects Old and New Langholm. Population 2404.

LANGOE, an island in the North sea, 93 miles in circuit, 46 from the coast of Norway.

LANGOONE, a town of France, department of the Lozere. Population 2300.

LANGON, a town of France, department of the Gironde, on the Garonne. Pop. 2300.

LANGONNET, a town of France, department of the Mosellan. Population 3300.

LANGPORT, a market town of England, county of Somerset, on the Parret. It has a church, with a fine tower. Population 1004. 13 miles E. by N. Taunton.

LANGRES, a town of France, department of the Upper Marne. The cathedral is the only building worth notice. It has manufactures of cutlery, serges, and cotton cloth; also of sulphuric acid. Population 3600. 40 miles N. E. Dijon.

LANGUEDOC, an extensive and important province in the south of France, extending on the east to the Rhone, on the west to the Garonne and the borders of Gascony. Its length is 170 miles; its breadth about 90. At the revolution, the whole of Languedoc was chiefly distributed into the departments of Gard, Hérault, Ardèche, Lozere, Tarn, Upper Garonne, and Aude. Pop. 2,000,000.

LANGWALL, a river of Scotland, in Caithness-shire, which falls into the sea.

LANJANG, capital of the kingdom of Laos, in India. Long. 101. 33. E. Lat. 18. 30. N.

LANNON, a town of France, department of the Cotes du Nord. Population 3700.

LANSEBURN, a post township and village of the United States, in Rensselaer county, New York, on the Hudson. Pop. 1636.

LANTHORPE, a hamlet of England, at the northern extremity of Monmouthshire.

LANZA, a small river of Italy, which falls into the Lake Maggiore.

LANZO, a town of Piedmont, on the Stura. Population 2100.

LAON, a town of France, capital of the department of the Aisne. Its cathedral is a large and stately building, with five lofty towers. 20 miles N. E. Soissons.

LAOR, a kingdom of India beyond the Ganges, extending from the 12th to the 12th degrees of N. lat. and having Tunquin and Cochinchina on the east, Cambodia on the south, Siam on the west, Laktho and Tunquin on the north.

LAPIO, a village of Naples, in the Principato Ultra. Population 2300.

LAPLAND, the most northern country in Europe, bounded N. by the Arctic ocean, E. by the White sea, S. by Sweden, and W. by Norway and the Atlantic. Its extreme breadth is estimated to be 500 miles; and its length, from Cape Orlov on the White sea, to the entrance of Saltersford on the Atlantic, about 700. Lapland is divided into three parts, called Russian, Swedish, and Danish or Norwegian. The part of Lapland lying along the northern shore of the gulf of Bothnia, consists of an extensive plain, abounding in immense forests of spruce and Scots fir; but at the distance of 60 miles from that inland sea, the ground becomes gradually elevated, and is at last full of lofty mountains, which rise between the latitude of 67. and 68. 30. to a height of from 5500 to 6200 feet, which, in this hyperborean region, is 2700 feet above the line of perpetual congelation. These central mountains are the highest in Lapland. The principal rivers are the Torneo, the Kemi, the Julea, and Pitea. The Yana, the principal river in the northeast, and the Alten, the principal in the north-west, both run into the Northern ocean. In lakes, Lapland, particularly its mountainous part, abounds. In the maritime districts there prevails an approach to uniformity of temperature; the winters are not severe, but the summers are raw and foggy; while in the interior the winter is intensely cold, but the heat of summer is steady and fructifying. The mean annual temperature at the North Cape (Lat. 71. 11. 30.) is 6 degrees higher than at Enonteki in the interior (in Lat. 68. 30.). Yet at the latter, the thermometer rises in July to 64., while at the Cape it seldom reaches 50. Lapland abounds in iron; and copper, lead, zinc, and arsenic, are not uncommon. Barley or big is the most common grain. In the low ground rye is likewise cultivated, and occasionally oats. The berry bearing plants also are numerous. The most common animals are hares: the others are bears, martins, gluttons, beavers, otters, cr-mines, squirrels, lemmings (or mountain rats), foxes, and wolves. The domestic quadrupeds are oxen, cows, dogs, sheep, and goats. The rein-deer is the most valuable animal in Lapland. It serves as the principal beast of burden; its milk is highly valued; and its flesh supplies the chief nourishment of the inhabitants. The mountain Laplanders have no fixed habitation, but wander about in quest of food for their flocks of rein-deer, and lodge in tents or huts, which are usually about 9 feet in height and 12 in length. Their diet is chiefly of animal food. During winter, they carry on some traffic with the Swedes. This takes place at Torneo, and other towns on the gulf of Bothnia, and consists in exchanging skins, furs, dried fish, venison, and gloves, for flannel, cloth, hemp, copper, iron, and various utensils; but particularly for spirituous liquors, meal, salt, and tobacco. Population 60,000.

LAR, the capital of Laristan, in Persia, now in a state of ruin. It has a manufacture of muskets and cotton cloth. Population 12,000. Long. 42. 34. E. Lat. 27. 30. N.

LARBERT, a parish and village of Scotland, in Stirlingshire, 3 miles W. N. W. Falkirk. Population 8491.

LARCHEMPS, a town of France, department of the Mayenne. Population 2000.

LARICAJA, a province of Peru, N. of La Paz.

LAREDO, a seaport of Spain, in Biscay. Population 1806.

LARGO, UPPER and NETHER, two villages of Scotland, in a parish of the same name, on the north shore of the Frith of Forth, in Largo bay, 3 miles E. Leven. Nether Largo is situated on the Keil, at its influx into the sea.

The principal manufacture is linen and checks.

LARGS, a village of Scotland, on the coast of the Frith of Clyde, in a parish of the same name, 8½ miles W. Innerkip.

LARISSA, a town of European Turkey, the capital of Thessaly, on the Salembria, or ancient Pharsus. The streets are ill built, narrow, and dirty, and the houses in many parts wretched. Pop. 20,000. 75 miles S. by W. Salonica. Long. 22. 47. E. Lat. 39. 48. N.

LARISTAN, a small province of Persia, extending along the northern coast of the gulf.

LARITA, a small seaport of France, 45 miles E. S. E. Toulon.

LARKHALL, a village of Scotland, in Lanarkshire, 14 miles S. E. Hamilton.

LARNE, a seaport of Ireland, county of Antrim, on Larne Lough. Salt-works are established here. 97 miles N. by E. Dublin.

LARNICA, a town of Cyprus, situated on a bay forming the best roadstead in Cyprus. The houses of the natives are built of mud, and extremely mean. Pop. 5000. Long. 33. 45. E. Lat. 34. 58. N.

LARUNS, a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Population 1650.

LARVIKEN, a seaport of Norway, 71 miles S. S. W. Christiania. Population 1000.

LASSON, a town of France, department of the Mouths of the Rhone. Population 2500.

LASSA, a city of Asia, the capital of Great Thibet, little known to Europeans. It is chiefly distinguished as the residence of the Dalai Lama, or great head of the Shaman religion. Hence it is usually crowded with royal and noble personages from all parts of Asia, who come to present their homage, and to offer splendid presents to this earthly divinity. Long. 91. 25. E. Lat. 29. 30. N.

LASSAY, a town of France, department of the Mayenne. Population 3000.

LASSEUVE, a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Population 2000.

LASWADE, a parish and village of Scotland, in Mid-Lothian, 5½ miles S. Edinburgh, in a romantic country. Population 4186.

LAWARKE, a town of Hindostan, province of Delhi.

LATACUYEA, the chief town of a district of the same name in South America. Cloth, hair, &c. are manufactured here. Pop. 13,000. Long. 78. 16. W. Lat. 0. 55. 14. S.

LATAKIA, a seaport of Syria, pachalic of Tripoli. Its inhabitants are declined to 4000. Long. 35. 50. E. Lat. 35. 36. N.

LATHAM, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 2097.

LATHANA, a town of Austrian Italy, near the mouth of the Tagliamento. Pop. 4000.

LATRONICO, a town of Naples, province of Basilicata. Population 3000.

LATTALATTA, an island in the Eastern seas, adjacent to Gilolo, 25 miles in circuit. Long. 126. 50. E. Lat. 0. 20. S.

LAVAL, a town of France, on the Mayenne. It has manufactures of serge, dannel, and cotton. Pop. 15,200. 15 miles S. Mayenne.

LAVANT, a small river of England, in Sussex. It enters the sea 3 miles below Chichester.

LAVAU, a town of France, on the Agout, 22 miles N. E. Toulouse. Population 6200.

LAUBAN, or LUBAM, a town of Upper Lusatia, on the Queis. It has manufactures of woollen, cotton, and linen. Population 5000. 62 miles N. Dresden.

LAUDER, an ancient royal burgh of Scotland, in Berwickshire, in a parish of the same name, on the Lauder. It was often the place of meeting for the parliament of Scotland. It joins with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick, and Jedburgh, in sending a member to parliament. Population of the parish 1843. 16 miles N. by W. Kelso.

LAUDER, a river of Scotland, in Berwickshire, which joins the Tweed near Melrose.

LAUDUN, a town of France, department of the Gard, on the Tave. Population 2000.

LAUVILLO, a town of Naples, 90 miles E. by N. Naples. Population 2200.

LAUBENBURG, a duchy in the north of Germany, on the right bank of the Elbe, adjacent to Hamburg, and included since 1815 in the dominions of Denmark, of which it forms the southern extremity. Population 35,000.

LAUBENBURG, the capital of the above duchy, 35 miles E. S. E. Hamburg. Population 2200.

LAVENHAM, often called LANNAM, a decayed town of England, in Suffolk, on the Breton. The church is interesting, being built of freestone, and a part of curious flint-work. Woollen yarn is spun, and calamancoes are made; there is also a manufacture of hempen cloth. Population 1776. 61 miles N. E. London.

LAVERN, a small river of Scotland, in Renfrewshire. It joins the White Cart.

LAUFEN, a town of Germany, on the Neckar, over which is a bridge. 4 miles S. Heilbron. Population 3000.—2d. Of Bavaria, on the Inn, 63 miles E. by S. Munich. Population 2500.

LAUFFEN, a town of Austria, on the Salza, 12 miles N. N. W. Salzburg. Pop. 4700.

LAUFFEN, a village of the Swiss canton of Zurich, on the Rhine. Population 1400.

LAUFFEN, a town of the Swiss canton of Bern. Population 750.

LAUGEAC, a town of France, department of the Upper Loire. Population 2000.

LAUGHARNE, a market and seaport town of South Wales, in Caermarthenshire, on the estuary of the Taff and Corwen. Here are the remains of a fine castle. Population 1391. 13 miles S. W. Caermarthen.

LAUGHTON EN LE MOSSAY, a township and parish of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population of township 652.

LAUINGEN, a town of Bavaria, principality of Neuburg, on the Danube. Pop. 3000.

LAINGTON, EAST, STEAPLE, or MARKET, a market town of England, in Wiltshire. Population of parish 1433.

LAUNCESTON, a market and borough town of England, in Cornwall, on the Attery. The principal object of interest is the castle, the ruins of which still prove it to have been a very strong and important fortress. Launceston sends two members to parliament. Pop. 2183. 12 miles N. W. Tavistock.

LAVORO, TERRA DI, a large and populous province in the north-west part of the kingdom of Naples, bordered S. W. by the Tuscan sea, N. W. by the Campagna di Roma, E. and S. by different provinces of the Neapolitan territory. Its superficial extent is about 1720 square miles. Population 520,000.

LAUFELIM, a town of Germany, in Wirtemberg, on the Rottum. Population 2400.

LAUREL MOUNTAINS, in North America, west of the Alleghany ridge.

LAUREL RIVER, a river of Kentucky, which runs into the Cumberland.

LAURENCEKIRK, a village and parish of Scotland, in Kincardineshire, which owes its establishment to Lord Gardenstone, the proprietor. It has a linen manufacture and bleachfield. Population 1515. 8 miles N. W. Montrose.

LAURENS, a township of the United States, in Otsego county, New York. Pop. 1512.—2d. A district of South Carolina, between Enoree and Saluda rivers. Pop. 14,002. Slaves 3308.—3d. A county of Georgia, on the Oconee. Population 2210. Slaves 485. Chief town Dublin.

LAURENT DE LA MOUGA, St., a walled town of France, 28 miles S. by W. Perpignan.

LAURENT DU PONT, St., a village of France, 14 miles N. Grenoble. Pop. 2360.

LAURENT SUR GORRE, St., a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne. Population 2300.

LAURICUCHA, TUNGURAGUA, or FALSE MARANON, a large river of South America, which falls into the Ucayale or Amazons, Lat. 4. 55. S.

LAURINO, a town of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 2100.

LAUSANNE, the capital of the Swiss canton of the Pays de Vaud, delightfully situated on three eminences, above a mile to the north of the lake of Geneva. From the uneven surface, the streets are steep and irregular, and the houses not well built. The only manufactures worth notice are jewellery and silversmiths work. The object deserving attention are the cathedral, a venerable building in the Gothic style, situated on the highest of the eminences; the castle, also an antique edifice; the town-house, the arsenal, the hospital, the charity school, the riding and drawing schools, several good libraries and cabinets of natural history, but, above all, the beautiful and picturesque views presented by the lake and the surrounding mountains. Lausanne has had since 1536 an academy. Pop. 8000. 41 miles S. W. Bern. Long. 6. 45. 30. E. Lat. 46. 31. 45. N.

LAUTER, a river which rises in the Vosges mountains. It joins the Rhine at Lauterburg.

LAUTERBACH, a town of Germany, in Hesse-Darmstadt. Population 2850.

LAUTERBURG, a town of France, 14 miles S. Landau. Population 2000.

LAUTREC, a town of France, department of the Tarn. Population 3250.

LAUZA, a village of Brazil, 50 miles N. W. Rio Janeiro. Population 2000.

LAWRENCE, ST. one of the largest rivers in North America, which issues from Lake Ontario, and is the outlet by which the waters of the great lakes Superior, Huron, Michigan, Erie, and Ontario, are poured into the gulf of St. Lawrence. In different parts of its course it is known by different names, and forms an uninterrupted water communication of 2000 miles. Its course from Lake Ontario to the gulf of St. Lawrence is 770 miles. From Lake Ontario to Montreal, the distance is 190 miles. In this part of the river there are numerous islands, shoals, and rapids, and it spreads out also into large lakes. To Montreal, which is 530 miles from the gulf of St. Lawrence, ships of 600 tons can ascend with little difficulty. About 90 miles below Montreal, the influence of the tide ceases entirely; and at a distance of 52 miles, the Richelieu rapid is extremely dangerous. At Quebec the river is 2 miles across, and continues gradually increasing in breadth, until it enters the gulf of St. Lawrence, where, from Cape Rosier to the Mingan settlement on the Labrador shore, it is near 105 miles wide. From the beginning of December until the middle of April, the water communication is totally suspended by the frost.

LAWRENCE, GULF OF ST. which receives the waters of the above river, is formed between the western part of Newfoundland, the eastern shores of Labrador, the eastern extremity of the province of New Brunswick, part of the province of Nova Scotia, and the island of Cape Breton. It communicates with the Atlantic ocean by three different passages.

LAXA, a river of Chili, which enters the Biobio, in Lat. 37. & S.

LAXZY, a small town on the east side of the Isle of Man.

LAXFORD, a river of Scotland, in Sutherlandshire, which enters the bay of Laxford.

LAYBACH, GOVERNMENT OF, one of the two great divisions of Austrian Illyria, with a population of nearly 640,000.

LAYBACH, one of the five circles of the preceding government. Population 140,000.

LAYBACH, the capital of the preceding government, on the Laybach. It has three suburbs, a town-house, a cathedral, 10 churches, 2 hospitals, a central school, with the privileges of a university, an observatory, a public library, and a theatre. Population 11,000. 28 miles N. E. Trieste.

LAYBACH, UFFER, a town of Carinthia, 11 miles S. W. Laybach. Also a river of Carinthia.

LAZON, a river of France, which joins the LAZON, a town of France, 4 miles S. Agen.

LAYTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 740.

LAZISE, a well built town of Austrian Italy, on the lake of Garda. Population 6000.

LEA, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 658.

LEA, a river of England, in Bedfordshire, which falls into the Thames.

LEACH, a river of England, in Gloucestershire and Oxford, which joins the Thames.

LEADEN, a river of England, which falls into the Severn opposite Gloucester.

LEADHILLS, a village of Scotland, in Lanarkshire, on the most elevated ground that is to be met with in the south of Scotland. In the hills rich lead mines have been long worked; and from the concourse of miners, the two villages of Leadhills and Wanlockhead have gradually arisen. 44 miles S. Glasgow.

LEAFIELD, or LEFIELD, a township of England, in Oxfordshire. Population 553.

LEAM, a river of England, which rises in Northamptonshire, and falls into the Ouse.

LEAM, NEW, a river of England, in Cambridgeshire.

LEAMINGTON PRIORS, a village of England, in Warwickshire, noted for its mineral spring. Pop. 2103. 2 miles E. Warwick.

LEAO-TONG, GULF OF, a considerable gulf, connected with that of Pe-tche-lee, in Chinese Tartary.

LEASBURG, a post town of the United States, in Caswell county, North Carolina.

LEATHERHEAD, a town of England, in Surrey, on the Mole, over which is a bridge of 14 arches. Population 1478.

LEATHLEY, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 312.

LEBA, a small river of Prussia, in Pomerania, which flows into the Baltic.

LEBANON, a post township of the United States, in York county, Maine. Pop. 1030.

—2d, Of Grafton county, New Hampshire. Population 1800.

—3d, Of Windham county, Connecticut. Population 2580.

—4th, Of Madison county, New York. Pop. 1634.

—5th, Of Hunterdon county, New Jersey. Population 2400.

—6th, A county of Pennsylvania, formed from Dauphin and Lancaster counties.

—7th, A post township, borough, and capital of Lebanon county, Pennsylvania, on Quittapahilla creek, 25 miles E. Harrisburg. Pop. of the borough 1434.

—8th, A post township and capital of Wilson county, Tennessee, 25 miles E. Nashville.

—9th, Of Warren county, Ohio, 25 miles S. Dayton.

LEBANON, a town of East Mendon, 3 miles S. by E. Dendermonde. Population 3150.

LEBERIAN, a town of European Russia, government of Tambor. Population 2500.

LEBKANS, a wooden town of European Russia, on the Atechansja, 70 miles N. W. Charkov. Population 9000.

LEBIDA, a seaport town of Tripoli, in Africa, 30 miles E. S. E. Tripoli.

LEBRISA, a town of Spain, noted for olive oil. Population 6000. 20 miles S. Seville.

LECCE, a well built and trading city of Naples, province of Otranto. It has a trade in flax, which is manufactured into lace; and in tobacco. Population 14,000. 17 miles W. Otranto. Long. 18. 36. E. Lat. 40. 36. N.

LUCCO, a town of Austrian Italy, in the Milanese, on the lake of Como. It has manufactures of silk and woollens. Pop. 4000.

LECH, a large river of the Bavarian states, which rises in Tyrol, and joins the Danube.

LECHLADE, a market town of England, Gloucestershire, on the Thames. Population 1134. 12 miles E. Cirencester.

LECK, a great branch of the Rhine, which falls into the Maese above Rotterdam.

LECKWICK, a river of England, in Lancashire, which falls into the Lune.

LECON, a town of France, department of the Pay de Dome. Population 2300.

LECTOURE, a town of France, department of the Gers, on the Gers. It has manufactures of leather. Population 5500.

LEDBURY, a market town of England, in Herefordshire. The church is a large building, in the Saxon style. It has manufactures of ropes, lines, and sacks for meal. Pop. 3476. 16 miles N. W. Gloucester.

LEDDER, a river of Wales, in Caernarvonshire, which falls into the Conway.

LEDE, a village of the Netherlands, 8 miles S. W. Dendermonde. Population 3300.

LEDEGHEM, a town of West Flanders, 12 miles E. Ypres. Population 3150.

LEDESMA, a town of Spain, 18 miles W. Salamanca. Population 1800.

LEBNOCK, a tributary of the Erne, in Scotland.

LEDSHAM, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 212.

LEDWICK, a river of England, county of Salop, which joins the Teme.

LEE, a river of England, in Cheshire, which joins the Weaver.—2d, Of Ireland, which falls into Cork harbour.—3d, Of Ireland, which runs into Tralee bay.

LEE, a township of the United States, in Hancock county, Maine.—2d, Of Stafford county, New Hampshire. Population 1320.—3d, Of Berkshire county, Massachusetts. Population 1893.—4th, A county of Virginia. Population 4694. Slaves 336.

LEEN LAXA, a lake in North America, and the main source of the Mississippi.

LEEN, a large trading and manufacturing town of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, the principal seat of the woollen trade, and one of the richest and most populous towns in the county. It is situated on the Aire, which is navigable from the Humber up to the town, whence the Leeds and Liverpool canal proceeds on the other bank to the west, so that it is equally open to the eastern and western seas. There are two bridges across the river, along which the town extends about a mile and a half from east to west. The houses, mostly of brick, are in general well built, and, in the western part of the town, handsome and elegant. In the other parts the streets are narrow, crooked, and in some places dirty. Till the reign of Charles I. Leeds had but one church: it has now five, St Peter's, St John's, St James's, Trinity church, and St Paul's, with various dissenting chapels. St Peter's, the parish church, is a plain, but spacious and venerable structure, of considerable antiquity. The number of dissenting meeting-houses in the town is eight, viz. one Presbyterian, one Unitarian, three Independents of the Calvinistic creed, one Scots seceders, one Baptist, and one Quakers, besides two very large chapels belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists, one to the seceding Methodists, and a Roman Catholic chapel. There are several charitable institutions for the sick and infirm. The cloth halls are the most remarkable buildings in Leeds. It is here that all the great sales of woollen cloth take place. The mixed cloth hall was erected in 1750, at the expense of the manufacturers, to remedy the evil of exposing the goods in the street, as had formerly been the practice. It is a quadrangular building, inclosing an open area. The building is 137½ yards long, and 60 broad. It is divided into six departments, which, from their magnitude, may well be called covered streets, each containing two rows of stands, and every stand measuring 22 inches in front, and having marked on it the name of the clothier to whom it belongs. The total number of stands is 1800. The hall is thoroughly lighted, and the colours of the goods can be seen as distinctly as in the open air. The white or undyed cloth-hall is upon the same plan with the others. It was built in 1776. The markets for mixed and white cloths are held on Tuesdays and Saturdays. The market opens with the ringing of a bell: in a few minutes the hall is filled with merchants. At the end of an hour a warning bell announces the approaching close of the market; and the sound of the third bell, in 20 minutes more, terminates all the proceedings. The remaining public buildings worthy of notice are the new jail and court-house, the king's mills, the water-works, the charity school, the national and Lancasterian schools, the circulating library, and a building for the Leeds philosophical and literary society. There is a charity school, and a school on Dr Bell's system; also a Lancasterian school. There is a Wesley chapel erected in Meadow Lane. Besides these buildings and institutions, magnificent assembly-rooms have been erected in Leeds. The theatre was built in 1771. Of the manufactures and trade of Leeds and the vicinity, the staple article is woollen cloth. Superfine cloths are now manufactured on a great scale; also swansdowns, tollinets, broadcloths, shalloos, stuffs, Scots cambrics, gingham, burdets, calamancoes, blankets, and carpets. There are also several manufactories for spinning flax for canvas, linen, ticking, thread, &c. Here are likewise manufactures for flat and green glass, and for fine and coarse pottery goods. Several foundries have been erected; and there is a large manufactory for steam engines. The borough of Leeds, which comprises the whole parish, is governed by a corporation consisting of a mayor, 12 aldermen, and 24 common councilmen. It sends no member to parliament. Population 83,796. 17 miles E. by N. Halifax, 24 S. W. York, 196 N. W. London. Long. 1. 34. W. Lat. 53. 48. N.

LEEDS, a county of Upper Canada, on the St Lawrence.

LEEDS, a township and port of entry, Leeds county, Upper Canada, on the St Lawrence.

LEEDS, a township of the United States, in Kennebeck county, Maine. Pop. 1273.

LEFFOGA, one of the Iapae islands, in the South Pacific ocean. Long 135. 40. E. Lat. 19. 40. S.

LEEK, a market town of England, county of Stafford. It has a church, and several meeting-houses for dissenters; also a chapel for the Methodists. Here are eight almshouses. The manufactures are principally those of silk and mohair, comprising buttons, ferrets, bunduna and other handkerchiefs, twist, ribbons, &c. Population 4855. 31 miles S. by W. Manchester.

LEEK, a village of the Netherlands, 8 miles S. W. Groningen. Population 1100.

LEEK FRITH, a township of England, in Staffordshire. Population 806.

LEENDAM, a town of the Netherlands, 11 miles S. Utrecht. Population 2000.

LEENHUR, a port town of the United States, Loudon county, Virginia. There are several townships of the same name.

LEET, a small river of Scotland, in Berwickshire, which joins the Tweed.

LEETAKOO, or LATTAKEO, a town of Southern Africa, the only place yet known in the country of the Boshuana. Pop. 3000.

LEEUWARDEN, a town of the Netherlands, capital of the province of Friesland, on the Ee. The chief public buildings are the arsenal, the town-house, the edifice belonging to the prince of Orange, and a large and handsome church. 28 miles W. Groningen.

LEPUWEN, a village of the Netherlands, 11 miles W. Nimwegen. Population 1500.

LEeward ISLANDS. The terms Leeward and Windward, applied to the West India islands, were given them from their situation, in a voyage from the ports of Spain to Cartagena, or Porto Bello. The islands which lie to leeward extend from Porto Rico to Dominica.

LEFtwich, a township of England, in Cheshire. Population 1192.

LEGhorn, a large town and seaport of Italy, in the grand duchy of Tuscany. It is situated in a marshy district, in a square form, and about two miles and a half in circuit. The streets are in general wide, straight, clean, and well paved. The private houses are for the most part well built, but there are few public buildings of interest. At one of the corners of the great square stands the Duomo, or high church, a Gothic fabric, remarkable only for its vault. Exclusive of this there are six Catholic parish churches, two Greek churches, an Arminian chapel, an elegant synagogue, and a Turkish mosque. The ducal palace is a building of little importance. On the side of the harbour is to be seen a fine marble statue of Ferdinand I. The other remarkable structures are the arsenal, the warehouses for salt, tobacco, and oil; the theatre, and the public baths. Leghorn contains also three hospitals, and a charity school for girls. The maritime accommodations of Leghorn consist of a roadstead, an outer and an inner harbour. The outer harbour, which is the real port, is difficult to enter. It is protected by a fine mole, of 600 paces in length. The inner harbour (la Darsena) is only a small basin. On one side of the port is the Lazaretto, said to be the finest establishment of the kind in Europe, and consisting of a variety of buildings, divided into squares, through which there is a constant and free circulation of air. The persons in quarantine walk about in a covered yard. The warehouses are airy and extensive; and the merchandise, after being opened, remains untouched for a certain time. The light-house of Leghorn stands on a rock, and is brilliantly illuminated at night. Leghorn supplies the interior of Italy with the produce of the rest of Europe, of the Levant, and of the colonies; in return it exports the produce and manufactures of the adjacent part of Italy. The chief branch of manual industry is the working of coral and alabaster. The other manufactures, such as those of silk, leather, paper, &c. are on a small scale. Population 50,000. 47 miles W. S. W. Florence, 140 N. N. W. Rome. Long. 10. 16. 43. E. Lat. 43. 33. 5. N.

LEKACO, a fortified town of Austrian Italy, in the Veronesi, divided by the Adige, 23 miles E. S. E. Verona. Population 6350.

LEHIGH, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania, on Lehigh river, inclosed by the counties of Northampton, Bucks, Montgomery, Berks, and Schuylkill.

LEGON, a seaport on the gulf of Siam, at the southerly part of the Malay peninsula.

LEMAN, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania, which runs into the Delaware.

LEHNE, a river which rises in the duchy of Westphalia, and runs into the Roer.

LEINITZ, a small town of Hungary, in the palatinate of Zips. Population 3900.

LEICESTER, an inland county of England, nearly in the centre of the kingdom. It is bounded N. by the counties of Derby and Nottingham, S. by Warwick and Northampton, E. by Lincoln and Rutland, and W. by Warwick and Derby; and between these, for a short way, also by Staffordshire. It is 43 miles long, and about 40 broad. It sends two members to parliament. The surface of the country is a happy medium between flat and hilly, the hills having sufficient slope to carry off the water, and yet almost nowhere sufficient altitude to prevent the highest cultivation. The soil may be generally described as a fine mixture of sand and clay—of lightness and tenacity, with nowhere the sterility of the one, or the harshness of the other; partaking, however, on the whole, more of the nature of clay than of sand. The chief rivers are the Soare, a tributary of the Trent, the Wreak, and the Eye. There are also numerous smaller streams. By means of these streams, aided by canals and railways, the navigable communications of the county have been greatly improved. The minerals of this county are chiefly coal and lime. In some parts the limestone affords a rich lead ore. Ironstone is found in abundance on Ashby wolds; also large quantities of slate, freestone, and clay for bricks. More than half the land is constantly in pasture. There are many large dairies. The Stilton cheese is made in this county, near Melton Mowbray. Leicester has been long noted for a useful and beautiful breed of black horses. The swine of Leicestershire are also of a superior breed. The food for such a number of animals is obtained from the meadows, the pastures, and arable grounds. Along the banks of the rivers, especially those of the Soare, the natural meadows are rich and extensive. The manufactures of Leicestershire are chiefly, and almost entirely, those of its great staple, wool; they consist in the combing and spinning of wool, and making it into stockings. Population 174,571.

LEICESTER, a town of England, the capital of Leicestershire, on the Soare, in the centre of the finest wool district in the kingdom. The houses are in general modern. It contains five parish churches, viz. St Nicholas's, St Mary's, All Saints, St Martin's, and St Margaret's. St Nicholas's is in the Saxon style, consisting only of a nave and south aisle, with a square tower at the west end. St Mary's is a large pile of irregular building. All Saints is a small modern building. St Martin's is a large old building, the largest in the town. There are besides, several meeting-houses, for Baptists, Independents, Methodists, and Unitarians; also a handsome Catholic chapel. The other public buildings and institutions are, the county and town jails, the infirmary, the asylum for indigent lunatics, and the exchange and hotel. The chief manufacture is that of combing and spinning wool, and making it into stockings; and in this business it is, except Nottingham, the principal town in the kingdom; the coarsest goods being more especially made here, and the finer sorts at Nottingham. It sends two members to parliament. The number of voters is about 3000. Population 39,125. 98 miles N. W. London.

LEICHLINGEN, a village of the province of Cleves and Berg. Population 2360.

LEIGH, a market town of England, county of Lancaster. It has manufactures of cotton. Pop. 2498. 12 miles W. Manchester.

LEIGH, a parish and village of England, in Essex. Population 905.—(LEIGH, HILL,) a township of Cheshire. Population 854.

LEIGHLIN, a decayed town of Ireland, county of Carlow, 9 miles N. E. Kilkenny.

LEIGHLIN BRIDGE, a small village of Ireland, county of Carlow, 7 miles S. Carlow.

LEIGHTON BUZZARD, a market town of England, county of Bedford, near the Ouse. The trade is chiefly in cattle, corn, grocery, lace, plaited straw, &c. Population 4421. 41 miles N. W. London.

LEINE, a small river of Germany, in Upper Saxony. It joins the Neisse.—Also a river of Lower Saxony, which joins the Aller.

LEINSTER, the eastern province of Ireland, bounded N. by Ulster, W. and S. W. by Connaught and Munster, and S. and E. by the sea.

LEIPA, a town of Bohemia, 47 miles S. E. Dresden. Population 5000. It has manufactures of porcelain, glass, &c.

LEIPZIG, a town of Moravia, near the Baczwa. Population 2550.

LEIPZIG, CIRCLE OF, a province of the kingdom of Saxony, bounded E. by the circle of Meissen, S. by that of the Erzgebirge and the principality of Altenburg, and W. and N. by the Prussian part of Saxony. Population 217,000.

LEIPZIG, or LEIPZIG, a city of Germany, in Saxony, on the Pleisse. It is of an oblong form, extending a mile in length, and nearly three quarters in breadth. It was formerly fortified, but has long been dismantled. The town is divided into four quarters, has four handsome freestone gates, eight churches, six hospitals, and one spacious square. Among the public edifices are the exchange, the town-house, the cloth hall, the church of St Nicholas, the Roman Catholic chapel, the new theatre, and the arsenal. On the new esplanade, in one of the suburbs, is a marble statue of the present king of Saxony. Besides the six hospitals, there are in the town an orphan-house, a foundling-hospital, an institute for the deaf and dumb, and a house of correction, with a separate ward for lunatics. Here are also three public schools. The environs of Leipzig contain a number of pleasant gardens. The university of Leipzig was founded in 1409. The university library is small, and is surpassed even by the town's library, containing 40,000 volumes, and several rare and beautiful editions of the classics, about 2000 manuscripts, chiefly oriental, and a variety of antiquities, gems, medals, and natural curiosities. Leipzig has several manufactures, particularly of linen, silk, velvets, and velveteens; likewise a number of musical instrument makers, joiners, dyers, goldsmiths, &c. It is besides a great entrepot of trade. A great part of this business is carried on at the three great fairs, which take place at the new year, Easter, and Michaelmas. The book trade forms a remarkable and a peculiar object in the commerce of Leipzig. Leipzig was taken by Frederick II. in 1745, and again in 1756. In the autumn of 1813, its environs became the scene of several most sanguinary actions. Population 33,000. 64 miles W. by N. Dresden. Long. 12. 21. 45. E. Lat. 51. 20. 16. N.

LEISSA, a town of Saxony, on the Mulda, 30 miles S. E. Leipsic. Population 2550.

LEITH, a town of Scotland, in the county of Edinburgh, formerly called Inverleith, and the seat of Edinburgh. It is divided into two districts, called South and North Leith, communicating by two draw-bridges across the harbour. The town is mostly situated on the south side of the river; and, with the exception of the modern and improved streets, is irregularly built, with narrow streets and lanes, and the houses mostly old fashioned and inconvenient. The public buildings are the parish church; the new church in North Leith, completed in 1816; a chapel of ease to the church of South Leith; a neat Episcopal chapel called St James's, built in 1805; two Burgher meeting-houses, and an Anti-burgher meeting-house. Adjacent to the parish church is James the Sixth's hospital, founded by the kirk-session in 1614. There is also the high school of Leith; the exchange, which is a large mass of building of freestone, containing the assembly-room, coffee-room, sale-rooms, subscription-library, and reading-room. The custom-house, which contains also the excise-office, stands on the north side of the harbour. Leith contains several charitable establishments. To the east of the town are the baths of Seafield, consisting of 17 baths; hot, tepid, cold, pump, and shower baths, besides a very large plunge bath, fitted for swimming. The edifice in which these are contained is light and elegant, and there is attached to it an excellent hotel. The prison was erected in 1563. The harbour of Leith has been gradually improved by the extension of wooden and stone piers into the sea, and at the extremity by a light-house. In 1800, other extensive improvements were projected; a magnificent suit of wet docks was planned, and two of these beautiful basins were soon opened for shipping. These docks, comprehending nearly eight acres, together with three graving docks, have cost about £.250,000. Fortifications were erected by Oliver Cromwell in North Leith, called the citadel, for the purpose of defending the harbour, which were afterwards demolished. About 36 years ago, a battery of nine guns was erected to the west of the citadel. Since that period the boundaries of the fort have been greatly extended; and it is now the head-quarters of the royal artillery in North Britain. There is a martello tower, about a quarter of a mile from the pier. Leith carries on an extensive trade with the Baltic and other countries of Europe, such as Holland, France, Spain, Portugal, and the Mediterranean; also with the West Indies and America, besides a great coasting trade, to the different parts of England and Scotland. The Greenland fishery is also prosecuted with great activity. It has several extensive rope-works and canvas manufactories; six or seven glass-houses, where bottles and flint glass are manufactured in great quantities; sugar refineries, soap-works, several breweries, iron works, a vinegar manufactory, a card manufactory, with an apparatus for drawing wire, and a manufactory of agricultural implements, in which great ingenuity is displayed. Ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent; and there is an extensive distillery in the neighbourhood. The town of Leith is rapidly extending itself. Pop. 26,000. 2 miles N. E. Edinburgh. The two towns are now, however, nearly joined, by a confused range of buildings.

LEITH RIVER, or WATER OF LEITH, forms the harbour of Leith.

LEITHEN, a small river of Scotland, county of Peebles, which joins the Tweed.

LEITRIM, a maritime county of Ireland, province of Connaught, bounded S. by Roscommon and Sligo, W. by the bay of Donegal, N. by Donegal and Fermanagh, and E. and S. E. by Cavan and Longford. Its greatest extent is 62 English miles. Its greatest breadth is about 16 miles, and its least breadth about 6 miles; and it contains 407,260 English acres. The surface is extremely uneven, being composed of bogs and high mountains, which afford sufficient herbage for the breeding of cattle. The vallies are fertile, and watered with rivulets, and the mountains contain inexhaustible stores of lead, iron, and copper ores, and likewise coal mines. Potatoes, barley, rye, and wheat, are cultivated in small quantities, and oats in greater abundance. The Shannon is the principal river. Population 76,000. Catholics to Protestants as 30 to 1. Two members are returned to the imperial parliament.

LEITHAM, a small town of Ireland, on the Shannon, 3 miles N. Carrick.

LEIXLIP, a town of Ireland, county of Kildare, 8 miles from Dublin.

LEMAN, a river of England, in Devonshire, which joins the Ex. near Tiverton.

LEMBEEK, a village of the Netherlands, 22 miles S. E. Ghent. Population 2000.

LEMBERG, a city of Austrian Poland, on the Peltza, a branch of the Dniester. It was once fortified, but the ramparts are now converted into streets and public walks. The lofty towers and cupolas of the cathedral and the churches, and the height and massiveness of the houses, built of freestone, give the town an air of grandeur. Here is a high-school, two Jewish schools, and a university. The fair of Lemberg is on a very large scale. Population 29,000 Christians, and 15,000 Jewish inhabitants. 160 miles E. Cracow. Long. 24. 3. 2. E. Lat. 49. 51. 42. N.

LEMBO, a town of Westphalia, on the Bega. Population 1400. 17 miles S. Minden.

LEMMER, a village of the Netherlands, 30 miles S. Leeuwarden. Population 1800.

LEMMOS, STALLINKE, or LIMES, an island of European Turkey, in the archipelago, between Monte Santo and the Hellespont. The town of Lemnos, the capital, has a harbour, and 2000 inhabitants.

LES, a river of England, in Kent, which falls into the Medway at Maidstone.

LENA, a river of Asiatic Russia, which rises in the mountains N. W. Lake Baikal, and flowing from N. E., falls into the sea, after a course of nearly 3000 miles.

LENCLOISTRE, a town of France, department of La Vienne. Population 3150.

LENCZICZ, a fortified town of Poland, on the Baura. Population 2300.

LENDINARA, a town of Austrian Italy, on the Adigetto. Population 5000.

LENGFELD, a town of Saxony, 10 miles N. E. Plauen. Population 2100.

LENNHAM, a decayed town of England, county of Kent. Population 1959.

LENNER, a town of the Prussian province of Cleves and Berg. Population 2800.

LEMMO, a village of the Milanese, 12 miles S. Brescia. Population 3000.

LENNOX TOWN, or NEWTON OF CAMPBELL, a village of Scotland, in Stirlingshire.

LENOIRE, a county of the United States, in North Carolina. Population 5572. Slaves 2440. Chief town Kingston.

LENOX, a post township of the United States, Massachusetts. Pop. 1310.—2d, Of Madison county, New York. Pop. 1732.

LENOXVILLE, a seaport of the United States, in Carteret county, North Carolina.

LENS, a town of France, department of the Pas de Calais. Population 2350.

LENS, a town of the Netherlands, 9 miles N. Mons. Population 2000.

LENZA, a river of Italy, in the grand duchy of Parma, which joins the Parma.

LENZE, a small river of Prussia, in Brandenburg, which falls into the Wartha.

LENZEN, a town of the Prussian province of Brandenburg. Population 2150.

LENZO, a river of Italy. It joins the Po, near Bersello.

LEONEN, a town of Upper Styria, on the Mur, 80 miles S. W. Vienna. Pop. 2400.

LEONSCRUZE, a town of Prussian Silesia. Population 3400.

LEOCHEL, a small river of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire, which falls into the Don.

LEOGANE, a town on the west coast of St Domingo, in the bay of Leogane. Long. 72. 37. W. Lat. 22. 30. N.

LEOMINSTER, a borough and market town of England, county of Hereford, on the Lugg. The church is a large and irregular building. The interior is 125 feet by 124. There are, besides, places of worship for Baptists, Presbyterians, Moravians, and Quakers. The town-hall is a singular building of timber and plaster, erected in 1633. There is also a new jail, and a neat market-house for the sale of grain. Here are several other schools, and charitable institutions. It has a manufacture of hats and gloves; there is also some trade in fells, leather, &c. It sends two members to parliament. Number of voters 600. Pop. 4046. 13 miles N. Hereford.

LEOMINSTER, a post township of the United States, in Massachusetts. Pop. 1684.

LEON, one of the great divisions of Spain, situated in the north-west, and still distinguished by the title of a kingdom. It is surrounded by Estremadura, Old Castile, Galicia, and Portugal, and has the form of an irregular oblong, 200 miles in length from N. to S., and 168 in breadth from E. to W. Its territorial extent is 21,000 square miles, and its population 930,000.

LEON, a province of Spain, occupying the northern part of the ancient kingdom of Leon, and surrounded by the Asturias, Palencia, Toro, Valladolid, Zamora, and Galicia. Population 240,000.

LEON, the capital of the foregoing kingdom and province, situated at the confluence of the Toris and Bernesga. It is now a heterogeneous mixture of dirty streets filled with beggars, splendid churches, and half ruined family mansions. The cathedral of Leon surpasses in grandeur and beauty all similar edifices in the kingdom, and is one of the finest monuments of Gothic architecture which exists. Population 6200. 174 miles N. N. W. Madrid. Long. 5. 27. W. Lat. 42. 45. N.

LEON, an insulated track on the S. W. coast of Spain, containing Cadix, on a promontory which projects from it.

LEON, a large town of Spain, in the island just described, 11 miles S. E. Cadiz. Like other towns of Spain, it displays a striking contrast of grandeur and poverty. The town-hall, in the great square, is a handsome building. The principal church is elegantly decorated. Pop. about 40,000.

LEON, the capital of the province of Nicaragua, in South America. It contains about 1200 houses, with many convents, and four churches. Long. 89.1. 25. W. Lat. 12. 25. N.

LEON, a town of Mexico, intendancy of Guanajuato, 40 miles N. W. Guanajuato. The name of several rivers of South America.

LEON, New, a province of Mexico.

LEONARD J. E. NOBLET, St., a town of France, on the Vienne. Population 4000.

LEXANDERTON, a post township of the United States, St Mary's county, Maryland.

LEONE, Cape, a promontory of Greece, 8 miles W. S. W. Athens.

LEONFORTE, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Noto. Population 8000.

LEONHARD, St., a small town of Carinthia, 114 miles S. S. W. Vienna.

LEONHARD, a town of Germany, 11 miles N. W. Stuttgart. Population 1700.

LEONRIN, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Noto, on the Lentini river. Population 2000. 22 miles N. N. W. Syracuse.

LEOPOLDSTADT, a town of Hungary, 56 miles E. Vienna.

LEPANTO, a town of European Turkey, 300 miles W. S. W. Constantinople.

LEPANTO GULF, or, a gulf of European Turkey, separating the south coast of Romania from the Morea. It is 70 miles long.

LEPTON, a township of England, 4 miles E. by S. Huddersfield. Population 2729.

LERICI, a seaport of Italy, on the gulf of Spezia. Population 2909.

LERIDA, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, on the Segre. The streets are narrow, and ill paved, excepting on the quay, which extends the whole length of the town. Lerida is a bishop's see; its university, formerly in repute, was suppressed by Philip V. A modern building has been erected in the town, to supply the place of the old cathedral. Population 17,000. 69 miles E. by S. Saragossa.

LERMA, an ancient town of Spain, in Burgos, 23 miles S. Burgos.

LERWICK, the chief town of Shetland, on the spacious harbour called Lerwick or Braxay sound. It consists of one principal street next the quay, with several lanes branching off. It is irregularly built, but of late has been much improved. Population 1000.

LESHURV, a small fishing town of England, in Northumberland. Population 576.

LESCAR, (L'Escar), a town of France, 3 miles N. W. Pau. Population 1900.

LESGHISTAN, a territory of Caucasus, of small breadth, but of great length, forming the whole N. E. frontier of Georgia.

LESINA, anciently called Pharus, an island in the Adriatic, on the south coast of Austrian Dalmatia. Population 14,000. Its chief town is Lesina. Population 1200.

LESMANAGOE, or ABNEY GREEN, a village and parish of Scotland, in Lanarkshire, on the Nethan. Population 5522.

LESNEVEN, a town of France, department of Finisterre. Population 2050.

LESSINES, a town of the Netherlands, in Hainault, on the Dender. Population 3700.

LESSLIE, a small town and parish of Scotland, in Fifeshire, 9 miles N. Kirkcaldy.

LESSOR, or LESSOE, a small island of Denmark, in the Cattegat. Population 1560.

LETHAM, a village of Scotland, in Fifeshire.—Also a village of Dorsetshire.

LETTERRENNY, a town of Ireland, county of Donegal, 15 miles S. W. Londonderry.

LEVANT.—This term signifies properly the east; but it has been commonly applied to the eastern coasts of the Mediterranean, chiefly those of Asia Minor and Syria.

LEUCHARS, a village and parish of Scotland, in Fifeshire. Population 1731. 6 miles from St Andrew's.

LEUCTRA, a village of Greece, in Boeotia, famous for the victory of Epaminondas, over the Lacedaemonians, in the year 371 B. C.

LEVEN, a village of Scotland, in Fifeshire, at the mouth of the Leven. 9 miles E. Kirkcaldy.

LEVEN, Loch, a lake of Scotland, in the county of Kinross, about 12 miles in circumference. It contains four islands, on one of which stood the castle of Loch Leven, anciently a royal residence. Here Queen Mary was confined. Loch Leven abounds with pike, perch, eels, char, and very fine trout. The river Leven issues from this loch.

LEVEN, a river of Scotland, in Dumbartonshire, joins the Clyde at Dumbarton castle.

LEVEN, a river of England, in Lancashire, which falls into Morecambe bay.

LEVEN, BLACK and WHITE, two small rivers of England, in Cumberland.

LEVENANT, a river of Wales, in Cardiganshire, which falls into the Dovy.

LEVENNY, two rivers of Wales, in Caernarvonshire and Denbighshire.

LEVENS, a township of England, in Westmoreland. Population 765.

LEVENSHULME, a township of England, 1 mile from Manchester. Population 708.

LEVER, DARCY, GREAT and LITTLE, three townships of England, in Lancashire. Population 556-631-1654.

LEVIZANO, a town of Italy, in the duchy of Modena. Population 2300.

LEVROUX, a town of France, department of the Indre. Population 2400.

LEUSE, a town of Hainault, on the Dender. Population 4400.

LEUTHER, a river of Scotland, county of Angus, which falls into the North Esk.

LEUTMANNSDORF, a village of Prussian Silesia. Population 2150.

LEUTMERITZ, one of the sixteen circles into which Bohemia is divided. It lies in the north of that kingdom. Pop. 202,000.

LEUTMERITZ, the capital of the preceding circle, on the Elbe, over which is a wooden bridge. It has a fine cathedral. Population 3600. 36 miles N. N. E. Prague.

LEUTOMISCHL, a town of Bohemia, 86 miles E. by S. Prague. Population 4650.

LEUTSCHAU, a town of Hungary, in the county of Zyps. Population 4500.

LEZNACH, a small river of Prussian Silesia, which falls into the Oder.

LEWES, a borough and well built market town of England, in the county of Sussex, on the Ouse. It contains six churches, some of which are of ancient date; and one of them appears to be of Norman origin. Here are, besides, seven dissenting meeting-houses, for Presbyterians, Quakers, Arminians, Methodists, general and particular Baptists, and Calvinists. It has also a free grammar school, a shire-hall, which is a new, handsome, and commodious building; a house of correction, and a theatre. About a mile from the town, on the Brighton road, are the new barracks; and at a greater distance, the military hospital. The principal trade consists in corn and malt. The chief manufacture is at the iron-works above the bridge, where cannon, shells, &c. are cast, and other useful works carried on. Paper is also manufactured. It returns two members to parliament. The number of voters is 310. The antiquity of Lewes is attested by numerous relics. Population 7083. 8½ miles N. E. Brighton.

LEWIS, one of the largest and most northerly of the Hebrides, on the coast of Scotland, parted by two arms of the sea into two divisions, the southern of which is called Harris, and the northern Lewis. It extends southwest and north-east 82 miles, and it is from 10 to 23 miles in breadth, containing an area of 902 square miles, or 451,000 acres. It lies between 64. and 72. W. long. and 57. 54. and 58. 28. N. lat. Population in 1800, 13,942. 30 miles W. Assynt Point, in Sutherland.

LEWIS, a county of the United States, in New York, inclosed by the counties of St Lawrence, Hamilton, Oneida, Oswego, and Jefferson. Population 6433.—2d, Of Virginia, formed in 1816, from part of Harrison county.—3d, Of Kentucky. Population 2357. Slaves 284. Chief town Clarksburg.

LEWIS, St, a river of Canada, which runs into Lake Superior.—Also of Labrador.

LEWIS'S CREEK, two rivers of the United States, which run, the one into Lake Champlain, the other into Sandy river.

LEWIS RIVER, a river of North America, which rises on the west side of the Rocky mountains, and, after a course of 900 miles, enters the Columbia, 413 miles above its mouth.

LEWISBURG, a post township of the United States, in Greenbriar county, Virginia.

LEWISHAM, a neat and populous village of England, in Kent, near London. It is the residence of several opulent families retired from business. The church is a handsome building, containing some fine monuments. Population 8135. 5 miles E. London.

LEWISTON, a post village of Niagara county, New York, on Niagara river.

LEWISTOWN, a post township of the United States, in Sussex county, Delaware.—2d, A post town and borough, and capital of Mifflin county, Pennsylvania.

LEYDEN, a village of England, in Essex, 2 miles W. Colchester. Population 932.

LEXINGTON, a post township of the United States, in Middlesex county, Massachusetts, 11 miles N. W. Boston. Pop. 1052. Here the first battle was fought in the American war.

LEXINGTON, a post town of the United States, in Rockbridge county, Virginia, with 100 dwelling-houses.

LEXINGTON, formerly Great Falls, a post town of the United States, and capital of Oglethorpe county, Georgia.

LEXINGTON, a post town of the United States, capital of Fayette county, Kentucky, on Town Fork, a small stream which enters the Elkhorn. It is regularly laid out, and contains a court-house, a market-house, a masonic hall, 3 banks, a public library, a university, a female academy, 3 printing-offices, and 7 churches for Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Baptists, Methodists, and Roman Catholics. The growth of this town has been exceedingly rapid. In 1797, it contained only about 50 houses, and the best farmers lived in log cabins. It is now a large and beautiful town, covered with stately and elegant buildings, and in wealth and refinement is scarcely surpassed by any place in the western country. The manufacturing establishments are various and extensive. Here are 4 nail factories, which manufacture 70 tons of nails yearly, 2 copper and tin manufac-ories, several cotton and woollen manufactories, 3 steam grist mills, and 2 steam paper mills, rope-walks on a large scale, besides tanneries, breweries, distilleries, &c. It has a university. 35 miles E. N. E. Frankfort, 76 E. Louisville, and 63 S. Cincinnati. Long. 83. 8. W. Lat. 38. 6. N.

LEYMOUR LAND, a township of England, in Yorkshire. Population 810.

LEYDEN, a city of the Netherlands, in South Holland, on the Rhine, about two miles its length. The form of the town is oblong: its population, formerly 48,000, is now 31,000. The canals that traverse the town form, by their various intersections, upwards of 50 petty islands, connected together by above 100 small bridges, mostly of wood. The fortifications consist of a circular mound of earth, along which are fine shady walks, and outside of it a deep and broad moat, across which there are eight bridges, leading to as many gates. The principal streets of Leyden are broad, well paved, and somewhat raised in the middle, so that no water can remain on them. The street in which the stadthouse is situated is accounted among the finest in Europe. It extends, in the form of a crescent, from one end of the town to the other. The houses are for the most part of brick, built with the gable ends to the street. Many of them are five or six stories high. Of public buildings, the stadthouse is a magnificent structure, with a stone front. The church of St Peter, the finest of the 17, great and small, that belong to the city, is a large and handsome building, in the Gothic style. In the centre of the town is a very ancient castle or fort, considered as a work of the Romans. The other public buildings are the arsenal, the custom-house, and the hospitals. The university of Leyden was formerly famous throughout Europe. It has at present about 500 students. The woollen and linen manufactures of Leyden have fallen off, chiefly from excessive taxation. The manufactures of soap and indigo are still considerable, and the yearly fair is much frequented. Printing, especially the printing of classical books, was formerly a great branch of trade here; but it is now much reduced. In 1573, Leyden sustained a long siege from the Spaniards. 22 miles S. W. Amsterdam.

LEYDEN-DAM, or LEIDENHENDAM, a town of South Holland. Population 1800.

LEYLAKE, a township in England, in Lancashire. Population 3173.

LEYRIA, a town of Portugal, in Estremadura, 77 miles N. by E. Lisbon. Pop. 3600.

LEYTA, one of the southernmost of the Philippines, 95 miles long and 38 broad. Pop. 9000. Long. 124. 40. E. Lat. 10. 50. N.

LEYTHA, a tributary of the Raab, in Germany.

LEZAT, a town of France, department of the Arriege. Population 2560.

LEZOT, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Population 3300.

LIBANUS, a lofty mountain of Syria, the ancient Lebanon.

LIBAU, a seaport of European Russia, in Courland, on the Baltic. Population 5000.

LIBERTY, a county of the United States, in Georgia, on the coast. Population 6283. Slaves 4533.—Also the name of several townships.

LIBOURNE, a trading town of France, department of the Gironde. Population 8000. 20 miles N. E. Bourdeaux.

LICH, a town of Germany, 42 miles N. E. Mentz. Population 1900.

LICHFIELD, an ancient city of England, in the county of Stafford. It stands on a small river that runs into the Trent. The city is neat and well built, and consists of three or four principal streets, and some smaller ones; and is divided unequally in two, by a pool of running water. It is the residence of the dignitaries of the church; and a number of gentle families are in consequence attracted to the place. The cathedral is supposed to have been founded in 667; and was afterwards much enlarged and improved. It is one of the noblest religious edifices in the kingdom, extending 411 feet in length, and 67 in breadth. In the centre rises an elegant steeple, to the height of 258 feet, and two smaller ones at the west end. The interior is finished with corresponding elegance and splendour. The body of the church is spacious and lofty, supported by pillars formed of clusters of slender columns, with neat foliated capitals. It extends 213 feet in length from the great west door to the choir, and 153 in breadth: the breadth of the side aisles is 66 feet, and the height of the nave 60. Over the great west doors that open into the nave, is placed a very splendid circular window, constructed at the expence of James, Duke of York, in the reign of Charles II. A number of interesting monuments are dispersed through the church. St Mary's chapel is uncommonly beautiful and splendid. Besides the cathedral, there is a variety of buildings, all of which, except a few houses, belong to the church. The bishop's palace is situated at the north-east corner. It is a spacious building of stone, with the date of 1687, and the arms of the bishopric, in front. The deanery-house stands west from the palace. There are, besides, the church of St Mary, a capacious and neat edifice; and St Michael's church, a neat edifice, with a lofty spire. The other public buildings are the market-house, the guild-hall and jail; also a theatre, an English school, and a free grammar school, at which were educated Addison, Woolston, Ashmole, Garrick, and Johnson. Nearly opposite to it is the hospital of St John, originally a monastery. There are, besides, several other charitable institutions. The chief manufactures of Lichfield are of horse-sheets and sailcloth. It has long been famous for its excellent ale; and its trade consists principally in the sale of this article. Population 6075. 16 miles N. Birmingham.

LICHTENSTEIN, a town of Saxony, 42 miles S. Leipzig. Population 2200.

LICHTENVOORDEN, a town of the Netherlands, in Gelderland. Population 2500.

LICKING, a county of the United States, in Ohio. Pop. 6400. Chief town Newark.

LICKING, a river of the United States, in Kentucky, which joins the Ohio.—Also in Ohio, which joins the Muskingum.

LICKY, a river of Ireland, county of Waterford, which joins the Blackwater.

LID, or LYD, a river of England, in Devonshire, which falls into the Tamar.

LIDDALE, a river of Scotland, in Roxburghshire, which joins the Esk.

LIDDISDALE, a district of Scotland, in Roxburghshire, watered by the Liddal.

LIDKOPING, a town of Sweden, in West Gothland. Population 1550.

LIEBSTADT, a town of West Prussia. Population 1400.

LIECHTALL, a town of the Swiss canton of Bale, 9 miles S. E. Bale.

LIEGE, a large and populous province of the Netherlands, in the south-east part of the kingdom, surrounded by the Prussian province of the Lower Rhine, the grand duchy of Luxemburg, and the Belgic provinces of Namur, South Brabant, and Limburg. Its superficial extent is 2300 square miles. The aspect of the country is that of an undulating plain, except in the south and east, where it is hilly, and covered with extensive forests. The principal river that traverses the province is the Maese. Of the subordinate streams, the most considerable are the Ourthe, the Loose, and the Semoys. Population 354,000.

LIEGE, the capital of the preceding province, on the Maese, which, on entering the town, divides into a number of branches: these, by their interconnections, form several insulated spots, bordered with neat quays, and connected by handsome bridges. Liege, before the buildings joined, was divided into the Upper and Lower town. The town is compact, being, exclusive of the suburbs, only a mile in length, and three quarters of a mile in breadth. Some quarters of Liege have miserable streets, narrow, dirty, and thinly inhabited; others have broad streets, neat squares, quays, and promenades. In general, however, Liege is an ill built town, without that cleanliness and neatness which marks most towns of the Netherlands. The loftiness of the houses contributes not a little to their gloom. The public buildings are, the cathedral church of St Lambert, built in the 8th century, a Gothic edifice, but by no means of elegant architecture; the town-hall, a large but heavy building; the church of St Paul, the theatre, the arsenal, and the lyceum, or great provincial school. The fountains, particularly one near the centre of the great square, deserve the attention of the traveller. Liege is noted for its manufactures of arms, as well cannon as musquets; also of clock-work and nails. There are also manufactures of cloths, serge, black lace, earthenware, glass, vitriol, and verdigris. Population 50,000. 53 miles E. by S. Brussels.

LIEGNITZ, an extensive government of Prussian Silesia, occupying the part of that country which lies to the north of the governments of Breslau and Reichenbach. The principal rivers are the Oder, the Böber, the Neisse, the Queis, the Schwartzwasser, and the Katsbach. Population 500,000.

LIEGNITZ, the capital of the above principality, at the conflux of the Katsbach, the Schwartzwasser, and the Neisse. The chief objects of interest are the old palace of the princes, the castle, the council-house, an elegant building, the public school, the two Lutheran churches, the college formerly belonging to the Jesuits, the Catholic church of St John, and the superb chapel, where the dukes of Liegnitz and Brieg were buried. Here is also an academy, with five professors. It has a trade in woollens; also in madder. Population 10,000. 110 miles N. E. Prague.

LIERRE, a town of the Netherlands, province of Antwerp, at the junction of the two Nethe. It contains eight churches and an hospital. The manufactures of the place are cotton and woollen: there are also distilleries and breweries to a great extent. Population 10,500. 10 miles S. E. Antwerp.

LIFFEY, a river of Ireland, which runs into the bay of Dublin.

LIFFORD, a town of Ireland, county of Donegal, 11 miles S. S. W. Donegal.

LIFFRE, a town of France, department of the Ille and Vilaine. Population 2100.

LIGNIERE, a town of France, department of the Mayenne. Population 2700.

LIGNIERES, a town of France, department of the Cher. Population 2200.

LIGNY, a town of France, department of the Meuse. Population 2850.

LIGNY, a village of the Netherlands, province of Namur, the scene of an obstinate battle between the Prussians and French, on the 16th June 1815. 3 miles N. E. Fleurus.

LIGUEIL, a town of France, department of the Indre and Loire. Population 2000.

LILLERS, a town in French Flanders, 6 miles W. N. W. Bethune. Population 4100.

LILLO, a small fortress of the Netherlands, province of Antwerp, on the Scheldt. Pop. 1000. 9 miles N. W. Antwerp.

LIMA, a province of Peru, which contains several districts, and is bounded N. by Truxillo, E. by Tarma and Guancavelica, W. by the Pacific, and S. by Arequipa.

LIMA, a city of South America, and capital of the Kingdom of Peru, on the river Limac, over which is an elegant stone bridge, having at one end a gate, which forms the entrance into the city, and leads to the grand square. The form of this city is triangular, the base, or longest side, extending along the banks of the river. Its length is two-thirds of a league. It is surrounded with a brick wall, flanked with 34 bastions, having in its circumference seven gates and three posterns. The streets are broad, parallel, or at right angles, some running from north to south, and others from east to west, forming squares of houses, each 150 yards in front. They are well paved, and furnished with streams of water from the river, which are arched over, and rendered subservient to cleanliness and many other conveniences. The houses, though low, are generally commodious, and of a handsome appearance. They are constructed of wood, on account of the frequent earthquakes, but in such a manner as to resemble stone buildings. Most of the principal houses have gardens adjoining to them, refreshed with streams of water from the canals. The grand square in the middle of the city (of which each side is about 300 feet in length) is of great extent and beauty. In the centre is a large and magnificent fountain, ornamented by a bronze statue of Fame, from the trumpet of which, and the mouths of eight lions surrounding it, the water is ejected. The east side of the square is occupied by the cathedral and the archbishop's palace, both of which are lofty and magnificent buildings, partly constructed with stone. In the north side of the square is the viceroy's palace, containing the courts of justice and several public offices. On the west side is the town-house and city prison; and the south is occupied with private houses, which have fronts of stone, adorned with elegant porticos. The other principal buildings are the churches and chapels, which are partly built of stone, and decorated in the most splendid style, with paintings and ornaments of the greatest value. The convents also, which are extremely numerous, are generally large and commodious structures; and, by curious carved and painted wood work, are made to resemble the finest architecture. There are several literary colleges, and institutions for religious instruction; and more than twelve charitable foundations and hospitals for different objects.

The inhabitants of Lima consist of whites or Spaniards, negroes, Indians, Mestizos, and other castes proceeding from the mixture of the first three. The population was formerly estimated at 70,000, but is now supposed not to exceed 50,000. The temperature of Lima is perfectly agreeable. The thermometer, at noon, is never observed in winter to be under 60 degrees of Fahrenheit; and it seldom rises in summer above 85, though sometimes it rises to 96. As rain is seldom or never seen at Lima, so that place is also equally free from tempests. Thunder and lightning are not known. The want of rain is supplied by irrigation from the rivers. Lima is subject to the great calamity of earthquakes. It has been at various times nearly destroyed from this cause. The first convulsion, after the establishment of the Spaniards, happened in 1582. One of the most dreadful of these was that of the 29th of October 1687. During this concussion, the sea retired considerably from its bounds, and returning in mountainous waves, totally overwhelmed Callao, and the neighbouring parts, together with the miserable inhabitants. Others happened on the 20th of September 1697; on the 14th July 1699; the 6th of February 1716; on the 8th of January 1725; and on the 2d of December 1732; in the years 1690, 1734, and 1745. All these were less terrible than one on the 28th of October 1746. Lima, besides being the capital of Peru, was formerly the emporium of the kingdom. According to the account of Helms, however, its trade has fallen off; and this account is confirmed by the accounts of its exports and imports, from 1785 to 1789. In 1785 the exports amounted in value to 7,877,912 dollars; in 1789 they had declined to 2,972,575. The value of the imports of Lima from Spain, with duties and other expenses, was in 1785, 6,365,231 dollars; in 1789, 2,656,405. The European goods in greatest request in Lima, and generally in Peru, are silk, superfine cloth, lace, fine linen, and other articles of luxury and show. There is also a considerable demand for ordinary linen, and for the inferior sorts of cloths and woollens. Cutlery, and all instruments of iron, are also in great request. Lima is situated about 2 leagues from the sea-coast, and 30 from the Cordilleras. Long. 77. 7. 30. W. Lat. 12. 2. 34. S.

LIMBURG, a province of the Netherlands, in the south-east part of the kingdom, bounded by Prussia and the provinces of Liege, South Brabant, Antwerp, and North Brabant. Its territorial extent is 1800 square miles; its population 292,000.

LIMBURG, a town of the Netherlands, on the Weze. Population 3000.

LIMBURG ON THE LAHN, a town of Germany, 32 miles N. Mentz. Pop. 2700.

LIME, a river of England, in Dorsetshire, which falls into the sea at Lyme Regis.

LIMEHOUSE, a parish of England, county of Middlesex, 2 miles E. London. Pop. 9005.

LIMKHUWA, a village and seaport of Scotland, in Fifeshire, 3 miles S. Dunfermline.

LIMERICK, a county of Ireland, in the province of Munster, bounded N. by the river Shannon, which separates it from the county of Clare, S. by Cork, N. E. and E. by Tipperary, W. by Kerry. Its form is that of a parallelogram, 51 miles long and 32 broad. The surface of this county, though diversified by small hills, is not, generally speaking, mountainous, excepting on the south-east, where it is bounded by the Galtees, a ridge of lofty mountains which extend into Tipperary, and on the borders of Kerry, where the ground rises, and forms a grand and extensive range of low but steep mountains, which extend in a wide area from Log-hill to Dingle Colloher. The land throughout is generally fertile. The principal rivers are the Malin, the Feale, the Gale, and the Blackwater. The principal places in the county are Limerick the capital, Asketty, Kilmallock, Adair, and Castle Connel. The county sends two members to the imperial parliament. The climate is wet. Pop. 250,000, of whom by far the greater number are Catholics.

LIMERICK, the capital of the above county, on the Shannon, about 60 miles from its mouth. It is about three miles in circumference. In all the old parts of the town the streets are narrow and gloomy; but they have been augmented by the addition of several handsome streets and convenient quays, in which the houses are uniformly built, and are multiplying rapidly. The principal public buildings are the custom-house, the cathedral, and the bishop's palace. The cathedral is of great antiquity; and the bishop's palace is a comfortable modern house at the west end of the city. There are several charitable establishments, which are under good management; also a good public library and a theatre. It contains four Protestant churches, one for the Methodists, one for the Presbyterians, one for the Quakers, and eight chapels for the Roman Catholics. There is also an extensive barrack for 22 companies of foot and four troops of horse. Limerick carries on manufactures of linen, woollen, and paper. Vessels of 300 tons burden may discharge their cargoes at the custom-house. Limerick has always been deemed a place of importance. It was taken by the English in 1174. In 1651 it was taken by Ireton. In 1690, it was unsuccessfully besieged by King William in person. In 1691, it surrendered to General Ginkle, afterwards Earl of Athlone. Pop. from 50,000 to 60,000, in which are 5000 Protestants. 94 miles S.W. Dublin. Long. 8. 31. W. Lat. 52. 36. N.

LIMESTONE, a county of the United States, in Alabama, on the north side of Tennessee river. Chief town Cotton Port.—Also a river in Tennessee, the north-east branch of Nolachucky river.

LIMMAT, a large river of Switzerland, which rises in the Alps, and joins the Aar.

LIMNE, a township and parish of England, county of Chester. Population 2094.

LIMOGES, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne, on the Vienne. A number of its streets are crooked. The town is not, however, without handsome edifices, and several of its squares and fountains are greatly admired. The cathedral is said to have been built by the English. It carries on a brisk trade: its chief manufactures are of cambric, cotton and woollen cloths, porcelain, pottery, paper, &c. It is the birth-place of Marmontel. 110 miles N. E. Bourdeaux. Long. 1. 15. E. Lat. 45. 49. N.

LIMONE, a town of Piedmont. Pop. 3100.

LIMONARI, a town of Naples, province of Molise. Population 2400.

LIMONX, a town of France, department of the Aude, on the Aude. It has some trade in hardware and wine. Population 3200.

LINAIS, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne. Population 1500.

LINAN, a river of Wales, in Caernarvonshire, which runs into the Irish sea.

LINARES, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, 26 miles N. E. Jaen. Population 6650.

LINCHELES, two large adjoining villages of French Flanders. Houses 200-350.

LINCOLN, a maritime county of England, on the eastern coast. It lies between the estuaries of the Humber and the Wash, and is bounded E. by the German ocean, N. by the river Humber, which divides it from Yorkshire, W. by the counties of York, Nottingham, and Leicester, S. by the counties of Rutland, Northampton, and Cambridge. It lies between the parallels of 52. 40. and 53. 45. N. lat. and the meridians of 0. 21. E. and 0. 56. W. long., and extends in length from north to south about 77 miles; its extreme breadth is about 40, and its circumference 260. The principal towns are Lincoln, Boston, Grainsborough, Louth, Stamford, Spalding, Grantham, Grimsby, Barton, Horncastle, and Spilsby. The whole county contains 630 parishes, and sends 12 members to parliament, viz. Lincoln, Grimsby, Grantham, Stamford, and Boston, each returning two. Lincolnshire, though but little diversified in its aspect and surface, yet presents three great natural divisions, the Wolds and the Heaths, two long ridges of high land, and the Fens, an extensive tract of low land. The Wolds commence near Spilsby, and extend in a north-westerly direction, to Barton on the Humber. They are, on an average, nearly 8 miles in breadth. The Heaths, north and south of Lincoln, extending from the Humber to Grantham, were formerly barren, but are now chiefly inclosed and cultivated: they command many fine views of the low country. Throughout the whole of the eastern part of the county the land is uniformly low, marshy, and fenny. Along the foot of the Wolds this low land forms a district called the Marsh, a long and rather narrow strip, extending from Wainfleet on the Wash to the Humber. On the south of this the low land spreads out into a much wider space, and forms the district of the Fens, the northern termination of the great fenny district, which extends so widely over the counties of Norfolk, Cambridge, Bedford, and Huntingdon. The principal rivers are the Trent, Welland, Witham, Glen, and Ancholme. The county is also intersected by various canals, which give it the advantage of inland communication. The Fens of Lincolnshire, which were formerly inundated by the sea, form now, being protected by great embankments, one of the richest tracks in the kingdom. They are adapted to all the ordinary crops, especially oats, which are raised here in great quantities; but they are chiefly devoted to grazing. Many of the unimproved Fens are devoted to the breeding and rearing of geese, a highly valuable stock. Their quills and feathers are in great request; and immense quantities are sent to the London and other markets. Innumerable quantities of wild fowl are also caught in these fens by decoys. The district of the Marsh, which is chiefly applied to grazing, varies in breadth from 8 to 10 miles. The soil of the Wolds consists of sand and sandy loam, upon flinty loam, with a substratum of chalk. Besides the ordinary live stock, a great number of rabbits are bred in this district. The soil of the Heaths is in general a good sandy loam, on a bed of limestone. These high grounds, which were formerly open, wild, and heathy, are now mostly inclosed, and produce all the ordinary crops. The number of sheep in the county is immense. Lincolnshire has been long famous for its breed of horses. It has no manufactures of any consequence. Population 283,034.

LINCOLN, a city of England, the capital of Lincolnshire, on the Witham. It is a city of great antiquity, and is the see of a bishop. The town is ill built, and has greatly declined from its former splendour. It has lately, however, received great improvements, and contains some good modern houses. It consists chiefly of two long streets, with several smaller cross and parallel ones. It is divided into the Upper and Lower Town, and has two suburbs. Of the public buildings, by far the principal is the cathedral, or minster, an elegant specimen of Gothic architecture. The church extends in length 624 feet on the outside, and 462 within; 100 feet in width, and as much in height, to the vaulting of the nave; the great transept, 260 feet without, 222 within, and 66 in width. It has three lofty towers, one in the centre, the highest in the kingdom, and two at the western end, all highly decorated. The grand western front is the most distinguished for the beauty and magnificence of its architecture. This cathedral was first founded in 1086; it was rebuilt in 1263. Besides the cathedral, there was formerly a number of other parish churches in Lincoln, which are now reduced to 11. The other places of worship are chapels for Roman Catholics, Independent Baptists, Calvinists, and Methodists, and the other public buildings and institutions are the county jail, a new city jail, the county hospital, a national school on Bell's system, and several other schools; also an assembly-room, a theatre, and a handsome race-course. A grand military depot, or magazine of arms, has lately been finished. Few places in the kingdom afford so many remains of antiquity as Lincoln. The only manufacture is a small one of cumlets. It sends two members to parliament, the right of election being in the citizens and freemen, to the amount of 1100. Population 10,367. 120 miles N. by W. of London. Long. 0. 34. W. Lat. 53. 14. N.

LINCOLN, a county of Niagara district, Upper Canada, on Niagara river, at its mouth. —2d, Of the United States, in Maine, on both sides of the Kennebeck, at its mouth, bounded N. by Kennebeck county, E. by Hancock county, S. by the Atlantic, and W.

by Cumberland county. Population 42,992. Chief town Wiscasset.—3d, In the west part of North Carolina. Population 16,360. Slaves 2489. Chief town Lincoln.—4th, Of Georgia, on Savannah river. Population 4554. Slaves 2212. Chief town Lincoln.—5th, Of West Tennessee, on Elk river. Population 6104. Slaves 720. Chief town Fayetteville.—6th, Of Kentucky. Population 8676. Slaves 2341. Chief town Stanton.—7th, Of Missouri.

LINCOLN, a post town of the United States, and capital of Lincoln county, North Carolina, 41 miles from Charlotte.

LINCOLNVILLE, or DUCKTAP, a post township of the United States, in Hancock county, Maine, on the west side of Penobscot bay, 16 miles W. Castine. Pop. 1013.

LINDAU, a town of Bavaria, on the lake of Constance, 25 miles E. Constance.

LINDLEY, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 2040.

LINDY, a small river of Eastern Africa. It falls into the Indian sea, lat. 9. 58. S.

LING, a city of China, of the second rank, in Shancee. Long. 105. 30. E. Lat. 30. 10. N.

LINGA, two of the smaller Shetland isles.

LINGAN, a river of Ireland, which runs into the Suir.

LINGARTHA, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 800.

LINGEN, a town of Hanover, on the Elbe, 40 miles N. W. Munster.

LINGEN ISLE, an island in the Eastern seas, off the island of Sumatra.

LINGUA GIROSSA, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Demona, with 4000 inhabitants.

LINHARES, a town of Portugal, province of Tras os Montes. Population 1000.

LINKÖPING, a town of Sweden, and capital of a government of the same name on the Stoeng. Population 3000. 112 miles S.W. Stockholm.

LINLITHGOW, or WEST-LOTHIAN, a county of Scotland, bounded N. by the frith of Forth, E. by Mid-Lothian, S. by Mid-Lothian and Lanarkshire, and W. by the latter county and Stirling: It extends N. E. and S. W. 20 miles, and is from 10 to 13 broad. Its figure is an irregular triangle; and it contains within its area 112 square miles, equal to 71,500 acres, 68,000 of which are cultivated. The surface of this county is diversified by flat tracks and small hills. The soil is extremely diversified, all the different kinds abounding in the county. The richest carse clay, and some of the best loams, are found in it, as well as a large portion of gravel and sandy soil. Agriculture has made a great progress in this county, which is in general well cultivated and highly improved. The county contains abundance of useful minerals. Coal is found all over it; also limestone and marl. In the hills of Bathgate, lead mines were formerly wrought. Ironstone is found in various parts; and the county is well supplied with freestone. The chief rivers are the Almond, and the Avon, which forms the western boundary for 13 miles. Small streams, however, run in every direction. The chief articles of traffic are salt, lime, freestone, and coal. There are two royal burghs, viz. Linlithgow and Queensferry; also the town of Borrowstowness, Whitburn, Bathgate, and Kirkliston. The valued rent is L.75,018 Scots, and the real rent upwards of L.83,000 sterling. Population 22,605.

LINLITHGOW, an ancient royal burgh, and the county town of Linlithgowshire, 2 miles from the Avon. It consists of one street and several lanes. It contains the remains of ancient magnificence. At the north side of the town stands the royal palace; a large quadrangular building, with towers at each corner. At the north-west corner is the room in which Queen Mary was born, 8th December, 1542. This palace was burnt in 1746, by the royal army, on their march to the battle of Falkirk. It is now roofless; but, even in ruins, it exhibits a most majestic appearance. At the south-east corner of the palace, almost adjoining to it, is the church, a noble piece of Gothic architecture, 182 feet long, 100 broad, and 60 high, with a fine spire at the west end, ornamented with an imperial crown. The other public buildings are the town-house and prison. Linlithgow was constituted one of the principal burghs in the kingdom, in the reign of David I. This town has been the scene of many memorable transactions in the ancient history of Scotland. Linlithgow has the custody of the dry measures for Scotland. It has a weekly market, and six annual fairs. Population 3112. 16 miles W. Edinburgh.

LINNE, Loch, an arm of the sea, on the west coast of Scotland.

LINNECH, a town of the Prussian province of Cleves and Berg. Population 2100.

LIXON, a river of Wales, in Anglesey, which runs into the Alow.

LINTHWAIT, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 2127.

LINTON, a parish and village of Scotland, county of Peebles. Pop. of the parish, 1194.

LINTON, a market town and parish of England, county of Cambridge, on the Granton, on the side of the chalk hills which traverse this part of the country. It consists of several irregular streets and lanes. The church is a spacious building, with two aisles, a nave, chancel, and large tower. Population 1519. 10 miles S. E. Cambridge.

LINTON, a township of England, in Herefordshire. Population 565.

LINTZ, the capital of Upper Austria, at the influx of the Traun into the Danube. It is a well built town, on both sides of the Danube, communicating by a wooden bridge. The church of St. Ignatius is a large and fine building, as is the castle and meeting place of the estates. Here are two public schools, a good public library, an institute for the deaf and dumb, and a magnificent theatre. Here is a great woollen manufactory. The other manufactures are of gunpowder, leather, and looking-glasses. Population 17,000. 94 miles W. Vienna.

LINWOOD, a village of Scotland, in Renfrewshire, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. Paisley.

LIONI, a town of Naples, in the Principato Ultra. Population 4100.

LIONS, a town of France. Population 1850. 15 miles E. Rouen.

LIONS D'ANGERS, a town of France, department of Maine and Loire. Pop. 1800.

LIPARI ISLANDS, a group of islands in the Tuscan sea, belonging to Sicily, and situated between the north coast of that island and the Italian continent. They extend from 13. 15. to 15. 39. of E. long., and from 38. 20. to 38. 50. of N. lat. Four only are inhabited. Population 20,000.

LIPAUT, an island of the Tuscan sea, the largest of the group to which it gives name. Almost all parts of the island are in a high state of cultivation; and it produces large quantities of good wine. 20 miles from Melazzo, in Sicily. Population 15,000. Long. 15. 12. E. Lat. 38. 28. N.

LIPETZ, a town of European Russia, on the Woronez. It has some iron-works. Population 5650. 90 miles W. Tambov.

LIPNIZ, a town of Hungary, 47 miles W. N. W. Keamark. Population 3300.

LIPPA, a town of Hungary, 84 miles N. by E. Belgrade. Population 2500.

LIPPE, a tributary of the Rhine, in Westphalia.

LIPPESTADT, a town of Germany, 36 miles S. E. Munster. Population 3000.

LIRE, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire, on the Loire. Pop. 1600.

LIRIA, a considerable town of Spain, province of Valencia. It has manufactures of linen, soap, and earthenware; also brandy distilleries. The principal church is magnificent. Pop. 9000. 20 miles N. N. W. Valencia.

LISBON, the capital of Portugal, stands on the north bank of the Tagus, which here expands into a fine body of water, 9 miles in breadth. It is divided into three parts, called Alfama, Bairro Alto, and Melo; it has also three suburbs, Junqueira, Alcantara, and Campo Grande, to which may be added Belem, a pleasant town immediately adjoining Lisbon on the west. It is built along the river, in the form of a half moon, on three hills, the most westerly of which begins at a small river, flowing between the city and Belem. The second hill in Lisbon, reckoning from the west, is a continuation of the first, being separated from it only by a narrow valley. Here the streets are all crowded and narrow. The slope of the hill on the east side brings us to the centre of the city, where the earthquake caused a general overthrow; and where a number of good streets have since risen from the ruins. The ground is here level for a considerable extent. The city is here at its greatest breadth; and in this quarter are the principal squares, the public walks, and the best edifices. On the bank of the Tagus is a square, containing the exchange, the custom-house, and the India-house. In front it has the principal quays, which excel in beauty every thing of the kind in London or Paris. This square is 200 yards long and 180 broad, having in its centre a colossal statue of Joseph I. on horse-back. Three streets leading from it to the northward, join the Rocio, a square of much larger dimensions, being 600 yards in length, and nearly 600 in breadth. The third hill on which Lisbon stands begins with the eminence containing the small fort or castle, and extends, with some interruptions, to the eastern limits of the town. This quarter is very old, and consists of narrow, crowded, irregular, and ill paved streets. The castle occupies the highest ground in the whole city, but is of no importance in a military view. Lisbon contains 40 parish churches, 169 chapels, 75 convents or monasteries, and various hospitals. There are also 13 squares, great and small. The principal edifices are the patriarchal church, situated on an eminence at the north-east of the city; the royal monastery of Belem, built in 1500; the church of St Roque, belonging formerly to the Jesuits; and the building in the form of a cross, called the New Church, the largest structure erected in Lisbon since the earthquake. The royal hospital, and the palace of the inquisition, a large and elegant building, stand in the Rocio. Near that square is the public walk, an oblong garden laid out in alleys; and farther to the north, one of the two theatres of Lisbon, with the square for exhibiting bull fights. But of architectural curiosities, the greatest is the aqueduct, which, though not half a mile in length, passes in one part through a tunnel, in another across a defile. It is to the north of the city, and is partly of Roman, partly of Gothic architecture; the principal arch is Gothic, of the width of 107 feet, and is accounted one of the finest specimens of the kind in Europe. It is of such solidity, that at the great earthquake it withstood the shock, though the key-stone sunk several inches. Lisbon was nearly destroyed by the earthquake of 1755. Many years elapsed before it recovered from this calamity; and the traces of it are still visible in many parts. Of the public institutions of Lisbon, one of the principal is the academy of sciences, founded in 1770. A geographical academy was founded in 1799; the college of nobles, founded in 1701; the royal marine academy, in 1779; the Academia real das Guardas-Marinhas, in 1782; the royal academy of fortification, in 1799. Lisbon is the seat of the public offices, not only of the government, but of the church. It is well provided with public charities, and in particular with hospitals. Its commerce is very considerable, comprising all the colonial, and perhaps three-fourths of the foreign trade, of the kingdom at large. In 1807, Lisbon was occupied by a French army, and was afterwards the scene of important operations between the British and French armies, until the latter were finally driven from the Portuguese capital. Population 230,000. 313 miles W. by S. Madrid, and 9 E. of the mouth of the Tagus. Long. 9. 8. 25. W. Lat. 38. 42. 20. N.

LISBON, a post township of the United States, in Maine. Population 1614.

LISBURN, a populous town of Ireland, county of Antrim, on the Lagan. Its public buildings are a fine church, with a lofty steeple; a large market-house, an infirmary, a Catholic chapel, with several dissenting churches. The linen manufacture is carried on. It returns one member to the imperial parliament. 7 miles S. S. W. Belfast.

LISIAJKA, a town of European Russia, government of Kiev. Population 2750.

LISIEUX, a town of France, in Normandy, department of Calvados, on two small rivers, the Orbec and the Gassey. The only remarkable buildings are the ancient cathedral and the Episcopal palace. Here are some manufactures of cotton, linen, and flannel. Population 10,200. 30 miles E. Caen.

LISKEARD, an irregularly built market town and borough of England, county of Cornwall, one of the stamperies for the coinage of tin. The church consists of three spacious aisles. Besides the church, the town contains three meeting-houses for Quakers, Independents, and Methodists. It has a town-hall, a grammar school, and various other charity schools. The principal business consists in tanning, and in making boots and shoes. It sends two members to parliament. Population 2423. 17 miles S. W. Tavistock.

LILLE, or LILLE, a large and strong city of France, formerly the capital of French Flanders, and now of the department of the North, situated on the Deule, in a dead flat. The Deule is navigable, and is divided into several branches, part of which supply the moats or great ditches of the citadel and town. The form of Lille is that of an irregular oval: its length from north-west to south-east is nearly two miles; its breadth about three quarters; its circumference between four and five, exclusive of the earthen ramparts that surround the town, and which are in their turn surrounded by a moat. Lille presents an imposing appearance, from its extent, its fortifications, its canals, its squares, and its public buildings. Few cities of France can vie with it in the straightness and width of its streets, the regularity of its buildings, and its general air of neatness. There are several squares, of which the principal is the Place d'Armes. The Deule is crossed in the town by several bridges. Among the public buildings are several churches, particularly that of St Peter; the convents, several of which have survived the revolution: the hospitals, five in number, one very large; the barracks, the exchange, the corn-market, and the theatre. The most interesting institutions are the literary society, the college of surgery, the school of drawing and painting, the riding school, the public library, the gallery of pictures, and the botanic garden. Lille is a fortress of the first rank. Its citadel, the masterpiece of Vauban, is the first in Europe after that of Turin. It is a mile in circuit, and is surrounded by a double moat. The trade of Lille is extensive. Its manufactures are of camlets, serges, and other woollen stuffs; cotton, calico, linen, silk, velvet, lace, carpets, soap, starch, tobacco, leather, glass, and earthenware. The origin of this town is ascribed by tradition to Julius Cæsar. Louis XIV. took it from the Spaniards in 1667. It surrendered in 1700 to the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene. At the peace of Utrecht, it was restored to France. Pop. 61,500. 18 miles E. Tournay. Long. 3. 4. 31. E. Lat. 50. 37. 50. N.

LISTE, a town of France, department of Vaucluse, on the Sorgues. It has a traffic in silk, woollen stuffs, and leather. Population 5200. 12 miles E. Avignon.

LISMORE, one of the Western islands, on the coast of Scotland, in Argyleshire. Population 1630.

LISMORE, a town of Ireland, county of Waterford, on the Blackwater, over which is a stone bridge. It is the see of a bishop. It was formerly a considerable city, but is now a small mean place. Its castle, a magnificent pile, has been repaired. 26 miles N. E. Cork.

LISNA, a town of Prussian Poland, near the borders of Silesia. Here is a palace, a Catholic and a Lutheran church, two Calvinist churches, a gymnasium, and a synagogue. Population 7600. 44 miles S. S. W. Posen.

LISNA, a mountainous island in the gulf of Venice, near the coast of Austrian Dalmatia. It produces wine, olives, almonds, and figs.

LISNAU, a town of Bohemia, near the Elbe, 17 miles E. by N. Prague. Pop. 2100.

LISSE, a village of the Netherlands, 8 miles N. Leyden. Population 1100.

LITCHFIELD, a county of the United States, in Connecticut. Pop. 41,375.—2d, A post township of Lincoln county, Maine. Pop. 1848.—3d, Capital of Litchfield county, Connecticut. Pop. in 1810, 4639.—4th, Of Herkimer county, New York. Pop. 2533.

LITHUANIA, the former name of an extensive tract of country lying between Poland and Prussia, and now forming the three Russian governments of Wilna, Grodno, and Minsk. It is very flat, generally sandy, and intersected by vast marshes and bogs.

LITTAU, a town of Moravia, 8 miles N. N. E. Olmutz. Population 2200.

LITTERMORE, an island near the west coast of Ireland, and county of Galway.

LITTLE RIVER, in the United States, Kentucky, joins the Cumberland.—The name of several other small rivers.

LITTORALE, a district of Dalmatia, on the north coast, including the towns of Trieste, Fiume, Buccari, and Porto Re.

LIVADIA, an extensive province of European Turkey, bounded N. by Albania and Thessaly, by the isthmus of Corinth on the side of the Morea, and in other directions by the sea. Length 180 miles; mean breadth 40.

LIVADIA, the capital of the foregoing province. It has a decayed appearance. Its streets are narrow and ill paved, and its houses meanly built. Population 10,000. 50 miles N. W. Athens. Long. 23. 20. E. Lat. 38. 30. N.

LIVERPOOL, a town of England, in the county palatine of Lancaster, and one of the principal trading and seaport towns in the British dominions, on the Mersey. The town extends along the eastern bank of the river, about three miles, and, at an average, about a mile inland. On the west side of it, and forming a remarkable feature in the town, lie the docks, which, with the wharfs, warehouses, &c. extend in an immense range along the bank of the river. On the other side, the town is prolonged into numerous suburbs, consisting of villas and country houses, the residence or retreat of its wealthy citizens. The streets are mostly spacious, airy, some of them elegant, and the greater part of them lighted with gas from coal. The older and more confined parts of the town are in a state of improvement. The public buildings are formed in a style of costly elegance and splendour, suitable to the taste and opulence of its inhabitants. The principal of these are the town-hall, exchange buildings, corn exchange, lyceum, atheneum, Wellington-rooms, infirmary, work-house, blue coat school, dispensary, and asylum for the blind. There are at present erected 20 churches belonging to the establishment, many of them of much architectural beauty; a greater number of chapels belonging to various denominations of dissenters; with 4 Roman Catholic chapels, a meeting-house for Quakers, and a Jews' synagogue. The charitable institutions are numerous and well conducted. About 1500 patients are admitted annually into the infirmary. The blue coat hospital maintains and educates about 200 boys and girls. The school for the blind is on a most extensive scale. In addition to the above may be enumerated, the dispensary for dispensing medicines to the sick poor; an hospital for decayed women, and their widows and children; a fever hospital; the ladies charity for the relief of poor married women in child-bed; a penitentiary for unfortunate women; the strangers friend society; the Welch charitable society; the benevolent society of St Patrick; the female school of industry; a society for the relief and redress of debtors in the poor's jail; numerous friendly societies; an auxiliary bible society, and seaman's bible society; and one for propagating Christian knowledge; a savings bank; a considerable number of free charity schools for youth of both sexes; and several Sunday schools. A handsome and spacious theatre, and a circus, are open during great part of the year. The institutions established for literary and scientific pursuits are, the royal Liverpool institution, where public lectures are given. To the institution is attached a philosophical apparatus and a museum of natural curiosities. A botanic garden was also established in 1801, at an expence of about 1.10,000. The lyceum is a large and handsome stone building. It contains a news-room and library. The atheneum also consists of a news-room and library. The Union news-room is a handsome stone building, and used for the like purposes with the two last mentioned structures. The music-hall is a large building, opened 12th June 1786, and is well adapted for concerts. The Wellington-rooms were opened in 1810, for balls, concerts, &c. The town-hall was built about the year 1750. In 1796 it was nearly destroyed by fire, but has been since repaired. Adjoining are the exchange buildings, erected in 1803, for commercial purposes. The area or space inclosed by the fronts of these buildings and the town-hall, is 197 feet by 178, containing upwards of 35,000 square feet. In the centre of the area is erected a superb group of bronze statuary, supposed to be the largest in the kingdom, to commemorate the death of Lord Nelson. In the east wing is a news and coffee-room, 94 feet by 32; and above this, one of 72 feet by 36, appropriated to the underwriters. The custom-house is a plain building. The corn exchange is spacious, fronted with stone. The borough jail is built on a plan furnished by the celebrated Mr Howard. At Kirkdale, in the neighbourhood of the town, another prison is erected.

The trade of Liverpool is most extensive. The first and most important branch is the trade with Ireland, from whence is imported from 2300 to 2500 cargoes of provisions, grain, &c.; and in return are trans-shipped salt, coals, earthenware, &c. The second branch of commerce is that with the United States of America, which consists of more than three-fourths of the whole commerce of this kingdom with that rising empire. Of this commerce, cotton wool forms the chief article, which may be termed the staple trade of Liverpool. The West India trade may be considered next in importance. The trade of Liverpool to other parts of the globe is very great, and rapidly increasing. Since the trade has been opened, several vessels have been fitted out to the East Indies, to which the trade is daily increasing. Liverpool has an extended system of canal navigation which has grown up with its increasing trade. Great advantages are derived to its commerce from the construction and arrangements of the docks. The area of these docks and basins, when complete, is 77 acres, 2 roods, 27 poles. Extreme length of the quay room, 5 miles, 901 yards. The dock dues paid in 1813 amounted to L.50,177. 13s. 2d.; in 1819, to 1.110,427. 1s. 8d. The manufactures of Liverpool are chiefly those connected with shipping, or the consumption of the inhabitants. There are extensive iron and brass foundries, breweries, soap-works, and sugar-houses. In the vicinity are many wind-mills for grinding corn, which have a very striking appearance; also a large tide-mill, and another worked by steam. An immense number of hands are employed in building, repairing, and fitting out vessels. Of the finer manufactures, the watch movement and tool business is carried on extensively, being almost entirely confined to this part of the kingdom; and in the neighbourhood is a china manufactory, where beautiful specimens of porcelain are produced. Liverpool sends two members to parliament. It is governed by the corporation, consisting of a common council of 41 persons, from among whom a mayor and two bailiffs are annually chosen by the free burgesses. The following is an account of the progressive increase of its population:—In 1700, 5000; in 1730, 12,000; in 1760, 26,000; in 1773, 34,407; in 1790, 56,000; in 1797, 60,000; in 1801, 77,653; in 1811, 94,376; in 1821, 118,972. The markets of Liverpool are amply supplied both with necessaries and luxuries. Market days Wednesday and Saturday. Two companies, established by act of parliament, supply the town and shipping with excellent water. 17 miles N. Chester, 37 W. Manchester, 206 N.W. London. Long. 2. 59. W. Lat. 53. 25. N.

LIVERPOOL, a village of the United States, in Onondaga county, New York.

LIVERPOOL, a town of North America, bay of Fundy, Queen's county, Nova Scotia.

LIVERSEDGE, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 4250.

LIVERLY, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1064.

LIVET, a small river of Scotland, in Banffshire, tributary to the Avon.

LIVINGSTON, a county of the United States, in Kentucky, on the Ohio. Population 3474. Slaves 718.—2d. A post township of Columbia county, New York. Pop. 1651.

LIVINGSTON'S CREEK, a river of North Carolina, which runs into Cape Fear river.

LIVNI, a town of European Russia, government of Orel, on the Sosva. Pop. 5600.

LIVONIA, a maritime province of European Russia, bounded N. by Esthonia, S. by Courland. It is of great extent. It consists of a vast tract of level country, interspersed with numerous marshes and lakes. Area 21,000 square miles. Population 600,000.

LIVORNO, a town of the Sardinian states, in Piedmont, on the Po. Population 3000.

LIVRADE, 87, a town of France, on the river Lot. Population 2630.

LIVRON, a town of France, near the Drome, 10 miles S. Valence. Population 2100.

LIXIA, a town of the Ionian island of Cephalonia, with 6000 inhabitants.

LIZARD ISLAND, in the South Pacific ocean, 240 miles in circumference. 20 miles N. E. Cape Flattery.

LIZARD POINT, in Cornwall, the most southern promontory of England, 282 miles

S.W. London. Long. 5. 11. 17. W. Lat. 49. 57. 55. N.

LLANBADARN FAWR, an ancient market town and parish of Wales, in Cardiganshire. Population of the parish 8455.

LLANBEDER, or LLANPETER, a market and borough town of Wales, in Cardiganshire, on the Teify. It joins with Cardigan in sending a member to parliament. Population 932.

LLANDEILO FAWR, an irregularly built market town of South Wales, in Caermarthenshire, on the Towy, which is crossed here by a stone bridge. Here is a considerable manufacture of flannel. Population 1019. 13 miles E. Caermarthen.

LLANDEVERTY, a well built market town and parish of South Wales, in Caermarthenshire, on the Towy. There are still some remains of its castle. Population 1292. 20 miles W. by N. Brecon.

LLANDRINDOD, a village of Wales, in Radnorshire, 7 miles N. Builth.

LLANELLY, an irregularly built town of Wales, in Caermarthenshire, at the mouth of the Bury river. It depends chiefly on the coal and iron in the neighbourhood, which have given rise to extensive manufactures. The church has two steeples, the one terminated by an embattled parapet, the other by a spire. Population 5904. 16 miles S. E. Caermarthen.

LLANERCHYMEDD, a considerable market town of Wales, in the island of Anglesey, noted for its market. Population not returned. 11 miles E. Holyhead.

LLANFAIR, a neat market town of Wales, in Montgomeryshire, near the river Virnwy. 14 miles N. Newton.

LLANFFYLLIS, a market town of Wales, in Montgomeryshire. Population 1706. 21 miles W. Shrewsbury.

LLANGADDOCK, a tolerably well built market town and parish of Wales, in Caermarthenshire, between the rivers Branc and Sawthy. Coarse woollens and stockings are manufactured here. Population 2484. 22 miles from Brecon.

LLANGOLLEN, a market town of Wales, in Denbighshire, on the Dee, over which is a bridge. It is a mean looking town, with a few narrow streets. Population 3535. 12 miles N. W. Oswestry.

LLANIDLOES, a market town of Wales, in Montgomeryshire, on the Severn. The church is noted for its roof of curiously carved oak. It has a brisk trade in flannels; also several manufactories for spinning and carding wool. Population 1884. 13 miles S. W. Newton.

LLANOS, SAN JUAN DE LOS, the most easterly province of the kingdom of New Granada. The capital is of the same name, and is now much decayed. 50 miles E. S. E. Santa Fe de Bogota.

LLANRWST, an irregularly built market town of North Wales, in Denbighshire, on the Conway. It has a church, and an elegant chapel designed by Inigo Jones. In the vicinity the scenery is beautiful. Population 2639. 12 miles S. Aberconway.

LLANTRISSENT, an ill built borough and market town of Wales, in Glamorganshire, finely situated on the brow of a lofty hill. The town-hall and market-place are neat modern buildings. The church is a large Norman building. The remains of the castle are inconsiderable. It joins in returning the member of parliament for Cardiff. Population 2585. 11 miles N. W. Cardiff.

LLANVILLING, a parish and very neat market town of Wales, in Montgomeryshire. Population 1700.

LLANVYNNETH, a small village of Wales, in Merionethshire, $\frac{3}{4}$ miles from Welch Pool.

LLENNING, a river of Wales, in Montgomeryshire, which runs into the Severn.

LLEWICH, a river of England, in Salop, which falls into the Teme at Great Chapel.

LLEGOV, a river of Wales, in Caernarvonshire, which runs into the Conway.

LLENONY, a river of Wales, in Caernarvonshire, which runs into the Irish sea.

LLENNIA, an ancient town of Spanish Estremadura, 63 miles N. Neville. Pop. 7300.

LLECHRY, a river of Wales, in Breconshire, which falls into the Wye.

LLEYNORVLL, a river of Wales, in Merionethshire. It runs into the Irish sea.

LLOUREGAT, two rivers of Spain, in Catalonia, which fall into the Mediterranean.

LLOYD, a river of Wales, in Montgomeryshire, which runs into the Severn.

LUCH MAYOR, a town of Majore, 15 miles E. S. E. Palma. Population 5250.

LUU, two rivers of Wales, in Merionethshire and Caernarvonshire.

LLEWON, a borough and parish of Wales, in Glamorganshire. Population 427.

LLYMAN, a river of Wales, in Caernarvonshire, which runs into the Irish sea.

Lo, St., a town of France, in Lower Normandy, on the Vire. The public buildings are four churches, two hospitals, and several convents. Its manufactures are serges, stockings, and ribbons. Population 7300. 35 miles W. S. W. Caen.

Loango, the capital of the Portuguese settlements, in Angola, in Southern Africa. It was founded in the year 1578. It covers a great extent of ground, but is neither walled nor fortified. White population 3000; the number of negroes is much greater. Long. 13. 22. E. Lat. 8. 55. S.—Also the name of an island opposite.

Loango, a considerable country of Western Africa, to the north of the Zaire or Congo. Its limits are somewhat vague. It is supposed to extend from Cape St Catherine to the Zaire, a coast of upwards of 400 miles; but Loango proper occupies only the centre of this space, excluding Mayomba on one side, and Malemba on the other.

Loam, City of, capital of the kingdom of Loam; about four miles in circuit. Pop. 15,000. Long. 12. 30. E. Lat. 4. 40. N.

Loano, a town of the Genoese territory, on the gulf of Genoa, 35 miles S. W. Genoa. Population 3500.

LOBAU, a town of Upper Lusatia. Population 2400. 13 miles S. E. Bautzen.

LOBITZ, an island in the Danube, a few miles below Vienna, where the French passed that river, to fight the memorable battle of Aspern, in 1809.

LOBEON, a town of Saxony, 29 miles N. by W. Leipzig. Population 1800.

LOBENSTEIN, a town of Upper Saxony, on the Leinitz. Population 2700.

LOBOS, one of the smaller Canary islands.

LOBOS, a small island at the mouth of the La Plata, 15 miles S. W. Cape St Maria.

LOBOS, islands in the Pacific ocean, near the coast of Peru. Lat. 6. 25. and 6. 45. S.

LOBSENS, a town of West Prussia, on the Lobzanka. Population 2000.

LOCANA, a town of Piedmont, on the Orco. Population 5000.

LOCARNO, capital of the Swiss canton of the Ticino, near Lake Maggiore. Pop. 1500.

LOCHABER, a district of Scotland, in Inverness-shire.

LOCHAR WATER, a river of Scotland, in Dumfries-shire. It falls into the Solway frith.

LOCHAY, a river of Scotland, in Perthshire, which joins its waters to the Dochart.

LOCHEN, a town of the Netherlands, in Gelderland, on the Borkel. Pop. 1400.

LOCHES, a town of France, department of the Indre and Loire. It has manufactures of woollens. Population 4500.

LOCHGELLIE, a village of Scotland, in Fifeshire, 8 miles N. W. Kirkcaldy.

LOCHMABEN, a parish and royal burgh of Scotland, in Dumfries-shire, of great antiquity, but now much decayed. Pop. 2654.

LOCHTA, a town of Sweden, with a good harbour, on the gulf of Bothnia.

LOCHTY, a small river of Scotland, in Fifeshire, which falls into the Orr.

LOCHVITZA, a town of European Russia, government of Poltava. Population 4500.

LOCHWINNOCH, a parish and village of Scotland, in Renfrewshire. Pop. 4130.

LOCHY, a river of Scotland, in Perthshire, which falls into Loch Tay.—Also one in Inverness-shire. It falls into the sea near Fort William.

LOCKERBIE, a town of Scotland, in Dumfries-shire, 12 miles N. E. Dumfries.

LOCKWOOD, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1881.

LOCMARIAQUEH, a town of France, department of the Morbihan. Population 2000.

LOCMINE, a town of France, department of the Morbihan. Population 1800.

LOCUST CREEK, a river of Kentucky, which runs into the Ohio.—2d, A river of Kentucky, which runs into the Licking.

LODDER, a river of England, in Berks and Hampshire, which joins the Thames.

LODDEN, a river of England, in Herefordshire, which falls into the Frome.

LODEVE, a town of France, department of the Herault, on the Lergues. Its streets are narrow and ill built. It has manufactures of cloth, silk stuffs, hats, &c. Population 8000. 29 miles W. Montpellier.

LODI, a large and well built town of Austrian Italy, on the Adda, over which is a wooden bridge of 600 feet in length. Its cathedral and numerous convents claim the attention of the traveller. The most remarkable of its churches is one painted partly in fresco, and partly in oil, by Callisto, a scholar of Titian. It has manufactures both of silk and porcelain. In 1796 the bridge of Lodi was forced by Bonaparte, in a most daring manner, with the bayonet. Population 12,500. 16 miles N. E. Pavia.

LOE, a river of England, in Cornwall, which runs into the English channel.

LOEVESTEIN, a fortress of the Netherlands, 18 miles E. S. E. Rotterdam.

LOFODEN, a group of islands on the west coast of Norway, lying between 67. 30. and 68. 45. of N. lat. Pop. between 3000 and 4000.

LORSTA, a town of Sweden, province of Upland. Population 2000.

LOCHAN, a river of Scotland, in Lanarkshire, which joins the Nethan.

LOKAN, a county of the United States, in the south-west part of Kentucky. Population 12,123. Slaves 2486. Chief town Russellville.—2d, In Ohio. Chief town Belville.

LOURON, a town of Spain, province of Burgos, on the Ebro. Population 7000. 27 miles N. W. Calahorra.

LOHEIA, a considerable city of Yemen, in Arabia, on the coast of the Red sea. It consists chiefly of mud huts. A considerable trade is carried on in coffee. The water at Loheia is bad, and the surrounding country sandy and barren. Long. 42. 44. E. Lat. 15. 44. N.

LOHN, a town of Franconia, on the Maine. Pop. 3000. 35 miles E. S. E. Frankfort.

LOCH, a river of Scotland, in Ross-shire, which discharges itself into Loch Long.

LOING, a river of France, which falls into the Seine between Melun and Montereau.

LOIR and CHER, a department of France, including the southern portion of the province of Orlennois. Its superficial extent is 2600 square miles. The principal rivers are the Loire, the Loir, the Cher, the Cosson, and the Beuvron. Population 212,000.

LOIRE, I. A., a river of France, which rises in the mountains of the Cevennes, and falls into the Atlantic, about 40 miles below Nantes.

LOIRE, a department of France, adjoining the departments of the Rhone and the Isere. Area 2000 square miles. Population 316,000.

LOIRE, HAUTE or UPPER, a department in the south-east of France, situated to the south of the preceding, and adjoining the departments of the Puy de Dome, the Ardeche, and the Lozere. Area 1870 square miles. Population 268,000.

LOIRE, INFERIEURE or LOWER, a department in the west of France, formed of the south-east portion of the ancient province of Brittany, and bounded by the Atlantic and the departments of the Ille and Vilaine, Maine and Loire, Vendee, and Morbihan. Area 3000 square miles. Pop. 408,000.

LOIRE, a town of France, department of the Rhone. Population 1500.

LOIRET, a department in the central part of France, comprising a portion of the cis-durant Orlennois and the Gatinois, and bounded by the departments of the Seine and Oise, the Seine and Marne, the Yonne, the Cher, the Loir and Cher, and the Eure and Loir. Area 2700 square miles. Population 286,000.

LOKEREN, a town of the Netherlands, in East Flanders, on the Dender. It has manufactures of woollens and cotton, and trades in corn, flax, and linen. It has likewise extensive tobacco works, and 15 oil mills. Population 12,800. 12 miles N. E. Ghent.

LOMBARDO-VENETIAN KINGDOM, the name given, since the congress of Vienna in 1815, to the whole of Austrian Italy, comprising both Lombardy and the former Venetian territory. See Italy, Italy Austrian, Milan, and Venice.

LOMBARDY, a country of Northern or Upper Italy. The name, though properly applicable only to the Vale of the Po, is commonly given to the whole tract of country between the frontiers of Switzerland and Tuscany. It is about 250 miles in length, and 150 at its greatest breadth. The states of which Lombardy at present consists are Austrian Italy, Continental Sardinia, Parma, Modena, and Lucca. See Italy Austrian.

LOUNOEK, an island in the Eastern seas, about 53 miles in length, and 45 in average breadth. It is separated from the island of Bally, by the straits of Lounhoek, and from Sumbawa by the straits of Allas.

LOMMER, a village of the Netherlands, in North Brabant, with 2100 inhabitants.

LOMOND, LOCH, a lake of Scotland, in Dumbartonshire, about 30 miles long, and 8 or 9 broad, remarkable for the picturesque scenery on its shores.

LONADO, or LONATO, a town of Austrian Italy, in the Milanese. Population 4000.

LONDERZEEL, a town of South Brabant, near Brussels. Population 3200.

LONDON, the capital of England, and metropolis of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. The popular and most usual acceptance of the word London comprises the ancient city of that name, the city of Westminster, the borough of Southwark, and their respective suburbs. The cities of London and Westminster are situated in the county of Middlesex, and hundred of Osulston, on the northern bank of the river Thames; and the borough of Southwark is on the opposite or southern bank, in the county of Surrey, and hundred of Brixton. To each of these principal divisions of London, many neighbouring villages have been successively annexed, by the increase of buildings on the intervening ground; and the whole is thus united into one immense assemblage of human habitations. Some of these suburbs are situated in Essex, and others in Kent. The opposite banks, on which this metropolis stands, are connected by London, Southwark, Blackfriars, the Waterloo, Westminster, and Vauxhall bridges. From Hyde Park corner to Poplar, London is nearly 7 miles in length; its breadth varies considerably, but it is nearly 5 miles from Newington Butts to Islington. The circumference of the whole cannot be less than 30 miles. The included area is 11,520 square acres, of which the river occupies 1120, leaving 10,400 square acres as the space occupied by the buildings and streets.

There is very strong reason to believe that London was the Civitas Trinobantum of Cæsar. In 610, a church was erected on the site of the present cathedral of St Paul's, and a witenagemote was held here in 833. It was afterwards constituted, by Alfred, the capital of England. In 925, King Athelstan had a palace here. The city increased in importance during the succeeding reigns. The White tower, in the tower of London, was erected by William I. in 1078. William Rufus, in 1097, founded Westminster hall. In 1255, a conduit in Cheapside was supplied with water by leaden pipes. In 1340, tolls were imposed, for paving the streets in and near the city. The streets were first lighted with lanterns in 1416. The supply of water being found insufficient, in 1443 pipes were laid from Paddington. A statute was passed in 1542, for paving some of the streets; and it appears that the Strand was then only partly built. So rapid was the increase of London, that Queen Elizabeth and King James issued each proclamations against any farther increase of the city. About 1661, a great many streets in St James's parish were built, or finished, particularly St James's-street, Pall-Mall, and Piccadilly: other streets were ordered to be widened. In 1665, London was almost desolated by the great plague which took place at that time; and in 1666, a dreadful conflagration broke out, which destroyed 13,000 houses, and most of the churches and corporation halls. In rebuilding the city, many important improvements were effected, by the widening of the streets, and by building the houses of more substantial materials. In the course of the 17th century, London continued to increase with great rapidity. In 1678, there were no buildings on the sites where Wellclose-square, the west end of Ratcliffe-highway, Virginia-street, and all the streets on the side of Ratcliffe-highway, to Gravel-lane, and thence to Limehouse, now stand. In 1685, Spitalfields and St Giles's were much increased by the French Protestant manufacturers, who left their native country, in consequence of the revocation of the edict of Nantz. In 1689, the district called the Seven-dials was built. The suburbs to the east of the tower were also greatly extended. Soho-square was built at the close of that century. In a few years afterwards, Hanover-square, Cavendish-square, and the streets adjacent, Bedford-row, Red Lion-square, Hatton-garden, &c. were built. The streets from Leicester-square to St Martin's-lane north, and to the Haymarket and Soho west, and thence nearly to Knights-bridge, were finished in the reign of George I. or early in the reign of George II. In 1730, two new parishes were formed, St George, Bloomsbury, and St Anne, Limehouse; and about the same time, the north side of Oxford-street was partly built; and many streets near it were completed.

The extension of the metropolis since the middle of the last century, has proceeded with unprecedented rapidity, and covered the fields, gardens, and marshes in the vicinity of London, with new squares and streets. For some years after 1810, the progress of building appeared to be checked. But latterly, the metropolis has again greatly increased, particularly on the north side. The direction of the main streets of London accompany the course of the river Thames from east to west; and the cross streets run mostly in a transverse direction from north to south. There are two chief lines of streets from west to east: one, which may be called the northern line, commences at the north side of Hyde Park, and under the successive names of Oxford-street, St Giles's, Holborn, Skinner-street, Newgate-street, Cheapside, Cornhill, and Lendenhall-street, is continued to White-chapel and Mile End, on the Essex road. The southern line commences at the south side of Hyde Park, and consists of Piccadilly, St James's-street, Pall Mall, Charing Cross, the Strand, Fleet-street, Ludgate-hill, St Paul's church-yard, Watling-street, Cannon-street, and Tower-street; whence, crossing Tower-hill, it may be said to be further extended two miles along the river side, in Wapping. The subterranean works, which have been constructed for the accommodation of the inhabitants of London, consisting of sewers, drains, water-pipes, and gas-pipes, are most extensive and curious. The houses are mostly built of brick of a pale colour. The principal squares are Grosvenor, Portman, Berkeley, St James's, Hanover, Manchester, Cavendish, Bedford, Russel, Bloomsbury, Montague, Bryanston, and Finsbury squares, and Lincoln's Inn Fields. The principal public buildings in the city, and in the eastern part of the town, are the tower; the new mint; the trinity-house; the bank; the munition-house; the royal exchange; the East India-house; the auction mart; the commercial mart; the London institution; the custom-house; the excise-office; guildhall; the bridges of London, Southwark, and Blackfriars; the monument; the post-office, Newgate; Giltspur-street compter; Whitecross-street prison; St Luke's hospital; the churches of St Paul, St Stephen's, Walbrook, St Mary-le-bone, and St Bride's, Fleet-street,

William the Conqueror, in 1066, erected a tower or fortress here, for the purpose of intimidating the citizens. The other buildings and fortifications have been erected at different periods. The whole is surrounded by a ditch, and divided from the river by a wharf, on which is a platform, mounted with 61 pieces of cannon. The tower was inhabited as a palace by several English sovereigns, till the reign of Queen Elizabeth; since which period it has been chiefly used as a state prison and depository for arms, records, and property belonging to the crown. It contains the ordnance-office, the record-office, the jewel-office, the horse armory, the Spanish armory, the grand store-house, the small armory, barracks for the garrison, &c. The trinity-house, a naval establishment, is a very handsome building on the north side of Great Tower-hill. The first building for a Bank of England was raised in 1733, from the design of George Sampson, and originally comprised only what now forms the centre, with the court-yard hall, and bullion court. An eastern wing was added, between 1770 and 1776, by Sir Robert Taylor; and a western wing, with the northern front, were begun in 1789, and finished in 1804, by Mr Soane. In the design and decorations, Mr Soane has displayed great taste and architectural skill. The East India house is situated on the south side of Leadenhall-street, and comprises the principal offices of the East India company. The front displays grandeur and simplicity. The royal exchange was erected in 1667, on the site of a former exchange, built by Sir Thomas Gresham in 1566, which was destroyed by the great fire. The auction-mart in Bartholomew-lane, established for sales of property by auction, is a neat structure. The London institution, a literary establishment, situated on the north side of Moorfields, is a noble building. The custom-house, situated on the south side of Lower Thames-street, on the banks of the river, has an exterior, grand as a whole, and simple in parts. This immense building contains 120 rooms, besides cellars. The excise-office in Old Broad-street, is a plain but extensive and appropriate stone building. The guild-hall of the city is appropriated to the chief public offices of the corporation of London. A noble pillar, 202 feet high, called the London Monument, stands on the east side of Fish-street hill. It was erected by Sir Christopher Wren, to commemorate the great fire of 1666. St. Luke's hospital, for lunatics, situated in Old-street, is a spacious, neat, plain building, well adapted to the objects of the charity. The cathedral church of St. Paul holds the most distinguished rank among the modern works of architecture in the British empire. The first stone was laid June 21st 1675; and the last in 1710; the work being completed in 26 years by one architect, Sir Christopher Wren. The plan is a Latin cross, with an additional arm or transept at the west end, and a semicircular projection at the east end, for the altar: a dome rises from the intersection of the nave and transept, and is terminated by a lantern, surmounted by a ball and a cross, of copper gilt. The dimensions of this vast fabric are as follow: height from the ground without, to the top of the cross, 340 feet; extreme length within, 600 feet; greatest breadth, 223 feet. The entire ascent to the ball is by 616 steps. This cathedral contains monuments erected to the memory of many eminent persons deceased. The church of St. Stephen Walbrook, also built by Sir Christopher Wren, is justly esteemed for its beauty of design and architectural decoration. The other churches in the city are mostly plain, and of ordinary architecture. But the confined situations in which they stand are still more unfavourable than their plainness, to the architectural decoration of London. The inns of court are the Inner and Middle Temple, Lincoln's inn, and Gray's inn. Each of these is composed of several large houses, surrounding squares, and which are divided into numerous sets of chambers, inhabited by barristers, students, attorneys, and solicitors. The principal public buildings west of the city, exclusive of the royal palaces and houses of the nobility, are Westminster abbey; Westminster hall, the seat of the king's courts of record, viz. the courts of chancery, exchequer, king's bench, and common pleas; the house of lords, and house of commons; the horse guards, or war-office; the admiralty; the treasury; the secretary of state's offices; the office of the board of control for India affairs; Somerset-house, a grand and extensive stone building in the Strand, appropriated to various public uses and offices; the penitentiary-house, Millbank; the court of insolvent debtors; the several parish churches of Westminster; the king's theatre, or opera-house; the theatres of Covent-garden, Drury-lane, the Hay-market, the English opera-house, the olympic and sans-pareil theatres; all of which will be noticed in the article Westminster. The British museum is a noble house, formerly belonging to the Duke of Montague, in Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury. The most remarkable churches in this direction are those of St. George, Hanover-square, and St. Mary-le-bone. Southwark contains the county jail for Surrey, Guy's hospital, St. Thomas's hospital, the Magdalen hospital in Horsemonger-lane, and the New Bethlem hospital for lunatics, erected in St. George's Fields about six years ago, on the demolition of the old hospital in Moorfields.

The bridges which unite the divisions of the metropolis built on the opposite banks of the Thames, are London bridge, till the middle of the 18th century the only bridge connecting the Middlesex and Surrey banks. It was first built of stone in 1200, an old wooden bridge having been burnt. It is an extremely clumsy fabric; the narrowness of its arches still obstructing and endangering the navigation, while their unequal sizes offend the eye. Through this clumsy fabric, the current, dammed up, rushes with great velocity. This bridge is 915 feet long, and 45 broad; it contains 19 arches, some of which are only eight feet wide. Westminster bridge was commenced in 1738, and finished in 11 years and 9 months, at an expense of nearly £400,000. It connects Lambeth with Westminster, near Westminster-hall. Its length is 1238 feet, and its width 44 feet. It has 13 large and two small semicircular arches, and 14 piers. The middle arch is 70 feet wide. Blackfriars bridge was commenced in 1761, and finished in 1769. It cost £150,840. Its length is 1100 feet, and breadth 42 feet. It has nine elliptical arches. The Strand, or Waterloo bridge, is one of the noblest structures of the kind in the world. It was begun in the year 1811, and opened in 1817, on the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo. This bridge crosses the Thames, from a place near the Savoy, in the Strand, to Lambeth marsh. It consists of nine equal arches, each of 120 feet span: the piers are 20 feet thick, and adorned with Tuscan columns; the width within the parapets is 42 feet. It cost the subscribers upwards of £1,000,000, which was raised by subscription. The Southwark bridge, opened in May 1819, unites Bankside, Southwark, with Queen-street, Cheap-side, and consists of three arches, of which the centre is 210 feet span, and each of the side ones 210 feet. The Vauxhall bridge crosses the Thames from Millbank to Vauxhall, and contains nine arches, of 78 feet span each.

Population of London at different periods.

	1700.	1750.	1801.	1811.	1821.
London within the walls	128,500	87,000	54,000	57,700	58,400
Without the walls	19,000	57,200	56,200	68,000	72,000
Westminster	150,100	152,000	152,000	165,600	169,100
but parishes within the bills of mortality	186,500	157,600	157,700	203,700	230,700
Parishes not within the bills of mortality	9,100	24,300	125,000	162,000	271,300
Total	377,600	228,500	337,200	429,300	560,400

It is calculated that London contains 123 churches of the established religion, or church of England; 120 chapels of ease, in parishes where the population is too great for their respective churches; 30 churches and chapels belonging to foreign Christians; six synagogues of the Jews; and about 200 meeting-houses of the different denominations of English Protestant dissenters and English Roman Catholics. The public charities of London (exclusive of parochial establishments), are numerous, and apply to every case of infirmity or distress. Among these are, St Bartholomew's and St Thomas's hospitals, bridewell hospital, and Christ's hospital. St Bartholomew's (in Smithfield), and St Thomas's (in Southwark), were appropriated to relieve the diseased; bridewell (near Fleet-street), to maintain and correct the idle; and Christ's hospital, to maintain and educate the young and helpless. The other hospitals in London are, Bethlem hospital, founded by King Henry VIII. for lunatics; the charter-house, near Smithfield, founded in 1611; Guy's hospital, built by Thomas Guy, bookseller of London, in 1701, and endowed by him with £240,000 at his death; St Luke's hospital, established in 1751; the foundling hospital, in Guilford-street, founded in 1739; St George's hospital, near Hyde Park corner; the London hospital, White-chapel; the Middlesex hospital, Berners-street; the Westminster hospital, Petty France; the Lock hospital, Grosvenor-place; the small-pox hospital, Battle-bridge; Bethsholm, Mile-end, an hospital for Spanish and Portuguese Jews; another hospital at Mile-end, for German and Dutch Jews; and an hospital for poor French Protestants in Old-street. There are 11 considerable establishments for lying-in women. In like manner, 20 dispensaries are maintained, in various parts of the metropolis, which supply the poor gratuitously with medicines. Seven other establishments afford medical aid of a particular kind, or in particular disorders. There are, besides, the Magdalen hospital, Blackfriars' road, established in 1758, for the relief and reformation of prostitutes; the London Female penitentiary at Pentonville, for similar purposes; the asylum for female orphans; the philanthropic society, St George's fields, for educating the destitute children of criminals; the refuge for the destitute, Hackney road, established by Dr Grindlay, in 1807; the school for the indigent blind, in St George's fields; the asylum for the deaf and dumb, in the Kent road; the society of ancient Britons, or Welch charity school, established in 1714, for educating 100 children of poor Welch parents. There are similar societies for the benefit of the children of Scots and Irish parents. There are two institutions for the relief of the widows and children of the clergy. There are various societies also for benevolent objects; namely, for the relief and discharge of persons confined for small debts; for educating the children of debtors; for bettering the condition of the poor; for preserving the lives of persons, apparently dead by drowning, suffocation, &c.; the Samaritan society for relieving destitute persons who are discharged when cured from the London hospital. The national vaccine society maintains nine establishments for exterminating the small-pox, by vaccinating gratuitously. There are several other societies for relieving distressed foreigners, men of letters, decayed artists, players, mariners, school-masters, and generally all descriptions of the industrious classes who may be reduced to indigence by misfortune; also their widows and orphans. The lord mayor, aldermen, and common council, form the court of common council, which constitutes the legislature of the city, to frame all laws for its internal government. The lord mayor is the chief magistrate in the city; and the aldermen are perpetual justices of the peace for the city, and the chief magistrates in their respective wards. The other principal executive officers of this corporation are the recorder, common serjeant, town clerk, and two sheriffs.

London may be said to be represented in parliament by eight members, of whom four are returned for the city of London, by the livery; two are elected by the householders of Westminster, and two by those of Southwark. It is calculated that nearly 800 new books and pamphlets are annually published in London; and the number of periodical reviews, magazines, and newspapers, is wonderfully increased within a few years. From returns made to the house of commons, it appears that about 20,000 morning papers were published daily; of the evening papers, between 15,000 and 16,000; of those published on alternate days, from 20,000 to 22,000; and of the weekly papers 70,000. The number of monthly magazines and reviews amounts to upwards of fifty; and several others appear quarterly, or at irregular periods. The literary and scientific institutions are numerous; namely, the royal society, incorporated 1662, under the presidency of Sir Isaac Newton; the society of antiquaries, incorporated in 1751; the board of agriculture, established in 1793, by Sir John Sinclair and Mr Arthur Young; the society for the encouragement of arts, manufactures, and commerce, instituted in 1753; the royal institution, incorporated in 1800, to facilitate the general introduction of useful mechanical inventions and improvements, and to teach, by courses of philosophical lectures and experiments, the application of science to the common purposes of life; the London, Surrey, and Russel institutions, which have in view similar objects to the preceding, and possess valuable libraries; the Linnean society, devoted to botany and natural history, founded in 1788, and incorporated in 1802; the philosophical society of London, the British mineralogical society, the entomological, horticultural, geological, mathematical, medical, medical and chiralurgical, and city philosophical societies. The British museum is the grand national depository of antiquities, sculpture, natural and artificial curiosities, scientific collections, manuscripts, and printed books. It was established by act of parliament in 1753, in consequence of the will of Sir Hans Skane. Several institutions have been established for promoting the arts; namely, the royal academy, instituted in 1768, and chiefly indebted for its prosperity to its first president, Sir Joshua Reynolds; the British institution in Pall Mall, established in 1805, and devoted to the exhibition and sale of pictures by modern artists. An annual exhibition of paintings is made at the royal academy.

London has two principal theatres, namely, Drury-lane and Covent-garden, and a smaller theatre in the Haymarket. For musical exhibitions, there are the English opera-house, in the Strand, and the King's theatre, in the Haymarket, or Italian opera-house, which is one of the grandest buildings in London. There are, besides, the Surrey theatre, in St George's fields; the Colobourg theatre, in Lambeth; Astley's amphitheatre, near Westminster bridge; Sadler's Wells theatre, near Islington; the olympic pavilion, in the Strand; the Sans-parcail theatre, in the Strand; and Regency theatre, Tottenham-street. There are numerous tea-gardens in the vicinity of the town; but the most fashionable, and entertaining evening promenade is Vauxhall gardens, where are exhibited brilliant illuminations, music, singing, and other entertainments. The city of London has one annual fair, that of St Bartholomew, held in Smithfield. Newgate is the jail of London and Middlesex, and is situated in the Old Bailey. There are, besides, various other prisons; namely, the King's Bench prison, situated in St George's fields, for debtors sued in that court, and other persons confined under its sentences. The Fleet prison, situated in Fleet-market, which is extensive and commodious; the Marshalsea, situated in Southwark; the house of correction for the county of Middlesex, situated in Cold Bath fields; the penitentiary house, Millbank, built for the purpose of changing the punishment of transportation for a term of years, into confinement and labour; the new prison, Clerkenwell, and Tothill fields bridewell; the borough compter, Tooley-street, Southwark, for felons and debtors committed by the process of the borough courts; the new jail, Horsemonger-lane, the county jail for Surrey.

In 1539, there were not above four merchant vessels exceeding 120 tons burden in the river Thames. In 1701, there were 560 vessels belonging to the parish of London, carrying 84,882 tons, and 10,065 men. In 1732, the number had increased to 1417 vessels, containing 178,557 tons, and navigated by 21,797 men. The numbers in 1800, in the foreign trade, was 1810 vessels; their tonnage 503,676 tons; and their crews amounted to 37,046 men. In 1792, the imports of England were 1,17,897,700, of which the amount for London was 1,12,071,674. The exports for the same year were 1,23,674,315, of which London exported 1,14,742,516. The total amount of the imports and exports of London is now about 1,70,000,000 annually. On an average of some years there have been employed 4000 vessels in the foreign trade, and 9000 in the coasting trade, the outward and inward tonnage averaging 1,800,000 tons.

London is not only a luxurious metropolis; it is also a vast emporium of maritime commerce; and its vessels trade to the remotest parts of the world. It became at a very early period the seat of an extensive trade. The Hanse merchants had considerable privileges in it about the year 1504. Elizabeth established several trading companies; and in the succeeding reign of James I. the progress of foreign trade was great and rapid. The whole space from London bridge to Deptford, a distance of nearly four miles, is occupied by shipping. This space is divided into the upper, middle, and lower pools, and the space between Limehouse and Deptford. To provide some farther accommodation for shipping, the West India docks were formed by a company of subscribers, and opened in 1802. These docks are formed across the narrowest part of the isle of Dogs, and comprise two docks, one of 30 acres, for unloading the ships arrived from the West Indies; and the other of 24 acres, for loading outward-bound ships. The London docks were executed by similar means. This dock was opened in 1805, and is used for the general trade of the port. The East India docks are situated at Blackwall. The loading dock is 780 feet long, and 520 wide; and the discharging dock contains 18½ acres. The manufactures of London consist chiefly of silk, cutlery, jewellery, watches, japan-ware, cut-glass, books, cabinet-work, carriages, and other fine goods and articles of elegant use. The southern bank of the Thames is lined with manufactories, such as iron-foundries, dye-houses, soap and oil manufactories, glass-houses, distilleries, hat-manufactories, &c.; and in many other parts are breweries, ship-builders' yards, oil-cloth and paper manufactories, vinegar works and chemical manufactories on a large scale. The manufactures of silk in Spitalfields, and of watches in Clerkenwell, usually employ about 7000 people each. The cathedral church of St Paul, which is nearly in the centre of the city of London, is ascertained to be situated in Long. 0. 5. 37. W. Greenwich. Lat. 51. 31. N.

LONDON, New, a county of the United States, in Connecticut. Population 34,707.—2d, A city, port of entry, and half shire town, in New London county, Connecticut, on the Thames. Population in 1810, 3238.

LONDONDERRY, a county of Ireland, bounded S. by Tyrone, W. by Donegal, N. by the Scottish sea, E. by the county of Antrim, from which it is separated by Lough Neagh, and, with a small deviation, the river Bann. It is about 40 English miles from north to south, and about 31 in breadth, including an area of 511,608 English acres. The general appearance of this county is not uniform. About one-fourth part seems to be bleak mountains and glens; and one-half of the remainder is mountainous. Potatoes is the principal crop; and in some parts oats, barley, and flax, are cultivated, and rye on the higher soils. On some of the clay grounds wheat begins now to be raised. The linen manufacture is the great staple of the county; the cotton manufacture is not considerable, being known only in three or four places. The principal rivers are the Foyle or Green river; the Bann, or the White river; the Faughan and Roe; besides several other lesser streams. The principal towns, besides Londonderry, are Colerain, Newton-linavady, Magherafelt, Dungiven, Moneymore, Castle-Dawson, Maghera, Garvagh, Desert-martin, &c. Population, according to a census in 1813, 186,000, consisting of 27,000 Episcopalians, 63,000 Presbyterians, and 106,000 Catholics.

LONDONDERRY, the capital of the above county, pleasantly situated on the Foyle, over which is a wooden bridge, 1000 feet broad. It contains, within the walls, four main streets, which cross at right angles, and form, with the smaller streets and lanes, a sort of parallelogram. The ground on which the town stands is hilly. The old walls, flanked with bastions, which were built in the year 1614, still remain in fine repair, and are an ornament to the place. The cathedral is a Gothic structure, built in the year 1633, by Sir John Vaughan. There is, besides, a chapel of ease; also two Presbyterian meeting-houses, and a Roman Catholic chapel in the city. The new jail is esteemed one of the best in the northern counties; and the Episcopal palace is also a spacious edifice. Here is a school for the education of the lower classes; and an infirmary. There is also a small theatre and a linen-hall. The wharfs and quays, with a good portion of the city, are without the walls. It has an extensive trade with the West Indies and America. The harbour is deep, wide, and tolerably secure. The town of Londonderry is of great antiquity, and has often suffered from the effects of war. In 1688, it was besieged by King James, from December 1688 till August 1689, when the siege was raised. Pop. 10,500. 115 miles N. N. W. Dublin, 58 W. N. W. Belfast. Long. 7. 15. W. Lat. 55. N.

LONDONDERRY, a township of Halifax county, Nova Scotia.—2d, Of the United States, in Rockingham county, New Hampshire. Population 2766.—3d, Of Chester county, Pennsylvania. Population 1161.—4th, Of Dauphin county, Pennsylvania. Population 2411.

LONG BAY, a bay which extends along the coast of North and South Carolina.—2d, In the island of Barbadoes.—3d, Three bays, one on the east, another on the west, and a third on the south coast of Jamaica.

LONG BENTON, a township of England, in Northumberlandshire. Population 5547.

LONG ISLAND, the name of various considerable islands in the Eastern seas, in the West Indies and the United States, and in other parts.

LONG ISLAND, an island of the United States, belonging to the state of New York. It extends in length from the city of New York, in an easterly direction, 140 miles. Its average breadth is 10, and it contains 1400 square miles. It is divided into three counties, King's, Queen's, and Suffolk; and these again into 19 townships. Population in 1790, 41,782; in 1800, 42,097; and in 1810, 44,752.

LONG ISLAND SOUND divides the above island from Connecticut.

LONG NIDNEY, a decayed village of Scotland, in the county of Haddington.

LONGANNAT, a village of Scotland, in Perthshire, famous for an excellent quarry.

LONGFORD, a county of Ireland, bounded W. by Roscommon, N. by the counties of Leitrim and Cavan, and E. and S. by Westmeath. It extends about 25 English miles from north to south, and about 24 from east to west, and contains about 368 square miles. The soil is generally fruitful, though much interspersed with bogs, mountains, morasses, and fens. The Shannon forms the western boundary of the county. It is, besides, intersected by the Inny, the Camlin, and Fellen, with other numerous inferior streamlets. Lough Gawnagh is its most considerable collection of fresh water. The principal towns are Longford, Granard, Lanesborough, and Edgeworth town. Longford sends two members to the British parliament. Pop. 50,000.

LONGFORD, a town of Ireland, and capital of the above county, on the river Camlin, 40 miles S. S. W. Sligo.

LONGFORD, a town and parish of England, in Derbyshire. Population 573.

LONGFORDGAN, a parish and village of Scotland, in the county of Perth.

LONGFORD, a town of France, department of the Lower Seine. Population 2000.

LONGFORD, a village of England, in Staffordshire. It has a considerable pottery.

LONGTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1791.

LONGTOWN, a market town of England, in Cumberland, on the Esk or Liddle. Population 1812. 9 miles N. Carlisle.

LONGUE, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire. Population 3600.

LONGWOOD, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1942.

LONGWY, a strongly fortified town of France, 32 miles N. by W. Metz. Pop. 2200.

LONGAY L'ABBEY, a town of France, department of the Orne. Population 3300.

LOSNEKER, a village of the Netherlands, 32 miles E. Deventer. Population 1300.

LONS LE SAUVIER, a town of France, department of the Jura, on the Solvay. Salt-works of considerable extent are established here. Population 7000. 62 miles S. E. Dijon.

LONTAR PELO ISLE, an island in the Indian ocean, separated from the peninsula of Malacca by a narrow strait. Long. 99. 0. E. Lat. 70. 30. N.

LONTOR, or LANTOUR, one of the Banda isles, 9 miles long, and 2½ broad.

LOO, a town of the Netherlands, in West Flanders. Population 1400.

LOOCHOO ISLANDS, called by Mr Macleod LEWCHOW, and by others LIUWRO, or LEOR-KIOR, a group situated in the Eastern ocean, to the south of Japan, and about 400 or 500 miles to the east of China. They consist of 36 islands, of which, however, only one, called the Great Looschoo, is of very considerable dimensions, being about 50 miles Long, and from 12 to 15 broad. It was very imperfectly known to Europeans, till visited by Captains Maxwell and Hall, in their return from the late embassy to China. The climate and soil of this island seem to be among the happiest on the globe. The fruits and vegetable productions are of the most exquisite nature. The inhabitants are diminutive in their stature. They are, however, strong, well made, and athletic. Their disposition appears to be peculiarly gay, gentle, and amiable, though they evinced that strong aversion to receive strangers into their country, which is characteristic of China, Japan, and all the neighbouring regions. The capital of Great Looschoo, and of the archipelago, is Kintching, situated about 5 miles from its port of Napa-kiang. Long. 127. 52. 1. E. Lat. 26. 14. N.

LOO CHRISTY, a town of the Netherlands, 5 miles N. E. Ghent. Population 3100.

LOOE, EAST, a market, borough, and seaport town of England, in Cornwall, at the mouth of the river Looe. Population 770.—West Looe sends two members to parliament. Population 953.

LOOKOUT CAPE, on the coast of North Carolina. Lat. 34. 50. N.—The name of several other capes.

LOOSDUINEN, a village of the Netherlands, 4 miles S. S. W. the Hague. Population 1500.

LOOSE, a township of England, in Kent, 2½ miles S. Maidstone. Population 862.

LOUTZ, a town of the Netherlands, with 1400 inhabitants. 14 miles N. N. W. Liege.

LOTHAM, NORTH and SOUTH, two parishes of England, in Norfolk. Pop. 711-821.

LOXA, a town of Spain, province of Seville, on the Guadalquivir. Pop. 3000.

LOXAMIES CREEK, a tributary stream of the Great Miami, in North America.

LOUCA, a considerable town of Spain, in the province of Murcia, on the Sangonera. It is divided into the Upper and Lower town, of which the former has narrow, crooked, and ill paved streets; the latter is regularly and neatly built. It contains 9 churches and several monasteries. The chief manufactures are those of saltpetre. Population 22,000. 40 miles W. S. W. Murcia. Long. 1. 22. W. Lat. 37. 26. N.

LORD HOWE'S GABRIEL, in the Pacific ocean. Long. 159. 24. E. Lat. 5. 30. N.

LORENZEN, a town of the Tyrol, on the Rienz. Population 2700.

LORENZO, SAN, a town of Mexico, in the province of New Biscay. Pop. 500. There are numerous settlements and inconsiderable islands of this name in South America.

LOREO, a town of Italy, in the Venetian province of Rovigo. Population 2300.

LORETTO, a fortified town of Italy, in the Papal state, not far from the influx of the Musone into the Adriatic. Population 6000. 12 miles S. S. E. Ancona.

LONGUES, a town of France, in Provence, on the Argens. Population 4900.

L'ORIENT, a fortified and regularly built seaport of France, department of the Morbihan, on the bay of Port Louis, at the influx of the small river Scott. The harbour is large and secure, and of easy access. It has still some trade, particularly with the French colonies; and is a place of importance, on account of its magazines for the use of the royal navy. The principal manufacture is of salt. Pop. 18,000. 340 miles W. by S. Paris.

LOIR-ET-CHER, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire, on the Mayenne. Population 2156.

LOIR-ET-GARONNE, a town of France, department of the Loire Inferieure, on the Loire. Pop. 3000. 12 miles E. Nantes.

LOIR-ET-MORVAN, a town of Germany, in Baden, 6 miles N. E. Bale. Population 1900.

LOIR-ET-SARRE, an extensive country in the N. E. of France, lying between Champagne and Alsace, and divided, at present into the four departments of La Meuse, La Moselle, La Meurthe, and Les Vosges.

LOISCH, a town of Hungary, 34 miles S. E. Alsoli. Population 2000.

LOSSIE, a river of Scotland, in Morayshire, which falls into the sea at Lossiemouth, which is situated at its mouth.

LOSSITZ, a town of Saxony, 50 miles S. W. Dresden. Population 3300.

LOSTOCK, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 525.

LOSTWITHIEL, a borough and parish of England, in Cornwall. Population 933.

LOT, a department in the south of France, corresponding to the old district of Quercy, in Guienne, adjacent to the departments of the Dordogne, the Aveyron, and the Upper Garonne. Population 272,000.

LOT AND GARONNE, a department in the south-west of France, including the Agenois, and bounded by the departments of the Dordogne, the Lot, the Gers, the Landes, and the Gironde. Area 2200 square miles. Population 326,000. It is traversed by the Garonne, the Lot, the Gers, and the Baise.

LOT, a river of France, which joins the Garonne.

LOTH, a small river of Scotland, in Sutherlandshire, which falls into the ocean.

LOTHIAN, an extensive and fertile district of Scotland, now divided into three shires, viz. East-Lothian, or Haddingtonshire; Mid-Lothian, or Edinburghshire; and West-Lothian, or Linlithgowshire; which see.

LOTHYAN, a small river of Scotland, in Fifeshire, which falls into the Leven.

LOUISIANA, a town of France, department of the Gironde. Population 2400.

LOUNOX, a town of France, department of the Gard, near the Rhone. Pop. 2000.

LOUNOX, a town of France, department of La Vienne. 28 miles N. N. W. Poitiers. Population 5200.

LOUNOX, a county of the United States, in Virginia, on the Potomac. Pop. 21,333. Slaves 5157. Chief town Leesburg.

LOUNOX, a town of the Netherlands, 6 miles N. W. Ghent. Population 3800.

LOUNOX, a town of Austrian Italy, province of Bergamo. Population 3000.

LOUGHBOROUGH, a market town and parish of England, county of Leicester, on the Soar. The town consists of one principal street, with four smaller ones crossing at right angles. The church is a large pile of building. There are, besides, meeting-houses for the Presbyterian Baptists, Quakers, and Wesleyan Methodists. The chief manufactures of Loughborough are those of stockings and cotton spinning. It has a grammar school and a charity school, and has been of late much improved. Population 7365. 11 miles N. Leicester.

LOUGHERY'S CREEK, a tributary stream of the Ohio, in the United States.

LOUGHREA, a well built town of Ireland, county of Galway, 15 miles S. W. Galway.

LOUGHRECK, a village of Ireland, county of Dublin, with a spacious harbour.

LOUHAN, a town of France, department of the Upper Saone. Population 3000.

LOVIN, a town of France, department of the Two Seves. Population 1500.

LOUIS, ST., capital of the Missouri territory, in the United States, on the Mississippi, 16 miles below the junction of the Missouri. It has a Roman Catholic chapel, a theatre, a bank, and two printing offices, and is fast increasing. Population 3000. Long. 89. 36. W. Lat. 38. 36. N.

LOUIS, ST., a city of South America, and the chief town of the island of Maranhao, on the coast of Brazil. The houses are many of them neat and pretty, and one story in height. The churches are numerous, and gaudily decorated in the inside. The city contains a custom-house and treasury. Pop. including negroes, of which the proportion is great, 12,000. Long. 43. 37. W. Lat. 2. 30. S.

LOUIS, ST., a considerable river of North America, which falls into Lake Superior.

LOUIS, FORT, a strong barrier fortress of France, in Alsace, 12 miles E. Hagenau.

LOUISA, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Pop. 11,900, including 6130 slaves.

LOUISA CHITTO, a river which rises on the borders of South Carolina, and joins the Mississippi.

LOUISIANA, a river of Africa, which falls into the Atlantic. Lat. 5. 30. S.

LOUISBURG, a town and capital of the island of Cape Breton, on the south-east side of the island. Its streets are regular and broad, consisting for the most part of stone houses, with a large parade at a little distance from the citadel; the inside of which is a fine square, near 200 feet every way. It has a safe and capacious harbour, more than half a mile broad, and 6 miles long. The principal, if not the only trade of Louisburg, is the cod fishery. It was taken from the French by the English fleet, in 1745; but afterwards restored by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, in 1748. It was again taken by the English, in 1758, and its fortifications since demolished. Long. 59. 50. W. Lat. 45. 55. N.

LOUISBURG, capital of Franklin county, North Carolina, in the United States, on Tar river.

LOUISBURGH, a fishing village of Scotland, in Caithness, near the town of Wick.

LOUISIADÉ, an archipelago in the Eastern seas, lying to the south-east of New Guinea, and extending about 400 miles in length, by about 160 in breadth, where broadest. Long. of the centre 152. 25. E. Lat. nearly 16. S.

LOUISIANA, an extensive country of North America, of which the limits have never been exactly defined. For all the purposes of a general description, however, the country comprehended under this denomination may be considered to include the western slope of that great valley which is drained of its waters by means of the Mississippi and its confluent streams. In this view, the Mississippi will form its western boundary; and a line drawn from its source westward, in Lat. 47. 42. N. may be considered its northern boundary. To the west, the Rocky Mountains form a natural barrier; to the south, the gulf of Mexico; and to the south-west, the Rio Bravo. The length of the space thus included is about 2000 miles, and the average breadth about 650. For the purpose of giving a more distinct view of this extensive region, it may be distinguished into three parts. 1st, The alluvial flats bordering the shores of the rivers, and subject to periodical inundations. 2d, The track of Upland, which being elevated above the general level, is secured from inundation. 3d, That extensive country which stretches westward from the Mississippi to the Rocky mountains, through which run the Red river, the Arkansas, and the Missouri. The Mississippi being the common recipient of all the waters which rise between the Rocky and the Allegany mountains, is swelled during the season of inundation, by the accumulation of these various waters, far beyond its ordinary limits; and it overflows the country on both sides with wide inundation. Immense quantities of water remain stagnant in swamps and lakes; and innumerable rivers, and small canals or bayous, issue from the river, formed by its refluents and overflowing waters during the inundation. These branches or outlets for the superfluous waters, are in constant motion, intersecting a track of country from 140 to 150 miles broad at the mouth of the river, which is quite impassable, except by the water communications; and a great part of it is completely submerged. Of these outlets or branches, there is the Chafalia or Atchafalia river, which, about 300 miles from its mouth, diverges westward, and flows into Chafalia bay, in the gulf of Mexico; about 120 miles below the Chafalia, the outlet of the Plaquemine; thirty-one miles below the Plaquemine, and 81 above New Orleans, the outlet of La Fourche, which communicates with the gulf of Mexico by two mouths. Below the outlet of La Fourche, there are numerous other smaller canals and streams, branching off from the river at various points; and, on the east, it is in like manner connected by several channels, with the lakes Maurepas, Ponchartrain, and Borgne. In ascending the river, the space which is reached by the inundation is gradually contracted within narrow limits; at New Orleans, 100 miles from the gulf of Mexico, from 80 to 90 miles; about 80 miles higher up, and to the mouth of Red river, to 40 miles; afterwards to 20 miles. The rivers which flow into the Mississippi are, from the east the Illinois, 1213 miles from its mouth; the Wabash, 1150 miles; the Tennessee, a tributary of the Ohio, 1050 miles; and the Ohio, 1000 miles from its mouth; besides numerous other streams of inferior note. From the west it receives the Missouri 1200 miles, the Arkansas 650 miles, and the Red river 300 miles from its mouth. All the other rivers which flow into the Mississippi occasionally overflow their banks, and form a Delta similar to the Mississippi. The west bank of the Mississippi, from the mouth of Red river to that of the Arkansas, presents an almost perfect level, and the land is much more elevated on the river than in the rear of it. This vast tract affords a thick growth of large and tall trees, mostly cotton-wood and cypress, with extensive cane breaks. All these lands are of an alluvial nature, and extremely fertile. In this track, the Washita pursues its winding course, and joins Red river about 20 miles before its confluence with the Mississippi. Between the Arkansas river and the Missouri, the principal streams which flow into the Mississippi from Louisiana, are White river and the St Francis. The streams interlock in a thousand mazes, and in every respect present a similar picture with the overflowed country near the mouth of the Mississippi. Between the White river and the St Francis, a ridge runs westward from the Mississippi, and divides the waters which run southward into the Arkansas, from those which take an opposite course, and fall into the Missouri. The principal tributary streams which enter this great river from Louisiana are the Osage, the Kansas, the Platte, and still farther westward, the Yellow Stone. The banks of the Missouri are equally subject to inundation with those of the Mississippi. But although all the extensive tracks adjacent in this manner to the shores of the great rivers, are reached by the overflowing stream, the extent of the inundation increasing as the collected waters approach the sea, it must not be imagined that one continued sheet of water overspreads the whole face of the country. There are fertile tracks of alluvial land which everywhere border the shores of the Mississippi and the other rivers, which are left quite dry. These have given rise to an artificial work of great extent, for confining its stream, and for securing the country from the effects of its inundations. This work is an embankment of the river, and is usually called the Levee. On the eastern side of the Mississippi pi, the embankment commences about 60 miles above New Orleans, and extends down the river for more than 130 miles. On the western shore it commences at Point Coupee, 172 miles above New Orleans, including the windings of the river. It is here that the country assumes a new aspect; and it is here that the navigator emerges from a gloomy wilderness presenting detached settlements, at long and tedious intervals, into beautiful and finely cultivated plantations. The Levee consists of a mound of earth, raised up at the distance of 30 or 40 yards from the natural bank of the river, varying from four to six feet in height, and usually from six to nine feet at the base, with sufficient breadth at the top for a foot-path. The stream sometimes bursts through this rather feeble barrier, and overwhelms the country with wide inundation.

The alluvial land which occurs on the banks of all the rivers in Louisiana, where it is raised above the inundations, is a deep fertile loam, covered with trees of the largest growth; and it is extremely productive in cotton, tobacco, indigo, maize, Indian corn, and, below the parallel of 30. 12. N. in sugar. Excellent fruits are also produced. Most kinds of water-fowl found in the northern lakes, frequent the waters of Louisiana in winter. Deer, bear, wolves, buffaloes, and a species of the tiger, abound in the hills and prairies. Immediately beyond the alluvial lands commences the upland country, removed beyond the reach of inundation. Those tracks are partly composed of immense natural meadows, covered with luxuriant herbage, and destitute of rivers and springs, or of extensive woods, on which might be raised Indian corn, wheat, rye, oats, barley, buck-wheat, and flax. Lead is the most abundant mineral hitherto discovered in Louisiana; and it has been supposed that the mines on the rivers Gouberie and Maremeg, a branch of the Missouri, are alone capable of supplying the demands of the world. Lead is also said to exist on the waters of the Washita and the St Francis. Iron, tin, zinc, copper, saltpetre, and fossil-coal, are found in abundance. The western country generally furnishes plenty of saltpetre, and immense saline plains occur in this track, which are white, being incrustated with salt. Many of the tributary streams also of Red river, the Arkansas, &c. are impregnated with salt. There are also many saline springs. The forests are filled with about fifty species of indigenous animals; among which are the buffalo, two kinds of elk, two kinds of deer, the roe, the bear, the beaver, the otter, two species of the fox, a species of the goat, the mink, the racoon, the opossum, the rabbit, and seven kinds of squirrels. There are also about 130 species of birds. The arable soil of North America experiences a total change about 200 miles west from the Mississippi river. Beyond this a desert commences, which extends to the Rocky mountains. It is chiefly composed of open plains, of immense extent, of a hard gravelly soil, and destitute of timber; chequered with waving ridges, with fertile flats by the sides of the rivers. The same description will suit the country farther westward to the Rocky mountains, with this difference, that it is more mountainous, badly watered, and a greater proportion of it entirely barren. In summer these desert tracks abound with vast herds of wild horses, buffaloes, bears, wolves, elk deer, foxes, wild hogs, antelopes, and a variety of other animals. The seasons in Louisiana generally are extremely variable, and they are distinguished, as in most parts of North America, by opposite extremes. From whatever cause, also, the empire of cold is prolonged far beyond the regions assigned to it in the old world. Snow and frost occasionally occur to within the 30th degree of N. lat. The orange tree and sugar cane are often destroyed by frost, even in the gulf of Mexico. In summer the thermometer in the shade often indicates 90 degrees; while in the interior, more especially towards the Rocky mountains, the cold is intense. According to the register kept by Lewis and Clarke, the thermometer fell, in their wintering ground, on the Mississippi, in N. lat. 47. to 45 degrees below 0, and frequently stood at 20 degrees below 0. All parts of the Delta, and generally, indeed, the shores of all the rivers which consist of alluvial lands, are exposed to a highly inflammatory and bilious fever. Towards the end of the 17th century, Louisiana was visited by different adventurers, mostly French, who penetrated into the country across the lakes, whence they descended the Mississippi; and about the year 1687, a fort was already erected on the Arkansas. The first royal French governor was Iberville, who arrived in 1699. From this period, the country was known under the name of Louisiana, and in 1705 the colony consisted of 150 persons. From the year 1740 to 1754, great progress was made; and the colonists began to export some cotton, considerable quantities of indigo, peltry, hides, tallow, pitch, tar, ship-timber, and various other raw materials. By the peace of 1763, all that part of Louisiana on the east bank of the Mississippi, was ceded to England; and that portion of it to the westward of the same river was ceded to Spain. Louisiana having been ceded by Spain in 1801 to the French republic, the American government succeeded in purchasing it for a pecuniary compensation, and their commissioners took formal possession of it in the year 1804. Since this period the country has been rapidly advancing in population and wealth.

LOUISIANA, STATE OF, a portion of the extensive region described above, erected into one of the United States, by an act of the American congress. It is situated between 29. and 33. N. lat. and is bounded N. and W. by the Missouri territory, S. by the gulf of Mexico, E. by the Mississippi territory. It is 300 miles in length from east to west, and 240 miles broad from north to south, having an area of 41,000 square miles, or 26,240,000 acres. The south-eastern part is mostly included in the Delta of the Mississippi, already described. The south-western part is generally level prairie, and much of its area very productive; the north-western part, a thick forest, and low alluvial soil upon the rivers, which is of great fertility; but at a distance from the streams, the land is high, broken, and sterile. The rivers which flow into the Mississippi from the west, as well as the lakes which are situated in that quarter, have been already noticed. To the eastward are situated lake Maurepas, Ponchartrain, and Borgne. Of the rivers, the chief are Pearl river, which falls into Lake Borgne; Chefumdi, a small stream which enters Lake Ponchartrain; and the Iberville, which issues from the Mississippi, 20 miles below Baton Rouge, and runs east into Lake Maurepas. The country which lies between Pearl river on the east, and the Mississippi on the west, as far as the 31st degree of N. lat. which was not included in the general description of the country of Louisiana, is an extensive district of level fine country, and the soil is found to be highly favourable to corn, cotton, sugar, indigo, rice, sweet potatoes, pumpkins, plums, cherries, figs, peaches, grape vines, and most kinds of garden vegetables. Sugar plantations are becoming numerous, and the settlements extending. The exports of Louisiana, since the country came into the possession of the United States, have been rapidly increasing. The produce received from the upper country, from the shores of all the rivers of which the Mississippi is the common channel, is immense. The principal town is New Orleans. The other towns are yet in their infancy. Population in 1817, 120,000.

LOUISVILLE, a post township of the United States, in New York, on the St Lawrence.—2d, Capital of Jefferson county, Georgia, on the Ogeechee.

LOUISVILLE, a post town of the United States, and capital of Jefferson county, Kentucky, is pleasantly situated on an elevated and beautiful plain, on the S. bank of the Ohio, immediately above the rapids. It contains an elegant court-house; a jail; a theatre; 3 banks, one of them a branch of the United States bank; an insurance company; a market-house; 3 houses for public worship, 1 for Roman Catholics, 1 for Presbyterians, and 1 for Methodists; 3 printing offices; and 670 dwelling-houses, principally brick. It contains various manufactures. Population in 1810, 1337; in 1819, estimated at 4500. 120 miles below Cincinnati, 50 W. Frankfort.

LOUZE, a town of Portugal, in Algarva, on a river of the same name, 9 miles N. Faro. Population 5000.

LOUZE, St., a town of France, department of the Upper Saône. Population 1900.—Also a village of France.

LOUNNE, a town of France, department of the Upper Pyrenees. Population 2750.

LOVISA, a town of European Turkey, 35 miles S. Nicopolis. Population 3000.

LOUVER, a neat market town and parish of England, county of Lincoln, having a navigable canal to the sea. The public buildings are the church of St James, a large and handsome building, with a steeple 228 feet high; the town-hall, the mansion-house, assembly-rooms, and the theatre. Here are three chapels belonging to Baptists, Methodists, and Catholics; also a free grammar school. The vicarage house, called the Hermitage, with the cloisters in the garden, are much visited as curiosities. It has a carpet and blanket manufactory, a large soap manufactory, and a paper mill. Population 5055. 28 miles N. E. Lincoln.

LOUTU, a maritime county of Ireland, bounded by Eastmeath S. and S. W.; by Monaghan and Carrig. W.; N. by Armagh; N. E. by the bay of Carlingford, which separates it from the county of Down; and by the Irish channel E. It is about 27 miles long, and 18 broad. It is in general a rich and well cultivated tract, in which there is little waste ground. The principal river is the Boyne. Several other small rivers cross the county, and fall into the bay of Dundalk. The principal towns are Carlingford, Dundalk, Drogheda, and Collon. The linen manufacture is carried on to a great extent. The county sends one member to the imperial parliament. Population 57,000. Proportion of Catholics to Protestants as 15 to 1.

LOUVAIN, a town of the Netherlands, in South Brabant, on the Dyle, and the canal of Louvain. Its walls, which are of brick, have a circuit of nearly seven miles; there are few public edifices deserving attention. The town-hall is, however, admired as a fine specimen of Gothic architecture, and the collegiate church is inferior to few in the Netherlands. The great Hospital des Invalides, and the buildings of the university, are also objects of interest. Others of its public edifices have been allowed to fall to decay. It owes its chief celebrity to its university, founded originally in 1420. It has manufactures of linen and woollens, and is noted for its beer. It trades also in corn and hops. Pop. 25,400. 14 miles E. by N. Brussels.

LOUVANNE, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire. Population 1500.

LOUVREUX, a town of the Netherlands, province of Liege. Population 1600.

LOUVIÈRE, a town of France, department of the Eure. It has manufactures of linen and cotton. Population 6800.

LOUVIÈRE DU DESERT, a town of France, 33 miles N. E. Rennes. Population 3000.

LOUVIGNES, a town of France, department of the Landes. Population 2500.

LOUZA, a town of Portugal, province of Beira. Population 2000.

LOWENBERG, or LUXEMBO, a town of Silesia, on the Bober. Population 3100.

LOWESTOFT, a market town of England, county of Suffolk, on a hill looking down upon the sea. The parish church is a fine building of Gothic architecture. Here are, besides, meeting-houses for Presbyterians, Methodists, and Baptists. There were formerly two other chapels; one of them has been carried away by the sea; the other has been taken down and rebuilt by the inhabitants. The other public buildings are the grammar school, a theatre, and assembly-room. Here is also an elegant hot bath; and to the north of the town stands the upper light-house, 40 feet high, and 20 feet in diameter. On the beach below the cliff is another light-house, of timber. At the south end of the town is a battery. At the north end, and on the Ness, are two other batteries. Lowestoft depends chiefly on the herring, cod, mackerel, and sprat fisheries. In Lowestoft are manufactures of twine, rope, and barrels. Population of the town and parish, 3675. 9 miles S. Yarmouth.

LOWLANDS, one of the greater divisions of Scotland, opposed to the Highlands.

LOWRON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1088.

LOWVILLE, a post township of the United States, New York, on Black river. Pop. 1643.

LOXA, a considerable town of Spain, in Granada, on the Xenil. Its streets rise above one another on the side of the mountain. Population 9000. 30 miles W. Granada.

LOXA, the capital of a province of the same name in Quito. It has several convents. Population 10,000. 237 miles from Quito. Long. 79. 15. W. Lat. 3. 59. S.

LOZERE, a department in the south of France, bounded by the departments of the Cantal, the Upper Loire, the Ardèche, the Gard, and the Aveyron. Its superficial extent is 2100 square miles. Pop. 144,000.

LOZZOLO, a town of Piedmont. Pop. 6200.

LU, a town of Piedmont, 9 miles W. Alessandria. Population 2800.

LUBKEKE, a town of Prussian Westphalia, 14 miles W. Minden. Population 2000.

LUBNEN, a town of Lower Lusatia, in an island formed by the Spree and the Birske, 50 miles S. E. Berlin. Population 3100.

LUBNENAU, a town of Lower Lusatia, on the Spree. Population 2160.

LUBEC ISLE, an island in the Eastern seas. Long. 112. 45. E. Lat. 5. 43. S.

LUBECK, a free city of Germany, on the Trave, a navigable river, which joins the Baltic about 8 miles below. Its east side is traversed by the Wackenitz, which flows from the lake of Schwerin. Its situation is elevated, and it is a clean and cheerful place. It is surrounded by walls, which are planted with rows of trees, and carefully preserved as walks for the inhabitants; but the other military defences were demolished in 1806. Lubeck has a cathedral and four parish churches, of which that of St Mary is a large and elegant building. It has various charitable institutions. Here is also the city armoury, the Calvinist church, the Catholic chapel, and a classical school. The council-house is a Gothic building, neat, though ancient. It has manufactures of woollens, silk, cotton, tobacco, &c. Lubeck was built on its present site about the year 1140. In 1220 it was declared a free city of the empire; and in 1241 it entered into a treaty with Hamburg, which laid the foundation of the Hanseatic league. In 1806, Blucher took refuge in Lubeck, after the battle of Jena, which was carried, after a sanguinary action. Pop. 40,000. 30 miles N. E. Hamburg.

LUBECK, a post township of the United States, in Washington county, Maine.

LUBEN, a town of Prussian Silesia, on the Kalterbach. Population 2330.

LUBESAC, a town of France, department of the Corréze. Population 3100.

LUBLAU, or LUBLVA, a town of Hungary, near the Poprad. Population 2000.

LUBLIN, a town of Poland, on the Bistricza. It has a castle standing on a high rock. Population 7100. 85 miles S. E. Warsaw.

LUBNY, a town of European Russia, government of Pultava, on the Sula. Pop. 5300.

LUC, a town of France, department of the Var. Population 2700.

LUCANAS, a province of Peru, with a capital of the same name. Lat. 14. 53. S.

LUCAR DE BARRAMEDA, St. a maritime town of Spain, in Andalusia, at the mouth of the Guadalquivir. Its trade in salt, fruit, wine, and brandy, is great. Pop. 18,000. 30 miles S. S. W. Seville. Long. 6. 16. W. Lat. 36. 50. N.

LUCAR DE GUADIANA, St. a fortified town of Spain, in Andalusia. Population 2800.

LUCAR DE MAYON, a small town of Spain, in Andalusia. Population 2000.

LUCAYO, one of the Bahama islands.

LUCAYONEQUE, one of the Bahamas.

LUCCA, a duchy of Italy, surrounded by Tuscany, Modena, and the Mediterranean. Its territorial extent amounts to 420 square miles; its population to 138,000.

Lucca, the capital of the above duchy, in a plain watered by the Serchio. It has a circuit of about 3 miles, and its ramparts are planted with trees. It has, in general, wide streets; and the houses are well built. The palace of the princess contains in the interior some valuable paintings. Several of the churches are built of marble of Carrara. The theatre is neat, but small. The celebrated baths of Lucca are on the banks of the Serchio. Lucca has a university, a large school, an academy of arts and sciences. Pop. 18,000. The chief manufactures are of cloth and silk; and it trades also in olive oil. 19 miles N. N. E. Leghorn. Long. 10. 34. E. Lat. 43. 54. N.

LUCK, a river of Scotland, in Wigtonshire, which falls into the bay of Luce.

LUCZ, BAY or, of GREENGLASS BAY, a spacious bay in Wigtonshire, Scotland.

LUCEA, EAST and WEST, two rivers of Jamaica, which fall into Lucea harbour.

LUCEÑA, a large inland town of Spain, in the province of Cordova. It has some manufactures of soap, linen, and cloth, besides salt-works near it. Population 12,000. 32 miles S. S. E. Cordova.

LUCEÑA, a town of Naples, in the Capitanata. Pop. 8400. 32 miles N. E. Benevento.

LUCEUNE, a canton lying almost in the heart of Switzerland, and adjacent to those of Zurich, Schweiz, and Unterwalden. Its superficial extent is computed at about 740 square miles; its population at nearly 87,000.

LUCEUNE, the capital of the above canton, on both sides of the Reuss, which communicate by four bridges. The town stands on a gentle eminence, is surrounded by a wall and towers, and contains several handsome edifices, with neat groupes of houses on the lake. Of the public buildings, the chief are the town-hall, the watch-tower, and the arsenal. The churches are of Gothic architecture; and there are in the town several monasteries and convents. Population nearly 7000. 42 miles E. Berne. Long. 8. 18. 35. E. Lat. 47. 3. N.

LUCERNE, a lake of Switzerland, between the cantons of Unterwalden, Lucerne, Schweiz, and Uri; length 25 English miles, breadth very unequal.

LUCHÉ, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 2000.

LUCHOW, a town of Hanover, 36 miles S. E. Lüneburg. Population 1900.

LUCIA, ST., one of the Caribbean islands, in the West Indies, about 27 miles long from north to south, and 12 broad. This island exhibits a variety of hills: amongst others, two that are remarkably round and high, said to be volcanoes. At the foot of them are fine vallies, having a good soil, and well watered. In St Lucia are several commodious bays and harbours, with good anchorage. The English first settled in this island in 1637. In the year 1763, it was ceded to France. The English took it in the year 1779, but restored it at the peace in 1783; again in the year 1794. 18 miles S. Martinico, and 63 N. W. Barbadoes. Long. 60. 30. W. Lat. 13. 37. N.

LUCIA, ST., a river of Buenos Ayres, which enters the Plata, near Monte Video.

LUCKENWALD, a town of Prussian Saxony, 32 miles S. Berlin. Population 3500.

LUCKNOW, a city of Hindostan, and capital of a district of the same name, in the province of Oude, on the river Goomty, which falls into the Ganges. The streets are narrow and very irregular. Near it is the dwelling of the British resident, and other European inhabitants. The gilt domes of the mosques, and the mausoleum of Asoph ad Dowleh, give it a very gay appearance at a distance. The nabob's gardens are handsome. Population 300,000. Long. 80. 55. E. Lat. 26. 24. N.

LUCON, a town of France, department of La Vendée. Population 2700.

LUCON, or LUCONIA, the principal of the Philippine islands, in the Eastern seas, on which stands Manila, the metropolis. It is of a very irregular figure, but may be estimated to be 400 miles from north to south, and in breadth from 90 to 120. The country is for the most part mountainous, being intersected in its whole length by an elevated ridge, from which other ridges diverge, that spread over the whole island; forming in some places detached mountains, of a conical figure, in the midst of extensive plains. The climate is moist; but it is temperate, considering the situation of the island within the tropics; and the soil is fertile, yielding cotton, indigo, sugar, tobacco, coffee, &c. and generally all sorts of tropical produce. There are several volcanoes in this island. This island is under the dominion of the Spaniards, whose government is very tyrannical. Lat. between 13. and 19. N. Long. from 120. to 124. E. Pop. conjectured to be 900,000.

LUDE, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 3000.

LUDLOW, a neat and well built market town of England, in Shropshire, on the Teme, over which is a stone bridge. Ludlow castle still bears marks of its former grandeur. The other public buildings in Ludlow are, the church, a very spacious and stately looking edifice, extending in length 228 feet, and 73 in breadth; the market-house, and the town-hall. Here are, besides, chapels for the Wesleyan Methodists in Lower Broad-street, and for the Independents in Corve-street. There are several charities, both for education and for the relief of the distressed. Pop. 4820. 29 miles S. Shrewsbury.

LUDWIGSBURG, a well built town of Germany, in Wirtemberg, on the Neckar. It has a charitable institution for education, with which a work-house and a woollen manufactory have been connected. Population reduced to 5000. 7 miles N. Stuttgart.

LUDWIGSLUST, a town of Germany, 22 miles S. Schwerin. Population 2400.

LUO, a river of Wales, which falls into the Severn.—2d, Of England, in Herefordshire, which falls into the Wye.

LUGANO, a town of Switzerland, on the lake of Lugano. Population 4350. 16 miles N. W. Como.

LUGANO, a lake in the south of Switzerland, canton of the Ticino, 25 miles long, from 3 to 6 broad, and of great depth.

LUGAR, a river of Scotland, in Ayrshire, which discharges itself into the river Ayr.

LUGE, a considerable stream of England, which joins the Wye.

LUGGERSHALL, a decayed borough of England, in Wiltshire, which returns two members to parliament. Population 477.

LUGARIE, a river of Scotland, in Dumbartonshire, which joins the Kelvin.

LUGO, a city of Spain, in Galicia, near the Minho. It has a cathedral of Gothic architecture, with several churches and convents. Population 4800. 51 miles E. Santiago.

LUGO, a town of Italy, province of Ferrara, on the Senio. Population 3900.

LUGOS, or LUGOSCH, a town of Hungary, on the Temes. Population 4600.

LUGROX, a river of Scotland, which falls into the Garnock.

LUHAN, a town of European Russia, government of Volhynia. Population 3300.

LULEA, a seaport of Sweden, in West Bothnia, at the mouth of the Lulea. Pop. 1000. Long. 22. 4. E. Lat. 65. 33. 30. N.

LEMBERTON, a post town of the United States, in Robeson county, North Carolina.

LEMMELLO, a town of Italy, 44 miles E. N. E. Turin. Population 3500.

LEMLEY, GREAT, a township of England, county of Durham. Population 1240.—(LETTLE), A hamlet annexed to the foregoing township. Population 351.

LUNAN, a parish and river of Scotland, in Forfarshire, which falls into the German ocean, 3 miles S. Montrose.—2d, In Perthshire, which joins the Isla.

LUNN, a town of Sweden, province of Scania, 5 miles from the Baltic. Population 3300. 21 miles E. Copenhagen. Long. 13. 12. 42. E. Lat. 55. 42. 26. N.

LUNDY ISLAND, at the mouth of the Bristol channel, 5 miles long, and 2 broad.

LUENE, a river of England, in Westmoreland and Lancashire, falls into the Irish sea.—2d, Of Westmoreland and Durham, which runs into the Tees.

LUENBURG, a considerable province of Hanover, formerly a principality of the German empire, lies along the left bank of the Elbe, and forms part of the north-west frontier of Hanover. Population 246,000. Besides the Elbe, this province is watered by the Aller, the Ilmenau, the Oker, the Jeetze, the Fulse, and some smaller streams.

LUENBURG, a walled town of Hanover, the capital of the above province, on the Ilmenau. It has 4 churches, 4 hospitals, an orphan-house, a gymnasium, and a military school; also the palace of the prince, and opposite to it the church of St Michael. Lüneburg has a trade in horses; and it has also a very fine salt spring. Population 10,000.

LENEL, a town of France, 14 miles N. E. Montpellier. Population 4200.

LUXENBURG, a county of the United States, in the south part of Virginia. Population 12,265. Slaves 7155.

LUNEVILLE, a well built town of France, department of the Meurthe, near the junction of the Vesoul and the Meurthe. The principal public edifices are the castle, the large and handsome church of St James, surmounted by two elegant towers; the town-hall, the barracks, and the principal hospital. Here was concluded the first treaty between Austria and the French republic, in 1801. Population 10,500. 80 miles W. Strasburg.

LUNGO, a town of Naples, in the Basilicata. Population 2700.

LUQUE, a town of Spain, 28 miles S. E. Cordova. Population 2750.

LURZ, a town of France, 17 miles E. by N. Vesoul. Population 2000.

LURGAN, a town of Ireland, county of Armagh. It consists of one long wide street. The linen manufacture is carried on here. It has a spacious church, with a lofty spire. 14 miles N. E. Armagh.

LURGAN GREEN, a neat village of Ireland, on the Fane, 37½ miles from Dublin.

LUSATIA, a large province of the German empire, with the title of a margravate, lying between the Elbe and Oder, and surrounded by Brandenburg, Bohemia, Silesia, and part of Saxony. It is divided into Upper and Lower Lusatia, which were formerly two distinct states, but became subject to Saxony, and formed a province of that power until 1815. The superficial extent of the whole is about 4250 square miles. Pop. 465,000.

LUSIGNAN, a town of France, department of La Vienne. Pop. with its parish, 2400.

LUSIGNY, a town of France, department of the Aube. Population 1200.—The name of several other small towns in France.

LUSK, a village of Ireland, in the county of Dublin, 12 miles N. Dublin.

LUSSAC, a town of France, department of the Gironde. Population 2100.

LUTON, a market town of England, in Bedfordshire, which has a manufacture of straw hats. Population 2986.

LUTRY, a town of the Swiss canton of Vaud, on the lake of Geneva. Pop. 2600.

LUTTERBERG, a town of Hanover, district of Grubenhagen. Population 2300.

LUTTENWORTH, a market town of England, county of Leicester, on the Swift. The pulpit in the church, which is a large and handsome building, is the same in which the celebrated Wickliffe addressed his congregation. There is, besides, a Presbyterian meeting-house, which is well attended. Population 2102. 14 miles S. Leicester.

LUTZEN, a town of Saxony, principality of Merseburg; the scene of two memorable engagements; one in 1632, by Gustavus of Sweden, who was himself killed in the action; and the other in 1813, when the French, under Bonaparte, defeated the combined forces of Prussia and Russia. Population 1000. 11 miles W. S. W. Leipzig.

LUXEMBURG, a large province of the Netherlands, in the south-east part of the kingdom, inclosed by the Prussian states on the Rhine, a part of the French frontier, and the Belgic provinces of Namur and Liege. On a territorial extent of 2400 square miles, it contains 226,000 inhabitants.

LUXEMBURG, the capital of the above province, on the Alzetz, one of the strongest places in Europe. It is divided into the Upper and Lower Town. The only public building worth notice is the governor's castle. The principal manufactures are of woollen cloth, of stockings, and of the finer earthenware. It was taken by the French in 1795. It was finally lost by France in 1814. Population 10,000. 130 miles S. E. Brussels.

LUXEIL, a town of France, department of the Upper Saone. Population 3100.

LYNNE, a town of France, department of the Indre and Loire. Population 2150.

LYZ, a town of France, department of the Upper Pyrenees. Population 2150.

LYZERNE, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania. Population 18,100.

LYCOMING, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania. Population 11,006.

LYCOMING CREEK, in Pennsylvania, runs S. S. W. into the Susquehanna.

LYN, a river of England, in Devonshire, which falls into the Tamer.

LYDD, a market town and parish of England, county of Kent. Population 1437.

LYDDEK, a river of England, in Dorsetshire, which falls into the Stour.

LYME REGIS, a market, borough, and seaport of England, county of Dorset, noted for its excellent artificial harbour, round which are several small forts. It sends two members to parliament. Pop. 2263. 9 miles W. Bridport.

LYNDRON, a long narrow gulf of Denmark, in North Jutland, communicating with the Cattegat, Long. 10. 20. E. Lat. 56. 59. N.

LYMINGTON, a borough, market, and seaport town of England, in Hampshire, opposite Yarmouth, in the Isle of Wight, long known for its salt-works, and now a considerable resort for sea-bathing. It sends two members to parliament; voters about 30. Pop. 3164. 10 miles S. W. Southampton.

LYNNBURG, a post town of the United States, and capital of Campbell county, Virginia. It has churches for Presbyterians, Methodists, Friends, Baptists, and numerous trading and manufacturing establishments. Pop. 6500. 160 miles S. W. Washington.

LYNE, a river of Scotland, in Peeblesshire, which falls into the Tweed.—2d, Of England, in Staffordshire, which falls into the Trent.—3d, Of Northumberland, which falls into the sea.

LYNN REGIS, or KING'S LYNN, a borough, market town, and seaport of England, in Norfolk, on the Ouse, about 10 miles from its mouth. It consists of two principal streets, and several smaller ones. Four rivulets run through the town, over which are no less than eleven small bridges. On the land side, the town is wholly surrounded with a deep wet ditch, flanked by a strong wall, formerly defended by nine bastions, but now much dilapidated. The public buildings are, the church of St Margaret, a large and spacious structure; St Nicholas chapel, a neat old building, 200 feet long, 78 broad, with a tower 170 feet high. There are, besides, meeting-houses for Presbyterians and Quakers. The other public buildings are the chapel of St James, now converted into an hospital; the exchange, or custom-house, built in 1683; the guild-hall, an ancient building of stone; the old theatre, recently converted into warehouses; and the new theatre, erected in St James's-street. The king's staith-yard or quay is a handsome square, with a statue of King John in the middle. Among the other public institutions are a grammar-school, a Lancasterian school, a large library, several almshouses, Sunday-schools, and numerous benefactions. It sends two members to parliament; number of voters 300. Population 12,253. 90 miles N. by E. London.

LYONS, or more properly LYON, a large and celebrated city in the south-east of France, the capital of the department of the Rhone, situated on the tongue of land inclosed between the Rhone and the Saone. The form of the city is oblong; its length 24 miles, its breadth nearly 2. All this space is surrounded by a rampart, and the entrances to the city are by six gates. The number of bridges over the Saone is seven. The Rhone is crossed by two bridges, one of wood, and the other of stone. Lyons is more remarkable for its trade than for elegance as a town. The streets are dark and gloomy, except in the new parts of the town, such as the square of Louis le Grand, and the quays along the Rhone, where they display considerable elegance. The public squares are four in number, and one of them is entitled to rank among the finest in Europe. Of the public buildings, the most noted are the town-hall, and the large hospital called Hotel dieu. The cathedral, one of the oldest churches in France, is a large building in the Saracenic style of architecture. The church of Ainay deserves attention as a relic of antiquity; but of the other churches of the city, those of the Chartreux and St Nizier alone deserve to be visited. Lyons has two theatres, one of which is accounted the finest provincial theatre in France. The other buildings that deserve to be mentioned are the archiepiscopal palace, the arsenal, the exchange, and the mint. Lyons has a variety of antiquities, the remains of an aqueduct, a theatre, reservoirs, and mosaics. Of its literary institutions, are an academy of sciences founded in 1700, and an academy of fine arts in 1724. It has a primary and secondary school established in 1803, a veterinary school, and a number of private seminaries. Lyons is the first manufacturing town in France, and is particularly noted for its extensive fabrics of silk. Its manufactures were greatly injured during the troubles of the revolution. Since this period the French government has exerted itself in favour of the manufacturers. The chief articles of manufacture now are gold and silver brocade, plain, double, and striped velvet, richly embroidered taffeta, and satin; also gold and silver laces or galleons, gauze, ribbons, and silk stockings. To this list are to be added hats, leather, carpets, and coloured paper. The printing and bookselling of this place are the next to Paris in importance. The quays, which extend along the Rhone, are bordered with rows of trees, and are little inferior in beauty to the e of Paris. Lyons was founded about 42 years before the Christian era. It suffered greatly during the revolution, from the conflicts of hostile parties. Pop. before the revolution, 158,000, at present 120,000. 180 miles N. by W. Marseilles, 280 S. S. E. Paris. Long. 4. 49. 24. E. Lat. 45. 46. 48. N.

LYONS, GULF OF, the N. W. part of the Mediterranean sea, extending along the south coast of France, from the coast of Catalonia to the gulf of Genoa.

LYE, a navigable river of the Netherlands, which falls into the Scheldt at Ghent.

LYSDONK, a village and parish of the Netherlands, in East Flanders. Pop. 3200.

M.

MAADIE, a lake of Lower Egypt, between Aboukir and Alexandria.

MAASLAND, a village of the Netherlands, in South Holland. Population 1600.

MAASLUYS, a town of the Netherlands, in South Holland, on the Maese. The chief occupation of the inhabitants is fishing. Population 6500. 10 miles W. Rotterdam.

MACAO, an island and town of China, in the bay of Canton, and separated from the continent only by a narrow channel. Here the Portuguese were allowed to build a town and form a settlement, in return for the assistance they gave the Chinese, against the pirates by whom the coasts were infested. It was at one time a place of the greatest importance to the Portuguese; but it has now sunk into a place of comparatively little importance. Long. 113. 32. E. Lat. 22. 10. N.

MACAO, a town of Portuguese Estremadura. Population 2000.

MACASSAR, a kingdom on the south-west coast of the island of Celebes.

MACASSAR, the chief settlement of the Dutch in the island of Celebes, on the south-west coast, and named by them Fort Rotterdam. In 1810, it surrendered to the British, but was restored to the Dutch in 1814. Long. 119. 48. E. Lat. 5. 9. S.

MACASSAR, STRAITS OF, the channel or arm of the sea which separates the islands of Borneo and Celebes, about 350 miles long, and from 110 to 140 miles wide.

MACCLESFIELD, a market town of England, county of Chester, on the river Bollin. It is nearly a mile and a half in length, consisting of four principal streets, and some smaller ones. The old church is a large structure, partly Gothic, with a handsome tower. Christ Church is a regular and elegant building, ornamented with a neat tower and pinnacles. There are, besides, six meeting-houses for dissenters. There is a large free grammar school. There are also three almshouses for widows, and two handsome newly erected Sunday schools. The cotton manufacture is now the chief business. There are about 30 silk mills, for making sewing silk, and silk for the manufacturers. Population 17,746. 19 miles S. Manchester.

MACDUFF, a town of Scotland, in Banffshire. It has one of the best harbours in the Moray frith.

MACEDON, or MACEDONIA, a province in the central part of European Turkey, extending from 39. 53. to 42. 4. of N. latitude.

MACERATA, a town of Italy, in the States of the Church, near the river Chienti. It has a university, the Jesuits college, two academies, and a public school. Population 10,000. 20 miles S. Ancona.

MACHADOV, the chief town in the island of Anjouan, or Jouanna, one of the Comorros.

MACHIAS, a post township and port of entry of the United States, in Washington county, Maine. Population in 1820, 2033.

MACHYNLETH, an ancient market town of North Wales, in Montgomeryshire, near the Dovey. It has a manufacture of flannel and cottons. Population 1595. 18 miles N. E. Aberystwith.

MAC KEAN, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania. Population 142.

MACKENZIE'S RIVER falls into the Frozen ocean in 70. N. lat. and 135. W. long.

MACKINTOSH, a county of the United States, in Georgia. Population 3730. Slaves 2057. Chief town Darien.

MACON, a town of France, department of the Saone and Loire, on the Saone. It has a neat quay, bordered with good buildings, along the bank of the river. The streets are, however, narrow, winding, and dirty. The chief buildings are the town-hall, the theatre, and the public baths. Population 11,000. 42 miles N. Lyons.

MACOPIN, a river of the United States. It joins the Illinois.

MACQUARRIE ISLAND, in the Pacific ocean, discovered in 1811. Long. 169. E. Lat. 52. 41. S.

MACRI, a seaport of Asia-Minor, 125 miles S. E. Smyrna.

MAD RIVER, two tributaries, one of the Merrimack, the other of the Miami, in the United States.

MADAGASCAR, an island of Africa, situated at some distance from the eastern coast, and one of the most remarkable in the world for extent and fertility. It extends from 12. 2. to 26. 40. of S. lat. It is consequently about 840 miles in length from north to south, and its breadth from east to west is about 220. It possesses great variety of surface, being intersected throughout its whole length by a chain of very lofty mountains, separating the island into two parts, though approaching nearer to the eastern than the western coast.

The scenery of these mountains is in many places strikingly grand and picturesque. The gloomy grandeur of these scenes, however, is diversified by rural views, delightful hills, vast savannahs covered with cattle, and secluded vallies; where nature, left to her own fertility, lavishes the most singular and varied productions. The forests contain a prodigious variety of most beautiful trees. Its products are rice, sugar, silk; also potatoes. The cocoa nut, the banana, and other useful trees, flourish here; to which are added a number of species peculiar to the island. This island rears no horses or camels, but large herds of oxen, some of which come to an enormous size. Madagascar is also a stranger to the elephant, and is happily exempt from the ravages of the lion and the tiger; but the rivers swarm with crocodiles, which are often dangerous to the passing traveller. Some state the population at 1,600,000; others at 4,000,000. The French, after establishing settlements at Bourbon and Mauritius, formed several settlements in different parts of the island, but were repeatedly driven out by the hostility of the natives.

MADDALEONI, a town of Naples, 13 miles N. E. Naples. Population 10,400.

MADISON, a county of the United States, in New York. Pop. 25,144.—2d, In Virginia. Pop. 6361. Slaves 3970.—3d, In the north of Georgia.—4th, In Alabama, on the north side of Tennessee river.—5th, In Kentucky.—6th, In Ohio. Pop. 1603.—7th, In Illinois, on the Mississippi. Pop. 5456.—The name of numerous townships of New York, Virginia, and especially Ohio.

MADISON'S RIVER, one of the three head streams of the Missouri, which it joins in Lat. 45. 22. 34. N.

MADISONVILLE, a rising town of the United States, in the state of Louisiana, on the Chefuncti, 27 miles N. New Orleans.

MADEIRA, a considerable and important island, off the western coast of Africa. It consists altogether of a collection of lofty mountains, the highest upwards of 5000 feet. On the declivity of these mountains, all the productions of the island are raised. Vines form the chief object of cultivation. The tax-gatherer takes the tenth part of the wine in the cellar; the rest is divided between the proprietor and the farmer. The island produces, in small quantities, wheat, barley, and oats; There is plenty of goats, and still more of hogs, which, being allowed to run wild, acquire a taste of venison; the rabbit also is very common in the mountainous districts. Bees are very common, and the honey they produce is very delicate.

Population estimated by Mr Barrow at 90,000, though some estimates raise it to 110,000, or even to 150,000. The peasants, like most mountaineers, are healthy and vigorous, but wretchedly poor. Beggary is common among them, and is considered no disgrace. The Portuguese gentry live in a proud and retired manner, associating little with the English, or with strangers. The city abounds in churches; and in the country, at every fifty yards is found a chapel. In the city, the most opulent part of the inhabitants consists of British merchants, established there for the wine trade. The commerce of the island consists almost entirely in the export of its wine. The annual amount is reckoned from 15,000 to 17,000 pipes. There are, besides, four other species, of each of which a limited quantity is made, called genial, sweet malmsey, dry malmsey, and tinto or red wine. In return for wine, Britain exports to Madeira, clothing, household-furniture, and ornament; also provision, particularly herrings, dried fish, and potatoes. The duty on Madeira wine, when imported into Britain, amounts to L.96. 12s. 6d. 9-20ths per tun. For vessels stopping at Madeira, provisions and refreshments are exorbitantly dear.—Adjacent to Madeira is Porto Santo, a small island, and the Desertas, which, with Madeira itself, compose the group of the Madeiras. Funchal, the capital, is in Long. 17. 6. W. Lat. 32. 37. N.

MADELEY MARKET, a market town of England, in Shropshire, near the Severn. The church is a neat and commodious edifice. There are besides, three Methodist chapels, a Roman Catholic and a Quaker's meeting-house. Population of the parish, 5379. 13 miles E. Shrewsbury.

MADERA, a large, abundant, and navigable river of Peru. It enters the Amazon, in Lat. 3. 24. 18. S.

MADRAS TERRITORY. The countries subject to the presidency of Fort St George, or Madras, comprehend nearly the whole of India south of the river Kistnah, and thus extensive province denominated the Northern Circars. Within these boundaries, however, 3 native princes still collect their resources, and exercise a certain degree of authority within their territories. These princes are the rajahs of Mysore, Travancore, and Cochin. The rest of the country is under the immediate jurisdiction of the governor and council at Madras; and for the better administration of justice, and collection of the revenue, has been subdivided into the following districts, viz. Arcot, Bellary, Cahara, Chingleput, Chittoor, Coimbatore, Combaconum, Cuddapah, Ganjam, Guntoor, Madras, Madura, Malabar North, Malabar South, Manipalitam, Nellore, Rajahmundry, Salem, Seringapatam, Tanjore, Tinnevely, Trichinopoly, Verdeluchelium, and Vizagapatam, over each of which there is a European judge, and a collector, with the requisite establishments. There are also four provisional courts of circuit and appeal, to which the above mentioned judges are subordinate, and a supreme court of appeal stationary at Madras, consisting of four judges, selected from the company's civil servants.

MADRAS, called by the natives CHENNA-PATAM, a celebrated city and fortress of the south of India, and the capital of the British possessions in that quarter. It was founded in the year 1640, on a small territory five miles in length by one in breadth. No worse position could have been selected, as it is situated on a flat sandy shore, where the surf runs with extreme violence, and is surrounded by salt-water creeks or rivers, which prevent the introduction of a stream of fresh water into the town. The original fortress was a small square, which now contains the public offices. To the south of this stands the church, near to which is the residence of the governor; and to the north of the old fort is the exchange, on which a light-house has been erected. The French, who took possession of Madras in 1744, entirely destroyed the black town, and every building which stood within 300 yards of the fort; and with the ruins formed an excellent glacis. It was restored at the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle, to the British, in 1749, since which period it has been gradually increased and improved, and is now one of the strongest fortresses in India. All the offices of government, and courts of justice, are in the fort, which is called Fort St George; but the governor, and all the principal inhabitants, have houses at a short distance in the country, where they mostly reside. The nabob of the Carnatic has also a palace at a short distance from the esplanade.

The native, or black town, is nearly a mile to the north of the fort. It has some good streets and bazars; but the houses are very irregular. In 1794, the population was estimated at 300,000. The generality of the garden houses are very neat buildings, consisting mostly of only one story, but having a handsome balcony, supported by pillars in front. They have all green Venetian windows; and each house is surrounded by a garden. A college has also been lately instituted, for instructing the junior civil servants in all of the native languages; and they have a mint for coining both gold and silver coin.

Madras carries on a considerable trade, not only with Europe, but with China, Ceylon, Pegue, the Isle of France, New Holland, and different parts of India; but owing to the want of a navigable river, and the difficulty of landing goods, owing to the heavy surf, it labours under great disadvantages. The black town is inhabited by persons from all parts of the world, all of whom are left to the free enjoyment of their religion. It therefore contains an Armenian and Portuguese church, a mosque, and several Hindoo temples. The ecclesiastical establishment consists of an archdeacon, subordinate to the bishop of Calcutta, and 23 chaplains. The climate of Madras is very hot. Long. 80. 25. E. Lat. 13. 5. N.

MADRID, the capital of Spain, in New Castle, near the river Manzanares, about 300 miles from the sea on each side, and 2200 feet above its level. It stands on several eminences of small elevation, in the centre of a large plain. The city itself is of an oblong form, its circumference nearly six miles. It is surrounded by a high earthen wall, but has no ditch, or any other means of defence. The old streets are narrow and crooked, but many others are wide, straight, and regular; and some of them would be suitable to the finest cities in Europe. The squares in Madrid are not fewer than 42, but most of them are very small; the best are the Plaza Mayor, and the Puerta del Sol. The rest of the squares are small and inelegant. The private houses of Madrid are generally low, with grated windows. The houses of the first grandees are distinguished from those of private citizens only by their magnitude. The only exceptions are the palaces of the families of Berwick, Altamira, and Veragua. The houses of the dukes of Infantado, Alba, Medinaceli, and some others, possess valuable collections of paintings. The churches are also distinguished by the same simplicity. The most remarkable churches are that of St Jerome, with a portal richly ornamented with Gothic sculpture; the church of St Isidor, which is large and handsome, with a fine front; that of the mendicant friars, which is one of the largest in the city; the church of the Incarnation, an Ionic building, and one of the handsomest in Madrid; the church of the Visitation, or las Salesas, a large building, richly ornamented with paintings, statues, and marble pillars. The monument of the bishop of Plasencia, in the chapel called del Obispo, the silver tabernacle in the church of St Martin, the altar and monument of Joan of Austria, in the church of the Franciscan nuns, are worthy the notice of a traveller. Of the other public buildings, one of the most remarkable is the Saladero, a large and handsome edifice; also the quarters of the guards, the largest building in Madrid, being a great oblong, with the principal front toward the east, overloaded with ornaments. The other buildings are the custom-house, the post-office, the prison, the council-house. The royal armoury contains a valuable collection of armour of different ages. Of the city gates, three, viz. the gates of the Recolets, of St Vincent, and Alcala, are in the form of triumphal arches, with trophies, inscriptions, columns, and other ornaments. There are three theatres, but none of them are worth notice for their architecture. Madrid contains two palaces on a large scale, the Palacio Real at the western extremity of the city, and the Buen Retiro at the eastern. Both are insulated buildings: the Palacio Real is of a square form, its walls extending each way 404 feet, and having 86 feet in height; the inclosed court is 120 feet square. This palace contains a large collection of paintings by the best masters of Flanders, Italy, and Spain; also the crown, jewels, and other regalia. The Buen Retiro is a large regular square; but several parts having since been added without taste or judgment, it is an unharmonious mass; but it has very extensive gardens, and a large collection of paintings. Of the public walks of Madrid, the principal is the Prado, which runs along great part of the east, and part of the north side of the city. It forms a broad walk, planted with trees for carriages, and an alley on each side for pedestrians. Madrid enjoys almost always a cloudless sky, and a pure and serene atmosphere; but the air is extremely keen, from the great elevation, and from the vicinity of the snowy mountains of Guadarrama. The population of Madrid, including military, clergy, and strangers, is not far short of 200,000. The great school of Madrid occupies a building which formerly belonged to the Jesuits, and has 16 masters, who teach the languages and sciences. There is a botanical garden; also a chemical school, and classes for engineering, for anatomy, and the practice of medicine. There are academies for the study of history, and for painting, sculpture, and architecture; also for the Spanish language. The charitable institutions of Madrid are numerous. There are hospitals and institutions for the relief of all classes. There is a saltpetre work on a large scale; also a hat manufactory. There is here also a fabric of Mosaic, one of tapestry, and one of porcelain, like the Gobelins at Paris. There are around Madrid several royal residences, such as the Casa del Campo, a royal hunting seat on the Manzanares; the Pardo, a palace on the river; the Zarzuela, a beautiful rural seat, about six miles to the north of Madrid. Madrid is not an ancient city, its name being first mentioned in history as a castle, sacked by the Moors in 1109. It was occupied early in 1808 by French troops, who were finally obliged to quit it in 1813. The French troops, under the Duke d'Angoulême, again entered it in May 1823. 680 miles S. S. W. Paris, 850 W. by S. Rome. Long. 3. 33. E. W. Lat. 40. 25. 7. N.

MADRID, NEW, a town of the United States, in the state of Missouri, near the bank of the Mississippi.

MADRIGAL, a town of Spain, 35 miles S. S. W. Valladolid. Population 1230.

MADRIEJOS, a neat and well built town of Spain, in New Castile. It has manufactures of woollen stuffs. Population 8000.

MADUNA, an ancient city, and capital of a district of the same name, in the south of India, between the 9th and 10th deg. of N. lat.

MADURA, an island in the Eastern seas, situated off the north coast of the island of Java, from which it is separated by a narrow channel, called the strait of Madura, which is 100 miles in length, by 16 the average breadth. The country throughout is fertile and tolerably cultivated. The Dutch invaded this island about the year 1747, and made slaves of a great number of the inhabitants. Long. 112. 54. E. Lat. 6. 44. to 7. 15. S.

MAELSTRAND, an island on the west coast of Sweden, to the north of Gottenburg.

MAËSE, a large river of Europe, which rises in the French department of the Upper Marne, enters the Netherlands to the north of Charleville, and falls into the German ocean below Rotterdam. Course 400 miles.

MAESTRICHT, a town of the Netherlands, on the Maese, where that river is joined by the small stream of the Jaer. It communicates with the suburb of Wyck, on the opposite side, by means of a stone bridge of 500 feet in length. Its form, including the suburb, is nearly circular; and it is tolerably well built. The principal street extends from the bridge to the other extremity of the town; it is mostly occupied by shops; but the best dwelling-houses are in a street which runs parallel to it. The market place and the place d'armes are two handsome public squares. Of the public buildings, the chief are the town-hall and the church of St. Gervais; the other churches of the city are of little note; but the college, once occupied by the Jesuits, the theatre, and the arsenal, are worth the visit of a traveller. Maestricht is one of the strongest places of the Netherlands. It is surrounded by walls and ditches; but its principal strength consists in a number of detached bastions. The manufactures of this place consist in leather, flannel, stockings, and different kinds of coarse cloth; also in hardware. Here are likewise extensive breweries and distilleries. It was taken by the French in 1794. Population 18,500. 66 miles E. Brussels.

MAETER, a village of the Netherlands, in East Flanders, with 3000 inhabitants.

MAFFALUBRENSE, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro. Population 2700.

A MAPRA, a town of Portugal, 20 miles N. W. Lisbon. Population 1000.

MAGDALEN RIVER, a river of Canada, which runs into the river St. Lawrence.

MAGDALENA, a large river of America, in New Granada, which enters the sea, 63 miles N. E. Carthagena, Lat. 11. 2. N.—The name also of several other smaller rivers.

MAGDALENE ISLANDS, in the gulf of St. Lawrence. Lat. 47. 13. and 47. 42. N.

MAGDEBURG, a government of the Prussian states, in Saxony, comprising an extent of nearly 4400 square miles, and a population of 446,000. It is divided into 16 circles.

MAGDEBURG, a large city of the Prussian states, capital of the above government, in the province of Saxony, on the Elbe. It is one of the strongest fortresses in Germany, being surrounded with a number of out-works, and having a citadel in an island in the river, with an arsenal and store-houses. The town itself is divided into five parts; first, the Old Town, the Neumarkt, and the Friedrichstadt or tower fort; next, the New Town, and the quarter called Sudenburg. Magdeburg having been rebuilt since 1631, is better constructed than cities of old date. Of its squares, or open spaces, the principal are the Cathedral square, which has a number of neat houses; the Old Market, with a statue of the Emperor Otto the Great; and the Prince's Market, adjoining to the public walks. The most remarkable public buildings are the royal exchequer, the house where the different courts used to assemble; the ducal palace, the regency house, the government house, the new and old arsenals, &c. The cathedral, which is of old date, is built of freestone, with two spires. Magdeburg has also three houses of council or assembly, a Catholic church in the citadel for soldiers, 12 Protestant churches, one Catholic and three Protestant convents, five hospitals, two orphan-houses, a house of correction, and a work-house. The principal public walks are the prince's rampart, the cathedral square, the freemasons' garden, and the banks of the Elbe. The public establishments are, the courts of justice, the offices for civil affairs, a Protestant consistory, a medical board, the Lutheran establishment of Notre Dame, and various schools. Magdeburg has several public libraries and collections of paintings. It has extensive breweries and distilleries. The manufactures are of woollen, linen, stockings, hats, leather, tobacco, soap, and wax. Magdeburg is a town of old date, having been mentioned in history in the reign of Charlemagne. Population 30,250. 75 miles W. S. W. Berlin, 62 N. N. W. Leipzig. Long. 11. 38. 46. E. Lat. 52. 11. 4. N.

MAGDELAINE, LA PRAIRIE DE LA, or LA PRAIRIE, a flourishing village on the St. Lawrence, consisting of 100 well built houses.

MAGELLAN, STRAITS OF, a passage between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, at the southern extremity of the continent of America, upwards of 300 miles in length, from Cape Virgin, in the Atlantic, to Cape Desire, in the Pacific ocean, in some places several leagues over, and in others not half a league. The straits were discovered, and passed through, in the year 1520, by Ferdinando Magellan, a Portuguese, in the service of Spain. Long. 70. 10 77. W. Lat. 52. 30. to 54. S.

MAGEROE, an island at the N. extremity of Norwegian Lapland, containing Cape North. Long. 26. 0. 45. E. Lat. 71. 11. 30. N.

MAGGENTA, a town of Austrian Italy. Population 4000. 13 miles W. Milan.

MAGGIA, two rivers of Switzerland and Italy, which fall into Lake Maggiore.

MAGHAREE, or SEVEN HOES, islands on the W. coast of Ireland, at the entrance of Tralee bay.

MAGHERA, a small village of Ireland, county of Derry, 16 miles S. Coleraine.

MAGHERAFELT, a neat village of Ireland, 30 miles S. E. Londonderry.

MAGILLAGON POINT, a cape on the north-west extremity of the county of Londonderry.

MAGINDAMO, the most southerly of the Philippine islands, in the Eastern seas, of an extremely irregular form. It is about 300 miles long, and 105 broad. The Spaniards have been in possession of a large portion of the sea coast, to the west, north, and north-east, where they have planted colonies of Christians. The interior is intersected by lofty chains of mountains, with intervening plains, which afford pasture for vast herds of cattle. The country is also well wooded, and in many parts towards the sea-coast is covered with impenetrable jungle and forests. There are no ravenous wild beasts on the island; on which account deer, wild cattle, buffaloes, hogs, goats, and horses, multiply fast, the latter being of a small breed, but remarkable for their spirit. Long. 119. 30. to 125. E. Lat. 5. 40. to 9. 55. N.

MAGINDANO, the principal town of the above island, containing 20 houses. It is about six miles up the Pelangy. Opposite stands the town of Selangun, containing 200 houses. Long. 124. 40. E. Lat. 7. 9. N.

MAGNAC LAVAL, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne. Pop. 2800. 24 miles N. Limoges.

MAGNISA, a town of Asia Minor, the ancient Magnesia, at one time the capital of the Greek empire. 20 miles N. N. E. Smyrna. Long. 27. 18. E. Lat. 38. 44. N.

MAGNUS BAY, ST., a safe and commodious bay of the mainland of Shetland.

MAGRIE RIVER, a river of Canada, which runs into the gulf of St. Lawrence.

MAORA, a river of Italy. It rises in the Apennines, and falls into the Mediterranean.

MAHACKAMACK, a river of the United States, which falls into the Delaware.

MAHANTANGO, a tributary of the Susquehanna, in the United States, Pennsylvania.

MAHANUDDY, a river of Hindostan, which falls into the bay of Bengal in 20. N. lat.

MAHON, a river of Ireland, county of Waterford, which runs into the sea.

MAHONING, a river of the United States, Pennsylvania, which joins the Alleghany.

MAHRATTA TERRITORY, a very extensive country of Hindostan, which, till lately, extended across what is called the peninsula of India; and is mostly possessed by the peishwa, Nagpore rajah, Seindia, Holkar, Guicowar, and a few other inferior chiefs.

MARY RIVER, a river of Hindostan, which falls into the gulf of Cambay.

MARSA, a town of Naples, in Calabria Ultra, noted for the defeat of the French by the British, in an action near it, in 1806. Population 3000.

MAIDEN BRADLEY, a village and parish of England, in Wiltshire. Population 520.

MAIDEN CREEK, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania. It joins Schuylkill.

MAIDEN NEWTON, a town and parish of England, in Dorsetshire. Pop. 520.

MAIDENHEAD, a well built market town of England, in Berks, on the Thames, over which is a bridge of 13 semicircular arches. The principal trade is in malt, meal, and timber. 26 miles W. London.

MAIDSTONE, a market and borough town of England, county of Kent, on the Medway, which is here navigable for vessels of 50 or 60 tons, and is crossed by a bridge of five arches. The town consists chiefly of four principal streets, which cross each other in the market-place, with some smaller ones branching off at right angles. The church extends 227 feet in length, and 91 in breadth. There are besides, meeting-houses for Presbyterians, Independents, Unitarians, Quakers, Baptists, and Methodists. The court-hall is a neat and commodious modern building. Here the assizes for the county are held. The new buildings for the county jail, &c. are among the most splendid in the kingdom, covering a space of above 13 acres of land. Here is a small but handsome and commodious theatre; also a free grammar-school, and eight charity schools, besides Sunday schools. Here are also neat and extensive barracks; near to which are handsome and commodious assembly rooms. The archbishop of Canterbury had formerly a palace here, the remains of which are still considerable. There was a college, founded by Archbishop Courtenay, much of which is still remaining, and has been converted into dwelling and warehouses. The principal produce of the neighbourhood is hops; and Maidstone is the first hop market in the kingdom. Linen thread is manufactured; and in the vicinity are various paper mills, a distillery, two iron foundries, and breweries. Maidstone sends two members to parliament; the number of voters is 800. Pop. 12,508. 9 miles S. Rochester.

MAIG, a river of Ireland, which runs into the Shannon, 7 miles below Limerick.

MAIHIDPORE, a town of Hindostan, in Malwah, on the Soprah, 20 miles N. Oolain.

MAINCOTTA, a town of India, in Mysore. Houses 400. Long. 76. 52. E. Lat. 12. 38. N.

MAINE, DISTRICT OF, forming a part of the state of Massachusetts; bounded N. W. and N. by Lower Canada, E. by New Brunswick, S. E. and S. by the Atlantic, and W. by New Hampshire. Long. 66. 49. to 70. 55. W. Lat. 43. 5. to 48. N. Its length on the northern frontier is 200 miles; on the eastern 210. It contains the counties of Cumberland, Hancock, Kennebeck, Lincoln, Oxford, Somerset, Washington, and York. Its chief towns are Portland, Castine, Hallowell, Wiscasset, Paris, Norridgewock, Machias, and York. Population 228,708. Maine is rather an elevated country, having generally a diversified surface. A track commencing on the west side of the district, about 160 miles in length, and 60 in its greatest breadth, is mountainous. There is also a small mountainous track in the northern extremity. The remainder of the district may be considered generally as a moderately hilly country. The principal productions are grass, Indian corn, wheat, barley, rye, flax, &c. The climate is subject to great extremes both of heat and cold. The animals are, the deer, which have now nearly disappeared; the wolf and the bear, which are still numerous; the beaver, fox, and squirrel. The principal bays are Casco, Penobscot's, Frenchman's, Englishman's, Machias, and Pasamaquoddy. The most noted lakes are Moosehead, Umbagog, Sebago, Schoodic, and several others farther in the interior. The principal article of export is lumber. The district sends 7 representatives to Congress.

MAINE, one of the largest rivers of Germany, formed by the two streams called the Red and White Maine, whose united streams fall into the Rhine, opposite to Mentz.

MAINE, LOWER, a circle or province of the Bavarian states, comprising the territories in Franconia acquired by the treaty of Vienna in 1815, and the exchanges consequent on that treaty. The chief town is Wurzburg.

MAINE, UPPER, a circle or province of the Bavarian states, comprising the principalities of Bamberg and Upper Bayreuth, with the northern part of the Upper Palatinate. Population 434,000. The chief town is Bayreuth.

MAINE AND LOIRE, a department in the west of France, comprising a portion of Anjou, and the western part of the Touraine, and contiguous to the department of the Mayenne, the Sarthe, and the Indre and Loire. Population 404,000.

MAINE AND TAUBER, one of the ten circles of the grand duchy of Baden. Pop. 96,000.

MAINLAND OF SHETLAND, the largest of the Shetland islands, which extends 60 miles from N. to S., and is from 6 to 18 in breadth. The interior parts are craggy, mountainous, and barren; but along the shores, verdant spots, marshy plains, and indifferently fertile tracks, are interspersed. The coast is deeply indented with inlets of the sea. There are many small fresh-water lakes, and some mineral springs impregnated with iron. Agriculture is little attended to. The hills are mostly covered with heath, and afford good pasture for black cattle and sheep. They have also a very small but hardy breed of horses, called Shetland ponies; and a peculiar breed of swine, the flesh of which is esteemed very delicate. Eagles, hawks, ravens, and other birds of prey, are numerous. Swans, in great numbers, annually visit the small lakes; and geese, ducks, and sea birds, everywhere abound. Mainland is divided into eight parochial districts. Pop. 15,062.

MAIPO, a large river of Chili. It enters the Pacific, Lat. 33. 43. 2. N.

MAIRE, LA, STRAITS OF, a passage from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, between Terra del Fuego and Staten Land, about 15 miles long, and as many broad.

MAJSA, a town of Hungary, in Little Cumania, with 4100 inhabitants.

MAISONROIS, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne. Pop. 1900.

MAITEA, a small island in the South Pacific ocean. Long 148. 12. W. Lat. 17. 53. S.

MAIXANT, St., a town of France, department of the Two Seves, on the Sevre Niortoise. Pop. 5000. It has manufactures of cotton caps and stockings. 36 miles S.W. Poitiers.

MAJORCA, the principal of the Balearic isles, a group situated in the Mediterranean, to the east of Spain, and subject to that crown. It is about 100 miles from the coast of Spain, and 160 from Algiers; its length is about 40 miles; its breadth nearly equal. Pop. 136,000. It is almost surrounded by a chain of mountains, a branch of which penetrates towards the centre of the island. The climate is in general temperate. The chief towns are Palma, Alcudia, Pollenza, Soler, St. Martial, Andracio, Bunola, and a good many villages. There is a number of salt marshes, which might easily be rendered valuable. Coral is found. Game is abundant. The horned cattle are diminutive; but the sheep and hogs are large. A great quantity of sheep and goat milk cheese is made and exported to Spain. The soil is fertile, and produces oranges, vines, olives, and other fruits, which rival those of Portugal. The wool of Majorca is of general of good quality. They have few manufactures. Majorca and Minorca were the Balearic islands of the ancients.

MAJORI, a small town of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 2700.

MAKEN, a village and parish of England, 2 miles from Plymouth. Population 3018.

MAKKUM, a town of the Netherlands in Friesland. Population 2000.

MAKO, a market town of Hungary, on the Marosch. Population 7000.

MAKRINITZA, a town of Greece, 40 miles S. E. Larissa. Population 2000.

MALABAR, an extensive province of Hindostan, situated between the 10th and 13th degrees of N. lat. It is bounded N. by the province of Canara, S. by the rajah of Cochin's territories, E. by a chain of lofty mountains denominated the Western Ghats, and W. it is washed by the sea. This province consists either of flat land washed by the sea, or of different ranges of hills, extending to the foot of the mountains. It is intersected by a number of mountain streams. Its chief produce is timber, sandal-wood, cocoa nuts, coir, and black pepper. Its principal towns are Calicut, Tellicherry, and Cananore. The villages are numerous, and neatly built. This country is now under the dominion of the British.

MALABAR CAPE, or SANDY POINT, the south-east part of Cape Cod, in Massachusetts. Long. 70. 3. W. Lat. 41. 33. N.

MALABAR POINT, a noted promontory on the island of Bombay, near which is a celebrated temple of the Hindoos.

MALABRIGO, a small river of the province of Buenos Ayres, which falls into the Plata.

MALACCA, a considerable country of India beyond the Ganges, consisting of a large peninsula, connected with Siam by the isthmus of Kraw. At all other points it is surrounded by the sea, having on the west the Indian ocean, and the straits of Malacca, which separate it from Sumatra; on the east the gulf of Siam and the sea of China. It may be reckoned at 775 miles in length, and 125 of medium breadth. The country is traversed by a chain of very lofty mountains, and covered with extensive forests and marshes, so that it is very difficult to penetrate into the interior. The fruits are excellent and plentiful; but grain is but scantily produced. Game is also scarce. It is ruled chiefly by numerous petty states, and wars are frequent. In this turbulent system, usurpation, and all kinds of violence, are habitually practised. The influence of these causes, joined with seafaring and piratical habits, has formed a character which renders the Malays the terror of Asia. The Papuas or oriental negroes inhabit the interior. Malacca contains also colonies from several of the neighbouring countries and islands.

MALACCA, the capital of the country above described, situated on the western coast, upon the straits which bear its name. It was visited by the Portuguese in 1508, and afterwards stormed by them. It was then taken by the Dutch, who retained possession of it till 1795, when it was subjected by a British force. After the formation, however, of the settlement at Pulo Pinang, or Prince of Wales Island, the garrison and stores were withdrawn from Malacca, and the whole place dismantled. Its commercial importance is in consequence lost. The town is large; many of the houses are well built of stone; and there are several spacious and handsome streets. Long. 102. 12. E. Lat. 2. 14. N.

MALACCA, STRAITS OF, a narrow sea between the island of Sumatra and the country of Malacca, from the line to lat. 5. N.

MALACA, a large city of Spain, in Granada, on the coast of the Mediterranean, situated at the inland extremity of a deep bay. The town is commanded by an old Moorish fortress. The city itself is of a circular form, and is surrounded by a double wall, with nine gates, and a number of stately towers. The present city is of Moorish construction, and combines a number of contrivances for mitigating the extremes of heat, and for enjoying the tranquillity of retirement. The streets are narrow, the houses are large, and in general, each has a court into which the windows open. The public buildings are obscured by private houses, and the city does not even contain a good square. The principal buildings are the custom-house and the cathedral. The cathedral is very large. It is partly of Roman, and partly of Moorish architecture, though erected in the 16th century. The interior is finished with exquisite taste. The bishop's palace is in front of the cathedral. The Alameyda or public walk is also very fine. The harbour of Malaga is capable of containing about 400 merchant vessels and 20 ships of the line. A fine mole of 700 yards in length, runs out into the sea, and two smaller ones have been subsequently built. The rivers Guadalmedina and Guadalorce discharge their waters at this place into the ocean. The great export is wine and fruit. Malaga was founded by the Phœnicians. It fell into the hands of the Moors in 714, and was not wrested from them until 1487. It was taken in 1810 by the French, and remained in their possession till the year 1812. Population 52,000. 55 miles W. S. W. Granada, 203 S. by W. Madrid. Long. 4. 25. 2. W. Lat. 36. 43. 39. N.

MALAN, an irregularly shaped lake in Sweden, N. and W. of Stockholm, 80 miles long.

MALAUCEUNE, a town of France, department of the Vaucluse. Population 2600.

MALCHIN, a town of Germany, in Mecklenburg-Schwerin. Population 2600.

MALCHWAY, a river of Wales, in Radnorshire, which falls into the Wye.

MALDEGEM, a town of the Netherlands, 12 miles E. Brugge. Population 4700.

MALDIVES, a cluster of small islands formed from coral, in the Indian ocean, extending from the equinoctial line to the 8th degree of northern latitude, and situated between the 72d and 74th of eastern longitude. They are divided into 17 groups, separated from each other by narrow channels, which are unsafe for ships of burden. The greatest breadth of the chain is from 20 to 24 leagues. These islands carry on a considerable trade with each other, and also with the continent of India. Each group has its respective branch of industry. In one group the brewers reside, the goldsmiths in another, and the locksmiths, mat-makers, potters, turners, and joiners, each inhabit their respective group. The climate is intensely hot, and unhealthy for Europeans.

MALDON, or MALDEN WATER, an ancient borough and market town of England, in Essex, on the estuary of the Blackwater. The public buildings are, the principal church of All Saints; St Mary's church, a spacious building, said to have been built before the year 1036; St Peter's, now united to all Saints, near which is the town-hall, a large old brick building. At the west end of the town is an extensive range of barracks. It sends two members to parliament. Population 3193. 30 miles N. E. London.

MALDONADO, a town of South America, in the government of Buenos Ayres, near the N. entrance of the Plata, and sheltered from the south-east winds by a small island which bears the same name. The Spaniards have a fort here. Long. 55. 36. W. Lat. 34. 50. S.

MALDONADO, a small river of the province of Buenos Ayres, which enters the sea in the bay of Maldonado.

MALENBA, a seaport on the coast of Loango, in Western Africa, belonging to Portugal. The European counting-houses are arranged round a large square. This spot is very unhealthy. 80 miles S. Loango.

MALGRAT, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, on the Mediterranean. Population 3200.

MALNEUREUX ISLANDS, in the gulf of Mexico, in Lake Borge.

MALINHEAD, the most northerly point of Ireland, 23 miles N. Londonderry.

MALIVAGUNGA, one of the principal rivers in the island of Ceylon.

MALLEN, a town of Spain, in Arragon. Population 2400.

MALLEVILLE, a town of France, department of the Aveyron. Population 2300.

MALLICOLLO, one of the largest of the New Hebrides, in the South Pacific ocean, 18 leagues long, and 7 wide. Long. of Port Sandwich, 107. 57. 23. E. Lat. 16. 25. 20. S.

MALLING, WEST, a market town of England, in Kent, near a tributary rivulet of the Medway. Pop. 1265. 23 miles S. E. London.

MALLOW, a town of Ireland, in the county of Cork, on the Blackwater, over which is an excellent stone bridge. Its chief structures are a fine church, a good market-house, and a horse barrack. It sends one member to the imperial parliament. 32 miles S. Limerick.

MALMEDY, a town of the Prussian province of the Lower Rhine, on the Recht, 20 miles S. Aix-la-Chapelle. Population 4400.

MALMO, one of the strongest towns of Sweden, on the Sound. It has wide streets, with a spacious square. Pop. 5900. 18 miles E. S. E. Copenhagen.

MALMÖRUS-LAN, one of the new divisions of Sweden. It lies along the Sound and the Baltic, including a great part of the ancient Bohuslen or Scania. Population 137,000.

MALMESBURY, a very ancient market and borough town of England, in Wiltshire, near two tributary streams of the Avon. It has manufactures of woollen cloth. Its castle is demolished; but there are some remains of its abbey. Pop. 1332. 23 miles N. E. Bath.

MALOGS, ST, a seaport of France, department of the Ile and Vilaine, on the small island of Aaron, which communicates with the continent by means of a mole. The entrance to the town at the end of the mole is strongly defended. There are also ramparts around the town; and on the north side it is inaccessible, in consequence of rocks and fortifications. It is of an oblong form. The principal public buildings, such as the cathedral, the town-hall, and the episcopal palace, are situated in the market-place. The harbour is large, but difficult of access. It has a considerable trade, and manufactures of thread, woollens, and linen. Pop. 10,000.

MALOI-JAROSLAWITZ, a town of Russia, government of Kaluga, noted as the scene of a most sanguinary action between the French and Russians in October 1812. Population 1650. Long. 36. 14. E. Lat. 55. 0. N.

MALONE, a village of the United States, in Franklin county, New York.

MALPAS, a market town of England, in Cheshire, with a handsome church. Population of the township 1137.

MALPLAQUET, a village of France, department of the North, the scene of a sanguinary battle in 1709, between the French and the allies. Population 1100. 9 miles S. Mons.

MALSTROM, or MOSKE-STROM, a violent whirlpool on the coast of Norway. Long. 10. 40. E. Lat. 68. 8. N.

MALTA, an island of the Mediterranean, nearly opposite to the south angle of Sicily. Its length is about 20 miles; its greatest breadth 12; its circumference 60; its distance from Sicily about 50. Its coast is in general steep and rugged. It is well fortified throughout. The two small islands of Gozzo and Cerrino are separated from it only by a narrow channel. The superficial extent of the three islands is about 179 square miles, and the population 90,000, of whom above 75,000 are in Malta. Every spot is cultivated with the greatest care; and soil, when deficient, is supplied in ship loads from Sicily. Most of the productions both of Europe and the tropical climates, which have been tried here, have succeeded. Indigo and saffron are cultivated; and also cotton, which has been exported to a great amount. The south-east wind, called the Sirocco, is always unpleasant, and at times injurious to vegetation. The honey of Malta is in repute. The climate is healthy. Malta was possessed by the Carthaginians, Romans, and afterwards by the Saracens, who were driven out by the Normans. They retained it till its occupation in the 16th century by the knights of St. John of Jerusalem, who fortified it, and participated in all the attacks made upon the Turks by the Christian powers, both by sea and on the coast of Africa. It was besieged by the Turks in 1565. After losing four months in reiterated attacks, and sacrificing a great part of their army, they were obliged to re-embark, and from that time forward they forbore from all further attempts on Malta. In 1798, Malta surrendered to Bonaparte, and received a French garrison. Being afterwards blockaded by a British squadron, it was forced to surrender, through famine, in 1800; and by the treaty of Paris in 1814, was confirmed to Britain. The chief towns are La Valetta, Civita Vecchia, and Malta or Melita. In no fortress in Europe are the defences more imposing. To garrison it completely would require about 30,000 men. Long. 14. 12. E. Lat. 35. 50. N.

MALTON, a borough and market town of England, North Riding of Yorkshire, on the Derwent, which is crossed by a spacious stone bridge. There are two towns, the Old and the New. The houses are mostly of stone, and the town in general is clean and well built. Here are two parish churches. There are, besides, places of worship for Quakers, Presbyterians, and Methodists. There is a theatre and a handsome suite of public rooms. The remains of the castle are still visible. Here is a large, commodious, and well managed work-house. Near New Malton is a mineral spring. Large quantities of corn, butter, and bacon-hams, are exported. There are two iron foundries and two porter breweries; and the manufacture of malt, linen, hats, gloves, hides, and pelts, is carried on. It sends two members to parliament: number of voters 500. Population of Old Malton 1004; of New Malton 4005. 18 miles N. E. York.

MALVERN, GREAT AND LITTLE, two villages of England, in Worcester. The first is noted for its mineral springs. It has a church, the remains of its once celebrated monastery. Population of Great Malvern 1563. 8 miles from Worcester.

MALVERN HILLS, a range of hills in England, counties of Worcester and Hereford.

MALWAH, an extensive province of Hindostan, situated principally between the 22d and 23d degrees of northern latitude, bounded N. by the provinces of Ajmeer and Agra, E. by Allahabad and Gundwaneh, S. by Khair-elah and Berar, and W. by Ajmeer and Gujerat. It is 250 miles long, and 150 broad.

MALWAN, a seaport of Hindostan, in Bejjapore. Long. 73. 20. E. Lat. 10. 4. N.

MAKERA, a town of France, department of the Sarthe, on the Dive. Pop. 5500.

MAMORE, an abundant river of Quito. It enters the Madera in Lat. 11. 55. S.

MAN, or MAUN, a river of England, in Nottinghamshire. It joins the Medon.

MAN, ISLE or, an island of Great Britain, in the Irish sea, nearly equidistant from the coasts of England, Scotland, and Ireland. It is about 30 miles long, and 10 or 12 miles broad, and terminates in a sharp point towards the north; and on the south is a small island, termed the Calf of Man. It is within 4. 17. and 4. 47. W. long. and 54. 4. and 54. 27. N. lat. The interior and central part of the island is mountainous, and some of the hills attain the elevation of 2000 feet. The towns and villages are almost all situated along the coast; and the interior is mostly divided into small farms, or left in a state of nature, covered with heath and gorse. The principal towns are Castletown, the capital; Douglas, Peel, and Ramsey; and the principal villages Saxeby, Balasala, and Kirkmichael. The soil is rather unproductive. No minerals of any consequence occur in the island, except lead, and some copper and iron. There are several quarries of stone and thin blue slate. The climate is generally mild. The animal productions, besides cattle and horses, are badgers, foxes, eagles, and mottled hawks. Immense quantities of sea-fowls breed about the rocks, especially on the Calf of Man, where 5000 young puffins are generally taken in a year. Agriculture has of late years made great progress here; the crops are wheat, oats, barley, turnips, potatoes, flax, &c. Great numbers of cattle are annually fattened for exportation; and nearly 30,000 lbs. of butter are annually sent to England. Poultry of all kinds are numerous and cheap; also eggs and fish. Above 500 boats are regularly employed in the herring fishery. Of the manufactures, coarse hats, cotton goods, and linen cloth, are made in different parts of the island. Liverpool is the port in England in which nearly all the trade of the Isle of Man centres. The Isle of Man is ruled by a governor, a council of public affairs, and the house of Keys, the representatives of the people, now a self-elected body. The whole island contains 17 parishes or kirks, and is under the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of a bishop, who is styled bishop of Sodor and Man, and is besides sole baron of the isle, and possesses other important privileges. The duke of Athol was formerly lord proprietor of the island. But in 1765 the sovereignty was purchased of him by the English government, for 1,70,000, to which 1,3000 per annum was added in 1792: Pop. 40,081. The port of Douglas is 60 miles S. E. by S. Liverpool.

MANAAR, an island off the north-west coast of Ceylon. Long. 79. 56. E. Lat. 9. 6. N.

MANAPIRA, a river of Venezuela. It enters the Orinoco.

MANASQUAN, a river of the United States, in New Jersey. It runs into the Atlantic.

MANATOULIN ISLAND, an extensive chain of islands in Lake Superior, 160 miles long, MANCHA, LA, a province in the central part of Spain, to the south of Old Castile, and to the north of Andalusia. It contains an area of 8000 square miles, with a population of 200,000. It is divided into Upper and Lower. The chief town of the former is Ciudad Real; of the latter Ocaña. The other principal towns are La Guardia, Almagro, Teniblique, and Manzanares. This province is almost entirely surrounded by mountains, forming parts of the Sierra de Oca, the Sierra de Alcaraz, and the well known Sierra Morena. It has, however, no large rivers; for though traversed by the Tagus, the Guadiana, and the Xucar, none of them are of large size in this part of Spain.

MANCHA REAL, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, 7 miles E. Jaen. Population 4000.

MANCHE, LA, a department of France, bounded W. and N. by the English channel, S. E. by the department of Calvados; S. by that of Ille and Vilaine. Population 583,600. This department comprises the western part of Normandy. St. Lo is the capital, but Cherbourg the largest town.

MANCHESTER, a market town of England, in Lancashire, the great centre of the cotton trade, and the greatest manufacturing town in the kingdom. It is situated on the Irwell, which has been rendered navigable from Liverpool. The greater part of the town lies on the left or eastern bank of the river; but the district of Salford, formerly a suburb, is built entirely on the western bank, and is joined to the opposite side by five bridges. The town extends two miles in length, and 1½ in breadth; but its dimensions are continually increasing by the erection of new houses and streets. It has within a few years received great improvements. The central parts of the town consist of a great number of streets, lanes, alleys, and courts, all crowded with warehouses, factories, and shops. But towards the extremities of the town, among the more modern buildings, are very handsome and elegant dwelling-houses, either standing alone, or forming rows, places, parades, &c. The churches are sixteen in number, viz. the Collegiate or Christ Church, St Mary's, St Peter's, St Anne's, St Paul's, St James's, St Michael's, St Clement's, St Thomas's, St

George's, St Stephen's, Trinity, &c. besides about twice as many dissenting chapels. The Collegiate or Christ Church, usually called the Old Church, is a fine Gothic structure, richly ornamented in the cathedral style. The whole breadth is 130 feet from E. to W.; the whole length is 216 feet. St Mary's church is in the Doric style. It has a fine spire steeple, 186 feet high, supported by 8 Ionic pillars. St Peter's church is also of Doric architecture, and much resembles a Grecian temple. St Anne's is a handsome building, erected in 1723. St Paul's is a very spacious building, chiefly of brick, with a lofty tower. The dissenting chapels in general are extremely neat and elegant. They belong chiefly to Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists, Quakers, and Roman Catholics. No town is more distinguished by the number of its charitable institutions. Cheetham hospital, commonly called the College, is intended for the maintenance and education of 60 boys, from the age of 6 to 14. The infirmary is a handsome set of buildings, opposite Piccadilly; it includes a large general hospital, a dispensary, and a lunatic hospital and asylum. There is, besides a lying-in-hospital; the Ladies' Auxiliary society, for aiding poor women during their confinement in their own houses; the house of recovery, or fever ward; the Stranger's Friend society, instituted in 1791; an hospital for persons afflicted with diseases in the eye; also a lock hospital and penitentiary; the Manchester poor-house; besides various other charitable institutions and associations for different purposes. The charity schools are numerous in Manchester; also the Sunday schools. There is a royal Lancasterian school, and a smaller establishment on the same plan; also two national schools, on Dr Bell's system. Of the associations for promoting literature and science, the principal is the Literary and Philosophical society, founded in 1781. The Exchange, for the resort of the merchants and tradesmen, is a very fine and spacious building. It is built in the Doric style. In the lower floor is the news-room, a magnificent hall, comprising an area of 4000 feet, and upper rooms, for public dinners, meetings, &c. on a corresponding scale. The New Bailey prison is a large building, founded in 1707. Of the manufactures, the principal, and the source of most of the rest, is that of cotton. Manchester is the centre of this trade, which extends around it in all directions to Furness and Derby on the north and south, and to Leeds and Liverpool on the east and west. It is, besides, the general depot from which the raw material is distributed through all parts of the district, and in which all this scattered merchandise is again collected, when finished, into a centre, to be again expanded over a wider circle; to be sent to Hull, Liverpool, and London, and thence all over the world. The principal articles manufactured at Manchester at present are velvets, fustians, dimitties, calicoes, checks, tickings, jeans, shirtings, gingham, gullings, handkerchiefs, nankeens, diapers, muslinets, muslins, cambrics, and almost every kind of fancy cotton, and cotton and silk goods. The spinning trade is becoming every year more extensive, and considerable quantities of yarn are annually exported. The cotton being carried to the mill in its rudest state, is made to pass through a succession of rollers, spindles, &c. and to undergo the various operations of cleaning, carding, drawing, stretching and twisting, until the mass of unconnected fibres comes out from this process a continuous thread of the utmost fineness and of very great strength, and with its value augmented one thousand fold. The weaving is also carried on to a great extent; and the invention of power looms, or looms worked by machinery, has been recently introduced, and have extended considerably. But the erection and keeping up of this various and complicated machinery, which is constantly at work, is itself a source of very great business in and around Manchester. This gives rise to great iron foundries, and other works of a similar kind, and to the invention even of new machines to facilitate its operations. Besides the weaving and spinning, the printing, dyeing, and bleaching businesses are carried on to a very great extent in and around Manchester. The hat manufacture is also very extensive, and several well managed sulphuric acid, or oil of vitriol works, besides a great number of other manufactories. By means of the canals which proceed from it to different parts of the country, Manchester enjoys a communication by water both with the eastern and western seas, being situated directly in the line of navigation which here extends across the island from shore to shore, while it is equally open to the north and south by various branches from the main trunk. Manchester is governed by a boroughreeve, two constables, a deputy constable, and a number of inferior officers. Although one of the largest towns in the kingdom, it sends no member to parliament. Population, for successive years, of Manchester and Salford:—In 1767, 19,800; 1773, 42,900; 1788, 50,000; 1791, 70,000; 1811, 98,000; 1821, 133,788.

MANCHESTER, a post township of the United States, Vermont. Pop. 1502.—2d, Of Essex county, Massachusetts. Pop. 1197.—3d, A township in York county, Pennsylvania.

MANCILLA, a town of Spain, province of Leon, Population 2500.

MANDAVEE, a large fortified seaport of Hindostan, province of Cutch, on the northeast shore of the Indian ocean. It carries on a considerable trade with Bombay, Arabia, &c. Long. 69. 34. E. Lat. 22. 50. N.

MANDEO, a river of Spain, in Galicia, which falls into the bay of Ferrol.

MANDINGO, or MANDING, a mountainous territory in Central Africa, bounded E. by Bambarra, N. by Fouladoo, S. and W. by Gadou and Jallonkadoo. The country is rocky and barren, and contains no towns of any consequence, except Kaffalia. The whole region is watered by the Niger in its early course. The Mandingoes have now spread themselves over most of Africa.

MANDURIA, an ancient town of Naples, 6 miles N. E. Cassano. Population 4000.

MANEDORF, a village of Switzerland, on the lake of Zurich. Population 2100.

MANERBIO, a town of Austrian Italy, in the Milanese. Population 3300.

MANFREDONIA, a town of Naples, in the Capitanata. Population 5000.

MANG, a river of Ireland, which rises in the mountains of Kerry.

MANGALORE, called also COBRIAL BUNDER, a seaport and fortress of Hindostan, on the eastern shore of the Indian ocean, province of Canara. It is now the station of the judge, collector, &c. of South Canara. Long. 73. E. Lat. 12. 49. N.

MANGAY ISLANDS, in the gulf of St Lawrence, near the south coast of Labrador.

MANHANTANGO CREEK, a river of Pennsylvania, which runs into the Susquehannah.

MANHEGAN, an island of the United States, on the coast of Maine.

MANHEIM, or MANNHEIM, a town of Germany, in the grand duchy of Baden, at the confluence of the Neckar and the Rhine. Mannheim was a petty village, when it was chosen for the site of a town in 1606, by the reigning elector palatine. It has since advanced rapidly; the present palace was built, and the town fortified, according to the rules of the celebrated Coehorn. It has suffered severely from sieges. In 1795, it was bombarded by the French, to whom it afterwards surrendered; it was afterwards besieged and taken by the Austrians, and in the course of these operations it sustained considerable injury. It presents a very fine view from a distance. It is built with the greatest regularity, and is in fact the finest town in Germany. It is of an oval form, and was surrounded with ramparts. These have been levelled, and laid out in gardens. The town is divided into four quarters. The palace belonging to the grand duke occupies the side next the Rhine. It contains several handsome apartments, with a gallery of paintings, cabinets of antiquities and natural history, and a library with 60,000 volumes. The observatory is a noble building, with a curious tower 108 feet in height. The custom-house resembles a palace: it is surrounded with colonades, under which are shops. The other public buildings are the convents of the Augustines and Capuchines, now both secularized; the arsenal, the play-house, the merchant's hall, the theatre, the Lutheran, the Calvinist, and Catholic churches, the three hospitals, the work-house, the orphan-house, and the church that belonged to the Jesuits. It has a gymnasium, with drawing and music schools; also a mercantile school, and other literary institutions. It is noted for its ma-manufacture of tinsel were resembling gold. The distillation of aromatic waters still continues to be an employment here. The other manufactures are tobacco, ribbons, shawls, linen, and playing cards. There are also an extensive bleaching ground and tanneries. It has a bridge of boats over the Neckar, and a flying bridge over the Rhine. Population 15,200. 36 miles S. by W. Mentz. Long. 8. 23. 0. E. Lat. 49. 29. 18. N.

MANICKPORE, the capital of a district of Hindostan, on the Ganges. Long. 81. 25. E. Lat. 25. 47. N.

MANICOUAGAN, or BLACK RIVER, a river of Lower Canada; also a lake.

MANILLA, a town of the island of Lucon, and the capital of the Spanish settlements in the Philippines, situated on the banks of a bay of the same name, which is 25 miles in circumference, and receives some considerable rivers. It is perhaps one of the most happily situated towns in the world. It is large, and contains many handsome private houses; and notwithstanding the frequent earthquakes, it has some magnificent churches. The largest and best part of the town is occupied by monasteries and convents. Population 38,000, consisting chiefly of mulattoes, Indians, or Chinese, who devote themselves to agriculture, and to the arts of industry. An intercourse is carried on from Manila with the Chinese port of Amoy, and with the north-eastern ports of China. The chief exports are cordage, resinous substances, pitch and tar, cloths, rushes, rattans, indigo of an excellent quality, rice, and cotton, copper, indigo, and cochineal, with a large proportion of treasure. There is a castle or fort which stands at the west end of the city. In the year 1645, great part of this city was destroyed by an earthquake. In the year 1762, Manila was taken by the English, and a million sterling was exacted for its ransom. Long. 120. 54. E. Lat. 14. 38. N.

MANLIUS, a township and village of the United States, Onondago county, New York.

MANNSHAETTERO, a mountain chain in Austria, beginning at the frontier of Moravia, and terminating at the Danube.

MANNINGHAM, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 2474.

MANNINGTREE, a market town of England, in Essex, on the Stour. Pop. 1235.

MANOR, a small river of Scotland. It joins the Tweed 2 miles above Peebles.

MANOR HAMILTON, a small neat village of Ireland, 17 miles W. Enniskillen.

MANOSQUE, a town of France, department of the Lower Alps, near the Durance. In 1708 it was dreadfully shaken by an earthquake. Pop. 5400. 490 miles S. by E. Paris.

MANSERA, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, on the Cardener. It has a castle and a church, and manufactures of silk. Population 3000. 29 miles N. N. W. Barcelona.

MANE, L'E., a town of France, department of the Sarthe, near the Sarthe. The streets are wide and clean. The only public buildings or institutions worth notice are, the cathedral and other churches, the public library, the museum, and the hospital. It has manufactures of linen, sail-cloth, flannel, serge, and druggets; also leather, gloves, paper, soap, and wax candles. Pop. 18,500. 75 miles W. by N. Orleans.

MANSFIELD, a market town of England, county of Nottingham, on the river Maun. It consists of two principal streets, and three smaller ones. The church is in the later Gothic style. Here are also places of worship for Presbyterians, Calvinists, Quakers, Baptists, and Methodists. It has a free grammar school, a charity school, and a small theatre. The trade of Mansfield consists chiefly in corn, malt, cotton spinning, hosiery, and lace-manufactories. It has three iron foundries. Mansfield is a place of great antiquity. The story of the Miller of Mansfield happened in the time of Henry II., or perhaps later. Population 7061. 14 miles N. Nottingham.

MANSFIELD WOODHOUSE, a township of England, in Nottingham. Population 1598. — Mansfield is the name of several townships in the United States.

MANILLA, a town of Spain, 10 miles S. E. Leon. Population 2000.

MANSOURA, a town of Lower Egypt, built by the Saracens as a bulwark against the invasion of the Christians. A fourth part of it is at present in ruins. 24 miles S. S. W. Damietta.

MANTES, a town of France, department of the Seine and Oise, on the Seine. Pop. 4300. 31 miles W. N. W. Paris.

MANTILLY, a town of France, department of the Orne. Population 2300.

MANTINGEA, anciently a city of the Morea, famous for the victory and death of Epaminondas, 363 years before the Christian era.

MANTUA, a delegation or province of Austrian Italy, contiguous to the duchies of Parma and Modena. Population 214,000. It is watered by the Po, the Oglio, the Mincio, the Secchio, and a number of smaller streams.

MANTUA, a city of Austrian Italy, situated partly on two islands formed by the waters of the Mincio, and partly on the main land. On the smaller of the islands stands the closely built part of the city: on the larger, called the island of Ceresse, is a number of gardens and old fortifications, but few buildings. On the mainland, to the south, is situated the extensive suburb of Ceresse; to the north, the citadel, and the strongly fortified suburb of St Georgia. Mantua is thus, both by nature and art, one of the strongest places in Europe. It is entered by bridges, flanked with redoubts. The city is built on a plain of tolerable regularity, and is divided by a canal into two nearly equal parts. Most of the streets are broad, regular, and well paved; the houses of stone, and in general well built; and the public squares are spacious and elegant. Of the latter, the most noted is the Piazza di Virgilio, used as a promenade. In its centre stands Virgil's monument, a column of marble. The principal public edifice at Mantua is the cathedral, a beautiful building, surmounted by a fine dome, and adorned in the interior with rows of Corinthian pillars, and a number of paintings. The other churches of the city are numerous; but the only one that deserves notice is that of St Andrew, the interior of which is beautifully painted. The other buildings are the Corte, with its hall, the Palazzo della Giustizia; the palace of the Gonzaga family; and the one which, from its shape, bears the singular name of the Palazzo di T. Besides these, may be mentioned the university buildings, the arsenal, the Jewish synagogue, the public library, and a number of private mansions, in an elegant style of architecture. Mantua contains likewise several valuable collections of paintings, and a gallery of antiquities, belonging to the academy of arts and sciences. The population and manufactures of this town are said to have declined since the removal of the ducal court in the end of the 17th century. In 1796 and 1799 the population was 30,000; it is now 23,000. The silk manufactures were formerly flourishing, and are still considerable; those of leather and woollens are likewise of importance. Mantua can boast of an antiquity almost equal to that of Rome. It shared the prosperity of that metropolis, suffered under her disasters, experienced all the vicissitudes of the middle ages, and, like other Italian cities, emerged from them into liberty and independence. It was surrendered to the French under Bonaparte, in February 1797; was taken by the allies in 1799; again ceded to the French in 1801, from whose possession it was finally taken in 1814. 70 miles W. S. W. Venice. 70 E. S. E. Milan. Long. 10. 46. E. Lat. 45. 8. N.

MANYAN, a river of Wales, Denbighshire.

MANYFOLD, a river of England, in Staffordshire, which runs into the Dove.

MANZANARES, a river of Spain, which joins the Henares 8 miles below Madrid.

MANZANARES, a river of S. America, which enters the sea close to the city of Cumana.

MANZANARES, or MANZANA, a town of Spain, 21 miles E. Ciudad Real. Pop. 6900.

MAONA, or MASSACRE ISLAND, one of the Navigator's islands, in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 189. 1. E. Lat. 14. 22. S.

MARACAIBO, a government or province of the Caracas, in South America, bounded W. by the government of Rio de la Hacha, N. by the Carribean sea, E. by the province of Venezuela. Population 100,000.

MARACAIBO, the capital of the above province, on the lake of this name, at six leagues distance from the sea. There is a great number of houses at Maracaibo, built with chalk and sand, and with a great deal of taste; but the best houses are covered with a sort of reed which grows on the banks of the lake. This mixture of houses, covered with tiles and with reeds, gives to the city the mean air of a village, and exposes it to constant danger from fire. Population 81,000, including 5000 slaves. A bar of quicksand, which has but 10 or 12 feet depth of water, entirely excludes large vessels, and with difficulty admits small ones. 140 leagues W. Caraccas. Long. 71. 46. W. Lat. 10. 30. N.

MARACAIBO, a large lake of the Caracas, in the province of Venezuela. Its length is 50 leagues; its greatest breadth 30; and its circumference upwards of 150.

MARACAY, or MORACAO, a town of South America, in the province and government of Venezuela, on the lake Valencia. Three-fourths of its houses are built of stone, and with as much elegance as solidity. The streets are not paved: the sand is raised in consequence by the wind and is exceedingly inconvenient. A new house of worship, large, and of most regular architecture, serves as a parish church. The inhabitants are active and industrious. Population 8400.

MARAGA, a city of Persia, in the province of Aderbijan, in a low valley, 12 miles from the large lake of Urumen. It is well built, has a spacious bazar, and is encompassed with a high wall. Population 15,000. Long. 46. 25. E. Lat. 37. 20. N.

MARAGA, a small town of Upper Egypt, on the left bank of the Nile.

MARANHAS, or MARANAN, a province of Brazil, which comprehends the island of that name, and part of the adjacent continent. It is bounded E. by the province of Senar, N. by the Brazilian sea, W. by the province of Pam, S. by the country inhabited by the savage Indians. There are several islands annexed to it besides Maranhum.

MARANHAM, a large island of Brazil, at the mouth of the river Marim, Itapiemni, and Momyi, on the north side of the above province. It is 31 miles in length, fertile, and well inhabited. 402 miles N. W. Cape St Roque. Long. 43. 37. W. Lat. 2. 30. S.

MARANO, a town of Naples, 6 miles N. W. Naples. Population 6600.

MARANG, a town of France, department of the Lower Charente. Population 4700.

MARATEA, a town of Naples, 10 miles S. E. Policastro. Population 4000.

MARATHON, a village on the E. shore of Attica, famous for the victory of Miltiades over the Persians. 20 miles N. E. Athens.

MARAWAR, or MARAWAR, a district of the south of India, opposite to Ceylon, and between the 9th and 10th degrees of N. lat.

MARAZION, a market town of England, in Cornwall, situated on an arm of the sea. It imports timber, coals, and iron, for the use of the neighbouring mines. Population 1253. 3½ miles from Penzance. Long. 5. 17. W. Lat. 50. 7. N.

MARBLEHEAD, a post township of the United States, in Massachusetts. Pop. 5900.

MARBLETOWN, a post township of the United States, in Ulster county, New York, 10 miles W. Kingston. Population 3363.

MARBEUF, a village of France, department of the Eure. Population 1800.

MARBOZ, a town of France, department of the Ain. Population 2500.

MARBRÖCK, a river of England, in Shropshire, which falls into the Severn.

MARBURG, a town of Germany, on the Lahn. It has a Lutheran, a Calvinist, and a Catholic church, an hospital, two infirmaries, an orphan-house and workhouse, a university, and several charitable institutions. Population 6500. 45 miles S. W. Cassel.

MARBURG, a town of the Austrian states, in Styria, on the Drave. Population 5000. 116 miles S. by W. Vienna.

MARCELLIN, St., a town of France. Population 3400. 23 miles W. by S. Grenoble.

MARCELLUS, a post township of the United States, in Onondago county, New York. Population 4725.

MARCEMAT, a town of France, department of the Cantal. Population 2100.

MARCH, a market town of England, county of Cambridge, on the Nen. It has some trade in coals, timber, and corn. The church is elegant and spacious. Population 3850.

MARCHIENNES, a town of France. Pop. 2200. 9 miles W. N. W. Valenciennes.

MARCIANISE, a town of Italy. Pop. 5700. 13 miles N. Naples.

MARCIANTY, a town of France, department of the Saône and Loire. Population 2400.

MARCO, St., a town of Sicily, in the Val di Demona. Population 3000.

MARCO, St., a town of Naples, in Calabria Citra. It has, besides the cathedral, two good churches. Population 7200.

MARCA, a small river of the Netherlands, which falls into the Dendre.

MARCUS HOOK, a post township of the United States, in Pennsylvania.

MARDEN, a village and parish of England, in Kent. Population 2051.

MAREN, a river of Sennaar, in Africa, which falls into the Taccaze.

MAREMEG, a river of North America, joins the Mississippi 40 miles below the Missouri.

MARENGO, a village of the Milanese, on the Bornida, on the border of a great plain, on which, on the 14th June 1800, Bonaparte defeated the Austrians under general Melus. Population 2200. 5 miles S. E. Alessandria.

MARENNE, a town of France. It has a brisk traffic in salt, wine, and brandy. Population 4700. 25 miles S. Rochelle.

MAREOTIS, an extensive lake of Egypt, south of Alexandria, running parallel to the Mediterranean, so as to leave only a narrow strip of land on which that city is situated.

MARGAM, a village of Wales, county of Glamorgan. Population 3047.

MARGARITTA, a town of European Turkey, in Albania. Population 6000.

MARGARITTA, an island in the Caribbean sea, on the coast of Cumana, separated by an arm of the sea, from which it is eight leagues wide. The island is about 30 miles in circumference. Population 5500 whites, 2500 Indians, and 6500 slaves and freed persons. Long. 64. and 65. W. Lat. 10. 56. N.

MARGARITTA, STRAITS OF, the channel which separates the island from Terra Firma.

MARGATE, a seaport town of England, at the mouth of the Thames, and north-eastern extremity of the coast of Kent. In 1724, it was but a trifling fishing town; but being well adapted for sea-bathing, it has gradually grown into importance. The older part of the town stands in a low situation along the shore, and consists of a number of small and irregular streets. The part which formed the village of St John's now forms the High-street. From this the land rises towards the north; and on this slope the New Town has been built, consisting of neat and excellent modern buildings, and several spacious squares. The church, which is situated on the top of the hill, south-east of the town, is a spacious building, containing several ancient sepulchral monuments. Here are, besides, places of worship for Baptists, Catholics, Wesleyans, and Huntingdonites; and the other principal buildings are the assembly-rooms, the theatre, and the bathing-rooms. For the benefit of the poor, a general sea-bathing infirmary was opened in 1796. There are various other charities, and also several schools. Besides the amusements of assemblies, &c. the vicinity abounds with agreeable walks and rides, and the company make frequent excursions by water, to Deal, Dover, and other places; and with Broadstairs and Ramsgate a continual intercourse is kept up. About 1½ mile south-west of the town, is Dandelion, a fine rural spot, encompassed with wood, and formerly much resorted to in summer. There are many other favourite walks and rides; but the stone pier, where the packets or boats land their passengers, is the most fashionable promenade. This pier having suffered greatly from a storm in January 14, 1803, which swept away the bathing-rooms, and part of the High-street; a new pier was built at an expence of L.90,000; and the promenade has a handsome raised and inclosed walk on it. Margate is chiefly supported by the numerous visitors which resort hither in summer, and the business which their residence occasions. It carries on also a considerable trade in corn and fish sent to the metropolis, in coals imported from Newcastle and Sunderland, and in timber, iron, tar, tin, and hemp, from Memel and Riga. Since the invention of steam vessels, the town has wonderfully increased. Six steam packets are employed in the summer season, starting two each day from Margate and London, entirely superseding the original sailing packets. Population of the town and parish, 7343. 72 miles E. by S. London. Long. 1. 23. E. Lat. 51. 23. N.

MARGUERITE, a town of France, department of the Gard. Population 2100.

MARIA, a tributary of the Mississippi, in North America.—The name of several other rivers in North America.

MARIA, CAPE St., the south point of Portugal. Lat. 36. 55. 24. N.

MARIA'S ISLAND, an island in the great Southern ocean, off the coast of Van Diemen's Land. Long. 143. 29. E. Lat. 42. 42. S.

MARIA DE DARIEN, St., the capital of the province of Darien, South America, on a river which runs into the bay of Panama. Long. 78. W. Lat. 8. 4. N.—The name of various islands and capes in South America.

MARIA AUDENHOVE, St., a town of East Flanders. Pop. 2000. 16 miles S. Ghent.

MARIA HOOGHEEKE, St., a town of the Netherlands, with 1700 inhabitants.

MARIA MAGGIORE, St., a town of Naples, in Terra di Lavoro. Population 7000.

MARIANA, a neat town of Brazil, on the Rio del Carmen, 8 miles E. Villa Rica. Population 6000 to 7000.

MARIANNE ISLANDS, three small islands in the gulf of Mexico, in Lake Borgne.

MARIAS LAS TREZ, three small islands off the intendancy of Guadalaxara, in Mexico.

MARIAS ISLANDS, three islands in the North Pacific ocean, occupying about 42 miles. Long. 233. 54. E. Lat. 21. 28. N.

MARIE, St., a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Population 2000.

MARIE AUX MINES, St., a town of France. Population 4000. 14 miles N. W. Colmar.

MARIEGALANTE, an island in the West India, discovered by Columbus in 1493, between Guadaloupe and Dominica. It belongs to France. Long. 61. 19. W. Lat. 15. 56. N.

MARIENBERG, a town of Saxony, noted for mines. Pop. 2600. 35 miles S. W. Dresden.

MARIENBURG, a town of West Prussia, government of Dantzic, on the Nogat. Here are extensive breweries and distilleries; also manufactures of woollen, linen, and cotton. Population 7200. 26 miles S. S. E. Dantzic.

MARIENWERDER, one of the two governments into which West Prussia is now divided. It is a long track of very irregular form, lying north of Poland, and south of Pomerania and the government of Dantzic. Area 6880 square miles. Pop. 302,000.

MARIENWERDER, a neat town of West Prussia, on the Nogat, 5 miles from the Vistula. It has breweries and distilleries. Population 5100. 43 miles S. Dantzic.

MARIGLIANO, a town of Naples. It has three handsome churches. Population 5500. 12 miles E. N. E. Naples.

MARIGNANO, a town of Milan, on the Lambro. Pop. 4000. 8 miles W. N. W. Lod.

MARIGNY, a town of France, department of La Manche. Population 3900.

MARIGNY, a town of France, department of the Saone and Loire. Population 2500.

MARIGNY, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Pop. 3800.

MARINO, SAN, or St., a very small but independent republic in the north-east of Italy, surrounded by the Papal dominions. Population 7000.

MARINO, SAN, the capital of the preceding, on the side of the mountain. It has 5 churches, and 3 small castles, besides other fortifications. Population 6000. 12 miles S. W. Rimini.

MARION, formerly WILKINSON, a county of the United States, in Georgia. Population 2154. Slaves 318.—2d, Of Alabama, between the Tuscaloosa and Tombigbee.—3d, Of Mississippi, on Pearl river. Population in 1816, 1701. Slaves 686.—4th, Of Ohio, formed in 1820, in the Indian Reservation.—5th, A district of South Carolina. Population 8834. Slaves 2771.

MARIQUITA, a city of South America, in New Granada. Pop. 300. 80 miles S. Santa Fe.

MARIVELAS, one of the smaller Philippines, with a village on it. Houses 40.

MARUROL, a town of European Russia, on the sea of Azoph. Population 2000. 140 miles S. E. Ekaterinoslav.

MARIZA, the ancient Herbrus, a large river of European Turkey, in Romania, which falls into the gulf of Enos, in the Archipelago.

MARK, a county of Germany, in the Prussian province of Westphalia, bounded N. by the principality of Munster, and S. and W. by the duchy of Berg. Area 607 square miles. Population 133,000.

MARK, St., a jurisdiction and town of the island of St Domingo, 53 miles S. W. Cape Francois. Long. 72. 45. W. Lat. 19. 4. N.

MARKEN, a small island of the Netherlands, in the Zuider-Zee. Pop. 800.

MARKET DEEPING, a market town of England, in Lincolnshire. Population 1016. 88 miles N. London.

MARKET DRAYTON, a neat market town of England, county of Salop, on the Fern. It has a church, erected in the reign of king Stephen, and two Methodist chapels. In the town are two paper manufactories, and two horse hair manufactories. Population 4426. 11 miles S. E. Whitchurch.

MARKET RAISIN, a market town of England, in Lincoln county, on the Raisin. It has, besides the church, Roman Catholic and Methodist chapels. Population 1160.

MARKET WEIGHTON, a market town of England, East Riding of Yorkshire, at the western foot of the Wolds. It is an improving town. It has a church, and a chapel for Methodists. Population 1724. 108 miles N. London.

MARKINCH, a village and parish of Scotland, in Fifeshire. Population 4661.

MARKISCHE-FRIEDLAND, a town of West Prussia. Population 2000.

MARLAIR, a river of Wales, Pembrokeshire.

MARLBOROUGH, an irregularly built market town of England, in Wilts, on the Kennet. The old church of St Mary displays various styles of architecture. St Peter's is adorned by a lofty square tower, with battlement and pinnacles. There are, besides, several meeting-houses for dissenters, and a charity school. The prison is large and commodious. The town sends two members to parliament. Pop. 3633. 74 miles W. London.

MARLBOROUGH, the name of various townships in the United States.

MARLOW, GREAT, a borough and market town of England, in Buckinghamshire, near the Thames. The church is a large and ancient building. Here are two charity schools, and six almshouses. It has a trade in coals and timber; also in meal and malt. The manufactures of the town are paper and black silk lace. Marlow sends two members to parliament. Pop. 2532. 31 miles W. by N. London.

MARLY-LE-ROI, a town of France, 5 miles N. Versailles. Population 1200.

MARMAIGNAC, a town of France, department of the Cantal. Population 1900.

MARMAUDE, a town of France, on the Garonne, 34 miles S. E. Bourdeaux. It has manufactures of woollens. Population 6100.

MARMAROSCH, a county in the north-east of Hungary, bounded S. by Transylvania, N. E. by Galicia and the Bukowine. Its area is 3770 square miles; its population 115,000.

MARMORA, an island in the small sea called from it the sea of Marmora. It is about 30 miles in circumference.

MARMORICE, a seaport of Anatolia, in Asiatic Turkey, with a fine harbour. Long. 28. 31. E. Lat. 36. 52. N.

MARNE, a river of France, joins the Seine.

MARNE, a department in the north-east of France, including part of the province of Champagne and the district of Brie, and contiguous to the departments of the Ardennes, the Meuse, and the Aube. Territorial extent 3200 square miles. Wine is the great product of this department. Pop. 311,000.

MARNE, UPPER, a department in the north-east of France, including the southern part of Champagne and Brie, and contiguous to the departments of the Meuse, the Vosges, and the Upper Saone. Area, 2560 square miles; population 238,000. Its surface is elevated and mountainous. Wine is the chief product.

MARNES, a town of France, department of the Two Seves. Population 2200.

MARONI, or MARAVINA, a small river of Guiana, which runs into the Atlantic, Long. 55. 14. W. Lat. 5. 52. N.

MAROSCH, of MAROS, a large river of the Austrian states, which falls into the Danube.

MAROSCH, a district of Transylvania, on both sides of the Marosch. Pop. 50,000.

MAROS VASARHELY, the capital of the above district. It has several fine buildings, and among others, the palace of Count Teleky. Pop. 10,000. 52 miles N. E. Carlsburg.

MARPACH, a town of Germany, 11 miles N. by E. Stuttgart. Population 2100.

MARPLE, a township of England, in Cheshire. Population 2646.

MARO EN BARCEL, a town of France, 3 miles N. E. Lise. Population 2600.

MARQUESAS, MARQUIS or MENDOZA'S ISLANDS, or MENDOZA ISLANDS, a cluster of islands in the South Pacific ocean, discovered by Mendana, a Spanish navigator, in 1595. Captain Cook touched at these islands in 1774; and they have been since visited by several navigators. They are five in number: San Pedro, or O-Niteo, in the language of the country; Santa Christina, or Wahitaho; and La Dominica, or O-bivahoa, forming a group; La Madalena, and Hood's island. This group extends from 138 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 140 $\frac{1}{2}$ of W. long. and from 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ S. lat. The inhabitants are savage. Pop. 50,000.

MARN, a district of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire, between the rivers Dee and Don.

MARRAT, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Population 2400.

MARSAC, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Population 5000.

MARSALA, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Muzzara, at the western extremity of the island. It exports wine, oil, wheat, and barrilla. Pop. 10,000. 45 miles S. W. Palermo.

MARSDEN, a populous village of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 2330.

MARSEILLAN, a town of France, department of the Herault. Population 3200.

MARSEILLES, a large and commercial city in the south of France, the capital of the department of the Mouths of the Rhone, on the Mediterranean. The city, with its environs, is inclosed by a succession of rocky hills, extending in the form of a half moon, until each extremity reaches the sea. The form of Marseilles is nearly square; and the port, entered by a narrow passage from the sea, is almost in the centre of the town. The city is surrounded by walls, and is divided into the Old and New Town, the former composed of narrow and dirty streets, the latter equal in beauty to any town of France, and separated from the Old Town by one of the finest streets in Europe. Its length is a mile; and towards the centre of the town, this street expands into a beautiful promenade, planted with trees, and adorned with fountains. Marseilles has several public squares, planted with trees, and ornamented with fountains. The public buildings are the town-hall, situated on the quay, a finished model of architecture; the arsenal, constructed in 1690, remarkable for nothing but its extent; the ancient cathedral, a Gothic edifice, said to have been built on the ruins of a temple of Diana. The other churches are not remarkable. Of the three theatres, the finest is a late structure, built on the model of the Odeon at Paris. Of the many religious houses, the most noted is the royal abbey of St Victor. The other buildings of interest are the numerous hospitals, the governor's palace, the concert-hall, &c. One of the finest public institutions is the Lazaretto, outside of the town, about 200 paces to the north. The literary institutions of Marseilles are, an academy of sciences, a medical society, a philosophical and navigation school. The public library contains about 90,000 volumes. The subject of natural history, and the botanical garden, are both worth visiting; and the observatory affords a most picturesque view of the town, the port, and the surrounding country. The port of Marseilles may be called a small salt water lake, half a mile in length, and nearly a quarter in breadth, completely sheltered from all winds. The entrance does not exceed a hundred yards, being confined by two projecting rocks, one on each side; on which are situated two forts for the defence of the harbour. The harbour is farther protected by other works. It is not of sufficient depth to float ships of war. It is completely surrounded by quays. Marseilles has long enjoyed a large share of the foreign trade of France. It exports light woollens, silk, and colonial produce, to the Levant and the north coast of Africa. It is likewise a central point for the trade with Spain and Italy. Its exports to the latter consist in the woollens of Languedoc and Dauphiny; in linens, liquors, oil, hardware, and lead. It has extensive transactions with Holland, England, the Baltic, North America, and the West Indies. To England and other northern countries the exports consist of wine, brandy, olive-oil, preserved fruit; in soap; also in silks, gloves, French shawls, &c. Marseilles suffered from the troubles and wars which followed the revolution. Bonaparte endeavoured, as far as a state of war permitted, to revive these great sources of national wealth; but all was ineffectual, till the return of peace in 1814; since which Marseilles has regained its former activity. The most important of the manufactures of Marseilles are of soap; of these there are 75 separate establishments. The manufactures of coral articles are pretty extensive. The other manufactures are rich silk and embroidered stuffs, woollens, cotton, and chintz, plain and coloured linen, hats, caps, leather, and sail-cloth; also china, earthenware, alum, sulphur, vitriol, salt, and lead. Marseilles has likewise refineries for sugar, and manufactures of vinegar and liquors. Another branch of industry is the pickling and preparing for exportation of capers, olives, and other fruits, as well as large quantities of fish. Marseilles is one of the most ancient towns of France. Pop. 110,000. 149 miles S. by E. Lyons, and 450 S. S. E. Paris. Long. 5. 22. 15. E. Lat. 43. 17. 40. N.

MARSHFIELD, a market town of England, in Gloucestershire. Its trade is chiefly in malt. Pop. 1569. 105 miles W. London.

MARSHWOOD, a village of England, in Dorsetshire. Population 532.

MARSCO NUOVO, a town of Naples, Principato Citra. Population 6800.

MARSCO VECCHIO, a town of Naples, province of Basilicata. Population 2650.

MARTABAN, a seaport in the Birman empire. Long. 97. 30. E. Lat. 16. 30. N.

MARTEL, a town of France, department of the Lot. Population 2800.

MARTHA, SANTA, the capital of a province of the same name, in New Granada, near the river Guaira, with a large and convenient harbour. Its trade is but trifling. 100 miles N. E. Marthasena. Long. 74. 4. 30. W. Lat. 11. 16. 2. N.

MARTHA BRAE HARBOUR, a small town on the north-east of the island of Jamaica.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD, an island of the United States, in the Atlantic ocean, near the coast of New England. It is 19 miles long, and from 2 to 10 broad. 12 miles W. S. W. Nantucket.

MARTHALEN, a town of Switzerland, canton of Zurich. Population 1000.

MARTY, or MARTY, a town of France, department of Pas de Calais. Pop. 2000.

MARTIGUES, LES, a town of France, department of the Mouths of the Rhone, on the lake of Berre, or Martigues. Pop. 3000, who are employed in fishing, and trading in wine, brandy, and salt. 22 miles N. W. Marseilles.

MARTIN, or ISLE MARTIN, a fishing village of Scotland, in Ross-shire.

MARTIN, ST., an island in the West Indies, about 5 leagues in length, and four in its greatest breadth, chiefly valuable for its salt pits and salt-water lakes. It now belongs to the French. Long. 63. 8. W. Lat. 18. 4. N.

MARTIN DE COURTESOLLE, a town of France, department of Marne. Pop. 2200.

MARTIN DE RHE, ST., a strongly fortified town of France, on the island of Rhe. Its trade is considerable. Population 3000. 9 miles W. N. W. Rochelle.

MARTIN DE VALLANAT, ST., a town of France, department of the Ardeche. Population 2100.

MARTINACH, a small town of the Swiss canton of the Valais.

MARTINENGO, a town of Italy, 25 miles N. E. by E. Milan. Population 3000.

MARTINICO, an island in the West Indies, and one of the largest of the Caribbees, being 50 miles from north-west to south-east, about 15 broad, and 140 in circumference. It is intersected in all parts by a number of hills, above which three mountains rise. The highest bears the indelible marks of a volcano. The woods with which it is covered continually attract the clouds, which occasions noxious damps, and contributes to make it horrid and inaccessible, while the two others are in most parts cultivated. The principal productions of the island are sugar, coffee, cassia, cotton, indigo, cocoa, ginger, &c. It was restored to the French at the general peace in 1814. Population in 1810,—Slaves, 70,677; free persons of colour, 8630; number of white inhabitants, 9206; total, 90,413. The principal towns of Martinico are Port Royal, the capital, and St Pierre.

MARTINICO, LITTLE, one of the Grenadine islands, in the West Indies.

MARTINSBOROUGH, a township and village of the United States, in New York state.

MARTINSBURGH, a town of Berkeley county, Virginia, with 80 houses.

MARTINSVILLE, a town of Guildford county, North Carolina, with 40 houses. Here the Americans were defeated by Lord Cornwallis in 1781.

MARTINSVILLE, a town of the state of Louisiana, on the Teche, in Lat. 30. 10. N.

MARTOCK, a market town and parish of England, in Somerset. The church is large and elegant. Near the market-place stands a handsome fluted column. Pop. 2500. 4½ miles W. S. W. Ilchester.

MARTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1397.

MARTORELL, a small town of Spain, in Catalonia, 9 miles N. W. Barcelona.

MARTOS, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, 10 miles W. Jaen. Pópulation 6000.

MARVEJOLS, a town of France, department of the Lozere, on the Colange. Population 3700.

MARVELLA, a walled town of Spain, in Granada, with a small harbour. It has a neat square, with a fountain in the centre. Pop. 8000. 34 miles N. N. E. Gibraltar.

MARWAR, an extensive district of Hindostan, province of Ajmeer, between the 26th and 28th degrees of N. lat.

MARY'S, St., a county of the United States, Maryland. Pop. 12,794, including 6000 slaves.

MARY'S, St., a river of the United States, which, dividing Georgia from East Florida, runs into the sea, Long. 81. 40. W. Lat. 30. 43. N. An inconsiderable town of the same name is situated at its mouth.

MARY'S RIVER, St. or St MARY'S STRAITS, a river or strait of North America, connecting Lakes Huron and Superior.

MARY'S ISLANDS, St., in the gulf of St Lawrence. Long. 60. W. Lat. 50. 20. N.

MARYBOROUGH, a town of Ireland, in Queen's county, near the Barrow. It has woollen manufactures. 43 miles S. W. Dublin.

MARYBURGH, a thriving village of Scotland, in Inverness-shire, near Fort William, which, with Maryburgh, contain 1200 inhabitants, chiefly employed in the fisheries.

MARYKIRK, a parish and village of Scotland, county of Kincardine. Pop. 1839.

MARYLAND, one of the United States of America, bounded N. by Pennsylvania and Delaware, E. by Delaware and the Atlantic, S. W. and W. by Virginia. It is intersected from north to south by Chesapeake bay, along which, on each side, it extends 196 miles in length to the northern line which separates it from Pennsylvania and Delaware. It is 120 miles broad, and is of a very irregular form. It is situated between 38. and 39. 43. N. lat. and between 75. 10. and 79. 20. W. long. The principal rivers are the Potomac, which divides this state from Virginia, the Susquehannah, the Patuxent, Patuxent, Elk, Sassafras, Chester, Choptank, Nanticoke, and Pocomoke. It is divided into 36 counties. The country on the eastern side of the Chesapeake, with the exception of a small part of the northern extremity, is an extensive plain, low and sandy, and much intersected by rivers and creeks, having but few springs, and abounding, in many places, with stagnant water. The western part of the peninsula included between the Delaware and Chesapeake bays, is much lower and more uniformly level than the Delaware part. It is also more intersected by rivers and creeks, and the land is of better quality. The soil is well adapted to raising tobacco, wheat, Indian corn, and sweet potatoes. The country on the western shore of the Chesapeake, below the falls of the river, is similar to that on the eastern shore. Above these falls the country becomes gradually uneven and hilly, and in the western part of the state it is mountainous. The country produces good crops of wheat, Indian corn, hemp, and flax. Here are also fine orchards; and apples, pears, peaches, plums, and cherries, are abundant. The most considerable export from this state is that of flour; and next to this, is that of tobacco. The other exports are iron, lumber, Indian corn, pork, flaxseed, beans, &c. This state abounds with mines of excellent iron ore, and has also some coal. There is a number of glass works, paper mills, &c. Value of exports in 1791, 2,239,691 dollars; in 1801, 12,707,530; in 1810, 7,338,767. Colleges, academies, and schools, are established in various parts of the state. It sends nine representatives to congress. Population in 1810, 380,546. Slaves 111,502. Free blacks 33,927. The increase of whites during the last ten years was 13,119, or 5 9-11ths per cent.; that of blacks 17,753, or 14 per cent. Annapolis is the seat of government, though Baltimore is much the largest town. The other most considerable towns are Fredericktown, Hagerstown, Easton, Cumberland, Snowhill, Chestertown, and Williamsport.

MARYPORT, a market town and seaport of England, county of Cumberland, at the mouth of the river Ellen, which divides it into two parts. The inhabitants are mostly employed in trade and fisheries. The place is greatly resorted to for sea-bathing. It exports coals to Ireland, and imports timber, flax, and iron from the Baltic. It has an extensive cotton manufactory, an iron-work, glass-house, salt-works, and a pottery. Ship-building is also carried on. Population 3514. 7 miles N. W. Cockermouth.

MARZANO, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro. Population 3800.

MASAFUERO, an island in the South Pacific ocean, west of Juan Fernandez, 12 miles in circumference. Long. 80. 46. W. Lat. 33. 45. S.

MASBATE, one of the Philippine islands, lying due south of the island of Licon.

MASCALI, a town of Sicily. Val di Demona, at the spot of Mount Etna, 15 miles N. by E. Catania. Population 4000.

MASCAT, a large seaport of Arabia, the most considerable of all those situated on its eastern coast. In 1507, it was taken by Albuquerque, and for nearly 160 years after continued in possession of the Portuguese. About the year 1648, however, it was retaken by the natives, who have ever since remained masters of it. It trades with the British settlements in India, the Malay peninsula, the Red sea, and the east coast of Africa. The government of the kingdom is the most civilized and orderly off any either in Persia or Arabia. Britain favours the flag of Mascat, recognising it as neutral; and it is accordingly resorted to as a sort of magazine for goods by vessels from every port in Persia and Arabia. English vessels sailing between India and Bassorah usually stop there. It carries on also a very large trade by caravans with the Arabs of the interior. The town is walled round and strongly fortified, and none but Arabs and Banians are allowed to reside without it. The harbour is defended by three forts, and a large fleet may moor there in safety. Long. 59. 15. E. Lat. 23. 38. N.

MAS D'AZEL, a town of France, department of the Ariège. Population 2800.

MASEYCK, an inland town of the Netherlands, on the Maase. Population 3400.

MASHAM, a market town of England, North Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1171.

MASKINONGE RIVER, a considerable river of Lower Canada, joins the St Lawrence.

MASON, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 1091. Slaves 249.—2d, Of Kentucky, on the Ohio. Population 12,450. Slaves 2423.—3d, A township of Hillsborough county, New Hampshire, 34 miles S. Concord. Population 1077.

MASOVIA, a palatinate of the interior of Poland, bounded N. and E. by the Vistula, S. by the palatinates of Sandomir and Kalisch, and W. by Prussian Poland. Area 4630 square miles. Population 310,000.

MASSA, a well built town of Italy, the capital of the duchy of the same name, 2 miles from the Mediterranean. The public edifices, and many of the private houses, are constructed of Carrara marble. The public buildings are the cathedral, which contains some good pictures, and the government palace, with its gardens. Population 10,000. 30 miles N. by W. Leghorn.

MASSA, a small town of Italy, 40 miles S. E. Leghorn.

MASSA-CARRARA, a duchy in the central part of Italy, situated on the south side of the Apennines, and inclosed on its respective frontiers by Modena, Tuscany, Lucca, and the Mediterranean. Population 58,000.

MASSACHUSETTS, forming, with the district of Maine, one of the United States of America, is bounded N. by Vermont and New Hampshire, E. by the Atlantic ocean, S. by the Atlantic, Rhode Island, and Connecticut, and W. by New York. At its N. boundary it is 130 miles in length, and on the S. 190 miles. Its general breadth is about 60 miles, its greatest breadth 100, and near Cape Cod it contracts to about 15 miles. It includes within its area 6250 square miles. Its situation is between 41. 13. and 42. 52. N. lat. and between 2. 30. and 6. 55. E. long. It contains 14 counties. The face of the country is very diversified, the western parts being intersected with different ranges of mountains. The middle part of the country is agreeably diversified with hill and dale; and the coast is indented with bays, studded with islands. The soil is exceedingly various, comprising every description, from the most fertile to the most unproductive. The climate is liable to extremes of heat and cold. The thermometer in winter marks 20 degrees below zero; in summer 77 degrees; sometimes 86 and 90, and rarely 100 degrees. The country is well watered by a number of small rivers, some of which fall into Connecticut river; others run northward to Merrimack river; others pass into Connecticut and Rhode Island. There are iron ores in different parts of the state. A vein of lead ore is wrought. Black lead has also been found; and marble of various colour, and rather coarse texture. There is a quarry of slate in Franklin county; and limestone abounds in Berkshire. The principal productions are Indian corn, rye, wheat, oats, barley, pease, beans, buck wheat, potatoes, hops, flax, and hemp. Beef, pork, butter, and cheese, are abundant in most parts of the state, and of excellent quality. The state abounds with orchards, in which are apples, peaches, pears, quinces, plums, cherries, and currants. Of the wild animals, the panther, the wild cat, the wolf, and the bear, seldom appear in the low country. Grey, striped, and flying squirrels, are numerous. The bays and rivers abound with salmon, mackerel, and other kinds of fish. Of late years, the manufactures of this state have greatly increased, and they consist of almost every article of domestic use, in metals, wood, &c. The United States have an extensive establishment for the manufacture of fire-arms. Breweries and distilleries have been long established. Ship-building is prosecuted with more ardour than in any other state. The whale fishery is prosecuted with great activity and success by the inhabitants of Nantucket. Value of the exports from Massachusetts in 1701, 2,610,651; in 1802, 13,492,332; in 1810, 18,613,048. There are colleges and academies established in different parts of the state, some of them well endowed. Population in 1781, 120,000, including blacks; in 1784, 357,510; blacks 4377; in 1810, 472,040; blacks 6737. Boston is the chief town. The other most considerable maritime towns are Salem, Newburyport, Marblehead, Beverley, Gloucester, Charlestown, Plymouth, and New Bedford. There are, besides, many other pleasant and flourishing inland towns. There are no slaves. All denominations of Christians are to be found in this state.

MASSACHUSETT'S BAY, a large bay on the coast of the United States, between Cape Ann on the north, and Cape Cod on the south.

MASSACRE, a small island on the coast of West Florida.

MASSARA, a strong town of Naples, in the Terra di Otranto. Population 7000.

MASSA LUBRESE, a town of Naples, 13 miles S. by E. Naples. Population 2700.

MASSYLEH, a river of Wales, Cardiganhire.

MASSERANO, a town of Piedmont, 40 miles N. N. E. Turin. Population 3600.

MASSILARGUES, a town of France, 16 miles E. N. E. Montpelier. Pop. 3000.

MASSINGHAM, GREAT, a village of England, in Norfolk. Population 748.

MASTASSIN, LAKE, a lake of North America, 200 miles in circumference.

MASVAUX, a town of France, 10 miles N. E. Delfort. Population 2200.

MASUAGH, the principal seaport of Abyssinia, situated on a small island, separated from the continent by a narrow channel. Some of the houses are of stone; they are in general, however, built of poles and bent grass. Under the barbarous government of the Turks, the trade has greatly decayed. Its intercourse is chiefly with Mocha and Jidda, and the imports consist chiefly of spices, piece goods, lead, iron, copper, tin, and European manufactures. The exports are rhinoceros' horns, gold, ivory, honey, slaves, and wax. Long. 39. 37. E. Lat. 15. 34. N.

MASULIPATAN, a considerable seaport of Hindostan, with a good harbour, in the northern circars, and district of Condapilly. It has been long celebrated for the fineness and brilliant colour of its cotton cloths, called chintz. It carries on a very considerable traffic with China, Pegue, Bengal, Persia, and Arabia. It belongs to the British. Long. 81. 10. E. Lat. 16. 10. N.

MATA, a seaport of Spain. It exports large quantities of salt. 22 miles S. S. W. Alicant.

MATAN, one of the Philippines, where Magellan was killed in 1521.

MATARIA, a village of Egypt, 5 miles N. E. Cairo.

MATARIEN, a large village of Lower Egypt. Population 3000.

MATABO, a large town of Spain, in Catalonia, 20 miles E. N. E. of Barcelona, near the sea. The Old Town is of great antiquity. The New Town lies between the Old Town and the sea, and is built in the modern taste. Pop. 25,000. The inhabitants manufacture calico, laces, silk and cotton stuffs, and velvets, ribbons, and silk twist; also canvas and leather. Bay salt is collected along the shore.

MATELICA, an ancient town of Italy, 30 miles S. W. Ancona. Population 6000.

MATERA, a town of Naples, with a cathedral and six convents. Population 12,400.

MATHEO, SAN, a town of Spain, in Valencia, on the river Baranca. Population 2700.

MATHERN, a river of Wales, in Cardiganshire, which falls into the Tivy.

MATHIEU, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne. Population 2000.

MATHURA, a celebrated town of Hindostan, province of Agra, much venerated by the Hindoos. It is situated on the Jumna, and is one continued street of temples, the resort of innumerable pilgrims from all parts of India. Long. 80. 40. E. Lat. 27. 32. N.

MATIA, a small island in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 147. 53. W. Lat. 15. 43. S.

MATLOCK, a village of England, in Derbyshire, on the Derwent, chiefly noted for its hot springs and romantic scenery. Population of the parish 2020. 7 miles N. Derby.

MATSAI, a large town, the capital of the island of Jessa. Population 40,000.

MATTHEWS, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 4227.

MATTO GROSSO, a province of Brazil, bounded N. by the province of Para, S. by that of St Paul, W. by the vicereignty of La Plata, E. by the province of Goias, between the 52d and 64th deg. of W. long. and between the 10th and 23d of S. lat.

MATURA, a town and fortress near the S. extremity of the island of Ceylon.

MAUSRUOR, a fortified town of France, on the Sambre. It has a manufacture of arms. Population 4800. 13 miles S. Mons.

MAUGELINE, a town and parish of Scotland, 10 miles E. Ayr. Population 2057.

MAULE, a province of Chili, 138 miles from north to south, and 80 from east to west. Population 12,000. The capital is Talca. Lat. 34. 47. S.

MAULE, a river of the above province, which enters the Pacific ocean, Lat. 34. 50. S.

MAURA, SANTA, anciently called Leucadia, an island in the Ionian sea, on the west coast of Greece, 50 miles in circumference. Its surface is mountainous and rugged, and it is subject to frequent earthquakes. Its most important production is bay or sea salt. Pop. 20,000. Long. 20. 39. E. Lat. 39. 4. N.

MAURA, SANTA, the capital of the above island. The port is tolerably good; but the town is ill built and dirty. Population 6000.

MAURNA, a town of France, department of Ille and Vilaine. Population 4100.

MAURE, ST, a town of France, on the Maine, 22 miles S. S. W. Tours. Pop. 2100.

MAUREPAS, a lake of Louisiana, W. of Lake Ponchartrain, 12 miles long, and 8 broad.

MAURIAE, a town of France, department of the Cantal. Population 2600.

MAURICE, ST, a town of Savoy, on the Isere. Population 2000.

MAURIOX, ST, a considerable river of Lower Canada, which joins the St Lawrence.

MAURILLY DES PONT DE CE, ST, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire, on the Loire, which communicates opposite with St Aubin des Pont de Ce, by a bridge. Population of the two, 3000.

MAURITIUS, or the ISLE OF FRANCE, an important island in the Indian sea, about 600 miles to the east of Madagascar. It was first discovered in 1605, by the Portuguese. In 1712, the French formed a regular colony in it; and it became their chief naval station in the Indian seas. It surrendered to a British expedition in 1810, and was restored to the peace of 1814 by this country. Mauritius is of a circular form, and about 144 miles in circumference. It is composed chiefly of rugged and irregular mountains, rising usually into points or pinnacles. It contains iron mines. It produces little grain, or any other useful vegetable, except the potatoe. It depends for provisions almost entirely upon

Bourbon, which is considered as its granary; while it is, on the other hand, the port of Bourbon. The exports consist of coffee, cotton, indigo, raw sugar, and cloves. The havens are two, Port Louis or North-west Port, and Port Bourbon. North-west Port is the capital of Mauritius. The principal town is called the Camp. End of the S. W. point, $20^{\circ} 18' S.$ Lat. $20^{\circ} 27' S.$

MAURO, St., a town of France, in the Dauphiné. Population 2800.

MAURS, a town of France, department of the Cantal, on the Basse. Population 2100.

MAYRY, a county of the United States, in West Tennessee. Population 10,358.

MAUVESIN, a town of France, department of the Gers. Population 2000.

MAWES, St., a borough of England, Cornwall, which sends two members to parliament.

MAXIMIN, St., a town of France, department of the Var. Population 3300.

MAY, a small island of Scotland, in the mouth of the frith of Forth.

MAY, a small river of Scotland, in Perthshire, which falls into the Erne.

MAY, a river of Wales, in Caernarvonshire, which falls into the Irish channel.

MAY, CAPE, the most southerly point of the state of New Jersey, in the United States.

MAY, LE, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire. Population 2800.

MAYHOLE, a town and parish of Scotland, in Ayrshire. Population of parish 5204.

MAYEN, a town of the Prussian province of the Lower Rhine. Population 2200.

MAYENFELD, a town of Switzerland, in the Grison country. Population 900.

MAYENNE, a department of France, comprising the north-west portion of the province of Maine, and part of Anjou, and bounded by the departments of the Orne, Sarthe, Maine, and Loire. Pop. 340,000. The chief rivers are the Mayenne, the Colmont, the Oudon, and the Vaise.

MAYENNE, a town of France, in the above department. It has considerable linen, thread, and woollen manufactures. Population 9100.

MAYENNE, a river of France, which falls into the Loire.

MAYER, an inland town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 3200.

MAYNE, a river of Ireland, in the county of Antrim, which runs into Lough Neagh.

MAYNOOTH, a neat modern built town of Ireland, county of Kildare. It has a college, instituted in 1795, for the education of the Irish Roman Catholic clergy. Here is also a lay college, and a Protestant charter school. 12 miles N. by N. Dublin.

MAYOTTE, a county of Ireland, in the province of Connaught, bounded S. by Galway, W. by the Atlantic ocean, N. by Sligo, E. by Roscommon. From north to south it extends 54 miles in length, and is 48 in breadth. It contains, according to Dr Beaufort's estimate, 796,600 acres. The soil varies prodigiously, from the bleak and rugged mountain to the fertile and cheerful plain. The best lands are almost exclusively occupied in grazing. The lakes in this county are Loughmask, Carra, Balacoon, and Loughcum, besides numerous small lakes, which, in a district less watered, would be deemed considerable. The most extensive rivers are the Moy, the Guishendon, the Deal, the Owenmore, the Awenmore, the Abbe, besides other inferior streams. The coast is lined with islands, and possesses excellent harbours and bays, such as Killeney harbour, Newport bay, Blackrod or Clair bay. The principal towns are Castlebar, Killala, Ballinrobe, Ballena, Newport, and Killala. The county sends two members to the imperial parliament. Population 140,000, of which not more than 1750 are Protestants.

MAYO, a village of Ireland, in the above county, 9 miles S. E. Castlebar.

MAYO, one of the Cape de Verde islands, off the western coast of Africa, 21 miles in circumference. It abounds in salt; but water is extremely scarce. 30 miles S. Bonavista. Long. $23^{\circ} 8' W.$ Lat. $15^{\circ} 10' N.$

MAYORGA, a town of Portugal, 15 Estremadura, 6 miles N. Lisbon.

MAZAGONG, a town of Hindostan, on the island of Bombay, chiefly inhabited by Portuguese. It has two Roman Catholic churches, and a good dock.

MAZANET, a town of France, department of the Tarn. It has extensive woollen manufactures. Population 5500.

MAZAN, a town of France, department of Vaucluse. Population 3300.

MAZANDERAN, a province of Persia, situated along the S. shore of the Caspian sea. MAZATECÁN, a town of Mexico, intendancy of Sonora, on a river of the same name. Long. $106^{\circ} 46' W.$ Lat. $23^{\circ} 15' N.$

MAZE, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire. Population 3000.

MAZERAC, a town of France, department of the Gironde. Population 3000.

MAZERES EN FOIX, a town of France, department of the Ariège. Population 2000.

MAZZARA, a town of Sicily, on the south-west coast. It has numerous churches and convents. 45 miles S. W. Palermo.

MAZZARA, VAL DI, one of the three provinces of Sicily, comprising the western part of the island. Population 650,000.

MAZZARINO, an inland town of Sicily, in the Val di Noto. Population 8000.

MEAO, a great city of Nippon, in Japan, formerly the metropolis of the whole empire. It is still the ecclesiastical capital, and the residence of the daimo, or spiritual sovereign. Some of the temples are of extraordinary magnificence, and the imperial palace forms a city by itself. Meaco is the centre of all the literature and science of the empire. A number of the finer manufactures, particularly japan-work, painting, carving, &c. are carried on here. Population 477,000. Long. $153^{\circ} 30' E.$ Lat. $35^{\circ} 24' N.$

MEADOW RIVER, in North America, joins the Mississippi 30 miles from its source.

MEATH, a maritime county of Ireland, in the province of Leinster, bounded N. by the counties of Cavan, Monaghan, and Louth; E. by the Irish channel and the port of Dublin; S. by the county of Kildare; and W. by West Meath. It extends from north to south 36 English miles, and from east to west 44½. It consists in general of rich flat pasture land, having few bogs or hills, and these but of inconsiderable height. The soil is in general a rich fertile loam. It is noted for grazing and tillage. There is a number of dairy farms, especially in the south-eastern part. Some marshes on the Moynalty river feed an immense number of horses in the summer season; and the Killew hills in the western angle adjoining Cavan, are remarkable for fattening sheep. Agriculture has of late years extended much. The crops commonly cultivated are wheat, oats, barley, rye, clover, flax, and potatoes. The manufacture of dowlas sacking, and coarse linen, extends into this county. In the north-western parts, linen of a finer texture is made. Meath is well watered. The principal river is the Boyne; also the Black Water, the tributary streams of the Nanny, the Rye-water, and Moynalty. Population 112,400. Pop. of Catholics to Protestants, 40 to 1.

MEAUX, a town of France, department of the Seine and Marne, 32 miles N. E. Paris, divided into two parts by the Marne. The principal public building is the cathedral, the choir of which passes for a masterpiece of Gothic architecture. Here is the tomb of Bossuet, bishop of Meaux. It has some trade in corn and wool. Population 7000.

MECCA, a large city of Arabia, capital of the province of Hedjas, and celebrated over all the east, as the birth-place of Mahomet, and the first seat of his power. It is situated in a narrow valley, dry, barren, and rocky, about a day's journey inland from the Red sea. The houses follow the windings of the valley, and are built partly on the declivities upon each side. The streets are regular, and rather handsome, being level and convenient; and the fronts are extremely neat. This handsome external appearance is carefully preserved, as the livelihood of the inhabitants depends much on the letting of apartments to pilgrims, who flock to this place from every part of the Mahometan world, extending on one side to the frontier of China, and on the other to the states on the Niger. This resort has now greatly diminished, partly from the decay of religious zeal, partly also from Mecca being now continually exposed to the rude incursions of the Wahabees; so that the population, which was at one time 100,000, is not now supposed to amount to more than 16,000 or 18,000 people. The chief ornament of the place is the famous temple, in the interior of which is the Kaaba, or the house of the prophet. This is contained in a square, which is entirely surrounded by the temple. The most sacred relic in the Kaaba is the stone said to be brought by the angel Gabriel, to form the foundation of the edifice. Longitude 16. E. Lat. 21. 18. 2. N.

MECHLIN, or MALINES, a large town of the Netherlands, province of Antwerp, divided by the Dyke into two parts. The streets are broad, and bordered in many places by good buildings. The public square and the market-place are both spacious and regularly built. The cathedral has a tower 366 feet high. The interior is elegant. The other buildings are the arsenal, the town-house, a Franciscan monastery, and an asylum for 800 widows and elderly women. It has manufactures of fine Brabant lacc and linen, besides damask, and silk and woollen stuffs. It has likewise breweries. Population 90,000. 13 miles N. by E. Brussels.

MECKLENBURG, a grand duchy in the north of Germany, bounded N. by the Baltic, E. by Pomerania, S. by Brandenburg, and W. by Lubeck and Luneburg. Territorial extent 6430 square miles. Pop. 370,000.

MECKLENBURG, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 18,443, including 10,264 slaves.

MECKLENBURG, a county of the United States, in North Carolina. Population 14,272, including 3404 slaves.

MEKONG, a large river of Asia, flowing to the sea through the country of Cambodia.

MEDEBACH, a town of Westphalia. Population 1900.

MEDELLIN, a town of Spain, in Extremadura, on the Guadiana, 19 miles E. Merida.

MEDELPAD, a province of the north of Sweden, between the gulf of Bothnia and the inland province of Jamtland, 100 miles in length, and 50 in breadth. Pop. 32,000.

MEDEWBLIK, a town of North Holland, on the Zuyder Zee, 28 miles N. by E. Amsterdam. Population 2000.

MEDINA, a city of Arabia, one of the two rendered celebrated and sacred by a connection with the founder of the Mahometan faith. It is distinguished as containing the tomb of the prophet. Medina in no degree rivals Mecca for extent and splendour. It consists of about five hundred houses, most of which are very poorly built. The tomb of Mahomet is placed between two others, containing the ashes of the first caliphs, Abubeker and Omar. The building which incloses it is hung with silk, which is renewed every seven years. The mosque founded by the prophet is said to be very magnificent, being supported by four hundred columns, and containing three hundred lamps always burning. Jeddah, on the Red sea, serves as the port of Medina.

MEXIMA, a county of the United States, in the state of Ohio. Chief town Mecca.

MEDINA DE LAS TORRES, a town and castle of Extremadura. Population 2000.

MEDINA DEL CAMPO, an inland town of Spain, in the province of Leon, 37 miles N. W. Segovia. Population 6000.

MEDINA DEL RIO SECO, an old and ill-built town of Spain, province of Leon. The town contains three parish churches, four convents, and three hospitals. Population 8000. 25 miles N. W. Valladolid.

MEDINA SIBERIA, a very ancient town in Andalusia. It has two churches and six monasteries. Pop. 5000. 17 miles S. E. Cadix.

MEDITERRANEAN, the great sea which forms the Southern boundary of almost the whole of Europe, and is the largest expanse of water in the world that does not come under the name of ocean. It is bounded E. by Asia, S. by Africa, and W. it terminates at a point at the straits of Gibraltar. Its length from east to west is about 3000 miles; its breadth varies greatly, being in one part fully 800 miles, but its general breadth is from 400 to 600.

MEDLING, a town of Lower Austria, 8 miles S. Vienna. Population 3200.

MEDMANN, a town of Germany, 6 miles E. N. E. Dusseldorf. Population 4000.

MEDWAY, a considerable river of England, which rising in Surrey and Sussex, unites its various branches in Kent, runs eastwards to Tunbridge and Maidstone, thence northwards to Rochester, and falls into the Thames in a large estuary at Sheerness.

MEDWIN, a small river of Scotland, in Lanarkshire.

MEERHOUT, a town of the Netherlands, 24 miles N. E. Louvain. Population 2800.

MEER, LES, a town of France, department of the Lower Alps. Population 2000.

MEFFERSDORF, a large village of Upper Lusatin. Population 2300.

MEGANTIC, a lake of Lower Canada.

MEGARA, a town of Greece, in the isthmus of Corinth, 16 miles W. Athens.

MEGEVE, a town of the Sarlinian states, in Savoy. Population 3100.

MEGGAT, a small river of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, which falls into the Esk.

MEONA, a river of Bengal, is formed by the junction of numerous streams. The principal of these is the Brahmapootra. Below the city of Dacca it is joined by the Isamutty, Dullahary, Luckin, and Ganges, after which it pours its immense volume into the bay of Bengal.

MEHANE, a river of the Netherlands, which falls into the Meuse above Huy.

MERAKET KEBER, a considerable trading city of Lower Egypt, on one of the canals of the Nile. It has manufactures of cloth and sal ammoniac.

MEREMER, a town of East Prussia, 35 miles S. Elbing. Population 2200.

MERLINO, a town of Lower Austria, 10 miles S. by W. Vienna. Population 3200.

MEROGH, a village of Egypt, to the south of Gize, 52 miles S. Cairo.

MERZ, a river of England, in Salop, which falls into the Severn.

MERZ, a river of Scotland, in Perthshire, which falls into the Lichart.

MERZLY, a town and parish of Scotland, in Perthshire, on a small rivulet of the same name. Pop. 847. 12 miles N. W. Dundee.

MERON CREEK, in the United States, in Ohio. It joins the Muskingum.

MERTON, a village of New Zealand, on the lake of Taupo. Population 2000.

METZAR, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Pop. 2000.

MEIMAC, a town of France, department of the Corrèze. Population 2000.

MEIMUND, a rich village of Egypt, to the south of Gize. Population 10,000.

MEINUNGEN, a principality of Germany, in Saxony, forming the territory of the duke of Saxe-Meiningen. Population 60,000.

MEINUNGEN, a town of Saxony, on the Weisse. Population 4200.

MEISNA, or MISNIA, a circle of Saxony, extending along both sides of the Elbe, from Bohemia to Prussian Saxony. Population 208,000.

MEISSEN, a town of Saxony, on the Elbe, noted for its porcelain manufacture. Population 4100. 15 miles W. N. W. Dresden.

MEISSEN, UPPER and LOWER, two villages of Germany. Population 2000.

MEJERDAH, a large river of Tunis, the Bahrat of the ancients, which falls into the Mediterranean at Porto Farina.

MEKRAH, a large maritime province of Persia, on the shore of the Indian sea. On the east it extends to the province of Scind, and on the west and north it has Kerman and Seistan.

MELANGE, a seaport on the N. coast of Sicily. It exports wine, olives, and olive oil. Population 8000. 100 miles E. Palermo.

MELCOMBE REGIS, a borough and market town of England, in Dorsetshire, at the mouth of the Wey, opposite Weymouth, where is a handsome bridge, which unites it to Weymouth. It has sent members to parliament since the reign of Edward I. See Weymouth.

MELDRUM, OLD, a town and parish of Scotland, 17½ miles N. W. Aberdeen. Population 1772.

MELFI, a town of Naples, in the Basilicata, near the Ofanto. It contains a cathedral. Pop. 7800. 52 miles E. by S. Salerno.

MELFORD, LONG, a village and parish of England, in Suffolk. Population 2288.

MELBAM, or MELOUNA, a river of Scotland, in Perthshire. It falls into the Isla.

MERILIA, a seaport of Morocco, on the coast of the Mediterranean.

MELINDA, a kingdom of Eastern Africa, with a capital of the same name on the sea coast. It was long tributary to the Portuguese; but being taken by the Arabs, it has ever since remained in their possession. It is a large and handsome town, the houses built of stone, many of them magnificent and richly furnished. There are numerous mosques. The exports consist of gold, ivory, copper, wax, and drugs. The ruling people are Mahometans. Long. 41. 2 E. Lat. 3. 6 N.

MELIPILLA, or St. JUAN DE LOS RIOS, the capital of a province of the same name in Chili, not far from the Mapo. Long. 76. 1 W. Lat. 32. 52. N.

MELITTO, a town of Italy, 4 miles N. Naples. Population 2500.

MELLESHAM, an irregularly built market town of England, in Wiltshire, on the Avon. The church is large and spacious. It has manufactures of broad cloth. Pop. of the parish 5776. 95 miles S. London.

MELLAVOUH, a pretty little city of Upper Egypt, 120 miles S. Cairo.

MELLON, a township of England, in Derbyshire. Population 3090.—2d, In Lancashire. Population 1981.

MELLRICHTADT, a town of Bavarian Franconia. Population 2000.

MELLYNDYDER, a river of Wales, in Denbighshire, which falls into the Conway.

MELROSE, a town of Scotland, county of Roxburgh, on the side of a fertile vale, intersected by the Tweed. Near it is the abbey, one of the largest and most magnificent in the kingdom. It is reckoned one of the most beautiful Gothic structures in Great Britain; from the height and embellishment of its columns, the elegance of its sculpture, and the symmetry of its parts. It was founded in 1136 by King David. The following are the dimensions of what is yet standing: length 258 feet, breadth 137½, and the circumference 943; the south window is 24 feet high by 16 wide; the east window, at which was the great altar, and which is of beautiful sculpture, 34½ by 15½. The height of the tower is 75 feet, but the greater part of it is broken down. A few years ago the parish church was removed from the abbey to a new building. Population of the town and parish, 3467. 35 miles S. Edinburgh.

MELSSEN, a town of Germany, on the Fulda, 14 miles S. S. E. Cassel. Pop. 2850.

MELTHAM, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 2000.

MELTON MOWBRAY, a market town of England, in the county of Leicester, on the river Eves, over which are two handsome stone bridges. The church is a fine structure, and the tower in the centre high and elegant. Pop. 2815. 30 miles S. E. Nottingham.

MELVILLE ISLAND, an island in the Polar sea, about 135 miles long and from 40 to 50 broad, discovered by Captain Parry. Cape Dundas, its most western point, is in Long. 113. 57. 35. W. Lat. 72. 27. 50. N.

MELUN, a town of France, on the Seine. It has manufactures of linen and cotton stuffs. Pop. 6700. 32 miles S. E. Paris.

MEMEL, a town of East Prussia, on the small river Dange, adjacent to the Curische Haff, which joins the Baltic here by a narrow strait. It is strongly fortified, and consists of the town and three petty suburbs, one of which lies beyond the Dange. There is here also a fort. It exports timber, which is brought down in floats; also hemp, flax, and corn. The other articles are hides and skins, tallow, bristles, wax, feathers, and Lithuanian yarn. The harbour is capacious. Population 6000. 130 miles N. E. Dantzic. Long. 21. 5. 26. E. Lat. 55. 42. 15. N.

MEMMINGEN, a walled town of Bavaria, on the Iller. It has various manufactures of cottons and linen; also woollens. Population 6500. 28 miles S. by E. Ulm.

MEMPHIS, a lake of N. America, in Canada and Vermont, 35 miles long, 3 broad.

MENAI, STRAITS OF, in Wales, dividing the island of Anglesey from the other parts of that principality. A chain bridge has been thrown over this strait.

MENDE, a town of France, capital of the department of the Lozere, on the Lot. Its cathedral is a plain building, with two towers. Population 5000.

MENDIP HILLS, a noted mineral range in England, in the county of Somerset.

MENDLESHAM, a decayed village and parish of England, in Suffolk. Pop. 1250.

MENDOZA, a city of Buenos Ayres, in the province of Cuyo, in a plain at the foot of the Andes. It contains four convents, a college, and a church. The river Mendoza flows by this town, and finally enters the Atlantic, under the name of Colorado. Pop. 6000.

MENDY, a town of Hindostan, province of Agra, on the Ganges.

MENEBOULD, St., a town of France, 45 miles E. S. E. Rheims. It has manufactures of lace and linen. Population 3400.

MENESTREVOL, a town of France, department of the Dordogne. Population 2000.

MENGALAY, one of the Hebrides, 10 miles from Barra, two miles in length and breadth.

MENIN, a fortified town of West Flanders, on the Lys. It has manufactures of table linen, lace, and silk stuffs; also of oil, soap, and tobacco. It has undergone a great number of sieges. Pop. 4600. 11 miles N. Lisle.

MENS, a town of France, department of the Isere, on the Van. Population 2000.

MENSKINSK, a town of European Russia, government of Orenburg. Population 2400.

MENSTRIE, a village of Scotland, in Perthshire, 5 miles N. E. Stirling.

MENTONE, a town of Nice, with a castle and a small harbour. Population 3300.

MENTZ, or MAYENCE, a city of the west of Germany, in the grand duchy of Hesse, on the left bank of the Rhine, immediately below the influx of the Maine. It is built nearly in the form of a semicircle, of which the Rhine is the basis. It is the strongest fortress of the empire; towards the river less defence is necessary, and the works are simple; but on the land side they are extensive and complicated, and would require a garrison of nearly 30,000 men. There is a bridge across the Rhine to Cassel. The interior of the town is by no means handsome. Most of the streets are crooked, narrow, and gloomy. The principal buildings are the electoral palace, used as a military hospital since 1793, and now much decayed; the house of the Teutonic knights, and the arsenal; the residence of the families of Stadion, Ostein, Bassenheim, and Elz. The principal churches are the Dom, or cathedral, built in the 12th century; the church of St Ignatius, which is a model of architecture, and ornamented in the ceiling with good paintings; and the ancient church of St Stephen, the steeple of which commands an extensive view. The public library contains a collection of 80,000 volumes; a cabinet of coins and medals; a cabinet of natural history; a collection of philosophical and mechanical instruments; a museum of Roman monuments, said to be the most complete of any out of Italy; and a gallery of pictures. The establishments for education are a seminary, a lyceum, schools of medicine, midwifery, and farriery. Along the banks of the Rhine is a beautiful walk; also a quay or harbour for landing goods. But the greatest attraction of Mentz is in its environs and its beautiful prospects. Its trade is chiefly in wines. The site of Mentz was occupied by the Romans as a military position. In the 13th and 14th centuries, Mentz was a place of some note for literature and the arts. In the 30 years war, it was taken by the Swedes, and in 1688 by the French, and restored at the subsequent peace. In the end of 1792 it surrendered to the French. Next year it was taken by the Austrians. By the peace of Lunéville (1801) it was formally ceded to France. Population 25,000, among whom are several thousand Jews. 37 miles S. E. Coblenz, 90 N. by E. Strasburg. Long. 8. 11. 0. E. Lat. 49. 50. 50. N.

MENDI, or MENOUR, an ill built city of Lower Egypt, on the side of a canal formerly navigable. Pop. 10,000, or according to some, 4000 or 5000. 22 miles N. N. W. Cairo.

MENZALEH, an extensive lake of Lower Egypt, extending along the coast, to the east of the Damietta branch of the Nile. It is 60 miles in length, and 25 in breadth.

MENZALEH, a town on the above lake, partly ruined, with manufactures of silk and sail-cloth. Pop. 2000. 20 miles S. S. E. Damietta.

MEPPET, a town of the Netherlands, on the Havelter Aa. Population 4700.

MEQUINENZA, a town of Spain, in Catalonia. Pop. 1000. 19 miles S. S. W. Lerida.

MEQUINEZ, a large city of Morocco, frequently the residence of the emperors. It is situated in a fine plain, watered by numerous rivulets. The seraglio is a very extensive quadrangular edifice. Long. 5. 50. W. Lat. 33. 56. N.

MER, a town of France, 21 miles S. W. Orleans. Pop. with its parish, 4300.

MERAN, a town of the Tyrol, 42 miles N. Trent. Population 2300.

MERANZ, a town of Saxony. Population 2200. Long. 12. 21. E. Lat. 50. 49. N.

MERAWI, a considerable town of Nubia, on the Nile, in the territory of Dar Sheyya, above Dongola, remarkable for the ruins of Diabel-el-Berkel and of El Belid, in its vicinity.

MERCER, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania. Population 8277.

MERCER, a county of the United States, in Kentucky. Population 12,430, including 3284 slaves.

MERCHTEN, a town of South Brabant, 9 miles N. N. W. Brussels. Population 3500.

MENOCCHIANO, a town of Naples, in the Principato Ultra. Population 3000.

MERCURY ISLAND, in the South Pacific ocean, near the east coast of New Zealand.

MERDIN, a city of Diarbekir, in Asiatic Turkey. The houses appear old, and have small windows, grated with iron. Population 11,000, Armenians, Jews, Turks, Arabs, and Kurds. 45 miles S. Diarbekir.

MERDRIGNAC, a town of France, department of the Cotes du Nord. Pop. 2200.

MERTON, a market town of England, in Wiltshire. It has manufactures of bed-ticking. Pop. 1250. 23 miles W. by N. Salisbury.

MERTON, a township of England, in Cheshire. Population 566.

MERGTENREICH, a town of Germany, in Württemberg, on the Tauber. Pop. 3000.

MENOURI, a seaport town of the Birman empire, province of Lower Siam. It is six miles up the Tannaserim river. Its exports are ivory, tutenague, rice, and other provisions. Long. 98. 23. E. Lat. 12. 12. N.

MEROUY ARCHIPELAGO. These islands extend 135 miles from north to south, along the coast of Tannaserim, and the isthmus of the Malay peninsula, with a strait between them and the mainland of 16 to 30 miles broad, having good anchorage.

MERIDA, a town of Spain, in Estremadura, on the Guadiana, across which there is a large bridge. It was founded by Augustus. It now presents but a feeble picture of its former prosperity. Its antiquities, however, scattered in all directions, are interesting. Population about 4500. 30 miles E. Badajoz.

MERIDA, an intendancy of the province of Mexico, comprehending the great peninsula of Yucatan, situated between the bays of Campeachy and Honduras. It is bounded S. by the kingdom of Guatemala, E. by the intendancy of Vera Cruz, N. by the English establishments, which extend from the mouth of the Rio Honda to the north of the bay of Hanover, opposite the island of Ubeno. Population 465,000.

MERIDA, the capital of the province of Merida, or Yucatan. It lies ten leagues from the sea, in an arid plain. Population 10,000.

MERIEUXAC, a town of France, 6 miles from Bourdeaux. Population 2000.

MERIONETH, a maritime county of North Wales, on the northern extremity of Cardigan bay, in the Irish sea. It is bounded N. by the counties of Caernarvon and Denbigh, S. by Cardigan, from which it is separated by the estuary of the Dovy; W. by Cardigan bay; and E. by the counties of Denbigh and Montgomery. From the Dovy to Llangelen, it extends 45 miles, with a medium breadth of 15. It is comprised within the meridians of 3. 12. and 4. 8. W., and the parallels of 52. 33. and 53. 4. N.; contains about 670 square miles, or 430,000 acres, with 46 inhabitants to each; is divided into six hundreds, in which are four market towns, viz. Harlech, the capital; Bala, Dolgelly, and Dinasmouthy; and 37 parishes. It sends but one member to parliament, and that for the county. The aspect of Merionethshire is extremely wild and mountainous, and the country everywhere abounds with the most romantic and sublime scenery. Cader Idris is the most noted mountain, being 2914 feet above the sea. Arran Fowdday is still higher, its height being 2905 feet. The other principal mountains are Arrenig, 2009 feet; Cader Ferwyn, 2503; Arran Benllyn, &c. The principal rivers are the Dee, the Maw or Mawddach, the Dovv or Dyff, and the Glaslyn and Dwyryd. The principal lakes are Llyn Tegid, near Bala, and Llyn Talyllyn, at the foot of Cader Idris. Merionethshire is both an agricultural and a manufacturing county, though by no means noted for either. The manufactures are chiefly those of wool. Strong cloths, druggets, flannels, kerseymeres, stockings, Welsh wigs, &c. are made at different places. Population 34,383.

MERMENTAU, MEXICANA, or MENTOU, a river of Louisiana, which falls into the gulf of Mexico, about 200 miles to the west of the Mississippi. Long. 93. 3. W.

MERRIMACK, a river of the United States, in New Hampshire, falls into the Atlantic.

MESCH, two small towns, one of the Prussian province of the Lower Rhine; the other of the Netherlands. Pop. of each, 1700.

MESSE, or MANCH, one of the three greater divisions of Berwickshire.

MESSEBURG, one of the new divisions or governments of the Prussian states, containing that part of Prussian Saxony which lies to the south of Aushalt, and to the east of the government of Erfurt. Population 471,000.

MESSEBURG, the capital of the preceding government, on the Saale, 15 miles W. Leipzig, with narrow and crooked streets, but clean and well paved. Its most remarkable buildings are the cathedral, and the palace of the bishops and dukes. Population 6800.

MESSEY, a considerable river of England, which rises on the borders of Cheshire, Derbyshire, and Yorkshire, and falls into the western sea, in a large estuary at Liverpool.

MERTHYR TYDVIL, a market town of South Wales, in Glamorganshire, in the valley of the Taaf, 9 miles from its source. It is very irregularly built, and presents the appearance of a poor straggling heap of cottages. The church is a plain modern building. There is a chapel of ease, and meeting-houses of different descriptions; also a theatre. Merthyr Tydvil derives importance from its iron works. Population 17,464. 21 miles N. by W. Cardiff.

MESTOLA, an ancient town of Portugal, in Alentejo, on the Guadiana. Pop. 3000.

METTON, a village of England, county of Surrey, on the Wandia. It has calico manufactures and bleachfields. Population 1177. 7 miles S. London.

MERVILLE, a neat town of France, on the Lys, 15 miles W. Lille. Population 5300.

MESCHEN, a city of Korassan, capital of the Persian part of that province. Five of its twelve quarters are now in ruins; its population is still 50,000. It is distinguished by a very splendid reputation, in which repose the ashes of the Imam Raza, and of the Caliph Haroun Al Raschid. The bazar is 3 miles in length. The houses are meanly built. Velvet of the finest quality is manufactured here; and its fur pelisses are much esteemed. Long. 57. E. Lat. 37. 25. N.

MESCHEN ALI, a celebrated town of Irak Arabi. The town is well built, defended by a good wall, deep ditch, and lofty towers, lately renewed, in consequence of the dreaded attack of the Wahabees. The most conspicuous object is the tomb and mosque of Ali. 90 miles S. Bagdad.

MESCHIZ, a town of Upper Egypt, called anciently Ptolemis, where the barks between Cairo and the cataracts usually stop.

MESCH, a town of European Russia, on a river of the same name, which falls into the White sea. Population 2000. 138 miles E. N. E. Archangel.

MESERITSCH, GREAT, a town of Moravia. Population 3400.

MESERITZ, a town of Prussian Poland, 65 miles W. Posen. Population 3600.

MESSENE, formerly a city of Greece. The walls are still in fine preservation. The modern village of Maumati stands nearly in the centre of the ancient city. 33 miles W. N. W. Misitra.

MESSINA, a large city in the N. E. of the island of Sicily, situated on a strait called from it the Faro di Messina, which separates Italy from Calabria, and, opposite to the city, is only from two to three miles wide. The town of Messina runs parallel with this strait. The finest part of the city is the Marina, a long line of buildings facing the harbour, and running parallel with it for more than a mile. A broad quay separates it from the water. The town forms a fine sweep along the swelling eminences, and rises in gradation, so as to present almost every public edifice in a good point of view. The whiteness of the buildings forms a beautiful contrast to the dark green of the forests behind. The town was nearly overthrown by a great earthquake in 1783; but it has been rebuilt with regularity and elegance. The public establishments of Messina consist of no less than 30 convents, 1 hospital, 4 seminaries of education, 6 asylums for the poor, and 2 ban banks. The public prison is a fine structure, but the interior shows a total want of comfort and convenience. Among the churches, which, great and small, amount to nearly 60, there are several beautiful buildings, containing a number of admired paintings. The cathedral has a fine Gothic front, and a granite pillar which supports the roof. The royal palace, the senate-house, and the episcopal palace, are all buildings of interest. The harbour of Messina is the finest in the Mediterranean. The exports consist of Faro wine, oil, fruit, and corn. Silk worms have long been cultivated with success. Messina is a place of great antiquity, having been known not only to the Romans, but to the Greeks. Population 36,000. 50 miles N. N. E. Catania. Long. 15. 48. 48. E. Lat. 38. 11. 12. N.

MESSINA, a town of West Flanders. Population 3200.

MESTRE, a town of Austrian Italy, 34 miles N. E. Padua. Population 2000.

MESURACA, a town of Calabria Ultra, 23 miles N. E. Nicastro. Population 1300.

MESURADO, a considerable river of Western Africa, which falls into the Atlantic, on the Grain coast.

META, a large and abundant river of New Granada, in South America, which has its rise opposite to Santa Fe de Bogota, and falls into the Orinoco, about 450 miles from its source, in Long. 67. 45. W. Lat. 6. 10. 30. N.

METHILL, a small seaport of Scotland, on the frith of Forth, 1 mile W. Leven.

METHVEN, a village and parish of Scotland, 8 miles W. Perth.—2d, Also a small river in Lanarkshire.

METZ, a large fortified town of France, in Lorraine, the capital of the department of the Moselle. It is situated at the confluence of the Scille and Moselle, and is surrounded by ramparts, and defended by a great number of bastions, and other works. The circumference of the whole town and fortifications together, is between three and four miles. The breadth of Metz is nearly equal to its length, so that its form is compact, though by no means a regular square. Two quarters, viz. the east and north, are insulated by intersections of the rivers: the latter are bordered in some parts with quays, and crossed by a number of small bridges. Some of the streets of Metz are tolerably straight and wide; but laid out, as in other old towns, on no uniform plan. The public squares are small. The esplanade is a fine walk, planted with trees, and separating the town from the old citadel. The public buildings are, the governor's residence, situated on the esplanade to the east of the citadel, a fine edifice; the cathedral, forming one of the sides of the small square called the Place d'Armes; the theatre, the town-hall, the residence of the intendant, the hospitals, and a number of churches and religious houses. Here are likewise extensive barracks. For education, the chief establishments are a college royal, or provincial school; and an artillery and engineer's school. Metz has manufactures of cotton, linen, muslin, gauze, fustian, chintz, calico, and different kinds of woollens. There is a number of tanneries. Population 41,000. 96 miles W. N. W. Strasburg. Long. 6. 10. 30. E. Lat. 49. 7. 10. N.

METZENHAUSEN, UPPER and LOWER, two neighbouring towns of Hungary, 16 miles S. Szepesdorf. Population 1600—3100.

MEUDON, a village of France, 6 miles S. W. Paris. Population 2200.

MEULAN, a town of France, on the Seine, 23 miles N. W. Paris. Population 2100.

MEULENBERG, a town of West Flanders, 14 miles S. by E. Bruges. Population 7000.

MEUX, a town of France, department of the Loiret, on the Loire. Population 4300.

MEUXA, a town of the Prussian states, 10 miles N. N. W. Dusseldorf. Pop. 2200.

MEURTHE, a department of France, composed of a part of Lorraine, and bounded by the departments of the Moselle, the Vosges, and the Meuse. It is watered by the Moselle, the Sille, the Meurthe, the Mortagne, and a number of smaller streams. Pop. 365,400.

MEURTHE, a tributary of the Moselle, in France.

MEUSE, a department of the north-east of France, including the former duchy of Bar, and the bishopric of Verdun, and bounded by the grand duchy of Luxemburg, and the departments of the Moselle, the Vosges, the Marne, and the Ardennes. Pop. 285,000.

MEWE, a town of West Prussia, on the Vistula. Population 2100.

MEXICO, or NEW SPAIN, generally designates that vast extent of country over which the jurisdiction of the viceroy of Mexico extends, and of which the parallels of the 30th and 10th degrees of latitude may be considered as the northern and southern limits; while W. it is washed by the Pacific ocean, E. by the gulf of Mexico, and S. E. by the Atlantic ocean. The limits which ought to be assigned to Mexico on the north and east, are not accurately defined. The mission of St Francis, to the south of Cape Mendocino, and the village of Taos in New Mexico, may be considered its northern boundary. The boundaries of the intendancy of San Luis Potosi, which to the east border on Louisiana, are disputed; the Americans confining them to the right bank of the Rio del Norte, while the Spaniards comprehend, under the denomination of the province of Texas, the savannahs or meadows which extend to the Rio Mexicano, to the east of the Rio Sabina. Mexico is divided into twelve intendancies, to which must be added three other districts, which have preserved the simple denomination of provinces. 1st, The province of New Mexico, along the parallel of the Rio del Norte, to the north of the parallel of 31 degrees. 2d, The intendancy of New Biscay. 3d, The province of New California. 4th, The province of Old California. 5th, The intendancy of Sonora. 6th, San Luis Potosi. 7th, Of Zacatecas. 8th, Of Guadalupe. 9th, Of Guanajuato. 10th, Of Valladolid, or Michoacan. 11th, Of Mexico. 12th, Of Puebla. 13th, Of Vera Cruz. 14th, Of Oaxaca. 15th, Of Merida. About one half of Mexico is situated under the burning sky of the tropics, while the other half lies within the temperate zone. This is owing partly to the general and prodigious elevation of the land. It has been estimated that about three-fifths of the viceroyalty of Mexico is spread out in extensive plains of from 6000 to 8000 feet in height. In these plains, the climate is comparatively temperate, the average heat not exceeding that of Rome or Naples. Towards the west, the descent from the table land is much more steep than towards the east. The eastern declivity of the Cordillera is so regular and uniform, that when once the traveller begins to descend from the great central plain, he continues the descent until he arrives at the eastern coast. The western coast is followed by four very remarkable oblong valleys, of which the respective heights above the level of the sea are 3217, 1635, 557, and 513 feet. The road to Asia from Mexico differs in this manner from the road to Europe. For the space of 72 leagues, the distance in a straight line from Mexico to Acapulco, there is a continual ascent and descent, and every instant the traveller arrives from a cold climate, to regions excessively hot. On the contrary, of the 84 leagues from the capital to the port of Vera Cruz, the greater part belongs to the vast plain of Anahuac. From the singular construction of the country of New Spain, it happens that the coasts alone possess a warm climate. These are distinguished by the appellation of the Sierres Calientes, or the warm regions, and produce in abundance sugar, indigo, cotton, and bananas. In this region the climate, more especially in populous cities, is exceedingly fatal to Europeans, who, not seasoned to it, are liable to be seized with the yellow fever. On the declivity of the Andes, at an elevation of from 3336 to 4920 feet, there reigns perpetually a soft spring temperature, which never varies more than seven or nine degrees. The natives give to this region the appellation of Temperate. The third region is distinguished by the name of the Cold Region, and comprehends the plains which are elevated more than 7000 feet above the level of the sea. Here the temperature is mild and agreeable. Above this, the climate is rude and disagreeable, even to an inhabitant of the north. The inhabitants of Mexico are less disturbed by earthquakes and volcanic explosions than the inhabitants of Quito. There are, however, five burning mountains in New Spain, namely, Orizaba, of the height of 17,371 feet; Popocatepetl, of the height of 17,716 feet; and the mountains of Tuxtla, Jorullo, and Colima. Earthquakes are by no means rare on the coasts of the Pacific ocean, and in the environs of the capital.

Mexico possesses all the necessary materials of an extensive exchange with other nations, yielding in abundance sugar, cacao, cotton, coffee, wheat, hemp, flax, silk, oils, and wine. Innumerable herds of cattle run wild in the savannahs and woods, whose skin and fat form an important article of commerce. There are also deer, elk, buffalo, carib, the grisley black bear, and wild horses. Sheep are numerous; but their wool is of little value. Among the birds may be reckoned those of the domestic kind, goldfinches, nightingales, and upwards of 20 species of singing birds; pigeons, parrots, paroquets, eagles, vultures, pelicans, ravens, and macaws. Serpents are numerous, as likewise scorpions, spiders, ants, and mosquitoes and locusts, which are sometimes exceedingly destructive. In the rivers, in the lakes, and on the coasts, is found a variety of fish, and a great number of alligators.

The mountains of Mexico contain ores of every kind of metal; and there are abundant mines, not only of the precious metals, but also of mercury, iron, copper, lead, tin, alum, crystal, vitriol, and different kinds of precious stones. In the province of Zacatecas, about 200 miles N. W. of Mexico and San Luis de Potosi, there are silver mines, formerly deemed the richest in the world; but the most important mines at present are situated in the province of Guanajuato, about 100 miles from Mexico, and about 50 to the north-west of the city of Queretaro. This celebrated mining station is on the Sierra Madre, as were the former mines of Zacatecas, that chain being perhaps the richest in the universe, even to its northern extremities in Sonora and Pimeria. There are, besides, numerous other mining stations scattered throughout the country. Among the forest trees are cedar, brazil-wood, mahogany, and every sort of timber, either for use or ornament. The fruits are, pine-apples, plums, dates, water-melons, apples, peaches, quinces, apricots, pears, pomegranates, figs, black cherries, walnuts, almonds, olives, chestnuts, and grapes. In the markets of Mexico there are sold, exclusive of European fruits, about sixty different sorts of native productions. The country also produces a great variety of valuable drugs, such as copal, anime, tacmalac-caramia, liquid amber, balsam of Tolu, gusiaron, Mechoacan root, sarsaparilla, &c. Other productions are cochineal, cacao, dyeing-woods, tobacco, and indigo.

The progress of national industry is greatly favoured, by the convenient situation in which nature has deposited the precious metals in Mexico. In Peru, the most considerable mines, those of Potosi, Pasco, and Chota, are immensely elevated, very near the region of perpetual snow. In working them, men, provisions, and cattle, must all be brought from a distance. Cities situated in plains, where water freezes all the year round, and where trees never vegetate, can hardly be an attractive abode; and it is only the hope of suddenly amassing immense wealth, that can determine the inhabitants to relinquish the delicious climate of the valleys, for the desolation that reigns in the higher Andes. But in Mexico, the richest seams of silver, those of Guanajuato, Zacatecas, Tasco, and Real del Monte, are in moderate elevations of from 5576 to 6361 feet. The mines are surrounded with cultivated fields, towns, and villages; the neighbouring summits are crowned with forests; and a combination of circumstances facilitates the acquisition of this subterraneous wealth.

Mexico suffers in general from the want of water and of navigable rivers. The great river of the south, Rio Bravo del Norte, and the Rio Colorado, are the only rivers worthy of fixing the attention of travellers, either for the length of their course, or the mass of water which they pour into the ocean. The other rivers are the Rio Gunsaculco, and the Rio Alvarado, both in the south-east of Vera Cruz; the Rio de Moctezuma, which carries the waters of the lakes and valley of Tenochtitlan, to the Rio de Panuco; the Rio de Zacatula, the great river of Santiago, which falls into the Pacific ocean. The most remarkable lakes are the lake of Chapata in New Galicia, 160 square leagues; the lake of Pattecuaro, and the lakes of Mexitlan and Patras in New Biscay; the lakes of Texcuco and Chalco in the vale of Mexico. The western coast of New Spain possesses some excellent harbours, namely, San Francisco in New California, San Blas in the intendancy of Guadalupe, near the mouth of the river of Santiago, and especially Acapulco, which are magnificent ports. The last is one of the most admirable basins in the whole world. There are several others of less importance. The eastern coast of Mexico does not, however, possess the same advantages as the western coast. Vera Cruz is merely a bad anchorage between the shallows of La Calleta, La Gallega, and La Lavandera. The whole coast of Mexico is also beset with sand-banks, which are raised by the continual and uniform action of the trade winds, on the agitated ocean. Another very serious inconvenience is common both to the eastern coast, as well as to the western coast, which is washed by the Pacific ocean. They are rendered inaccessible for several months, by violent tempests, which effectually prevent all navigation. The north-west winds blow in the gulf of Mexico, from the autumnal to the spring equinox. Both coasts are also exposed to the serious inconvenience of these winds, which frequently burst forth in the most furious tempests.

Mexico is improving, both in her agriculture and trade. This is evident in respect to agriculture, from the increase of the tithes. In time of war, the want of communication with the mother country, and the regulations prohibiting commerce with neutrals, have favoured the establishment of manufactures of cottons, calicoes, fine cloth, and whatever is connected with the refinements of luxury. In the cotton manufactures of Queretaro, the annual consumption of cottons is estimated to amount to 300,000 lbs. With the exception of a few stuffs of cotton mixed with silk, the manufacture of silks is at present next to nothing in Mexico. The manufacture of tobacco was formerly a royal right; but with the acquisition of independence, all these monopolies have been abolished. There is a royal manufactory of gun-powder at Santa Fe, which produced, according to Humboldt, in the year 1801, nearly 800,000 pounds of powder. The working of gold and silver, and the coining of money, may be reckoned among the most important manufactures of New Spain. Chandeliers and other ornaments of great value are frequently executed with great taste and elegance; and although the finest carriages driven through the streets of Mexico and Santa Fe de Bogota, come from London, very handsome ones are finished in New Spain. The cabinet-makers also execute articles of furniture, remarkable for their form, and for the colour and polish of the wood; and in the internal provinces, at Durango for example, harpsicords and piano fortes are manufactured. The Indians display an indefatigable patience in the manufacture of small toys in wood, bone, and wax.

The exports are, gold and silver, in coin, bullion, and plate, amounting to 17,000,000 dollars; cochineal, sugar, flour, indigo, being the produce of New Spain, salt meat and other provisions, tanned hides, sarsaparilla, vanilla, jalap, soap, legwood, pimento. The imports are, bale goods, including woollens, cottons, linens, and silks; paper, brandy, cacao, quicksilver, iron, manufactured and unmanufactured, steel, wine, and bees wax. Value of exports 21,790,000 dollars; imports 14,000,000. The agriculture of New Spain has kept pace with its commerce. The agricultural products of this country are, in the warmer regions, the plantain or banana tree, the cassava root, the farina of which, called manine, is made into bread; maize, of which the cultivation is extensive and important. In the temperate region is cultivated European grain, such as wheat, barley, oats, and rye. The absolute want of rain during the summer months, is very injurious to the agriculture of Mexico; and the inhabitants are in consequence compelled to have recourse to artificial irrigation. In places which are not artificially watered, the Mexican soil yields only pasturage to the months of March and April. Mexico now possesses all the garden stuffs and fruit trees of Europe. The central table land produces, in the greatest abundance, cherries, prunes, peaches, apricots, figs, grapes, melons, apples, and pears. The olive tree was formerly rarely to be met with in Mexico. The court of Madrid has always looked with an unfavourable eye on the cultivation of the olive and the mulberry, hemp, flax, and the vine, in the new continent; and at one time orders were sent out violently to root out the vines in the northern provinces of Mexico, because the merchants in Cadiz complained of a diminution in the consumption of Spanish wines. Now that the country has become independent of Old Spain, it will be freed from the unnatural restraints of this odious policy, and will be at liberty to turn its industry to whatever it may most abundantly produce.

But the metallic produce of Mexico forms one of the most important objects of its industry. The American mines are well known to be distinguished by the abundance of their produce above all others ever before known, while at the same time the mineral ore which they contain is remarkable for its poverty, a quintal, or 1600 ounces of ore, affording only three or four ounces of pure silver. The same quantity of mineral in the silver mines of Mannerberg, in Saxony, yields from 10 to 15 ounces. Such, however, is the great abundance of the ore, and such the facility of working it, that the produce of the American mines is only limited by the want of mercury for the extraction of the silver from the substances with which it is found mixed. It is calculated that Mexico sends annually to Europe and Asia, from the ports of Acapulco and Vera Cruz, about 1,500,000 pounds of silver, the greater part of which is produced by a very small number of mines. The half of this sum is supplied by the mines of Guanajuato, Zacatecas, and Catorce. The vein of Guanajuato supplies more than a fourth part of the whole silver of Mexico, and a sixth part of the produce of all America. The following, according to Humboldt, is the order in which the richest mines of New Spain follow one another, arranging them according to the quantity of money drawn from them. Guanajuato, in the intendency of the same name; Catorce, in the intendency of San Luis Potosi; Zacatecas, in the intendency of the same name; Real del Monte, in the intendency of Mexico; Bolanos, in the intendency of Guadalajara; Guadalupe, in the intendency of Durango; Sonibrete, in the intendency of Zacatecas; Tasco, in the intendency of Mexico; Batopilas, in the intendency of Durango; Zimapan, in the intendency of Mexico; Fresnillo, in the intendency of Zacatecas; Ramos, in the intendency of San Luis Potosi; Parral, in the intendency of Durango. The whole annual produce of the American mines is estimated by Humboldt to be equivalent to 43,500,000 dollars, which being converted into English money, amounts to £9,515,625. The quantity of silver annually extracted from the mines of Mexico is ten times greater than what is furnished by all the mines of Europe; and, on the other hand, gold is not much more abundant in New Spain than in Hungary and Transylvania. These two last countries annually throw into the circulation about 3500 pounds of gold, and the gold delivered into the mint of Mexico only amounts in common years to about 4670 pounds. The Mexican gold is for the most part extracted from alluvial grounds, by means of washing. Another part of the Mexican gold is extracted from the veins which intersect the mountains of primitive rock. More than three-fourths of the silver obtained from America is extracted from the ore by means of quicksilver; and the loss of the quicksilver in this operation is immense. The quantity required by New Spain is about 16,000 quintals, of 1600 ounces each per annum; for the whole of America 25,000 quintals are annually exported; a great part of this supply being derived from Europe.

The population of Mexico was estimated in 1793, at 4,403,529. From the great progress the country afterwards made, Humboldt estimated it in 1803, at 5,900,000; and in 1808, at 6,500,000. The Mexican population is composed of seven races: 1st, The whites born in Europe; 2d, The Spanish Creoles, or whites of European extraction, born in America; 3d, The Mestizos, descendants of whites and Indians; 4th, The Mulattoes, descendants of whites and negroes; 5th, The Zambos, descendants of negroes and Indians; 6th, The Indians, or copper coloured indigenous race; and 7th, The African negroes. Abstracting the subdivisions, there are four casts; the whites, comprehended under the general name of Spaniards; the negroes, the Indians, and the men of mixed extraction from Europeans, Africans, American Indians, and Malays; for from frequent communication between Acapulco and the Philippine islands, many individuals of Asiatic origin have settled in New Spain. Of this class, the whites are estimated at 1,100,000. They are divided into whites born in Europe, and descendants of Europeans born in the Spanish colonies of America, or in the Asiatic islands. The Spanish laws allow the same privileges to all whites; but those who have the execution of the laws, endeavour to destroy an equality which shocks European pride; and the European whites, under the government of the mother country, monopolised all offices of emolument and distinction, to the injury and degradation of the other classes. Of the mixed races in Mexico, there were, according to Humboldt, in 1804, 2,331,000, of whom seven-eighths were Mestizos. The Indians amount to 2,500,000; and their actual condition is a striking illustration of the inefficacy of laws to afford protection, where those for whom they provide have no controul over their execution. In no courts is there a class of men better defended by a law against injustice, than the Indians in Mexico; and no people have suffered more severely from rapacity and oppression.

Mexico, after having been long engaged in a struggle with the mother country, and having been subjected to her authority after having thrown it off, has again apparently succeeded in establishing her independence. An adventurer, Iturbide, seized the supreme power. But he has since been dethroned, and it does not yet appear what form of government will arise on the ruins of old establishments.

MEXICO, the capital of the kingdom of New Spain, and the oldest city in America of which we have any account. The original city of Mexico, or, as it was called, Tenochtlalan, was founded by the Mexicans in the year 1325, and was situated in the valley of Mexico, on a group of islands in lake Tezcuco, and connected with the mainland by three principal dikes or causeways, formed of stone and earth. The ancient city of Mexico was taken by Cortez in the year 1521, and was completely destroyed: the present city has risen out of its ruins. The situation is exactly the same; but owing to the diminution of the waters in lake Tezcuco, modern Mexico is situated on dry land, about a league distant from the lake in which it was formerly built. The valley of Mexico is surrounded with mountains, which inclose it like a wall. It is the most populous city of the new continent. It forms a great square, extending from north to south, and from east to west, about four English miles. The ground on which it stands is quite level; the streets are drawn at right lines from each other, and being very spacious, appear in general rather deserted. The town is surrounded with a wall of uncemented stones; and the channels which lead from the lake disperse their waters in various smaller canals, which flow through some beautiful streets, and are covered with craft and canoes, which appear every day loaded with supplies of fruit, flowers, and other produce, and make their way as far as the walls of the viceroy's palace, situated in the great square. The city is entered by seven stone causeways, three of which were built by the Indians. The others are the work of the Spaniards. The public buildings are magnificent, and some of them of the most beautiful architecture. Those which chiefly attract the attention of the traveller are, 1st, The cathedral, of which a small part is in the Gothic stile. The principal edifice, which has two towers ornamented with pilasters and statues, is of very beautiful symmetry, and very recent construction. 2d, The treasury, adjoining to the palace of the viceroys, from which, since the beginning of the 16th century, gold and silver have been issued to the amount of more than 270 millions of pounds sterling. 3d, The convents, among which is particularly distinguished the great convent of St Francis, which, from alms alone, possesses a revenue equal to L.20,000 sterling. This vast edifice was founded in the year 1531. 4th, The hospital, or rather the two united hospitals, of which the one maintains 600, and the other 800 children and old people. This establishment, in which order and cleanliness may be seen, though but little industry, has a revenue equal to L.10,000 a-year. 5th, The acordada, or prison, of which the apartments for the prisoners are generally spacious and well aired. 6th, The school of mines, a newly begun edifice; and the old provisory establishment, with its fine collections in physics, mechanics, and mineralogy. 7th, The botanical garden, in one of the courts of the viceroy's palace. It is very small, but extremely rich in vegetable productions, either rare or interesting with a view to commerce. 8th, The edifices of the university and public library, which is unworthy of so great and ancient an establishment. 9th, The academy of fine arts, with a collection of ancient casts. 10th, The equestrian statue of King Charles IV. in the great square; and a sepulchral monument consecrated to Cortez, in a chapel of the Hospitale de los Naturales. 11th, The mint of Mexico, which is the largest and richest in the whole world, is a building of very simple architecture, belonging to the palace of the viceroys; and its interior arrangements well deserve the attention of travellers, from the order, activity, and economy which prevail in all the operations of coining.

The manufactures carried on in Mexico have been of late years on the increase. The printing of calicoes has made considerable progress. There are, besides, manufactures of cloth, hard soap, and tobacco, which latter is held as a royal monopoly. At Santa Fe, about 9 miles from Mexico, there is a great manufacture of gunpowder, which is also monopolised by the crown. The working of gold and silver in all its branches, is carried to great perfection in Mexico, as well as various other arts dependent on luxury and wealth. The population may be estimated as follows:

White Europeans,.....	2,500
White Creoles,.....	65,000
Indigenous copper coloured,.....	33,000
Mestizoes, mixture of whites and Indians,.....	26,000
Mulattbes,.....	10,000

Total inhabitants,.....136,500

The clergy of Mexico form a numerous and powerful body, amounting, including all descriptions of ecclesiastics, to 2392 individuals. The archbishop possesses revenues equal in amount to L.18,000 per annum.

Nearly in the middle of the plain in which Mexico is situated, lie the fine lakes of Zumpango, St Christoval, Tezcuco, Xochimilco, and Chalco, extending nearly from north to south about 90 miles; and Mexico being situated at the extremities of the lakes Tezcuco and Xochimilco, is abundantly supplied, by means of boats, with all the productions of the surrounding country. The houses are not loaded with useless ornaments. Two sorts of hewn stone, one a porphyry, give to the Mexican buildings an air of solidity, and sometimes of magnificence. The general appearance also of the capital of Mexico is much heightened by the beautiful character of the scenery by which it is surrounded. The eye sweeps over a vast plain of carefully cultivated fields, which extend to the very foot of the colossal mountains, covered with perpetual snow, which inclose the valley, among which the famous volcanoes of La Puebla, Popocatepetl, and Iztaccihuatl, are the most distinguished. The first of these forms an enormous cone, of which the crater, continually inflamed, and throwing up smoke and ashes, opens in the midst of eternal snows.

Owing to its low situation, Mexico is exposed to the danger of being inundated by the overflowing of the lakes in the vicinity of which it is built. The valley of Mexico being surrounded by a circular range of high mountains, the Mexican lakes are so many recipients, in which the torrents deposit all the moisture of the surrounding ground. The lake of Zumpango, which is the most northerly of the five lakes of the valley, swelled by the extraordinary increases of the Rio de Guantitlan, and the influxes from Pachuca, flows over into the lake of San Christoval. The lake of San Christoval bursts the dike which separates it from the lake of Texcuco. Lastly, the water of this lake rushes over the intermediate ground, and flows with impetuosity into the streets of Mexico. Since the arrival of the Spaniards, several destructive inundations have been experienced, namely, in the years 1563, 1580, 1604, 1607, and 1620. This last inundation lasted five years. The water rose in the streets to 3½ feet, and the communication was carried on by means of boats. Wooden bridges were also constructed along the sides of the houses, for foot passengers. To protect the capital against this calamity, various imperfect contrivances were resorted to. At length the vast project was adopted of diverting the course of the Guantitlan, which flowed into Lake Zumpango, and of carrying off its waters through a subterraneous passage, which was to be pierced in the adjacent mountains. This work was commenced in the year 1607, and completed in eleven months. Its length was about 21,000 feet, and the aperture was 158 square feet. This passage, however, being continually liable to be choked up by the crumbling of the earth, it was at length resolved to take off the top of the vault, and to make an immense cut through the mountain, of which the old subterraneous passage was merely to be the water-course. This work was accordingly commenced; but in the year 1702 there was still at the farther extremity about a mile and a half of the passage which had never been converted into an open trench. It was not till the year 1789, that the canal was completed, at an expence equal to L.166,000; and the whole expence laid out on these great works, from the year 1607 to 1689, is calculated at L.1,201,770. The cut through the mountain is from 202 to 228 feet in breadth, and from 131 to 164 feet in perpendicular depth. The water course, however, is only of its original breadth. As a farther security against the risk of inundation, in 1790 and 1798, two canals were constructed, the one from Zumpango, and the other from San Christoval, for the purpose of carrying off their superfluous waters to the Rio de Tula; and it was proposed to construct a canal for draining Lake Texcuco by the same channel. In 1804, the viceroy gave orders for the commencement of this work, the expence of which is estimated at L.125,000.

Mexico is distant, in a straight line, from Vera Cruz, its European port, 69 leagues, and from Acapulco, the port on the western shore, from which the trade with Asia could be carried on, it is distant 69 leagues. Long. 90. 0. 30. W. Lat. 19. 25. 45. N.

Mexico, an intendancy in the viceroyalty of Mexico. It lies chiefly within the tropics, extending from 16. 34. to 21. 57. of N. latitude. It is bounded N. by the intendancy of San Luis Potosi, W. by the intendancies of Guanajuato and Valladolid, E. by those of Vera Cruz and Puebla. It is washed towards the south by the Pacific ocean. Its greatest length is 136 leagues; and its greatest breadth 92 leagues. Pop. 1,511,800.

MEXICO, GULF OF, a large bay or gulf of the Atlantic, extending N. to S. from the coast of Florida to the coast of Tabasco and Yucatan, about 600 miles, and E. and W. from Cuba to the coast of Mexico, about 700.

MEYNIAC, a town of France, department of the Correze. Population 3000.

MEYVERIS, a town of France, department of the Lozere. Population 2100.

MEYSSAC, a town of France, department of the Correze. Population 2100.

MEZE, a town of France. Pop. 2500. 18 miles S. W. Montpellier.

MEZIERES, an ancient and well built town of France, 14 miles S. E. Rocroy.

MEZIN, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Population 2500.

MEZINGEN, a neat town of Germany, 17 miles S. by E. Stutgard. Pop. 3100.

MEZO-TUR, a town of Hungary. Population 4000. 58 miles S. W. Debreczin.

MEZZENILE, a town of the Sardinian states, province of Turin. Population 3100.

MEZZOVO, a town of European Turkey, in Albania. Population 7500.

MOLIN, a town of European Russia, 72 miles N. N. W. Novgorod-Sieverakoi. Population 5100.

MIAMI, a county of the United States, in Ohio. Population 5910.

MIAMI, GREAT and LITTLE, two rivers of the United States, which enter the Ohio.

MIAMI OF THE LAKES, a river of the United States, which rises in Indiana, and flows into Lake Erie.

MIANO, a village of Naples, near the capital. Population 2600.

MIAVA, a town of Hungary. It has manufactures of woollens and lins. Population 10,000. 45 miles N. E. Presburg.

MICHAEL'S, St. a town and borough of England, in Cornwall, which sends two members to parliament. Pop. in 1811, 178.

MICHAEL, St. a river of the United States, in Maryland. It joins the Chesapeake, in Long. 76. 22. W. Lat. 38. 50. N.

MICHAILOVA, a town of European Russia, government of Kurk. Population 6000.

MICHEL DEAN, or GREAT DEAN, a market town of England, in Gloucester. The tower of the church. 155 feet high, contains some fine remains of painted glass. Population 556. 12 miles W. Gloucester.

MICHEL EN THIERACHE, a town of France, department of the Aisne. Population 2360.

MICHELSTOWN, a small town of Ireland, county of Cork, 26 miles S. S. E. Limerick.

MICHIGAN TERRITORY, a district belonging to the United States. It is a large peninsula, and is bounded N. by the straits of Michillimackinack, N. E. by Lake Huron, E. by St. Clair's river and lake, by Detroit river, and Lake Erie, S. by Ohio and Indiana, and W. by Lake Michigan. It is 250 miles long from N. to S. and 150 broad; containing about 30,000 square miles. The population, which is rapidly increasing, is supposed to exceed 12,000. Long. 82. 7. to 85. 20. W. Lat. 41. 45. to 45. 34. N.

MICHIGAN LAKE, a lake of North America, included in the territories of the United States. It is 262 miles in length, and 55 in breadth. It has a communication with Lake Huron, by the river or channel of Michillimackinack. Long. 84. 40. to 87. 8. W. Lat. 41. 15. to 45. 35. N.

MICILLIMACKINACK, a strait which joins Lake Huron and Lake Michigan. 6 miles wide, and from 20 to 30 long.

MICILLIMACKINACK, an island, fort, and village, in the above strait, about 7 miles in circumference, with 100 or 150 houses.

MICKERY, a small island in the frith of Forth, 8 miles N. W. Leith.

MIDDELHARNIS, a village in the Netherlands. Pop. 2200. 18 miles S. W. Rotterdam.

MIDDLE CREEK, a river of the United States, which runs into the Susquehanna. —Also a branch of the Kentucky.

MIDDLE ISLAND, an island off the south coast of New Holland. Long. 123. 10. E. Lat. 34. 7. S.—Also several small islands in the Eastern seas.

MIDDLE MARK, one of the five marks or provinces into which the German part of the Prussian dominions was divided until the new arrangement in 1815. It lies between the Elbe and the Oder, and now forms part of the province of Brandenburg, and governments of Potsdam and Berlin.

MIDDLE RIVER, a river of the United States, in Maryland. It joins the Chesapeake.

MIDDELBURG, a large and well built town of the Netherlands, the capital of the province of Zealand, situated in the small island of Walcheren. It is no longer fortified, but has round it a circular mound of earth. Some of its streets are wide and handsome, and it is on the whole tolerably regular. The market-place forms a spacious square; and part of the town is traversed by canals, across several of which are draw-bridges. The public buildings are, the town-house, the churches, and a high spire. There are also public walks. Pop. in 1796, 18,000; now 15,000. It was the head-quarters of the British army in the expedition of 1809, and in autumn is very unhealthy. 4 miles N. Flushing, 46 S. W. Rotterdam.

MIDDLEBURY, a post township of the United States, in Vermont. Population 2138.

MIDDLEHAM, a market town of England, in Yorkshire, on the Ure. Here are the ruins of a once magnificent castle. Population 880. 36 miles N. W. York.

MIDDLESEX, an inland county of England, which comprises the cities of London and Westminster, of which an account will be found under their respective titles. It is bounded S. by Surrey and part of Kent, N. by Hertfordshire, W. by Buckinghamshire, and E. by Essex. The Thames divides it from Surrey and Kent, the Colne from Buckinghamshire, and the Lea from Essex. With Hertfordshire it has no natural boundary. It lies within 0. 0. and 0. 31. W. Long. and 51. 23. and 54. 42. N. Lat. It contains about 300 square miles, or 192,000 acres. It is divided into six hundreds, and 98 parishes, exclusive of the divisions in London and Westminster, and the Tower hamlets; contains, besides its two cities, seven market towns, Brentford, Chipping-Barnet, Edgware, Enfield, Hounslow, Staines, and Uxbridge, and various considerable villages, of which Chelsea, Kensington, Twickenham, Hampton, and Harrow-on-the-Hill, are the chief. It sends eight members to parliament, two for the county, chosen by the freeholders; four for the city of London, chosen by the liverymen; and two for Westminster, chosen by the householders.

Middlesex presents in general a gently waving surface, with considerable inequalities in some parts, and extensive levels in others. The ground rises from the banks of the Thames towards the north; and within a few miles of London there is a range of eminences, namely, Hampstead, Highgate, Muswell-hill, and others; and a yet higher and more extensive ridge runs north-eastward in Edgware and Barnet, to the forest scenery of Enfield chase. The Thames, the Lea, and the Colne, form the boundaries of the county. The Brent is the chief river. The New River supplies great part of the metropolis with water. There are besides, the Grand Junction, the Paddington, and the Regent's canals, which greatly assist the internal communications of the county.

The prevailing soils in Middlesex are loam and clay, or sand and gravel, more or less intermixed with loamy clay. There are few mineral substances in this county, and they are chiefly argillaceous. Clay forms an important product for the making of bricks. A considerable quantity of ground has been dug up for this purpose, and yields to its proprietors a rent of about £. 500. In Middlesex, the chief, and almost the only business, consists in providing articles of necessity for the metropolis. Of these, hay, milk, and vegetables, are the chief, and therefore the capital objects of the Middlesex husbandry. The greatest portion of the lands is in meadow and pasture; about one-fifth of the whole is occupied with nurseries, gardens, and plea-suregrounds; and not more than one-fifth is in tillage. The corn crops raised are chiefly wheat and barley; the green crops very various, viz. beans, pease, turnips, cabbages, white and red clovers, rye-grass, &c. The raising of willows for the basket-makers is practised to a considerable extent, and forms a very lucrative branch of cultivation. The extensive tracks of waste land, uncultivated heath, and commons, such as Hounslow-heath, Finchley-common, Enfield-chase, &c. which not long ago existed in this county, are now mostly inclosed, and in the way of improvement. The woodlands and coppes scarcely amount to 3000 acres, chiefly on Hampstead and Highgate-hills, Finchley-common, and Ruislip. Population 1,144,631.

MIDDLESEX, a county of the United States, in Massachusetts, bounded N. by New Hampshire, E. by Essex county, S. E. by Norfolk county, and W. by Worcester county. Its length is 52 miles, its breadth 42. It is watered by five principal rivers, the Merrimack, Charles, Concord, Nashua, and Mystic, besides smaller streams. Pop. 52,780. The chief towns are Charlestown, Cambridge, and Concord.—2d, A maritime county of the United States, in Connecticut, bounded N. by Hartford county, E. by New London county, S. by Long Island sound, and W. by New Haven county. 30 miles long, and 19 miles broad. Pop. 20,723.—3d, A county of the United States, in New Jersey. Population 20,381. Chief towns, New Brunswick and Amboy.—4th, A county of the United States, in the east part of Virginia. Population 4414. Slaves 2476.

MIDDLETON, a market town of England, county of Lancaster. Besides the church, there are two chapels of ease; and in the town are two Methodist chapels and a free grammar school. The progress of this town is entirely owing to the cotton manufacture. Here is also a twist manufactory. Pop. 5809. 7 miles N. Manchester.—Also the name of various parishes in England.

MIDDLETON, a town of Ireland, in the county of Cork, 13 miles E. Cork.

MIDDLETOWN, a post township of the United States, in Vermont. Population 1207.—2d, A city, port of entry, and capital of Middlesex county, Connecticut, on the Connecticut river. Population 2014.

MIDDLEWICH, a market town of England, in Cheshire. The chief trade of the town is in salt. Pop. 1212. 18 miles E. Chester.

MIDOLEY, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 2207.

MIDHURST, a well built market town of England, in Sussex. It has sent two members to parliament since the 4th of Edward II. Population 1335. 11 miles N. Chester.

MIDNAPORE, a district of Bengal, in the province of Orissa. It contains upwards of 6000 square miles. Population 1,500,000.

MIDNAPORE, capital of the above district. It is the station of the British judge, collector, &c. Long. 87. 25. E. Lat. 22. 25. N.

MIEDZYAZYCZ, a town of European Russia, in Volhynia. Population 2000.

MIFFLIN, a county of the United States, in the centre of Pennsylvania. Population 12,132. Chief town Lewistown.

MIGUEL, St., capital of a district of the same name, in Mexico, 153 miles N. N. W. Mexico. Population 3000.

MIGUEL, St., a town and district of Guatemala, 50 miles E. St Salvador.

MIRUEL, St., a town of Mexico, in Nicaragua, 100 miles S. E. Leon.

MIHEL, a town of France, on the Maese, containing 5600 inhabitants.

MIIT KAMAR, a neat commercial town of Lower Egypt, on the Nile, 24 miles N. Cairo.

MILAN, DUCHY OF, or MILANESE, an extensive country in the north of Italy, situated between the Alps N. and the Appennines S., having Piedmont W. and the Venetian territory E. This country fell into the possession of Austria in 1706, and, with the exception of the Sardinian Milanese, it continued subject to the Austrian dominion, during 90 years, until the victories of Bonaparte in 1796. On the formation of the Cisalpine republic, the whole of the Milanese, divided into four departments, was comprised in it; but on the reinstatement of the old order of things in 1814, the part belonging to the king of Sardinia was restored, and the remainder incorporated with Austrian Italy, or, as it is styled in diplomacy, the Lombardo Venetian kingdom. It there forms, along with the duchy of Mantua, and the Valtelline, the government of Milan, or more western of the two great divisions of Austrian Italy. Its superficial extent is about 7700 square miles. It is divided into eight delegations, viz. those of Milan, Pavia, Lodi, Como, Sondrio, Bergamo, Brescia, and Mantua. Of these, the delegation of Milan contains 670 square miles, and 427,000 inhabitants. The Sardinian Milanese, situated to the west of the Austrian Milanese, or government of Milan, and separated from it by the Ticino, contains 556,000 inhabitants. These countries, particularly the Austrian part, form one of the finest tracks in Europe. The north contains a number of mountains, but the far greater part of the territorial surface consists of fertile vallies and luxuriant plains, yielding in abundance, corn, rice, maize, vicia, mulberries, &c. It is watered by the Po, and by its various rivers, viz. the Sesia, the Gogna, the Olona, the Ticino, the Lambro, the Adda, the Oglio, and a number of smaller streams. The principal lakes are called respectively, Maggiore, Como Garla, and Iseo. The pastures are excellent, and the cheese called Parmesan, made in the neighbourhood of Lodi, is esteemed throughout the whole of Europe. Population 2,083,000. See Italy, Austrian.

MILAN, a large and fine city, the capital of the Austrian kingdom of Italy, situated on the small river Olona, between the Ticino and the Adda. Its form is compact, and nearly circular. The circumference of the closely peopled part is nearly five miles: that of the outer wall is not less than ten miles. It is built with little regard to regularity. The private houses are tolerably built: they are generally from three to five stories in height. The public edifices display all the richness and magnificence of Italian architecture. Of these, the first is the cathedral, the grandest and most imposing specimen of Gothic architecture extant. It is built of white marble, and is remarkable for the extreme lightness of its construction. It is 400 feet long, 298 broad, and 260 high. Several of the other churches are worth attention, both for their architecture, and the statues and paintings of celebrated masters which decorate their interior. The hospitals and charitable institutions of Milan are numerous, and amount in all to about 30. The great hospital is an immense edifice, capable of containing 1200 patients, besides working convalescents. The great foundling hospital receives about 4000 children. The lazaretto, outside of the city, is likewise on a vast scale, but is opened only in the case of an epidemic disease. Of theatres, there are in Milan no less than eight or nine: most of them are small, but that called the Scala rivals in size and magnificence the famous theatre of Naples. The residences of the great families, though less grand than those of Rome and Genoa, display a similar architectural luxury. Several of them possess valuable collections of paintings. A triumphal arch, on the road leading from Milan to the Simplon, was begun by Bonaparte, but not finished. In the esplanade, or Piazza di Castello, is an arena, in imitation of the amphitheatre of the Romans: it was made in 1806, by order of Bonaparte. Of the literary and scientific institutions of Milan, the first is the Ambrosian college, with its valuable library. The latter contains 60,000 volumes, and about 15,000 manuscripts, together with a fine gallery of paintings, statues, antiques, medals, and curiosities. The university of Milan was constituted by the empress Maria Theresa in 1766. The college of Brera, a seminary in which are taught painting, sculpture, drawing, architecture, and engraving, is of vast extent and considerable magnificence, containing formerly about 1200 students. It has a library, an observatory, and a fine gallery of paintings, formed by the French government, out of the property of dissolved monasteries. The Collegio Helveticum, or Swiss college, is also an interesting institution on a smaller scale. Milan contains likewise an academy of arts and sciences, academies of sculpture, architecture, and agriculture, a conservatory of music, a museum, a cabinet of natural history, and, at the mint, a collection of coins and medals. The trade of Milan is not extensive, being confined to the import of articles of consumption, and to the export of a few manufactures. It is noted for its porcelain manufactures which may vie with almost any in Europe, for elegance of form and beauty of design. There are various other manufactures on a small scale. Milan is one of the few cities of Italy which survived the devastation of ages, and brought down its celebrity to modern times. It suffered much during the wars of the middle ages; but it always rose with new lustre from its misfortunes. In 1796, the French, under Bonaparte, made themselves masters of the town: they were driven from it in 1799, by the Austrians and Russians. After the battle of Marengo, it again was possessed by the French, and continued the seat of their viceroy until the fall of Bonaparte in 1814. Population in 1805, 120,000; in 1806, 125,000; in 1808, 129,000; and at present between 135,000 and 140,000. 75 miles E. N. E. Turin, 280 N. W. by N. Rome. Long. 9. 11. 45. E. Lat. 45. 21. 2. N.

MILBORNE PORT, an irregularly built borough town of England, in Somersetshire. The guild-hall is a very ancient building; also the church, which is in the form of a cross. It has some manufactures of woollen, linen, and hosiery. It sends two members to parliament. Pop. 1440. 2 miles N. E. Sherborne.

MILBOURNE, a small river of England, in Northumberland. It joins the Tyne.

MILDENHALL, ST ANDREW'S, a market town and parish of England, in Suffolk. The church has a tower 100 feet high. Pop. 2974. 70 miles N. N. E. London.

MILE END, a hamlet of England, in Middlesex, in the neighbourhood of London.

MILERUS, an ancient city of Asia Minor.

MILFORD, the name of numerous townships in the United States.

MILFORD NEW, the name of several townships in the United States.

MILFORD HAVEN, a deep inlet of the sea, in Wales, county of Pembroke. Several plans have been proposed at different times, for improving its accommodations. These plans have given rise to the new town of Milford, or MILFORD HAVEN, a town which was founded in 1790, on the northern shore, and has risen with great rapidity. The houses are built with neatness, and even elegance. It has a church with a lofty tower, a custom-house, a plain but commodious building, and a dock-yard, which forms a principal feature in the plan. An establishment of packets has been formed here, under excellent regulations, for conveying the mail and passengers to Waterford, in Ireland. An establishment has been also formed for the southern whale fishery. There is also an extensive establishment of quarantine. 6 miles W. by N. Pembroke.

MILFORD HAVEN, on the coast of Nova Scotia; also one on the coast of Virginia.

MILHAU, a town of France, department of the Aveyron, on the Tarn. Pop. 6100.

MILK, a small river of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, which falls into the Annan.

MILK, a river of Jamaica, which runs into the sea, 4 miles N. W. Maccabee bay.

MILL CREEK, two rivers of the United States, which run into the Ohio.

MILLEDGEVILLE, a post town of the United States, in Baldwin county, Georgia, on the Ogeechee. Population 2000.

MILLESTRO, a town of the Sardinian states, in the duchy of Monterrat; the scene of severe fighting between Bonaparte and the Austrians. Population 1200.

MILFORD, a village of England, county of Derby, with two cotton mills.

MILHOUSE, a manufacturing village of Scotland, 3 miles N. Dundee.

MILLOM, a village and parish of England, in Cumberland. Population 1815.

MILLTHORPE, a market town of England, in Westmoreland, on the Belth. Pop. 1401.

MILTO, the ancient Melos, an island of the Mediterranean. Pop. 1000. Long. of the town of Milo, 21. 13. 32. E. Lat. 36. 42. 30. N.

MILTENBERG, a town of Germany, in the Bavarian states. Population 2700.

MILTON, a fishing village of Scotland, in Kincardineshire.

MILTON, a market town of England, county of Kent. The church contains some curious monuments. Population 2012.

MILTON, two hamlets of England, in Oxfordshire and Hampshire. Pop. 667-702.

MILTON, LOWEN, a village of England, county of Worcester. Population 2544.

MILTON, a post township of the United States, in Massachusetts. Population 1264. —2d, Of Chittenden county, Vermont. Pop. 1516. —3d, Of Strafford county, New Hampshire. Pop. 1005. —Also the name of several other townships and villages.

MILVERTON, an ancient market town of England, in Somersetshire. It has an extensive manufacture of flannels. Population 1650. 7 miles W. Taunton.

MINERE, a river of England, in Hertfordshire, which falls into the Bean.

MINAS GERAES, a province or capitania of Brazil, which extends from 600 to 700 miles from north to south, and about the same distance from east to west. It is bounded N. by the capitania of Bahia, W. by that of Goyaz, S. by the river Paranaíba, which divides it from the capitania of Rio de Janeiro. Population 360,000.

MINCHINGHAMPTON, an irregularly built market town of England, in Gloucestershire. The church is in the form of a cross, with side aisles and a tower. It has a manufacture of cloth. Pop. 4907. 10 miles W. Cirencester.

MINCIO, a large river of Italy, which flows southward from the lake of Garda, and falls into the Po, eight miles below Mantua.

MINDELHEIM, a well built town of Bavaria, on the Mindel, a tributary of the Danube. 27 miles S. S. W. Augsburg. Population 1400.

MINDEN, a town of Westphalia, on the Weser, over which is a bridge 800 feet in length. It has three Lutheran, one Calvinist, and two Catholic churches; a gymnasium, an orphan-house, four hospitals, and 6800 inhabitants. Here are various manufactures, woollen, linen, leather, &c. all on a small scale. It is noted for the defeat of the French near it in 1759, by the British. 34 miles W. Hanover.

MINDORO, one of the Philippine islands, 110 miles in length, by about 25 in average breadth. Long. 120. 24. to 121. 24. E. Lat. 12. 21. to 13. 30. N.

MINNE, a river of the United States, in the Illinois territory. It joins the Illinois.—2d, Of Louisiana, which joins the Missouri.—3d, Of North America, joins the Mississippi.

MINEHEAD, a borough, market, and seaport of England, in Somersetshire, now greatly declined from its former state. It sends two members to parliament. Population 1239. 24 miles W. Bridgewater.

MIXEO, an inland town of Sicily, 32 miles N. W. Syracuse. Population 5300.

MINGHELIA, a large country of Asia, situated on the southern side of the Caucasian mountains, between the Caspian and the Black seas. 1) On the N. it has Georgia, E. Immeretia, S. the river Phasis, W. the Black sea. Population estimated at four millions.

MINUO, a large river of Spain and Portugal, enters the Atlantic, 15 miles S. W. Tuy.

MINIET ESN KASSI, a handsome and considerable town, and capital of a district, in Upper Egypt, on the W. bank of the Nile. It contains a manufactory of earthen vessels.

MINORCA, the second of the Balearic islands, in the Mediterranean, is situated 37 miles E. Majorca, and 120 miles from the coast of Spain. It is in the form of an oblong, intersected by the parallel of 40. N. lat. Its area is 240 square miles; its population 31,000. Its chief towns are Ciudadella the capital, Port Mahon, Mayer, and Mercadal. The surface of the island is very uneven. It contains, however, no mountains except the central one called Toro. Vegetation is in general luxuriant. The British took possession of Minorca in 1703. It remained in their possession until 1758, when it was retaken by a French fleet and army. At the peace of 1763, Minorca was restored to Britain, but in 1782 it was retaken by the Spaniards. It was once more taken by the British in 1798, but restored at the peace of Amiens in 1802.

MINSK, an extensive province of European Russia. It extends from the Dwina on the north, to the province of Volhynia on the south, occupying from 25. 40. to 30. 0. of E. long. and from 51. 20. to 54. 40. of N. lat. and it is divided into ten circles. Population about 360,000.

MINSK, the capital of the above government, on the Swiatlitz. Population 2000. 310 miles E. N. E. Warsaw.

MINSE, a large lake of Norway, to the north of Christiania, 60 miles in length.

MINIOW, a small desert island, 8 miles S. W. of Cape May, in Newfoundland island. It is the most westerly of the three islands of St Pierre, or St Peter. About 9 miles W. Cape May.

MINA, a town of Italy, on the Brenta, 8 miles W. Venice. Population 3000.

MIRABELLA, a town of Naples, in the Principato Ultra. Population 5300.

MIRAMICHI, or MIRACHI, a port, bay, and river, on the N. E. coast of New Brunswick.

MIRANDA, a river of Spain, separates Asturias from Galicia, and falls into the Atlantic.

MIRANDA DE CORVO, a town of Portugal, 12 miles S. E. Coimbra. Population 2700.

MIRANDA DE DOURO, a town of Portugal, on the Douro. Population 1200.

MIRANDA DE ERO, a town of Spain, on the Ebro, 32 miles N. E. Burgos. Pop. 1400.

MIRANDELA, a fortified town of Portugal, 22 miles S. W. Braganza. Population 4700.

MIRANDOLA, a regularly fortified town of Italy. It contains a cathedral, 15 churches, and 6200 inhabitants, who manufacture silk and linen. 16 miles N. N. E. Modena.

MIRANO, a town of Austrian Italy, 11 miles N. E. Padua. Population 3200.

MIREKANT, a town of France, 12 miles N. N. E. Poitiers. Population 2000.

MIRECOURT, a town of France, 30 miles S. Nancy. Population 6100.

MIREPOIX, a town of France, department of the Arriège. Population 2900.

MIROPOLIE, a town of European Russia, to the south of Moscow, in the government of Kursk. It contains seven churches, and 6300 inhabitants. 38 miles N. N. W. Charkov.

MIRZAPUR, a town of Hindostan, province of Allahabad, on the Ganges. It is a flourishing trading town, being the chief mart for silk and cotton between the British and Mahratta territories. It has also a manufacture of carpets, and some iron works. Long. 83. 35. E. Lat. 26. 10. N.—Also a town in the province of Berar.

MISITRA, a ruinous town of European Turkey, in the Móra. Population 4000. 23 miles S. S. E. Tripolizza.

MISKOLCZ, a large and well built town of Hungary, county of Borschod. Population 13,000. 33 miles W. Tokay. Long. 20. 37. E. Lat. 48. 5. 56. N.

MISSELAN, a large river of Central Africa, supposed to fall into Lake Fittre.

MISSISSIPPI, one of the United States of America, erected into a state in 1817, bounded N. by Tennessee, E. by Alabama territory, S. by the gulf of Mexico and Louisiana, W. by Pearl and Mississippi rivers, which separate it from the state of Louisiana. It is 312 miles long from north to south, and 160 from east to west, and contains about 45,000 square miles. It is divided into 18 counties. Monticello is the present seat of government. Natchez is the largest town, and Washington is next to Natchez in size. The principal rivers are the Mississippi, Pearl, Pascagoula, Yazoo, Black, Tennessee, and the western branches of the Tombigbee. Cotton is the staple production of the state. Peaches and figs are the fruits most easily produced. Apples, plums, lemons, and oranges, are common. The Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians possess a large portion of the territory of this state. Population in 1810, 40,352; in 1816, 75,610, of whom 30,340 were slaves.

MISSISSIPPI, a celebrated river of North America, which, for the length of its course, and the quantity of water which it pours into the ocean, may justly be ranked among the greatest rivers of the globe. It is the common channel by which all the waters that fall on that immense valley between the Rocky mountains on the west, and the Allegany mountains on the east, are carried to the ocean. It has its source in Upper Red Cedar lake, in Lat. 47. 42. 40. N. and in Long. 95. n. W.; and it falls into the gulf of Mexico by six outlets, the west, south-west, south, main, or north-east, also called the Balize, the north, and Pass a Loutre, which have from 12 to 9 feet of water on their respective bars. From its source to its mouth, its length has been estimated, including the windings of its course, at 3000 miles. It varies greatly in its width, from 300 to 900 yards in the upper part of the stream, and 2000 or 2500 yards opposite the Missouri. At New Orleans it is rather less than 1500 yards; though the general width of it along the Delta is somewhat less. At New Orleans, and below it in dry seasons, the depth is about 120 feet; it is said to be more than 200 feet at the distance of 100 miles above that city; from thence to the Arkansas it may average nearly 50 feet; and between that and the Missouri from 25 to 35 feet, in the lowest state of the water. The Mississippi has two annual floods; the first, in ordinary seasons, about the new year; the second, or great spring inundation, which begins in April, commencing with the first flood of the Missouri, which is usually in March, on the breaking up of the ice; this is followed by the Mississippi above its junction with that river, afterwards by the Ohio, the Illinois, and all the other tributaries. The great flood of the Missouri begins in June; on the 15th of the same month the Mississippi attains its greatest height at Natchez, which is about 400 miles from its mouth; and on the first week of July the highest flood takes place at New Orleans. At this time the waters of the Mississippi are spread over New Orleans, to an extent of from 80 to 100 miles. The breadth of the inundation gradually diminishes, the higher we ascend the river; but even at the mouth of the Ohio, which is 1000 miles from the mouth of the Mississippi, it still extends over a space of 30 miles. Considerable variations, however, occur in the periods, as well as in the extent of the inundation. As it approaches the sea, the Mississippi has three outlets from its right or west bank, namely, La Fourche, 166 miles from its mouth; the Plaquemines, about 31 miles higher up; and the Chafalia, 123 miles above the Plaquemines. On the east side, 120 miles above New Orleans, is the Iberville, which is one of the outlets of that river during the inundations; and its waters flow into Lake Maurepas. The principal streams which fall into the Mississippi, on the west side, are the Red river, 300 miles from its mouth; the Washita, the Arkansas, 660 miles from its mouth; the St Francis, the White river, the Missouri, 1200 miles from its mouth; the Riviere des Moines, and the St Peter's. On the east side, there are the Yazoo river, the Ohio, which enters 1000, and the Tennessee, 1060 miles from the mouth of the Mississippi; the Wabash, a tributary of the Ohio; and the Illinois, which enters 18 miles above the Missouri. About 250 miles above the mouth of the Missouri the navigation is difficult, and obstructed by rapids. About 60 miles higher up occur the falls of St Anthony, above which the water is 627 yards wide; and it falls perpendicularly 16½ feet. Below the falls it is only 200 feet in breadth. Above the Arkansas the current at low water runs at the rate of about two miles an hour, and at high water at the rate of four miles an hour. As the river approaches the sea, the velocity of the current diminishes to one-third, and afterwards to one half. The river is now ascended by numerous steam-boats.

MISSOURI TERRITORY, one of the divisions of the United States, which in its most extended sense includes all Louisiana not comprised within the state of Louisiana. It is now limited, however, to where the Americans have settlements. Of this region, 92,600 square miles lie south, and about 16,000 north of the Missouri river, the entire area spreading over 108,600 square miles. The southern section is the most extensive, and contains at least as great a portion of good land as the northern. The former is watered by the streams of Red, Washita, Arkansas, White, Mississippi, and St Francis; the latter by the Osage, Missouri, Merrimack, and Mississippi rivers. Wheat, rye, and other small grain, are here abundantly produced. There is abundance of coal, brick, and potter's earth; and inexhaustible supplies of salt.

The territory of the Missouri, while it was in a state of nature, abounded with wild animals. These are the buffalo, and the great brown bear, which is a terrible animal, both from its size, strength, and extreme ferocity. Wild horses, deer, elk, bears, wolves, panthers, and antelope, are numerous. The grizzly or white bear is found on the head branches of the Missouri, and is equally ferocious as the great brown bear. The settlements in this territory are generally near the navigable rivers. They are increasing rapidly. Population in 1810, 21,845; in 1817, 50,000. The chief towns are, New Madrid, Girardeau, St Genevieve, and St Louis.

MISSOURI, one of the greatest of the American rivers, whose course was but little known, until it was explored in 1804, 1805, and 1806, by Captains Lewis and Clarke, who sailed up the river to its source. At the distance of 2850 miles from its mouth, it is divided into three branches; the most northern of which, namely, Jefferson's river, being ascended 240 miles, the party reached the extreme navigable point of the Missouri, making the total distance to which they had navigated its waters 3096 miles, of which 429 lay within the Rocky mountains. The Missouri falls into the Mississippi, in Lat. 38. 55. 19. N., and Long. 89. 57. 45. W. 18 miles below the mouth of the Illinois, 130 above the mouth of the Ohio, and about 1200 miles from the mouths of the Mississippi, in the gulf of Mexico. The navigation of the Missouri to the falls, which is a distance of 267½ miles, may be generally deemed good. These falls present a very grand spectacle. The river, immediately at its cascade, is 300 yards wide, and is pressed in by a perpendicular cliff on the left, which rises to about 100 feet, and extends up the stream for a mile; on the right the bluff is also perpendicular for 300 yards above the falls. For 90 or 100 yards from the left cliff, the water falls in one smooth even sheet, over a precipice of at least 80 feet. The remaining part of the river precipitates itself with a more rapid current; but being received as it falls, by the irregular and somewhat projecting rocks below, forms a splendid prospect of perfectly white foam 200 yards in length, and 80 in perpendicular elevation. Above these, the Missouri meets with various other interruptions, and another fall to the depth of 19 feet, over a ledge of rocks, so irregular that Captain Lewis gave it the name of the Crooked Falls. There is another irregular rapid above this, and another beautiful fall over a rock, which, without a single niche, and with an edge as straight and regular as if formed by art, stretches itself from one side of the river to the other, for at least a quarter of a mile. Over this it precipitates itself in an even uninterrupted sheet, to the perpendicular depth of fifty feet.

MISTAKEH, POINT, the south-east point of the island of Newfoundland.

MISTELBACH, a town of Lower Austria, on the Zaya. Pop. 3000. 24 miles N. by E. Vienna.

MISTROTTA, a town of Sicily, Val di Demona, 50 miles E. by S. Palermo. Pop. 6000.

MITTAU, a town of European Russia, capital of Courland, on the Aa, province of Semigallia. Here is a Catholic, a Calvinist, and two Lutheran churches. Population 12,000. 140 miles N. Konigsberg.

MITTWEYDA, a town of Saxony. It has manufactures of cotton, muslin, &c. Population 3800.—Old Mittweyda is adjoining. Pop. 380. 32 miles W. by S. Dresden.

MISKENHEAD, the south-west point of Ireland, county of Cork.—Also a cape on the east coast of Ireland.

MOBILE, a town of North America, formerly in West Florida, now the capital of Mobile county, in the Alabama territory, on the river of the same name, at its entrance into Mobile bay. It contains about 300 houses. 170 miles E. New Orleans.

MOBILE, a deep, broad, and navigable river of North America. It enters Mobile bay in the gulf of Mexico, in Lat. 30. 15. N.

MOCHA, an extensive city of Yemen, in Arabia, the principal port on the Red sea. The appearance of the town from the sea is handsome, having all its buildings white washed, and three minarets of considerable height; while the dead line of the flat roofs which are employed in all Mahometan cities, is broken by several tombs, which form handsome structures. The interior is, however, filthy, and many of the habitations are in a decayed state. The residence of the Dola, the principal edifice, is large and lofty, having one front to the sea, and another to a square. Another side is filled up by the official residence of the secretary of state, and by an extensive serai built by the Turks, while they were masters of Mocha. The best houses in general are those facing the sea. The main and almost sole staple of Mocha is coffee, for which this part of Arabia is famed; also gum arabic, myrrh, frankincense, balm of Gilead, senna, sharks' fins, rhinoceros' horns and hides, acacia and civet. Pop. 6000. Long. 43. 30. E. Lat. 13. 30. N.

MOCKWAPPORE, the capital of a district in Hindostan. Long. 86. 16. E. Lat. 27. 28. N.

MODBURY, a market town of England, in Devonshire. The church is spacious. It has woollen manufactures. Pop. 2194. 14 miles E. Plymouth.

MODENA, a duchy in the north of Italy, situated between the Po on the north, and the Appennines on the south, and extending from 9. 54. to 11. 30. of E. Long. and from 44. 0. to 44. 55. of N. Lat. It is bounded E. by the States of the Church, and W. by Parma. It is an inland tract of country, 84 miles long, with a medium breadth of 25; extent 2060 square miles, and 370,000 inhabitants. The principal towns are Modena, Reggio, Massa, Mirandola, Novellara, and Correggio. The principal rivers are the Crostolo, the Panaro, and the Secchia. The products are corn, wine, fruit, olives, mulberry-trees, hemp, &c. In 1796, the Duke of Modena was expelled from his dominions by the French. In 1814, the congress of Vienna restored to his son, the archduke Francis of Este, the territory of Modena.

MODENA, the capital of the above duchy, situated in a delightful plain, between the rivers Panaro and Secchia. It has a citadel, and is surrounded with ramparts. The houses are well built; the streets clean and regular. The Strada Maestra is the finest in the town; but almost all the streets are bordered with arcades, under which the foot passengers walk. The finest public building in Modena is the ducal palace, situated in a large square. The cathedral is a mean building in the Gothic style, remarkable for nothing but its marble tower. There is here a college. The other objects of interest are the hospitals, the citadel, the theatre, and some good scientific collections. The trade is not considerable. Population 20,000. 23 miles W. N. W. Bologna. Long. 11. 12. 30. E. Lat. 44. 34. & N.

MODICA, the capital of a district of the same name, in Sicily, near the river Scicli. Pop. 23,500. 30 miles W. S. W. Syracuse.

MODURNO, a town of Naples, province of Bari. Population 4600.

MOEN, an island of Denmark, in the Baltic. Population 7000.

MOFFAT, a parish and small well built town of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire. The principal, or rather the only street, is spacious, with two good inns and lodging-houses. The church is a handsome building. Moffat has been long celebrated for its mineral waters. Pop. 2218. 31 miles N. E. Dumfries.

MOGNARO, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro, with 3800 inhabitants.

MOGADOR, a considerable seaport of Morocco, on the Atlantic. The place is built on a low flat desert of accumulating sand, which separates it from the cultivated country. Mogador has a very beautiful appearance from the sea, the houses being all of stone, and white; but, as usual in Mahometan towns, the streets are narrow and dirty, and the houses present chiefly a mass of dead wall. Those of the foreign merchants, however, are more spacious. There are two towns, one of which may more properly be called a citadel, containing the custom-house, treasury, the residence of the Alkaid, and the houses of the foreign merchants. The harbour is formed by an island to the south of Mogador. The town is defended both on the side of the land and sea by batteries. The imports consist chiefly of European manufactures. Population 10,000. Long. 9. 20. W. Lat. 31. 50. N.

MOQUEA, a town of Spain, province of Seville, on the Tinto. Population 5000.

MOHAWK, a river of the United States, in New York. It joins the Hudson.

MOHILEV, an extensive government or province of the west of European Russia, to the east of the government of Minsk, lying between 28. 50. and 32. 40. of E. Long. and 53. 5. and 55. 10. of N. Lat. Area 18,500 square miles; population 800,000. The chief rivers are the Dnieper, Druzh, and Susha.

MOHILEV, a town of European Russia, on the Dnieper. In the centre of the town is a large octagonal square, surrounded with fine buildings. The government offices, the magazines, and the archbishop's palace, are fine edifices. Pop. 12,500. 330 miles S. W. Moscow.

MOHILEV, a town of European Russia, on the Dnieper. Population 7000.

MORILLA, a small island in the Indian sea, between Madagascar and the coast of Africa.

MOIRANS, a town of France, department of the Isere. Population 2000.

MOVATSK, a town of Russia, near the Moskwa. 63 miles W. Moscow. Population 4000.

MOXSCHAK, a town of Russia. Population 4100. Long. 44. 50. E. Lat. 58. 40. N.

MOZA, a town of Naples, 37 miles N. W. Naples. Population 2000.

MOZA, a town of Naples, on the Adriatic, with a good harbour. Population 7700.

MOLD, or MOULD, a market town of Wales, in Flintshire. It consists chiefly of one long street. The church is a very handsome building. Some towers of its strong and ancient castle still remain. Population of the parish 7320. 12 miles W. Chester.

Moldau, a large and rapid river of Bohemia, joins the Elbe, a little above Melnik.

Moldau, or Moldavia, a considerable river which rises in the Carpathian mountains, and joins the Sereth.

Moldavia, a province in the north-east extremity of European Turkey, situated between 26. 16. 45. and 28. 30. 15. of E. Long., and 45. 25. and 48. 13. of N. Lat. It is bounded E. by Russia, S. by Turkey, W. by Transylvania, and N. by Austrian Poland. Length from north to south 200 miles; breadth about 120; superficial extent 17,000 square miles. It is divided into Upper Moldavia, or Zara de Suss, and Lower Moldavia, or Zaru de Schoss. The former is subdivided into four, and the latter into nine districts. The principal rivers are the Danube, the Pruth, and the Sereth. The chief lakes are those of Bratetsch and Dorohoe. The principal products of Moldavia are wheat, barley, millet, maize; also wine and tobacco in considerable quantities. To the rearing of horses, and to the breeding of horned cattle and sheep, the Moldavians give considerable attention; and large quantities of these are exported. Moldavia has no manufactures but for home consumption. Population 300,000. At the treaty of Bucharest, in May 1812, the part of Moldavia to the north of the Pruth, was retained by Russia.

Mole, a river of England, in Surrey. It joins the Thames opposite Hampton Court.

Molt, Tine, a port in the N. W. part of the island of St Domingo, 2 leagues E. Cape St Nicholas. Long. 73. 26. W. Lat. 19. 51. N.

Molpetra, a town of Naples, on the Adriatic. It has a cathedral, and a number of churches. Population 11,500.

Molieres, a town of France, department of the Tarn and Garonne. Population 2500.

Molina, a town of Spain, on the Molina, 60 miles N. N. E. Cuenca. Pop. 4400.

Molina, a town of Spain, in Murcia, 7 miles N. by W. Murcia. Population 3200.

Molise, a small town in a province of the same name, 48 miles N. N. E. Naples.

Molitero, a town of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 5900.

Moll, a town of the Netherlands, province of Antwerp. Population 3800.

Molstein, a town of France, on the Bruch, 10 miles N. E. Strasburg. Pop. 2500.

Molton, Sothry, a market town and parish of England, in Devonshire, on the Mole. It has manufactures of serge, &c. Pop. 3314.

Molucca, or Sprae Islands, in the East Indies; namely, Amboyna, Banda, Ceram, Ternate, &c. &c. chiefly famous for the production of spices, particularly nutmeg and cloves. They were taken by the British during the late war, from the Dutch, to whom they were restored in 1814.

Mono, a flourishing town of New Granada, province of Carthagera, on the river Magdalena. 110 miles S. S. E. Carthagera.

Monia, a small island of the West Indies, between Hispaniola and Porto Rico.

Monaco, a petty principality of Italy, in the Sardinian states, bounded by the county of Nice, the duchy of Genoa, and the sea. Population 6000. The only towns are Monaco and Mentone.

Monaghan, a county of Ireland, in the province of Ulster. It is bounded N. by Tyrone, E. by Armagh, and S. E. by the counties of East Meath and Louth. Length 30 miles; greatest breadth 19 miles; area 268,500 English acres, and 450 square miles. The whole is divided into 21 parishes. Although this county is much encumbered with bogs and mountains, still great portions of it are highly cultivated and improved. In most parts the surface is hilly, but no part is inaccessible to the plough. Potatoes and oats are successfully cultivated, but there is very little wheat. The linen manufacture, which flourishes extensively, is the great staple. The Sliebh-Blaught mountains, which extend into this county from Tyrone, though they are an uninteresting waste, have, however, beds of the richest limestone, and abundance of marl; and indications of coal have also been observed. There is also lead ore of the richest quality. There are in this county 184 lakes, of which 30 are considerable sheets of water. The principal rivers are the Ballyhays, the Annalee, the Lagan, the Fane, the Myrvale, the Fin, and the Blackwater.

Monaghan, the capital of the above county. Here was an ancient abbey. 40 miles S. W. Belfast.

Monance, St, a town and parish of Scotland, 12 miles S. Cupar.

Monasterivan, a town of Ireland, in Kildare, on the Barrow, 32 miles S. W. Dublin.

Monastir, or Bistolia, a town of Macedonia, on one of the tributary streams of the Vistritza, or Hebrus. Population 15,000. 95 miles W. N. W. Salonica.

Monavar, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 20 miles W. Alicant. Population 8000.

Monbercello, a town of Piedmont, 35 miles E. S. E. Turin. Population 2500.

Monelanc, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, 17 miles N. Taragona. Population 3600.

Monbu, a fortified town of Spain, in Catalonia. Population 2000.

Moncalieri, a town of Piedmont, on the Po, 4 miles S. Turin. Population 7300.

Moncalvo, a town of Piedmont, 30 miles E. Turin. Population 3400.

Moncarrat, a town of France, department of the Dordogne. Population 2500.

Monchique, a town of Portugal, 15 miles W. Silves. Population 4800.

Monconso, a town of Portugal, province of Trás os Montes. Population 1300.

Moncrivello, a town of Piedmont, province of Vercelli. Population 2300.

Moncu, a town of France, department of the Lot. Population 3000.

MONDARDIER, a town of France, department of the Gard. Population 2500.

MONDEGO, a river of Portugal, province of Beira, which falls into the Atlantic.

MONDEGO, CAPE, on the W. coast of Portugal. Long. 8. 53. S. W. Lat. 40. 12. 6. N.

MONDONEDO, a walled town of Spain, in Galicia, tolerably well built, with regular streets. Pop. 6000. 75 miles W. Oviedo.

MONDONEDO, SIERRA DE, a chain of mountains in the north-west of Spain.

MONDOVI, a town of Piedmont, near the river Ellero. It is divided into four parts; the town proper, called Piazza, on the mountain; and the three suburbs, Carassone, Broff, and Piano della Valle, built at the bottom. The town proper has a small citadel, and contains a great number of religious houses and churches. The suburbs have manufactures both of woollen and muslin, as well as tanneries and iron forges; but the chief branch of its industry is the spinning of silk. Population 20,000. 45 miles S. S. E. Turin.

MONDRAGON, a town of Spain, in Guipuzcoa, on the Deva, 30 miles S. S. W. St. Sebastian.

MONDRAGON, a town of Naples, 23 miles N. W. Naples. Population 1800.

MOVENS, a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees, on the river Baïse. 9 miles W. Pau. Population 5200.

MONESTIER, a town of France, department of the Upper Alps. Population 2000.

MOONEYMORE, a considerable village of Ireland, in Derry, on the Bigoney.

MONFALONT, a well built town of Upper Egypt, on the Nile. It has a good trade in grain, and a very large cloth manufactory.

MONFAUCON, a town of France, department of the Lot. Population 1900.

MONFLANQUIN, a town of France, department of Lot and Garonne. Population 5000.

MONFORTE, two small towns of Portugal, 33 miles W. Braganza, 18 S. Portalegre.

MONGHIEN, a celebrated fortress of Hindostan, and capital of a district of the same name. It is situated on the Ganges.

MONGOLIA, an extensive region in the northern part of Central Asia, to the N. and N. W. of China, and filling most of the space between that empire and Asiatic Russia. The country is chiefly distinguished as being traversed by the wandering herds of that Nomadic race which, under the name of Mongols, or Moguls, has been so celebrated.

MONGRANDE, a town of Piedmont, between Vercelli and Biella. Population 3200.

MONHEIM, a town of the Prussian province of Cleves and Berg. Population 2000.

MONIKENDAM, a port of North Holland, on the Zuyder Zee. Population 2100.

MONISTROL, a town of France, department of Upper Loire, on the Plat. Pop. 4000.

MONISTROL, a considerable town of Spain, in Catalonia, 14 miles W. Mataro.

MONITO, a small island of the West Indies, between Hispaniola and Porto Rico.

MONKTON, a township of England, in Durham. Population 424.

MONMOUTH, a county of England, on the borders of Wales, one of the smallest in the kingdom, but in many respects extremely interesting, being equally distinguished as a rich agricultural, and a great mining and manufacturing district. It is remarkable also for the number of its antiquities and historie remains. It is bounded S. by the Bristol channel, N. by the counties of Hereford and Brecknock, W. by Glamorgan, and E. by the county of Gloucester and part of Hereford. Its figure is nearly quadrangular, extending at a medium 24 miles in length, and 21 in breadth. It lies within the meridians of 2. 35. and 3. 14. W. long. and the parallels of 51. 30. and 51. 58. N. lat. It contains 618 square miles, or 330,000 acres, with 124 inhabitants to each mile. It is divided into six hundreds and 127 parishes, and has one borough and county town, Monmouth, and six market towns, Abergavenny, Cierleod, Chepstow, Newport, Pontypool, and Usk; and sends three members to parliament, two for the county, and one for Monmouth. The aspect of Monmouthshire is extremely diversified, and comprehends every variety of scenery, from the wildness and sublimity of the Alpine region, to the richness and beauty of a highly cultivated country. The chief rivers are Monnow, Wyo, the Usk, the Ebbw, besides a number of smaller streams. The soil is various, but on the whole fertile, more especially in the eastern part of the county, and all along the course of the river Usk. The southern part of the county consists partly of large tracks of moor or marsh lands, of a deep rich loamy soil in some places, and a black peaty earth in others. The marsh lands along the coast are many of them subject to inundations of the sea; and great dykes have been raised for their protection, chiefly in the extensive levels of Caldecot and Wentloog. In the western and hilly part of the county, the soil is barren, and of a thin peaty nature. The low or marsh lands are principally in a state of pasture, and the uplands under a mixed kind of husbandry, between pasture and arable. The crops raised are wheat, barley, and oats, pease and beans, and the artificial grasses, clover, ryegrass, and trefoil. Monmouthshire is chiefly noted for its mineral riches. It abounds with iron-stone, and with coal, to extract the purer metal. Numerous iron, and several tin works, have accordingly been erected; and the coal is also exported in considerable quantities. Limestone of the finest kind is found in every part of the county. Breccia for mill-stones, and valuable building stones, also abound in this county, and lead ore occurs in some places. Birmingham has become the great place for the manufacture of japanned goods. Monmouthshire has also some woollen manufactures. The inland navigation has been improved by two canals; and several rail-roads have been constructed. The Welsh language is much spoken, though the English is mostly used in the towns. Population 71,833.

MONMOUTH, chief town of the county of Monmouth, at the confluence of the rivers Monnow and Wye, which are crossed by three bridges. There are still some remains of its ancient castle; also of a Benedictine priory. St Thomas's church is a small but very ancient building. The new town-hall stands in the market-place. The county jail is a new building, constructed and managed on the most approved plan. A considerable quantity of bark is exported. In conjunction with Usk and Newport, it sends one member to parliament. Population 4164. 21 miles W. by S. Gloucester.

MONMOUTH, a large maritime county of the United States, in New Jersey. Pop. 22,150.

MONMOUTH, the capital of the above county, 63 miles E. N. E. Philadelphia.

MONOMANIA, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 12,793. Slaves 351. Chief town Morgantown.

MONOPOLI, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Bari, on the Adriatic. It is well built, contains a cathedral, and a number of churches. It has manufactures of hemp and cotton stuffs. Pop. 15,000. 26 miles E. S. E. Bari.

MONREALE, a neatly built town of Sicily, 2 miles W. S. W. Palermo. Pop. 8000.

MONROE, a county of the United States, in the state of Ohio. Population 1200.—2d, Of Virginia. Population 8444. Slaves 376.

MONS, a large and strong town of the Netherlands, capital of Hainault, divided into two parts by the Trouille. It is a well built town, with several squares, and tolerably regular streets. The market-place is spacious, and contains the government-house; also the house of the provincial council. The town-hall is a large old building, with a fine steeple erected in 1716. The churches of the town are in general well built; and there are various charitable institutions. It has manufactures of woollens, cotton, linen, and lace; also iron foundries, along with works for salt, earthenware, oil, and soap. It has been frequently besieged and taken; in 1709 by the allies under Marlborough and Eugene; in 1746 by Marshal Saxe; and in the war of the French revolution (in 1792, 1793, 1794), by the French and allies. Population 20,000, 23 miles E. N. E. Valenciennes.

MONSELICE, a town of Austrian Italy, in Padua. It has manufactures of woollen and linen. Pop. 3000. 19 miles S. S. W. Padua.

MONTA, a town of Italy, in Piedmont, province of Asti, with 2500 inhabitants.

MONTAGNAC, a town of France, 31 miles W. S. W. Montpellier. Population 2700.

MONTAGNANA, a town of Austrian Italy. It has manufactures of silk thread. Population 6200. 20 miles S. W. Padua.

MONTAGNANO, a town of Naples, province of Melfe. Population 2700.

MONTAQUE ISLAND, an island in the Pacific ocean, fifty miles long. Long. 147. to 149. W. Lat. 59. 50. to 60. 30. N.

MONTAIGUT, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Pop. 4100.

MONTALCINO, a town of Tuscany. Population 2700. 45 miles S. S. E. Florence.

MONTALTO, a town of Italy, near the mouth of the Fiora. 55 miles N. W. Rome.—2d, Another town, 40 miles S. Ancona; and a third in Naples, in Calabria Citra. Population 4000.

MONTALVAO, a fortified town of Portugal, in Alentejo, near the Tagus.

MONTARANO, a town of Italy, in Piedmont, province of Turin. Population 3500.

MONTAUBAN, a well built town of France, department of the Loiret. The public buildings are the churches, a small theatre, and an old castle. Pop. 6400. 40 miles E. by N. Orleans.

MONTAUBAN, a regular and well built town of France, capital of the department of the Tarn and Garonne, on the Tarn. It consists of three parts, two on different sides of the river from the third; with which they communicate by a bridge built of brick, remarkable for the boldness of its construction. In the centre of the town is a square, surrounded with good buildings, and presenting a double range of arcades, adorned with pilasters of the Doric order. This square forms the point of junction of eight streets. The most remarkable object at Montauban is the elevated public walk called the Falaise, which has an extensive view. The principal buildings are the cathedral, the bishop's palace, and the college. Here is also an astronomical observatory, a society of arts and sciences, and a public library. Its celebrated Protestant university, suppressed in 1029, was re-established by Bonaparte in 1810. The manufactures of Montauban consist of silk stuffs and stockings, linen, serge, and other woollen stuffs. Population 24,000. 30 miles N. Toulouse.—2d, A town of France, department of the Ile and Vilaine. Pop. 2800.

MONTAUD, a town of France, department of the Loire. Population 2000.

MONTBAUT, a town of France, in Burgundy. Population 2200. 84 miles N. W. Dijon.

MONTBELLARD, a town of France, department of the Doubs. Population 3700.

MONT-BLANC, the loftiest mountain of Europe, in Savoy, in Long. 6. 44. 37. E. Lat. 45. 41. 52. N. Elevation above 15,000 feet.

MONTBRISON, a town of France, capital of the department of the Loire, on the Vigez. Pop. 5200. 40 miles S. S. W. Lyons.

MONT DAUPHIN, a fortified town of France, department of the Upper Alps.

MONT DE MARSAU, a town of France, 79 miles S. Bourdeaux. Population 4500.

MONTMORIS, a town of France. It has manufactures of woollen stuffs. Population 4200. 15 miles S. E. Amiens.

MONTMURILLO, a town of Austrian Italy. Population 1500. 20 miles E. N. E. Verona.

MONTMUSSEU, a town of France, department of Calvados. Population 2400.

MONTREALVO, a town of Naples. Population 4500. 16 miles E. N. E. Benevento.

MONTRECH, a town of France, on the Garonne. Pop. 2300. 25 miles N. by W. Toulouse.

MONTECHIARO, a town of Austrian Italy, on the Chiessa. Pop. 6000. 10 miles S. E. Brescia.

MONTE CHIARO, a town of Piedmont, with 1900 inhabitants.

MONTE CHRISTI, a town of South America, 110 miles N. W. Guayaquil.

MONTEFALCONE, a town of Naples. Pop. 2400. 18 miles N. E. Molise.—3d, A town of Naples, in the Principato Ultra. Pop. 3600.

MONTE-FIASCONI, a town of Italy. Population 3000. 50 miles N. N. E. Rome.

MONTEFORTE, a town of Naples, in the Principato Ultra. Population 5000.

MONTE-FOSCOLI, a town of Naples. Population 2700. 7 miles S. S. E. Benevento.

MONTIGLIO, a town of Piedmont. Population 2600. 20 miles W. by N. Turin.

MONTIGO BAY, a flourishing seaport town of Jamaica, on the north coast of the island, in a bay which gives name to the town. In 1795 it was almost destroyed by an earthquake. Houses 230. Long. 77. 50. W. Lat. 18. 20. N.

MONTE GRANDE, a town of Piedmont, on the Vionna. Population 3200.

MONTE LIGONE, a town of Naples, in Calabria Ultra. It was almost entirely overthrown by an earthquake in 1783. Population 8000. 12 miles N. N. E. Nicotera.

MONTÉLIART, a town of France, département of the Drome, on the Rhone. Its streets are broad, and there is a pleasant public walk along the walls. It has manufactures of silk, woollen, and cotton. Population 6400. 100 miles S. Lyons.

MONTELLA, a town of Naples, in the Principato Ultra. Population 5800.

MONTÉLUPO, a town of Italy, in Tuscany. It has a manufacture of vases, urns, &c.

MONTÉLOVEZ, a city of Mexico, and capital of the province of Cohahuila. Population 3500. Long. 103. 30. W. Lat. 26. 33. N.

MONTE-MAGGIORE, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Mazzara. Population 4000.

MONTÉMOR O NOVO, a town of Portugal, in Alentejo, on the Canha. Population 4000.

MONTÉMOR O VELHO, a town of Portugal, in Beira, on the Mondego. Pop. 4000.

MONTENEGRO, a mountainous district on the western frontier of European Turkey, having Albania to the south, and the large province of Herzegovina to the north. Population 40,000.

MONTENOTTE, a mountain of Italy, having on its side two small villages, Montenotte Superiore and Inferiore, noted as the scene of the first exploit of Bonaparte in 1796.

MONTESANO, a town of Naples, province of Basilicata. Population 5800.

MONTESAU-VAULT YONNE, a town of France, département of the Seine and Marne. Population 3500.

MONTE ST GIULIANO, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Mazzara. Population 6000.

MONTESANO, a town of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 4600.

MONTE ST SAVINO, a town of Tuscany, district of Florence. Population 3000.

MONTEARCHIO, a town of Naples. Pop. 5000. 25 miles E. N. E. Naples.

MONTESQUIOU DE VOÛRESTRÉ, a town of France. Pop. 2800. 33 miles S. Toulouse.

MONTE VIDEO, a well fortified town of South America, in the province of Buenos Ayres, on the north side of the river Plata, in a small bay. A mountain overlooks the place, on which is a light-house. The harbour, although shallow, and quite open to the western winds, is the best in the Rio de la Plata. The town occupies the whole of a peninsular promontory, that forms the eastern point of the harbour. It makes a handsome appearance from the harbour, as it is built upon an ascent, and the houses appear interspersed with gardens and trees. The houses are of stone and brick, only one story high, except a few. The roofs are flat, and the floors of brick, though some have only earth. The great square contains the cathedral, which is a handsome edifice, the town-house, and the public prison; but the streets are unpaved, and consequently either always dusty or muddy. The chief trade of Monte Video is in hides, tallow, and dried beef. Monte Video was taken in 1806 by the British; it was evacuated the following year. Population between 15,000 and 20,000, consisting of Spaniards, creoles, and slaves. 120 miles E. N. E. Buenos Ayres. Long. 56. 14. 30. W. Lat. 34. 54. 48. S.

MONTENX, a town of France, département of the Vaucluse. Population 3300.

MONT-FERRAND, a town of France, in Auvergne. Population 4000.

MONTFERRAT, a duchy in the north of Italy, forming a part of the Sardinian states, and bounded by Piedmont, Genoa, and the Milanese. Population 186,000.

MONTFORT L'AMARÉ, a town of France. Population 2700. 28 miles W. Paris.

MONTGAILLARD, a town of France, near the Adour. Population 2400.

MONTGOMERY, a county of North Wales, bounded E. by Shropshire, W. by part of Merioneth, and Cardigan shires, S. by Radnorshire, and N. by Denbigh and part of Merioneth. Its form is oblong, approaching to a square, and extending 33 miles by 25. It contains, according to a recent survey, about 492,000 acres, or 708 square miles, and is comprehended between the parallels of 2. 56. and 3. 56. W. Long. and within the meridians of 62. 31. and 62. 33. N. Lat. It is divided into nine hundreds, viz. Llanfyllin, Deudwr, Pool, Cawre, Mathrafal, Machynlleth, Llanfyllies, Newton, and Montgomery, comprising 47 parishes and 7 market towns, viz. Montgomery, a borough and the county town, Welsh Pool, Llanfyllin, Llanfair, Machynlleth, Newton, and Llanfyllies. It sends two members to parliament, one for the county, and one for the borough of Montgomery. The aspect of Montgomeryshire is considerably diversified; but in the whole mountainous. These mountains have, in general, a milder character, and less of that rugged wildness and sublimity which prevails in the adjacent county of Merioneth. The chief rivers are the Severn, the Wye, the Virnwy, and the Tanat, on the eastern side of the main ridge of mountains, and the Dovy and its tributary streams on the west. The climate of Montgomeryshire varies considerably with the elevation of the ground. The air of the hills is bleak; in the valleys it is milder, but frequently very boisterous. The narrow valleys among the mountains are friendly to vegetation, and highly productive both in corn and grass; but the finest arable land lies on the eastern side of the county, bordering on Shropshire. On the whole, Montgomeryshire, though barren and mountainous in many parts, has yet a greater mixture of fertile vale and plain than several of the other Welsh counties. The mineral riches of this county have long been considerable. A remarkably rich lead mine was many years since opened at Llanynnog, which was at length inundated by water. Other promising veins have been opened. This county abounds with slates. Limestone occurs, but not very abundantly. Coal is almost entirely wanting in this county. Agriculture is the chief business of Montgomeryshire, together with some manufactures which depend immediately of its great production of wool. The arable lands are chiefly confined to the vales, while the uplands are devoted to the pasturage of sheep and cattle. A breed of horses, peculiar to this county and that of Merioneth, is much used here. They are a kind of small ponies of a very hardy race. The ordinary crops raised in this county are oats, barley, wheat, and rye: green crops to alternate with these have been long introduced. Montgomeryshire is the best wooded county in North Wales. The manufactures of Montgomeryshire are chiefly those of wool. Population 59,899.

MONTGOMERY, the chief town of Montgomeryshire, near the Severn. It is well built, and the streets are clean. The ruins of Montgomery castle stand on an eminence north of the town. Montgomery sends one member to parliament. Population 1082. 26 miles S. W. Hereford.

MONTGOMERY, a county of the United States, in the central part of New York. Population 41,906.—3d, In the south-east part of Pennsylvania. Population 20,703.—3d, In Maryland. Population 17,980. Slaves 7572.—4th, In Ohio. Population 13,700.—5th, In the south-west part of Virginia. Population 3409. Slaves 1099.—6th, In the central part of North Carolina. Population 8430. Slaves 1696.—7th, In Kentucky, on the river Licking. Population 12,975. Slaves 1767.—8th, On the north side of West Tennessee. Population 8921. Slaves 2623.—9th, In the central part of Georgia, 750 miles from Washington. Population 2934. Slaves 747.—The name of various townships.

MONTICELLO, the chief town of the Mississippi territory, in the United States, on Pearl river, in Lawrence county, 96 miles N. by E. New Orleans.

MONTICELLO, a newly established village of the United States, in Wayne county, Kentucky, containing 50 log dwelling-houses.

MONTIGNAC LE COMTE, a town of France, 21 miles E. S. E. Perigueux. Pop. 2600.

MONTIJO, a town of Spain, province of Estremadura. Population 3000.

MONTILLA, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, 18 miles S. S. E. Cordova. Pop. 6300.

MONTIVILLIERS, a town of France, 6 miles N. E. Havre. Population 4000.

MONTJOYE, a town of the duchy of Juliers, 16 miles S. S. E. Aix-la-Chapelle. Population 3200.

MONTLOUIS, a town of France, 3 miles E. Tours. Population 3000.

MONT LOUIS, a strongly fortified town of France, in the Upper Pyrenees. Pop. 1100.

MONTMAGNON, a town of France, department of the Allier, on the Cher. Pop. 5700.

MONTMARTE, a village of France, immediately to the north of Paris. It was the scene of some sharp fighting in March 1814. Population 1300.

MONTMERY, a town of France, department of the Meuse, on the Chiers. Population 2000.

MONTMIRAIL, a town of France, department of the Marne, on the Little Morin. Population 2100. Here Bonaparte defeated the Russians in 1814.

MONTMIRAIL, CASTELNAU DE, a town of France, department of the Dordogne. Population 2600.

MONTMORENCI, a river of Canada, which falls into the St Lawrence about seven miles below Quebec, noted for its beautiful falls.

MONTMORENCY, a town of France, 8 miles N. Paris. Population 1800.

MONTMORILLON, a town of France, department of La Vienne. Population 4100.

MONTMORE, a town of France, 30 miles W. Nantes. Pop. with the parish, 3200.

MONTMORE, a town of France, department of the Loir and Cher. Population 2300.

MONTORO, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, on the Guadalquivir. Population 4000.

MONTORO, a town of Naples, with manufactures of linen. Population 6200.

MONTPELIER, a large and ancient town in the south of France, capital of the department of the Herault, between the rivers Masson and Léz. It stands on a declivity, which renders the streets in many places steep and irregular. They are in general winding, narrow, and dark; but in the suburbs, which are as large as the town itself, they are laid out on a plan of tolerable regularity; there also are the best houses. The squares, or open places, are numerous, but none are spacious or elegant. Montpelier has still some fortifications, viz. an old stone wall, and a citadel built by Louis XIV. Of the gates, the finest is that which leads to the Place du Peyron, which is outside of the town, and is said to be the finest river South Esk, to the island of the Inch, which divides the stream into two arms; and across the smaller arm, a stone bridge, of one arch. A new direct has also been formed from the end of the bridge to the middle of the town. In this street a number of handsome houses has lately been built. The harbour of Montrose, formed by the river South Esk, and an arm of the sea, is very commodious; and fine quays have been lately erected. Two light-houses are built at the entrance. Montrose has about 8000 tons of shipping. These are chiefly employed in the coasting and Baltic trade. Several large vessels are also employed in the whale fishery. The principal manufactures are linen and the sheeting and sailcloth manufactures are carried on to a great extent. There is an extensive tan-work, and several ropewalks; also a foundry, two starch-works, and several soap and candle works. The salmon fishing has long been carried on; and of late years that of cod has greatly increased. But the most important branch of the export trade of Montrose is corn, for which there is a regular corn-market every Friday. Owing to an informality in the mode of electing its magistracy, the burgh of Montrose was disfranchised by the court of session; and a new charter was granted by the crown, to commence from the year 1617, according to which the old practice of self-election is done away; and every year ten of the council is renewed by the suffrages of the guild-brethren and traders. Montrose joins with Aberdeen, Aberbrothock, Bervie, and Brechin, in sending a member to parliament. It is reckoned a fashionable resort, as well as a place of commerce and industry. The downs, situated between the town and the German ocean, are extensive, and are very favourable for the well known Scots game of golf, which is much practised here. Population 16,335. 12 miles N. Arbroath; 37 S. Aberdeen.

MONT ST JEAN, a pretty hamlet near the scene of the battle of Waterloo.

MONT ST JEAN, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 2000.

MONTSENIAT, a island of the West Indies, discovered by Columbus in the year 1493, about 9 miles long, and nearly as much wide, of an oval form, belonging to Britain. Long. 61. 6. W. Lat. 18. 45. N.

MONZA, a city of Austrian Italy, in the Lombardy. It has manufactures of silk, hats, and leather. It is remarkable chiefly for the treasury of one of the churches, which contains, among other curiosities, the iron shoes of the kingdom of Lombardy. Pop. 16,000. 3 miles W. Milan.

MONZA, a town of Spain, in Aragon, on the Cinca. Population 2000.

MOORAX, or MOORAX, a province of Hindostan, situated principally between the 28th and 31st degrees of N. Lat.

MOORAX, the capital of the above-mentioned province, about 4 miles S. E. the Chehab river. It has a citadel situated on a rising ground, and contains several handsome tombs. It has manufactures of silks and carpets. Moorax is now governed by a nabob, a mere dependent on the king of the Afghans. Long. 71. 19. E. Lat. 30. 35. N.

MOOS, a town of Hungary, 15 miles N. N. W. Stuhl-Weissenberg. Population 2500.

MOORE, a central county of North Carolina. Population 4307. Slaves 944.

MOOREHEADS, a port town of the United States, in Hardy county, Virginia.

MOOREHEADS, a town of West Flanders, 14 miles E. Ypres. Population 3900.

MOOREHEADS, a city of Bengal, and, from the year 1704 till the year 1757, the capital of that province. Including Cossimbazar, it extends 8 miles along the Bhagiratty river, about 120 miles above Calcutta. Most of the houses have only one story, and have tiled roofs; and the streets are narrow and dirty. It is the residence of the nabob of Bengal; also of the British civil establishment. It has a very considerable trade in raw and manufactured silk. Long. 89. 15. E. Lat. 24. 14. N.

MOOREHEADS, a town of West Flanders, 8 miles N. E. Ypres. Population 5000.

MOORHEADS, a hamlet of England, county of Gloucester. Population 844.

MOOSE RIVER, in Lower Canada, one of the head waters of the St. Francis.

MOOSE RIVER, in the United States, in New Hampshire, joins the Androscoggin.

MOOREHEAD LAKE, a lake of the United States, in Maine, 25 miles long, and 10 or 15 broad.

MOORTYLLIAM, a town of the south of India, 5 miles S. Cuddalore.

MOQUEMMA, the capital of a province of the same name in Peru, at the foot of the Cordillera. It has a good church, and several convents. Population 6000. 70 miles S. Atequipa. Long. 70. 48. W. Lat. 17. 13. S.

MONA, a town of Piedmont, near the Tanaro. Pop. 2600. 7 miles S. W. Alba.

MONA, a river of Armenia, one of the head branches of the Euphrates.

MONABAHAR, a considerable town of Hindostan, province of Delhi. Long. 74. 45. E. Lat. 28. 42. N.

MONAUX, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire. Population 1900.

MONAUX, a bay, point, and river, of the island of Jamaica.

MONASTA, a town of Spain, in Murcia, on the Segura. Population 2000.

MONASTA, or the MONASTA, a tributary of the Danube, in the Austrian states.

MONASTA, a large province of the Austrian empire, bounded E. by Hungary, S. by Austria proper, and N. and W. by Bohemia. Including Austrian Silesia, which is now annexed to it, it extends from 15. 10. to 48. 2. of E. Long. and from 48. 35. to 50. 21. of N. Lat. Its area is computed at 16,000 square miles; its population at 1,661,000; of these, 1240 square miles, and 347,000 inhabitants, belong to Silesia. Mo-river proper is divided into the six circles of Brunn, (Munich, Hradisch, Preman, Znaym, and Igau), and Austrian Silesia into those of Teschen and Troppau. The principal towns are, Brunn (the capital), with 24,000 inhabitants; Olmutz, 11,000; Znaym, 11,000; Troppau, 10,000; Steiermark, 10,000; Nikolsburg, 7,000; Tschodau, 4,000; Znaym, 3,000; Kremsier, 3,000; Hradisch, 2,000; Preman, 2,000; Hradisch, 1,700. Moravia forms a large quadrangle, intersected by several ranges of mountains, of which the highest are on the side of Bohemia. The rivers are numerous, but the greatest is the March or Morava. The soil of Moravia is, in general, of great fertility, particularly in the south. Little corn, however, is raised for exportation. Flax is cultivated, and certain situations are well adapted to the grape. There are extensive quarries. The mines of Moravia are of great antiquity, some gold and silver mines were formerly wrought. At present the most productive mine are those of iron and lead. The working of coal mines is not yet in its infancy, but the strata are supposed to be rich. Woollens, linen, and cotton, are all made here on a large scale. Drapery is carried on in great perfection at Brunn. The other manufactures of Moravia, such as leather, paper, pot-ash, and glass, are comparatively of small importance. The manufactures give rise to a brisk export trade, not only to the west and north, for Germany, but to Hungary, Lower Austria, Italy, and the Levant. The imports consist chiefly of oil, flax, cotton, and silk, as the materials of manufacture, and the very different articles of cattle, wine, and hardware, for the purpose of consumption. In 1827, Moravia was added to the possessions of the house of Austria, and has ever since been subject to the same sovereignty.

MORAWA, a large river in Sardinia, which falls into the Danube, east of Salzburg.

MORAVIAN PROVINCE, or MORAVIA, is the middle district of the ancient province of Moray, in Scotland, bounded N. by the Moray frith, E. and S. E. by Banffshire, N. W. by Invernesshire, and W. by the counties of Inverness and Nairn. It extends about 42 miles in length, and its average breadth is about 20. The southern part is rocky and mountainous. The lower parts, towards the north, are high and fertile. The principal rivers are the Spey, Forth, and Lossie. It contained two royal burghs, Aberdeen and Forres.

MORAY, or MORAY, a town in Scotland, is the German name, for the ancient city of Scotland. It was destroyed by the English, and is now a ruin on the ruins, and Moray is the head in the district of Gordon on the north. It extends in a westerly direction as far as Inverness. At its extremity it receives the river Ness and Beathly.

MORRICO, a town of Apulia, Italy, 20 miles N. Bergamo. Population 1,000.

MORSTERT, a village of the Netherlands, 12 miles N. Ghent. Population 2,300.

MORNIHAN, a department of France, in Brittany, bounded S. by the sea, and N. by the department of the Côtes du Nord. Its superficial extent is 2,800 square miles; its population 423,000. It is watered by the Doune, the Blavet, the Claye, the Oust, and the Seign. The soil is sandy, and not of great fertility.

MORRIS, a town of Naples, 10 miles S. E. Naples. Population 4,000.

MORRIS, a town of France, department of the Ille and Vilaine. Pop. 2,300.

MORSTERT, a village of the Netherlands, 10 miles N. N. W. Breda.

MOROKK, the ancient Paloponnensis, an extensive peninsula of European Turkey, situated to the southward of the peninsula of Greece, with which it is connected by a narrow neck of land called the Isthmus of Corinth. As all other directions are surrounded by the sea, its form is much like the phony, but its irregularity is much indicated. Its length, from the west to south-east (from Patras to Cape Sphakia), is about 150 miles; its breadth from Cape Sphakia to Cape Sphakia, is about 13,500 square miles. The Morok has along its coast a number of ports and bays, the principal of which are Patras, Argolis, Olenos, Kalamata, and Napoli di Romania. It has also a number of secure harbours. The interior is fertile and suitable for picturesque beauty. The principal products are corn, oil, wine, and sugar (as much of Corinth); silk, cotton, and honey, because, and fruit. The principal manufactures are those made in the neighbourhood of Napoli di Romania (and thence called Malmsey), and the chief town of the Morok is Napoli di Romania, with 12,000 inhabitants. Other towns are, Patras, 10,000; Modon, 7,000; Patras, 6,000; Napoli di Romania, 6,000; and Napoli di Romania, 6,000. The chief rivers are the Alpheus, the Eurotas, and the Pamisos. The principal cities of the Morok are those of Symplyon and Phoenicia, both situated towards the north. The latter is remarkable for the small river Symplyon, which flows out of it. The population of the Morok is about 400,000. Of these, four-fifths are Greeks, and the remainder are Turks, Albanians, and negroes. Of the Turks in the Morok, part are the descendants of the Mahometans, part of Slavonians, Greeks, and others who abandoned the Christian faith. The inhabitants of the Morok, who were formerly oppressed, have at length taken up arms in favour of independence. They have gained signal successes against the Turks, and bid fair to obtain their liberty.

MOROKK, a town of the southern coast of Arabia. Long. 55. E. Lat. 17. N.

MOROKK, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 23 miles W. S. W. Tortosa. Pop. 4,000.

MOROKK, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 23 miles W. S. W. Tortosa. Pop. 4,000.

MOROKK, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 23 miles W. S. W. Tortosa. Pop. 4,000.

MOROKK, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 23 miles W. S. W. Tortosa. Pop. 4,000.

MOROKK, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 23 miles W. S. W. Tortosa. Pop. 4,000.

MOROKK, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 23 miles W. S. W. Tortosa. Pop. 4,000.

MOROKK, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 23 miles W. S. W. Tortosa. Pop. 4,000.

MOROKK, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 23 miles W. S. W. Tortosa. Pop. 4,000.

MOROKK, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 23 miles W. S. W. Tortosa. Pop. 4,000.

MOROKK, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 23 miles W. S. W. Tortosa. Pop. 4,000.

MOROKK, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 23 miles W. S. W. Tortosa. Pop. 4,000.

MOROKK, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 23 miles W. S. W. Tortosa. Pop. 4,000.

MOROKK, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 23 miles W. S. W. Tortosa. Pop. 4,000.

known mountain chain, extending along great part of the south of Spain and Portugal, and separating the two great valleys which contain the rivers Guadiana and Guadalquivir.

MORRITON HAMPSHAD, a market town of England, in Devonshire, on the skirts of Dartmoor forest. It has an extensive wool-len trade. 14 miles S. W. Exeter. Pop. 1832.

MORRITON BY SEA, a village and parish of England, in Salop. Population 762.

MORRITON IN THE MARSH, a village of England, in Gloucestershire. Pop. 1815.

MORRETTA, a town of Piedmont, 22 miles S. Turin. Population 5200.

MORGAN, a county of the United States, in the west part of Georgia. Population 18369, including 2418 slaves.

MORGES, a well built town of Switzerland, 23 miles N. E. Geneva. Pop. 2100.

MORLACHTA, a district belonging partly to Turkey, and partly to Austria, between Dalmatia and Croatia, 100 miles in length, and 25 in breadth.

MORLAIX, a well built town of France, in Brittany, department of Finistère, on the small river Morlaix. On the bank of the river there is a fine quay, forming an agreeable covered walk, and serving like an exchange for the meeting of merchants. The only public buildings are the churches and an hospital. It trades in cattle, flax, hemp, and linen. Its manufactures comprise tobacco, paper, leather, and linen. Population 10,000. 34 miles E. N. E. Brest.

MORNANT, a town of France, 10 miles S. S. W. Lyons. Population 2000.

MORNINGTON ISLE, one of Wellesley's islands, on the north coast of New Holland. It is 35 miles long, and 90 in circuit.

MOROCCO, a large kingdom, situated at the south-eastern extremity of Africa, the most important of the states comprehended under the general name of Barbary. It is very difficult to fix its limits. It is separated into two parts by the great chain of Atlas, which entirely traverses it, first from east to west, and then from north to south, leaving between itself and the sea a plain of from 50 to 100 miles in breadth. This plain, the length of which may form an oblique line of 400 or 500 miles, comprises all the fertile and populous part of Morocco. The other division consists of the territory beyond Atlas, composed of the provinces of Damah, Tafilalet, and Sigilmassa, which, at first fertile in dates and wool, pass gradually into the Sahara, whose rude tribes, in proportion to their distance, set the authority of the emperor more and more at defiance. The boundaries of the empire are on the north the Mediterranean, on the west the Atlantic; Algiers forms a small part of its eastern frontier; while on all other sides it is lost in the wide expanse of the Sahara. Morocco is perhaps the most complete, as well as the most barbarous and brutal despotism on the face of the earth, without either law or religion to moderate it. Population estimated by M^r Jackson at 14,000,000; others reduce this estimate to 5 or 6 millions. The basis of this population is formed of what are called Moors, consisting of the original people, now mixed and coalesced with their Arab conquerors; and with the tribes who have at various times poured in from the African deserts. To these is added a considerable number of the Moors who once reigned over Spain. The Jews are very numerous, particularly in the cities, and by dint of exclusive qualification, carry on all the mercantile and money transactions. Every species of oppression and contempt, however, is heaped upon this degraded race. Catholic convents are also permitted to exist, though liable to considerable vexations, at Morocco, Mogador, Tangier, and Mequinez. The Atlas mountains contain mines of iron, tin, and particularly of copper; but little use is made of these mineral riches. Antimony is more carefully worked, being a substance extensively used in oriental cosmetics. Mineral salt occurs throughout the empire in the greatest abundance; and, besides home consumption, makes a copious article of export to Soudan. Grain is produced much more than sufficient for its own consumption. Wool is also very plentiful. The goats of Tafilalet afford another very valuable commodity, their skins composing that leather which, under the name of Morocco, is so distinguished for its softness, pliancy, and beauty. ostriches are numerous on the borders of the southern desert, and their feathers form a valuable article. Fruits abound; but Morocco is chiefly distinguished for almonds. The commerce of Morocco with Europe is almost wholly carried on from Mogador.

MOROCCO, called by the natives MARAKASHAN, the capital of the above empire. It was founded in 1032 A. D., and rose to great prosperity. The circuit of its walls still appears to be calculated for at least 300,000 inhabitants. It is now much depopulated, and covered with the accumulated ruins of houses and gardens. Its population is reduced to 30,000, comprising 2000 Jewish families. It still retains vestiges, however, of its former grandeur. The temples, sanctuaries, and mosques, are numerous; and some of the latter particularly lofty and splendid. There are also three gardens, with splendid pavilions. The palace is of hewn stone, ornamented with marble. The Kasseri, or department for trade, is an oblong building, surrounded with small shops, which are filled with every species of valuable commodity. The inhabitants are dirty, and the habitations swarm with vermin. The walls are in good repair. Long. 7. W. Lat. 30. 57. N.

MURCIA, a small town of Spain, with a castle, 33 miles E. S. E. Seville.

MURVERN, a neatly built market town and borough of England, in Northumberland, 9 miles from the sea, on the Wansbeck, which is here crossed by an ancient bridge of two arches. It consists principally of two spacious streets, in a north and east direction; in the centre of which is a wide square, where the market-house is placed. Its public buildings are, the town-hall, a handsome structure of hewn stone, decorated with two turrets; the parish church, a plain Gothic building, having a tower at the west end; the county jail; a modern built chapel of stone; an ancient school-house, for a free grammar school, founded by Edward VI. Besides the parish church, there is one Catholic chapel, one Presbyterian, and one Methodist meeting house. Morpeth sends to parliament two members, elected by above 300 free burgesses. Morpeth has a very large market, on Wednesday, for cattle. Adjoining are the ruins of the baronial castle. Population 8418. 14 miles N. Newcastle-on-Tyne.

MORRA, a town of Naples, 55 miles E. by N. Naples. Population 3360.

MORRIS, a county of the United States, in New Jersey, bounded N. by Bergen county, E. by Essex county, S. by Somerset and Hunterdon counties, and N.W. by Sussex county. Population 21,923.

MORRISTOWN, in the United States, capital of Morris county, New Jersey. Population 3733.

MORRONE, a town of Naples, province of Molise. Population 2500.

MORS, the largest island of the Fynsford gulf, in the north of Jutland. Lat. 56. 41. N. Area 136 square miles. Pop. about 7000.

MOUTAËRE, a town of France, in Normandy. It has manufactures of linen, thread, and leather. Population 5600. 18 miles E. N. E. Alençon.

MOUTAIN, a town of France, département of La Manche, on the Lance. Pop. 2700.

MOUTANO, a town of the Sardinian states, in the Milanese. Population 2000.

MORROW, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1100.

MOSAUMBIQUE, a city and seaport of Eastern Africa, capital of all the Portuguese possessions in that part of the world. Vasco de Gama, in his first voyage to India, touched here, and found it a large and mercantile city. In 1608 the Portuguese obtained permission to erect a fort and factory at Mossambique, by means of which they soon expelled the Arabs, and made themselves masters of the place. Mossambique is built upon an island of the same name, about two miles and a half in length, and a quarter of a mile in breadth, and resembling in form a crescent, the hollow part of which is turned towards the sea. Pop. 300 Portuguese, 600 persons of Arabian extraction, and 1500 negroes. Lat. 16. 4. S. Long. 38. 1. E.

MOSAZEN, a town of Germany, in Baden, on the Rhine. Population 2300.

MOSCHOWITZ, a town of Austrian Illyria, in Istria. Population 3000.

MOSCOW, a government of European Russia, lying between 35. 15. and 58. 40. of N. Lat. The surrounding governments are those of Tver, Vladimir, Riazan, Tula, Kaluga and Smolensko. Its area is about 10,000 square miles; its population 1,126,000.

MOSCOW, a great city of European Russia, long the seat of the Russian government, and still the capital of the interior of that empire. It is of a circular, or rather oval form, having its length from N. to S., its breadth from E. to W. Its extent, exclusive of the suburbs, is 3 miles by 2½; but with the suburbs it is above 5 miles by 4, having a circumference of more than 20 miles. The great extent of space thus occupied is owing partly to the width of the streets, but more to the number of spacious courts, gardens, and other open spaces: bridges, the houses of the lower orders are of one story only. The river Moskva or Mosqua, flowing from W. to E., traverses the city with a very serpentine course, retreating towards the middle of the town, a rivulet called the Naglma, and soon after the Jausa, a stream of more consequence. Moscow consists of four successive divisions, circular or semicircular, each surrounding the other, and each increasing in circuit, in proportion to its distance from the centre. 1. The central part, containing the Kremlin and the Kitagorod, or mercantile quarter. 2. The Nielsgorod, or White town, extending around the central part like a half moon. 3. The Semliensgorod, or Earthen town, much more extensive than either of the preceding, and surrounding them both in a circular form. 4. The Niobodes, or suburbs, which, to the number of nearly 30, surround the whole, and occupy a great extent of ground. The Kremlin stands on a height, and commands a pleasant prospect over almost the whole city. The Moskva flows past it, and is crossed by two bridges. Here is the ancient palace of the czars, which escaped the great conflagration of 1812, but was much damaged by mines sprung by the late French detachment, on their leaving Moscow. It is now, however, rebuilt, with improvements. Here also is the church of St. Michael, containing the tombs of the ancient czars, and the church of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary, in which the emperors are crowned. The Kremlin, though of limited extent, contains several other churches and monasteries, which strike the eye of the distant spectator by their gilded cupolas. The Kitagorod, or Chinese town, containing a number of bazars and shops. Though of small extent, like the Kremlin, the Kitagorod contains several notable buildings; among others, a strong brick edifice for the public archives, consisting of vaulted apartments, with iron floors. Here also is the university, founded in the middle of the 18th century. A considerable part of this quarter escaped the great conflagration. The Semliensgorod, like also the Earthen town, and contains, from its magnitude, a large proportion of the population of Moscow. The Niobodes, or suburbs, are mean, and look like so many detached villages, with the exception of one called the Nemetzka Skobol, or German suburb, which is extensive, and is inhabited by a number of foreign mechanics. In 1812, Moscow was burnt by order of the Russian government, to prevent the French army from occupying it as their winter quarters. The French entered it on the 14th. A fire broke out that night in a warehouse, near the centre of the city, but it was soon got under; and it was not till the 15th that fires burst forth in the shops. On the night of the 16th, however, a general conflagration took place; explosions in different places, and the throwing of fireballs from the tops of towers, clearly shewed that means were employed to spread it far and wide. The fire raged during the whole of the 17th and 18th, and was not got under till the 19th. In several quarters there remained so few traces of habitations, that it was difficult to recognise the outline of the streets. Nearly three-fourths of the city were consumed by the conflagration, the Kremlin and Bielo-gorod being almost the only quarters preserved. The rebuilding of the city was immediately commenced after the enemy withdrew; but for sometime it went on slowly. No sooner, however, was peace concluded, than the greatest exertions were made to this effect, both by the government and individuals; and by the beginning of 1818, a new city seemed to have risen from the ruins. The Kitagorod, or quarter for the exchange and mercantile warehouses; the more extensive quarter of the Semlian-gorod; and even the Slobodas or suburbs, were all rebuilt before, or in the course of that year; and the population of Moscow was carried to nearly its former magnitude. Before the conflagration, the number of houses, according to a register, was 6158; in 1819, the number rebuilt, added to those that had been preserved, was about 7000. The new city has wider streets, and greater uniformity in its private buildings; but in its churches and public edifices, the Asiatic taste is still preserved, though the style of architecture is more simple. The streets are paved partly with stone, partly, as in other Russian towns, with trunks of trees. The university has been rebuilt in a magnificent form, by aid from the public treasury. Of the new buildings, one of the most remarkable is a vast hall erected near the Kremlin, and more than twice the size of Westminster hall. It is intended for the parade of troops, when the weather does not admit of their exercising out of doors; and has a length of 600 feet, with a width of 100. Among other public buildings, Moscow contains a general post-office for the interior of Russia; also a boarding hospital, which was splendidly endowed by Catherine II., and which maintains and educates a great number of children. Here also are military hospitals, which of late have been put on a highly improved footing. The Kremlin was entirely repaired in 1817, and enlarged by a long lateral building, where the suite of the court are lodged; its ramparts are replaced by beautiful alleys. It is the great depot of the antiquities and curiosities of Moscow. Here is the highest spire in the city; called the tower of Ivan, which is still amply replenished with bells. This remarkable monument of the taste of a rude nation fell last century, in consequence of the tower being burned; and is now considerably sunk in the earth. It was rent by the fall, and is not likely to be raised again. Moscow is, and has long been, the seat of an archbishop; his palace is in the Kremlin, and contains the regalia of the empire, with the relics of the patriarchs of Russia; in particular, the splendid robes worn by them in ancient days; likewise a number of precious stones, mixed with others of more doubtful value. The French carried away the celebrated cross of St Ivan, which they abandoned after they had got beyond Wilna. The churches and chapels of this city, above 700 before the fire, are now less numerous: the most splendid is that of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary, in which the Russian sovereigns are crowned, and the remains of the Russian patriarchs deposited. Here is an immense chandelier of massy silver, weighing nearly 3000 lbs. The tombs of the czars are in the church of St Michael, which, like that of the Virgin, is situated in the Kremlin. Population of Moscow, in summer, 200,000; but in winter it is 300,000, partly by the resort of traders, more by the arrival from the country of families of rank, with a countless host of servants. Moscow has manufactures of cotton, silk, linen, paper, leather, and sugar. It is the grand entrepot for the interior of the empire. Furs and skins form here a very important branch of commerce, as well for domestic use, as for export to remote countries in Asia. The Moskva is navigable in spring for barks; in the rest of the year far less so. Moscow has a medical and an agricultural society, but few schools of eminence. Of the public libraries, the most remarkable is that of the synod: it is in the Kremlin, and contains some Greek manuscripts brought from the monasteries of Mount Athos. The climate is subject to great extremes, the thermometer frequently falling to 9 of Fahrenheit, and even 10 or 15 degrees below it; while in summer, it rises to 65, 80, and even 90 degrees. Moscow is not of great antiquity, having been founded in the middle of the 13th century, previous to which Kiev or Kiev was the residence of the sovereigns of Russia. It would be endless to notice the frequent fires that have occurred in Moscow, in consequence of the houses being built of wood. 537 miles in a direct line S. E. to Ratisbona, and 1649 E. by N. Vienna. Long. 37. 32. E. Lat. 55. 45. N. Moser, a tributary of the Trent, in England. Moselle, a department of France, including part of Lorraine, and bounded partly by the southern frontier of the Netherlands, and partly by the French departments of the Meurthe and the Moselle. It is watered by the Moselle, the Sarre, the Saale, the Nied, and the Orne. Area 2900 square miles. Population 340,000.

MOSSEL, a large river of Europe, which falls into the Rhine at Coblenz.

MOSNAU, a town of Germany, 50 miles S. Stuttgart. Population 1300.

MOSQUITOS, a cluster of small islands, near the coast of Honduras.—Also the name of various bays, points, and islands.

MOSQUITO SHORE, a tract of country which lies along part of the northern and eastern shore of Honduras, and has been claimed by the British. The English held this country for 30 years, and abandoned it in 1787 and 1788, though many English settlers still remain. Sir Gregor Macgregor is endeavouring to form a settlement here.

Moss, a town of Norway. Here is a large caisson foundry. Population 3000. 30 miles S. Christiania.

MOSSEBOEN, a town of Germany, in Westphalia. Population 2600.

Mosses, an inland town of European Turkey, in Rumania. It has celebrated manufacture of arms. Population 9000. 60 miles N. by W. Jassy.

MOSUL, a large town of Asiatic Turkey. In the palace of Bagdad, on the Tigris. Its principal ornaments are a college, the tomb of Sheikh Abdul Kader, and the remains of a beautiful mosque, the minaret of which has a fine appearance from a distance. The coffee-houses, bathes, khans, and bazars, are also handsome buildings. The city has a stone wall and seven gates; also a castle, all in a declining state. Population 35,000. Lat. 36. 21. N.

MORTONBY, a hamlet and parish of England, in Dorsetshire. Population 1184.

MORTRE-BREVAL, a town of France, department of the Dordogne. Pop. 2000.

MORTRE-BR-HAUTE, a town of France, department of the Deux-Sevres. Pop. 2000.

MORTIL, a seaport of Spain, on the Mediterranean, 4 miles E. Malaga. Pop. 4000.

MORTRE-CAVILLE, a town of France, department of the Upper Loire. Pop. 2000.

MOUTON, or MOUTON, a town of Switzerland. Pop. 2400. 15 miles N.N.E. Lausanne.

MOUTON, a river of England, in Devonshire, which falls into the Tamar.

MOULIN, a town of France, department of the Allier, on the Allier, over which is a bridge of 15 arches. The streets are tolerably broad, and well paved; but the houses are built of brick, and are far from elegant. The public edifices present nothing remarkable. Moulin contains public baths, a small theatre, a public library, and several promenades. It has manufactures of hardware. Population 14,000. 100 miles N.W. Lyons.

MOULN, EAST, a hamlet of England, in Surrey. Population 500.

MOUNT FELIX, a cape at the entrance of the Arabian gulf.

MOUNT PLEASANT, a post township of the United States, in Winchester county, New York. Pop. 3113.—2d, Of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 1730.—The name of several other townships.

MOUERS HAV, an extensive bay in the English channel, near Penzance, Cornwall.

MOUERS-SMITH, a market town of England, in Leicester. Population 1422.

MOUERS-VILLAGE, a post town of the United States, Boone county, Kentucky.—The name of several other townships in the United States.

MOUDA, an old town of Portugal, in Alentejo, near the Guadiana. It has a strong castle. Pop. 4000. 95 miles E.S.E. Lisbon.

MOUDA, a fortified town of Portugal, in Alentejo, near the Guadiana. Pop. 2200. 95 miles E. by S. Lisbon.

MOUKE, a river of Ireland, which runs into the Foyle, at Lifford.

MOUKE, a city of Africa, capital of the kingdom of Fozzan, one of the greatest seats of the inland commerce of this continent. The climate is intolerably hot. It presents to the eye a strange and grotesque medley of the vast ruins of ancient buildings, with the humble cottages of earth and sand which form the dwellings of its present Arab inhabitants. Long. 34. 30. E. Lat. 27. 28. N.

MOUKE, a tributary of the Clyde, in Inverclyde, Scotland.

MOTY, a town of France, department of the Oise. Population 3000.

MOTY, a town of France, department of the Ardennes, on the Meuse. Pop. 2200.

MOTY, one of the Sandwich islands, about 140 miles in circuit, containing upwards of 65,000 inhabitants. 34 miles N.N.W. Owhyhee. Long. 203. 40. E. Lat. 20. 48. N.

MOTY, a town of the east of Spain, in Valencia, with 3000 inhabitants.

MOTY, a river of Ireland, which runs into Killah bay, 3 miles E. Killah.

MOTY, a town of Spain, 42 miles E. Cadix. Population 2400.

MOTY, a river of Ireland, which runs into Lough Neagh.

MOTY, a town of Russian Lithuania, government of Mohilev, on the Vachra. Population 1000.

MOTY, a town of European Russia, government of Orel. Population 6000.

MOTY, a small island near the east coast of Ireland, in the North Channel; also two of the smaller Hebrides.

MUGA, a river of the United States, in Ontario county, which joins the Canadian river.—The name of various small rivers of the United States.

MUGA, a river, in the United States, Illinois: it joins the Mississippi.

MUGA, a seaport of Spain, in Galicia, 66 miles W.S.W. Ferrol. Population 2000.

MUGA, or MUGA, a town of Russia, 19 miles N.N.W. Omuta. Pop. 2500.

MUGA, a town of Naples, in Terra di Lavoro. Population 4000.

Mühl, Kraen, or Viertel, & a Circle or Quarter of the Mühl, one of the four divisions of Upper Austria, comprising all that part which lies between the Danube and Bohemia, and taking its name from the two rivers Upper and Lower Mühl. It contains, on 1670 square miles, 180,000 inhabitants.

Mühl, a river of Austria, which rises on the confines of Bohemia, and joins the Danube.

Mühlbach, of Szasz-Nenéz, a town of Transylvania, on the Mühlbach. Population 4000. 48 miles W. Hermannstadt.

Mühlhausen, a walled town of Prussian Saxony, government of Erfurt. It has four churches and four hospitals. It has breweries, distilleries, and several manufactures, particularly the weaving of cloth. Here are also dye-works and fulling mills. Population 9400. 43 miles E. S. E. Cassel.—The name of several other small towns.

Muir, a small river of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire, which falls into the Dee.

Muirkirk, a village and parish of Scotland, Ayrshire, 30 miles S. Glasgow. Pop. 2687.

Mujakar, a town of Spain, in Granada, near the Mediterranean. Population 2000.

Mulazzano, a town of Piedmont, province of Mondovì. Population 2230.

Mulda, two rivers of Saxony, the Freyberg Mulda, which joins the Schneeberg Mulda near Colditz, and the Schneeberg Mulda, which joins the Elbe.

Mulhausen, a town of France, department of the Upper Rhine, near the Ill. The public edifices are, the town-hall, the arsenal, the hospital, and the churches. It has manufactures of printed cottons; also woollen and linen. Pop. 9500. 23 miles N. W. Balc.

Mulheim, a town of the Prussian province of Cleves and Berg, on the Roer. Population 3100.

Mulheim, a town of the Prussian states. It has manufactures of woollen stuffs, velvet, silk, &c. Population 3200. 3 miles N. Cologne.

Mull, an island of the Hebrides, the third in size, of very irregular figure, and deeply indented by arms of the sea. Its extreme length is 35 miles, and its greatest breadth is 30. Superficial area, 420 square miles. The island is for the most part rugged and mountainous; and Benmore, the highest mountain, is supposed to be elevated 3000 feet above the level of the sea. Agriculture, of recent years, has been greatly improved. The land is more peculiarly adapted for grazing; and there is a very hardy race of black cattle, of small size. A considerable quantity of kelp is made. The principal village is Tobermory. Population 5000. Long. 6. W. Lat. 56. 30. N. Between this island and the mainland of Argyll and Inverness-shires, is the Sound of Mull.

Mulla, a river of Wales, in Montgomeryshire, which falls into the Severn.

Mullingan, the county town of West Meath, in Ireland. It is populous and well built. 30 miles W. N. W. Dublin.

Multnomah River, a large river of North America, which falls into the Columbia, about 180 miles from its mouth, in the Pacific ocean.

Munich, a town of Hanover. It has one Calvinist and two Lutheran churches, an hospital, and a school. Pop. 4800. 15 miles W. S. W. Göttingen.

Munroonagar, a large cotton manufacturing town of Bengal, district of Rungpore.

Munich, the capital of the kingdom of Bavaria, on the Isar. The streets are in general broad and straight, but not well paved; the houses are high, and of good appearance; the public edifices are numerous. It is divided into four quarters, by two broad streets, which cross in the principal square, a place of considerable elegance, being surrounded by arcades. Among the public buildings, the palace holds the first rank: it is a large edifice, plain on the outside, but in its interior magnificent. The old electoral palace, and the one inhabited by Prince Eugene Beauharnois, are fine buildings. There are also the meeting-house of the states, the council-house, the arsenal, and the new opera-house. Among the churches, the principal is that of Notre Dame, containing 30 altars; also the church of the Theatins, built on the model of the Vatican at Rome; the church belonging formerly to the Jesuits; and the churches of the Augustines, the knights of Malta and St Peter. The college, occupied by the Jesuits before their expulsion, was one of the richest establishments of that order in Europe, and its treasury contained, in addition to other property, a large collection of philosophical instruments. The other buildings that deserve notice are the palace of Duke Maximilian, the barracks, the large hospital, the work-house, the new mint, and the mansions of several Bavarian noblemen. There are various literary establishments and institutions. The national library has been greatly enriched of late years. The academy of sciences, erected in 1750, has an extensive collection of specimens of natural history, models, and instruments. The schools of Munich are numerous, and on a good footing. The court theatre is in the royal palace; it is a miniature of the Opéra at Paris, and its interior is richly decorated. The charitable institutions of Munich are numerous and liberal. The orphan-houses are four in number, the poor banks two. There are also two hospitals for the sick, another for the lame, object of the sick-hospital in London, a house of correction, and a lying-in hospital. The streets of this capital are very pleasant, being relieved by gardens and a variety of places of public resort. The Isar flows through the town, and has a neat bridge which leads on its right bank to a variety of romantic walks, and the extensive shrubbery and garden the Margravite of the river. The general drink is malt liquor. Munich is not a manufacturing town. In it, however, are manufactured articles of furniture, tapestry, gold, wine, iron-bridges, mathematical and surgical instruments, yards, pencils, muffs, &c.

Population 47,000. 220 miles W. Vienna. Long. 11. 55. 15. E. Lat. 48. 3. 19. N.

MUNKACS, a town in the north-east of Hungary, on the Latorca. Population 6000. 162 miles E. S. E. Craiova.

MY VLOCHY, a village of Scotland, in Ross-shire, on the Moray firth.

MUNSTER, a government of the Prussian states, containing the north-west portion of the province of Westphalia. Its area is 2620 square miles; its population 320,000. It is divided into ten circles or districts.

MUNSTER, the chief town of the above government, on the small river An. The houses are lofty, but irregular, with painted roofs. There are 11 churches; the most noted is the cathedral and the church of St Lambert. The bishop's palace is neat, but neither imposing nor splendid. The gardens attached to it are, however, extensive and beautiful. Munster had a university, which is now suppressed. It has manufactures of coarse linen. It was the head-quarters of the Anabaptists in 1536, and was taken by the bishop, when the leader, John of Leyden, with two of his chief accomplices, were made prisoners, tortured to death, and their bodies hung up in three iron cages, which are still to be seen, on the steeple of the church of St Lambert. Population 12,000. 60 miles N. N. E. Dusseldorf.

MUNSTER, a town of France, in Alsace, 6 miles W. Colmar. Population 2500.

MUNSTER, the south-west province of Ireland, comprising the counties of Clare, Kerry, Limerick, Cork, Tipperary, and Waterford.

MUNSTERHUSEN, a town of Prussian Silesia, on the Ohre. Population 2000.

MUSE, a town of France, department of the Cotes du Nord. Population 2100.

MUSEL, or MUSEL, a large river of the Austrian empire, which joins the Drave.

MUSACH, a town of Bavaria, circle of the Upper Danube. Population 2500.

MUSANO, a well built town of Austrian Italy, on an island in the Lagunes, a little to the east of Venice. It has a manufacture of Venetian glass, and mirrors. Pop. 4300.

MUSANO, a small town of Italy, on the Caselle, with manufactures of silk and woolen.

MUSAT, a town of France, department of the Cantal. Population 2000.

MUSAT, a town of France, department of the Tarn. Population 2100.

MUSCHKE, a town of Prussia, 20 miles N. W. Barona. Population 2000.

MUSCULA, a province in the south-east of Spain, included between Valencia and the E. Andalusia on the W. and the Mediterranean on the E. It is 50 miles long, and above 30 broad, with an area of 5000 square miles. Its aspect is in general mountainous. Its climate is very fine. The principal productions are wheat, barley, hemp, flax, vines, figs, olive berries, almonds; also citrus, pomegranates, and almonds. Several of the mountains contain good pasturage. Among the mineral products are reckoned lead, copper, sulphur, nitre, alum, crystal, and marble. The chief towns are Carthagena, Murcia, Lorca, Chinchilla, Albuera, Villena, and Almansa. Population 361,000.

MURCIA, the capital of the above province, on the Segura. It is divided into the Old and New towns, and on the south side of the river is a suburb. It is ill built throughout; the streets are irregular, crooked, ill paved, and narrow. Murcia has eleven parish churches, ten monasteries, nine convents, a tribunal of the inquisition, three colleges for the secular clergy, and three hospitals. The cathedral is a very large edifice, but in a bad taste. The churches of Santa Oalla and San Juan are on the same plan, but in a better taste; those of La Caridad and St Peter, and the Franciscan and Dominican convents, are all richly decorated. There are four public walks in Murcia; the aranal, which is merely a spot of ground gained from the river by an embankment; the botanical garden on the south of the river; the Alameda, or public walk properly so called; and the Malecon or quay, a large dyke thrown up to prevent the encroachments of the Segura. In summer the heat is excessive, the thermometer being often at or above 100. Murcia is first mentioned in history in the year 713, when it was taken by the Moors. Population 35,000. 100 miles S. S. W. Valencia. Long. 1. 5. 0. W. Lat. 37. 50. 43. N.

MURR, a town of France, 18 miles S. Grenoble. Population 2100.

MURR, a town of France, 9 miles S. Toulouse. Population 3200.

MURRAYSVILLE, a post town of North Carolina—2d, of Rutherford county, Tennessee. Population 1000.

MURR, a river of Germany, which falls into the Rhine near Mastadt; also a village. Population 1200.

MURRAY, a town of Russia, government of Vladimir. Population 4000.

MURRAY, a town of Spain, in Galicia, at the mouth of the Tamar. Population 2100.

MURTON, a small village of England, in Westmoreland, 3 miles N. E. Appleby.

MURVIEDRO, a walled town of Spain, in Valencia. Here are some brandy distilleries. It presents many vestiges of antiquity. The theatre and circus are in good preservation. Pop. 6200. 12 miles N. E. Valencia. The river Murviedro enters the sea below the town.

MUSKOGEE, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania. It joins the Susquehanna.

MUSKOGEE, a county of the United States, in Ohio, on the Muskingum. Population 12,000. Chief town Zanesville. 2d, A river of Ohio, which joins the Ohio.

MUSKOGEE, a town of Scotland, county of Edinburgh, at the mouth of the Esk. It consists chiefly of a well paved street, broad at the extremities, and narrower towards the middle. The suburbs are united to Musculburgh by three bridges over the Esk. Besides the parish church, there is an English Chapel, a church of Relief, a Burgher meeting, a Hahnite chapel, and an Anabaptist meeting. The manufacture of salt is carried on to a considerable extent; also the tanning of leather and the dressing of sheep's skins. There is also a pottery, and a thriving manufactory of starch. Here was an ancient building, belonging to the abbey of Dunfermline, called the chapel of Lothian. A small cell of it still remains, covered by a moat. Between the sea and the town lie the extensive downs called Musselburgh links, excellently adapted for the healthful exercise of the golf. A course has been lately made here for horse-racing, and the Musselburgh races were held for the first time in October 1816. Pop. 7800. 5 miles E. by S. Edinburgh.

MURRAY, a parish and village of Scotland, in Perthshire, 16 miles W. Perth. Population 2002.

MURFREY, three rivers of Wales, in Caermarthen, Merioneth, and Cardigan shires.

MUTZIG, a town of France, in Alsace, 12 miles W. Strasburg. Population 2400.

MUTZIGAC, a town of France, department of the Morbihan. Population 2000.

MUZTIANAN, a town of Afghanistan, the capital of a district bearing the same name. Long. 72. 22. E. Lat. 34. 3. N.

MUZZA, a tributary of the Adria, in Italy.

MUZZE, an ancient city of Greece, now in ruins. 22 miles S. Corintha.

MYCONI, an island of the Grecian archipelago, between Naxos and Tinos, 21 miles in circuit. Long. 26. 23. E. Lat. 37. 27. N.

MYNNA, a tributary of the Wye, in Monmouthshire, England.

MYSLUNICK, the most western, and one of the smallest circles of Austrian Poland, is bounded N. W., and N. by the territories of Prussia, Silesia, and Hungary, respectively. Area 1230 square miles; population 160,000.

MYSLUNICK, the chief place of the above circle, on the Raba. Population 3000.

MYNOR ISLE, in the Eastern seas, between Ceram and Papua, 50 miles long, and 15 broad.

MYSONG, a large province of the south of India, principally situated between the 11th and 15th degrees of northern latitude, and now surrounded by the British territories, subject to the presidency of Madras. This province consists of a high table-land, elevated 3000 feet above the level of the sea, from which rise a number of lofty hills, containing the sources of many rivers, the principal of which are the Cavery, Coomboola, Vedawati, Bhadrá, Penar, &c. The climate of this elevated region is temperate and healthy to a degree unknown in any other tract of similar extent within the tropics. Its soil produces not only all the grains and vegetables of other parts of India, but also many of the fruits of Europe. The cultivation is also much aided by means of reservoirs and wells, from whence the farmers irrigate their fields and gardens. The inhabitants are in general Hindus. It produces horses, cattle, sheep, and swine, but none of them of a good size. This country was ruled by Hyder Ali, and afterwards by his son Tippon, who was slain at the taking of Seringapatam, and his country occupied by the British, who set up an heir of the ancient Hindu family to rule in his stead.

MYSONG, capital of the above province, about nine miles from Seringapatam, on the top of a lofty hill. It was destroyed by Tippon, but has been since rebuilt by the British, and made the seat of government. It is now about a mile in length, and continues to increase yearly in size and population. Long. 76. 52. E. Lat. 12. 16. N.

MYSTIC, a river of the United States, in Massachusetts. It flows into Boston harbour.

MYSTIC, a port village of the United States, New London county, Connecticut.

MYTILENE, or METELIN, an island of the Mediterranean, near the southern coast of Asia Minor, about 36 miles in length, and 12 in breadth. It was the ancient Lesbos. Population about 40,000, of whom 20,000 are Greeks.

MYZKOW, a town of European Russia, government of Orsk. Population 3000.

N.

NAALDWYK, a village of the Netherlands. Pop. 1300. 14 miles W. N. W. Rotterdam.

NAARDES, a seaport on the Ruyder Meer. Population 1800. 14 miles N. Utrecht.

NAAR, a town of Ireland, county of Kilkare. The ruins of religious establishments still attest its former magnificence. It has a court-house and jail. 26 miles N. W. Wexlow.

NAH, or NAAR, a river of Bavaria. It falls into the Danube below Ratisbon.

NABEJOA, Rio, a river of Mexico, which falls into the Rio Colorado of California.

NABAL, a thriving and industrious town of Syria, 32 miles S. S. E. Tania.

NABITSCHUR, a town of European Russia, government of Ekaterinodar, on the Don. Population 3000.

NARON, a small river of England, which runs into the Willy, at Wilton.

NARZA, a small town of Switzerland, in the canton of Glaris, 4 miles N. Glaris.

NARON, a seaport of India, in Tanjore. Long. 78. 55. E. Lat. 10. 29. N.—24.

Another town in Bengal. Long. 87. 30. E. Lat. 23. 56. N.

NARROOK, a large town of Hindostan, and capital of the Mahratta territories, in the province of Gunderwah or Berar. It is a city of modern date, and although very extensive and populous, is nearly built, few of the houses consisting of more than one story, and covered with tiles. It is situated on a fine high plain, watered by a small river called the Nag, and is said now to contain 60,000 inhabitants. The rajah of Nagpore having entered into a war with the British, was defeated, and the government of his territories is now carried on by a regency, the principal member of which is the British resident. Long. 79. 45. E. Lat. 21. 8. N.

NAGY-BARNA, a town of Hungary. It has a mint, where all the gold, silver, and copper found in the district are coined. Population 4600. 21 miles E. by N. Békéscsaba.

NAGY-ÉNYEN, a town of Transylvania. Population 6000. 16 miles N. Csakaburg.

NAGY-KERESZT, a town of Hungary, county of Pest. The inhabitants cultivate the vine, and rear sheep. Pop. 12,000. 43 miles S. S. E. Pest.

NAGY-LEVAK, a town of Hungary. Pop. 3000. 33 miles N. E. Vénra.

NAGH EL KHAIR, a river of Syria. It falls into the Mediterranean, 20 miles N. E. Tripoli.

NAIDRA, a township of England, in Somersetshire. Population 1672.

NAIRN, a small county of Scotland, formerly included in the ancient province of Moray, with the exception of the detached portion of Forintosh, which is now completely surrounded by Ross-shire. It is bounded N. by the Moray frith; E. and S. by Moray-shire; and W. by Inverness-shire. The general appearance of the county is rather bleak, with the exception of a border along the coast, from one to six miles in breadth, and the valley of the river Nairn, which is extremely fertile and well cultivated. The river Findhorn likewise intersects the southern part of the county, as do several smaller streams. There is only one royal burgh, viz. Nairn, the county town; and two villages, viz. Auchtermuchty and Culter. It sends a member to parliament alternately with Cromarty. Population 3000.

NAIRN, the county town of Nairnshire, at the mouth of the river Nairn, where it falls into the Moray frith. It is a neat, small town, with a harbour. The inhabitants prosecute the white salmon, and herring fisheries. Pop. 3222. 164 miles E. by N. Inverness.

NAJAC, a town of France, near the river Aveyron. Population 2100.

NAJASAU, a walled town of Prussian Sillesia, on the Weikla. Population 2000.

NAKURU, one of the islands and southern provinces of the Netherlands, bounded partly by the French frontier, partly by the Celtic provinces of Hainault, Flanders, and Luxembourg. Its superficial extent is about 920 square miles; its population, 115,000. The surface is hilly, and by no means fertile. It is watered by the Meuse, the Scheldt, the Leve, and the Rhinno.

NAKURU, the capital of the foregoing province, at the conflux of the Scheldt into the Meuse. It is well built, with wide and clean streets. It is defended by a citadel, built on the summit of a craggy rock. The cathedral and the church of the Jesuits are both worthy of attention. The former is a fine specimen of modern, the latter of ancient architecture. Here are extensive manufactures of fire-arms, swords, knives, scissars, and other articles of iron, copper, and brass. Quantities of leather, paper, thread, and tobacco, are also fabricated here. Nampur has often changed masters, and is noted for the long siege which it sustained in 1692, against Louis XIV.; and again, in 1698, against William III. of England. In the beginning of the 18th century, Nampur was seized by the French, but in 1713, was ceded to Austria. In 1719, it was taken by the French, but restored to the Dutch in 1718. In 1792, it was taken by the French; in 1793, retaken by the Austrians; and, in 1794, again occupied by the French, who kept it till the general cession of the Netherlands in 1814. 30 miles N. W. Liege.

NANAK, a town of Hungary, 200 miles N. by W. Debrecza. Population 4000.

NANOCORAY, one of the Nicobar islands. Long. 102. 43. E. Lat. 7. 57. N.

NANCY, a city of France, capital of the department of La Meurthe, on the Moselle. It is divided into the Old and New towns; the latter is by far the larger, as well as more handsome of the two. The gates of Nancy are particularly fine, and are more like triumphal arches than the more entrance of a city. The royal square, built by Stanislaus, is surrounded by an iron railing, and by some of the finest buildings in the town. The streets of the Old town are narrow and crooked, but it contains two elegant squares. Besides the Old and New towns, Nancy has two well built suburbs. Of its public edifices, the chief are the elegant town-hall, the cathedral, a large modern edifice, the church of St. Sebastian, the church of Notre Dame, and the theatre, all situated in the New town; the palais de justice, the exchange, the arsenal, the barracks, and churches. Nancy has no manufactures of consequence, with the exception of linen and woollen. Pop. 30,000. 80 miles S. Metz.

NANCAIGANG, a large and commercial seaport of Japan, at the south-western extremity of the island of Kiu, and the only point of the empire at which Europeans are permitted to carry on any trade; which permission is now entirely confined to the Dutch, under the most rigorous restrictions. The gates are always locked at night by the Japanese. The Dutch town contains several large storerooms. Long. 130. 12. E. Lat. 32. 44. N.

NANES, a town of France, department of the Seine and Marne. Population 2000.

NANSENOT, a post town of the United States, and part of entry, in Charles county, Maryland, 43 miles from Washington.

NANUKA-JETANUS, islands in the Western Sea, on the coast of Alaska.

NANKING, a large city of China, not equalled perhaps by any in the world for the extent of ground which it covers; but since the seat of government was transferred to Peking, it has lost its importance. It is situated on the river Yang-tse-kiang. The space inclosed by the wall is divided into the inhabited and uninhabited parts. This city is still distinguished by its manufactures, above the rest of the empire. The staple one is silk, particularly that of plain and flowered-silks. It is also noted for the thin woollen stuffs which bear its name. It is a seat of Chinese learning. Its chief ornaments now are the gateways, which are very lofty and splendid, with temples attached to them; and the porcelain tower. Long 118 34 E. Lat 32 4 N.

NANSEMONT, county of the United States, in the S. E. part of Virginia. Pop. 10,324.
Slaves 4402.—2d. A river in Virginia.

NANTCHANG, a large city of China, capital of the province of Kiang-see. Long. 115. 30. E. Lat. 28. 30. N.

NANTES, a large commercial city in the west of France, the capital of the department of the Loire Inférieure, about 27 miles from the mouth of the Loire, which is here crossed by a magnificent stone bridge, or rather a succession of bridges, extending in nearly a straight line over five islands. Immediately below the town, the different branches unite into a single channel. The form of the city, exclusive of the suburbs, is an oblong, of which the length is parallel to the river. The buildings are in general old, and far from regular, though some are handsome. Of the four suburbs, the one called La Fosse is the finest, consisting of elegant houses, inhabited for the most part by merchants. The public edifices deserving of attention are, the cathedral, the town-hall, and the residence of the prefect; the castle, situated on the quay, at the eastern extremity of the town, and commanding the port, an edifice of great extent, and in a good state of repair. Here is also a theatre, and an elegant pillar, 70 feet in height. The university, founded in 1400, has been converted since the revolution into a lyceum. The principal manufactures, which are extensive, are for the spinning, weaving, and printing of cotton; also for making woollens and lins, of various qualities. Here are likewise manufactures of cordage, earthenware, glass, hardware, and quinquilles &c. Ship-building also is carried on to a considerable extent. The foreign trade of Nantes, though not great, extends to a number of different countries in Europe, as well as to America, the West Indies, and, in a small degree, to the coast of Guinea. From the West Indies the chief imports are sugar, for which there are 15 factories in the town. A number of ships are annually sent out to the Newfoundland fishery. Nantes is noted in history for the capture of the Arcturion, there in 1692, by Louis XIV. in favour of the Protestants, the result of which, in 1703, by Louis XIV., is finally considered a total error in that memorable reign. Pop. 70,000. Lang. 1. 32. 44. W. 47. 13. 6. N.

Narragansett, a river of the United States, in Rhode Island, which runs into Narragansett bay.

NANTUA. a town of France, 35 miles W. Geneva. Population 2800.

NANTUCKET, an island of the United States, in Massachusetts, 15 miles long, and 11 broad, 3 leagues S. Cape Cod.

NANTUCKET, a post township and port of entry on the above island, 123 miles S. S. E. Boston. "It is the only town on the island, and contains 3 churches, 2 for Friends, 2 for Congregationalists, and 1 for Methodists. Population 3897.

NANTUXES BAY, in the United States,
New Jersey, on the east side of Delaware.

NANTUXET CREEK, a river of the United States, which runs into Delaware bay.

NANTWICH, or NANTWIC, a market-town of England, county of Chester, on the Weaver. The town consists of several irregular streets. The church is an ancient building, in the form of a cross. Here are various almshouses; also a free school, and a large and commodious workhouse, which was erected in Boom Heath, in consequence of a grant from the earl of Chalmersley, to whom the town gives the title of baron. The chief business of Nantwich is now confined to the manufacture of salt, and the making of skins for export. The cotton manufacture has also extended to this place, and many people are employed in the making of gloves. The Chester canal terminates here with a handsome broad basin, forming a kind of harbour. In the beginning of the 18th century, large masses of rock salt were discovered here. This salt quarries, with their pillars and crystal roof, afford a very curious and singular appearance. Population 4681. 20 miles S. E. Chester.

NAPLES, a Kingdom in the south of Europe, comprising the southern part of Italy, and bounded N. W. by the States of the Church, N. E. by the Adriatic, and S. and W. by the Mediterranean. It extends from 15. 16. to 18. 50. of E. Long. and from 37. 46. to 42. 33. of N. Lat. The Kingdom of Naples is of an irregular shape; and in comparing the Italian peninsula to a boot, it forms the foot and lower part of the leg. Its length from north to south, viz. from the royal territory to the southern extremity of Calabria, is about 360 miles; its greatest breadth is 194. There is in the adjacent sea a number of small islands dependent upon the Kingdom of Naples. It is divided into the following provinces: Napoli or Naples, Terra di Lavoro, Principato Ultra, Principato Ultra, Abruzzo Ulteriore, Terra di Molise, Terra di Puglia, Terra di Basilicata, Terra di Calabria Ultra, Terra di Calabria Ultra, The Lucania, towns are Salerno, Capri, Amalfi, Tarentum, Brindisi, Bari, Canosa, Crotone, Loces, Reggio, Arispa, Matera, Cassel, Melfetto, Avellino, Aquila, Viterbo, Gallipoli, Arpinno, and Fondi. The subject of this Kingdom, like that of great parts of Italy, is mountainous, so that it contains also a number of beautiful plains and extensive valleys. The kingdom is traversed by the great chain of the Apennines, which separates into several lateral branches. The highest summits of the chain, are from 8000 to 8800 feet. Vesuvius is an insulated summit of this chain. The principal rivers in this kingdom are the Garigliano, the Volturno, the Basiento, the Pescara, the Sangro, and the Ofanto, the ancient Agrova. The chief lakes are those of Celano, Aquino, Averno, Isola, Fusaro, Patroli, Lesina, and Ponds. Marshes are found on various parts of the sea coast, and by their insubtrity, render some of the most fertile tracks almost uninhabitable. In regard to climate, the kingdom of Naples may be divided into three regions. In the Campagna Felix the air is almost invariably genial, and the sky serene. Beyond the Apennines, and opening to the east and south, the climate is hotter, and exhibits the productions of southern latitudes. The mountainous regions vary in climate according to their elevation.

The most common kinds of grain are wheat, Italian corn, barley, and in the colder situations rye. In many parts corn, vines, and olives, are cultivated by the same persons, and on the same farm. In general, the larger proportion of labour, if not of ground, is given to the grape. Rice is produced in the marshy tracks, cotton in the warm climate and light soil of the province of Stanto in the south-east, and tobacco in many of the southern districts. Flax and hemp are cultivated to a large extent; and in warmer situations olives, along with melons, almonds, dates, figs, lemons, pomegranates, and other fruits indicative of an approach to a tropical climate. Of almond trees there are forests in several parts, especially on the east coast. Olive oil forms a great object of export. Apulia, Calabria, and the mountainous parts of other provinces, contain very extensive forests. In some tracks there is good pasturage, and cows, oxen, and sheep, are reared in quantities, while large droves of buffaloes range along the marshy tracks on the north-west coast. The forests in different parts of the kingdom contain great quantities of swine: sheep are also reared in many situations both of hill and plain. Of wild animals, the higher part of the Apennines contains a considerable number; among others, the lynx or tiger cat, a fierce and subtle animal; also the crested porcupine, said to be peculiar to the south of Italy: snakes and other reptiles are common in the hot districts. The danger in travelling, however, arises not from these animals, but from banditti, with which the country is infested. Among the minerals of the country are salt, alum, vitriol, sulphur, crystal, and marble. Manufactures in this country are still in their infancy. Muslins and other cotton stuffs are made of cotton produced on the spot. The capital is the seat of a great manufacture of porcelain; also of fire-arms. The latter fabrics of the kingdom, such as the cotton coverlets of Nardo and Galatoni, the pottery of Teramo in Abruzzo Ultra, the embroidery, and confectionery of the capital, are all insignificant, compared to the extent to which they might be carried. The inhabitants of the kingdom of Naples are almost all Catholics.

NAPLES, a very large city of Italy, the capital of the kingdom of Naples, situated on a bay of the Mediterranean. The situation of Naples is one of the most delightful that can be imagined. Seated partly on the declivity of a hill, partly on the margin of a spacious bay, it spreads its population along the shore, and covers the shelving coasts and adjacent eminences with its villas and gardens. Its suburbs stretch in a magnificent sweep, from Portici on the east, to the promontory of Misenum on the west. The bay is extensive, and presents an almost unrivalled assemblage of picturesque and beautiful scenery. The clearness of the atmosphere, and the mildness of the climate, give additional lustre to the scene. The form of the city approaches to an oblong, extending from north to south, and having the bay on the south side. Its circumference is commonly computed at 10 miles; but including all the suburbs, it is upwards of 18. The streets of Naples, though in general narrow, are straight, and tolerably regular: they are handsomely paved with large flags of lava; and since the French occupied the city, and introduced improvements, most of them have been lighted with lamps, suspended, as in Paris, across the middle of the street. They are in general tolerably clean, the filth being carried off by large subterranean sewers; but many of them are dark and gloomy, from their narrowness, and the height of the buildings. The Strada di Toledo, extending half the length of the city, and having at the one end the Piazza di Mercato, on the other the royal palace, is the finest street in Naples, and one of the best in Europe. The street of Monte Oliveto, and that which reaches from the gate of Capua to St Elmo, extend diagonally to the Strada di Toledo, and are likewise broad and handsome. The number of squares in Naples is considerable. Several are spacious, but few handsome. The principal are those called Largo de Castello, Largo de Palazzo, and Piazza di Mercato. Several of them are decorated with obelisks and fountains. The buildings of Naples are more remarkable for their size than for taste or elegance. The houses are in general six or seven stories high, flat roofed, and covered with a kind of stucco. Most of them have balconies in front, and the roofs are frequently covered with flowers, shrubs, and small trees, planted in boxes filled with earth. The quays, or buildings along the water side, extend, in the form of a crescent, along the bay, for the space of nearly five miles. The royal garden in this suburb is a favourite promenade of the fashionable inhabitants. The harbour, properly so called, is small, and is entirely artificial, being formed by a large mole projecting into the sea, and including a basin neely square, which is little more than a quarter of a mile across. At its entrance is a light-house. The fortifications of Naples are not adapted to resist an army, though the city is surrounded with a wall, and defended by a number of towers, as well as by three large castles. The arsenal occupies the area, and is defended by bastions. Of the public edifices of Naples, the churches are the most conspicuous; but their splendour consists less in elegance of architecture, than in the richness of their paintings, marbles, and other decorations. The cathedral, built on or near the midst of the site of a temple of Apollo, is a handsome Gothic edifice, but is overcharged with ornaments in a disorderly style. It is supported by more than 160 columns of granite. The Sant' Apostoli, erected on the ruins of a temple of Mercury, is perhaps the most ancient church in Naples. The church of St. Paul is said to occupy the site of a temple of Castor and Pollux: its interior is spacious, well proportioned, and finely enriched with marble. The church of St. Filippo Neri is remarkable for the number of its columns that support its triple row of nave, on both sides of the choir. The Spirito Santo is of a more pure and simple architecture than the other churches of Naples. The palace and the mansions of the nobility, like the churches, have little pretensions to purity of architecture, and are in general too much loaded with ornaments. The royal palace, near the quay, at the southern extremity of the Strada di Toledo, has an air of grandeur. The palace of Cayo di Monti is situated outside of the town. It is still unfinished, and its best apartments are appropriated to a collection of paintings. The old palace of the sovereigns of Naples is now occupied by the courts of justice. The theatre of Naples, great and small, are seven in number: that of San Carlo, contiguous to the royal palace, is one of the finest in Italy. There are several literary establishments in Naples. The university was founded in 1224; its pile of building is on a large scale, and when completed, will be very elegant. Its interior contains a collection of pictures belonging formerly to the Palazzo Farnese at Rome. It has a library of 50,000 volumes, besides ancient MSS. a museum of paintings, sculpture, minerals, &c. In addition to its university, Naples has a number of schools. Its royal military school, its art of college, its college for the instruction of young Chinese and Japanese, its school for music and the arts, its school of medicine, and its school of agriculture, are all of considerable note. Its institutions of education are the royal academy of arts and sciences, and the society of agriculture, manufactures, and arts. The charitable establishments of this city are numerous and well endowed. The total number is above 60; of these, seven are hospitals; above 30 are schools for poor children of both sexes. The exports of Naples are confined to the products of the adjacent country, such as silk, wool, cotton, oil, wine, corn, and fruit. The imports of Naples consist both of articles of necessity and luxury, of colonial produce, and of manufactures, which it receives from France, Britain, Holland, Switzerland, and Germany. Naples has extensive manufactures of silk fabrics, and, on a small scale, stockings, gloves, lawn, lace, cotton stuffs, and paper. Those of Germany, china, and glass, are of some importance; but those of soap, leather, and wax, are of little account. A good deal of ingenuity is displayed in making violins and other musical instruments; also in making furniture and carriages, and even in the petty manufacture of snuff-boxes, snuff-tubs, and tobacco-shell. The population of Naples amounts to 330,000. The higher ranks are frequently ignorant, frivolous, and dissipated, while in the lower order, the most striking characteristics are indolence and superstitiousness. The Lazzeroni are a part of the population without either dwellings or regular occupation, who spend their lives in the streets, lying in the shade, or sunbathing about during the day, and sleeping at night under a public portico, on the pavement, or on the steps of a church. Their number is said to have been formerly between 30,000 and 40,000. Their number is still considerable, and there is perhaps no city in Europe where so small a proportion of the inhabitants contribute to the wealth of the community by productive labour. Naples literally swarms with nobility without fortunes, priests without benefices, and beggars of all descriptions. The charge of want of cleanliness is unfortunately nearly as applicable here as at Rome, the rooms being infested with fleas and other vermin. The environs of Naples are fertile, picturesque, and highly interesting to the antiquary and classical scholar. The origin of Naples is lost in the fables of antiquity. It has suffered at different periods from war, earthquakes, and the eruptions of Vesuvius. It was occupied in 1793 by the French. It was evacuated in June following, and again occupied in 1806. Joseph Bonaparte was soon after proclaimed king; and in 1808, on his removal to Spain, the crown was conferred on Murat. In 1815, King Ferdinand, after an absence of nine years, made his entrance into his capital. Pop. 5,000,000. 120 miles S. E. Rome, 1804. S. E. Paris, 1 day. 24. 25. 26. E. Lat. 40. 41. 42. N.

 NAPLES, or NARBONNE, a considerable city of Palestine, the ancient Soter, capital of the Samaritans. The chief objects here venerated and visited, are the tombs of Joseph and of Joshua, which seem to be fixed at Soter by the unquestionable statements of sacred writ. They are bury in the solid rock. Still greater reverence is attached by the inhabitants to the spot called Jacob's Well, about three miles on the road to Jerusalem. 23 miles N. Jerusalem. Long. 35. 32. E. Lat. 32. 19. N.

NARO, a large river of Quito, which, rolling down from the mountainous districts of Cotacachi, joins the Amazon in Lat. 3. 20. S.

NAPOLEON'S LAND, a track of the south coast of New Holland, discovered by Captain Baudin in 1802, extending 50 leagues. Long. from 138. 58. to 140. 10. E. Lat. from 35. 40. to 37. 36. S.

NAPOLEI DI MALVANIA, MONTENEGRO, OF MANGESCHKE, a town of European Turkey, in the Morea, on the small island of Africa. Population 6000. 55 miles S. E. Napoli di Romania.

NAPOLEI DI ROMANIA, a town of European Turkey, in the Morea, on a rocky promontory, forming an excellent harbour. Population 6000. 10 miles S. S. E. Argos. 29 N. E. Tripolizza.

NARAINGUNGE, a considerable trading town in Bengal, district of Dacca, on a branch of the river Brahmaputra. The inhabitants of this place amount to 15,000, who in general carry on an extensive traffic in grain, salt, tobacco, and lime. A considerable quantity of blue mudin is also made here. Long. 89. 35. E. Lat. 23. 37. N.

NARAYNGUR, a town of Bengal, district of Midnapore. Long. 87. 35. E. Lat. 22. 11. N.

NARBERTH, a market town of South Wales, in Penbroke. It possesses some remains of an ancient castle. Population 2295.

NARBONNE, an ancient town of France, department of the Aude, situated in a hollow between mountains, on two canals. The cathedral is admired for the elegance of its architecture, and the boldness of its vaults. The palace of the archbishop is an ancient building, and has the appearance of a fortress. Narbonne was once strongly fortified; but at present a wall flanked with bastions is its only defence. It has some trade in corn, and an extensive traffic in honey and wax. Its manufactures consist of stockings and leather. Pop. 9000. 37 miles N. E. Perpignan.

NARDO, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Otranto, 30 miles W. Otranto. Pop. 3500.

NARENDA, a considerable river of Dalmatia, which runs into the Adriatic.

NAREW, a considerable river in the north-east of Poland, which joins the Bug.

NARNI, a town of Italy, in the States of the Church, 40 miles N. Rome. It has some good buildings; but its streets are steep and winding. Population 5000.

NARAO, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Mazara, on a river of the same name. It stands in a fine country. Population 12,000. 11 miles E. Girgenti.

NAROVA, a river of Russia, which falls into the gulf of Finland, near Narva.

NAROTTCHAT, a small town of European Russia, 70 miles N. W. Penza. Pop. 3700.

NARADAKNET BAY, a bay of the Atlantic ocean, on the coast of the United States, which intersects the state of Rhode Island. It is about 25 miles long and 10 broad.

NARRAGANSETT, a post township of the United States, Washington county, Maine, on the Narraganset, 37 miles W. Machias.

NARROWA, THE, a channel of the United States, between Long island and Staten island, connecting New York bay with the Atlantic, 9 miles S. New York.

NARSINGHUR, a flourishing town of Bengal, district of Midnapore. Long. 89. 40. E. Lat. 22. 34. N.

NARVA, a town of European Russia, in the government of St Petersburg, on the Narva. Its houses are built of brick, and stuccoed white. In the suburb called Ivan-gorod, are the remains of an extensive fortress built by the czar Ivan Vassilievitch. It has a brisk traffic in corn, timber, and flax, which it exports, and in salt. Near this town, in 1700, Charles XII. of Sweden defeated Peter the Great. Narva was retaken by the czar, five years after. Population 2500. 63 miles W. S. W. St Petersburg.

NARWAN, the capital of a district in Hindostan, on the Sindu river. Long. 78. 12. E. Lat. 25. 41. N.

NARVAS RAO, a river of Mexico, in Durango, which falls into Lake Cerrach.

NATHURAY, a town of France, department of the Lozere. Population 1600.

NATZBY, a village and parish of England, in Northamptonshire. Here, in 1644, Charles I. was totally defeated by Oliver Cromwell. Population 637.

NATH, a county of the United States, in North Carolina. Population 7268, including 2827 slaves.

NATHAUN, one of the Elizabeth islands, Massachusetts, east of Buzzard's bay.

NATHUA, a river of the United States, in Worcester county. It joins the Merrimack.

NATZVILLE, a post township of the United States, and capital of Davidson county, Tennessee, on the south side of Cumberland river, 275 miles S. W. Lexington, 620 S. W. Pittsburg, 200 W. Knoxville, 500 N. W. Charleston, 430 N. N. E. Natchez, and 400 by Gen. Jackson's road S. N. E. New Orleans. Long. 87. 47. Lat. 36. 4. N. It is situated in the midst of a very fertile and populous country, and is the largest and most flourishing town in the state. In 1810, more than one-third of the population of Tennessee was included within a circle of 30 miles around Natchville. The steam-boats ply between this place and New Orleans. The Cumberland is navigable for vessels of 30 or 40 tons during the greater part of the year, and in the highest floods, for vessels of 400 tons. In 1812, the town contained a court-house, jail, market-house, 2 banks, 2 printing-offices, several manufactories, and upwards of 3000 inhabitants.

NASSAU was formerly the name of several principalities in the German empire, all of which are now united under one head, and form an independent duchy in the Germanic confederation. Its boundaries are the Prussian territory on the Lower Rhine, and the different states of the princes of Hesse. It lies in the west of Germany, between 49. 58. and 50. 40. of N. Lat. and has an area of 2100 square miles. The population in 1813 was 305,000. It is divided into the three districts or governments of Wisbaden, Weilburg, and Dillenburg; and these are subdivided into bailiwicks. The residence of the duke is at the small town of Idstein. The surface of the duchy of Nassau is hilly throughout, and in some places the elevations are considerable. The rivers are the Rhine to the west, the Main to the south, and the Lahn in the interior. In this duchy are found some of the principal watering places in Germany, namely, Fries, Schlungenbad, Wiesbaden, Lower Selters, Upper Lahnstein, and other places. The culture of the vine and the rearing of cattle form the chief employments in this duchy. The Nassau family, after long being counts, were made princes of the empire in 1686 and 1737. In 1806 they were declared dukes, which in Germany is a distinct, and in general a higher title.

NASSAU, a town of Germany, duchy of Nassau, on the Lahn. Population 1500.

NASSAU, or POGGY ISLANDS, a chain of islands which lie off the whole length of the west coast of Sumatra, at the distance of 20 or 30 leagues. The north extremity of the most northern island, which is called the Northern Poggy, is situated in Lat. 2. 18. S., and the south extremity of the most southern island in Lat. 3. 16. N. They are separated from each other by a narrow strait. On the southern island are 5 villages, and on the northern 7. The population does not exceed 1400, the interior being uninhabited.

NASSAU, a river of East Florida, which runs into the sea, Lat. 30. 44. N.

NASSAU, the capital of the island of New Providence, one of the Bahamas. It was taken by the Spaniards in 1782, but restored to the English in 1783.

NASSAU, a post township of the United States, in Rensselaer county, New York, 16 miles S. E. Albany. Population 2510.

NATACHIVOIX, a river of Labrador, which runs into the sea, Lat. 50. 23. N.

NATAU, or NATAH, a Malay settlement on the south-west coast of Sumatra. Long. 90. 57. E. Lat. 32. N.

NATAL, a river of Eastern Africa, with a town at its mouth, situated in the country of the Tamboules, to the north of Caffraria. Long. 31; 30. E. Lat. 20. 56. N.

NATCHES, a city and port of entry of the United States, in Adams county, Mississippi, on the east bank of the Mississippi. The greater part of the town stands upwards of 160 feet above the surface of the river. The city is regularly laid out on very uneven ground, the streets intersecting each other at right angles. It contains a court-house, a jail, a market-house, a bank, an academy, two printing offices, from each of which is issued a weekly newspaper, and two churches, one for Roman Catholics, and one for Presbyterians. The town is well situated for a commercial depot. Population, in 1810, 1511; in 1816, 3000. 323 miles above New Orleans, by the course of the river.

NATCHITOCHES, a town of the United States, and capital of Natchitoches county, Louisiana, on Red river, about 200 miles above its junction with the Mississippi. It is now a flourishing town, with 100 to 150 houses. 200 miles in a right line N. W. New Orleans. Long. 93. 10. W. Lat. 31. 46. N.

NATZEN, a village of the Swiss canton of the Valais, 32 miles E. by N. Sion.

NATOLIA, or ASATOLIA, a division of Asia Minor, comprehending most of its western districts. Smyrna, Angora, and Kiutayah, are the principal cities.

NATTORE, a town of Bengal, district of Banjesahly, on the Attri river. Long. 88. 55. E. Lat. 24. 25. N.

NATUNAS ISLE, North, a cluster of very small islands in the China seas. Long. 109. E. Lat. 4. 45. N.

NAVAS, a town of Ireland, county of Meath, on the Boyne. It consists of two streets which intersect each other at right angles; and is a place of considerable trade. 23 miles N. W. Dublin.

NAVARIN, a town of European Turkey, on the Morea. Population 3000, of whom only 300 are Turks. The houses are tolerably well built; but the streets are narrow and dirty. It has a good trade, and a large and capacious port. The fortifications of Navarin consist of four bastions and a citadel. 88 miles S. W. Corinth. Long. 21. 25. E. Lat. 37. 5. N.

NAVARRA, a province of the N. E. of Spain, bounded N. E. by France, and S. W. by Old Castle. Its area is 2474 square miles; its population about 230,000. The chief town is Pampeluna. The western part of the Pyrenees divides this province from France. These mountains are in general very steep. The small streams are numerous; but the only great river is the Ebro. Game, cattle, and sheep, are numerous; while the quantity of corn, which is cultivated only in the vallies, is barely adequate to the support of the population. The wine of Navarre is in general of good quality. The other productions are hemp, flax, fruit, pulse, and a little oil. Iron abounds; and there are large mines at Vedrin and Luyarchuela. At Pampeluna is a copper mine. In the neighbourhood of Valtierra is a mine of rock salt, between strata of gypsum. In manufacture Navarre has made very little progress. It has a foundry of cast-iron bombs and cannon balls.

NAVARENSIS, a fortified town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Population 1300.

NAVEX, a town of Prussia, 22 miles N. W. Berlin. Population 2700.

NAVES, a river of Scotland, in Sutherlandshire, which falls into the ocean at the bay of Torridale.

NAVES, a town of France, department of the Corrèze. Population 2000.

NAVOATUCK, a river of the United States, in Connecticut, which joins the Housatonic.

NAVIA, a river of the north of Spain, which falls into the bay of Biscay. The small town of NIVIA is at its mouth.

NAVIGATOR'S ISLANDS, a cluster of lofty islands in the South Pacific ocean.

NAUMBURG, a town of Prussian Saxony, government of Merseburg, on the Saale. It is divided into three parts, the Town proper, the Liberties, and the Suburb. The Town is surrounded with walls, and contains a royal mansion, a public school, a neat council-house, a very large church, an orphan-house, and an hospital. The part called the Liberties contains the cathedral, a fine Gothic building, erected as long ago as 1027, the chapter school, the residences of the canons, and a number of private houses. The Suburb contains several hospitals and an infirmary. It has manufactures of stockings, gloves, cups, also of soap, starch, and gunpowder; leather is also tanned. Population 12,000. 28 miles W. S. W. Leipzig.

NAUMBURG, a town of Germany, in Hesse-Cassel. Population 1800.—The name also of several other small towns in Germany.

NAXOS, a town of Spain, province of Burgos, near the Ebro. Population 3000.

NAXIA, an island of European Turkey, in the Grecian archipelago, E. of Myconae. The chief town is of the same name. Pop. 18,000.

NAY, a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Population 2400.

NAZARET, a town of France, 35 miles W. Nantes. Population 3000.

NAZARETH, a town of the Netherlands, near the Scheldt. Population 4300.

NAZARETH, a town, or rather village, of Palestine, in a valley of the same name, celebrated as the residence of our Saviour and his family, during the first 30 years of his life. Many holy relics are here shown to include the supernatural, 80 miles N. Jerusalem.

NAZARETH, a town of the United States, in Northampton county, Pennsylvania.

NAZE, a noted promontory on the coast of England, south of Harwich.

NEATH, an irregularly built market and borough town of South Wales, county of Glamorgan, on the Neath, and, from the mineral riches of the neighbourhood, a place of considerable trade. The principal public building is the town hall. The church is large and handsome. Its trade consists in the exportation of coal. In the neighbourhood of Neath are some fine quarries, extensive iron works, and small water-mills. There are still considerable remains of a castle. It joins with several other towns in sending a member to parliament. Population 2822. 8 miles N. E. Cardiff.

NECKAR, a large river of Germany, in Germany. It joins the Rhine at Mannheim.

NECKAR, one of the 12 circles into which the grand duchy of Baden has been divided since 1816. Population 171,300.

NECKAR, Lower, Middle, Upper, three of the 12 departments of the kingdom of Wirtemberg. Population of Lower Neckar 114,000; of Upper Neckar 193,000.

NECKAR-GEWISS, a town of Germany, on the Neckar. Population 1900.

NECKAR-VALLEY, a town of Germany, 6 miles N. Heilbronn. Population 2050.

NECKER ISLANDS, nine small islands in the North Pacific ocean. Lat. 42° 00' N.

NEKERHALL, a town of East London, 22 miles S. Uthman. Population 3500.

NEKERHARTEN, a town of the Netherlands, 14 miles S. E. Rotterdam. Pop. 3500.

NEKERHART, a town of the Netherlands, 12 miles N. W. Rotterdam. Pop. 3000.

NEKHARATOW, a town of European Russia, government of Charkow. Pop. 2000.

NEKHEB, an extensive division of Arabia, including nearly all the central parts of that region, bounded W. by Hejaz and Yemen, S. by Hadramout, and E. by Tabak and Oman. It consists of mountains and deserts.

NEKHEB, a village of Gelderland, 20 miles E. Zutphen. Population 2000.

NEKHEB, a market town of England, in Suffolk, on the Orwell. Pop. 1400.

NEKHEB, a cluster of pointed rocks on the coast of England, Isle of Wight.

NEKHEBOW, a town of Hindostan, province of Oude. Long. 70° 53' E. Lat. 25° 47' N.

NEKHEBOW, a village of the Netherlands, in South Brabant. Population 300.

NEKHEB, or NEKHEB, one of the Caribbean islands in the West India.

NEKHEB, a considerable seaport of India, district of Tanjore. It is well fortified. It lies to the north of its citadel, near which is the mouth of a small river. To the northward of the town stands a large pagoda, or Hindoo temple. Its trade has declined since it was taken by the British in 1781. Long. 20° 55' E. Lat. 10° 43' N.

NEKHEB, a populous town on the west coast of the island of Ceylon.

NEKHEB, a small island, with an excellent harbour, at the mouth of the Irrawaddy river, in the Burmese empire. Long. of Cape Negrais, 94° 14' E. Lat. 10° 1' N.

NEKHEB, a town of Southern Italy, 6 miles S. Vercelli. Population 1700.

NEKHEB, a town of France, on the Aveyron. Population 3200.

NEKHEB, the west head of the island of Jamaica. Long. 78° 17' W. Lat. 18° 27' N.

NEKHEB, a town of Jamaica, two miles S. of the N. coast of Jamaica.

NEKHEB, a river of South America, which falls into the Amazon, in Lat. 3° 15' S. It is by this river that the Orinoco and the Amazon communicate. The name of this river is also given to settlements of South America.

NEKHEB, a town of Africa, an appellation by which many different geographical designations are given to the interior and south-west parts of Africa, inhabited by the negroes.

NEKHEBOW, or NEKHEBOW, the ancient name of a long and narrow island of Greece, extending along the east coast of Iavada, from which it is separated by a narrow channel, called the strait of Euripus. It is mounturnon, but they also and plants produce corn, wine, fruit, and oil. Pop. 60,000. Long. 23. 10. to 24. 41. E. Lat. 38 to 39. 10. N.

NICOPOLIS, the ancient Notia, the capital of the foregoing island, on the west coast, and connected with the continent by a bridge, the strait at this place being only 200 feet wide. It has a capacious port. Population 16,000. 23 miles N. Athens.

NICOS, one of the Philippine islands, in the Eastern seas, south of Luconia. It is about 140 miles long by 25 in average breadth. Long. 122. 30. E. Lat. 10. 10. N.

NICUADA, called also NIGADE and NICADU, a considerable town of Upper Egypt. It is a manufacture of blue cotton cloth.

NIMA, a river of St Domingo, which enters the sea in the bay so called.

NIMBURG, a town of East Prussia, 50 miles S. Königsberg. Population 1800.

NINJA, one of the Banda islands, separated from Gonong Appy, by a narrow strait.

NINSE, a neat town of Prussian Silesia, on the Rhine, and chief place of a principality of the same name. It contains a splendid mansion belonging to the bishop, a collegiate church, four other churches, with a monastery, convent, &c. It has manufactures of woollen, linen, ribbons, and stockings, and a busy traffic in yarn. Population 8000. 46 miles S. by E. Breslau.

NIRSE, a river of Germany, which falls into the Oder.

NIRNBERG, a village of England, in Oxfordshire. Population 1851.

NIVA, a river of Portugal, in Entre Duero e Minho, which falls into the sea.

NIVA, a town of New Granada, in South America, 130 miles N. E. Popayam, containing 2000 housekeepers.—The name of a river which enters the Magdalena.

NIVIA, a town of Piedmont, province of Alba. Population 2400.

NILGON, a town of India, in the Carnatic. Long. 79. 54. E. Lat. 14. 20. N.

NELSON, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Pop. 1684, including 4872 slaves.—2d, in Kentucky. Pop. 14,078, including 3110 slaves.—The name of several townships.

NELSON'S FERRY, a post village of South Carolina, 60 miles N. Charleston.

NELSON'S RIVER, the north-west branch of Hayes river, on the west shore of Hudson's bay.

NEMEA, once a well known town of Greece, in the Morea, near which the Neamean games were celebrated. It is now a miserable village, consisting of a few cottages.

NEMUSA, a town of Abruzzum Italy, province of Teramo. Population 2400.

NEMI, a large village of Italy, 14 miles S. S. E. Rome.

NEMOURS, a town of France, department of the Seine and Mayne, on the Loire. It trades in corn, wine, and cheese; also in leather. Pop. 3800. 11 miles S. Fontainebleau.

NEN, a river of England, in Northamptonshire, which falls into the Ouse.

NIENACH, a considerable town of Ireland, in Tipperary. 13 miles N. F. Limeick.

NIGRAD, or NOIGRAD-VAHMEGYI, a county in the north-west of Hungary. Area 1647 square miles. Population 161,000.

NIGRA, St., a market town of England, county of Huntingdon. Population 2272.

NIGRA, St., a village and parish of England, in Cornwall. Population 1255.

NIPOUL, a long but narrow kingdom of Northern Hindostan, bounded N. by the great range of Himalaya mountains, S. by the provinces of Bahar, Oude, and Delhi, E. it is limited by Bootan, and the territory of the rajah of Si Kim; and previous to the late war with the British, their conquests extended to the banks of the Sutledge, the eastern river of the Punjab. The kingdom was then divided into the following provinces, viz. Geroah, Kyrat, Morung, Muckwany, Mockwampore, Lamjung, 24 Rajahs, Kamaon, and Almora. The valley of Nepal proper, from whence the kingdom takes its name, is nearly of an oval figure; its greatest length from north to south being 12 miles, by 9 in the greatest breadth. On the north and south it is bounded by lofty mountains, but is more open to the east and west. This small tract is very populous; and, besides the capital Catmandoo, is filled with villages. This valley, although situated between the 27th and 28th degrees of N. lat. is so elevated, that it enjoys an European climate, and the mountains, covered with snow, are in sight the whole year round. The soil is productive, and in some places yields two crops in the year. The mountains of Nepal contain mines of copper and iron; and although commerce is not encouraged, it sends to Bengal ivory, wax, honey, resin, timber, bastard cinnamon, cardamoms, walnuts, &c., and takes in return, muslins and silks of Bengal, carpets, spices, tobacco, and European goods. In 1814, the Nepalese were engaged in a war with the British, who, though they were repulsed at first, again invaded their territories, and dictated to them a treaty of peace in 1816.

NIPEA, a small island in the South Pacific Ocean, about a quarter of a mile distant from Niuek island.

NIPERA, a small fortified town of Italy, 23 miles N. N. W. Rome. Population 1966.

NIPERADU, a lake of Upper Canada, connected with Lake Huron, 13 leagues in length, and about 13 miles wide.

NIPERUSA, a river of the United States, in Massachusetts, which flows into Boston harbour.—Also a handsome village situated on both sides of the above river. Pop. 500.

NIRNA, a considerable river of Italy, in the Ecclesiastical States, which joins the Tiber.

NIRAC, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne, on the Rhone. It has manufactures of cotton stuffs, caps, and leather; also of starch. Population 5600. 70 miles S. E. Bourdeaux.

NIRABUDAN, a celebrated river of Hun-doctari, which has its source in the district of Omereuping, in the province of Gundwanch; and after passing through the provinces of Khandesh, Malwah, and Ojiserat, it falls into the gulf of Cambay. The length of its course is 750 miles.

Nearby, the chief town of the island of Brazil, on the coast of Austrian Palmaria.

Nearby, a town of Naples, 35 miles N. N. E. Aquila. Population 1800.

Nearby, a province of the central part of Sweden, surrounded by Westmanland, Warmeland, East and West Gothland, and Sudermannland. Area 1800 square miles. Population 55,000.

Nearby, a town of India, district of Coimbatore, on theavery river.

Nearby, a town of France, department of the Allier, with mineral springs. Pop. 1900.

Nearby, a town of Asiatic Russia, government of Irkoutsk, on the Chinese frontier. Since the caravans destined for the trade with China have ceased to pass through this town, its importance is much decayed. It still carries on a small fur trade. It contains two churches, and about 2000 inhabitants. Long. 116. 44. E. Lat. 51. 50. N.

Nearby, a town of European Russia, government of Czernigov, on the Oder. It contains 19 nest churches. Pop. 16,000, of whom a number are merchants and petty dealers, of Greek extraction. It is a great emporium of trade. 49 miles S. E. Czernigov.

Nearby, a river of the United States, which joins the Susquehanna. Lat. 41. 3. N.

Nearby, a river of the United States, which runs south-east into the Delaware.

Nearby, a town of France, department of the Somme, on the Oise. Pop. 3700.

Nearby, a river of Scotland, which falls into the Murray frith at Inverness.

Nearby, Loch, a beautiful lake of Scotland, Invernesshire, 22 miles long, and 21 broad.

Nearby, a small river of Saxony, which joins the Werra 6 miles N. W. Eisenach.

Nearby, or Oxley, a well built market town of England, county of Cheshire, on the Dee. The church is large and handsome. Pop. 1418. 11 miles N. W. Chester.

Nearby, a town of Denmark, in the island of Zealand. Population 1500.

Nearby, a river of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, which falls into the Clyde.

Netherlands, a kingdom in the central part of Europe, constituted so lately as 1614, and consisting of 13 provinces of Dutch and 16 Belgic, along with the grand duchy of Luxembourg. It extends from 15. 30 to 52. 31. N. Lat., and from 2. 30 to 12. 30. E. Long. It is bounded W. and E. by the German ocean, S. by France, and N. by Denmark and the Prussian territories of the Lower Rhine. The following are the provinces into which it is divided: Holland, East Flanders, West Flanders, Brabant, South Brabant, Flanders, Limburg, North Brabant, Antwerp, Gelderland, Luxembourg, Friesland, Namur, Overijssel, Groningen, Zealand, Utrecht, and Dren-

the. Population 5,175,000. The Netherlands cannot boast of many natural beauties, the face of the country being in the northern provinces one continued plain, intersected in all directions by an infinity of canals and ditches, exhibiting vast meadows of the freshest verdure, and covered with numerous herds of cattle; sheets of water, sometimes flowing and sometimes stationary; and at intervals clusters of trees, and in the environs of large towns, elegant country houses, situated in the middle of gardens and parks. The southern provinces exhibit a greater variety of woods, meadows, and corn fields. The maritime provinces of the Netherlands have been the scene of great physical revolutions. There seems little doubt that the northern provinces formed at one time part of the bed of the sea. To guard against its inundations, of which they had a dreadful example in the 16th century, when the ocean suddenly burst upon the land, and overwhelmed 73 villages, and no less, it is said, than 100,000 inhabitants, the Dutch began to secure their coasts by dikes, or mounds of earth, the erection of which has been justly considered one of the greatest efforts of human industry. The great rivers are bordered with similar dikes; and the Dutch have also attempted, in particular situations, to regain portions of their country from the sea, and have actually succeeded in recovering considerable tracts. The principal rivers of the Netherlands are the Rhine, with its different branches, the Meuse and the Scheldt. These rivers, and the multitude of canals with which the country is intersected, are of the greatest advantage in the prosecution of inland trade. In the Dutch or maritime provinces the climate is humid and variable; in the interior it is less variable. The low lying part of the country is subject to fogs. To the moisture arising from a marshy situation is attributed the extreme dampness of Dutch houses, the furniture requiring frequent rubbing and scouring, to preserve it from the effects of the humidity. In Belgium agriculture has long been attended to with care; and this, joined to the excellent soil, has rendered it one of the most productive countries in Europe. The Dutch or northern provinces do not produce much grain; their wealth consists in pasture. Horses are fattened, the lean cattle brought from Denmark and Germany. Here also are made butter and cheese of superior quality, and in vast quantities, for export to England and other countries. The other products common in the southern, as in the northern provinces, are flax, hemp, tobacco, hops, madder, and fruit: a little wine is made in the south. The Netherlands have been long celebrated for their wealth and flourishing manufactures. The linen of Holland, the lace of Brussels, the leather of Liège, the woollens of Leyden and Utrecht, and the silks of Amsterdam and Antwerp, were known several centuries ago throughout Europe.

The fertile soil of Flanders gave it the pre-eminence, in point of time, over Holland and the northern provinces. So early as the 12th century, Bruges, and subsequently Ghent and Antwerp, were trading cities of great importance. From their situation at the mouth of so many large rivers, both the Dutch and Flemish had an early and extensive transit trade, which extended to almost all parts of Europe. Holland received from the south of Europe wine, brandy, fruit, wool, in vast quantities for the north; and from the north, corn, hemp, flax, iron, and timber, to supply the wants of the south. In the fisheries, particularly the herring fishery, the number of vessels employed by the Dutch is said to have exceeded that of all the rest of Europe. The West India trade, though partly in the hands of a company, was under no impolitic restrictions. Their East India company was formed in 1602. The transactions of the Dutch with America and the coast of Guinea were likewise extensive. The wars to which the Dutch were successively compelled with Spain, England, and France, caused an enormous increase of their public debt; this tended to obstruct the advances of commerce and of industry; and in 1810, the continental system of Bonaparte brought this once flourishing country to the verge of ruin. Since 1814, when it recovered its independence, and shook off the yoke of France, the commerce of the Netherlands has been free from oppressive restrictions, though it has participated largely in the general depression consequent on overstrained taxation and the long continuance of war and disturbance; so that, with all the perseverance of the inhabitants, and all the moderation of a pacific government, it will take a long time to restore these provinces to their former prosperity. The means of education are very generally diffused throughout the Netherlands. There are parish or primary schools; while boarding schools and other seminaries are numerous. The universities are six in number, viz. the well known ones of Leyden, Utrecht, and the smaller though long established one of Groningen; Louvain also, an old university, re-established by a royal edict of 25th September 1816, which also instituted two new universities, Ghent and Liege. The established religion of the northern provinces is the Calvinist; but religious sects of every description are to be found there. The Belgic provinces are Catholic. The constitution of the Netherlands dates only from 1814, and bears in many respects a close resemblance to that of Great Britain. The possession of all executive power by the king; the inviolability of his person; the responsibility of his ministers; the appointment of a cabinet and privy council; but above all, a double house of parliament, are striking features of resemblance. The chief distinction is in the existence of provincial states, or assemblies charged with a variety of important local duties, such as the care of the roads and bridges, of religious worship, of charitable institutions, of the execution of the laws, of the expenditure of the local magistrates, and in particular with the election of the members of the common house of parliament. The annual expenditure of the Netherlands is nearly £7,000,000 sterling, and the revenue has, since 1819, been brought to an equality with it. The army of the Netherlands amounts in peace to above 60,000 regulars. The marine consists of only 12 sail of the line, and twice as many frigates. The Dutch settlements in different parts of the world are, 1st, In Asia, Java, with the lesser governments of Amboyna, Banda, Ternate, Malacca, and Macassar, as well as the factories in Ceylon, Madagascari, and Persia. 2d, In Africa, 13 small forts on the coast of Guinea. 3d, In the West Indies, the colony of Surinam on the mainland, and the islands of Curaçoa, St. Eustatius, and St. Martin. The Dutch have also a right to send stores and receive produce from their former colonies, Demerara, Essequibo, and Berbice, though now subject to Britain.

NEVVY, a river of Scotland, in Inverness-shire, which falls into the Spey.

NETLEY, a hamlet of England, in Southamptonshire, 2½ miles S. E. Southampton.

NEZ, or NEZEC, a river of Poland, which falls into the Wartha.

NEZKE, a small river of Hanover, which falls into the Osnau.

NEVA, a large river of Russia, which falls into the gulf of Finland, below Petersburg.

NEVADA, or SIZERRA NEVADA, a well known chain of mountains in the S. of Spain.

NEPESUNO, once a duchy of the German empire, incorporated in the Bavarian circles of the Upper Danube and the Regen, in 1806.

NEUBURG, a neatly built town of Bavaria, on the Danube. Population 4000.—Another town of Bavaria, 31 miles E. S. E. Amberg. Also a village of France, in Alsace.

NEUBURG, a town of the Prussian states, 60 miles E. N. E. Berlin. Population 2200.

NEVEN, a town of European Russia, on the Vinnika. Population 2000.

NEVERE, a town of East Flanders, 3 miles W. by S. Ghent. Population 3200.

NEVERWICKE, a town of Germany, 20 miles W. Stuttgart. Population 1700.

NEVESA, a river of the province of Cumana, in South America, enters the sea between the cities of Barcelona and Cumana.

NEVERA, a considerable but ill built town of France, on the Loire. The streets are narrow and winding. The cavalry barracks is the only public edifice worth notice. The Loire is here crossed by a fine bridge of 20 arches. The town contains manufactures of glass, plate, hardware, earthenware, and enamel. Pop. 12,000. 116 miles N. W. Lyons.

NEUCHÂTEAU, a town of France, department of the Vosges. Population 2700.

NEUCHÂTEAU, a town of the Netherlands. Population 1300.

NEUCHÂTEL, a canton in the west of Switzerland, bounded by the canton of Bern, the lake of Neuchâtel, the Pays de Vaud, and a part of the frontier of France. Its surface is mountainous, and the climate cold and disagreeable, the winter continuing during seven or eight months. The inhabitants of this canton, with the exception of about 2000, are Protestants. Pop. 56,000.

NEUCHÂTEL, the capital of the foregoing canton, situated in the midst of vineyards and gardens, near where the rivulet of Seyon falls into the lake of Neuchâtel. It is in general well built, and consists of four principal streets. The public buildings of interest are the old castle, the town-house, the principal church, and the hospital. It has manufactures of printed cottons and linens. Pop. 5000. 25 miles W. Bern.

NEUCHÂTEL LAKE OF, a considerable lake in the N. W. of Switzerland, which separates the canton of that name from the canton of Friburg. It is about 20 miles long, and 4 broad; its greatest depth is about 400 feet.

NEUCHÂTEL, a town of France, on the Echoue, 26 miles N. E. Rouen. Pop. 2000.

NEUGESDOORF, a village of Upper Lusatia, near Zittau. Population 2000.

NEUHAUS, a well built town of Bohemia, 68 miles S. S. E. Prague. Pop. 5200.—The name of two other towns in Hanover.

NEUHAUSEN, a village of Switzerland, 8 miles W. by S. Schaffhausen.

NEUILLY, a pleasant village of France, about 3 miles N. W. Paris, on the Seine, over which is a beautiful bridge of 5 arches. Population 2500.

NEUILLY ST FRONT, a town of France, department of the Aisne. Pop. 1600.

NEVIS, or NIEVIA, an island of the West Indies. It is little more than a single mountain, whose base is about 23 miles in circumference. It is well watered, and in general fertile. It contains one town, Charlestown, which is fortified. Number of white inhabitants 8000; of negroes 10,000. Long. 62. 35. W. Lat. 17. 14. N.

NEUWICH, a village of Saxony, on the Wesenitz. Population 2500.

NEUMARK, a well built town of Tyrol, on the Adige, 19 miles N. N. E. Trent.

NEUMARKT, a town of Bavaria, on the Saale. Pop. 3400. 12 miles S. E. Nuremberg.

NEUMARKT, a town of Prussian Silesia, 21 miles N. W. Breslau. Population 3100.

NEUNKIRCHEN, a town of Lower Austria, on the Schwartz. Population 2000.

NEUMUNSTER, a thriving town of Prussian Silesia, on the Weidnitz. Population 3000.

NEUMUNSTER, a town of Prussian Silesia, 23 miles N. W. Glogau. Population 1700.

NEUMUNSTER, a newly built town of Hungary, in the palatinate of Bacs, separated from Peter-Waradin only by the Danube. It has a good trade, particularly with Turkey. Pop. 12,400. Long. 19. 52. 11. E. Lat. 45. 15. 0. N.

NEUSE, a river of North Carolina, which runs into Pamlico sound.

NEUSIEDLER-SEE, or FARTOL, a considerable lake of the west of Hungary. Length about 30 miles; breadth about 10.

NEUSOHL, a well built town of Hungary, on the rivers Gran and Bistritz, and the chief place of the palatinate of Suhl. It has an old castle, a Catholic and Lutheran church, and an hospital. Pop. 10,000. 100 miles E. N. E. Presburg. Long. 19. 9. 45. E. Lat. 48. 45. N.

NEUSS, a town of Germany, on the Erft, 8 miles S. W. Dusseldorf. Population 5400, who manufacture cotton stuffs and ribbons.

NEUSTADT, a town of Poland, palatinate of Augustowo. Population 2300.

NEUSTADT, a town of Prussian Silesia, 57 miles S. S. E. Breslau. Population 3700.

NEUSTADT, a town of Saxony, 19 miles E. Dresden. Population 1500.

NEUSTADT, a town of Prussian Saxony, adjoining to Magdeburg. It was in 1813 partly demolished by the French garrison. Population 5700.—The name of several other small towns in Germany.

NEUSTADT, a circle or inferior division of Saxony, ceded to Prussia by the treaty of Vienna in 1815.

NEUSTADT, a walled town of Moravia, 13 miles N. Olmutz. Population 3000.

NEUSTADT, a town of Denmark, in the duchy of Holstein, on the bay of Lubeck. Population 1400.

NEUSTADT-ENERSWALD, a fortified town of the Prussian province of Brandenburg, 30 miles N. E. Berlin. Population 3000.

NEUSTADT ON THE AICH, a town of Bavarian Franconia. Population 1800.

NEUSTADT ON THE HAAR, a town of the Bavarian province of the Rhine, 17 miles S. W. Mannheim. Population 2000.

NEUSTADT ON THE RIVER NAL, a town of Bavaria. Population 2000.

NEUSTADT ON THE ORE, a town of Germany, 24 miles S. E. Weimar. Pop. 2500.

NEUSTADT, WERNEBURG, a fortified town of Lower Austria, on the Fischau and the Steinfeld. It is well built, and contains 7000 inhabitants; the garrison and military school make about 3000 more. There is in the town a riding school and a gymnasium. It has manufactures of iron, brass, and woollen. 25 miles S. Vienna.

NEUSTADT, a town of Austrian Illyria, on the Gark, 25 miles S. S. E. Laybach. Population 1600.

NEUSTADT ON THE WAAG, a town of Hungary, on the Waag. Population 2500.

NEUTRA, capital of a palatinate in Hungary, containing 320,000 inhabitants. It has a bishop's palace and cathedral, and a public school. Pop. 2000. 44 miles E. by N. Presburg.

NEUVÉ ELOISE, a town of the Netherlands in West Flanders. Population 2900.

NEUVIC, a town of France, department of the Dordogne, 14 miles S. W. Périgueux. Population 1600.—Another in the department of the Corrèze. Population 1700.

NEUVILLE, a town of France, on the Saone, 9 miles N. Lyons. Population 1700.

NEUILLE, a town of France, department of the Vienne. Population 2500.

NEVILLE ACH HORN, a town of France, 12 miles N. Orleans. Population 2000.

NEUVY, or St SERVIERE, a town of France, department of the Indre. Pop. 1700.

NEUWAP, a town of Pommerania, 23 miles N. N. W. Stettin. Population 1350.

NEUWIED, a small and neatly built town of the Prussian states, province of the Lower Rhine, on the Rhine. Here are churches for Catholics, Protestants, Anabaptists, Harnbutters, and Jews. It has manufactures of cotton and wool, hardware, linen, soap, &c. The prince's palace is surrounded with extensive gardens, and contains a good library. 7 miles N. N. W. Coblenz.

NEUVY, or NEFIN, a market town and parish of Wales, in Carmarvonshire. Pop. 1814.

NEW AUNRY, a village and parish of Scotland, 7 miles S. Dumfries. Pop. 1112.

NEWARK, a market and borough town of England, in Nottinghamshire, on the Trent. The town is handsome and well built. The public buildings are the castle, which, though now in ruins, still presents an august appearance. This magnificent structure, which was called the New Work, and hence gave name to the town, was built in the reign of King Stephen, by the bishop of Lincoln. The church of Newark has long been reckoned the first parish church in the kingdom. It is a very elegant building, of the age of Henry VI. The tower is light, and very handsome, and supports a lofty stone spire. Besides the parish church, there are four places of worship for the Calvinists, Baptists, and Methodists, the latter of whom are numerous in this town. In the market-place, which is a handsome square, stands the town-hall, an elegant building of stone. The workhouse is one of the best in the kingdom. In consequence of the inundations of the river, which rendered the high road often impassable, a new turnpike road was constructed here in 1770, to remove this inconvenience, which, by the construction of 13 bridges of various sizes, and in the whole 24 arches, built at irregular distances, is carried above the reach of the floods. Newark is a noted stage on the road from York to London. It enjoys a flourishing trade in corn, coal, cattle, wool, and other commodities. The corn market is the largest in that part of the kingdom. The business of malting is carried on to a considerable extent; there is, besides, an extensive linen manufactory. It sends two members to parliament, elected by every householder paying poor rates. Population 6084. 20 miles N. E. Nottingham.

NEWARK, a township of the United States, Essex county, New Jersey. Pop. 3008.—The name of several other townships in the United States.

NEWARK, a town of Upper Canada, at the entrance of the Niagara from Lake Ontario.

NEWBATTLE, a parish and decayed village of Scotland, county of Edinburgh. Pop. 1719.

NEWBERN, one of the eastern maritime districts of N. Carolina, comprising 10 counties.

NEWBERN, a post town and part of entry of the United States, and capital of Craven county, North Carolina. 25 miles S. S. W. Washington. Pop. in 1818, nearly 6000.

New Bistrars, a town of Roderia, 20 miles E. Budweis. Population 2160.

NEWBOLD, a hamlet of England, in Derbyshire. Population 982.

NEWOLD, ASRSBY, a village of England, in Cheshire. Population 590.

NEWOLKTON, an ancient market town of Wales, in Anglesey, on the Bright. Pop. 756.

NEWPOWELL, a town of Ireland, county of Wexford, 20 miles S. Dublin.

NEWROGON, a township of England, in Staffordshire. Population 744.

NEW BRANDENBURG, a well built town of Germany, 53 miles W. Stettin. Pop. 4700.

NEUBUILDING, a small neat village of Ireland, in the county of Londonderry.

NEWBURN, a town and parish of Scotland, on the south bank of the Tay. Linen is the principal manufacture. The harbour is spacious. Population 5190.—2d. A village of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire.

NEWBURCH, a post township of the United States, Orange county, New York. Pop. 4627.

NEWBURY, a market and borough town of England, in Berkshire, on the Kennet, which runs through the centre of the town. The streets are spacious and well paved, and the houses well built, mostly of brick. There are, besides the parish church, five meeting-houses for dissenters, viz. Quakers, Baptists, Independents, Methodists, and Presbyterians. The market-place is large and commodious; the town-hall is a handsome building, erected over it. On the banks of the river Kennet are the flour mills, which supply London and Bristol with great quantities of flour. In the town are 60 shew-houses, and a charity school for 44 boys. Its woollen manufactures have greatly declined. It still makes serges, shalloons, and trussels; but the chief trade of the town consists in malting. Population 3347. 17 miles W. by S. Reading.

NEWBURY, a district in the central part of South Carolina. Pop. 12,064, including 4006 slaves.—2d. A township in Orange county, Vermont. Population 1563.—3d. In Essex county, Massachusetts, on the south bank of Merrimack river. Population 5170.—4th. In York county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 1798.

NEWBURYPORT, a post township of the United States, in Essex county, Massachusetts. Population 7634.

NEWBYRE, a village of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire.

NEWCASTLE, a neat handsome town of Ireland, 20 miles S. W. Limerick.—2d. A small village of Ireland, county of Down.—3d. A town of Ireland, 10 miles W. S. W. Dublin.

NEWCASTLE, a town of the island of Nevis, 6 miles N. N. E. Charleston.

NEWCASTLE, a county of the United States, in Delaware. Pop. 21,430. Slaves 4047.

NEWCASTLE IN ELMYN, a market town of Wales, on the Teify, Cardiganshire and Caermarthenshire, 223 miles W. London.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE, a large, populous, and trading town of England, chief town of the county of Northumberland, on the northern bank of the river Tyne, about 10 miles from its mouth. Ships of 300 or 400 tons burden may reach the town. It extends for nearly two miles along the river, and about one mile from the river towards the north and north-west; rising along the hill, and crowning its summit. The old streets near the river are narrow, irregular, and steep; but the buildings on the slope of the hill, much crowded together, but, with its progress in wealth and importance, the town has received proportional additions and improvements; several of the streets have been widened, and a great number of modern ones erected, especially in the north and west quarters of the town. These newer quarters are laid out with skill and taste, and in a superior style of architecture. Many of the public buildings are well deserving of notice; the most striking is that of St Nicholas church, remarkable for its spire of admirable symmetry, which, in the form of an imperial crown, rises conspicuous above all the other buildings in Newcastle. This church is supposed to have been raised in 1338. It is 240 feet long, 75 broad, and the height of the tower is 194 feet. The present parochial chapel or church of All Saints was rebuilt in 1783: it is a magnificent building, of a circular form, in the Grecian style, with a lofty and elegant spire. The other parochial chapels or parish churches are: St Andrew's and St John's, both neat buildings; the chapel of St Anne, a very elegant structure. There are, besides, other chapels of ease, and about 16 different places of religious worship, for Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, Burghers, Antiburghers, Baptists, Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, Unitarians, and Glasites. The other public buildings are, the mansion-house for the mayor; the treasury-house, built about the year 1646; the exchange and town-court, a noble building erected in 1686. The new courts of justice belonging to the county of Northumberland consist of a double-shed square, 40 yards long and 24 wide. They contain cells for criminals; above them is an entrance hall and grand jury room, on each side of which are the courts, and behind them the rooms for the judges' juries, &c. A new bridge over the Tyne was finished in 1791, in place of the old bridge, which was carried away by an extraordinary flood in 1770. To the south and to the east of the exchange is the quay, which is one of the largest and longest in any part of Great Britain. The assembly-rooms were erected in 1769; they are thought to be the most elegant and commodious of the kind of any in the kingdom, except those at Bath. The theatre is a handsome and commodious building; it was opened in 1786. On the outside of the west gate are the public baths, appropriately fitted up with hot, vapour, and tepid baths, &c. The new butcher market is built upon a very convenient plan. The remains of the ancient castle stand on an eminence, overlooking the whole town. The great tower is about 80 feet high, 62 feet by 54 on the outside, and its walls 14 feet thick. The walls of the town are supposed to have been built during the 13th century; they were noted for strength. There were seven gates of great strength, and 17 round towers. The charitable institutions in Newcastle are, the infirmary, on the west side of the town, overlooking the Tyne; the dispensary, established in 1777; a fever hospital, built in 1804; the lunatic asylum for the counties of Durham, Newcastle, and Northumberland, a handsome and spacious building; the leper's hospital; an hospital for the reception of poor married women lying-in, founded in 1706. And besides these, there are various other hospitals in the town, which are open to the aged and the infirm. The grammar school was founded in 1523. There are also charity and Sunday schools. A large and handsome building, termed the royal jubilee school, was erected in 1810, for the education of the children of the poor, on the Lancasterian system; another school is also constructing on Bell's system, in the principles of the established religion. The literary and philosophical society of Newcastle, which at present consists of about 600 members, was begun in 1703. In 1802 a part of its funds was applied to obtain a permanent lectureship on natural philosophy, chemistry, &c. for which a large and valuable apparatus has been purchased. In 1813 was also instituted a society of antiquaries, of which his grace the Duke of Northumberland is patron.

Newcastle is noted for its collieries, which are principally situated along the Tyne, both above and below the town. From this magazine the vast consumption of the metropolis, the whole of the eastern, and most of the southern coasts of the island, and the opposite coasts of France, Holland, and Germany, have for centuries been supplied. In 1819, the quantity exported was—Coastwise, 639,387 Newcastle chaldrons; overseas, 30,736. The foreign trade of Newcastle consists chiefly in the importation of wines and fruits from the south of Europe; and of corn, timber, iron, hemp, and other commodities, from the Baltic and Norway. The principal exports, besides coals and lead, are grindstones, salt, butter, tallow, and salmon from the fisheries. Several ships are also sent to the Greenland fishery. The number of vessels which cleared out in 1810, were—Coastwise, 3320; foreign, 955. Newcastle has extensive potteries, glass-houses, and chemical works for making white lead, sulphur, and nitric manufactures in iron, tin, and every kind of metal; machines for fabricating brass-wire, plate metal, &c. The glass-works here, in particular, are conducted on a very extensive scale. In them are made window-glass, plate-glass, bottles, decanters, drinking-glasses, &c. The manufactories of wrought iron are considerable. Ship-building is also carried on to a great extent.

Newcastle was made a borough by William the Conqueror, and has sent two members to parliament since the reign of Edward I. Number of voters (free burgesses) about 3500. Newcastle is a place of great antiquity, and of considerable note in history; it was a military station among the Romans. The present name is derived from a new castle, which was built on the site of an old fortress in 1080. - Population 35,181. 270 miles N. by W. London, Long. 1. 37. W. Lat. 54. 38. N.

NEWCASTLE, or NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LINE, a market town of England, county of Stafford, in the centre of the district of the potteries. It stands on the eastern bank of the river Line, a branch of the Trent. The houses are neat and well arranged. There were here formerly four churches; but one only now remains, which has a lofty embattled square tower, with a chime of eight bells. Here are, besides, several meeting-houses for dissenters; and 20 almshouses. In the centre of the principal street is an excellent market-place. The chief business in Newcastle consists in the clothing trade; and the manufacture of hats. Around the town, the villages to a considerable distance are entirely occupied with the manufactures of porcelain, earthenware, stoneware, &c. It has sent two members to parliament since the 7th of Edward III. Pop. 7031. 15 miles N. Stafford.

NEWCASTLE, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 8557.

NEW CONNECTICUT, an extensive district of the state of Ohio, United States.

NEW ENGLAND, a country of North America, forming the north-east part of the United States; comprising the states of Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, including the district of Maine, Rhode Island, and Connecticut. Population 1,371,974.

NEWENT, an irregularly built market town of England, county of Gloucester, on a small river. The church is a spacious building, containing numerous monuments. Pop. 1287. 8 miles N. W. Gloucester.

NEW FOREST, an extensive tract in England, county of Southampton, 20 miles long and 15 broad.

NEWFOUNDLAND, an island on the east side of the gulf of St. Lawrence, separated from the coast of Labrador on the north by the strait of Bellefleur, which is about 21 miles wide. It is situated between Lat. 40. 45. and 51. 48. N.; and between Long. 52. 31. and 60. 40. W. from Greenwich being 381 miles long; from 40 to 287 miles broad, and about 900 miles in circumference. The country is very unequal, and covered with hills and mountains. They are everywhere overgrown with pines, so as to be practicable only in those parts where the inhabitants have cut roads. In winter the cold is excessive, nothing but snow and ice being seen, and the bays and harbours entirely frozen. The whole circuit of the island is full of bays and harbours, all so spacious, and sheltered on all sides by the mountains, except their entrance, that the vessels lie in perfect security. Cod-fishing is the universal business. The settlements of the English are only about the harbours, and in the country near Placentia, and along its bays eastward towards Cape Razee, and from thence to Cape Bident Vista. This island, after various disputes about the property, was entirely ceded to England by the treaty of Utrecht, in 1713. By the last treaty of peace, the French are to enjoy the fisheries on the north and on the west coasts of the island, and the inhabitants of the United States are allowed the same privileges in fishing as before their independence. The Great Bank of Newfoundland, which may properly be deemed a vast mountain under water, is not less than 330 miles in length, and about 75 in breadth. It is frequented by vast shoals of small fish, most of which serve as food to the cod, that are inconceivably numerous and voracious. The inhabitants have some horned cattle; but all species of provisions, as flour, salt meat, &c. are supplied from England and the continent of America.

NEW HAVEN, a county of North Carolina. Pop. 11,465, including 6442 slaves.

NEWHAVEN, a fishing village of Scotland, one mile W. Leith. Population about 600.

NEWHAVEN, a village of England, in Sussex, at the mouth of the Ouse. Pop. 927.

NEW-HAVEN, a county of the United States, in Connecticut. Population 37,604.

NEW-HAVEN, a maritime city of the United States, in New-Haven county, Connecticut, round the head of a bay which makes up about four miles north from Long Island sound. The city is divided into two parts, called the Old and New Townships. The old town is laid out in a large square, divided into nine smaller squares. The central square is open, and is believed to be one of the handsomest in the United States. In and around it are the public buildings, which are a state-house, six colleges edifices, and three elegant churches, two for Congregationalists, and one for Episcopalians. A Methodist church is also connected. Besides these buildings, the town contains a jail, almshouse, custom-house, two banks, three insurance offices, a grammar school, an academy, and six printing offices, from which are issued four weekly newspapers, a religious monthly magazine, and the American Journal of Agriculture and Arts. The houses in New Haven are generally built of wood, in a neat and commodious, but not an expensive style. The harbour is well defended from winds, but is shallow, and gradually filling up with mud. Yale college, in this place, is one of the oldest and most respectable colleges in the United States. It was founded in 1701. New-haven has a mamanufactory of fire-arms. Pop. 7147, and including the township, 8226. 76 miles N. E. New York. Long. 78. 56. W. Lat. 41. 18. N. — It is also the name of several townships in the United States.

NEWINGTON GREEN, a village and parish of England, 2 miles from London.

NEW KIDITH, a manufacturing village of Scotland, in Banffshire. Pop. of parish, 3826.

NEW KENT, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Pop. 6478, including 3725 slaves.

NEWLANDSDON, a township of England, county of Durham. Pop. 705.

NEW MARK was the name of that part of the margravate of Brandenburg that lay to the east of the Oder. Pop. 310,000.

NEWMARKET, a market town of England, partly in the county of Cambridge, but chiefly in that of Suffolk, and long celebrated for its horse-races. The race-ground, on whose attractions the town chiefly depends for its support, is formed out of an extensive heath, and is one of the finest courses in the kingdom. Most of the houses are modern and well built. The two churches contain nothing worthy of particular remark. There are two charity schools for boys and girls. Population, 2011. 61 miles N. London.

NEWMARKET, the name of various townships in the United States.

NEWMILLS, a village of Scotland, in Fifeshire, on the verge of the county.

NEWMILLS, a village of the United States, in Essex county, Massachusetts.

NEWNING, a town of Scotland, in Agshire. It is a burgh of barony. Pop. 1543.

NEWNTON, a market town of England, in Gloucester, on the Severn. Population 1012.

NEWPORT, a market town of England, in the Isle of Wight, of which it may be regarded as the metropolis. It stands on the banks of the navigable river Medina. The houses are mostly of brick, and some of them are handsome. In the centre of one of the squares stands the church. Here are, besides, places of worship for the Methodists, Armenians, Baptists, Quakers, and Roman Catholics. The town-hall is situated over the largest of the market-places. There is a free grammar school; another school was begun for girls; and there are also two Sunday schools. Here is a neat theatre; and assemblies held in two elegant rooms, erected for the purpose. It has a manufactory of starch and hair powder. It sends two members to parliament. Pop. 4096. 4 miles S. W. London.

NEWPORT, a market town of England, county of Monmouth, on the Ussk river, which is a handsome bridge. It has a parish church, and there are some remains of its castle. It joins with Aberg and Monmouth in sending a member to parliament. Population 961. 147 miles W. London.

NEWPORT, a market town of England, in Salop. It has a free school and 2 almshouses. Pop. 2243. 20 miles E. Shrewsbury.

NEWPORT, a market town and port of Wales, Pembrokeshire, on the Nevers. The ruins of the castle rising over the town, present a very interesting appearance. Population 1040. 12 miles S. W. Cardigan.

NEWPORT, a town of England, in Cornwall. It sends two members to parliament.

NEWPORT, a county of the United States, in the S. E. part of Rhode Island. Pop. 16,004.

NEWPORT, a post township and capital of Newport county, Rhode Island. 14 miles S. Bristol.

NEWPORT, a town of Cheshire county, New Hampshire, 8 miles E. Connecticut river. Pop. 1427.

NEWPORT, a town of Herkimer county, New York. Pop. 1603. — The name also of various other townships.

NEWPORT, a river of North Carolina, which runs into the Atlantic.

NEWPORT PISCHEL, a market town of England, Buckinghamshire, on the Ouse, at its junction with the Laver, which divides the town into two unequal parts. It has an ancient and spacious church. Here are also meeting-houses for the Presbyterians and Anabaptists. The manufacture of bone lace is carried on here to a great extent. Population 3103. 13 miles S. E. Northampton.

NEWPORT PRATT, an inconsiderable town of Ireland, county of Mayo.

NEW RIVER, three rivers of the United States, two in N. and one in S. Carolina.

NEWRY, a seaport of Ireland, county of Down, on the Newry water. The town spreads along the side of a steep hill. It was formerly a post and military post of considerable importance, as well as the seat of an abbey, of which the possessions were very important. It was frequently destroyed in the wars of Ireland; the last time in September 1689, by the duke of Berwick. It has since recovered, and has grown large and populous. Below the town lies the river, over which are two handsome stone bridges, one of six arches. The linen manufacture, once considerable, has been of late much injured. There is a very considerable export of butter, beef, pork, and grain. Newry is what is called a potwallop or borough, and returns a member to the parliament of the united kingdom. 40 1/2 miles N. Dublin.

NEWRY, a small village of Scotland, in Roxburghshire, one mile E. Melrose.

NEWRY, three small villages of Scotland, in Bentworth, Fifeshire, and Perthshire.

NEWRY, a market town of Wales, county of Montgomery, on the Severn. Its chief trade consists in the woollen manufactures. Pop. 2406. 7 miles S. W. Montgomery.

NEWRY, a township of England, in Lancashire, 3 miles E. Manchester. Pop. 2577.

NEWRY, a township of England, in the Isle of Wight, with a good harbour. It sends two members to parliament.

NEWRY, the name of various townships of the United States.

NEWRY, a market town of Ireland, on the Boyne, 14 miles S. E. Londonderry.

NEWRY, a village of England, in Lancashire, on a small stream which runs into the Mersey. It has a manufacture of fustians and Manchester goods, and sends two members to parliament. Population 1645. 7 miles S. Wigan.

NEWTONSHAW, a village of Scotland, in Clackmannanshire, on the river Devon.

NEWTON-STEWART, a town of Scotland, in Wigtownshire, on the Cree. It has a cotton and carpet manufacture. Population 3090. 20 miles E. Stranraer.

NEWTON-STEWART, a neat small town of Ireland, county of Tyrone, on the Foyle.

NEWTON TOWN, a town of Ireland, county of Down, on the northern point of Lough Strangford. It has an extensive diaper factory. The church is of the Doric order. There are two meeting-houses. 9 miles E. Belfast.

NEWTON TOWN, a town of Ireland, in the county of Wexford, on the Slaney.

NEWTON TOWN, a neat little village of Ireland, county of Galway.

NEWTON TOWN, a small village of Ireland, in the county of Down.

NEWTON TOWN, an inconsiderable village of Ireland, county of Cavan.

NEWTON TOWN, a neat village of Ireland, county of Donegal.

NEWTON TOWN, a small village of Ireland, county of Longford.

NEWTON TOWN, an inconsiderable village of Ireland, in the county of Antrim.

NEWTON TOWN, a small village of Ireland, 53 miles from Dublin.

NEW YEAR'S ISLANDS, in the South Pacific ocean, on the north coast of Staten Land. Long. 64. 28. W. Lat. 54. 41. S.

NEW YORK, one of the United States of America, bounded N. by Lake Ontario, the river St. Lawrence, and Lower Canada, E. by Vermont, Massachusetts, and Connecticut, S. by the Atlantic, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, and W. by Pennsylvania, Lake Erie, and the river Niagara. Its greatest length from N. to S. is 300 miles; its breadth from the state of Massachusetts to Lake Erie, on the parallel of 43 degrees, is 340 miles. The area, exclusive of islands, is 55,000 square miles. It is divided into fifty counties. This state is greatly diversified in its general aspect. On the west side of the Alleghany mountains it is generally level; on the eastern side it breaks into hills and ridges of various forms, with rich intervening valleys. The coast is sandy, the northern parts rough and mountainous, but the soil of the interior is generally rich. Wheat is raised in greater abundance than any other kind of grain. Indian corn, rye, oats, clover, peas, beans, various kinds of grass, &c. are extensively cultivated. Orchards are abundant, and great quantities of excellent cider are made. Various other kinds of fruit flourish well, as pears, peaches in the southern part, plums, cherries, &c. Iron ore is found, also gypsum, limestone, marble, slate, lead, &c. There are also salt springs and mineral waters. There is a university in the city of New York; and there are colleges at Schenectady and Clinton. Academics to the number of 38 have also been incorporated; and there are all denominations of religious parties. The principal rivers are the Hudson, Mohawk, St. Lawrence, Delaware, Susquehanna, Tugoe, Allegany, Genesee, Oswego, Niagara, &c. A part of the lakes Erie, Ontario, and Champlain, belongs to New York. There are also lakes George, Cayuga, Seneca, Oneida, Oswegatchie, Canandaigua, Chataugue, Skeneatles, and several smaller ones. Canals have been constructed in various parts, by which the internal communications have been much improved. A grand canal has been begun, 363 miles in length, which is to connect Lake Erie with the Hudson. The estimated expense is 4,081,738 dollars; others are also in progress. The exports of New York consist of beef, pork, wheat, flour, Indian corn, rye, butter, cheese, pot and pearl ashes, flax seed, peas, beans, horses, cattle, lumber, &c. The following is an account of them for different years.—In 1791, they amounted to 2,408,408 dollars; in 1800, to 14,645,079; in 1807, to 26,557,963; and in 1819, to 19,690,631. The manufactures are important and flourishing, and now amount to about 20 millions. They consist generally of all necessary articles, either for use or luxury. Population in 1790, 340,120; in 1800, 508,680; and in 1810, 650,220, of whom 15,000 were slaves. Long. 73. to 79. 25. W. Lat. 39. 45. to 43. N.

New York, the first commercial city in America, is on the island of the same name, at the confluence of Hudson and East rivers. It extends along the Hudson about 2 miles; and from the Battery, in the S. W. corner, along East river, nearly 4 miles. Its circuit is about 8 miles. The streets of the ancient part, at the S. end of the city, are frequently narrow and crooked, but all the northern part has been recently laid out, and with much better taste. The principal street is Broadway, which is 30 feet wide, and extends from the Battery, in a N. E. direction, through the centre of the city, for 3 miles. It is generally well built, and a part of it is splendid. The houses in the city, generally, were formerly built of wood, but there are fast disappearing, and substantial brick houses, with slated roofs, rising in their place. The city is divided into 10 wards. Among the public buildings, the most prominent and important is the city hall, 210 feet long, 105 broad, and, including the attic story, 55 feet high. The front, and both ends above the basement story, are built of white marble. The New York Hospital occupying the hospital for the reception of the sick and disabled, the humane asylum, and the Asylum Hospital. The almshouse is a plain stone structure, on East river, 3 miles from the city hall. The state prison is on the Hudson, at Greenwich, about 14 miles from the city hall. It is constructed of freestone. The New York Institution is near the city hall, and its apart, ments are occupied by the literary and philosophical society; the historical society; the American academy of fine arts, which has a valuable collection of paintings and statues; the museum of natural history; and the American museum. Columbia college, formerly called King's college, was established in 1754. A theological seminary was instituted in this city in 1808, by the general synod of the Associate Reformed church. Among the other institutions are a theatre, Vauxhall and other public gardens, an orphan asylum; an asylum for the deaf and dumb, a custom-house, 8 market-houses, 11 banks, 11 insurance companies, numerous benevolent and charitable institutions for the relief of the poor, the sick, the aged, the widow, the orphan, and the stranger. In 1817, there were published in this city, 7 daily newspapers, 5 twice a week, and 5 weekly, besides several monthly literary and religious magazines. There are 87 churches for Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists, Friends, Roman Catholics, &c. The Battery is a beautiful open space, at the S. W. point of the city. It commands a fine view of the harbour, with its shipping, islands, and fortifications, and is much frequented by the citizens. The park, in front of the city-hall, is also a fashionable resort. New York harbour is a large bay, 9 miles long, and 4 broad, which spreads before the city on the S. side. It contains several small islands, near the city of New York, on each of which are fortifications. The harbour is deep enough for the largest vessels. It has not been frozen over since 1789.

New York is admirably situated for commerce. It has more shipping than any other town in the Union, and more than half as much as the city of London. Few cities in the world have increased so regularly and rapidly as New York. In 1697, the population was 4303; in 1786, 13,046; in 1790, 33,131; in 1800, 60,000; in 1808, 75,970; in 1810, 96,573; in 1820, 135,700. 90 miles N. E. Philadelphia, 316 S. W. Boston, 390 S. Montreal.

Naxos, a town of Denmark, on the island of Bornholm. Population 1300.

Naviham, a market town of England, in Suffolk, on the Stour. It has a manufactory of white and brown soap. Population 1016. 6 miles N. Colchester.

NIAGARA, a river of North America, which issues from the north-east end of Lake Erie, flows into Lake Ontario, and forms the boundary between the United States and Great Britain. The course is 26 miles in length, and it varies in breadth from 1000 to 1500 feet. The river runs over a rocky channel, in which its waters are continually agitated by the force with which they are driven against the rocks; and as they descend the brink of a tremendous precipice, the rushing stream assumes the form of a boiling sea, without meeting the slightest interruption from the rocks in its descent. The waters of the river are divided by Goat island into two distinct cataracts. The most stupendous of these is that on the north-western or Canadian side of the river, and is commonly called the Great or Horse-shoe fall, from its resemblance to the shape of a horse-shoe. The height of this fall is estimated at 130 feet, and it is 800 feet broad. The fall on the American side is 500 yards wide, and 165 feet in perpendicular height.

NIAGARA, a county of the United States, in New York, 58 miles long, and 31 broad. Area 230,300 acres. Population 2071.

NIAGARAH, a village and seat of the United States, in Niagara county, New York, on the Niagara, 16 miles below the great falls. The town was destroyed by the British in 1813, but it is now flourishing.

NIAS, or NIASALE, an island in the Eastern sea, lying off Tapasany bay, on the west coast of Sumatra, from which it is separated by a strait 60 miles broad. It is estimated at 50 miles long by 30 in average breadth.

NICAEARO, a town of Naples, province of Capitanata, 84 miles N. N. W. Manfredonia. Population 7000.

NICAEAGUA, a province of the kingdom of Guatemala, to the S. of Honduras. It is 50 miles long, and as many broad.

NICARAGUA, or LAQUEZ NICARAGUA, the capital of the above province, on a lake of the same name, with which it communicates. Houses 1200. Long. 88. 4. W. Lat. 11. 10. N.

NICARAGUA, a lake of fresh water in the above province, 120 miles in length, and 31 in breadth. It is navigable for the largest vessels, and is of immense depth.

NICASTRO, anciently Novesium, a town of Naples, in Calabria Ultra. It is the see of a bishop. Its inhabitants, 10,000, are chiefly employed in the cultivation of olive oil. 24 miles N. N. E. Mileto.

NICOLA DELLA SPIGA, a town of Naples, south of Capua. Population 2000.

NICE, a county or province of the north-west of Italy, in the Savoyian states, surrounded by France, Monaco, the maritime Alps, the French department of the Var, and the Mediterranean. Population 21,000.

NICE, the capital of the above province, at the mouth of the small river Egina, of the Mediterranean, delightfully situated at the foot of an amphitheatre of hills covered with villas, gardens, and groves of orange and lemon trees. Nice is surrounded with a rampart, the circuit of which is 10 miles. The city is divided into the Old and New towns. The streets of the former are crowded and narrow, but those of the latter are pleasantly straight and regular. Nice contains two ports, the smaller one of which is surrounded by a fortification. The other is bordered by a rampart, which extends to a public wharf and is a most convenient place for the reception of the sailing vessels to the Mediterranean. There is a theatre, public bath, coffee-house, a library, delightful walks, and good society. Nice, for its salubrity, is greatly resorted to by the English. The harbour, which is profectured by a mole, is spacious and secure. Oil, wine, and silk, are exported; also liqueurs, essences, and perfumery. There are innumerable manufactures of silk, leather, paper, soap, and tobacco. Population 18,500. 02 miles S. W. Genoa.

NICHOLAS, a county of the United States, in Kentucky. Population 4898.—2d, Of Virginia, formed in 1818.

NICHOLAS, CAPE ST., the north-west extremity of the island of St. Domingo.

NICHOLAS, ST., a small island of England, on the coast of Devonshire.

NICHOLASVILLE, a post town of the United States, Jefferson county, Kentucky, 20 miles S. W. Lexington. Population 158.

NICHOZ FOREST, a township of England, county of Cumberland. Population 795.

NICONAR, the name of a group of islands situated in the bay of Bengal, between the 6th and 10th degrees of N. lat. and between the 93d and 96th of E. long. There are seven large and twelve small ones. The names of the principal ones are Carnicobar, Teresa, Chowry, Bombocho, Kaichull, Carmoria, Nancowry, Tonlungar, Sambelong, and Nicobar or Great Sambelong. These islands are almost all inhabited by a quiet and inoffensive people. The south end of the Great Nicobar is in Long. 94. 0. E. Lat. 6. 44. N.

NICOLAS, ST., a considerable town of the Netherlands, in East Flanders. It has a spacious market-place, and a fine town-house and prison. It has manufactures of cotton, woollens, and coarse linen. Population 11,500. 12 miles S. W. Antwerp.

NICOLAS, ST., a town of France, department of the Upper Garonne. Pop. 2500.

NICOLAS, ST., a town in the north-west coast of Hispaniola, in a bay formed by Cape St. Nicolas. Long. 72. 35. W. Lat. 19. 50. N.

NICOLAS DE LA GRAYE, ST., a town of France, 16 miles W. Montauban. Pop. 2300.

NICOLAS DU PONT, a town of France, department of the Meurthe. Pop. 3200.

NICOLAY, ST., a seaport town of Russia, government of Archangel, on the White sea, at the mouth of the Irtys.

NICOLET, a river of Lower Canada, which falls into Lake St. Peter. It has a village on its banks, of the same name.

NICOSSIA, a small seaport of Denmark, in Jutland, in the gulf of Lyndum.—Also a small seaport in the island of Zealand.

NICOPOLE, or NICOPOLI, a large town of European Turkey, in Bulgaria, on the Thracian. It has an ancient castle, and several handsome mosques and baths. Pop. 20,000. 104 miles N. W. Adrianople. Long. 24. 3. E. Lat. 42. 45. N.

NICOSSIA, a considerable town of Sicily, in the Val di Demona, remarkable for nothing but a number of churches and convents. Pop. 12,000. 40 miles W. N. W. Catania.

NIPHRIS, a large city, capital of the island of Cyprus. It makes a very beautiful appearance, being situated on a fine plain, at the foot of a range of very lofty mountains, with its numerous spires and minarets rising through the trees. Its fortifications, even in their present ruined state, have an appearance of great magnificence. The moat, now dry, is half a mile wide. The finest edifice is the church of St. Sophia, a very ancient and lofty Gothic structure, said to be erected by Justinian. That of St. Nicholas is now converted into the Benestein, and three others into mosques. There are also six Greek chapels, and a Catholic convent. The city contains 2000 Mahometan, and 1000 Greek families, with a few Armenian and Maronite Christians. It carries on manufactures of Turkey leather, of small carpets, and of printed cottons. Long. 33. 26. 30. E. Lat. 35. 12. 14. N.

NICOTERA, a town of Naples, in Calabria Ultra, 32 miles N. by E. Reggio. Pop. 6300.

NICOTRA, a town of Guatemala, province of Costa Rica, on a river of the same name. Long. 85. 53. W. Lat. 10. 42. N.

NIDDA, a town of Germany, in Hesse-Darmstadt. Population 1800.

NIDZEON, the ancient Cadyne, in Caramania, Asiatic Turkey, the residence of a pacha. It has a very antique appearance: the streets contain many ruined fragments of columns. Population 6000 Greeks and Turks. 22 miles E. Karahissar.

NIEBLA, a town of Spain, province of Seville, on the Tinto. Population 9000.

NIEBERBORN, a town of France, in Alsace. Population 1500.

NIEMECK, a fortified town of Moldavia, near the river Niemeck, 200 miles N. E. Belgrade.

NIEMES, a large river of Lithuania, which rises a few miles south of Minsk, and near Grodno and Kovno joins the Wilna.

NIEMLA, a town of Bohemia, on the Polish. Population 1900.

NIEMLICHOV, a town of Russian Poland, government of Podolia. Population 2000.

NIEKHAUSE, a town of Hanover, on the Weser, 72 miles N. W. Hanover. Pop. 3500.

NIKKA, a river of Ireland, county of Waterford, which runs into the Suir.

NIKKAR, a river of Germany, which falls into the Rhine at Cöln.

NIKOTRA, or NICOTERA, a town of France, department of Lower Charente. Pop. 2000.

NIKOTRA, or NICOTERA, a town of France, department of Lower Charente. Pop. 1800.

NIKOTRA, a fortified town of West Flanders, 2 miles from the sea coast. Population 2000. 11 miles S. W. Ostend.

NIVERN, a department in the central part of France, comprehending most part of the province formerly called Nivernois, and bounded by the department of the Yonne, the Côte d'Or, the Saône and Loire, the Allier, and the Cher. Area 1000 square miles; population 212,000. The principal rivers are the Loire, the Allier, the Nievre, the Yonne, and the Aron.

NIVERN, a river of France, which falls into the Loire at Nevers.

NIEUWE PECKEL AA, a straggling village of the Netherlands, in Groningen. Pop. 2000.

NIEUWE SCHANS, a small but strong fortress of the Netherlands, in Groningen.

NIEUWKERK, a town of the Netherlands, north of Gelderland. Population 3000.

NIEUWKOOR, a village of North Holland, 12 miles E. Leyden. Population 1900.

NIEUWOLD, a village of the Netherlands, in Groningen. Population 1100.

NIEUWROOST, a small town and fortress of the Netherlands, 17 miles E. by N. Rotterdam.

Niara, a small river of England, Norfolk, which falls into the German ocean at Clay.

NIGRA, a great river of Central Africa, which has excited an extraordinary interest in modern geographers, by the remarkable nature of the region through which it flows, and still more by our ignorance, and the various and contradictory rumors, relative to its course and termination. The name of Niger, so celebrated, and the object of such anxious inquiry is not known in Africa. The great central stream to which this name is given by Europeans, is, in the ascertained part of its course, known to the negroes under the appellation of Joliba; the last syllable being the general term for a river. By the Moors it is called Neel Abedel, or Nile of the Negroes; for in their mind it is universally identified with the other great river of Africa, the Egyptian Nile. Various theories have been formed as to the termination of this great river. Its course was represented by the ancient geographers to be from east to west, thus flowing directly into the African continent. This was doubted by the moderns, until the point was ascertained and set at rest by Park's first journey into Africa. The knowledge of this important fact immediately set afloat many geographical speculations. Some supposed that it must terminate in an interior lake; some that it flowed westward until it joined the Egyptian Nile in an early part of its course; others that its source was to the south, and that, crossing the line, it joined the great river Congo, which pours its waters into the Atlantic ocean. To solve this difficult geographical problem of the termination of the African stream, Park set out on his last and fatal expedition. Another expedition by land and sea was fitted out by the British government, under the orders of Major Leake, land, and Captain Denham, sea, who were to sail up the Congo, and then the headwaters of the junction of the two streams, and to meet the expedition under Major Leake, who was to reach the Niger by land, and thus to descend its course. The result was most fatal. All the leaders of Major Leake's expedition fell a sacrifice to the climate, without reaching the Niger. Captain Tucker having procured up the Congo about 400 miles, was obliged to return; in the course of his journey back, he himself, with many others, fell a sacrifice to the fatigue and privations they encountered; and no information has yet been received as to the termination of the river.

NIGRITIA, a general name, sometimes given to the central countries of Africa.

Niwa, a river on the south side of the island of St. Domingo.

NIRARAD, a town of Hindostan, province of Benares, on a small river which joins the Ganges. Long. 78. 41. E. Lat. 24. 33. N.

Nizama, a town of Hindostan, province of Agra, on the Ganges, 12 miles below Cawnpore.

Nizamaty, a town of European Russia, government of Orenburg, at the confluence of the Irkutsk and the Bug. It was founded in 1701, is built with the greatest regularity, and is one of the stations of the Russian navy. Pop. 4000. 45 miles N.W. Cherson.

Nikocandia, a town of Moravia, 25 miles S. Braun. Here is a magnificent castle, with a public library, gymnasium, a high school, and 7000 inhabitants.

Nilecun, a noted place of Hindoo pilgrimage. Long. 88. 30. E. Lat. 27. 51. N.

NILE, a great and celebrated river of Africa, which traverses Egypt through its whole extent, and, by its inundation, produces all the fertility for which that country is distinguished. Its source was long hidden in mystery, and, according to modern geographers, has never yet been discovered; the stream which Mr. Bruce traced to its source, namely, the Bahr el Jebel, being only a tributary of the main stream, which is the Bahr el Atbar, out of which its formation is still imperfect. It rises, according to the most authentic accounts, in the Mountains of the Moon, and in Sanagar is joined by the Bahr el Amek, according to Bruce a much smaller river, than the Bahr el Atbar, which adds three times the quantity of waters to it; and has its channel always filled with the Abyssinian river, a great one, after the Nile, and could not of itself pass its way above the Nubian desert. The Nile having formed a considerable space before it reaches the ocean, after which, during a course of about a thousand miles, it is met by no river, scarcely even by the smallest rivulet, but rolls its stream over an immeasurable expanse of sandy deserts, before reaching Egypt; it turns two colossal cascades, the magnitude of which, however, appears to have been greatly exaggerated. In passing through Upper Egypt, the Nile is bounded between two mountain ranges, which leave only a narrow plain on each side. Near Cairo the valley widens, and the Nile now spreads itself over the wide and level plain of the Delta. It then branches into two branches, of which there are but only two of any importance, the Rosetta and the Damietta branch. The Rosetta, however, numbered seven mouths by which this great river entered the sea. The inundation of the Nile, caused by the tropical rains, begins to be felt about the 17th of June, and continues till August; when the river is at its height, and all the level parts of the country are overflowed. The Nile is supposed to have a course of about 2000 miles.

NIXAVAS, a town of Bohemia, near the Elbe. Population 2050.

NIMÈQUE, an old town of the Netherlands, in Gelderland, on the great branch of the Rhine called the Waal. It is fortified with walls, ditches, and extensive outworks. Though not ill built, it has an irregular appearance, the streets being narrow, and, on account of the abrupt elevation from the river, the windows of one range of houses overlooking the chimneys of another. The public buildings are, an old edifice, said to have been raised by the Romans; and now forming a part of the fortifications; the old castle of Valkenot; and the town-house. Several of the churches are likewise entitled to attention, as well as the flying bridge across the Waal. A beautiful shady promenade, called the Belvidere, is much resorted to. It is noted for its manufacture of pale beer. It was taken by the French in 1794. Pop. 13,300. 80 miles S. E. Amsterdam.

NIMES, a large town of France, department of the Gard. It is irregular and ill built. The close built part of the town is surrounded by bosquets, the site of the former mound or earthen wall, where is a number of modern and well built edifices. On the Boisvillars de l'Arplanade is a new hall of justice, in the Grecian style of architecture, and adorned with beautiful Ionic columns. On another is a handsome hospital, and a theatre on an extensive scale. Nîmes is a very ancient city, and, with the exception of Rome, contains more ancient monuments than any other city in Europe. The arcion quers is a fine ancient edifice, 70 feet in length, 20 in breadth, and 34 in height. It has 6 columns in front, and 19 on each side. It was built in the age of Augustus. There is also a beautiful fountain with the remains of Roman baths, statues, and other antiquities; a building commonly called the temple of Diana; a large ancient tower, above 200 feet in height; and lastly, the walls of the amphitheatre, an edifice almost as large as the Colosseum of Rome, and in a better state of preservation. Nîmes has various literary and scientific institutions. It has also extensive manufactures of silk, stuffs, stockings, ribbons, &c. and a fine dyeing and printing establishment, and an extensive trade in raw and wrought silk, wine, dried fruits, oil, and wine. Population 40,000, of whom 23,000 are Protestants. 100 miles N. E. Montpellier. Long. 4. 13. E. Lat. 43. 45. N.

NIMROD, a district of the upper country of South Carolina.

NINGPO, a great seaport of China, in the province of Tcheking. Long. 120. 14. E. Lat. 30. 34. N.

NINTANS, St., a town and parish of Scotland, 1½ mile distant from Stirling. Pop. 8274.

NINOVE, a town of East Flanders, on the Dender, 16 miles S. W. Brussels. Pop. 3400.

NIO, anciently Io, a small island of European Turkey, in the Archipelago, west of Nymphio. Population 4000 Greeks, who raise both wool and cotton. Long. 5. 24. E. Lat. 36. 46. N.

NIORE, a town of France, department of the Drome. Population 2600.

NIORE, a town of France, the capital of the department of the Two Sevrés, on the Sevré. Population 15,000. It has a castle flanked with four round towers. It has a good square, with a pyramid in the middle, and one of the largest market-places in France. The public buildings are the town-house, the churches, a lyceum, a public library, and a botanical garden. 234 miles S. W. Paris.

NIOYR, a town of France, department of the Mayenne. Population 2000.

NIPURON, an extensive island in the east of Asia, forming by much the largest part of the empire of Japan. The interior of the country is entirely unknown to Europeans.

NISABA, a town of the Caraccas, in the province of Venezuela. The city is unhealthy, and manifests every symptom of decline. Population 3200. 46 leagues from Caraccas. Long. 68. 45. W. Lat. 10. N.

NISCHNEI-LOMOV, a town of European Russia, government of Pensá. Pop. 3700.

NISCHNEI-NOVGOROD, or NISCHGON, a great province or government of European Russia, situated in the centre of the empire, to the east of that of Vladimir. It lies between 41. 45. and 46. 15. E. Long. and 54. and 57. N. Lat. It has an area of 20,400 square miles, with about a million of inhabitants. Its rivers are the Votjaga, the Sura, the Volga, and the Oka.

NISCHNEI-NOVGOROD, i. e. Lower Novgorod, capital of the government of the same name, at the confluence of the Oka and Volga. It carries on a great trade with Petersburg in Siberian wares; but it has also extensive dealings in silk, cotton, and all sorts of provisions. Here is the great depot of the salt works, both of that and of the adjoining province of Perm. The dwelling-houses are generally of wood, but the shops and warehouses are more substantial. A great fair is held in this city, frequented by dealers from Russia, Poland, Germany, Hungary, Sardinia, and even Persia. The quantity of merchandise sold is immense. Population 16,000. 230 miles E. N. E. Moscow. Long. 41. 28. 36. E. Lat. 57. 18. N.

NISSE, an ancient city of Persia, once the greatest and richest in the extensive province of Khorasan. It now contains above 15,000 inhabitants. It is said to cover a circuit of 35 miles. 100 miles N. E. Herat.

NISINA, a small island of the Mediterranean, on the west coast of Italy, near Naples.

NISSE, a large and well fortified town of Turkey, in Servia, on the Nissava, 245 miles N. W. Constantinople.

NITH, a river of Scotland, in Ayrshire, which falls into the Solway Firth, 3 miles below Dumfries.

NITHSDALE, the western stewardry or district of Dumfriesshire, Scotland.

NITTATTE, a village of Prussian Silesia, in the circle of Gumburg. Population 806.

NIVE, a small river of France. It falls into the Adour at Bayonne.

NIVELLE, a town of South Brabant, on the Thienne. Population 6000. It has manufactures of cambric and lace; also of oil and paper. 15 miles S. Brussels.

NIVERNOIS, a province of France, to the west of Burgundy. It is now comprehended in the department of the Nièvre; which see.

NIXON, a town of Bohemia, 27 miles E. N. E. Dresden. Population 4000.

NIZA, a town of Portugal, in Alentejo, near the Tagus. Population 1000.

NIZAO, a river of St Domingo, which enters the sea at the point of its name.

NIZZA DELLA PAGLIA, a walled town of the Sardinian states, 40 miles S. E. Turin. Population 5000.

NOACOTE, the capital of a district in Nepal, commanding the only entrance from Tibet. Long. 25. 30. E. Lat. 27. 44. N.

NOANAGUR, a large town, and capital of a district of Hindostan, on the river Nague. It has a manufacture of very beautiful cloths, which are exported to Surat.

NOCCERA, a town of Italy, 5 miles S. W. Ancona. Population 1000.

NOCCERA DELLA PAGLIA, a town of Naples, on thearno. It is a place of some antiquity. It contains a number of churches and convents. Pop. 8000. 20 miles E. S. E. Naples.

NOCCERA, a town of Naples, in Calabria Citra. Population 2000.

NODESDALE, a considerable river of Scotland, in Ayrshire, which joins the Clyde.

NOGACOTTE, a town of Nepal, 60 miles from Catemandoo.

NOGAI, a river of Prussia, it branches off from the Vistula, and joins the Frische Palt.

NOGENT LE GRAND, a town of France, department of the Ardennes. Population 2000.

NOGENT LE SEC, a town of France, department of the Marne. Population 3000.

NOGENT LE ROY, a town of France, department of the Eure and Loir. Pop. 5000.

NOGENT SUR SAONE, a town of France, in Champagne, on the Seine. It has manufactures of stockings. Population 3200. 20 miles N. W. Troyes.

NOGUEIRA BOMAGUARA, and BAILLON, two rivers of Spain, which join the Segura.

NOIRE, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne. Population 5000.

NOIRE ETABLI, a town of France, 25 miles W. Montirison. Population 1000.

NOIRAMOUTIER, an island of France, on the coast of Brittany. Superficial extent 70 square miles. Population 5500. The chief place is of the same name. Population 1000.

NOIR, LAKE, a lake in Louisiana, 60 miles in circumference.

NOJA, a town of Naples, in the Basilicata. Population 4000.

NOLA, an ill built town of Naples, in Terra di Lavoro. Population 8400. 16 miles E. by N. Naples.

NOLAY, a town of France, department of the Cote d'Or. Population 2000.

NOIXAN DE DIOS, a town of Mexico, in Durango. It has rich silver mines, and a good parish church. Population 6800. 120 miles N. Guadalajara.

NOIXAN DE DIOS, a town of South America, provinces of Darien, 80 miles E. Porto Bello.

NOIR, a town of Piedmont, 19 miles S. S. W. Turin. Population 2100.

NOIR S. DALMAZZO, a town of Piedmont, on the Nbu, 15 miles N. E. Pignerolo. Pop. 2100.

NOISEN, a river of the United States, in Cumberland County, Maine.

NOIRAN, a town of France, department of the Ardennes. Population 2300.

NOORDKAPPAAL, a village of the Netherlands, in Friesland. Population 2000.

NOORDHORST, a village of the Netherlands, 4 miles N. Groningen. Pop. 1000.

NOORDWYK, two villages of the Netherlands, in North Holland.

NOORSEET, a town of Hindostan, province of Orissa, 50 miles N. Jagermout.

NOORNI, a town of Hindostan, province of Sindh. Lat. 25. 8. N.

NOORHOUQUIN, a town of France, department of the North. Population 1700.

NOOTKA SOUND, a bay of the North Pacific ocean, on the west coast of North America, discovered by Captain Cook, in 1778. The entrance is situated in the east corner of Howe bay. In Lat. 49. 53. N. Long. 232. 12. E. In the year 1790, a small British settlement was formed here, for the purpose of obtaining furs; but this settlement was seized by the Spaniards in the year 1793, and two vessels taken, and sent to Mexico, where they were set at liberty by the viceroy. A war was like to have been the consequence, but the dispute was adjusted.

NOVA, a river of Guiana, which enters the Atlantic. Long. 53. 0. W. Lat. 4. 50. N.

NOVA, a river of Scotland, in Forfarshire, which joins the South Esk.

NOVARE, a town of Italy, on the Po, 70 miles N. N. E. Rome. Population 4000.

NOVA, a town of Hanover, in East Friesland, 15 miles N. Emden. Pop. 3100.

NOVA, an island of Hanover, on the coast of East Friesland. Pop. 1000.

NOVA, one of the Barde islands, belonging to Denmark. Population 600.

NOVA, a walled town of Prussian Saxony, on the Elbe. It contains one Catholic and seven Lutheran churches, an orphan house, three hospitals, and 1000 inhabitants, who are chiefly employed in the cultivation of spirits. Here are also distilleries and tanneries, and, on a smaller scale, the manufactures of woollen, linen, and hardware.

NORDHEIM, an old town of Hanover, 12 miles N. by E. of Göttingen. Population 3100.

NORRBYRGA, a well built town of Sweden, in East Gothland, on the Motala. It has manufactures of iron, brass, and fire-arms; also woollens. Population 6000. 70 miles S. W. Stockholm.

NORDLICHEN, an ancient town of Bavaria. It has a beautiful high church, in the Gothic style. It has some inconsiderable manufactures of woollens, linen, carpets, gloves, and stockings. The vicinity of Nordlingen has been the scene of repeated conflicts. Population 5000. 36 miles N. N. W. Augsburg.

NORDSTRAND, a small island of Denmark, in the duchy of Slewick. Population 2500.

NORR, a noted part of the river Thames, England, situated off Sheerness.

NORR, a river of Ireland, which passes by Kilkenny, and runs into the Barrow.

NORR, BRACK, a cape of England, on the coast of Somersetshire.

NORFOLK, an extensive county of England, on the eastern coast, bounded N. and N. E. by the German ocean, S. and S. E. by Suffolk, and W. by Cambridgeshire, part of Lincoln, and the Washes. It is almost entirely insulated by the sea, and the rivers which divide it internally from the adjacent counties. It extends about 74 miles by about 48, being comprised within the meridians of 0. 9. and 1. 45. E. long. and within the parallels of 52. 22. and 52. 52. N. lat. It contains 2013 square miles, or 1,258,000 acres. It is divided into 33 hundreds, and 756 parishes. It contains one city, Norwich, and 32 market towns, of which Yarmouth, Lynn Regis, Thetford, Cromer, &c. are the chief. It sends 12 members to parliament. The aspect of Norfolk is not much diversified. In many parts the country presents, over a great extent, a perfect flat; in other places the surface is broken into gentle swells and hollows; and a ridge of high ground stretches northwards from Thetford to the coast. The principal rivers of Norfolk are the Ouse, the Nen, the Waveney, the Great Ouse, and the Bure. Flowing through flat country, these rivers descend very slowly; in many cases the fall is scarcely sufficient to carry off the water, and a land-flood usually lays the adjacent country under water. Hence are formed numerous small shallow lakes or pools, frequently termed woads and meers, which are plentifully stocked with fish, and abound with aquatic fowls. The principal are Breton Broad to the south of Yarmouth, Hickling Broad, and Locksall. Though half encompassed by the ocean, Norfolk has few seaports. Sand-hills occur all along the coast. They often extend far out to sea, and are extremely dangerous to mariners. The most remarkable are those of Yarmouth, Beeston, and the shore near the noted Wooles. The soil of Norfolk is extremely various, consisting of light sand, greenish loam, and clay, various loams, rich loams, and soot. There are no mineral productions of any consequence in the county, except chalk and marl. Norfolk has been long famed for its agriculture, which forms the chief business of the inhabitants. At least two-thirds of the whole county are arable, and kept in a state of tillage. The fattening of cattle is carried on to a considerable extent; and in some of the marsh and fen lands, the dairy is much attended to, and large quantities of butter are made and exported under the name of Cambridge butter; but the raising of grain for exportation forms by far the principal object with the farmer. Wheat, barley, and oats, are the principal white crops raised, which are alternated in a beneficial rotation with turnips, clover, and grasses. Potatoes, as a field crop, have only been lately introduced. All the other ordinary crops, as rye, peas, beans, &c. are also more or less cultivated here; and to these may be added mustard, saffron, flax, and hemp. Poultry of all kinds are very plentiful here, and of superior quality. Turkeys are very numerous; and being in great repute for the delicacy of their flavour, immense quantities are sent to the most distant parts of the kingdom. They are commonly driven on foot along the roads, in large flocks. Large supplies of geese are also furnished from the fenmy parts of this county. Rabbits are very numerous on the sandy heaths, and pheasants abound so much in some minors where they are preserved, as to become a nuisance to the farmer. In the marshes and meers, woodcocks, snipes, widgeon, teal, &c. are very abundant; and here is also to be seen the great bustard, the largest of British birds, and now almost a stranger to the island. Norfolk is well supplied with fresh and salt water fish. The mackerel and herring fisheries are carried on to a great extent along the coast. The manufactures of Norfolk, which consist chiefly of woven goods, are now nearly confined to the city of Norwich, and a few places in the vicinity. Yarmouth and Lynn are the two principal ports. The foreign trade, which used to be very extensive, is chiefly to the Baltic, the Mediterranean, and various parts of the Continent, consists of wine, fruit, timber, &c. Population 344,000.

Norfolk, a county of the United States, in Massachusetts. Pop. 31,245. Chief town Dedham.—20. In the south-east part of Virginia. Pop. 13,079. Slaves 3007. Chief towns Norfolk and Portsmouth.—21. A borough and port of entry in Norfolk county, Virginia, on Elizabeth river, 8 miles above its entrance into Hampton road, and 42 from the sea. It contains a court-house, a jail, a market-house, a theatre, St. Andrew's, an episcopal church, a Presbyterian church, a Methodist church, and six churches for Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Baptists, Roman Catholics, and Methodists. Population 8000.

Norfolk Island, an island in the South Pacific ocean, about 16 miles in circumference, discovered by Captain Cook in 1774. This island was colonized by Governor Phillips, shortly after that of Port Jackson. One great objection, however, to its colonization, is the difficulty of approaching it, owing to the heavy mountainous sea which constantly beats on its rocky shores. The population of this island never exceeded 1000. Long. 168. 10. E. Lat. 29. 3. S.

NORHAM, a township of England, county of Durham. Population 901.

NORLAND, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1665.

NORMAN CAPE, on the W. coast of Newfoundland: Long. 55. 56. W. Lat. 51. 30. N.

NORMAN'S ISLAND, in the United States, near the coast of Martha's Vineyard.

NORMAN'S ISLAND, one of the Virgin Islands.

NORMAN'S CREEK, falls into the Hudson, 21 miles S. Albany.

NORMAN CROSS, a hamlet of England, in the vicinity of Siltton, Huntingdonshire.

NORMANDY, the name of a late province and ancient duchy of France, one of the most extensive and fertile in the kingdom. It is bounded by the English channel on the N. and W., by Picardy on the E., and on the S. by the provinces to the N. of the Loire. It contains about 11,000 square miles, being about 150 miles in length, and in breadth between 80 and 100. It is divided into the five following departments: Lower Seine, Eure, Orne, Calvados, La Manche. Population 2,579,000. The chief towns are Caen, Havre de Grace, Dieppe, Cherbourg, Lisieux, Alençon, Bayeux, Coutances, Evreux, Honfleur, Vire, Falaise. The only naval station is Cherbourg. Normandy abounds in quarries, and the houses are more generally of stone than of brick or wood. The former division of Normandy into Upper and Lower, was founded on no physical distinction, and would have been more intelligible if changed for East and West Normandy. Both bear in many respects a resemblance to England, in climate, in the extent of undulating plains with few mountains, in the richness of their pastures, in the nature of their corn culture, in the species of their fruit, chiefly pears and apples, and finally, in the density of their population, this province having nearly a fourth of the extent, and a fourth of the inhabitants of England. The principal rivers of Normandy are the Seine, the Eure, the Orne, the Iton, the Dive, and the Risle. The Cotentin in the north-west extremity of Normandy, is, like Devonshire, hilly, and best fitted for sheep pasture; to the east are tracts of forest land; and farther to the east, on both sides of the Orne, are mixed village and pasture, until, at the distance of 15 or 20 miles from that river, are the vast pastures of the Pays d'Auge, in which are reared the chief supplies of cattle for the Paris market. Wheat and oats are both cultivated; also rye, barley, buck-wheat, and flax.

Normandy has manufactures of linen, after which comes lace. Cottons are of late inroduction. Fine woollens are also manufactured; and pins and needles in large quantities, but of inferior quality to the English. There are, in particular spots, and on a limited scale, manufactures of iron, copper, and glass; coal mines are not wanting, but the quality is indifferent; and here, as in the rest of France, the common fuel is wood. The exports of Normandy consist chiefly of cotton, linen, and lace; also of cattle, corn, butter, and cyder.

NORRIDGEWOCK, a township of the United States, capital of Somerset county, Maine, on the Kennebeck. Population 830.

NORRIESTON, a village of Scotland, in Perthshire, now joined to that of Thornhill, 10 miles W. Stirling.

NORRISTON, a township of the United States, capital of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, on the Schuylkill, 17 miles N. W. Philadelphia. Population 1336.

NORRLAND, or NORDLAND, a maritime province of Norway, lying between Drontheim on the south, and Finnmark or Norwegian Lapland on the north. It extends from the 66th to the 70th degree of N. lat.

NORRLAND, or NORDLAND, the most northern of the three great divisions of Sweden, comprising the seven provinces of Gestrícia, Helsingland, Herjedalen, Medelpad, Jamtland, Angermannland, and West Bothnia. It extends from the 60th to the 65th degree of N. lat., and is bounded S. by Middle Sweden, W. by Norway, and E. by the gulf of Bothnia. To the north is Lapland.

NORRTJÖR, a seaport of Middle Sweden, on the Baltic, 30 miles N. E. Stockholm. Population 1000.

NORT, a town of France, on the Eure, 15 miles N. Nantes. Population 3200.

NORTE, Rio Bravo del, a river of Mexico. It rises in the Rocky mountains, and falls into the gulf of Mexico, in Long. 96. 40. W. Lat. 26. N. after a course of 2000 miles.

NORTH, a department of France, including the chief part of French Flanders, Hainault, and Cambresie. It is 140 miles long, and not above 30 broad. Its extent is about 2320 square miles; and it is the most populous of all the departments of France, except that which contains Paris. Chief rivers the Scarpe, the Scheldt, the Lys, and the Dèule.

NORTHALLERTON, a market and borough town of England, in Yorkshire, on the great road from London to Edinburgh. The church is a Gothic building, in the form of a cross. It sends two members to parliament. Population 2626. 30 miles N. W. York.

NORTHAM, a village of England, near Southampton, on the Itchen.

NORTHAMPTON, an inland county of England, bounded N. by the counties of Leicestershire, Rutland, and Lincoln; E. and S. by those of Cambridge, Huntingdon, Bedford, Buckingham, and part of Oxford; and W. by those of Oxford and Warwick. Its length is about 65 miles, the breadth nowhere exceeding 25 miles, and at an average 15. It is comprised within the meridians of 0. 8. and

1. 20. W. long. and within the parallels of 51. 53. and 52. 40. N. lat. It contains 965 square miles, or about 612,000 acres, with 150 inhabitants to each mile. It is divided into 20 hundreds, and 336 parishes; has one city, Peterborough; three boroughs, Northampton, Brackley, and Higham Ferrers; eight other market towns, viz. Daventry, Kettering, Leicester, Cundle, Rockingham, Rothwell, Thrapston, and Wellingborough; and 551 villages. It sends nine members to parliament. Northamptonshire is proverbially regarded as a fine and pleasant country. It is distinguished from the neighbouring counties by its extensive forests and private woodlands, which are scattered over the face of the country, and add greatly to the variety and picturesque beauty of the scenery. Its surface is considerably diversified, but nowhere so irregular as to prevent the purposes of husbandry and tillage, every hill being cultivated or kept in a state of profitable pasturage. Its chief rivers are the Nen, the Charwell, the Leam, the Avon, the Welland, the Ouse, and the Tone. The climate is mild, and the air is exceedingly pure, and favourable to vegetation. The soil is various, but on the whole fertile and productive. It consists chiefly of strong deep staped clay, light thin reddish loam, rich loam with a mixture of gravel, thin staped light clay, and lastly, fen and meadow land. Except limestone, the mineral productions are few, and of no great value, including neither coal nor any of the metals.

Northamptonshire is chiefly noted as a farming county, and more especially in the department of grazing, which constitutes the capital object of its husbandry, although the raising of grain for exportation is also carried on to a great extent. Of the whole county, 300,000 acres are estimated as arable land, 250,000 in a state of pasturage, and 80,000 in woodlands, and otherwise uncultivated. Horned cattle and other animals are fed in great numbers, and to an extraordinary size, in this county. Calves are also bred in considerable quantities, and being sent out of the county young, are fattened nearer the metropolis. The dairies are numerous and extensive; and large quantities of butter are regularly sent from them to London. The milk is used to fatten hogs for the same market. All the ordinary crops are raised in this county. Wheat and wheat flour are exported in great quantities; also oats and beans. Wood is raised in considerable quantity for the dyers. The forests and woodlands form a remarkable feature in Northamptonshire. The most considerable forest is that of Rockingham, which extends near 20 miles towards the centre of the county. There are two other extensive forests, Whittlebury and Salcey, lying towards the south border of the county. The chases are those of Geddington and Hardly. The parlien woods, or those not subject to the forest laws, are both extensive and numerous, particularly towards the lower parts of the county, and on the borders of the forest of Rockingham. The manufactures of Northamptonshire are very inconsiderable, consisting chiefly in the making of shoes, lace, and woollen stuffs. At Daventry a great number of whips are made; and here is a large manufactory of silk hose. The trade has been greatly facilitated by the canals which have been lately formed in this district. The Nen is navigable, though very imperfectly, to Northampton. Pop. 162,483.

NORTHAMPTON, the chief town of Northamptonshire, on the Nen. It consists of four principal streets meeting at right angles, and various smaller ones branching off from them. The principal streets are wide, commodious, and regular. There were formerly seven parish churches, of which four now remain. That of All Saints consists of one large room, with a square chancel at the east, a tower at the west end, and a dome in the middle, supported on four large columns. St Giles's church, at the east end of the town, is a large building, consisting of a nave, aisles, transept, and tower rising from the centre. St Peter's and St Sepulchre's churches are curious specimens of the ecclesiastical architecture of England. Besides the churches, there are here chapels for Presbyterians, Baptists, Quakers, and Methodists. The other public buildings and institutions are, the general infirmary, begun in 1793; the new county jail; the county-hall, a beautiful building in the Corinthian style; a set of barracks, erected in 1796; a new theatre; and a fine Gothic building called Queen's-cross, erected by Edward I. to the memory of his queen Eleanor. A blue coat school was established here about the year 1719; and there are several other charity schools in the town. The principal manufactures of Northampton are those of boots and shoes, chiefly for exportation; and of lace. It has also some trade in wool combing. It sends two members to parliament: number of voters 1300. Northampton is noted in history for the number of councils and synods held here, for its formidable castle, its numerous monastic foundations, and various remarkable events. Population 10,793. 66 miles N. W. London.

NORTHAMPTON, a county of the United States, on the east side of Pennsylvania. Population 38,145. Chief town Easton.—2d. On the east side of Virginia. Population 7474. Slaves 3350.—3d. In the north part of North Carolina. Population 12,007, including 7258 slaves.—4th. A township and village, capital of Hampshire county, Massachusetts, on Connecticut river, 95 miles W. Boston. Population 2531.—The name of several other townships.

NORTH BERWICK LAW, a conical hill of Scotland, in East Lothian, a land-mark for seamen. Height 940 feet.

NORTH CAPE, the most northern point of land in Europe, in the island of Mageroe, on the coast of Norway. Long. 25. 40. 45. E. Lat. 71. 11. 30. N.

NORTH-EAST, a river of the United States, in Maryland, which flows into the Chesapeake.—The name of several townships.

NORTH FERRY, or NORTH QUEENSFERRY, a village of Scotland, in Fifeshire, opposite Queensferry, on the frith of Forth, to and from which there are regular passage boats.

NORTHFIELD, a township and village of the United States, in Franklin county, Massachusetts. Population 1218. The village is situated on the Connecticut.

NORTH ISLAND, in the Atlantic, at the mouth of the great Pedee, near the coast of South Carolina. Long. 79. 3. W. Lat. 33. 20. N.—The name of various other small islands in the Eastern seas.

NORTH LEACH, a market town of England, in Gloucestershire, near the source of the Leach. It has a church and a free grammar school. Pop. 773. 25 miles E. Gloucester.

NORTH RIVER, a river of the United States, in New Hampshire.—3d, In North Carolina.

—3d, In Massachusetts.—1th, In Virginia.—Also one in Lower Canada.

NORTHOR, a market town of North Wales, in Flintshire. The church is an ancient building. In the neighbourhood are some lead mines. Pop. 741. 3 miles S. Flint.

NORTHERLAND, an extensive, and in many respects a very important and interesting county of England, on the borders of Scotland, bounded E. by the German ocean, N. and N. W. by Scotland, W. by Cumberland, and S. by Durham. Towards its northern extremity it is very narrow from east to west, not exceeding 6 miles at Berwick, 12 about Holy Island, 24 at Alnwick, and at Morpeth 46 miles, and continuing the same to the mouth of the Tyne. Its area is 1850 square miles, or 1,184,000 acres, with 93 inhabitants to each mile. It is divided into six wards, viz. Tindal, Coquetdale, Glendale, Hamborough, Morpeth, and Castleward, and 16 parishes; contains, besides the considerable town of North Shields, 12 market towns, of which Newcastle, the principal town, Hexham, Belford, Morpeth, Wooler, Rothbury, Allendale, Alnwick, and Berwick, are the chief. It sends 8 members to parliament, viz. 2 for the county, 2 for Newcastle, 2 for Morpeth, and 2 for Berwick. The aspect of Northumberland possesses great variety. Along the sea coast it is nearly level. Towards the middle district the surface is more diversified, and thrown into large swelling ridges, formed by the principal rivers; and here the land is well inclosed, and in some places enriched with wood and recent plantations, though the general appearance is destitute of these ornaments. The western part, except a few intervening valleys, is an extensive scene of open mountainous district, where the hand of cultivation is rarely to be traced. In the northern part of the county, between Wooler and Alnwick, these mountains approach very near to the coast, the top of Cheviot, which is the highest of them, not being distant from it above 18 miles. The mountains around Cheviot are the most valuable of the high districts, being in general fine green hills, thrown into a great variety of forms, and inclosing many deep, narrow, and sequestered glens, some of which, towards the top of the mountain, from their magnitude, the solitude which reigns in them, and the dark and craggy appearance of the rocks, from which the waters issue, have an air of great wildness and sublimity. Cheviot is elevated 2658 feet above the level of the sea; Hedge Hope hill 2317; Simonside hill, 1407; Alnwick moor 808; and Blackheadon, near Stamfordham, 646. The chief rivers are the Tweed, the Tyne, the Coquet, the Aln, the Till, the Collier, and Beaumont waters, the Wansbeck, the Blith, and a vast variety of smaller streams. Northumberland is distinguished for its agriculture, which being here conducted on a great scale, and by men of intelligence, enterprise, and capital, has reached a high degree of perfection. Its soil varies through many gradations, from great fertility to a state of irreclaimable barrenness. Of the whole land in the county, about two-thirds are or may be cultivated by the plough, and one-third is in mountainous districts, unfit for tillage. The rearing of stock is a capital object with the farmers, as well as the raising of crops for the market; and it is in preserving a due balance between the arable and grass lands, so as always to have a large breeding live stock, especially of sheep, that the excellence of their management is thought chiefly to consist. The woodlands are not very extensive, but plantations have been begun on a great scale, and are rising in every part of the county. But it is the mineral riches of Northumberland that have chiefly raised it to its present rank and importance, the perfection of its agriculture being rather the effect than the cause of its increasing wealth. Excepting on the Cheviot hills, coal is found over the greater part of Northumberland, especially in the lower district; but the finest kind, which alone is raised for exportation, and goes under the name of Newcastle coals, is confined to a district around that town, called the Coal district. Coal of an inferior quality, and similar to Scots coal, is found and raised in great abundance, chiefly for home consumption, both to the north and west of this formation; and as it is here along that lead veins occur, this district, on the other hand, is termed the lead district. The mineral strata that accompany and alternate with the coal in the Coal district, are chiefly sandstone, or whin, if it be very hard, and slate and clay; and these contain small imbedded portions of various minerals. There are altogether about 25 beds of sandstone, mostly thin. At Gateshead Fell is a bed of whin, 66 feet thick, from which are quarried excellent grindstones, that supply most of Great Britain, and are sent even to the Continent. The coal of the Lead district is of very inferior quality to that of the Coal district; it is also distinguished by the limestone which accompanies it, and which never occurs in any part of the Coal district. The lime-stone found along with the coal is of excellent quality. Besides coal and lime-stone, the Lead district contains sandstones or freestones of various qualities; shell marl in some places, and also slate clay, in which iron ore is found in such abundance as to have been sometimes worked for the metal. The lead which gives name to so extensive a district, is found in veins, traversing chiefly the limestone and sandstone in various parts of the county. The chief mines in Northumberland are those of Allonhead and Allonhead. The manufactures of Northumberland are chiefly confined to the town of Newcastle, and the vicinity of the Tyne. They consist mostly of ship-building, ropemaking, glass-works, potteries, non-foundries, &c. Population 194,965.

NORTHUMBERLAND, a county of the United States, in the central part of Pennsylvania, watered by both branches of the Susquehanna. Population 36,327. Chief town, Sunbury—2d, Of Virginia, west of Chesapeake bay. Population 8308. Slaves 3847.—The name of several townships.

NORTHUMBERLAND ISLAND, near the N. E. coast of New Holland. Long. 149. 47. to 150. 37. E. Lat. 21. 12 to 22 8.

NORTH-WEST TERRITORY, a territory of the United States, not yet assumed as a member of the union, under the designation, and with the privileges of a state. It is bounded N. by Upper Canada and Lake Superior, E. by St Mary's river and Lake Michigan, S. by Indiana and Illinois, W. and S W by the Mississippi, which separates it from Louisiana. It is about 560 miles from north to south, and 360 from east to west; containing about 147,000 square miles. Long. 84. to 98. W. Lat. 41. 45. to 49. 37. N.

NORTHON, two townships of England, in Yorkshire and Herefordshire. Pop 668-573.

NORTHON SOUND, a large bay on the N. W. coast of America, extending to 64. 55 N. Lat. NORWAI, a township of the United States, in Connecticut. Population 2983.

NORWALK ISLANDS, near the coast of Connecticut. Long 72. 22. W. Lat. 41. 4. N.

NORWAY, a kingdom of the north of Europe, united in 1815 to Sweden, extending from the Limesox or Narv, in Lat. 57. 58. 48. to the North cape, in Lat. 71. 11. 30. It is bounded E. by Sweden and Swedish Lapland, W. by the German and Northern oceans, and S. by the narrow sea forming the entrance to the Sound and Baltic. The broadest part is in the south, extending from Lat. 58. to near Lat. 62. and forming an oblong of nearly 300 miles by 280. To the northward of Lat. 62. all the way to the very high latitude of the North cape, the Norwegian territory is a long narrow tract, having the Northern ocean on the west, and Swedish Lapland on the east. Norway is divided into the four governments of Agderhus, Christiania, Bergen, and Drontheim. The last is succeeded by Norrland, also a long narrow province; and the whole is terminated by Linnmark or Norwegian Lapland, a dreary and inhospitable region, forming the northern extremity of Europe. Area 161,000 square miles; population 930,000. The principal towns are, in the south-west, Christiania, Helsingberg, Frederikshall, and Christiansand; on the west coast, Stavanger, Bergen, and Drontheim. The surface of Norway is very uneven, presenting a succession of mountains and valleys; the former in general barren and uninhabited; the latter not deficient in the products of a high latitude. The line of separation between Norway and Sweden is very clearly marked by an immense chain of mountains, extending above a thousand miles from north to south. The rivers of Norway are numerous, of difficult navigation, being either mountainous torrents, or interrupted in the navigation by rapids and falls. Norway has a number of lakes, which are in general valleys, inclosed by mountains. The most remarkable are those of Mjose, Fimund, and Sperdillen. The coast is deeply indented with bays and creeks, and presents also a succession of islands. The climate of Norway is not severe throughout. In the mountains the cold of winter is intense. On the sea coast the atmosphere is softened by the western breeze, and often less cold in the depth of winter than in the interior of Germany. The soil of Norway is often stony and barren. Flax and hemp are raised in many parts of the country; in others barley and oats. On the whole, however, Norway is obliged to make an annual importation of above 200,000 quarters of grain. The pastures, however, thrive better, and cattle are consequently reared and exported in numbers; but the main article of export is timber. The mountains are covered with forests of pine, ash, but in particular of fir, which grows over almost all the country. Norway produces iron, and copper of a very superior quality. It has a silver and a gold mine; but neither of them are productive. The same remark applies to the lead mines; and its marble quarries, though said to be good, are very little wrought. Stone for building, and slate, are in great abundance; and the loadstone, or natural magnet, is also frequently found and exported. It has some large salt-works. The houses of Norway are small, but hardy; the domestic cattle are likewise diminutive. Goats are more common than sheep, and there are very few swine. In Norwegian Lapland, reindeer are found the sole wealth, and indeed the only source of the subsistence of the inhabitants. All the mountains and forests are swarming with hosts of prey, such as bears, wolves, foxes, and roses. The only marks of industry, excepted by Norway, are forges, saw-mills, and potash refineries, and some others. The inhabitants of the towns, except the numerous articles they are in want of. The fisheries are extensive, and many are considered, after timber and iron, the chief support of the export trade. The herring and cod fisheries are the principal branches. Norway, since it has come into the possession of Sweden, is governed as a province of that country, exactly as it was formerly governed as a province of Denmark.

Norwich, a large, populous, and ancient city of England, the chief town of the county of Norfolk, on the river Wensum, which is navigable up to the town, and over which it has no fewer than six bridges, one of them of iron. It extends nearly two miles in length, and about a mile and a quarter in breadth. It had formerly an embattled wall, with 12 gates, and flanked by 40 towers, some remains of which are yet to be seen. The streets in general, except the market-place and St Giles'-street, are narrow and ill disposed; but there are many good buildings in the town, and various improvements have lately been made. The chief public buildings are the castle and the cathedral; but there are, besides, no fewer than 36 churches, various dissenting chapels, and numerous institutions for charitable, benevolent, or other useful purposes. The castle stands in the centre of the town, on an eminence raised partly by art above the adjacent ground, and commanding a fine view of the city. This building was first erected in the sixth century, by the Saxons. The keep, a principal tower, is the only considerable part of the building which now remains. In 1793, a new county jail was begun on the Castle-hill, and joined to the old building on the eastern side. The cathedral is one of the most spacious and handsome buildings of the kind in the kingdom. It was not completed in its present form, till the beginning of the 16th century. The architecture of this noble pile is chiefly in the Norman style, of which the semicircular arch, and large short column, are the leading features. The whole length of the church, from east to west, is 411 feet; of the nave, from western door to transept, 140 feet; the width of transept is 191 feet; and of the nave, with aisles, 72 feet. At the intersection of the transept with the nave and choir, rises a lofty tower, surmounted by a spire, the whole height of which is 316 feet. The bishop's palace stands on the same site with that which was built by the founder of the cathedral. Of the parish churches, the only one deserving particular notice is that of St Peter Mancroft, which is distinguished for its size and architecture. The other public buildings are, the guild-hall, where the assizes and quarter-sessions for the city are held; a St Andrew's hall, a noble building, formerly the conventual church of the benedictine monastery of Blackfriars; the assembly-room, a neat brick building; the theatre, the market-place, and bridge-well, or house of correction, built of flint, and curiously cut into regular little squares, without any appearance of cement. The charitable establishments of Norwich are, the Norfolk and Norwich hospital, a large and elegant brick building; the Norwich dispensary, Doughty's hospital, Bethlehem hospital, or asylum, an excellent institution for lunatics. There is, besides, a great number of other charities and benefactions, numerous charity and Sunday schools, a free grammar-school, and also a public library, and various other institutions for the pursuit of knowledge. Norwich was early famed for its woollen manufactures, which were carried to a great extent, when they received a fatal check from the war begun in 1793, from which they have never thoroughly recovered. The staple articles are bombazines, worsted damasks, flowered satins, and fine cambrics. To these articles have been recently added the manufacture of cottons, shawls, and other fancy goods, both for furniture and dress. The manufacture of cotton thread lace has also been introduced; and the trade in linen, called Suffolk hempen, is in a flourishing state. Norwich sends two members to parliament. Number of voters 5000. Population 50,284. 22 miles W. Yarmouth, and 108 N. E. London. Long. 1. 17. E. Lat. 52. 58. N.

Norwich, a township of the United States, in New London county, Connecticut, on the Thames. It contains a court-house, a jail, and five churches for different denominations of dissenters, and is favourably situated for trade. Population in 1810, 3521.

Norwich, a township and village of the United States, in Chenango county, New York. Population 2550.

Norw, one of the most fertile of the Shetland isles, south-east of Birsay.

NORO, VAL DI, one of the three provinces into which Sicily is divided, forming the south-east portion of the island. Length from east to west 70 miles; breadth about 50. Population nearly 400,000.

NORO, a town in the above province, delightfully situated on an eminence. Of its numerous churches and convents, several are elegantly built. It is chiefly noted for a valuable museum of medallions. 15 miles S. W. Syracuse. Population 16,000.

NORRE DANE DE SIMILLY, a town of France, department of La Manche. Population 1800.—There are various other small towns and villages in France of that name.

NOTTAWAY, a county of the United States, in the south part of Virginia. Pop. 9279. Slaves 6363.—Also a river of Virginia.

NOTTINGHAM, an inland county of England, bounded N. by Yorkshire, E. by Lincolnshire, S. by Leicestershire, and W. by Derbyshire. It has the shape of a long oval. Its extreme length is 50 miles, its greatest breadth 25, and its average breadth 15½. It lies within the meridians of 0. 35. and 1. 14. W. Long., and the parallels of 52. 48. and 53. 32. N. Lat. It contains 774 square miles. It has nine market towns, viz. Nottingham, Newark, East Retford, Bingham, Blyth, Mansfield, Southwell, Tuxford, and Worksop. It sends 8 members to parliament, viz. 2 for the county, 2 for Nottingham, 2 for Newark, and 2 for East Retford. Its aspect is that of a champaign country, having a general inequality of surface, seldom rising to the height of a mountain, but sufficiently irregular and broken to avoid the sameness of a general flat. The principal rivers of Nottinghamshire are, the Trent, the Idle, the Noar, and the Erewash. The climate is mild and salubrious. In regard to soil and cultivation, Nottinghamshire may be divided into four districts, viz. the lime, stone and coal district, the district of sand or gravel, the clay district, and the district along the Trent banks. Of the forest of Sherwood, which anciently extended from Nottingham northwards 35 miles, very little of the wood now remains. The arable lands produce turnips, clover, wheat, barley, and oats; the latter of a remarkably fine quality. More pigeons are supposed to be reared in this district, than any where besides in England. Hops form an article of considerable cultivation in the central parts of the county. Weld for the dyers is partially cultivated. Of the mineral productions of Nottinghamshire, the coal is supposed to be part of the same deposit which is found in Derbyshire, Yorkshire, Durham, and Northumberland. Besides coal, limestone and gypsum are found. Building and paving stone is raised in different parts of the county; and mail is also found in various places. Nottinghamshire has been long noted for its stocking manufactures, of which Nottingham is the principal seat. It has also cotton, worsted, and silk mills, and thread, lace, starch, and sail-cloth manufactories. Potteries have also been established. Its exports are lead, copper, coals, and salt, Staffordshire ware, lime and limestone, chert-stone for the glass manufactories, coarse earthenware, pig-iron, and cast metal goods, oak timber and bark, and sailcloth. The canals in Nottinghamshire and the vicinity have proved of the greatest benefit to the trade, commerce, agriculture, and general prosperity of the county. Pop. 146,873.

NOTTINGHAM, a large and populous town of England, chief town of the above county, is situated on a rocky eminence, in a line with the course of the Trent, which is crossed opposite the town by a bridge of 19 arches. The little river Lene runs into the Trent close to the town. The town stands on a hill so steep, that the ground floors of the houses towards the top of it are considerably elevated above the roofs of those at the bottom. The streets in general are narrow, and not formed on any regular plan; but considerable improvements have lately been made. The ancient walls and gates of the town are now entirely destroyed. Of the public buildings in Nottingham, the castle is the most conspicuous. It is a large and handsome building, situated near the site of the ancient fortress of the duke of Newcastle, during the short reign of James II. It stands on a rise, the basement, which supports an ornamental front of the Corinthian order, with a grand double flight of steps leading to the apartments. The ancient fortress was founded by William the Conqueror, and was then thought impregnable. Behind the castle is the park, of 130 acres, used for pasture and gardens. At the upper end of it, adjoining the Derby road, are the barracks, a spacious range of brick buildings. Nottingham contains three parish churches, St Mary's, St Peter's, and St Nicholas, besides the extra parochial church of St James. St Mary's, the principal church, is built in the collegiate style, in the town of a cross, with a very august tower in the centre. St Peter's stands near the market-place, and is a handsome building, with a lofty spire. St Nicholas' church, erected in 1678, has a light and airy appearance; as also St James's church, erected in 1808. There are, besides, churches for the Presbyterians, Independents, Baptists of different descriptions, three for Wesleyan Methodists, one for Quakers, one for Roman Catholics, &c. The principal public charities are Plumtree's hospital, Collin's hospital, the Lambley hospital, and a variety of others. The workhouses are very clean and commodious. Of the other benevolent institutions, the most important is the general infirmary, founded in 1781, a most spacious and elegant building; also the lunatic asylum. There are various public and charity schools. The market-place has been long admired, and is now certainly one of the most spacious in the kingdom. The other public buildings are, the new exchange, a very handsome building of four stories in height; the county-hall, a handsome building, erected in 1770; the town-hall, for the town and county of Nottingham; the county prison, the town and county jail, and the town bridewell. The theatre is a plain building. The staple manufacture is that of stockings, chiefly the finer kinds, as those of silk and cotton. At present the number of frames, &c. amounts to upwards of 10,000. Several large mills have been erected in the vicinity of the town, for the spinning of silk and cotton. There are also manufactures of lace for veils, shawls, &c. The bone lace trade was also at one time a source of profitable industry to many females, but has since declined. These finer manufactures being easily carried off, are chiefly conveyed by land. A considerable amount is exported to Europe, America, and the West Indies. Nottingham has long derived benefit from the extension of the railway, having become a great depot of goods for the adjacent country. At each two members in parliament; the number of voters is nearly 4000. Nottingham is a place of great antiquity. Pop. 146,873. 13 miles N. by W. from London. Long. 1. 10. W. Lat. 52. 50. N.

NOTTINGHAM, a town of the United States, in Prince George county, Maryland, the name also of various townships.

NOVALE, a well-built town of Austria. Italy. Pop. 2500. 11 miles S. by W. Treviso.

NOVARA, a province of the north-west of Italy, in the Marchion Milanese. It is divided into Upper and Lower, and contains 226,000 inhabitants, on a surface of 1400 square miles.

NOVARA, the capital of the above province, defended by a castle. The churches entitled to attention are the cathedral, and those of St Gaudenzo and the Dominicans. Novara contains a number of handsome private buildings. Population 15,000.

NOVA SCOTIA, in its most extensive meaning, a province of British America, bounded N. W. by Canada. N. E. by the gulf of St Lawrence, S. E. by the Atlantic, and S. by the Atlantic ocean and the United States of America. It was in the year 1784 divided into two provinces, viz. New Brunswick and Nova Scotia proper. Nova Scotia, in this limited sense, is a peninsula, joined to the continent by a narrow isthmus, at the north-east extremity of the bay of Fundy, and is about 240 miles in length from S. W. to N. E. and from 30 to 60 in breadth, and lies to the west of New Brunswick. The winter is of almost insupportable length and severity. The soil in most parts is thin and barren, the corn it produces, of a shrivelled kind, like rye, and the grass intermixed with a cold spongy moss. Halifax is the capital, founded in 1749.

NOVA ZEMBLA, a very large island in the Arctic ocean, belonging to the Russian government of Archangel, from which it is separated by the straits of Waigatz. It extends from 63° to the very high lat. of 76° N. and is computed at 510 miles in length, and 210 in breadth. No part of this dreary and inhospitable region has any permanent inhabitants; but particular tracks of the south and west coasts are visited by fishermen and hunters sent out by the merchants of Archangel and Mezen.

NOVELLARA, a town of Italy, 16 miles N. N. W. Modena. Pop. 4000.

NOVGOROD, or NOVGOROD, a large government or province in the north-west of European Russia, to the east of the governments of Petersburg and Pskov. It lies between 20. 50. and 38. 50. of E. long. and 57. 30. and 68. 30. of N. lat. Area 55,000 square miles. Population 780,000.

NOVGOROD, or NOVGOROD-VELIKI (the Great Novgorod), an extensive, though no longer populous town, of the north-west of European Russia, the capital of the above government, at the extremity of the lake Ilmen, and divided into two parts by the Volchov; one called the Torgaria, or the Market Town; the other the Sophiskaia or quarter of St Sophia. The latter contains the Kremlin or citadel, in which is the ancient palace of the czars, now in a state of dilapidation; and the cathedral of St Sophia, a large building, with brazen gates. The other part of the town contains the building occupied by the governor; but the rest of the habitations are an irregular collection of wooden structures. Novgorod-Veliki is one of the most ancient cities of the empire, having been founded in the 5th century. At present it consists of small scattered groups of miserable houses, separated by ruins which attest its former magnitudo. Population 8000. 112 miles S. S. E. St Petersburg. Long. 31. 10. 30. E. Lat. 58. 31. 32. N.

NOVGOROD-SIEVSKOI, a town of European Russia, government of Czernigoy. Pop. 3000. 83 miles E. N. E. Czernigoy.

NOVI, a town of Italy, in the Marchion states, at the foot of the Appennines. In front of the principal church is a public square. The castle is situated in an elevated position. The chief manufactures are of silk. It is noted for a sanguinary battle in August 1799, between the French under Jourdan, and the Austro-Russian forces. Population 6400. 23 miles N. by E. Genoa.

NOVI-BAZAR, a town of European Turkey, in Servia, near the Orseco. Population 8000. 85 miles S. Belgrade.

NOVOT OSKOL, a town of European Russia. Population 2000. 90 miles S. E. Kursk.

NOVGOROD, a town of European Russia, 160 miles N. N. W. Cherson. Pop. 2400.

NOVO-SITANSAROV, a fortified town of Russia, 21 miles S. S. W. Pultava. Pop. 3700.

NOUVION, a town of France, department of the Aisne. Population 2600.

NOXONTON, a village of the United States, in Newcastle county, Delaware.

NOYA, an ancient town of Spain, in Gallicia, on a bay of the Atlantic.—Also a branch of the Llobregat, in Catalonia.

NOREN, a town of France, on the Sarthe, 5 miles S. W. Le Mans. Population 1800.

NOYEN, a town of France, department of the Yonne, on the Serein. Pop. 3000.

NOYON, a town of France, department of the Oise, on the Verre. It has manufactures of linen, leather, hats, and stockings. Population 6000. 70 miles N. by E. Paris.

NOZAY, a town of France, department of the Loire Inferieure. Population 2100.

NUBIA, an extensive country of Africa, inclosed between Egypt, the Nile, Abyssinia, and the Red sea. It is difficult to say what constitutes the uniting principle in this vast region. It is covered by numerous tribes of independent Arabs, some carrying on trade in towns, others cultivating the ground, and a still greater number roaming over the extensive wastes which cover this part of Africa. With the exception of the immediate banks of the Nile, which are rendered fertile by laborious irrigation, Nubia consists almost entirely of sandy and rocky deserts. The country on the Nile is split into a series of little independent kingdoms, each governed by its own Melek or chief. As the Nile here seldom or never overflows its banks, the territory is irrigated exclusively by wheels, which raise the waters to the adjacent grounds. It produces chiefly the grain called showra, also barley, French beans, lentils, sometimes water-melons, and tobacco. No fruit trees are cultivated except palms, though the climate seems very well adapted to them. The climate of Nubia, though in summer intensely hot, is remarkably healthy, in consequence, probably of the extreme dryness of the atmosphere. The houses of the Nubians are either of mud or loose stones. The last, being for the better inhabitants, are usually two together, one for the male, and the other for the female members of the family. The Nubians are in general well made, strong, and muscular, with fine features. The women are not handsome, but prettily well made, and possess in general sweet countenances, and are modest and reserved in their manners. The Nubians are seldom unarmed, and the first purchase made by a boy is a short crooked knife, tied over the elbow, and ready to be drawn on the slightest quarrel. One of the most remarkable features of this region consists in the magnificent remains of antiquity with which it is covered.

Another most extensive part of Nubia consists of the great track of country which extends from the Nile to the Red sea. It is described as a most complete desert, not containing a single permanent abode, but only interspersed with oasis or valleys, affording some trees, shrubs, and grass, with a few wells or rills. These are resorted to by the wandering Arabs, and by the caravans. At the southern extremity of this desert is the district of Berber, consisting of four large villages, employed chiefly in carrying on the trade of Egypt and Arabia with the interior of Africa. The people are a very handsome race. Their manners are licentious; and few traders pass through Berber without taking a mistress, were it only for a fortnight. Drunkenness is the constant companion of this debauchery. These dissolute habits produce their natural effects on the people, every thing discreditable to humanity being found in their character. The chief trade of the Berber district, and indeed of all Nubia, consists in slaves imported from the interior of Africa, and either conveyed northwards into Egypt, or across the Red sea by Souakin and Jidda. The annual import is estimated at 5000.

NUNDEA, the ancient capital of a district of the same name, in Bengal, situated between the 22d and 24th degrees of N. lat.

NUTIL SOUS PASSAVANT, a town of France, 10 miles S. W. Saumur. Population 2000.

NUIS, or NUIRE, a town of France, department of the Cote d'Or. Population 2500.

NULLE, a town of Spain, 35 miles N. N. E. Valencia. Population 3000.

NUN, NOON, or WARRANNOON, an extensive country of Africa, situated on the Atlantic, and forming nominally the most southern part of the empire of Morocco. Gum, wax, and black feathers, are the only exportable commodities.

NUN, a river of Africa, which traverses the above district.

NUNDYNDROOG, a celebrated fortress of Hindostan, in Mysore. Long. 77. 53. E. Lat. 13. 22. N.

NUNSTON, a well built market town of England, in Warwickshire, on the Anker. The church has a square tower. Here is a good free school. It has a manufactory of ribbons. Pop. 6616. 8 miles N. E. Coventry.

NUNEX, NUO, a river of Western Africa, which falls into the Atlantic, Lat. 19. 20. N.

NUYOATE, a considerable village, or rather suburb of Haddington, in Scotland.

NUNIA, a village of Irak Arabi, on the bank of the Tigris, opposite to Mosul.

NUREMBERG, a large and ancient town of Germany, in Franconia, on the Pegnitz, which divides it into two parts nearly equal. It is surrounded by an old wall and ditch, with round towers at intervals. The form of the town approaches to a square; several of the streets are wide, but not handsome, being crooked and irregular. Of the public edifices at Nuremberg, the chief are the castle or fort called Reichsfeite, the occasional residence of emperors in the middle ages. The council-house, built in 1610, is a fine old structure; the church of St Sebald, also a good building, is beside it. In the public library is a good collection of manuscripts and early editions of printed books. The church of St Egidien, rebuilt in 1718, and called the new church, has elegant columns, and a beautiful altar-piece by Van Dyke. Nuremberg has an alms-office, a foundling hospital, and a house of correction. It was at an early period a noted place for working in iron, brass, and other metals. Nuremberg wares have long comprised a great variety of articles, such as musical and mathematical instruments, copper-plates, pins, needles, spectacles, and toys of all kinds, whether of hardware or wood. The printing and bookselling business is carried on here to a considerable extent. Nuremberg appears to have been most prosperous in the 15th and 16th centuries. Population 27,000. 100 miles N. by W. Munich. Long. 11. 4. 15. E. Lat. 49. 24. 35. N.

NURTINGEN, a town of Germany, on the Neckar, 14 miles S. E. Stuttgart. Pop. 5400.

NUSSCO, a town of Naples, 46 miles W. by N. Naples. Population 3000.

NYDE, or ICA, a small river of England, in Yorkshire, which falls into the Ouse.

NYXUONG, a town of Denmark, on the island of Funen, opposite the island of Zealand. It is here that ships passing through the Belt pay toll. Population 2000.

NYXKROING, a town of Denmark, island of Falster. Pop. 1100. 69 miles S. W. Copenhagen.—2d. Another in the island of Zealand.

NYRAXVHART, a town of Hungary, palatinate of Schemen. It has churches for Lutherans, Calvinists, and Catholics. Population 6100. 20 miles N. Debreczin.

NYRARIPO, a seat town of Sweden, the capital of a government of the same name, and of Sudermania, on a bay of the Baltic. Pop. 2400. 40 miles S. W. Stockholm.

OLANDA, a province of European Russia, in the government of Finland, bounded by the gulf of Finland, Carolia, Tavastland, and Finland proper. Its area is 4660 square miles. Population 115,000.

ONEN, a small town of Switzerland, canton of Val d'Aoste, on the lake of Geneva. Population 1800.

NYSTAD, a petty town of European Russia, 140 miles N. W. Petersburg.

NYSTAD, a seaport of European Russia, in Finland. Population 1900.

O.

ONTARIO, a river of North America, which enters the Mississippi.

OOKA, the capital of a district of Hindostan, long celebrated as the residence of a gang of pirates. Long. 69. 36. E. Lat. 22. 14. N.

OAKHAM, chief town of the county of Rutland, in England. The church is a fine building, with a lofty spire. Population 2100. 95 miles N. by W. London.

OAKHAMPTON, an ancient market town of England, in Devonshire, near the source of the river Oak, on the borders of Dartmoor Forest, and on the great road from Exeter to Cornwall. It is an ancient town, and at the time of the Domesday survey, had a market and four burgesses. It was then held by Baldwin de Brionnis, a Norman, who built the castle. The ruins of its once magnificent castle are still standing about a mile from the town. It has a manufacture of serge, and sends two members to parliament. Population 1907. 24 miles W. Exeter.

OAKINGHAM, or WORKINGHAM, a market town of England, in Berkshire. Population 1512.

OAKMULGEE, a river of Georgia, which joins the Oconee to form the Altamaha.

OAK CREEK, a river of the United States, which enters the Musquahannah.

OAXACA, or QUAXACA, an intendancy or province of Mexico, bounded N. by the intendancy of Vera Cruz, E. by the kingdom of Guatemala, W. by the province of Puebla, and S. for a length of coast of 11 leagues, by the Pacific ocean. Pop. 531,000.

OAXACA, the capital of the last mentioned province, 230 miles south of the city of Mexico, in the delightful valley of Guaxaca. It is watered by a beautiful river. The town is built in the form of an oblong square. The streets are wide and well paved. The town-house in the great square is built with stone of a sea-green colour. Population 24,000.

OBAN, a village of Scotland, in Argyllshire, situated on a fine bay of a semicircular form, in the sound of Bute. It has risen rapidly within the last 60 years, and is well situated for trade. 33½ miles W. Inverary.

OBEN, or OBRA, a small river of Prussia, in Pomerania, which runs into the Oder.

OBENKATZEN, a large village of Germany, in Bavaria. Population 3000.

OBENHART, a river of Germany, which falls into the lake of Constance.

OBENHART, a town of Bavaria, in the Tyrol, 78 miles S. W. Munich. Pop. 1800.

ONZ, a great river of Asiatic Russia, which rises in 52° N. lat., and traversing the whole of the government of Tobolsk, falls into the Northern ocean, after an entire course of upwards of 2000 miles.

ORIBOS, a town of Portugal, 44 miles N. Lisbon. Population 3000.

OROTAU, a town of European Russia, government of Kursk. Population 4400.

ORRA, a small river of Prussian Poland, which falls into the Wartha.

ORU, or ORUY, an island in the Eastern sea, 60 miles long and 20 broad.

ORU, a river of Spain, in Old Castile, which falls into the Ebro.

ORONA, a town of Spain, the capital of La Mancha. It is a very old place, fortified in former ages, though still preserving part of its ancient walls. It is in a state of complete decay. The manufactures are silk, leather, and soap. A battle was fought here in 1810 between the French and Spaniards. Population 5000. 30 miles S. S. E. Madrid.

ORATAMOO, a river of the United States, in Louisiana. It joins the Ouachitta.

ORCAOKI, an island near the coast of North Carolina, 10 miles long and 3 wide.

ORCONI, a river of Georgia, which joins the Ocmulgee, to form the Altamaha.

ORCONAN, a river of the United States, in Virginia, which runs into the Potomac.

ORCHIL, a range of lofty mountains in Scotland, in Perthshire and Fife.

ORCHID, a town of European Turkey, in Albania. Population 6000.

ORCHERTH, a town of Bavarian Franconia, on the Main. Population 2000.

ORCE, a river of England, in Berkshire. It joins the Thames—another in Devonshire.

ORCE, a considerable river of Germany, in Saxony, which falls into the Aller.

ORCHARO ORLEN, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania. It joins the Susquehanna.

ORCHAKOV, a town of European Russia, government of Cherson, near the mouth of the Dnieper. It was never a place of great size; and since the building of Odessa, it has greatly decayed. It was once the object of obstinate contests between the Turks and Russians. Pop. 1000. 64 miles W. by S. Cherson.

ORCHODZ, a village of England, in Cheshire. Population 1142.

ORCHAK, a river of Portugal, in Alentejo, which falls into the Atlantic.

ODENKIRCHEN, a town of Germany, 13 miles W. S. W. Düsseldorf. Pop. 4000.

ODENSEE, a town of Denmark, and capital of the island of Funen, on a river which runs into a large bay, about a mile from the town, noted as a place for the good education of its inhabitants, and for its manufactures of woollens, leather, and soap. Population 6000. 86 miles W. S. W. Copenhagen.

ODER, a great river in the east of Germany, the course of which is chiefly in the Prussian states. It rises in Moravia, 18 miles N. E. Olmutz, enters Silesia, flows through that province, Brandenburg, and Pomerania, forms the large maritime lake, called the Haff, and runs into the Baltic by three mouths, called the Preen, the Swine, and the Dnysva.

ODERZO, a town of Austria Italy. Population 3400. 25 miles N. N. E. Venice.

ODESSA, a flourishing seaport of European Russia, government of Cherson, on a small bay of the Black sea, between the mouths of the Dniester and the Dniéper. The foundation of this place was laid by the empress Catharine, in 1792, after the peace of Jassy. It has since flourished greatly, and has now risen to be a seaport of great importance; containing in 1804 15,000, and in 1820 36,000 inhabitants. It is fortified in the modern style, and has on the east side a citadel that commands the port, which is artificial, and adapted for the reception of about 300 vessels. A row of barracks forms a line between the harbour and the town. A light-house has been erected on a projecting point on the south side of the bay. The roadstead is very extensive, and the anchorage safe in summer.

The town of Odessa is neatly built, the streets being wide, straight, and crossing each other at right angles; but, until paved, they will be dusty in summer, and dirty in winter. The churches are seven in number. The other principal buildings are the admiralty-court, the custom-house, and the hospital, all adjoining the harbour; the exchange and the theatre. The establishments for education are a lyceum, on the plan of those in France, and schools for trade and navigation; also schools for the instruction of girls. Odessa being occasionally resorted to by Polish families for sea-bathing, public baths have been constructed. The chief disadvantages of the place are the scarcity of wood and water. Odessa has been declared a free port. The great article of export is corn from the Ukraine and neighbouring provinces. About 800 vessels arrive yearly. Brewing and distilling are carried on on a large scale; and there are manufactures of woollens, silk, gunpowder, and soap. Long. 30. 37. 30. E. Lat. 46. 30. N.

ODHORE, a town of Hindostan, province of Malabar. Long. 74. 20. E. Lat. 23. 32. N.

ODON, the capital of a district of Hispania, on the Banas river. Long. 74. 5. E. Lat. 38. 2. N.

ODON, a town of Spain, in Seville. It falls into the river of Spain.

ODINAM, a market town of England, in Hants. It has still the remains of its castle. The celebrated grammarian William Lilly, was born here in the year 1466. The inhabitants spin worsted and wind silk. Pop. 2423.

ODRAU, a town of Austrian Silesia, on the Oder. Population 2200.

ODELZEM, a town of the Netherlands, in West Flanders. Population 3000.

ODENBURG, the capital of a palatinate of the same name, in Hungary. It is neatly built, has one Lutheran and two Catholic churches, a Catholic and Lutheran school, and 12,500 inhabitants. It has a manufacture of fine woollen; also a sugar refinery. 37 miles S. S. E. Vienna.

ODENBRODE, St. a town of North Brabant, on the Dommel. Population 2800.

ODEBRAN, a town of Saxony, 27 miles W. S. W. Dresden. Population 2000.

ODERFOLD, a village of Denmark, in Zealand, 9 miles from Copenhagen.

ODERINGEN, a town of Germany, on the Ohr, 38 miles N. N. E. Stuttgart. Pop. 3400.

ODELAND, a long and narrow island in the Baltic, on the south-east coast of Sweden. It is 70 miles in length, but only six in breadth; area 300 square miles. Pop. 22,000.

ODLS, a town of Prussian Silesia, and the capital of a principality of that name, on a small river of the same name, 10 miles E. N. E. Breslau. Population 3300.

OELESE, LANGEN, a village of Prussian Silesia. Population 2000.

OELESNITZ, a town of Saxony, on the Elster, 76 miles S. W. Dresden. Pop. 2800.

OESEL, a considerable island in the Baltic, at the mouth of the gulf of Riga, belonging to Russia. Length 70 miles; breadth at one place above 50, and at another not above 2 or 3 miles; area 1144 square miles; population, including the small adjoining islands of Moen and Ranoë, 35,000.

OESTRICK, a well built town of Germany, duchy of Nassau. Population 1600.

OESTRINGEN, a town of Germany, 14 miles E. Spire. Population 1600.

OEZBEHEM, a town of West Flanders, 25 miles E. Ypres. Population 2100.

OEYTING, NEW, a town of Bavaria, 40 miles E. by N. Munich. Population 1500.

OEYTINGEN, capital of a principality of the same name, in Germany, on the Wertitz, 60 miles N. N. W. Munich. Pop. 3200.

OEX, CHATEAU D', a town of the Swiss canton of Vaud, 6 miles W. by S. Genéva. Population 2300.

OETRAS, a small town of Portugal, mouth of the Tagus, 8 miles E. Lisbon.

OFANTO, the modern name of the Aufidus. It falls into the Adriatic.

OFFENBACH, a neatly built town of Germany, on the Main. It has three Protestant churches, a synagogue, and a palace for the prince. It manufactures snuff and tobacco, wax, japanned goods, musical instruments, and carriages. Population 6000. 4 miles E. S. E. Frankfurt.

OFFENBACH, a village of the Bavarian circle of the Rhine. Population 1200.

OFFENBURG, a walled town of Baden, 11 miles S. E. Strasburg. Population 8900.

ODDENSEBURG, a thriving village of the United States, in New York, 212 miles N. W. Albany.

OGECHEE, a river of the United States, in Georgia, which falls into Okechew sound at Hardwick.

OGLETHORPE, a county of the United States, in the north-west part of Georgia. Population 12,297, including 5435 slaves.

OGUISO, a considerable river of Italy, which joins the Po, 8 miles from Mantua.

OGUELLA, a small town in the south of Portugal, in Alentejo.

OHAIN, a large village of South Brabant. Population 1000.

OHETEROA, an island, about twelve miles in circumference, in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 150. 47. W. Lat. 22. 27. S.

OHETVAHOA, an island in the South Pacific ocean, 15 or 16 leagues in circumference.

OHIO, one of the United States of America, bounded N. by Michigan territory, E. by Pennsylvania, S. by the river Ohio, which separates it from Virginia and Kentucky, and W. by Indiana. Long. 80. 35. to 84. 37. W. Lat. 33. 30. to 42. N.; 316 miles long, and 216 broad, containing 39,120 square miles. It is divided into 82 counties. The interior and northern parts of the country, bordering on Lake Erie, are generally level, and in some places marshy. Nearly one-third of the eastern and south-eastern part is very hilly and broken. The hills are exceedingly numerous, but they seldom rise into considerable mountains. Along the rivers the soil is remarkably fertile, consisting of rich and luxuriant meadows. Wheat is the staple production. Other sorts of grain, various kinds of fruit, grass, hemp, and flax, are extensively cultivated. From 70 to 100 bushels of Indian corn, it is said, have in many instances been produced in a year, from one acre. Coal is found in great quantities in the eastern parts. Iron ore has been discovered. Salt springs are found on the banks of several of the rivers. The climate is generally mild, though in winter the mercury sometimes falls below zero, while the greatest heat of summer is 98 degrees. The woods abound with deer, wild turkeys, geese, ducks, pheasants, and partridges. The bear and deer still inhabit the forests. The rivers are stocked with fish. There are academies and schools in different parts. The rivers which flow into Lake Erie on the north are Maumee, Raisin, Huron, Vermillion, River, Cayuga, Grand, and Ashtabula; those in the south flowing into the Ohio are the Muskingum, Hocking, Little and Great Miami. The Auglaize and St. Mary's, in the western part of the state, are branches of the Mahoning. Columbus is the seat of government. Cincinnati is much the largest town. The other most considerable towns are Chillicothe, Steubenville, Zanesville, Marietta, Dayton, New Lancaster, New Lebanon, St. Clairville, Urbana, Lebanon, Chilesville, and Gallipolis. There are, besides, a number of other flourishing towns. Various manufactures have been established, cotton, wool, hemp, flax, iron, glass, and pottery. Steam-boats of a large size, and common in every respect, are constantly plying on the Ohio. Ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent on the Ohio. Population 1,453,365; in 1810, 930,780; in 1814, 1,347,000.

OHIO, a great river of the United States, which is formed by the junction of the Alleghany and the Monongahela, at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania; and which, after a westerly west course of 842 miles, joins the Mississippi 193 miles below the Missouri, in Lat. 38. 58. W. Lat. 37. N. The Ohio is a beautiful river, its current is gentle, its waters clear, and it is nowhere broken by any considerable falls, except at Louisville. This river varies in breadth from 400 to 1400 yards. Including its windings, it is 1188 miles from Pittsburg to its mouth. Steam-boats are now employed on this river with great advantage. The principal towns on the Ohio, below Pittsburg, are Steubenville, Wheeling, Marietta, Gallipolis, Maysville, Cincinnati, Louisville, and Jeffersonville.

OHIO, a county of the United States, in the north-west part of Virginia. Population 8175. Slaves 440. Chief town Wheeling. 2d, In the west part of Kentucky, on the Ohio. Population 3792, including 100 slaves. It is the name of various townships.

OHITTANOO, an island in the South Pacific ocean, 21 miles in circumference.

OHILAU, a town of Silesia, on the Ohlau, 14 miles S. E. Breslau. Population 2890.

OHILAU, a river of Prussian Silesia, which rises near Bernsdorf, and falls into the Oder.

OHIOPEE, a river of the United States, in Georgia, which runs into the Alabama.

OHUNDSUFF, a walled town of Germany, duchy of Saxe-Gotha. Population 4200.

OHRE, a small river of Prussian Saxony, which joins the Elbe.

OHANNAO, a town of Bavarian Franconia, on the Altmühl. Population 2700.

OREN, a river of Scotland, in Inverness-shire, which falls into Loch Ness.

OICKEL, a river of Scotland, in Ruthven-shire, which falls into the Firth of Forth.

OIGON, a small river in the east of France. It falls into the Seine.

OHIO CREEK, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania. It joins the Alleghany.

OHUSCHOW, a town of the Netherlands, in North Brabant, 23 miles E. S. E. Brabant. Population 4500.

OHICANARY, a river of Louisiana, which enters the Mississippi, in Lat. 31. 44. N.

OISE, a department of France, including portions of the old provinces of the Isle of France and Picardy, and bounded by the department of the Somme, of the Aisne, and of the vicinity of the Seine. Population near 400,000; surface 2400 square miles. The principal rivers are the Oise, Aureq, the Aisne, the Epte, the Thierain, and the Breche. ORSE, a considerable river of France, which falls into the Seine.

OSTRIN'S TOWN, a town of the island of Barbadoes, in a bay to which it gives name.

OKA, a considerable river of European Russia, which joins the Volga.

OKA, a small river of Asiatic Russia, which falls into the Amur.

OKHOTZK, one of the four circles in the government of Irkoutsk, in Asiatic Russia. It forms a maritime territory, extending along the gulfs of the Eastern ocean called the seas of Okhotzk, of Kamtschatka, and of Anadir. The town of this name contains only about 170 houses. It has a church, some magazines, and a double row of shops. It is supported by being the channel of trade between Irkoutsk and Kamtschatka. Long. 142. 44. E. Lat. 59. 20. N.

OKHOTZK, SEA OF, a large gulf of the Eastern seas, enclosed between Kamtschatka, the circle of Okhotzk, part of Chinese Tartary, and Saghalien.

OKI, an island of Japan, 60 miles in circumference, near the N. W. coast of Niphon.

OKWA, a small and well built town of Moldavia, 100 miles S. S. W. Jassy.

OLBERSHAUSEN, a well built town of Saxony, circle of the Erzgebirge. Population 1800.

OLBERSBONE, a town of Austrian Silesia, on the Little Oppo. Population 1700.—2d, (Upper and Lower), two large villages of Saxony. Population 1800.

OLINGHAM, a hamlet of England, in the county of Worcester.

OLINGBY UPON SEVERN, a hamlet of England, Gloucestershire. Population 528.

OLDENBURG, a grand duchy of Germany, consisting of several scattered portions, chiefly in the north-west of the empire. The principal part is Oldenburg proper. It is bounded N. by the German ocean, E., W., and even S. by portions of the Hanover territory. Area, including the principality of Eutin, and lordship of Birkenfeld, 2623 square miles, and 218,000 inhabitants. The chief towns are Oldenburg the capital, Elsfleth, and Varel. The grand duchy proper consists almost entirely of level ground, and in some places on the coast, is so low, that it requires large dikes, as in Holland, to prevent inundations. The chief rivers are the Weser, the Hunte, and the Delme. The grand duke of Oldenburg is a member of the German body. In 1810 he was expelled from all his possessions, by Bonaparte; but after the battle of Leipzig in 1813, he returned, and at the congress of Vienna was entitled grand duke.

OLDENBURG, capital of the above duchy, on the river Hunte, 82 miles W. N. W. Hanover. It has 3 churches, 3 hospitals, a house of correction, &c. The chief trade is in wool. Population 5000. Long. 8. 11. 6. E. Lat. 53. 60. N.

OLDENBURG, a town of Denmark, in the duchy of Holstein. Population 1100.

OLDENZAAL, a town of the Netherlands, 30 miles N. E. Zutphen. Pop. 2100.

OLDESDORF, a town of Denmark, on the Trave, 15 miles W. Labec. Pop. 1700.

OLDHAM, a populous manufacturing town of England, Lancashire, on the Medlock, near its source. It has increased very rapidly within the last 50 years. The manufactures consist chiefly of fustians and hats, and cotton spinning. It has a large and ancient church, and several churches for dissenters. Pop. 21,662. 7½ miles N. E. Manchester.

OLD HANNOVA, a bay on the south coast of Jamaica, west of Port Royal.

OLDLAND, a township of England, county of Gloucester. Population 4207.

OLD ROAD TOWN, a town of the island of St Christopher, 5 miles W. Basse Terre.

OLD TOWN, and OLD TOWN HANNOVA, a seaport of the United States, in Duke's county, Massachusetts, on the east part of Martin's Vineyard. Population 1375. It is more commonly called Edgartown. Near the harbour is a handsome village, containing 80 or 90 houses. 87 miles S. Boston.

OLD TOWN CREEK, a river of North Carolina, which runs into Cape Fear river.

OLEAN, or OIL CREEK, a river of the United States, which runs into the Allegany.

OLEKMA, a river of Asiatic Russia, government of Irkoutsk, which joins the Lena.

OLEKMINSK, a fort and small town in the government of Irkoutsk, in Asiatic Russia. It has a church and 30 houses. 692 miles N. E. Irkoutsk.

OLEKON, an island on the south-west coast of France, opposite to the mouth of the Charente, separated from the continent by a narrow channel called Pertuis de Maubuisson. Population 19,000.

OLEMON, a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Population 5500.

OLEVANO, a town of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 2100.

OLEVOUX, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Population 1800.

OLIFANT'S RIVER, a considerable river of the territory of the Cape of Good Hope.

OLIVA, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 36 miles S. Valencia. Population 5000.

OLIVARES, a town of Spain, in Old Castile, 20 miles N. Madrid.

OLIVENZA, a fortified town of Spain, in Estremadura. Population 4500.

OLIVET, a town of France, department of the Loiret. Population 3100.

OLIVETO, a town of Naples, 45 miles N. E. Policastro. Population 4000.

OLIVETO, a town of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 3250.

OLLENA, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 6 miles S. San Felipe. Population 4000.

OLLIVULES, a town of France, 4 miles W. Toulon. Population 2600.

OLMEDO, a town of Spain, in Valladolid, on the Adagui. Population 3000.

OLMETZ, a circle of Moravia, comprising part of the country adjoining to the county of Glatz. Area 2020 square miles; population 317,300.

OLMUTZ, a strongly fortified and well built town of Moravia, on the March, by which it is almost surrounded. The houses are high and gloomy. The university of Olmutz is now replaced by a lyceum or high school. Olmutz is an archbishop's see, and one of the richest ecclesiastical benefices of the empire. The principal public buildings are the hospital for lying-in women and orphans, the cathedral, and the riding academy. It was unsuccessfully besieged by Frederick II. in 1758. Pop. 11,000. 100 miles N. N. E. Vienna. Long. 17° 9' 15" E. Lat. 49° 33' 45" N.

OLNEY, a market town of England, in Buckinghamshire. It consists of one long street. The church is a spacious building, ornamented with a tower and beautiful spire. Population 2530. 12 miles S. E. Northampton.

OLONA, a tributary of the Po, in Italy.

OLONETZ, a very extensive government in the north of European Russia, lying to the south of that of Archangel, and to the east of Finland, between 29. 40. and 46. 20. of E. long. and 59. 40. and 65. 37. of N. lat. Area 87,500 square miles; population 282,000.

OLONETZ, the chief town of the government of the same name, 84 miles N. E. St Petersburg. Population 2800.

OLOR, a manufacturing town of Catalonia, on the Fluvia, 20 miles W. N. W. Gerona. It has 7 squares, 3 churches, 2 monasteries, and a large hospital. Population 15,000.

OLSE, a small river of Upper Silesia, which falls into the Oder.

OLVIOROL, a town of European Russia, government of Cherson, on the Bog. Population 2700.

OLYKA, a town of Russian Poland, in Volhynia. Population 3600.

OLYMPUS, a celebrated mountain of Thessaly, 6000 feet high.

OMAGH, a town of Ireland, county of Tyrone, 14 miles S. Strabane.

OMAR, a village of Upper Egypt, distinguished by its ancient remains.

OMAR, an island in the Eastern seas, 20 miles W. Timor.

OMASONE, a river of Tuscany, which falls into the Mediterranean.

OMÈS, St., a strongly fortified town of France, department of the Puy de Calais. It is built with tolerable regularity, the principal streets being broad and spacious; but they are in general bordered with low mean looking houses. The only square in St Omer is the Place de l'Archevêque. Outside of its walls is the town-hall. Of the public walks the most frequented are the ramparts, the borders of the canal, and the avenue of the gate leading towards Calais. The city public buildings worth notice are two fine Gothic churches, the cathedral, and Abbé of St. Bertin; the latter is falling into ruins. The college has a library of 20,000 volumes. The inhabitants of St Omer are partly occupied with the culture of the fertile grounds around the town; others are employed in manufacture, particularly in woollens, leather, paper, and starch. Pop. 20,000. 24 miles S. E. Calais.

OMÈY, a small island near the west coast of Ireland. Long. 10. 7. W. Lat. 53. 31. N.

OMKON, an extensive division of Arabia, comprising the coast that extends from its eastern extremity of Rasalgate, to the entrance of the Persian gulf.

OMOA, a seaport and fort of Mexico, province of Honduras.

OMRATTEY, a large, fortified, and trading town of Hindostan, province of Berar. Long. 78. 20. E. Lat. 20. 59. N.

ONATE, a town of Spain, in Guipuscoa, 23 miles N. E. Vittoria. Population 2100.

ONNA, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 17 miles E. by N. Sagorbe. Population 4500.

ONKEHOW, one of the Sandwich islands, in the North Pacific ocean.

ONEGA, a large lake of the north of European Russia, government of Olonetz, to the east of the still larger lake of Ladoga. Length 130 miles; breadth 80. Near it rises the river Onega, which falls into the White sea.

ONEGA, an inconsiderable town of European Russia, government of Archangel, on the White sea, at the mouth of the river Onega. 60 miles S. S. W. Archangel.

ONENITA, a province of the Sardinian states, in Piedmont, which, until 1566, formed a distinct principality belonging to the house of Doria. Its principal productions are olive oil and fruit. It contains, on a surface of 100 square miles, 1 town, 51 villages, and nearly 20,000 inhabitants.

ONEGLIA, a town of Italy, in the Sardinian states, capital of the province of the same name, 65 miles S. W. Genoa. Pop. 5000.

ONENLIA, Cape, in the territory of Genoa. Long. 7. 54. E. Lat. 43. 53. N.

ONEIDA, a county of the United States, in the state of New York, bounded N. by Lewis county, E. by Herkimer county, S. W. by Madison county, and W. by Oswego county. Area 1,303,040 acres. The face of the country is generally level. Population 35,792.

ONEIDA, a lake of the above county, 20 miles long, and 4 broad. Also a river.

ONÈY, a small river of England, in Herefordshire, which runs into the Lug.

ONIL, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 3 miles E. Villena. Population 3400.

ONIOY, a river of the United States, in Vermont. It runs into Lake Champlain.

ONONAGUA, a county of the United States, in the state of New York, bounded N. by Oswego county, E. by Madison county, S. by Cortland county, and W. by Cayuga county. Area 580,460 acres. Population 25,667. In this county is Onondaga lake; on its borders are celebrated salt springs.

ONONAGUA, a township of the United States, capital of Onondaga county. Pop. 5740.

ONONAGUA HOLLOW, a village in the above township. Population 330.

ONOSAZ, or HOSAZEN, a seaport of Hindostan.

ten, province of North Canada, at the mouth of a small river, which communicates with a fine salt water-lake. Long. 74. 25. E. Lat. 14. 18. N.

OSKOST, a small island in the Eastern ocean, in the bay of Batavia. Pop. 3000.

OSKATOW, a county in the south part of North Carolina, on the coast. Population 6000. Slaves 2200.

OSKARTO, a county of the United States, in New York, bounded N. by Lake Ontario, E. by Seneca county, S. by Steuben and Allegany counties, and W. by Genesee county. Population 42,026. Area 1777½ square miles, or 1,186,000 acres.

OSKARTIO LAKE, the northern lake of that great chain which divides the United States from Upper Canada. In length it is 171 miles, at its greatest breadth 591, and 407 in circumference. In the middle, attempts have been made, without success, to find the bottom, with 300 fathoms.

OSKRENTZ, a town of Spain, in Valencia. Its inhabitants have manufactures in woollen, linen, paper, and copper. Population 11,700.

OSKRA, the capital of a district of the same name in Hindostan, between the 29d and 24th degrees of N. Lat. and between the 75th and 77th of E. Long. It stands on the Nippur river, and is the principal residence of Dowlat Row Sindia, a Mahratta chief. It is one of the most ancient cities of Hindostan, and was known to the Greeks under the name of Oskno. The ancient city has, however, decayed. The modern city is of an oblong form, about six miles in circumference, and surrounded by a stone wall, with round towers. The principal buildings are the mosques and temples. Sindia's palace makes but a poor figure. Long. 75. 50. E. Lat. 23. 12. N.

OSK, a town of Hindostan, province of Gujerat. Long. 71. 46. E. Lat. 24. 15. N.

OSKALAKA, one of the Fox islands, in the North Pacific ocean.

OSKORIS, the principal river of Arracan, in the Birman empire. It rises in the mountains which divide Arracan from Ava, and although not above 70 miles in length, is a mile broad at its entrance, and capable of admitting ships of considerable burden.

OSKAT, a town of Anatolia, in Asia Minor, situated in a hollow, surrounded by naked and barren hills. Population 16,900, chiefly Turks, the remainder Greeks, Armenians, and Jews. The houses are mostly constructed of brick and wood. The palace is a very extensive building; and it has a handsome mosque. Lat. 38. 42. N.

OSKERTHOUT, a town of the Netherlands, in North Brabant. It has large manufactures of pottery ware and of tiles. Population 6400. 5 miles N. N. E. Brabant.

OSKERTWIK, a village of North Brabant, 10 miles S. S. W. Ros-le-Duc. Pop. 1700.

OSKERTZ, a town of East Flanders, 7 miles S. by E. Ghent. Population 3200.

OSKERTSEKER, a town of West Flanders, 21 miles S. by E. Bruges. Pop. 3600.

OPATOW, a town of Poland, 10 miles W. N. W. Sandomir. Population 2000.

OPELOUSAS, the capital of a district of the same name, in Louisiana.

OPORTO, a large city of Portugal, about two miles from the mouth of the Douro. It stands partly on a hill, and partly on a bank of the river. It has still an old wall, five or six feet thick, flanked at intervals with mean looking towers, and further protected by a small fort. The quay extends the whole length of the town. The roadstead is spacious, and is at times the rendezvous of fleets of merchantmen for Brazil. It is commanded by a small fort. The town is in general well built. From the strand rises a broad well paved street, with causeways on each side, leading to two equally handsome oblique streets. The others on the declivity of the hill are narrow, crooked, and dirty; but several of those on the top are fine and broad, and contain a number of elegant houses. On the east side of the town, the houses overhanging the side of the river are built on so steep a declivity, as to be accessible only by steps out of the rock. On the opposite bank of the Douro there are two places, or rather suburbs of the city. The smaller and more westerly of these is called Gava. To the east, and also on the south bank of the Douro, is another small but populous town, called Villa Nova do Porto, inhabited, notwithstanding its name, by mechanics, and others of the lower orders. Altogether the population on the south bank is not short of 20,000. Between Gava and Villa Nova are immense depots or warehouses, for storing the wine from the interior, previous to its being embarked. From 50,000 to 70,000 pipes are annually embarked. The lesser exports are oil, sumach, linen, and oranges. The imports are woollen, cotton, and hardware manufactures, almost all from England; also fish from the west of England and Newfoundland; from the Baltic hemp and flax; from the United States, the chief import is rice. Oporto contains a naval arsenal and dock-yard, where ships are occasionally repaired. The harbour, however, is difficult of access, partly from rocks at the mouth of the Douro, partly from the accumulation of sand. It is a bishop's see, the seat of a corregidor, a provisor, and a military commander. There is here a theatre of comparatively late erection. Oporto was in the possession of the French during part of 1808, and the spring of 1809, when it was evacuated by them. Population 70,000. 172 miles N. by E. Lisbon, 49 N. Coimbra. Long. E. 29. 30. W. Lat. 41. 11. N.

OPRA, a river of Silesia, which falls into the Oder near Oderberg.

OPPEL, an extensive province of Prussian Silesia, comprehending the greatest part of Upper Silesia, and nearly corresponding to the duchies of Oppeln, Neisse, and Ratibor, along with the Prussian part of those of Jagierdorf and Treppau. It is divided into diff. in circles. This province consists almost entirely of hills and mountains. It abounds in large forests, and contains a large store of valuable minerals. Area 5000 square miles. Population 550,000.

OPPEN, the capital of the above principality, situated on the Oder, 80 miles S. E. Breslau. It has some linen manufactures. Population 3200.

OPPENAU, a town of Germany, in Baden, 15 miles E. Strasburg. Population 1700.

OPPENHEIM, a town of Germany, 10 miles S. by E. Mentz. Population 1700.

OPPINE, a town of Naples, in Calabria Ultra, situated among the mountains, 20 miles N. E. Reggio. Population 8000.

ORANALA, a town of Italy, in the Sardinian states. Population 3100.

ORAN, or WARRAN, a considerable town of Algiers, province of Tlemcen. 170 miles S. W. Algiers. Long. 9. 10. W. Lat. 35. 50. N.

ORAN, a port village of the United States, in Oran county, New York.

ORANGE, a town of France, department of the Vaucluse, the chief place of a principality on the Meyne. Its streets are narrow, dark, dirty, and ill paved; its houses devoid of elegance, and even of neatness. It has no public buildings worth notice; and the only objects which recommend it to attention, are its remains of antiquity. Its chief manufactures are of linen, serge, and paper. Pop. 7300. 130 miles S. Lyons.

ORANGE, a county of the United States, in New York, bounded N. by Sullivan and Ulster counties, E. by Hudson, S. E. by Rockland county, and S. W. by New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Population 21,347. 3d. In the central part of Virginia. Population 12,323. Slaves 6516. 3d. Of North Carolina. Population 20,136, including 4701 slaves. 4th. Of Indiana. 5th. Of Vermont. Pop. 28,347. The name of various townships.

ORANGE RIVER, a river of Africa, which falls into the Atlantic. Lat. 28. 30. S. 2d. In Jamaica, which runs into the sea, 4 miles E. Montego bay.

ORANGEBURG, a district in the central part of S. Carolina. Pop. 13,229. Slaves 6564. 2d. The capital of the above district. It contains 20 houses.

ORANSENBURG, a town of Prussia, 19 miles N. by W. Berlin. Population 1600.

ORANWAY, a small island of Scotland, on the west coast of the Isle of Sky.

ORA, a town of Bavarian Franconia, 40 miles N. N. W. Wurtzburg. Pop. 3700.

ORA, a small river in the north of Italy, in Piedmont, which falls into the Dora Maggiore.

ORASSANO, a town of Piedmont, 7 miles S. W. Turin. Population 1700.

ORAY, a well built town of Switzerland, 10 miles N. Lausanne. Population 2600.

ORAY, a river of Switzerland, which falls into the lake of Neuchâtel.

ORAY, a town of France, department of Calvados, 30 miles E. S. E. Caen. Pop. 3000.

ORRICA, a river of the north of Spain, which joins the Duero at Zamora.

ORRINETTI, a small town in the north of Spain, in the province of Guipuzcoa.

ORRITELLO, a town and fortress of Italy, in Tuscany, 80 miles N. W. Rome.

ORRIZES, a town of France, department of the North. Population 2000.

ORCHILLA, a cluster of islands in the West Indies, near the coast of South America.

ORCO, a river in Piedmont, which falls into the Po, at Chivasso.

ORD or CAITHNESS, a cape on the coast of Scotland, county of Caithness.

ORDIE, a small river of Scotland, in Perthshire, which falls into the Tay.

ORDUNA, a town of Spain, in Biscay, 57 miles N. N. E. Burgos. Population 4000.

ORHUS, an old and neatly built inland town of Sweden, province of Nerike, on the river Svartelf. It has an active trade with Stockholm, and is the chief place of the province of its name. Population 4000. 96 miles W. by N. Stockholm.

ORIL, an extensive province of European Russia, to the south of those of Tula and Kaluga, extending from 32. 50. to 38. E. long. and from 52. to 54. N. lat. Area 16,000 square miles. Population above 1,000,000.

ORISMARRO, the most westerly government of Asiatic Russia, having on one side Russia in Europe, and on the other the government of Tobolsk. Pop. 620,426.

ORISMORNO, a town in the government of the same name. The streets are straight and well built. It contains 9 churches and 2000 houses. Long. 52. 31. 10. E. Lat. 51. 46. N.

ORISON, a market town of England, in Suffolk, at the confluence of the rivers Alde and Ore, decayed from its former importance. There are still some remains of its castle. The chapel appears to be of great antiquity. Population 1115. 18 miles E. Ipswich.

ORFORD, a township and village of the United States, New Hampshire, on the Connecticut. Population 1265.

ORFORD, a cape of England, in Suffolk. Long. 1. 34. E. Lat. 52. 45. N.

ORGAZ, a town of Spain, 17 miles S. S. E. Toledo. Population 2400.

ORGOX, a town of France, on the Durance, 17 miles E. Tarascon. Population 2500.

ORLA, a town of Naples, Terra d'Otranto. Population 4800.

ORIGNY ST BENOIT, a town of France, 20 miles N. by W. Lecon. Population 2400.

ORIHUELA, a large and well built town of Spain, in Murcia, on the Segura, over which there are two bridges. The town contains five small squares. It has, besides the cathedral, four churches, with nine monasteries, three convents, an hospital for the poor, another for the sick, and a third for orphans. It has manufactures of silk, mandy distilleries, and some saltpetre works. Orihuela was in the possession of the Moors during 550 years; they lost it in 1264. Population 20,000. 12 miles N. E. Murcia.

Orinoco, a celebrated river of South America, one of the greatest in the world. It is said to rise in 0. 55. N. lat. and afterwards turning round with a circular sweep, it holds a northerly course, when, being joined by numerous large rivers from the eastern ridge of the Andes, it is swelled to an immense size, and sweeps along eastward to the ocean with great rapidity. Its length, including its windings, is estimated at 1300 miles; at 200 leagues from the sea it has a breadth of from 2500 to 3000 fathoms. Its depth at St. Thomas, when its waters are at the lowest, was found to be 65 fathoms. The Orinoco, like every other river which rolls a vast body of water over a flat country, makes its way into the ocean by an innumerable variety of different channels; and during the rainy season it inundates the immense plains through which it flows, during the highest flood, to an extent of from 80 to 90 miles. The Delta of the Orinoco commences about 100 miles from the coast. It is computed that the river has 50 outlets into the ocean, only seven of which are navigable, not however for vessels of any great burden; and it requires consummate prudence and skill to find out the proper channel, many of the Indians, with all their experience, losing their course among the many channels. The grand mouth of the Orinoco is formed by Cape Barima to S. N. E. which is in 2. 54. N. lat. and the island of Cangrejos lying W. N. W. of the cape. They are 25 miles from each other, but the breadth of the navigable part of the passage is not quite three. The depth of water on the bar, which lies a little farther out to sea than the cape, is at ebb 17 feet. Near the Andes are the falls of Maypura and Atures, which are said to be tremendous. The annual swell of the Orinoco commences in April, and ends in August.

Orissa, an extensive province of Hindostan, between the 16th and 21d degrees of N. lat.; bounded E. by the sea and the province of Bengal, and W. by Gundwanch. The chief rivers are the Godavery, Mahanuddy, Byturnee, and Subanreeka.

ORISTANO, an unfortified town of Sardinia, on a bay of the same name. Pop. 6000.

QUIZABA, a town of Mexico, in the intendancy of Vera Cruz. It has wide, neat, and well paved streets. It has some manufactures of coarse cloth, and several tanneries. Population 9000. 65 miles S. E. Puebla de los Angeles, and 120 E. by S. Mexico. Long. 97. 7. W. Lat. 18. 48. N.

ORKNEY ISLANDS, the Group of the ancient Master of Islands in the North sea, separated from the north coast of Scotland by the Pentland Firth, which is generally about 10 or 11 miles broad. These islands are about 30 in number; but many of them are uninhabited, being small, and producing only sheep-pasture. The principal inhabited islands are Pomona or Mainland, Hoy, North Ronaldshay, South Ronaldshay, Sanday, Stronsay, Eday, Westray, Shapinsay, Egilsay, Grimsay, Bousay, Weir, Enhallow, Papa Westray, Papa Stronsay, Burray, &c. (See these articles). They are disjoined from one another by sounds or friths, from one to five miles broad; but the whole are of considerable extent; for, from the south-west to north-east, the distance is not less than 70 miles, and upwards of 40 in breadth. Their surface presents great variety. The east and north coasts in general are low. The western coasts, more elevated, terminate in bold and steep cliffs, exhibiting a thousand different shapes, that form a scene highly picturesque and interesting.

Concerning the soil of these islands, nothing favourable can be reported. All the islands may contain about 384,000 acres, divided perhaps in the following proportions; viz. heath and moss, occupied as common, 294,000; green pastures, occupied as common, 30,000; infield pasture and meadow, 30,000; arable, including gardens, 24,000; total productive land, 84,000; houses, roads, walls, ditches, 2000; fresh water, 4000. The climate is variable, and not salubrious. The mean heat of the thermometer is 45 degrees; and the range between the extremities of cold and heat is from 25 to 75 degrees. The land animals are small horses, black cattle, sheep, swine, and rabbits. Of these, the sheep are most numerous, there being upwards of 50,000 in the islands. The fowls abound with red grouse, plovers, and snipes. The other wild fowl are eagles of various kinds; wild geese and ducks in great variety, herons, hawks, gulls, solar geese or gannets, swans, &c. Seals and sea otters are very common; the friths are occasionally visited by whales, and by a great herd of grampuses. Cod, ling, haddock, and flat fish, are exceedingly abundant in the surrounding seas. On the shores are found a great variety of sponges, corals, and corallines; large oysters, mussels, cockles, &c. These islands are divided into 18 parochial districts, which in 1801 contained 24,445, in 1811 23,238, and in 1821 26,979 inhabitants.

ORLANS, a town of Germany, on the Saale. Pop. 2000. 49 miles S. E. Erfurt.

ORLANS, a town of France, on the Loire, over which is a magnificent bridge of nine arches. The town is of an oblong form, built with tolerable regularity, the streets being in general straight; but they are narrow and unimproved. There are four squares or open places in the town. The chief street is that called the Rue Royale. The houses are mostly in an antiquated style. Among the public edifices, the principal is the cathedral, one of the finest Gothic buildings in France. The town-house, the court of justice, the mint, and the theatre, are edified to utility. The literary institutions are an academy, and a royal college, or high school. There are public walks along the ramparts and the quays; but the most agreeable are along the banks of the river. It is a great centre of commerce, and has manufactures the Upper Pyrenees, on the Gave de Pau. It manufactures of flannel, also of leather, and carries on a brisk trade. It was the scene of a battle between the French and British in 1811. Population 6200.

ORTON, or QVERTON, a market town and parish of England, Westmoreland. Pop. 1625.

ORTONA A MAJE, a town of Naples, in Abruzzo Ultra, 100 miles N. Naples. Population 5700.

ORVIETO, a town of Italy, 60 miles N. N. W. Rome, at the confluence of the Paglia and Chiana. Its cathedral is a fine Gothic edifice. Population 7000.

ORINA, SAN JOSEPH DE, capital of the island of Trinidad, 8 miles from the sea.

ORVINO, the capital of a province in Peru, 70 miles N. N. W. Potosi.

ORWELL, a river of England, in Suffolk, commonly called Ipswich water. It unites with the Stour from Manningtree, to form the fine harbour of Harwich.

ORWELL, a township of the United States, on Lake Champlain. Population 1840.

ORWINGBORO, the capital of Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, in the United States.

ORZI NUOVI, a town of Austrian Italy, 34 miles E. by S. Milan. Population 3000.

ORZUELA, a large city of Japan, the port of Meaco, 25 miles S. W. Meaco.

ORAGE, a river of Louisiana, which joins the Missouri, 133 miles from its mouth.

ORAGE WOMAN'S RIVER, falls into the Missouri, 60 miles from its mouth.

ORCH, a town of the Netherlands, 12 miles N. E. Bois le Duc. Population 2500.

ORCHATZ, a town of Germany, in Saxony, 32 miles N. W. Dresden. Population 3400.

OSCHERSLEBEN, a town of Prussian Saxony, 19 miles W. S. W. Magdeburg. Population 3000.

OSKRO, a town of Austrian Illyria, on an island in the Adriatic. Population 1500.

OSKARIKOWO, a town of European Russia, government of Vladimir. Population 2600.

OSIMO, a town of Italy, with a well-built cathedral, and several other churches and convents. Population 6700. 16 miles E. by W. Ancona.

OSKOL NOVOI, a town of European Russia, government of Kursk. Population 2800.

OSKOL STAROI, a town of European Russia, government of Kursk. Population 5000.

OSMA, a town of Spain, in Old Castile, on the Uceda, 55 miles N. N. E. Madrid. Population 2000.

OSNABRUCK, a province of Hanover, between the grand duchy of Oldenburg and the Prussian province of Westphalia. Its form is an irregular oblong, 40 miles square. A large portion of this principality consists of heath, moor, and sandy soil, and is all very unproductive. The corn raised is chiefly rye, oats, and buck-wheat, and in a less degree barley and wheat. Hemp and flax are raised in great quantities, but the quality is inferior. Of the coarse linen so well known by the name of Osnaburg, great quantities are manufactured by the inhabitants, and exported. Population 126,000.

OSNABRUCK, or OSNABURG, the capital of the above principality, situated on the Hase. It is divided into the Old and New towns. It is irregularly built, and the houses are very low. The best buildings are the cathedral, which possesses several relics of antiquity, and the town-house, in which was concluded the peace of Westphalia in 1648. The other public buildings are two Lutheran and two Catholic churches, a Lutheran orphan-house, four hospitals, a work-house, a Catholic and a Lutheran gymnasium. It has manufactories of coarse woollen, leather, and tobacco. Pop. 6300. 70 miles W. Hanover.

OSNINGER, a village and parish of England, in Kent. Population 912.

OSIA, a celebrated mountain of Greece, in Thessaly, S. E. of Olympus.

OSSABAW, an island in the Atlantic, near the coast of Georgia.

OSSETT, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 4775.

OSSIERI, a town of the island of Sardinia, province of Cagliari. Population 6900.

OSTER, two rivers of the United States, in Maine.

OSTER, a town of France, 7 miles S. W. Tarbes. Population 1600.

OSTUNA, a town of Spain, in Andalusia. It has a collegiate church, 15 monasteries and convents, 3 hospitals, and 15,000 inhabitants. 48 miles E. Seville.

OSTASCHEKOW, a town of European Russia, government of Tver. Population 6400. 108 miles N. Tver.

OSTEND, a town of the Netherlands, in West Flanders. Its old fortifications, a great earthen mound, and a moat around the town, are still kept up. The streets of Ostend are straight, and the houses in general well built, but deficient in height. It has no public edifices worth mentioning, except the town-house. Ostend is reckoned one of the best harbours in the flat shore of Flanders; but it is formed only by the tide entering the mouth of a small river, and ships of burden cannot enter but at high water. Ostend communicates by canals with Bruges and Ghent.

W. and with Nieupoort E. Its commercial prosperity was greatest between 1780 and 1794. It has in some degree revived since 1814. The trade is not, as formerly, between one distant seaport and another, but between the interior and foreign countries, particularly England. Ostend is remarkable for a very long and straight pier, from 1601 to 1664, against the Spaniards. Pop. about 10,500.

14 miles W. Bruges, 36 E. by N. Ghent.

OSTRAVA, a town of Prussian Saxony, 47 miles N. Magdeburg. Population 1500.

OSTROBACH, a town of Hanover, on the Sode. Population 1200.

OSTROMBO, a town of East Prussia, government of Konigsberg. Population 1700.

OSTROWO, a town of Prussian Saxony, government of Magdeburg. Pop. 2600.

OSTHOREN, a neat market town of Germany, 6 miles N. Worms. Pop. 1890.

OSTIA, a town of Italy, in the States of the Church, near the mouth of the Tiber. Pop. 4000. 13 miles E. W. Rome.

OSTIANS, a barbarous people of Siberia, forming a considerable proportion of the native race by which that extensive region is peopled. The greater number consists of those situated upon the Obi, in the government of Tobolsk. According to the census of 1784, the Ostians of the Obi amounted to 30,981 males.

OSTIANO, a town of Austrian Italy, 13 miles N. E. Cremona. Population 3400.

OSTRACH, a village of Germany, 6 miles E. Pfullendorf. Population 1100.

OSTROEC, a town of Russian Poland, government of Volhynia, 57 miles N. W. Constantinov. Population 4600.

OSTROGOSK, a town of European Russia, government of Voronez. Pop. 11,000, part of whom are Cossacks.

OSTROLENKA, a town of Poland; on the Narw, the scene of a severe conflict in 1805, between the Russians and French. Pop. 1100.

OSTROVITZ, a small town of Austrian Dalmatia, 14 miles N. Scardona.

OSTROVNO, a village of Russian Lithuania, on the Drina.

OSTROW, a town of Prussian Poland, 40 miles N. E. Breslau. Population 2500.

OSTUNI, a small town of Naples, 50 miles S. E. Bari.

OSWEGATCHIE, a river of the United States, which runs into the St. Lawrence.

OSWEGO, a county of the United States, in the state of New York.

OSWEGO, two villages of the United States; in Oswego county, New York.

OSWEGO, a river of the United States, in the state of New York, which issues from Oneida lake, and runs into Lake Ontario. After a very crooked course of 18 miles, it receives the Seneca river, whence to its mouth is 24 miles. At the mouth of the river is a safe and good harbour, with two fathoms water. The channel is commanded by a well built fort, on an eminence E. of the river. By means of locks and canals this river is made navigable.

OSWEGO FALLS, a post village of Oneida county, New York.

OSWINGHAM, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 4900.

OSWITRY, a town and market town of England, county of Salop. The houses are mostly built of brick, roofed with slate. The church is a spacious building, with a tower of one story, and there is, besides, a meeting-house belonging to the Independents, and chapels of the Baptists and Methodists. It has a free grammar school, a town-hall and prison, and a house of industry.

There are few remains of the once magnificent castle. Oswitry has a flourishing cotton manufactory, and a considerable village. Pop. 3910. 18 miles N. W. Shrewsbury.

OTABALO, the capital of a district in Quito. It has a manufacture of cotton stuffs. Population 15,000. 30 miles N. E. Quito.

OTARA, one of the Society islands, in the South Pacific ocean.

OTAREIRE, or Kawa Gekachu the TINIAN ISLANDS, an island in the South Pacific ocean. It consists of two peninsulas connected by a low isthmus about three miles across, covered with trees and shrubs, but wholly uncultivated, though no part of the island seems more capable of improvement, and of admitting the plough, if cleared from wood. The larger, Otahete Nua, is about 90 miles in circumference, and nearly circular. The soil of the low lands, and of the valleys which run up from the sea between the mountains, is remarkably fertile, consisting of a rich blackish mould, covered with bread-fruit, cocoa-nut, plantains, avee apple, the youta or cloth plant, besides a variety of others. The mountains afford trees of all sorts and sizes, and are, in most places, covered to their very tops with wood, in others with bamboos of great length, and in some by fern and reed, which at a distance appear like fine green lawn. The hills rise very steep, and swell into mountains almost inaccessible, but everywhere productive of plantains, yams, and a multitude of wild roots growing spontaneously, and sometimes used for food. In these higher regions only is to be found the precious sandal-wood, of two kinds, yellow and dark coloured; from whence the natives chiefly draw the perfume for the coco-nut oil, with which they anoint themselves. The inhabitants of this island are above the common size, and the chiefs are a larger race, few of them being under six feet. The men are tall, strong, well limbed, and finely shaped. The women of the superior rank are also in general above our middle stature, but those of the inferior class are below it, and some of them are very small. Their natural complexion is that kind of clear olive or Brunette. Their manners, institutions, and religion, are altogether those of savages; though since the missionaries have established themselves among them, they are said to be improved; being instructed in the mechanical arts, and generally professing their attachment to Christianity, and an aversion to their former superstitions.

OTZCOO CREEK, a river of the United States, which runs into the Susquehanna.

OTZLISWIL, a large well built village of Switzerland, in the canton of Zurich.

OTZCOO CREEK, a river of the United States, which runs into Onondaga lake.

OTZCOO, a neat market town of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, on the Wharfe. The church is a large edifice. Population 2000. 10 miles N. W. Leeds.

OTRANTO, or TANA D'OTRANTO, a singular province forming the south-east extremity of Naples, and even of Italy, by the gulf of Taranto to the west, and the Sicile to the east. Area 2000 square Population 292,000. It is divided into the three districts of Lecce (the capital), Taranto, and Messagna.

OTRANTO, a decayed town of Italy, 69 miles E. by S. Taranto. Population 2400.

OTTELO, a small town of the States of the Church, 36 miles N. Rome.

OTSEGO, a county of the United States, in the central part of New York. Area 593,400 acres. Population 38,002.

OTSEGO, a village, the capital of the above county, on the small lake of Otsego. Pop. 600.

OTTENBACH, a large village of Switzerland, 9 miles S. Zurich.

OTTENHEIM, a village of Germany, on the Rhine. Population 1000.

OTTENSEN, a village of Denmark, in the duchy of Holstein, 2 miles W. Altona.

OTTU-CREEK, a river of North America, which falls into Lake Champlain. Another which runs into the Ohio.

OTTENBORG, a town in the district of Hadeln, duchy of Bremen. Population 1800.

OTTERY, ST MARY, an irregularly built town of England, in Devonshire, on the Otter. The principal building is the church, a spacious edifice, possessing many singularities in its construction. The monuments are numerous, and many of them curious. It has manufactures of flannel and serge. Population 3622. 16 miles E. Exeter.

OTTOBREUN, a market town of Bavaria, 34 miles S. S. E. Ulm. Population 2000.

OTTOJANO, or OTTASANO, a town of Naples, 12 miles E. Naples. Population 14,000. It contains three churches, and has a castle.

OUACHITTA, or WASHITA, a large river of Louisiana, which rises between the Arkansas and Red rivers, in Lat. 34. 30. N. and falls into the Red river, 30 miles previous to its junction with the Mississippi.

OVAR, a well built town of Portugal, near the coast, 22 miles S. S. W. Oporto. Pop. 4000.

OUCHE, a river of France, department of the Cote d'Or. It joins the Saone.

OUN-BREKELAND, a village of the Netherlands, 14 miles W. Dort. Population 2400.

OUNPOOR, a village of the Netherlands, 25 miles W. S. W. Rotterdam. Pop. 1000.

ORISSA, an extensive province of Hindustan, situated between the 16th and 26th degrees of northern latitude, bounded N. by Nepal, E. by Bahar, S. by Allahabad, and W. by Delhi and Agra. Its length is estimated at 280 miles, by 100 in breadth. The whole surface of this province is fertile, and very fertile, and well watered by large rivers, or by the copious streams which intersect the country. When properly cultivated, the soil is exceedingly productive, yielding grain, as rice, wheat, barley, rice, and a variety of other grains, cotton, sugar-cane, indigo, and poppies. It is celebrated for its grapes, mangoes, and other fruits. Some of the districts produce quantities of saltpetre, and lapis lazuli.

A variety of cotton cloths, and a coarse kind of flannel, is made in this province; also, arrows, shields, matchlocks, and swords; are manufactured in different places of it; but it is not celebrated for any peculiar manufacture, unless cotton carpets. The climate is better than that of Bengal. The rains are neither so violent, nor of so long a duration; and the four cold months of the year are delightful. Orissa is intersected by the Gogra and Deomury rivers; and has the Ganges running along its western boundary; besides which it has numerous smaller streams, and several lakes. The principal towns of this province are Lucknow, Fyzabad, Oude, Khyrad, Goharpoore, and Bahreich. The inhabitants are about one-third Mahometans; the remainder are Hindoos of all casts. Oude is governed by a native prince, under the superintendence of the British, who have a resident at his court, and a regiment of infantry to protect him.

ORISSA, or ARORRA, the ancient capital of the above mentioned province, on the Dewah or Gogra river, and said to have been of an incredible extent. The seat of government is now transferred to Lucknow. Long. 82. 10. E. Lat. 26. 48. N.

ORDESSAND, an open town of the Netherlands, in East Flanders, divided into two parts by the Scheldt. It has manufactures of woollen and linen. It is noted for the memorable victory gained over the French, in 1708, by Prince Eugene and the Duke of Marlborough. Population 5100. 32 miles W. Brussels.

ORDESSAND, a town of the Netherlands, 11 miles W. Breda. Population 1700.

ORDE-PEKKE, A, a town of the Netherlands, in Groningen. Population 3600.

ORDEKKEK, a village of the Netherlands, 6 miles E. by N. Rotterdam. Pop. 1400.

ORDEKKEK, a village of the Netherlands, 4 miles S. Amsterdam. Population 1700.

ORDEWATER, a fortified town of the Netherlands, 12 miles W. S. W. Utrecht. Population 1700.

ORDON, a town of France, on the Loire, 14 miles N. E. Nantes. Population 1800.

ORDON, St., a pleasant village of France, about 5 miles N. Paris.

ORDON, a township of England, West. Riding of Yorkshire. Population 6000.

ORDON, a township of England in Cheshire, 8 miles W. Middlewich. Population 2157.

ORDON, a small island of the Netherlands, belonging to South Holland.

ORDONKKEK, a town of the Netherlands, 10 miles S. Ghent. Population 2500.

ORDONKKEK, a village of the Netherlands, 1 mile W. by N. Rotterdam. Pop. 2000.

ORDONKKEK, a small village of the parish of St. Martin, county of Hertford. The church is a fine building. Population 141.

ORDONKKEK, a county of the United States, in the north side of Van Tennessee. Population 614, including 336 slaves.

ORDONKKEK, a town of the Netherlands, 10 miles S. E. Brussels. Population 3500.

ORDONKKEK, a town of the Netherlands, 10 miles S. E. Brussels. Population 3500.

OEVERSEL, an extensive province of the Netherlands, having Gelderland on the S. W., and on the E. a part of Hanover and Westphalia. The surface is level, low, and contains large tracts of marshy ground. It is watered by the Yssel, the Zuyder water, the Vechte, the Scheldet, and the Linde, all slow flowing streams, and more like large canals than rivers. Population 147,000.

Oufa, a considerable city of Asiatic Russia, capital of the government of Orkhon, situated on the Irkutsk, near its junction with the Oula, a considerable river. It has seven churches, and two convents. The neighbourhood is inhabited by a race of Tartars. Pop. 3500. Long. 86. 18. E. Lat. 54. 43. N.

Oufa, a township of the United States, and capital of Seneca county, New York.

Oviedo, an inland town of Spain, in the Asturias, at the confluence of the two small rivers the Ovia and the Nora. It is of great antiquity, and has an elegant cathedral, built in the Gothic style, and rich in vessels, relics, and other ornaments. The church of St. Salvador is also well built. The university of Oviedo is a neat edifice. The other churches and public establishments are an ancient aqueduct, an episcopal palace, a collegiate chapter, three churches, three monasteries, three convents, three hospitals, and a drawing school. Pop. 7500. 124 miles W. N. W. Europe.

Ovino, a town of the Milanese province of Alessandria, on the Balto. Pop. 2200.

Ourland, a town of Ireland, in the county of Wexford, 3 miles N. Wexford.

Ordnitz, a market town of England, county of Northampton, on the Nen. The church is a spacious building. Population 2150. 77 miles N. London.

ORAL MOUNTAINS, a very lofty and extensive range, which, during the greater part of its course, forms the boundary between Northern Asia and Russia in Europe.

ORAL, a large river of Asiatic Russia, which falls into the Caspian, nearly in 47. N. lat. and 53. E. long.

Orskan, the capital city of the Comars of the Oural, on the banks of that river. Long. 52. 6. E. Lat. 56. 11. N.

Oruzia, a town of Hindustan, province of Allahabad, and district of Bundelcund.

Oruz, a town of Portugal, 12 miles E. S. E. Leyria. Population 2000.

Oruz, a large town of Asiatic Turkey, capital of a pachalik of the same name. The town is about three miles in circumference, surrounded by ancient walls, defended by square towers. Some parts of it are tolerably well built, and it is adorned by some fine springs. The castle is at the south side of the city. It contains also a magnificent mosque, and a handsome Armenian cathedral, now decayed. It is the seat of a considerable inland trade. It is noted also for the preparation of Turkey leather. Population, composed of Turks, Arabs, Armenians, Jews, and Nestorians, 20,000. Long. 33. 25. E. Lat. 36. 50. N.

Oruz, a town of Portugal, in Alentejo. Pop. 2300. 89 miles S. S. E. Lisbon.

Oruz, a river of Brazil, which runs into the Tocantines. Also a village of the same name, not far from the Tocantines.

Oruz, Rio de, a river which runs through the Sahara, in Western Africa, and falls into the Atlantic. Lat. 23. 30. N.

Oruz, a small river of the Netherlands, which falls into the Maase.

Oruz, a large river of England, which forms the principal branch of the Humber, and the main drain for all the waters in the north-eastern district of Yorkshire. It flows through Yorkshire, and unites with the Trent, from Lincolnshire, to form the Humber.

Oruz, a river of Northamptonshire, which falls into the sea at Lynn Regis. Oruz, a river in Suffolk, and falls into the Great Ouse.

Oruz, or GRAND RIVER, a river of Canada, which falls into Lake Erie.

Oruz, a city of China, of the first rank, province of Kouang.

Oruz, a city of China, of the first rank, in Quang-se. Long. 110. 32. E. Lat. 23. 22. N.

Oruz, a small town of Portugal, 11 miles E. S. E. Braga.

Oruz, a village of the United States, in Broome county, New York, 170 miles S. W. Albany.

Oruz, a river of the United States, which runs into the Susquehanna.

Oruz, a town of Germany, 18 miles S. E. Stutgard. Population 1600.

Oruz, a village of England, in the Isle of Purbeck, Dorsetshire.

Oruz, a small island of the Atlantic, near the north-west coast of Ireland.

Oruz, an island in the North Pacific ocean, the most easterly and by much the largest of the Sandwich Islands. It is of a triangular shape. The angular points make the north-east and south extremities, of which the northern is in Long. 206. 2. E. Lat. 20. 17. N.; the eastern in Long. 206. 0. E. Lat. 19. 34. N.; and the southern extremity in Long. 204. 15. E. Lat. 18. 54. N. Its greatest length, which lies in a direction nearly north and south, is 85 miles; its breadth is 73 miles; and it is about 253 geographical, or 293 English miles in circumference. Its aspect is mountainous, and there are several peaks which rise above the boundary of perpetual snow, and must therefore be about 12,000 feet high. The country rises inland with a gentle ascent, is intersected by deep narrow gorges, or rather chasms, and appears to be well cultivated, and sprinkled over with a number of villages. In some parts there are volcanic appearances, the ground being everywhere covered with cinders, and intersected in many places with black streaks, which seem to mark the course of a lava that has flowed not many ages back from the mountains to the shore. It was on this island that the celebrated Captain Cook fell a sacrifice to a misunderstanding, or sudden impulse of revenge in the natives, on Sunday the 14th of February 1779. This island has been since frequently visited by different navigators.

OWLAH, a city of Hindostan, province of Delhi, pleasantly situated on the Harowly river. Long. 19. 35. E. Lat. 28. 10. N.

OWHAM, NORTH and SOUTH, two townships of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 6842—4250.

OWSTENBURY, a township of England, in Southhamptonshire. Population 603.

OXEN CREEK, a river of the United States, which runs into the Potomac.

OXFORD, one of the central counties of England, bounded E. by Buckinghamshire, W. by the county of Gloucester, S. S.W. and S. E. by Berkshire, N. by Northamptonshire, from which it is separated by the river Cherwell, and N. W. by Warwickshire. It is of an irregular figure, being only seven miles across at the city of Oxford, while in the more northern part its diameter is 38 miles. The greatest length of the county is 50 miles. The general aspect of this county is considerably diversified. In its southern districts it possesses a pleasing alternation of hill and valley. In its central division it loses in a great measure that inequality of surface. On the north (and particularly on the western part of that district) stone fences supply the place of the thick-set hedges; and the eye is often fatigued by a rude and frigid monotony of scene.

Oxfordshire possesses no mineral treasures to boast of. Medicinal springs are frequent, among which the various orders of the chalybeate chiefly prevail. No county is more plentifully watered. The principal rivers are the Thames, Isis, Cherwell, the Evenlode, the Glym, the Ray, and the Windrush. All these unite at different points, and eventually constitute the Thames. The usual produce of the soil is grain of all sorts, turnips, grass, &c. Among the crops only partially cultivated here are lentils, rape, cabbages, carrots, potatoes, and chicory. Rhubarb is also grown near Drayton. The meadow lands, for the richness of which this county was wont to be famed, have been greatly circumscribed by the progress of cultivation. Oxfordshire is said by Camden to have been anciently famous for its woods; and even at present is better supplied with trees than most other counties of England. Oxfordshire has hitherto had little claim to rank as a manufacturing county; its articles in this line of industry being neither numerous nor important. The only one yet distinguished as a portion of Oxfordshire is that which enters the county at its northern extremity, which, however, will be of great service. Oxfordshire is divided into 14 hundreds, which together contain 1 city, 19 market towns, and 207 townships and parishes. It sends to parliament two knights of the shire. Oxfordshire does not offer such a field for antiquarian research as several other counties. Several curious British coins have, however, been found within its limits. Pop. 136,971.

OXFORD, a city of England, in the county of Oxford, the chief town of the county, and greatly celebrated as a seat of learning, delightfully situated on a gentle eminence, at the confluence of the rivers Isis and Cherwell, which nearly encompass the city, the former on the west and south, and the latter on the east. The city was formerly surrounded by a wall, very little of which now remains. Including the suburbs, it is 1½ mile long, and as much broad. On entering from the east, south, and west, the respective rivers are crossed by three bridges; the Magdalen bridge, over the Cherwell, 520 feet in length, built in 1770; the bridge over the Isis, on the west; on the south, another bridge over the same river. From Magdalen bridge, the High-street extends westwards, under different names, through the whole length of the city. At Quatre Vois, or Carfax church, this is crossed at right angles by St Giles's, the other principal street; and from these main branches, most of the other minor streets diverge in different directions. The High-street is elegant and spacious. The minor streets are less spacious; and the houses are extremely crowded. Of the public buildings and institutions of Oxford, the university claims the first notice. It consists of 20 colleges and 4 halls, each of which forms an establishment within itself, having its own students and teachers, and its own revenues and regulations, while they are all united under the government of the university, of which they form the members. The university acts as a corporate body, under a charter which received the royal assent in the reign of Charles I. The officers by which the university is immediately governed, are the chancellor, the high steward, the vice-chancellor, and two proctors. The duty of the chancellor is, under the king, to superintend in every respect the interests of the university, for which purpose he is endowed with ample powers. It is the duty of the high steward to assist the chancellor, vice-chancellor, and proctors; and, executive-ly under the chancellor, to defend the privileges and laws of the university. The vice-chancellor's duty is, to superintend the due performance of university regulations, to call convocations, congregations, and courts, to licence taverns, expel delinquents, &c. He chooses four deputies termed pro-vice-chancellors, one of whom supplies his place in the case of sickness or absence. The two proctors assist the vice-chancellor in convocations and congregations. There are various other officers to see that due order and discipline are preserved. There are 16 resident public lecturers and professors of the following descriptions: divinity, Hebrew, Greek, civil law, medicine, modern history, botany, natural philosophy, astronomy, geometry, ancient history, anatomy, music, Arabic, poetry,

Anglo-Saxon, common law, and chemistry. There are four terms kept in the year at the university, and degrees are taken in divinity, law, physic, music, and the arts. The total number of members in the university books is about 3000, 1000 of whom are maintained on the revenues of the university, and the rest live at their own expense. The names of the 19 colleges are, All Souls, Balliol, Brasen Nose, Christ Church, Corpus Christi, Exeter, Jesus, Hertford, Lincoln, Magdalen, Merton, New college, Oriel, Pembroke, Queen's, St. John Baptist's, Trinity, University, Wadham, and Worcester. All Souls college was founded in the year 1437, by Henry Chicheley, archbishop of Canterbury, for a warden, 40 fellows, two chaplains, and six clerks and choristers. It consists chiefly of two spacious courts; one of these contains the chapel and hall on the southern side; and the splendid library on the north. The library is perhaps the largest room of its kind in the kingdom, being 49 feet high, and 180 feet by 32, with a large recess in the middle. Balliol college was begun about the year 1203. The chapel, built in 1520, contains interesting specimens of painted glass. The hall is a pleasing building, in the pointed style. Adam Smith was educated here. Brasen Nose College was founded in 1509. It derives its name from a large brazen face, which was fixed on the door of an incident hall in the college, to serve as a knocker. Christ Church college was founded by Cardinal Wolsey in 1525. The buildings consist chiefly of the cathedral, two spacious quadrangles, and two smaller courts. The architecture of the two quadrangles is classical and august. Christ Church cathedral is one of the most interesting objects in the college. The chief parts of the building can be traced to the reign of Henry II.; and the style of architecture is that of a much earlier period. Corpus Christi college, founded in 1510, by Bishop Fox, consisted at first of one spacious quadrangle, with its chapel, hall, and library; but various additions have since been made. Exeter college was founded in 1314; Hertford college in 1312; Jesus college in 1571, by Queen Elizabeth; Lincoln college was founded in 1327. Magdalen college is one of the noblest institutions, and most interesting buildings, in the university. It was founded in 1263 by William Waynflete, Bishop of Winchester. The whole has an air of venerable grandeur. The chapel is a beautiful Gothic structure. Merton college is the most ancient incorporated establishment in the university. It was founded in 1264 by Walter de Merton, bishop of Rochester, and chancellor of England, in the reign of Henry III. The chapel is one of the finest Gothic buildings of which the university can boast. New college was founded in 1379 by William of Wykeham, bishop of Winchester. It consists of a spacious quadrangle, with attached chapel, hall, and library; a fine range of consecrated cloisters, and a series of buildings for the use of students. Oriel college was founded in 1324 by Adam de Brom, archdeacon of Stow. The buildings consist of a quadrangle, with two ranges on the east and west sides of the garden, between which is placed the library. Pembroke college was founded in 1380. Queen's college was founded in 1440, by Robert Eglesfield, ambassador of Queen Philippa, consort of Edward III. St. John's college was founded in 1555, by Sir Thomas White. It is formed of two quadrangles, mostly in the Gothic style. Trinity college was founded in 1555, by Sir Thomas Pope. University college has been erroneously ascribed to Henry Alfred as its founder. It was founded in 1249. Wadham college was founded in 1611. It consists of a single quadrangle, 130 feet square. The chapel is a handsome Gothic structure. Worcester college was founded in 1714, by Sir Thomas Coke of Beutley, in Worcestershire. The architecture of the whole buildings is of a noble and chaste character. The halls of the university were originally private houses, erected by natives of Oxford, and rented by the students for their accommodation. After the foundation of colleges, they diminished in number, and sunk into neglect; four, however, still remain, and have been improved by benefactions, viz. St. Alban's, St. Edmund, St. Mary Magdalen, and New Inn Hall. Of the other public buildings connected with the university, the public schools form, together with the Bodleian library, and the picture gallery, a splendid quadrangle. In these schools, which were erected in the 16th century, the professors read lectures in the several sciences. The Bodleian, or public library, founded by Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, and restored and greatly augmented by Sir Thomas Bodley, now probably contains one of the most valuable collections in Europe. The theatre is a magnificent building, on the plan of the theatre of Marcellus at Rome. The Clarendon printing-house is a large and massy edifice, built in 1711. Here is the Clarendon or university press. The Bodleian library is one of the most splendid ornaments of the university, founded by Dr. Radcliffe, and completed in 1749. The Ashmolean museum was founded in 1682, by Elias Ashmole, for the reception of rare productions, both natural and artificial. The astronomical observatory is an elegant building. Besides St. Mary's church, in which the chief members of the university attend divine service, Oxford contains 13 others. There are also places of worship for the Roman Catholics, Quakers, Methodists, and Baptists. The other principal public buildings in the city are the town and county hall and jail, the city bridewell, the Radcliffe infirmary, the music room, and the general market. Here are also several charity schools, in which 300 children are clothed and taught. No dramatic representations are now allowed in the city. Oxford sends 4 members to parliament, 2 for the city, and 2 for the university. The early history of Oxford is involved in obscurity, and no credit can be given to any accounts of it before the reign of Alfred. There are great disputes as to the origin of its university, which does not, however, appear to have existed prior to the reign of William the Conqueror. Pop. 16,364. 59 miles W. by N. London. Long. 1. 16. W. Lat. 51. 45. N.

OXFORD, a county of the United States, in the west part of Maine. Population 17,630. Chief town Paris. The name also of various townships.

OXFORD, a town and port of entry of the United States, in Talbot county, Maryland.

OXSMALL, a hamlet of England, in Durham.

OXNAM, a river of Scotland, in Roxburghshire, which falls into the Tyne.

Oxus, a great river of Central Asia, the principal part of whose course is through Independent Tartary. It rises in the high ridge and table land of Tamer, which forms the boundary between Thibet and Great Bukharia; and flowing through the vast plain of Bukharia, and an extensive desert of Tartary, it falls at length into the Aral sea, after a course of more than 1200 miles.

OYORAVA, one of the larger Navigator's islands, in the South Pacific ocean.

OYSTER BAY, a township of the United States, on Long Island sound. Pop. 4725.

OYSTER CREEK, two rivers in North Carolina and New Jersey, which both run into the Atlantic.

OZAMA, a river of Hispaniola, which runs into the sea below St Domingo.

P.

PAAR, a river of Bavaria, which flows into the Danube, below Ingolstadt.

PAARU, a village of the Cape of Good Hope, in the district of Drakenstein.

PABAY, a small island of the Hebrides.

PABNA, a small island, 2 miles from the isle of Sky, about a mile long.

PABNAK, one of the isles which compose the district of Harris.

PACAJAY, a river of South America, which enters the Amazons near its mouth.

PACAYE, the capital of a district in Peru, 80 miles S. W. La Paz.

PACAMAYU, a river of Peru, which falls into the Pacific ocean. Lat. 7. 24. S.

PAGAUDIERE, La, a large village of France, department of the Loire. Population 1700.

PACALONGANE, a small European town, and fort on the island of Java, the seat of a resident, and a numerous population of natives and Chinese. 208 miles E. Batavia.

PACHETT, formerly the capital district of the same name in Bengal. Long. 86. 23. E. Lat. 23. 36. N.

PACHITRA, a river of Peru, which joins the Amazons. Lat. 8. 46. S.

PACHUTO, a town of Mexico, with a magnificent parish church, besides other public buildings. The ground on which it stands is 8141 feet high. 48 miles E. Mexico.

PACIFIC, a name given to the sea which lies between Asia and America, by the Spaniards, from its supposed calmness. There appears, however, no foundation in fact for this appellation.

PACOLET, a river of the United States, which rises in North Carolina.

PACT, a town of France, on the Rhine. Population 1700.

PADANE, a Dutch settlement and fort, and one of the principal belonging to that nation on the west coast of Sumatra. This, with the other Dutch settlements, were taken by the English in 1791; but were again given up to the Dutch at the general peace of 1814. Long. 99. 55. E. Lat. 6. 43. S.

PADERBORN, a very ancient town of Westphalia, now subject to Prussia. The cathedral is still a good edifice; and there are here no less than six hospitals or almshouses. Population 5300. 38 miles S. W. Hanover.

PADSTOW, a market town of England, in the county of Cornwall. The harbour is the best on this northern coast. Population 1700. 243 miles W. by S. London.

PADUA, a delegation or province of Austrian Italy, in the government of Venice, surrounded by the delegations of Vicenza, Treviso, Venice, Rovigo, and Verona. Area 860 square miles; population 274,004. It is watered by the Brenta, the Bacchiglione, and several smaller streams.

PADUA, a city of Austrian Italy, the capital of the delegation of the same name, in the government of Venice, situated near the junction of the Brenta and the Bacchiglione. It is surrounded with a pleasant and broad ditch, the circuit of which is nearly seven miles. The town is traversed by several canals, but the streets are narrow, dark, dirty, and ill paved. The appearance, however, in general, lofty and well built, and several of the public edifices are of magnificent architecture. The town house is in the form of an oblong quadrangle, and is supported by columns rising on marble pillars. The interior contains some fine paintings, and a statue of St. George was a masterpiece of Palma. Near the cathedral is situated the palace of the Prince, remarkable for the manner of the floor plates, and the Arabian painting. The palace of the government is a model of architecture. The churches, monasteries, and convents of Padua are numerous, and of beautiful architecture. The cathedral is less remarkable for its architecture, than for its paintings and interior decorations. The cathedral is a noble walk out.

side of the town. The university of Padua was at one time celebrated throughout Europe. Its buildings may be classed among the finest of the kind in Europe. There are here also other literary and scientific institutions, in particular the academy of sciences, founded by the senate of Venice. Few cities can boast of so ancient an origin as Padua. It has suffered repeatedly from the calamities of war. Its manufactures are of woollens, silks, ribbons, and leathers. Population 51,000. 20 miles W. Venice.

PADULA, a considerable town of Naples, in Calabria Citra. Population 6000.

PAESANA, a town of Italy, in Piedmont, on the Po. Population 4000.

PAGAHN, an ancient city of the Burman empire, on the river Irrawaddy.

PAGAN CREEK, a river of Virginia, which runs into James river.

PAGO, a small island in the Adriatic, in the gulf of Quarnero, opposite to the coast of Croatia. It is 34 miles in length, but is narrow. Area 50 square miles. Pop. 4000.

PATANA, a town of Malacca, on the east coast, 12 miles from the sea, on a river, whose mouth is in Lat. 3. 45. N.

PAULMEAU, a village of France, 7 miles S. E. Versailles. Population 1800.

PAUMBUZ, a seaport of Naples, in France, on the Loire, near its mouth. It has some trade in salt. Population 4300. 20 miles W. Nantes.

PAUMPUT, a seaport of France, department of the Cotes du Nord. Population 1700.

PAUMVOY, a town of France, department of Ille and Vilaine. It has considerable iron-works. Pop. 3700. 25 miles W. Rennes.

PAUXTON, a very pleasant village and parish of England, in Devonshire. Pop. 1700.

PAWNBURG, an irregularly built market town of England, in Gloucestershire, on a brook which runs into the Stroud. The church has a tower and spire 174 feet high. Population 4044. 7 miles S. E. Gloucester.

PAINT CREEK, a river of the United States, in Ohio.—Another which enters the Scotch.

PAISLEY, a large and opulent manufacturing town of Scotland, on the White Cart. It stretches out on both sides of the river, which divides it into the Old and New towns. The river is crossed by three substantial stone bridges, respectively named the Old, New, and Abbey bridges. The Old town consists chiefly of 12 principal streets, although there are in it many others of minor importance. The principal street of the New town is composed of elegant modern houses. From both sides several others strike off at different angles, and are equally crossed at some distance by others. All the streets in this part of the town have been recently built, and fully finished. Paisley contains 16 churches, of which 6 belong to the established church, one each to Episcopalians, Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, Anti-burghers, Cameronians, and Methodists. 2 to the communion of Relief, and 2 to the Independents. The most ancient ecclesiastical structure in Paisley, and the chief architectural ornament of the town, is the Abbey church, which has survived, although not without great injury, the revolutions of many centuries. The original building, when complete, consisted of a nave with its side aisles, a choir, north transept, and chapel attached to the southern side of the choir. Of the choir, the bare walls yet remain to the height of about 16 feet from the ground. The north transept is less dilapidated, and in its present state of almost ruin presents a splendid relic of ancient ecclesiastical magnificence. The nave, with its aisles, is in good repair, and constitutes the church of the Abbey parish of Paisley a collegiate charge. The whole interior was, in the year 1709, fitted up in a style according with that of the building itself. The chapel is a great curiosity, and is remarkable for a sounding aisle, as it is called, for which it is much visited. It contains the ancient monuments of Marjory Bruce, daughter of King Robert II., and various other royal remains. The abbey was founded in 1160, by Walter, great steward of Scotland, as a priory for the monks of the order of Cisterciens. The low church, built in 1736, has no claim to notice on account of its architecture. The new church of this parish, called St. George's church, is, however, a large and handsome structure. The High church, built in 1750, which occupies a lofty and commanding situation, forms, with its light tower and spire 101 feet in height, a beautiful object, visible at many miles distant around. The Middle church, built in 1761, is a neat and substantial edifice; and the other chapels and meeting-houses of the town are plain and commodious structures. The town-house, containing the prison, is a handsome building of freestone. A new county jail, which includes within it a bridewell, has been lately built. The coffee-room buildings, fronting the town-house, are of polished freestone, and are ornamented with pilasters of the Ionic order. The markets are spacious and convenient. There is a house of recovery, or infirmary, a town hospital, and an almshouse. There are, besides, numerous other charitable associations and institutions. Paisley has a public grammar-school, founded by King James VI. in 1576; four other established schools; five more, supported by subscriptions and mortuaries; eight charity schools; besides private schools. There are two public libraries, a general library, and a theological one, both supported by subscription. Paisley is a barony of barony. Its charter was granted in 1466, by King James IV. Paisley has been long celebrated as the seat of some of its branches of manufacture, particularly for all kinds of fancy goods in silk and cotton. It has risen to great commercial importance from very small beginnings. About the beginning of last century, the goods chiefly manufactured were chequered linen handkerchiefs, some of them fine and beautifully variegated, which were succeeded by goods of a lighter texture, such as lawns, some of them plain, others striped or chequered with cotton, and others spotted or figured, according to the taste or fancy of the artist. The weaving of linen and silk gauze was also carried on to considerable extent. Along with these was manufactured that species of thread called pounce or white thread. All these manufactures have now greatly declined, and have been succeeded by others, namely, the muslin branch, and other branches of cotton manufacture, which have been carried on to an extent unknown before. Paisley stands acknowledged the chief seat of the fancy muslin manufacture. The business is consequently, in good times, carried on to a very great extent. About 5000 looms are employed in it. The weaving of coarse cottons for printing, and of cotton sheeting, is also extensively carried on. Shawls, both of silk and cotton, and also of silk mixed with Merino wool, are extensively manufactured under the denominations of scarfs, plaids, and shawls. In 1805, since which time the trade has not much changed, it was estimated, that 20,550 persons were employed in the manufacture of muslin, 210 in that of silk, 7000 in cotton-spinning, 1439 in threads, and 100 in hosiery or tape. There are, besides, in the town, suburbs, and Abbey parish, breweries, a calico-printing work, two copperas works, foundries, several extensive meachfields, &c. For the trade of Paisley, considerable facilities are afforded by the river navigation, and by the Ardrossan canal. The river White Cart has also been rendered navigable for vessels of 10 or 20 tons. Population, including Abbey parish, 47,003. 7 miles S. by W. Glasgow, 17 S. E. Greenock. Long. 4. 22. W. Lat. 55. 50. N.

PAITA, a small city of Peru, province of Piura, on the coast of the Pacific ocean, with a good and well frequented port. It is the place where passengers disembark to go by land to Lima. This place was taken and destroyed by Anson, in 1741. 494 miles N. W. Lima. Long. 80. 50. W. Lat. 5. 5. S.

PALAIS, St., a town of France, in the island of Belle-isle. Population 2500.

PALAHOK, a small town of Spain, in Catalonia. 27 miles E. S. E. Gerona.

PALANOW, the capital of a district of the same name in Bengal, on the Coyle river. Long. 78. 10. E. Lat. 23. 52. N.

PALATINATE, LOWER, or PALATINATE OF THE RHINE, a province in the west of Germany, situated chiefly on the west side of the Rhine, having Ment. N. Alsace S., and Lorraine S. W. It extends from the 48th to the 50th degree of N. lat. Area 1600 square miles. Population 305,000.

PALATINATE, UPPER, the former name of a province of Germany, bordering on Bohemia, and now forming part of the circles of the Rhen and the Upper Maine, in the kingdom of Bavaria. Area 2760 square miles. Population 290,000.

PALAWAN ISLE, a large island in the Eastern seas, between the northern extremity of Borneo and the Philippines. Length 275 miles: breadth 32 miles.

PALAZZOLO, a town of Sicily, 20 miles W. Syracuse. Population 6000.

PALAZZUOLO, a town of Austrian Italy, on the Oglio, 14 miles E. S. E. Bergamo. Population 3100.

PAL-CATI-NOR, or BALKASH, a lake of Northern Tartary, 700 miles E. from the Aral, 200 miles long, and 110 broad.

PALEMBANG, capital of a district of the same name, in the island of Sumatra, which was conquered by the British in 1812. It is the emporium of the inland commerce of Sumatra, situated in a flat marshy track, on the left bank, and above the Delta of the river Palembang, about 60 miles from the sea. The city is intersected by several little branches of the river, which form a number of islands, said to be about 20 or 30, whence it has also received the appellation of the "City of Twenty Islands." One of these contains the palaces of the late sultan and his son, and the house also of the present sultan. In front of these palaces is an extensive battery, facing the river. The principal mosque is a pretty large building, nearly square, and covered with a pavilion roof of tiles. Adjoining to it is a high octagonal tower, from which the Muezzin calls the people to prayers. The houses of the common people are made of bamboos, with mats, and thatched. The Dutch had a factory here, which was demolished. There are at Palembang about 700 families of Chinese, 500 Arabs, and between 20,000 and 30,000 Malays. Long. 104. 51. E. Lat. 2. 58. 31. S.

PALEMBANG, the river on which the above city is situated: it falls into the straits of Banca, in Lat. 2. 18. S. and Long. 105. 8. E.

PALENCIA, the chief town of a province of the same name in Spain. The only remarkable edifices are the cathedral and the church of St. Antolin. Population 3300. 122 miles N. by W. Madrid.

PALERMO, a large and beautiful city of Sicily, the capital of the island, situated on the northern coast. It stands on the western shore of a bay, in an extensive and beautiful plain, presenting the appearance of a magnificent garden filled with fruit trees, and watered by rivulets. The principal streets are spacious and handsome, and the houses have in general something striking in their architecture. The form of Palermo is nearly circular. The two principal streets are the Cassaro and the Strada Nuova: they are both about a mile in length, and intersect each other at right angles, dividing the city, in a manner, into four equal parts. Their point of intersection forms an open octagonal space, called, from its shape, the Ottangolo. Each of the eight sides of this open space is adorned by a beautiful building, three stories high, composed of the Doric, Ionic, and Corinthian orders. Of the other streets of Palermo, few are deserving attention, most of them being narrow, winding, and dirty, and built without the least regard to regularity. The most frequented of the public walks of Palermo is the Marina, a raised platform or terrace, extending above a mile along the bay. At the extremity of this walk there is a delightful public garden, called the Flora, to which people of all ranks are admitted. The public edifices of Palermo are numerous. The royal palace is a vast irregular pile of building; its exterior wants symmetry and uniformity, but its apartments are spacious, and elegantly ornamented. The square in front contains a statue of Philip IV. of Sicily, surrounded by four other statues. Several of the mansions of the nobility are admired for their style of architecture. There are in this city three theatres, 40 monasteries, and 50 convents; and in the magnificence of its churches, Palermo is second only to Rome. The cathedral was erected in the 12th century, and would be a fine edifice, were not the Grecian and Gothic styles of architecture injudiciously mixed in it. The church of St. Giuseppe is profusely and richly ornamented, and contains some fine columns of grey Sicilian marble, nearly 60 feet high. Palermo contains various establishments for charity and education; the great hospital; that of St. Bartholomew, a large building; the poor-house, also an extensive edifice; and there are several pawn banks for the poor. The university is an extensive pile of building. There are professors in various branches of science. The trade of Palermo is not very extensive. Its mole, a structure of great utility, stretches above a quarter of a mile into the sea, and forms a port capable of containing 30 sail of the line, and several hundred merchantmen. The exports of Palermo are confined to a few articles, in particular silk and satin, with some manufactures for the supply of Malta. The silk thread obtained from the fish called the Pinna Marina, and manufactured here, is of almost unrivalled fineness. Population of Palermo, according to the most accurate estimates, 130,000. Palermo swarms with beggars of the most wretched appearance. The thermometer seldom falls below 50 degrees; it rises to 80 and 90. The Sirocco is very oppressive, but fortunately not of frequent occurrence. Palermo is of great antiquity, having been in possession of the Carthaginians and Romans. The Saracens made it the capital of their Sicilian territories. It has suffered repeatedly from earthquakes. 130 miles W. Messina; 200 S. by W. Naples. Long. 13. 20. 4. E. Lat. 38. 6. 44. N.

PALESTINE, a country of Asia, to the S. of Syria, and included within the limits of the Turkish empire. The Israelites having conquered this country, it was divided by Joshua among the ten tribes. Under the reigns of David and Solomon, it became one of the most flourishing kingdoms of Asia. It was conquered, however, by the kings of Nineveh and Babylon, who carried captive, first Israel, and then Judah, into the eastern provinces of their empire. After the conquest of Babylon by Cyrus, the Jews were allowed to return to their country, to rebuild their temple, and to re-establish their ecclesiastical constitution. Judaea continued thus a province of Persia, till after the conquest of Alexander, to whom it submitted without resistance. The Jews were again exposed to oppression from some of the Ptolemies, who having attempted to enforce the adoption of the Grecian idolatry, were met with the most determined resistance by the Maccabees, and Judaea now became an independent country. It fell under the wide spread dominion of Rome, who established the Herods as tributary kings. It was at this crisis that Judaea became the theatre of those great events which form the foundation of our faith. The Jews, however, having repeatedly rebelled against the authority of the Romans, Titus entered Judaea with a large force, took Jerusalem, razed it to the ground, carried the whole nation captive, and dispersed them through the different provinces of the empire. The country remained in possession of the Romans till the conversion of the empire to Christianity, when Judaea became an object of religious veneration, and the Holy Land was now enriched by the crowd of pilgrims who resorted thither from every part of the Christian world. In the sixth century, Judaea fell under the sway of the Mahometans, and afterwards of the Turks; which gave occasion to the invasion of the country by the European powers, in order to deliver it from these infidels. Jerusalem was accordingly taken by the European forces, and was erected into a Latin kingdom under Godfrey of Boulogne, which endured for above 80 years, during which the Holy Land streamed continually with Christian and Saracen blood. In 1107, Judaea was conquered by Saladin, on the decline of whose kingdom it passed through various hands, till in 1517 it was finally swallowed up in the Turkish empire. According to the best informed travellers, the greater part of Palestine displays a truly luxuriant fertility, corresponding entirely to the description of the promised land. Judaea proper, the ancient kingdom of Judah, comprises the territory extending from the Lake Asphaltites to the sea, and consists of hills and valleys of great beauty and fertility, where the sides of the mountains are fitted for the vine, the olive, the sycamore, and are crowned with natural groves of oak and cypress; while the earth is abundantly covered with aromatic plants. It produces also plentiful crops of tobacco, wheat, barley, and millet, and delicious wine is produced in some of the districts. These mountains are tenanted by the wildest Arabs, who live in caves. In proceeding eastward to the shores of the Dead sea, the scene becomes more decidedly barren.

Gloomy and naked rocks, stones, sand, and asens, are the only objects which then present themselves. To the north of the ancient Judæa was Samaria, the greater part of which is now comprised under the district of Napulose. This district is mountainous, but flourishing, well cultivated, and carries on a considerable trade. Corn, silk, and olives, are produced abundantly in its plains. To the north of Samaria, but still communicating with Judæa by the banks of the Jordan, is Galilee, distinguished by its natural beauty and fertility. The plain of Esdrachon is described by Dr Clarke as one vast meadow, covered with the richest pasture. He considers this as the richest part of all Palestine. The lake of Tiberias, or Genesareth, is surrounded by lofty and picturesque hills, the sides of which were once highly cultivated, and its banks covered with flourishing towns, now almost deserted. The regions beyond Jordan, though less noticed in history, include, however, many tracts once fertile and flourishing. Here are found the Tauran and Dischaulan, consisting of a vast plain, not watered by any great river; yet the inhabitants contrive, by collecting the torrents and rain water into ponds, to obtain a sufficient supply for the purposes of agriculture, so that very extensive crops of grain are raised in the district. In rainy parts there are the remains of ancient rains.

Few countries are more unfortunately situated than modern Palestine. It suffers equally from the tyranny and weakness of the Turkish government, which has strength sufficient to oppress the people, and deprive them of the fruits of their industry; yet does not possess enough of vigour to defend them against the hordes of Arabs who fill every part of the surrounding deserts. The state of the country depends in a great measure on the character of the pacha. There is no security for life or property, independent of his caprice; and when he is a tyrant, the country suffers accordingly. The pachalic of Acre long groined under the fierce and gloomy tyranny of Djezzar, whose avarice sought to gratify itself by rapine and extortion, without ever viewing his interest as connected with the permanent prosperity of the districts which he governed. On entering the territory of the pacha of Damascus, the happiest change presented itself; the whole country subject to him being cultivated like a garden. This pacha was, however, driven from his government by his masters at Constantinople. It is now occupied by another, who is pacha at once of Damascus, Acre, and Aleppo, and who is represented by Burckhardt in rather a favourable light. Palestine is inhabited by the Turks, who here, as elsewhere throughout the empire, occupy all the civil and military posts; while the Greeks form a very numerous part of the population, and the country districts are filled to a great extent with nomadic Arabs. A considerable number of Christian monks still reside in the Holy Land; and there is no considerable town which does not contain at least one convent. They are described by Dr Clarke as complete cheats and impostors.

PALESTRINA, a town of Italy, 20 miles E. Rome. Population 3000.

PALESTRINA, a town of Italy, on a narrow island of the Lagunes, 6 miles S. Venice. Population 6000.

PALICAUD, or PALIGNAULTCHERT, a town of India, province of Malabar. Long 76. 50. E. Lat. 10. 50. N.

PALIERE, a town of France, department of the Allier. Population 3000.

PALLANZA, a town of Italy, on the Lago Maggiore. Population 1360.

PALLISER'S ISLANDS, a cluster of islands in the South Pacific ocean.

PALMA, an island off the coast of Africa, forming part of the group of the Canaries, 25 miles in length, and 15 in breadth. It is very elevated; the centre is often covered with snow, and contains extensive pine forests, as well as good timber for ship-building. The coasts are very fertile. The vine succeeds well, and produces wine for exportation, as well as excellent brandy; almonds, honey, and wax, are also objects of trade. The whole island produces much silk, of which there are manufactures. The sugar-cane is also successfully cultivated; and the inhabitants are engaged in the fishery on their coasts. Population 22,600.

PALEMA, the capital of the island of Majorca, in the Mediterranean, at the bottom of a large bay, formed by the two capes Blanco and Cala Figuera. It is still surrounded with walls flanked with bastions. Part of the streets are narrow and ill paved, but those in the lower part of the town, and all the squares, are spacious and regular. Of the public buildings, one of the most conspicuous is the cathedral, a large and handsome Gothic building. The parish church of St. Michel is still more ancient, and served for a mosque under the Moors. The government house is an irregular but very large building, containing a chapel royal, an arsenal, barracks, and a state prison. The house appointed for the meetings of the merchants and trades, &c. was built in the Gothic style, in the 14th century. The town-house attracts attention by the sculpture and public ornaments on its entablature. Palma contains four hospitals. The private houses are in general on the plan of the ancient Moorish residences, having on the ground floor a portico and lobby, with pillars, and with some small apartments. Population 30,000. Their chief employments are weaving woollens and silk. The harbour has a mole of nearly three quarters of a mile in length, and defended by two strong forts. 340 miles E. by S. Madrid. Long 1. 39. 28. W. Lat. 39. 40. N.

PALMA, a town of Sicily, on the sea coast. It is noted for the quantity of sulphur made in its vicinity. Pop. 1000.

PALMA, a town of Andalusia, on the Xenil. Population 1200.

PALMA, a city of New Granada, province of Tunja, on the Magdalena. Population 690 housekeepers: 54 miles N. W. Santa Fe. Long. 74. 32. W. Lat. 6. 8. N.

PALMANOVA, a town and fortress of Austrian Italy, 53 miles E. N. E. Venice. Population 4500.

PALMAS, a city of New Granada, on the Magdalena. Population 400 housekeepers. 50 miles N. N. W. Pamplona.

PALMAS, Ciudad de las, capital of the island of Grand Canary, and which carries on all its commerce. The convents are numerous. Population 9137.

PALMAS, Cape, a promontory of Western Africa, forming the entrance from the north into the gulf of Guinea.

PALMIRA, a town of Estremadura, 6 miles N. Sevilha. Population 3600.

PALMIRA, Point, a projecting point on the S. shore of Melville Island. Long. 108. 4. W. Lat. 74. 55. N.

PALMETTO, Point, two capes on the N. and S. coasts of Jamaica. Long. 76. 20. W. Lat. 18. 18. N.—Long. 77. 57. W. Lat. 18. 7. N.

PALMIRA, a celebrated point of land at the head of the bay of Bengal, on which a light-house has lately been erected. Long. 87. 5. E. Lat. 20. 44. N.

PALMYRA, an ancient city of Asia, situated in the heart of the desert of Syria, now a mass of splendid ruins, the seat of which was long unknown, until the spot was at last penetrated by some European travelers, who were astonished at the splendid scene of ruins before them. Long. 38. 40. E. Lat. 34. 29. N.

PALMYRA, a township and village of the United States, in Ontario county, New York. Pop. 2187. 233 miles W. Albany.—The name of various other townships.

PALO, a town of Diarbekir, in Asiatic Turkey, on the Euphrates. Pop. 10000 Turks, Armenians, and Kurds. 60 miles N. Diarbekir.

PALOTA, a town of Hungary, 8 miles W. S. W. Stuhl-Weissenburg. Pop. 1000.

PANABARCA, a mountain of Quito, covered with perpetual snow.

PANIERA, a town of France, on the Arriege. Its chief manufactures consist of woollens, cottons, caps, and hats. It has a cathedral and a castle. Population 6200.

PANISOA, a river of Greece, in the Morea.

PANLICO SOUND, a large bay on the coast of North Carolina; 85 miles long, and from 10 to 30 broad, separated from the Atlantic ocean by a beach of sand, hardly a mile wide, generally covered with small trees or bushes, through which are several small inlets. This sound communicates with Core and Albemarle sounds, and receives Pamlico or Tar rivers.

PANARATO, a town of Italy, in Piedmont. Population 2500.

PANFAS, extensive plains of South America, in the province of Buenos Ayres.

PANFAS DEL SACRAMENTO vast plains of South America, to the eastward of the Andes, which run in a direct line nearly north and south, through the province of Peru.

PANPATAN, a port on the east-south-east coast of the island of Margavia.

PANPHLOXIA, a town of France, department of the Tain. Population 1000.

PANPHELUNA, or PANOLUNA, a considerable fortified town in the north of Spain, and capital of the province of Navarre, on the Arga. It stands partly on an eminence, partly on a plain, and is surrounded by mountains, at the distance of six or eight miles. The chief defence of the town is two castles, one in the inside, the other on the outside of the walls. The latter is the citadel, and is of great strength. The religious edifices are the cathedral, 4 churches, and 13 monasteries: none of the last, with the exception of one adjoining the cathedral, are remarkable for richly carved. In June 1813, Pampluna was the scene of obstinate fighting, between the British and French, and surrendered to the former on 31st October. Population 14,000. 62 miles E. S. E. Bilbao, and about 200 N. E. Madrid. Long. 1. 40. 53. W. Lat. 42. 40. 37. N.

PANPHELUNA, a city of New Granada, in the province of Tunja, 103 miles N. E. Santa Fe.

PANPHELUNA, a river of Virginia, which unites with the Mattaponi to form York river.

PANAMA, a province of Terra Firma, in the viceroyalty of New Granada, bounded N. by the Spanish Main, E. by the province of Darien, S. by the Pacific ocean, and W. by Veragua. The climate is hot, moist, and very unpleasant. The soil of Panama is prolific, abundantly producing the tropical fruits and plants. Great part of the country is still covered with thick forests; and the land between the two seas consists generally of abrupt and broken chains of mountains. The trade of Panama is chiefly to Veragua, and the ports of Peru and New Granada. The province of Panama contains three cities, 12 villages, and numerous settlements of converted Indians.

PANAMA, capital of the above province, on the isthmus of Panama, at the bottom of a large bay of the Pacific ocean. The streets are broad and paved, both in the city and its suburbs, but the houses of the suburbs are mostly of wood, interspersed with thatched huts. It has a cathedral, which is a handsome edifice of stone, as are the churches, convents, monasteries, and an excellent hospital. Panama is still remarkable for its fine bay, which is cradled within its arms. Long. 79. 19. W. Lat. 9. 0. 30. N.

PANAMIA, one of the islands between Lipari and Stromboli.

PANALLEN, a town of Piedmont, on the Po. 16 miles S. Turin. Population 2600.

PANCSA, a town of Hungary, at the confluence of the Tena and the Danube. Population 7000. 8 miles N. E. Belgrade.

PANPOLA, a village of the north-west of Hungary, remarkable chiefly for giving name to the Serbian or Russian foot soldiers.

PANJANI, a seaport town of the south of India, province of Malabar, on the Paliand river. It consist of 6000 houses irregularly built, and nearly 10 mosques or Hindoo temples. It has a good trade, and most of the inhabitants are rich.

PANICOLO, a town of Naples, 22 miles N. W. Naples. Population 2200.

PANIPAT, a considerable town of Hindostan, province of Delhi. It had formerly a brick wall, and round towers at the angles. Long. 76. 50. E. Lat. 29. 23. N.

PANANG, a town of the Burman empire, on the Irrawaddy river.

PANNAM, a town of Hindostan, province of Allahabad. Near it are celebrated diamond mines. Long. 80. 17. E. Lat. 24. 43. N.

PANNASCH, a village of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire, noted for its mineral waters.

PANTELARIA, the ancient Cosyra, a small island in the Mediterranean, belonging to Sicily, and situated between that island and the coast of Africa. Long. 8. 26. 25. E. Lat. 36. 45. 40. N.

PANUCO, a small town of Mexico, intendancy of Vera Cruz, on the river Panuco. Long. 98. 52. W. Lat. 21. 18. N.

PANWILL, a considerable town of Hindostan, on the river Pen. It carries on a considerable trade. 27 miles E. Bombay.

PANY ISL, one of the Philippine isles, 110 miles in length, by 33 in breadth.

PAO, SAN JUAN BAPTISTO, a city of the Caracas, province of Venezuela, on the river Pao. It is regularly built, and has a neat parish church. 150 miles S. W. Caracas. Lat. 9. 20. N.—The river Pao falls into the Apure.—There is another river of this name. It falls into the Orinoco.

PAO, CONCEPCION DEL, a town of the Caracas, province of Barcelona. Its inhabitants subsist by the extensive pasturages which they possess on the Orinoco.

PAOLA, a town of Naples, in Calabria Citra. Population 1500.

PAOLI, a village of the United States, and capital of Orange county, Indiana.—The name of other two villages in Indiana.

PAPA, a town of Hungary, 25 miles S. by W. Raab. Population 4000.

PAPAGAYO, a river of Mexico, which runs into the Pacific ocean. 25 miles N. Acapulco.—The name of a gulf on the North Pacific ocean, and on the west side of the Isthmus of Nicaragua.

PAPA-STOUR, PAPA-STROSEY, and PAPA-WESTRAY, three small islands, one of Shetland, and two of Orkney.

PAPPENBURG, a town of Hanover, on a large canal which joins the river Ems, 20 miles S. S. E. Emden. Population 3300.

PAPPENBURG, a town of Bavaria, on the Altmühl, 15 miles N. E. Donauwert. Population 2000.

PAPS OF JURA, four mountains in the island of Jura, seen at a great distance.

PAPPA, a large island in the Eastern seas, lying from the south end of Gilead, and the north coast of Ceram, in a south-west direction, about 1200 miles. It is not quite certain whether it is an island or a cluster of islands. It is indented by such deep bays, that it resembles a chain of peninsulas, so near does the sea approach on each side. The coast, viewed from the sea, rises gradually into hills of considerable elevation; but there are no mountains seen of which the height is remarkable. The whole is covered with palm trees and timber of a large size. The inhabitants are savages.

PARA, GRAN, a province of the kingdom of Brazil, bounded N. by the kingdom of Grana La, Guiana, and the great bay formed by the Atlantic at the entrance of the great river Amazonas, E. by the province of Maranhão, S. by the provinces of Goiás and Matto Grosso, and W. by the kingdom of Peru. The climate is extremely hot. The chief productions of the country are sugar, coffee, and cocoa. In the woods is a variety of timber. The chief rivers are the Madera, the Topavos, the Zingu, the Araguay, and the Tocantines, which all come from the northern mountains of Brazil, and fall into the Amazons.

PARA, GRAN, the capital of the above province. This city is handsome, and has some beautiful edifices. It is situated on the river Tocantines, the navigation of which is difficult. Population 10,000, who are miserably poor. It has a citadel and castle at the entrance of the river. 60 miles from its mouth. Long. 48. 33. W. Lat. 1. 30. S.

PARA, a river of the above province and kingdom, which is, properly speaking, one of the mouths of the Amazons, about 40 miles wide. Lat. 20. S.

PARACATI, principal village of a district of the same name, in Brazil, 270 miles N. W. Tejuco. Population 1000.

PARAGONG, a town of Northern Hindostan, province of Bochar, famous for its manufacture of swords, daggers, arrows, and molten images of Boodh. Long. 89. 21. E. Lat. 27. 43. N.

PARAGUAY, a very extensive government of the viceroyalty of Buenos Ayres, bounded N. W. and W. by Chiquitos, Chacabos, and Tucuman. N. by the extensive lake of Xarayes, N. E. and E. by the Portuguese territories, and S. E. and S. by the Parana, which separates it from the missions of Guaira in Buenos Ayres, its jurisdiction ending in the south of the city of Assumption, in 26. 48. S. Lat.; and it is divided from Tucuman by the river Paraguay. The great natural features of this country are the numerous rivers, swamps, lakes, plains, and woods, with which it abounds. Its largest and most noted rivers are the Paraguay, the Parana, the Parudos, Mbotely, Cabati, Ipané, Piray, in the north parts, and in the south the Canabé and Tibiquari, the latter of which divides the government from that of Buenos Ayres. These in the rainy season, being swollen, overflow their banks, and inundate far and wide the adjacent country. The climate is in general moist and temperate, though in some parts it is cold. The temperate parts abound with all kinds of grain, beans, pease, melons, cucumbers, and European vegetables and fruits. It produces, besides, various medicinal plants; also the Paraguay tea, or matto, a plant, an infusion of which supplies the inhabitants with a refreshing drink. The consumption of this article, not only in these provinces, but in those of Peru and Chili, is incredible, since there is scarcely any person who does not take it two or three times in the course of the day. The forests abound with a variety of plants and woods, medicinal and aromatic, and many of them yielding useful dyes. The feathered creation are in endless variety. The ostrich is the chief bird, being the largest seen in the plains of Paraguay, and is remarkable for its immense size, fine plumage, and swift motion. The most ferocious animal is the jaguar or tiger. The other animals are the puma or cougar, the black bear, the ant bear, and the tapir or river cow. Mosquitoes, and an innumerable variety of insects, are the plague of this fine country, and infest both the waters and the land. Here are snakes, both large and small, vipers, scorpions, &c. The great box constrictor is found in the moist places adjoining the rivers. Some parts are haunted by the vampire bat. The trade of Paraguay consists in the export of its tea, tobacco, sugar, cotton, hides, tallow, wax, honey, cattle, horses, mules, wool, leather, &c. Population estimated at 97,430 Indians, and Spaniards or whites, of which the latter do not form much more than a twentieth part. The only towns of importance are the capital Assumption, Villaria, Curuguaty, Concepcion, and Neembucu. Paraguay was first discovered by Sebastian Cabot, in the year 1526. In 1536, the Jesuits made their appearance, and by the effect of gentleness and policy, they succeeded in obtaining a great ascendancy over the minds of the natives, and in establishing settlements in different parts of the country.

PARAGUAY, a large river of South America, which has its source in Lat. 13. S., and enters the ocean under the name of the Rio de la Plata.—See Plata, Rio de la.

PARAIBA, the capital of a province of the same name in Brazil, on the Paraiba, about ten miles from the sea. It is a handsome town, defended by three forts. The cathedral church is an elegant edifice. Population 4000. Long. 35. 10. 30. W. Lat. 6. 57. 30. S.

PARAIBA, a large river of the province of Paraíba, which forms the great bay of Paraíba.

PARAIBA, a large river of Brazil, province of Rio Janeiro, which enters the Atlantic in Lat. 21. 34. 30. S.—It is also the name of a river of Guiana, which joins the Orinoco.

PARAMARIBO, a town of Guiana, and capital of the province of Surinam, on the Surinam river, about 18 miles from its mouth. It is built in the form of an oblong square. All the streets, which are perfectly straight, are lined with orange, shaddock, tamarind, and lemon trees, which appear in everlasting bloom. They are finely paved with gravel. The houses are, with few exceptions, built of fine timber, and are, in general, elegantly furnished. The town-hall is an elegant building, covered with tiles. Here the different courts are held; and underneath are the prisons for European delinquents. There is a Protestant church, a Lutheran chapel, and two elegant Jewish synagogues, the one German, and the other Portuguese. There is also a large military hospital. There is a noble road for shipping, the river before the town being about a mile in breadth. The town is protected by fort Zeelandia on the east. The citadel is separated from the town by a large esplanade, where the troops parade. Number of houses 1400.

PARAMATTA, a town of New Holland, at the head of Port Jackson harbour, at the distance of about eighteen miles by water, and fifteen by land, from Sydney. The river for the last seven or eight miles is only navigable for boats of twelve or fifteen tons burden. This town is built along a small fresh water stream, which falls into the river. It consists principally of one street, about a mile in length. The public buildings are the church, the government-house, and the new orphan-house. The population, principally composed of inferior traders, publicans, artificers, and labourers, is 1200. The public institutions are an hospital and a female orphan-house. It has made but slow progress compared with the town of Sydney.

PARAMITHIA, a considerable town of Albania. Population 15,000. 19 miles S. W. Joannina.

PARANA, a large river of South America, which rises in Brazil, in the province of Matto Grosso, and after a long and winding course, falls into the Paraguay, in Lat. 27. 25. S. when both rivers assume the name of the Plata.

PARATECA, a village of Brazil, on the Rio Francisco, 240 miles S. W. St. Salvador.

PARAVANI, a town of Bulgaria. It has some trade, and a castle. 115 miles N. N. E. Adrianople.

PARAY, LE MONIAL, a town of France, department of the Saône and Loire. Population 5900.

PARCE, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 2200.

PARCEPRIM, a town of Germany, 20 miles S. E. Schwerin. Population 3200.

PARDO, Rio, a river of Brazil, which joins the Anhaedery, and afterwards enters the Parana, in Lat. 21. S. Diamonds are found in its bed, and on its shore diamond works are established. The other river of this name joins the Francisco.

PARDUBITZ, a town of Bohemia, on the Elbe, 60 miles E. Prague. Pop. 3000.

PAKECCHIA, or PAROS, chief town of the island of Paros, in the Grecian archipelago. It is small, and in appearance deserted.

PARENZO, a town of Austrian Illyria, 30 miles S. Trieste. Population 2100.

PARGA, a seaport on the coast of Albania, opposite to the southern point of the island of Corfu. It stands near the mouth of a river (the Acheron of the ancients), is surrounded with walls, and has a double harbour, defended by a battery. The inhabitants are, or rather were, Albanian Greeks, and amounted to 5000. Parga, being independent of Ali Pacha, the tyrant of Albania, afforded an asylum to refugees from his violence. He accordingly marched against it. The Pargians withstood the attack, but applied to the British in Corfu, and received a garrison from them. It was afterwards, however, surrendered to Ali, on his agreeing to pay a pecuniary indemnity to those of the inhabitants who should refuse to remain after a change of government. The evacuation took place in 1819, and most of the inhabitants removed to the Ionian islands. 30 miles S. W. Joannina.

PARI, an abundant river of Peru, which enters the Amazons.

PARIA, the capital of a province in Buenos Ayres, 210 miles N. W. La Plata. Long. 68. 20. W. Lat. 18. 50. S.

PARIA, GULF or, a gulf of South America, in the Caraccas, which has on the west the province of Cumana, and on the east the island of Trinidad. From these two lands on the north, two points jut out, with two islands intervening, which leave four openings, called the Mouths of the Dragon, by which the gulf communicates with the Caribbean sea. This gulf is 25 leagues from east to west, and 15 from north to south: there is anchorage in all that extent, but its depth varies from 8 to 30 fathoms.

PARIONE L'ÉVÊQUE, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Pop. 2800.

PARIMA, a lake of Guiana, in the interior, of which little is known.

PARIS, the capital of France, and one of the finest cities in the world, situated on a plain on the banks of the Seine. It is surrounded with a great circular wall erected in 1785, which is 17 miles in circuit: but the ground on which there are buildings might be comprised in a circuit of 14 miles. In Paris, the oldest and worst built parts are to the eastward, viz. the insulated spot called the Cite, the suburb of St Antoine, and the quarter of the Marais. From the Cite the streets were, in the course of ages, extended northward towards the Temple, and southward towards the Pantheon, but without acquiring width or elegance, until, in a more advanced era, the labour of the builder were extended to the westward, viz. to the Tuilleries N. and the suburb of St Germain S. The streets of the Cite can be compared only to W. End Lane or East Cheap. Of the streets adjoining it, whether to the north or south, the houses are also of an inconspicuous height. Several of them, such as the streets of the Temple, St Martin, St Denis, and Montmartre, are long, and extend as far as from London bridge to Shoreditch church, but they have not half the width of Bishopsgate street. The suburb of St Germain contains la rue de l'Université, la rue des Augustins, la rue de Bourbon, and a number of other streets straight and well paved. The suburbs of Paris still preserve their names, but they are as closely joined to the main part of the city as Westminster and Southwark to London. All the streets of Paris are lighted by reflecting lamps, suspended at a great height in the middle of the street. The Boulevards, occupying the space appropriated to the defence of the town in former ages, when its circumference did not exceed seven miles, have been converted all along the north part of Paris, into a spacious and magnificent street, above two miles in length: it is planted with trees, and is from 200 to 300 feet wide. On the south side of the town, the Boulevards extend a still greater length, and are planted with trees, but not yet lined with houses. Paris contains various squares, of which the finest is the Place Vendôme, an octagonal space, surrounded by elegant stone buildings, 500 feet in length, and 400 in breadth: the Place Royale, a square in the east of Paris. The others are the Place des Victoires, a central and busy spot; the Place de Greve, the scene of the revolutionary executions, in the centre of Paris. The Place du Carrousel is a spacious oblong between the Tuilleries and the Louvre, extending a quarter of a mile in length, and having the long picture gallery on its south side. This is the place for the occasional exercise of the troops and national guards. The Place de Louis XV. is situated to the west of the garden of the Tuilleries. The Champ de Mars is an oblong park on the south-west of Paris, extending from the Military School to the river, and bordered on each side by several rows of trees. The Palais Royal, situated towards the centre of Paris, forms a large pile of building, entered in three distinct parts by as many portals or archways, and bearing less the appearance of a princely residence than of a place of business. The facade fronting the rue St Honoré was built in 1781, and is ornamented with Doric and Ionic pillars surmounted by a finely sculptured fronton. At the back of these courts, and at a distance from the main building, is the garden of the palace, a spacious oblong, nearly 250 yards in length, having in its central part a basin with jet d'eau, and at either end a shrubbery. The Seine, flowing from east to west, intersects Paris nearly in the middle. It is crossed by the Pont Neuf, built in the 17th century; the Pont Royal, of five arches, near the Tuilleries, built by Louis XIV.; the Pont de Louis XVI., also of five arches, finished in 1790. Lower down the river, and opposite the Champ de Mars, is the Pont de Jena, or des Invalides; a stone bridge; and higher up, opposite the Jardin des Plantes, is the Pont d'Austerlitz, an iron bridge, both elegant structures, and both erected under Bonaparte. Lastly comes the Pont des Arts, opposite to the Louvre, a neat but slight iron bridge, appropriated to foot passengers. The public buildings in Paris are numerous. The Tuileries, the present royal residence, was begun in the 16th century, and finished, after various interruptions, in the 17th. It is a noble and venerable structure, and has, particularly when viewed through the shady avenues from the farther extremity of the garden, an air of romantic grandeur. The Louvre is only a quarter of a mile to the east of the Tuileries, and on the same side of the Seine. Its form is square, with a large interior court, 400 feet by 400. It was finished in the age of Louis XIV. The front towards the water is elegant; but the eastern front, called from the pillars the colonnade of the Louvre, is a model of symmetry. The Louvre is used not as a royal habitation, but as a depot, in its magnificent halls, for objects of taste and art. The palace of the Luxembourg, situated in the south of Paris, is distinguished by the symmetry of its proportions. The Palais Bourbon, situated on the left bank of the Seine, on the west side of Paris, is a splendid building. Its front towards the river is a magnificent peristyle, composed of twelve Corinthian pillars, surmounted by a triangular fronton admirably sculptured. The other buildings worthy of note are the garde muble, or depot of the jewels and valuable furniture of the crown, a great stone building to the west of the Tuileries; the Hotel des Invalides, a large and elegant structure; the Military School, which forms one end of the Champ de Mars; the Palace of the Legion of Honour, nearly opposite to the Tuileries. On the same side of the Seine, but more towards the centre of Paris, stand the buildings of the Institute, and the Mint, or Hotel des Monnaies. Among the old structures, the principal are the Hotel de Ville and the Palais de Justice. The granary for corn is a long range of stone buildings; and lastly, in the busy part of the town, near the street of Montmartre, there is an elegant and extensive exchange lately built. Notre-Dame, the metropolitan church, is a large Gothic building, situated in the Cite. The Pantheon or new church of St Genevieve, is in the south part of the town, and has a front adorned with elegant sculpture, and with colossal pillars. There are, besides, the church of St Sulpice, and the church of St Eustache. The other churches of the city, such as St Paul, St Germain, &c. are in general well built, but have nothing striking. The Protestants in Paris have three churches, one of considerable size. The mansions, or, as they are termed, the hotels of great families, are spread all along the west part of the town, particularly in the suburb of St Germain, and correspond to the town residences of our nobility. As to private houses, the chief difference is in their being considerably higher than in London, having frequently five, six, and sometimes seven stories; they have also much less uniformity, adjoining buildings differing from each other in height, in length of front, in number of windows, and in the distribution of the interior.

The most striking of the public monuments is the Column of the Place Vendome, erected by Bonaparte, to commemorate his successes in Germany in 1805. It is a great brazen pillar; the diameter is 12 feet; the height 133; its form an imitation of Trajan's pillar at Rome. The whole forms a magnificent monument, judiciously placed in the midst of an elegant square. After this comes the triumphal arch in the Place du Carrousel, near the Tuileries, erected in 1806; the Arc de Triomphe de l'Etoile, outside of the barrier of Neuilly, begun in 1806, but still unfinished; the Porte, or gate of St Denis, a large triumphal arch, erected by Louis XIV.; and the Porte St Martin; also a fine bronze statue of Henry IV, erected in 1818, on the Pont Neuf. Of the public fountains of Paris (in all no less than 80), several are much admired.

The hospitals of Paris are numerous, and, since the beginning of the present century, well managed. The largest by far is the Hotel Dieu; after it come the hospitals de la Charite, St Antoine, Beaujon, des Enfants Malades, and others, to the number in all of 11. Distinct from these are the Hospices, or establishments where the aged, the infirm, the lunatics, are received and supported, on paying a small sum. The prisons of Paris also are much amended in their management, since the beginning of the present century. The catacombs of Paris are subterraneous quarries, excavated in the course of ages for the building of Paris, and converted in the latter part of the 18th century, into a great burying repository. They stretch along the south part of Paris, are of great extent, and being easily traversed with the aid of a guide, form a prominent, though certainly not an attractive object of attention to travellers. The literary institutions of Paris are, the Institute, composed of nearly 200 members, and divided, since 1816, into four academies. Paris contains also various societies, viz. of medicine, of agriculture, of sciences and arts, &c. The university is a very old establishment, and though suspended in the fervour of the revolution, has long been re-established on a very extensive plan. Paris contains also four lycees or great public schools. The Athenaeum also has classes, but on a smaller scale. The School of Medicine, an elegant and capacious building, has halls for public lectures, large, and generally crowded. At the Jardin des Plantes are no less than 13 classes for botany, zoology, geology, mineralogy, chemistry, &c. To these are to be added the school for painting, sculpture, and architecture. There is also in Paris a number of celebrated schools for particular professions. The Military School is for the education of 500 youths, generally the sons of officers who have fallen in the service of their country. The Ecole Polytechnique is for the education of engineers. The Veterinary School at Alfort, near Paris, has classes on zoology, rural economy, the care of animals, &c. Paris is very rich in libraries; that of the king is the largest in Europe, containing upwards of 300,000 printed volumes, 72,000 manuscripts, 5000 volumes of engravings, and a rare and curious collection of antiquities and medals. There are, besides, the library of the Institute, which is select and valuable; the Bibliotheque Mazarine, containing 60,000 volumes; that of the Pantheon 80,000; the Bibliotheque de l' Arsenal, an old but good collection. Amidst the collections of interest to artists, those of the Louvre hold unquestionably the first rank. Of the ground floor of that spacious building, a great part is appropriated to statues and other specimens of sculpture, ancient and modern, distributed in spacious halls, and arranged with much taste. From these a magnificent staircase leads to the gallery of paintings, a collection still so large and so valuable, that the spectator has difficulty in believing that it can ever have been more rich or more splendid. Next to these, the object of greatest interest in Paris is the museum of natural history, in the building belonging to the Jardin des Plantes. Next comes the Jardin des Plantes itself, exhibiting in miniature, groups of plants of almost every region in the globe; also a collection of animals of the most different latitudes, lions, elephants, bears, &c. In a large building in the central part of Paris, is the Museum of French Monuments, a collection of statues and other sculptured ornaments. The Conservatory of the Arts and Trades is appropriated to mechanical improvements, and contains models of almost all ingenious machines. The chief theatres in Paris are the Opera and the Odeon, but the others are also much frequented, and conducted with taste and ingenuity. Public rooms, with music and singing, and gardens, such as Tivoli and Baguoy, miniatures of Vauxhall, are more numerous in Paris than in London. Of the public gardens and walks, the finest and most frequented are those of the Tuileries, which extend, in a beautiful oblong, to the westward of the palace. On the south side of Paris are the gardens of the Luxembourg, less regular, but not less attractive. The Champs Elysees afford very pleasant walks; and the Boulevards in the summer evenings present an animated scene.

The manufactures of Paris, as of London, consist chiefly of articles of taste or nice workmanship, such as jewellery, watches, clocks, porcelain, cabinet ware, mathematical instruments, silks, artificial flowers, and plate glass. To these are to be added ornamental articles in bronze; also cottons, carpets, &c. The well-known manufactory of the Gobelins exhibits imitations of beautiful pictures, in webs of the finest silk and worsted. That of Sevres is equally noted for the richness of its porcelain. Paris is almost exclusively the seat of the wholesale bookselling and printing business of France. It was originally a Roman station, and in the year 508 was the winter quarters of Julian. In 508, it was constituted the capital of their kingdom. It was surrounded with walls in the end of the 12th century. After the revolution it received many embellishments. In 1792, the inhabitants were computed at 550,000; in 1817, they were found by actual survey to amount to 715,000. 200 miles S. by E. London, 270 S. by W. Amsterdam, 700 W. Vienna, 750 N. W. Rome, and 1400 S. W. St Petersburg. Long. 2. 20. 15. E. Lat. 48. 50. 14. N.

PARIS, a township and village of the United States, in Oneida county, New York. Population 5418.—The name of various other townships.

PARISHVILLE, a post village of the United States, in Lawrence county, New York.

PARKER, a river of the United States, in Massachusetts.

PARKER'S BAY, a bay on the south coast of Jamaica, a little south of Palmetto point.

PARKER'S CREEK, a river of Maryland, which runs into the Chesapeake.

PARKHEAD and PARKHOUSE, two villages of Scotland, near Glasgow.

PARKINSON'S FERRY, a post village of Washington county, Pennsylvania.

PARMA, a duchy of the north of Italy, extending from 9. 26. to 10. 56. of E. long. and from 44. 14. to 44. 59. of N. lat. It is bounded N. by Lombardy, E. by Modena, and S. and W. by Tuscany. Its surface is partly mountainous, partly level. The principal rivers are the Po, the Taro, the Trebia, the Lenza, and a number of smaller streams, all taking their rise in the Apennines, and discharging themselves into the Po. Area 2300 square miles. Population 330,000.

PARMA, the capital of the duchy of the same name, divided by the Parma into two unequal parts, connected by bridges. Its circumference is about three miles. It is still surrounded by a ditch and mound. The streets of Parma are broad, straight, and tolerably clean. In the centre of the town is a handsome square, surrounded with arcades or piazzas. The cathedral, built in the Gothic style, is remarkable chiefly for its dome, painted by Correggio. In point of architecture, the church called the S. Stefano is the finest; it is built in the modern style, in the form of a Greek cross. The ducal palace is not a separate edifice, but a great range of buildings, extending without plan or taste along a square and adjoining streets. Connected with it is the great theatre, an edifice on the plan of the sacchetti. The buildings of the university are large and elegant. The famous gallery of paintings of the Farnese family is no longer at Parma. The present museum, however, contains several masterpieces of Corregio, Parmegiano, Schidone, and others. Its manufactures are limited, consisting chiefly of silk, and in a small degree of hats; also of fustian. Parma was founded by the ancient Etruscans, and has never changed its name. Population 30,000. 70 miles S. E. Milan.

PARMA, a river of Italy, which joins the Po. PARNASSUS, a famous mountain of Greece, in Phocis (now part of Livadia), to the north-west of Mount Helicon.

PAROS, an island in the central part of the Grecian archipelago, to the west of Naxos, between 25. 12. and 25. 26. E. long., and 36. 57. and 37. 13. of N. lat. Its circumference is about 40 miles; its surface is mountainous, but tolerably fertile, and in some places well cultivated. Its principal product is cotton; but corn, wine, fruit, and vegetables, are likewise raised. There are several harbours. In ancient times Paros owed its chief celebrity to its marble, so famed for its whiteness and solidity. Population 2000.

PARRE, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1523.

PARRAS, a town of Mexico, near a lake of the same name, intendency of New Mexico, or Durango. Population 7000. 230 miles N. Durango. Long. 103. 12. W. Lat. 26. 33. N.

PARKET, a river of England, which runs into the Bristol channel at Bridgewater bay.

PARTANICO, a town in the north-west of Sicily; Val di Mazzara. Pop. 5000.

PARTHENAY, a town of France, department of the Two Seines, on the Thoue. Population 3200. 24 miles N. W. Poitiers.

PARUPANADA, a town of India, province of Malabar. Long. 75. 55. E. Lat. 11. 2. N.

PASACOLA, a river of North America, which falls into the gulf of Mexico. 38 miles W. Mobile bay.

PASCATAQUAS, a river of the United States, which runs into the Penobscot.

PASCO, a town of Peru, province of Tarma, 167 miles S. W. Guancavelica.

PASCUARO, a town of Mexico, intendency of Valladolid. Pop. 6000. 125 miles W. Mexico. Long. 101. 24. W. Lat. 19. 23. 30. N.

PAS DE CALAIS, a department in the north-east of France, bounded by French Flanders on the E. and the department of the Somme on the W.; on the N. it has the straits of Dover. Area 2500 square miles. It is watered by several small streams, the Aa, the Lys, the Scarpe, the Canche, the Liane, and the Authie. Population 570,000.

PASTARO, a town of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 4000. 18 miles S. S. E. Naples.

PASQUA, a town of Mexico, intendency of Guadalupe, 45 miles N. W. La Purification.

PASQUETANG, a river of North Carolina, which rises in Distal Swamp, and runs into Albemarle sound.

PASQUA DEL NORTE, a flourishing town of Mexico, situated on the Rio del Norte.

PASSAGE FORT, a small town of Jamaica, between Port Royal and Spanish Town.

PASSAGE, GREAT and LITTLE, two of the Virgin islands, in the West India.

PASSAGES, Los, a seaport in the north of Spain, in Guipuzcoa. Population 1700.

PASSAIC, a river of the United States, which rises in New Jersey, and flows into Newark bay.

PASSAIS, a town of France, department of the Orne. Population 3300.

PASSAMAQUODDY BAY, a bay which forms part of the boundary between the British province of New Brunswick, and Maine, one of the United States of America. It is about 6 miles from north to south, and 12 from east to west.—The river of the same name flows into this bay.

PASSARGE, a navigable river of East Prussia, which falls into the Frische Haff.

PASSARO, a small barren island in the Mediterranean, 24 miles S. Syracuse.—The cap of this name is on the S. E. coast of Sicily.

PASSAROUANG, a small town and fort on the northern shore of the island of Java, 676 miles E. Batavia.

PASSAROWITZ, a small town of European Turkey, in Servia, near the Morawa, 33 miles E. S. E. Belgrade.

PASSAU, a town of Bavaria, at the confluence of the Inn and Danube. The town consists of three parts, connected by two long wooden bridges, and containing nearly 10,000 inhabitants. The fortifications are of considerable strength. Passau proper is well built, and contains several public edifices, such as the cathedral, the bishop's mansion, &c. It has large breweries, a tobacco manufactory, and some trade, from its command of river navigation. 86 miles E. N. E. Munich.

PASSENDERALE, a village of West Flanders, 7 miles N. E. Ypres. Population 2000.

PASSERWALK, a town of Prussia, in Pomerania, at the confluence of the Randow and the Ucker. Population 3200.

PASSIR, a town and district of Borneo, on the east coast. The town is situated about 50 miles from the mouth of the river of the same name, on the east side of the island. It consists of 300 houses, built of wood. The house or palace of the sultan is a short distance from the river. It was formerly a place of considerable trade.

PASSUMAT, a river of the United States, in Vermont. It joins the Connecticut.

PASSY, a large village of France, on the Seine, 24 miles W. Paris. Population 5000.

PASO, the capital of a district of New Granada, 30 miles S. E. W. Popayan. Pop. 7000.

PATA ISL, one of the smaller Sooloo islands, lying due south from Sooloo.

PATAOCHIA, or LAND OF MAGELLAN, a country of South America, bounded N. by the government of Buenos Ayres, E. by the Atlantic, S. by the straits of Magellan, and W. by the S. Pacific ocean; extending from Long. 63. to 75. W., and from Lat. 34. to 44. S. This country was first discovered in the year 1519, by Ferdinand Magellan. The people are reported to be of a gigantic size.

ture, barbarous, and in their manners completely savage. The fact of their great stature has been doubted. Some of the inhabitants seen by Commodore Byron, in the year 1764, he supposed to be about 7 feet in height. Captain Wallis, in the year 1766, measured one of the tallest, and found his height to be 6 feet 7 inches; but he says the greatest part of them were from 5 feet 10 to 6 feet.

PATAN, a town of Hindostan, province of Ajmeer, with a handsome temple. Long. 75. 50. E. Lat. 25. 17. N.

PATANI, a port of Asia, on the eastern coast of the peninsula of Malacca. Long. 101. 40. E. Lat. 6. 50. N.

PATAPSCO, a river of the United States, in Maryland, which runs into Chesapeake bay.

PATCHOW ISLANDS, on the coast of China. The southernmost is in Long. 125. 52. E. Lat. 24. 6. N.

PATCOONA, a town of Bengal, on the Curru river. Long. 87. 2. E. Lat. 23. 3. N.

PATELEY BRIDGE, a town of England, in Yorkshire, 14 miles N. W. Harrogate.

PATERNÉ, St., a town of France, department of the Indre and Loire. Pop. 2200.

PATHEAD, a town of Scotland, in Fifeshire. It has manufactures of checks. 4 miles E. Kirkcaldy.—Also a village in Middlelothian.

PATIENCE, an island of the United States, in Narraganset bay, Rhode Island.

PATIVILCA, a town of Peru, province of Santa, with 60 houses.

PATMOS, a small island of the Grecian archipelago, near the coast of Asia Minor. Long. 26. 40. E. Lat. 37. 30. N.

PATNA, a celebrated city of Hindostan, and capital of the province of Bihar, supposed to be the Puthlitha of the Greeks. It is situated on the Ganges, which, during the rainy season, is here five miles broad. The city is about four miles in length, by one in breadth, and is inclosed with a brick wall, having small round bastions. It contains some mosques and temples, but few of the houses exceed one or two stories in height. It also possesses a small citadel. Every article, either European or Asiatic, may be here procured in the bazars. It was at this city that the English first established a factory in the eastern provinces. Long. 85. 15. E. Lat. 25. 37. N.

PATRAS, or BALIANADRA, a seaport of Greece, in the north-west of the Morea, at the entrance of the gulf of Lepanto. The town is built on the ascent of an eminence, and is commanded by a fort. The places of worship are a synagogue, and churches of the Greek faith. It has still some remains of antiquity. Pop. 10,000. 67 miles W. by N. Corinth. Long. 21. 43. E. Lat. 36. 53. N.

PATREK, a town of Hindostan, province of Ajmer, large and populous, and defended by three walls. Long. 71. 31. E. Lat. 22. 50. N.

PATRICK, a county of the United States, on the south side of Virginia. Population 1895. Slaves 734.

PATRICK'S PURGATORY, St., a small island of Ireland, in Lough Derg.

PATRICKSVILLE, a post village of Guilford county, North Carolina.

PATRIGNO DI S. PIETRO, the name of a province in the west of Italy, belonging to the States of the Church. It is in length about 45 miles; in breadth 35.

PATRINGTON, a market town of England, East Riding of Yorkshire, about a mile north of the Humber. The church is a large building, with a lofty spire. Population 1244. 20 miles E. S. E. Hull.

PATTAN, or PUTN, a town of Hindostan, province of Nepaul, 14 mile from Catmandoo, on the Bhagmutty river.

PATTEALAN, a city of Hindostan, province of Delhi, still the most flourishing town in the district of Sirhind. It has in the centre of it a square citadel, which contains the palace of the rajah or chief. Long. 75. 33. E. Lat. 30. 18. N.

PATTERSON, a pleasant village of the United States, in New Jersey, on the Passaic. Population 292.

PATTI, a town of Sicily, near the fine bay of Patti. The principal public building is the cathedral. Pop. 5000. 35 miles W. Messina.

PATTISON'S CREEK, a river of Virginia, which runs into the Potomac.

PATTONBURG, a post village of Virginia.

PATERAGES, a town of the Netherlands, in Hainault. Population 3500.

PATUXENT, a river of the United States, in Maryland, which runs into Chesapeake bay.

PATEAU, a town of Bohemia, 49 miles S. S. E. Prague. Population 2200.

PAU, a well built town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees, on the Gave de Pau. It contains little interesting, with the exception of a public library, and an academy of arts and sciences. The old castle is now converted into a prison and barracks. Pop. 9000. 110 miles S. Bourdeaux.

PAUCARULLA, formerly the capital of a province of the same name in Peru. It is now decayed.

PAUCATAMBO, the capital of a province of Peru, on the river of its name. Lat. 13. 28. S.

PAVIA, a province of Austrian Italy, government of Milan. Area 329 square miles. Population 117,000. Its surface is for the most part level, and it is very fertile. It is watered by the Po, the Ticino, and the Olona.

PAVIA, a large town of Austrian Italy, in the government of Milan, on the Ticino, four miles above its discharge into the Po. It has a dull and deserted appearance. Its streets are broad and straight, and many of the buildings are good. It contains several squares, the chief of which is surrounded with piazzas. Some ancient towers of extraordinary height, the remains of the Gothic ages, are still to be seen in different parts of the town. Pavia is still surrounded with fortifications, but they are falling to decay. A marble bridge, built in the 14th century, connects it with the suburb on the opposite side of the Ticino. The church and convent of the Carthusians are grand and striking. The church of the Augustinians contains the tomb of the well known Bootius. The cathedral of Pavia, a Gothic building in decay, has been lately rebuilt, but in a bad taste. The university is said to be the most ancient in Europe, having been founded by Charlemagne in 791. Some trade in silk is carried on with Turin, Genoa, and Lyons. Wine is sent to Milan and Lodi, and rice to various parts of Italy. The excellent cheese made in the district is likewise exported in considerable quantities. Silk is the only manufacture. Pavia is very ancient, having been founded by the Gauls. It has often suffered from war. Pop. 25,000. 80 miles W. Mantua. Long. 9. 9. 48. E. Lat. 45. 10. 47. N.

PAULLAC, a town of France, on the Garonne. Population 1500.

PAVILLY, a town of France, department of the Lower Seine. Population 2000.

PAWCATUCK, a river of Rhode Island, which runs into the sea.

PAUL, St, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienné. Population 1500.

PAUL, St, a fine bay of the island of Malta, about 8 miles W. Valetta.

PAUL, St, a town of Brazil, and capital of a district of the same name, to the west of Rio Janeiro, about 12 leagues from the sea. The town stands on a pleasing eminence, washed at the base by rivulets, which almost insulate it in rainy weather. The rivulets flow into a pretty large stream called the Tieti, which runs within a mile of the town. Over them there are several bridges, some of stone, and others of wood. The streets of St Paul are in general remarkably clean. Here are several squares, and about 13 places of religious worship, namely, two convents, three monasteries, and eight churches, the greater part of which, as well as of the whole town, is built of earth. The houses in the principal streets are two or three stories high, and stuccoed in various colours. Here are few manufactures of any consequence. The inhabitants make a beautiful kind of net-work for hammocks, which are fringed with lace, and form an elegant piece of furniture. The situation of the town was chosen from the gold which abounded in the neighbourhood. The country around, however, is now exhausted of this precious metal; and the inhabitants have been compelled to cultivate their fertile soil for a subsistence. 190 miles W. Rio Janeiro. Long. 46. 56. W. Lat. 23. 30. S.

PAUL'S ISLAND, St, in the strait between Newfoundland and Cape Breton islands.

PAUL BY JARREST, St, a town of France, 19 miles S. S. W. Lyons. Pop. 2500.

PAULIEN, St, a town of France, 6 miles N. N. W. Le Puy. Population 2000.

PAULINKILL, a river of New Jersey, which runs into the Delaware.

PAVLOGRAD, a town of European Russia, 32 miles E. Ekaterinow.

PAVLOTSK, a small town of Russia, 14 miles S. S. E. St Petersburg.

PAVLOVA-SERO, a town of European Russia, government of Niznei-Novgorod. Population 6000.

PAVLOVSK, a town of European Russia, government of Voronez. Population 2000.

PAUL TROIS CHATEAUX, St, a town of France, department of the Drome. Population 2100.

PAULUS HOOK, or JERSEY CITY, a township of the United States, New Jersey.

PAVOASSAR, a small town, capital of the island of St Thomas, coast of Africa.

PAWANGWER, a town and strong fortress of Hindostan, province of Bejapore.

PAWCATUCK, a river of the United States, between Rhode Island and Connecticut.

PAWLET, a township and village of the United States, Vermont. Population 2233.

PAWTUCKET, a post village of the United States, on the falls of the Pawtucket.

PAWTUCKET, a river of the United States, in Rhode Island. It enters Narraganset bay.

PAXO, one of the seven islands of the Ionian republic, near the entrance of the Adriatic, 6 miles S. Corfu. It is 35 square miles in extent. Population 6000 Greeks.

PARTON, LOWER, MIDDLE, and UPPER, three townships of the United States, in Dauphin county, Pennsylvania.

PAYNSVILLE, a village of the United States, in Ohio. It has about 40 houses.

PAZ, a town of Mexico, intendancy of Valladolid, 120 miles N. N. W. Mexico. Population about 3000. Long. 100. 28. W. Lat. 20. 59. N.

PAZ, La, a city of a district in Peru. Besides the cathedral, it has four churches, five convents, and three monasteries. Pop. 20,000. 120 miles E. S. E. Arequipa.

PE, St, a town of France, department of the Upper Pyrenees. Population 2000.

PE, St, a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Population 2100.

PEABODY, a river of the United States, New Hampshire. It joins the Androscoggin.

PEACE RIVER, otherwise called Unjish river, has its rise in the Rocky mountains, in Lat. 54. 24. N. and Long. 121. W., and empties itself into the Frozen ocean, in 70. N. lat. and about 135. W. long.

PEAK, a mountain in Derbyshire, which gives name to a district.

PEAK FOREST, a village of England, in Derbyshire.—The name also of a track of land.

PEARL, a river of the United States, in the Mississippi territory, which falls into Lake Borgne, east of Lake Ponchartrain.

PEARL ISLAND, in the gulf of Mexico, towards the mouth of the Mississippi.

PEARL ISLANDS, in the gulf of Panama, where there was formerly a pearl fishery.

PECCATS, a fortress of France, surrounded by lagoons, which yield great quantities of bay salt. 21 miles S. E. Montpellier.

PEDEE, GREAT and LITTLE, two rivers in South Carolina.

PEDERRERA, a seaport of Portugal, with 1100 inhabitants.

PEDRO, St., a large river of Mexico, which enters the Rio del Norte.—Also rivers of Veragua, of New Granada, of Brazil, and of the Caracas.

PEEBLES-SHIRE, or TWEEDDALE, a county of Scotland, bounded E. and S. E. by Berwick and Selkirk shires, S. by Dumfriesshire, W. by Lanarkshire, and N. by the county of Mid-Lothian. It is from 20 to 28 miles in length, and from 13 to 20 broad. It consists of various chains of mountains, running in all directions, with well watered valleys intervening. The Dale or Valley of Tweed forms the great body of this shire; and thence many narrow vales branch off in different directions. In general the hills and dales in the north and north-west districts are the most fertile and agreeable. The variety of hill, and dale, and water, might furnish scenes of great natural beauty, or even grandeur, were it not for the almost total want of natural wood. There is a want of valuable minerals in this county; but coal, lime, white and red freestone, marl, fuller's earth, and slate, with veins of iron ore, are found in several districts. There is a considerable woollen manufacture at Innerleithen; and there are some linen, woollen, and cotton weavers in Peebles. The county is well watered by the Tweed, Tyne, Leithen, Eddleston, Mañor, and several other inferior streams. Pop. 10,046.

PEEBLES, the county town of the above shire, on the Tweed, over which there is a bridge of five arches. It is divided into the Old and New towns by the Eddleston water. In the Old town are the ruins of an ancient monastery. The High church is also an ancient edifice, in ruins, said to have been built in the 12th century. A new church was built in 1781. The New town has a town-hall for the sheriff and town courts, and an elegant inn, containing assembly-rooms. It has also a castle built on the site of the ancient church, and a good grammar school. Its manufactures are of stockings; weaving is also carried on; and it has an extensive brewery. Pop. 2701. 22 miles S. Edinburgh.

PEEKSKILL, a post village of the United States, in West Chester county, New York.

PEEL, or PEEL TOWNS, a town of England, on the western coast of the Isle of Man, at the mouth of Peel river, chiefly noted for the ruins of its castle and cathedral. St Patrick's church stands to the west of the cathedral; but nothing remains of it but the walls. Peel has become a place of little trade. Population 1909. 12 miles W. Douglas.

PEELER, a river of the north of Germany, which falls into the Baltic at Rügenmünde.

PELLEA, a town of Saxony, on the Elster, 14 miles S. S. W. Leipzig. Population 2300.

PELLEA, a river of Germany, in Francoia, which joins the Rodnitz at Püsch.

PELE, a town of Spain in Valencia, 41 miles S. by S. Valencia. Population 5000.

PELU, properly Bactu, an ancient kingdom of Asia, but now a province of the Birman empire. It is bounded N. by Arracan and Ava, E. by Siam, S. by Siam and the sea, and W. by the bay of Bengal. It contains several ranges of mountains, but, generally speaking, may be considered as a level country; and the southern part of it is much intersected by rivers, which, before they join the sea, form a delta similar to those of the Nile and Ganges. The soil is naturally very fertile; but the country is overrun by wood and long rank grass, abounding with tigers, elephants, buffaloes, deer, and other animals. Its chief produce is rice. Pegu possesses mines of iron, tin, and lead; also of rubies and sapphires, and rock crystal; but the most valuable produce of the country is the teak timber used for ship-building, which never decays in the salt water, nor is easily penetrated by worms.

PEGU, a very ancient city, and formerly the capital of the above mentioned kingdom, on the Setang river, now in a ruinous state. The destruction of this city was caused by its capture in 1757, by the Burman emperor Alompra, who caused parts of the walls to be levelled, destroyed the houses, and dispersed or led into captivity all the inhabitants. The temples were the only buildings that escaped his fury; and the magnificent temple of Shoemadoo still exists as a monument of the greatness and devotion of its ancient monarchs. The population was supposed in 1600 to amount to 150,000. Long. 96. 12 E. Lat. 17. 40. N.

PEILA, a small river of Prussian Silesia, which flows into the Weistritz.

PEILAU, a village of Prussian Silesia, 3 miles S. E. Reichenbach. Population 1700.

PEINA, a town of Hanover, on the Fise, 30 miles E. Hanover. Population 3000.

PEIPUS, LAKE OF, a large lake of European Russia, 50 miles long and 35 broad.

PEIRK, St., a town of Piedmont, on the Braia, 40 miles S. S. W. Turin. Pop. 5000.

PEISERN, a town of Prussian Poland, on the Wartha. Population 2100.

PEKIANGHO, a considerable river of China, province of Chingtung. It forms part of the great navigable communication between Peking and Canton.

PEKING, or PEKIN, a great city of Asia, capital of the empire of China. Peking, like most other Chinese cities, is laid out by the square and line: A street four miles long, and 120 feet broad, reaches from one gate to the other, and is crossed by another of similar length and breadth. The other streets are narrow, and many of them can only be considered as lanes. They are all unpaved, and covered with sand and dust; but they are kept very clean, and frequently watered. The principal streets consist almost entirely of rows of shops, which are painted, gilded, and adorned with much magnificence. The streets are peculiarly crowded, in consequence of the number of trades that are carried on in the shops. The numerous remarkable workshops of tinkers and barbers, cobblers and blacksmiths; the tents and booths where tea, fruit, rice, and other eatables, are exposed to sale; the wares and merchandise arrayed before the doors; the troops of dromedaries laden with coals from Tartary; the wheel-barrows and hand-carts stuffed with vegetables leave in this broad street only a very narrow space unoccupied. Jugglers, conjurers, fortune-tellers, mountebanks, quack-doctors, comedians, and musicians, help to complete this motley scene. Peking is surrounded with walls about 30 feet high, and 26 feet thick at their base; but the breadth on the top, within the parapets, does not exceed 12 feet. There are no cannon on the walls. Of the ornamental buildings of Peking, the most conspicuous are those commonly called triumphal arches. They consist of a large central gateway, with a smaller one on each side, all covered with narrow roofs; and, like the houses, are very splendidly gilded, varnished, and painted. The imperial palace is an inclosure within the city, formed by what is called the Yellow Wall. The space contained within it, about a mile in length, is artificially formed into an imitation of rude and romantic nature. A number of lakes have been excavated, and eminences formed. On these eminences are placed the edifices destined for the accommodation of the emperor; while the loftiest summits are crowned with pavilions, kiosks, and other buildings, destined for pleasure and refreshment. The whole has almost the effect of enchantment. The imperial palace of Yuen-mien, situated without the city, presents the same scene on a much more extended scale. The buildings, however, have only an outward shew of magnificence. The very dwelling of the emperor, and the grand hall of audience, when divested of their colours and gilding, are little superior to the barns of a substantial English farmer. Long. 116. 24. E. Lat. 39. 55. N.

PELANGY, a river in the island of Madagdanoo, on which the capital is situated.

PELEW ISLANDS, or PALAOS, a cluster of islands in the western part of the Pacific ocean, situated between the Philippine islands and the Caroline islands. They are about eighteen in number; the names of some of the principal are Oroolong, E-mungi, Emillegne, Artingal, Coroorna, and Pelow. Captain Wilson, who was wrecked on these islands in 1783, found the inhabitants hospitable, friendly, and humane. These islands are long, but narrow; of a moderate height, well covered with wood. At Pelow, the king was the first person in the government; he appeared to be considered as the father of the people, and though divested of all external decorations of royalty, had every mark of distinction paid to his person. None of the islands the English visited had any kind of grain, nor any quadruped whatever, except some brownish grey rats which ran wild in the woods, and three or four meagre cats, which were seen in some houses at Pelow. Every part of the Pelow islands that the English visited, appeared populous, though to what extent, of population they could never ascertain. The king of Pelow entertained at great an esteem for Captain Wilson, that he entrusted his second son, Prince Lee Bo, to his care, to accompany him to England. He was of a most amiable disposition, desirous of information, and of capacity to receive it. This young prince died of the small-pox at Captain Wilson's house in London, in the year 1784, at about twenty years of age. Several horned cattle, goats, and hogs, also some turtle-doves, &c. were sent to the king of the island by the East India Company, in 1791. The stock had greatly increased in 1802, with the exception of the sheep, which had failed. At that time several Europeans resided on the islands, for the purpose of collecting biche de mer, tortoise-shell, and sharks fins for the China market. Long. between 134. 6. and 134. 40. E. Lat. between 6. 54. and 6. 12. N.

PELICAN ISLAND, on the south coast of West Florida—24. Near the north-east and south-west coasts of Antigua.

PELICAN KEY, GREAT and LITTLE, two small islands near the south coast of Jamaica.

PELING ISLE, an island near the east coast of Celebes, 50 miles long, by 15 hr breadth. Long. 124. 26. E. Lat. 38. 24. N.

PELLEGRUE, a town of France, 30 miles E. Bourdeaux. Population 1500.

PELLESSIN, a town of France, 11 miles W. Nantes. Population 1500.

PELLEW'S, SIR EDWARD, GROUP, a cluster of islands on the north coast of New Holland. Lat. of Centre Island 15. 30. S.

PELLICE, a small river in the north of Italy, which falls into the Po.

PELLISSANT, a town of France, 16 miles W. S. W. Aix. Population 2500.

PELLEWORN, a small island on the west coast of the duchy of Sleswick. Pop. 3000.

PELUSIN, a town of France, department of the Loire. Population 3300.

PEMAQUID, CAPE and BAY, on the coast of Maine. Long. 69. 27. W. Lat. 43. 48. N.

PEMBA, a town of Congo, capital of the province of Pemba, 75 miles S. St Salvador.

PENNERON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 3970.

PEMBROKE, one of the southern counties of Wales, bounded E. by Carmarthenshire, N. E. by Cardiganshire, N. and W. by the Irish sea, and S. by the Bristol channel. Its form is extremely irregular. Its greatest length may be estimated at about 30 miles; its greatest width at 27 miles. The face of the country is greatly diversified by alternate hills and dales, but none of the hills are of any considerable elevation. In some parts are seen remarkable masses of rock, which, when viewed from a distance, have the appearance of ruined castles, or other large buildings. The soil is various. The grains most commonly raised are wheat, barley, and oats; and rye is cultivated in some parts. On the best of farms turnips are cultivated, and pease more generally. The state of agriculture, though it has been much improved of late, is still susceptible of amelioration. A considerable quantity of butter is made for home consumption, and for exportation. The mineral treasures hitherto discovered in this county are not distinguished, either for their variety or their importance. On the banks of the Tave are some lead mines. There is also limestone and coal. Pembrokeshire cannot boast of being either a trading or manufacturing county. It abounds with objects of antiquarian curiosity and interest of almost every kind and era, such as Druidical circles and cromlechs. Single stone monuments are also numerous; but the most important antiquities are its castles, of which there are 19 mentioned as belonging to princes and great barons. The county returns one member to parliament, and the boroughs of Pembroke, Tenby, and Wiston, return another. Population 74,000.

PENROBE, a borough and market town of South Wales, in the above county, on a singular neck of land, dividing the small estuary of Down Pool, which flows from Milford Haven. The vast ruins of its magnificent castle still give it an appearance of uncommon grandeur. The houses are ranged principally in one long street, at the end of which is the castle. The public buildings are a town-hall, a free grammar school, and two parochial churches, dedicated to St Mary and St Michael. Population 4925. 30 miles W. S. W. Caermarthen.

PENROSE, a township of the United States, in New Hampshire. Population 1153.—2d, in Massachusetts.—3d, A post village of Genesee county, New York.

PENROSWASSET, a name applied to the main branch of the Merrimack, United States.

PENISSAGUAWAKEE, a river of the district of Maine, which runs into the sea.

PENAFIEL, a town of the north of Portugal, 21 miles E. N. E. Oporto. Pop. 4000.

PENAFIEL, a town of Spain, 36 miles E. S. E. Valladolid. Population 3600.

PENAMACOR, a town of Portugal, province of Beira. Population 2600.

PENENNIS, a peninsula of England, in the county of Cornwall, at the mouth of Falmouth harbour, of which it forms the western side. On a rock here, upwards of 300 feet above the sea, stands the fortress of Pendennis castle, built in the reign of Henry VIII., entirely of granite.

PENELTON, a large and populous suburb to the towns of Manchester and Salford.

PENILETON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1315.

PENILETON, a county of the United States, in the central part of Virginia. Population 4230. Slaves 212. Chief town, Franklin.—2d, in South Carolina. Population 22,000, including 2455 slaves.—3d, in Kentucky. Pop. 3061, including 586 slaves.

PENELLA, a town of Portugal, 15 miles S. E. Coimbra. Population 2600.

PENICHE, a fortified town of Portugal, on the Atlantic, 48 miles N. N. W. Lisbon. Population 2800.

PENIGER, a town of Saxony, on the Mulda, 43 miles W. Dresden. Population 3000.

PENISCOLA, a town of Spain, 30 miles S. Tortosa. Population 2200.

PENISTONE, a market town of England, in Yorkshire. Population 645.

PENKIDGE, a market town of England, county of Stafford, or the Penk, 6 miles S. Stafford. Population 2200.

PENMAEN MAWR, a noted mountain in Wales, in the county of Caernarvon.

PENNA, a township of the United States, in Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania. Population 3798.—Also two other townships in Pennsylvania.

PENNA'S CREEK, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania, which runs into the Susquehanna.

PENNAFLOR, a town of Spain, in Seville, on the Guadalquivir.

PENNAH, a river of the south of India. It falls into the bay of Bengal.

PENNAHANA, a town of Spain, in Segovia. Population 3200.

PENNE, a town of France, department of the Turn. Population 2000.

PENNINGTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 2762.

PENNINGTON, a pleasant and flourishing village of New Jersey, 27 miles N. E. by N. Philadelphia. Houses 50.

PENNSBOROUGH, four townships of the United States, in Pennsylvania.

PENNSYLVANIA, one of the United States of North America, bounded N. by New York; E. by the river Delaware, which separates it from New Jersey; S. by Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia; and W. by Virginia and Ohio. The form of this state is nearly that of a parallelogram; in length 273 miles from east to west, and in breadth 153 from north to south. It contains an area of 44,000 square miles. It is divided into 60 counties. It is intersected by the different ridges of the Alleghany mountains, which cross the country from north-east to south-west. Some of those mountains admit of cultivation almost to their summits; and between their numerous ridges there are delightful vallies, with a very rich soil. The other parts of the state are generally level, or agreeably diversified with hills and vallies. Every kind of soil is to be found in this state; but a great proportion of the land is of an excellent quality. Wheat is the most important article of produce. The next in value is Indian corn. Buckwheat, rye, barley, oats, flax, hemp, beans, pease, and potatoes, are extensively cultivated. Cherries, peaches, apples, and cider, are abundant. There are large dairies in many parts; and Pennsylvania has an excellent breed of horses. Sheep are abundant; and the Merino breeds have been introduced, and thrive well. Wool is abundant: in the western parts are found the oak, chestnut, beech, sugar maple, ash, black walnut, bass wood, elm, hickory, white ash, butternut, hemlock, and locust. Of wild animals, the elk was formerly numerous in the western parts, but now this animal is rarely seen, and never except in the north-western parts. Deer are still common in the uncultivated districts, as also the brown bear, the wolf, wild cat, fox, raccoon, opossum; the grey, striped, and flying squirrel; rabbit, hare, and mink. The musk rat is common in marshy places; the beaver and otter are nearly extinct; the cougar is rarely seen. Of birds, the most useful are the wild Turkey, which inhabits the hilly and mountainous parts. There are, besides, pheasants, partridges, pigeons, ducks, &c. The eastern creeks abound with a white fish called salmon, with trout, shad, and herring, carp, eels, rock-fish; the western waters with cat-fish, yellow perch, trout, rock-fish, and pike; and the ponds and smaller streams with excellent trout. There are mineral waters in different parts of the state; and also salt springs. Iron ore is distributed in large quantities in many parts of the state; and in some places copper, lead, and alum, are found. Here are also numerous limestone quarries, and various kinds of marble; and in the middle and western parts there is abundance of coal. The climate of this state is changeable. The heat of summer is seldom oppressive, except in low situations. In all the hilly parts the air is healthy; but near the sea-coast the temperature of winter is severe, varying in the months of January and February from 14 to 28 degrees. Cherries are ripe by the 25th of May; and wheat is commonly reaped before the middle of July. The most general diseases are rheumatism and pleurisy. In the autumn and winter of 1799, a malignant fever, accompanied with black vomiting, was prevalent, about 200 miles N. N. W. of Philadelphia, in the Bald Eagle valley. The principal rivers are the Delaware, the Schuylkill, Lehigh, Susquehanna, Juniata, Allegany, Monongahela, Ohio, and Yongliogony. There are, besides, numerous other small rivers, creeks, and springs.

Pennsylvania contains three incorporated cities, viz. Philadelphia, Pittsburg, and Lancaster. Harrisburg is the seat of government. The other most considerable towns are Reading, Easton, Bethlehem, Carlisle, York, Germantown, Chambersburg, Columbia, Sunbury, Brownsville, Washington, &c. The inhabitants are principally descendants of the Welsh, English, Irish, Germans, some Scotch, Fitch, Swedes, and a few Dutch. The Germans are numerous. This state sends 23 representatives to congress. Pennsylvania exceeds all the other states in the extent and variety of its manufactures, which consist chiefly of wool and cotton, iron, lead, glass, marble, pottery, paper, gunpowder, bricks, paints, dyes, &c. Value of exportation in 1791, 3,486,993 dollars. In 1798, 8,915,463; in 1807, 16,804,744. They afterwards fell off, in consequence of the war with Britain; and in 1816 they were 7,496,240; they have since increased. Population in 1663, 70,000; in 1740, 220,000; in 1763, 280,000; in 1774, 350,000; in 1790, 434,373, 3737 slaves, 6,587 free blacks; in 1800, 692,649, 1706 slaves, 14,564 free blacks; in 1810, 816,091, 795 slaves, 22,408 free blacks. Long. 74. to 80. 40. W. Lat. 39. 43. to 42. N.

PENNYCUIK, a village and parish of Scotland, where during the war was a large depot of French prisoners. Population 1250. 04 miles S. W. Edinburgh.

PENOBSCOT, a county of the United States, in Maine, bounded E. by Washington and Hancock counties, S. by Hancock county, and W. by Kennebeck and Somerset counties. It is watered by the Penobscot. Chief town Bangor.—2d, A seaport town of the United States, in Hancock county, Maine, on Penobscot bay. It has a considerable trade. 240 miles N. E. Boston. Lat. 44. 27. N.

PENOBSCOT, a large river of the United States, in Maine, which flows into the head of Penobscot bay, between the towns of Penobscot and Prospect.

PENOBSCOT BAY, a large bay of the Atlantic, on the south coast of Maine, containing Long island. Its entrance, between the isle of Holt and Owl's Head, is 18 miles wide, and its length from N. to S. is about 30.

PENRITH, an irregularly built market town of England, in Cumberland. The church is a plain but neat building. The body was rebuilt of red stone in the year 1722, and connected with the ancient tower, which still remains. The interior contains some ancient monuments. Besides the church, there are in the town meeting-houses for Presbyterians and Quakers, a free grammar school, charity schools, and a Sunday school for boys and girls, supported by voluntary contributions; also a public subscription library, and a museum of natural curiosities. The market-place is a large building. A new and handsome assembly-room has lately been erected. On an eminence west of the town are the ruins of a castle. It has manufactures of cloths and hats. Population 5385. 16 miles S. Carlisle. Long. 2. 45. W. Lat. 54. 40. N.

PENRYN, a market town of England, in the county of Cornwall, at the head of a creek which runs into Falmouth harbour. It consists chiefly of one principal street, from which some others diverge at right angles. The market-house and town-hall stand in the principal street; and here are also assembly-rooms, and a good custom-house and quay. A considerable trade is carried on here in the curing of pilchards, and in the Newfoundland fishery. Pop. 2933. 2 miles N. W. Falmouth.

PENSA, the capital of a government of the same name in Russia, at the confluence of the Pensa and Sura, on a height. It contains 12 churches and 2 monasteries. Pop. 10,000.

460 miles S. E. Moscow. Long. 45. 38. E. Lat. 53. 30. N.

PENSACOLA, a town of West Florida, on the gulf of Mexico, at the head of a delightful bay formed by the Escambia, and some other rivers in Pensacola bay. It is of an oblong form, about a mile long. Since the Spaniards conquered it from the English in 1781, it has gradually declined. In 1794, the population did not exceed 400, exclusive of the military and the retainers of the government. It was occupied in 1818 by an American force. Long. 87. 12. W. Lat. 30. 29. N.

PENTHIEVE, Fort, a fort in the west of France, 15 miles S. E. Lorient.

PENTLAND FORTH, the strait which separates the mainland of Scotland from the Orkney isles. It is only 1½ miles over, but in it the sea runs with impetuous force by the meetings of so many tides; and there are, besides, several dangerous whirlpools and islands which increase the danger, so that no wind is able to support a vessel against the current.

PENTLAND HILLS, a ridge of hills in Scotland, about 4 miles west of Edinburgh, and extending a considerable way towards the western borders of Mid-Lothian.

PENTLAND SKERRIES, certain small islands at the east end of the Pentland frith, on the largest of which is a light-house. 4 miles N. E. Duncan's head.

PENZANCE, a market town of England, in Cornwall, on the north-west side of Mounts bay, in a healthy and pleasant situation. It consists chiefly of four streets, intersecting each other at right angles. In the town is a chapel of ease to the mother church of Madron, which is nearly two miles to the west; and here are also meeting-houses for Baptists, Independents, Quakers, and Methodists, and a synagogue for the Jews; also a grammar school. The trade of Penzance is considerable, and consists chiefly in pilchards and other fish, and in shipping lead, tin, and copper, which abound in the vicinity. Till of late, the town was noted for smuggling. The pier has been extended to upwards of 600 feet in length. In 1818, a light was erected on its extremity. Population 3224. 11 miles N. E. of the Land's End, and 282 W. S. W. London.

PENNING, a large village of Austria, to the west of Vienna. Population 3300.

PEQUANNAK, a township of the United States, New Jersey. Population 3253.

PEQUANNOCK POINT and RIVER, a small stream of the United States, in Connecticut, which flows into a bay, of which the point forms the western extremity.

PERIGNY, a town of France, on the Somme. Population 1300. 9 miles W. Amiens, and 20 S. E. Abbeville.

PERALADA, a town of Catalonia. Population 2300. 9 miles W. Rosas.

PERAMBUCAM, a town of the south of India, province of the Carnatic. 34 miles N. E. Conjeeveram.

PERASTO, a town of Austrian Dalmatia, 8 miles N. Callata. Population 2000.

PERAYLT, a village of France, noted for its mineral waters. 3 miles S. E. Montpellier.

PERAY, a town of France, department of the Saône and Loire. Population 1500.

PERCEY, a town of France, department of La Manche. Population 2000.

PERCEY ISLES, in the South Pacific ocean, near the N. E. coast of New Holland. They extend from about 21. 32. to 31. 45. S. lat.

PERDIDO RIVER, a river of the United States, which flows into the gulf of Mexico, 12 miles W. Pensacola.

PERECOR, a very ancient fortress of European Turkey, on the isthmus which joins the Crimea to the continent. Near it are most productive salt lakes. Population 1200. Long. 33. 42. 9. E. Lat. 46. 8. 57. N.

PERE EN RETZ, St., a town of France, department of the Loire Inferieure. Pop. 2000.

PEREJASLAV, a town of European Russia, government of Pultava, 53 miles S. S. E. Kiev. Population 6000.

PERENJAV-SALESKOI, a town of European Russia, government of Vladimir. It has a considerable linen manufacture. Population 4000. 63 miles N. E. Moscow.

PEREVOLOZNA, a small town of European Russia, on the Dnieper, 112 miles N. W. Ekaterinoslav.

PERGAMO, a town of Asiatic Turkey, once a great capital, but now of little importance. Long. 27. E. Lat. 38. 11. N.

PERGOLA, a town of Italy. It has manufactures of woollen and leather. Population 3000. 32 miles W. Ancona.

PERIGNAC, a village of France, noted for its salt-works. 6 miles S. W. Narbonne.

PERIAPATAM, a town of India, province of Mysore. Long. 75. 25. E. Lat. 12. 21. N.

PERIGORD, a province of France, now forming the department of the Dordogne.

PERIGUEUX, an ill built town of France, department of the Dordogne, on the Ille. The cathedral is the only public building worth notice. There are also several Roman antiquities. Population 6200. 70 miles N. E. Montreux.

PERISALDO, a town of Piedmont, province of Nice, 18 miles E. N. E. Nice. Pop. 1300.

PERKINSONVILLE, a post village, of the United States, in Amelia county, Virginia.

PERLEBERG, a town of the Prussian province of Brandenburg. Population 3000.

PERM, a very extensive government or province, situated chiefly in European, but partly in Asiatic Russia, and adjacent to the government of Viatka on the west, and Tobolsk on the east. It belongs to the north of Russia, extending from the 50th to the 62d degrees of N. lat. Area 116,000 square miles. Population 1,100,000.

PERM, the chief place of the preceding government, on the Kama. It has some neat public buildings, and carries on an active traffic in the metals wrought in the surrounding country. Population 3800. 916 miles E. by S. St Petersburg.

PERMACOI, a town and fortress of the south of India, province of the Carnatic. Long. 79. 52. E. Lat. 12. 13. N.

PERNAMBURO, a province of Brazil, bounded N. and E. by the Atlantic ocean, S. by Bahia, and E. by the desert territory. It is about 470 miles in extent from north to south, and about 370 from east to west. It abounds in sugar-cane, cotton, and Brazil wood.

PERNAMBURO, or ST ANTONIO DO RECIFE, a town of Brazil, and capital of the province of the same name, which consists of three divisions, Recife, St Antonio, and Boa Vista. The two first of these are situated on two flat sand-banks, surrounded by the sea, and connected together by a bridge, partly of stone, and partly of wood, and lined with shops, which render it so narrow, that two carriages cannot pass each other on it. St Antonio is connected with Boa Vista, situated on the continent, by a wooden bridge, which is likewise narrow. The greatest part of the extent of sand between Olinda, a town about a league distant, on the same sand bank as Recife, and the latter, remains uncovered, is open to the sea, and the surf there is very violent. The tide cuts between the bridges, and encircles the middle compartment. The first division of the town is composed of brick houses, of three, four, and even five stories in height: most of the streets are narrow, and there are no public buildings that require notice. St Antonio, or the middle town, is composed chiefly of large houses and broad streets. Here is the governor's palace, which was in other times the Jesuits' convent; the treasury; the town-hall and prison; the barracks, which are very bad; the Franciscan, Carmelite, and Penha convents, and several churches, the interiors of which are very handsomely ornamented. This, which is the principal division of the town, comprises several squares, and has, to a certain degree, a gay and lively appearance. A long embankment has likewise been made, which connects the sand-bank and town of St Antonio with the main land to the south and west of Boa Vista. The river Capibaribe discharges its waters into the channel between St Antonio and Boa Vista. The harbour belonging to Recife, called the Mosquitoim, situated on the outward bank, is formed by a reef of rocks, which runs parallel with the town, at a very small distance. The town is defended by several forts. Pernambuco is a thriving place; and since the ports of Brazil were thrown open to foreign commerce, it is daily increasing in opulence and importance. Since that time, Koester mentions that European fashions had been introduced, numerous country residences had been built, and the lands in the vicinity of the town had risen in price. Pop. 25,000, consisting of white persons, of mulatto and black free people, and of slaves of several shades.

PERNAV, a town of Russia, on the gulf of Riga, 165 miles N. by E. Riga. Pop. 2200.

PERREZ, a town of France, on the Gironde, 11 miles E. N. E. Avignon. Population 3400.

PERREUX, a town of France, department of the Somme, on the Somme. It is a place of strength, and bore the name of Puelle until 20th June 1815, when it was stormed by a body of British. It has some manufactures of linen, cotton, and cambric. Population 3700. 30 miles S. W. Cambrai.

PERAZA, LA, a town of Piedmont, on the Cluson, 34 miles W. S. W. Turin. Pop. 2300.

PEROTE, a small town of Mexico, intendancy of Vera Cruz, about 60 miles from the eastern coast, 7710 feet above the sea.

PERPIGNAN, a town of France, department of the Eastern Pyrenees, on the Tet. It is a place of strength, and accounted one of the keys of the kingdom on the side of Spain. The citadel is very strong. The cathedral is the only building worth notice. It has manufactures of woollen and silk; also of soap. Pop. 12,000. 110 miles S. W. Montpellier.

PERQUIMANS, a county of the United States, in North Carolina. Population 6052.

PERREUX, a town of France, department of the Loire. Population 2600.

PERRENS, a town of France, department of La Manche. Population 2500.

PERRY, a county of the United States, in Indiana. Population 3800.—2d, in Ohio.

PERRYVILLE, a town of the United States, and capital of Bond county, Illinois.—The name of several townships.

PERSAIN, a town of the Hircanian empire, province of Pegue, on the Irrawaddy, here called the Persain. Long. 95. E. Lat. 15. 50. N.

PERSEROLIS, the ancient capital of Persia, the ruins of which may be numbered among the most remarkable monuments of early magnificence. They are situated at a small distance to the north of Schiras.

PERSERIN, a town of European Turkey, in Rumania, 45 miles E. by N. Scutari. Population 16,000.

PERRIERE, a well built market town of England, in Worcestershire, on the Avon, once famed for its abbey, of which there are now but few vestiges. A good part of the church still remains, known by the name of the Holy Cross. 9 miles E. S. E. Worcester.

PERSIA, an extensive empire of Asia, which may generally be considered as the most opulent and powerful of any to the west of India. The region which seems to be most properly considered as Persia, and which for nearly 2000 years has been united into one monarchy, is bounded W. by the Euphrates and Tigris; with the mountains of Armenia and Kurdistan; N. by the Caspian and the mountains of Caucasus; S. by the Persian gulf; E. by a vast sandy and saline desert, which partly extends as far as the Indus, partly runs into the lofty mountain regions of Hindoo Coosh and Parapomus. The Persians, a nation, first rose into notice on the ruins of the great empires founded on the Euphrates. Babylon was taken by Cyrus, and the empire of the Great King extended wider than any before established in the world. It included on one side the west of India; on the other Asia Minor, Syria, and Egypt; and was only honoured by the prodigies of valour with which the Greeks defended their small territory. The Persian monarchy yielded, after a feeble struggle, to the brave and disciplined armies of Alexander. This vast dominion was soon split into fragments by the decease of its founder; but Greeks and Greek sovereigns continued, during several centuries, to reign over Asia. About two centuries before Christ, Artaxerxes founded the monarchy of the Parthians, and in the third century arose the dynasty of the Sassanides, who restored the name, with the religion and laws of ancient Persia. They were overthrown by the Mahometan invaders, who suffered in their turn from the successive invasions by the descendants of Zingis, by Timur, and by the race to whom we give the name of Turks, who changed entirely the aspect of Western Asia. At length, in 1506, a native dynasty again arose under Abbas, who raised himself to the throne, from almost a private station. His posterity having sunk into voluptuousness, Persia, in the beginning of the last century, was overrun by the Afghans, who carried fire and sword through its remotest extremities, and reduced its proudest capitals to ashes. The atrocities of the Afghans were avenged, and the independence of Persia vindicated, by Nadir Shah; but though the victories of this daring chief threw a lustre on his country, after his death the country was almost torn to pieces by civil war, till the fortune of arms gave a decided superiority to Kerim, or Kurroon Khan. His death gave rise to another disputed succession, with civil wars as furious as before. At length Aga Mahommud, an eunuch, raised himself, by crimes and daring, to the sovereignty; and not only swayed it during his lifetime, but transmitted it to his nephews who assumed the title of Putsch Ali Shah, who is the present sovereign, and is an accomplished prince; and his eldest son is represented as highly promising. Persia is a mountainous country. It is intersected by the immense chain of Caucasus, which fills the interval between the Black sea and the Caspian. Southwards spread the mountains of Armenia and Koordistan, which connect themselves with Mount Taurus. These mountains, which are very lofty, form the frontier and debatable ground between the Persian and Turkish empires. The rivers of Persia, like its mountains, belong most properly to its frontier. The Euphrates and Tigris are entirely included within the pacific of Bagdad, an appendage loosely attached to the Turkish empire. The Cyrus and Araxes are at present comprehended within the Russian frontier; the Oxus belongs properly to Tartary, and the Hindooed to Cabul. The interior of Persia consists of an intricate, dry, salt plain, traversed, however, by many mountains, the streams descending from which are usually lost in the sands, or formed into lakes. They produce, however, all the fertility which the empire can boast; and when they are abundant, render the plains through which they flow beautiful and luxurious in an extraordinary degree. That of Schiras is considered the boast of Persia, and almost of the east. The plain of Isfahan is only second to it. The provinces on the Caspian, watered from the great chains of Caucasus and Kilbruz, are of very remarkable fertility. The centre and south of Persia are entirely destitute of trees, a defect arising from its aridity. It abounds, however, in fruits; and the vine also flourishes in several provinces. The mulberry in the northern provinces is so extremely abundant as to render silk the staple produce of the empire. The rich and well watered plains of Gilan and Mazandaran yield the sugar cane in considerable plenty. The deficiency of water is in general the great want. A vast extent of the empire is abandoned to pasture, and tenanted by wandering shepherds, like those of Tartary and Arabia, who frequently resort to robbery for a subsistence, rendering both life and property insecure. Persia has no mineral productions of very peculiar value. Salt is abundant, the ground being everywhere more or less impregnated with it; also all the lakes. There are some appearances of copper, iron, and silver, but they have never been properly sought after. The most extraordinary mineral production of Persia is that of naphtha or bitumen, found in pits 3 feet in diameter, and 10 or 12 deep, which fill of themselves after a certain period. The mountains also produce turquoises and other precious stones. Persia does not contain many animals peculiar to itself. There is an excellent breed of mules; and the camel and the ass are used in travelling. A valuable wool, similar, though inferior to that of Thibet, is yielded by the goats of Kerman. Its wild animals are lions, bears, tigers, wild boars, jackalls, wolves, and hyenas. The government of Persia, like all those of the east, is a complete despotism. There is scarcely any thing which can be called a standing army. The royal slaves, 3000 in number, have recently been disciplined after the European manner. The royal guards amount to 10,000. But the defence of Persia rests mainly upon the wandering tribes, which, by a great effort, may be raised to 150,000 or 200,000 men. They consist entirely of cavalry, and receive no regular pay. The Persians are gay, lively, and active. They are ostentatious and profuse in their dress, lavishing upon their persons jewels and gold ornaments of all descriptions. All the orientals respect the beard; but there is no country where it is regarded with such veneration as in Persia, being repeatedly during the day washed, combed, and adjusted. The Persians are the most learned people of the east; poetry and the sciences may even be considered as their ruling passions. In the former, their taste is decidedly superior to that of any other oriental nation. The names of Hafiz, Ferdusi, and Saadi, are classic even in Europe. Their poetry, however, is chiefly confined to love songs; and is too sensual and hyperbolical for Europeans. Morality is much studied in Persia, though little practised. The whole Persian nation are now Mahometans, of the sect of Sunnites, or of the followers of Ali. In Persia the luxury and splendour of the great afford an extensive demand for the finer fabrics, and for works of ornament. In the brilliancy of their colours they surpass the Turks, and perhaps even Europeans. The wool of their flocks is manufactured into beautiful carpets and shawls. Silk is also a great staple, either by itself, or mixed with cotton and wool; and they excel particularly in brocade and embroidery. Arms are also extensively fabricated. Leather, paper, and porcelain, nearly equal to that of China, are also enumerated among the manufactures of Persia. At the same time, while these finer manufactures flourish, the useful manufactures must be at a low ebb; as Sir H. K. Porter mentions, in his recent work, that he met with a surgeon, whom he overjoyed beyond measure by presenting him with a lancet, an instrument which was not to be procured in Persia. We have never seen an estimate of the population of Persia, founded on any thing but the most vague conjecture.

PERSIAN GULF, called also the sea of Oman, and the Green sea, an extensive bay of the Indian ocean, which stretching in a west-north-west direction, divides the Persian from the Arabian shore, the two uniting at its head. It is about eight degrees, or nearly 600 miles in length, and 220 miles in its greatest breadth; but the entrance at Cape Muscledoon is not broader than 55 miles.

PERTH, one of the largest counties of Scotland; 77 miles in length from east to west, and 68 from south to north. It is bounded E. by the county of Forfar, S. E. by the fifth of Tay and the counties of Kinross and Fife, S. by the Forth and the counties of Clackmannan and Stirling, S. W. by Dumbartonshire, W. by the county of Argyre, N. W. by the county of Inverness, and N. by a part of the same county, and that of Aberdeen. The Grampian mountains, piled one upon another in huge masses, extend through this county. The southern front of these mountains has in many places a gradual and pleasing slope into a champaign country, of great extent and fertility; and they are intersected in a thousand directions by winding valleys, which are watered by rivers and brooks of the most limpid water, clad with the richest pastures, sheltered by thriving woods that fringe the lakes and run along the streams. These valleys, where there is such a rich variety of natural beauty, form a contrast to the ruggedness of the surrounding mountains, and present to the eye the most romantic and sublime scenery. To the south of, and parallel to, the Grampians, there runs a range of green hills. They are distinguished, in different parts, by the appellations of the Sedlaw and Ochil hills. Along the south-side of the Grampians, and between the Ochil and the Sedlaw hills, a large valley or strath runs in the direction, and along the whole length of the Grampian mountains. This valley is of unequal breadth, from 10 to 15 miles, and upwards of 100 miles in length. It is intersected by various beautiful rivers, and is eminently fertile in every species of grain. Along the banks of all the rivers of this county, after they descend from the northern hills into the champaign country, there are extensive tracts of rich land, under high cultivation, adorned with elegant mansions and extensive plantations, which exhibit a pleasing and plentiful appearance. The Cause of Gowrie, between the Sedlaw hills and the Tay, is a level track of rich clay, or alluvial soil, deposited in the course of ages, highly cultivated, and abundantly fruitful. The track of country also watered by the Forth resembles the Cause of Gowrie. The two greatest rivers are the Tay and Forth, and their tributaries, namely, first, the Lyon, the Garry, the Bhray, the Isla, the Almond, and the Errie; and second, the Teath, the Allan, and the Devon. The principal lakes are Loch Tay, Rannoch, Erchie, Erpe, and Catherine. The highest mountains are, Benlawers on the north side of Loch Tay, 4015 feet high; Benmore, 3903 feet high; Schichallion, 3564 feet; Benledi, 3009 feet; Beinnloe, 3040 feet; and Tullieum, 1400 feet high. The climate of Perthshire varies with the diversity of surface which everywhere prevails. Horticulture has made rapid progress in Perthshire. There are upwards of 20 orchards in the Cause of Gowrie; and within these last 40 years, plantations have increased rapidly in every corner of the county. The valuable minerals of Perthshire are few. Coal is found in the southern parts; also limestone in many parts of the Highland district. The mountains on the north and west are chiefly granite. Freestone of the best quality is abundant. In Monteth there is a ridge of stonites or rock soap; and a very valuable clay has been discovered in great beds near Culross. The chief towns are, Perth, the county town; Culross, Auchterarder, Abernethy, Dunblane, Dunkeld, Crieff, Longforan, Cupar, Alyth, &c. Area 5000 square miles; valued rent £339,892. 6s. 9d. Scots; real rent estimated at £400,738 sterling. Population 139,050.

PERTH, the capital of the above county, on the Tay, over which is a fine stone bridge of 10 arches, finished in 1772. It is regular and well built, having four streets from east to west, which are again crossed by others at right angles from north to south. In addition to this, within these 20 years a new town has arisen, containing a number of streets, with many fine houses. On the north and south, the town has two beautiful green meadows, called luthers, each of which is about 11 mile in circuit. Adjoining the North Inch is a crescent, a place, and a terrace. Here is also an elegant new theatre, and a fine bar-rack. The public buildings are, the townhouse; the new prison, adjoining which, facing the Tay, an elegant building, containing halls for the public offices, has been erected. Between the High-street and the South-street stands the church of St John the Baptist, a building of very great antiquity, with a high spire, but not otherwise remarkable. There are chapels for dissenting congregations in almost every part of the town. That erected in Prince's-street by the members of the Episcopal communion, though small, is a piece of beautiful architecture. In the High-street is the guild-hall, a plain building, and at the west end of it a new church, with a steeple 140 feet high. In George-street is the coffee-room, a very handsome hall. A little to the south and west of the new church is an old hospital, a considerable building, now used as warehouses, founded by James VI. At the extremity of the South Inch stands the depot, built by government for the reception of prisoners of war, now used as a depot for military stores. Perth is a town of great antiquity. In the year 1210, King William renewed its charter at Stirling; and therein it is expressly stated that he confirms the privileges which the burgh enjoyed in the time of his grandfather, King David, who died in 1153, and adds to it new privileges. Prior to the reign of the Stuart family, it was the usual residence of the Scottish monarch; and the parliament-house, in a close on the north side of the High-street, for some time occupied as an Episcopal chapel, and many of the houses of the nobility, still remain, converted into modern dwelling-houses. Perth has also been the scene of many important transactions recorded in Scottish history. The church in which John Knox preached a sermon against idolatry, May 15, 1559, is now divided into three, named the East, Middle, and West kirks. The salmon fishery on the Tay, near Perth, is very extensive. The staple manufacture at Perth is linen; but of late the cotton manufacture has almost superseded it. Besides these, there are extensive manufactures of leather, boots, shoes, and gloves. It has a grammar school, besides an academy upon an excellent plan. Perth joins with Dundee, Forfar, Cupar-Fife, and St Andrew's, in sending a member to parliament. In the neighbourhood are considerable bleach-works, printfields, and spinning machinery. Population 19,068. 39 miles N. Edinburgh by Kinghorn, 42 by Queensferry, 29 W. Dundee. Long. 8. 27. W. Lat. 56. 22' N.

PERTUIS, a town of France, 40 miles S. E. Avignon. Population 4000.

PERU, one of the five viceroyalties of Spanish America. It is at present much less than it was under the Incas, having been diminished in 1716, by the separation of Quito on the north as far as the river Tumbez, which was annexed to New Granada; and in 1763 by the loss of Potosi and several other of its richest districts on the east, which were annexed to the viceroyalty of Buenos Ayres.

Its present extent is therefore from the Rio Tumbez, in 3. 30. S. latitude, to the chain of Vilcanota, in 13. S. latitude, or 690 geographical miles. Area, according to Humboldt, 30,000 square leagues. It is bounded N. by the southern provinces of Quito, Maimas, Jaen de Bracamoros, and Guayaquil; W. by the Pacific ocean, E. by the land of the Missions, the Pampas del Sacramento, and the vast plains which, spreading out from the eastern Andes, extend into the Portuguese territories. These plains are covered with a tall rushy grass, and are watered by the great river Amazona, with its tributary streams. The country is divided into High and Low Peru. Between the Andes, which traverse the country from north to south, and the shore, lies the country of Low Peru, forming an inclined plane from 10 to 20 leagues in breadth, and consisting for the most part of sandy deserts, without vegetation or inhabitants. The cause of this sterility is the total absence of rain. The only spots capable of cultivation are the banks of navigable rivers, or such as are within the reach of artificial irrigation. In this low track the climate is sultry. In Lima the thermometer ranges commonly between 60 and 85 degrees. The country between the two cordilleras is called the Sierra, or High Peru. It consists of barren mountains and rocks, interspersed with fertile and cultivated valleys. On these uplands vegetation flourishes, and to the height of 10,000 feet the climate is mild and temperate, being a mixture of perpetual spring and autumn. Beyond this, and at the height of 14,000 feet, commences the limit of perpetual snow, where everlasting winter reigns. Here are also many volcanoes, which are flaming within, while their summits, chasms, and apertures, are involved in ice. The lama, the guanaco, the vicuna, and the alpaca, or the different species of American camel, find their native climate in the cold districts of Peru; the jaguar, the cougar or puma, and several other wild animals, inhabit the thick forests; while the elk, the ant-bear, deer, monkeys, the great black bear of the Andes, and armadillos, &c. are very numerous. The woods abound in beautiful birds, the rivers in fish and alligators, and numerous tribes of reptiles infect the warm districts of the coast, in which venomous insects are also common. Peru trades with Europe, the East Indies, coast-wise with Mexico, Guatimala, and Chili, and over land with the provinces of the Rio de la Plata. Its exports are chiefly gold and silver, wine, brandy, sugar, tobacco, Jesuit's bark, salt, vicuna wool, coarse woollens, and some other manufactures of little value; and it receives in return European goods, live stock, provisions, tallow, cacao, Paraguay tea, cocoa leaf, indigo, timber, cordage, pitch, and copper. The ports of Chili that trade with Peru are Valparaiso, Concepcion, and Coquimbo. The trade with Panama, which was formerly of such magnitude, has declin-c.l. The ports of Peru which are most frequented are those named Arica, Ilo, Iquique, and Quilca, in the intendancy of Arequipa, and Pisco on the south of Lima; Chanéay and Guancha in Lima; and Guanchac, Pacasmayo, and Payta, in Truxillo, on the north. The trade of the mother country to Peru was originally oppressed by the most galling restrictions. This system was relaxed considerably when, in 1746, register ships were substituted for the galleons. At the peace of 1763, the system of ports commenced, an unlimited intercourse, without licence or restriction, being permitted between certain ports of Spain and certain ports of South America. The salutary effect of this liberal policy soon became visible in the increasing commerce of the colonies. The mountainous districts of Peru abound in metallic wealth. They are richly interspersed with veins of gold, and of heavy silver ores, in which pieces of pure silver, solid copper, and lead ore occur, frequently intermixed with white silver ore, and virgin silver in threads. In many parts there are rich veins of gold ore in quartz, and gold is obtained by washing; and silver and other metallic ores occur, of which no use is made. Quicksilver also abounds in many parts. These rich mines are, however, under the worst possible management. Some of them were managed for the king while Peru was a colony of Spain, and here every sort of corruption was practised; and notwithstanding all the representations of travellers, this erroneous management was persisted in by those who had an interest in it; and all attempts to introduce a better system were strenuously resisted. How far matters may be improved since the royal authority is at an end, we do not yet know. The ores in Peru are frequently extremely rich, producing from 5 to 50 lbs. of silver for every hundred weight of ore. The annual produce from 1780 to 1789, is estimated, from the royal duties, at 3,415,218 dollars, or about 1,768,134. The coinage of gold and silver in the royal mint of Lima, between 1791 and 1801, amounted to 1,540,000, or 1,113,000 per annum; of which 1726 lbs. were gold, and 285,000 silver. The number of gold mines and washings worked in Peru is about 70, and the number of silver mines 680, which includes all the different works in the same spot. Of quicksilver, four mines exist, with four of copper and twelve of lead. Emeralds and other precious stones are found in this country, with obsidian, and the stone of the Incas, a maceate capable of the highest polish. Peru contained, by the last census, 1,078,172 inhabitants. It is supposed, however, that this census contained omissions, and the population is therefore carried to 1,400,000. Under the dominion of the present state, all military, civil, and ecclesiastical employments, were reserved by the European Spaniards. The Peruvians were excluded from all offices of trust and honour, and were a degraded class, compared with the European Spaniards. Many of their families have titles of nobility, and possess large estates. Some are descended from the ancient conquerors. Others have risen into consequence from commerce, or from employments under the crown. The mestizos, or offspring of the Spaniards and Indians, are the next class in rank to the Spaniards, and the most numerous after the Indians. The quateroons, or offspring of the Spaniards and mestizos, are hardly to be distinguished from Spaniards. The cholos, on the contrary, sprung from the Indians and mestizos, are classed with the Indians. About 600 negroes are annually imported from Africa. The Indians are the most numerous class, and are a poor degraded race, lazy, dirty, and impatient. The country of Peru labours under great natural disadvantages. Its population is small, and spread over a territory of great extent; and there is a total want of roads, canals, or bridges, to facilitate the transport of goods between distant parts. Peru is divided into seven intendancies, namely, Truxillo, Tarma, Guancavelica, Lima, Guanaanga, Arequipa, and Cuzco. Peru was invaded by Pizarro in 1532, and finally conquered. The Peruvians, at the time they were discovered by Pizarro, knew the arts of architecture, sculpture, mining, working the precious metals and jewels, cultivated their land, were clothed, and had a regular system of government, and a code of civil and religious laws. They had no right idea, however, of property, as their land was cultivated for the common benefit. In the arts of architecture, they had advanced far beyond the other nations of America. The great temple of the sun at Pachacamac, with the palace of the Incas, and the fortress, were so connected together as to form one great building, half a league in circuit; and many ruins of palaces and temples still existing, prove the extent of the knowledge and perseverance of these people. The immense obelisks of Tiahuanaco, and the town of Chulucap, with the museum of Chachapoyas, which are conical stone buildings, supporting large rude busts, are among the most singular, though unfortunately the least known of the Peruvian remains; and are equally curious as the great military roads, with their accompanying palaces or posts.

Peru, like all the other provinces of South America, has revolted from the authority of the mother country. Lima has fallen into the possession of the independent troops; and though the royal forces, who have retired back into the country, be still holding out against the new authority, there does not appear the least probability that Peru will ever again be a dependent colony of Spain.

PERUJA, a town of Italy, in the States of the Church, the capital of a delegation of the same name. It stands near the Tiber. It is a clean and well built town, but has in general an air of gloom, from the number of its churches and convents, which are by no means elegant. The cathedral is a very indifferent building, both in its architecture and decorations, though some of the churches are better. The most interesting objects are a number of valuable paintings. Perugia contains few ruins. The gate of the Piazza Grimaldi is, however, of the time of the Romans; and at the gate of St Angelo still stands a temple of Mars, adorned with pillars of oriental granite. The other objects of interest are the town-house, the theatre, which is large and handsome, and two public fountains. Perugia has a university on a small scale; likewise several hospitals. It has some manufactures of velvet and other silk stuffs. Pop. 16,000. 53 miles N. Rome.

PERUWELZ, a town of the Netherlands, 12 miles N. by E. Valenciennes. Pop. 5500.

PERWERTHA, a town of Hindostan, province of Gokonda. Long. 78. 48. E. Lat. 15. 37. N.

PESARO, a fortified and well built town of Italy, States of the Church. Its streets are clean and airy. Its market-place is ornamented with a fountain, and a marble statue of Pope Urban VIII. Some of the churches are remarkable for their paintings, others for their architecture. Population 10,000. 34 miles N. W. Ancona.

PESCARA, a town of Naples, at the mouth of the river Pescara, 40 miles E. Aquila.

PESCHIERA, a town and strong fortress of Austrian Italy, province of Verona, near where the Mincio issues from the lake of Garda, 18 miles N. N. W. Mantua. Population 2500.

PESCO COSTANZO, a town of Naples, in Abruzzo Citra. Population 2300.

PESNAS, a town of France, at the confluence of the Peyre and the Herault. It has manufactures on a small scale, of cotton, woollen, silk, leather, and soap. Population 7000. 25 miles S. W. Montpellier.

PESHAWER, a very ancient city of Afghanistan, province of Cabul, and capital of a district of the same name. The city stands on an uneven surface, is upwards of 3 miles in circumference, and contains about 100,000 inhabitants. The houses are generally built of unburnt brick, in wooden frames, and are mostly three stories high. The streets are narrow, but paved, with a kennel in the middle. There are many mosques in the town, but few of them, or of the public buildings, worthy of notice, except a fine caravan-serai, and the citadel. Some of the palaces are splendid, but few of the nobility have good houses. Long. 70. 37. E. Lat. 33. 32. N.

PESME, a town of France, department of the Upper Saône. Population 1700.

PESR, a palatinate of Hungary, lying chiefly along the east bank of the Danube. Area 4086 square miles; population 362,000.

PESR, or PESHA, a city of Hungary, on the Danube, opposite to Buda, from which it is separated by a bridge of boats, three quarters of a mile in length. Pest consists of the Old and New towns, the latter the better built; but throughout the whole, the streets are tolerably spacious and regular, and the houses substantial, if not elegant. Of the public buildings, the principal are the hospital of invalids, the barracks, and a quadrangular edifice, begun in 1786 by Joseph II. and at present occupied by the military. Of the churches, the Catholics have four; the Lutherans, the Calvinists, and the followers of the Greek faith, have one each. The university of Pest, the only one in Hungary, is richly endowed. Pest contains a botanical garden, and, on the Buda side of the river, an observatory, and a museum and public library unconnected with the university. The manufactures are various, comprising silk, cotton, leather, jewellery, and musical instruments; also tobacco, which is here a government monopoly. Population 42,000. 150 miles E. S. E. Vienna.

PETANCHER, an important province of China, being that in which Peking, the capital, is situated. Population 36,000,000.

PETER, ST. a tributary of the Mississippi, in North America.

PETER, ST. a river of Spain; which separates the isle of Leon (containing Cadix) from the mainland.

PETER, ST. one of the Virgin Islands.

PETER'S LAKE, ST. a lake of Canada, about 20 miles long, and 15 broad.

PETER LE POY, ST. a market town of England, in Guernsey, with a good harbour and pier, and defended by two castles.

PETERBOROUGH, a city of England, in Northamptonshire, on the Nen. It contains many buildings of great neatness, and the streets are mostly regular. Narrow street, which leads to the bridge, is the principal street for trade. Of the public buildings, the cathedral is by far the most remarkable. It extends 470 feet in length, and about 200 in breadth. The style of architecture is the Norman. It contains a monument to the memory of Catherine of Arragon, wife of Henry VIII.; and another to the memory of Mary, queen of Scots, both of whom were buried here. The cathedral of Peterborough was formerly a monastery. Besides the cathedral, there is only one parish church in Peterborough, that of St John the Baptist. The stocking manufacture is carried on to a considerable extent. It sends two members to parliament; number of voters 450. Population 4390 for the city, and 8466 for the liberty of Peterborough. 78 miles N. London.

PETERBOROUGH, a post village of the United States, in Madison county, New York.—Also a township in New Hampshire.

PETERHEAD, a parish and seaport town of Scotland, county of Aberdeen. It is a pleasantly situated, well aired, and well built town, standing on a peninsula and small island, projecting into the German ocean, and forming the easternmost point of Scotland. The public buildings are ample and commodious town-house, with a new one built of granite, 110 feet high; the established church, a large, elegant, and commodious building, having a very fine spire built of granite; and the Episcopal chapel, a handsome modern building, finished with considerable taste. There are, besides these, Burgher, Antiburgher, and Methodist chapels; a coffee-room; and public rooms for the accommodation of those frequenting Peterhead during the summer-season, for the benefit of the air and mineral waters. Peterhead has long been known and resorted to as a watering place: it has a set of excellent cold and warm baths. The mineral wells are celebrated for their medicinal virtues. As a commercial town, Peterhead has made rapid advances. Its two harbours, formed by two spacious bays and two small islands, are situated on the most easterly point of Scotland. They are naturally excellent, and have been much improved by art. The shipping belonging to this port, including 15 vessels successfully employed in the Greenland whale fishery, amounts to about 13,000 registered tons. Ship-building is carried on here to a considerable extent. The herring and other fisheries are beginning to be extended. The exports consist chiefly of provisions, such as grain, cod-fish, cheese, eggs, salted pork; also of threads, granite, kelp, and whale oil. Pop. including parish, 6313. 132 miles N. Edinburgh.

PETRSBURG, St. a government or province in the N. W. of European Russia, at the eastern extremity of the gulf of Finland. Area 14,000 square miles. Pop. 700,000.

PETRSBURG, St. a very large city, and the capital of the Russian empire, at the eastern extremity of the gulf of Finland, at the mouth of the river Neva, which divides it into two parts. Its streets are wide, and regular. Previous to 1703, its site contained nothing but a couple of huts; and the spot on which Peter I. proposed to build a fortified seaport was a low marshy island, covered in summer with mud, and in winter a frozen pool. After the battle of Pultava (in 1709), and the permanent acquisition of Livonia, Peter enlarged his plan, and prosecuted it with new ardour; and the new city had made a surprising progress before the death of Peter in 1725. It has since been progressively extended and embellished, particularly by the Empress Catherine II. who first made it the permanent abode of the court. The form of Petersburg, like that of Paris, is nearly circular; its diameter about four miles. It is divided into four comprehensive divisions, viz. the Admiralty or central quarter; the quarter between the Admiralty and the country to the south and east; the original Petersburg quarter, occupying an insulated track on the north side; and the Vasil-Ostrov, another insulated track to the north of the river. On the land side, St. Petersburg is almost entirely open; but the approach by sea is guarded by the fort of Cronstadt, and in the middle of the city is a citadel. The site of this capital is completely level, and so low, that high tides cause considerable in-undulations. The Admiralty or central quarter is about two miles in length. The part adjacent to the river combines both fashion and business. Here is the winter palace of the czar, above 20 public buildings of magnitude, and the residences of the chief merchants. The streets are elegant, and rents high. The second and third Admiralty quarters, less fashionable, but well built, extend in lines parallel to the first, but more distant from the river. They are inhabited chiefly by merchants and tradesmen. The quarter between the Admiralty and the country to the south and east is very extensive; and though termed the suburbs, is in general very well built. The original quarter, distinguished by the name of St. Petersburg, comprises several islands, of which only the one adjoining the middle of the city is thickly inhabited. Its streets are straight and wide; but it contains no splendid edifices. Its most striking object is the citadel, a regular hexagon, on the north bank of the Neva. Its tower, above 300 feet in height, is seen from many points of the city, and serves as a landmark to strangers. This quarter still contains the cottage occupied by Peter I. during the building of the city. The Vasil-Ostrov is the seat of commerce, adjoining on the bank of the river the quay for loading and unloading merchandise, and, towards the sea, the harbour for galleys. There is the exchange, the custom-house, and the warehouses of entrepot. Petersburg is defended from an attack by sea, partly by the fortifications of Cronstadt, more by the shoals in the channel from that city to the capital. There are two bridges over the main stream of the Neva, and three over its branches; they are all of boats, and are removed whenever danger is apprehended from the ice rushing down the stream. The Neva, soon after entering St. Petersburg, sends off a branch, and from the middle of the city another branch, both to the northward. These fall soon after into the sea, and form the insulated tracks on which the northern part of the city is built. The main stream flows through the middle of the city, and has along its south side a quay three miles in length, and embanked in all its extent with a wall, parapet, and pavement of granite. The southern part of the town is divided, not by branches of the river, but by canals, which give St. Petersburg, in its water communications, a resemblance to Amsterdam. The finest of the canals is called the Fontanka. No city in Europe can stand a comparison with St. Petersburg in the width and regularity of its streets. Florence, Dresden, and even Berlin and London, are all inferior. The squares are less numerous than might have been expected. There are, however, four in the first Admiralty quarter, in the middle of the town; and to the eastward of these, near the marble palace, is an extensive public garden, with beautiful alleys. The streets of St. Petersburg are for the most part paved with stone; a few, however, are still floored with logs of timber. The houses, originally of wood, are now of brick. Real stone structures are very rare in this capital. The chief public buildings are the winter palace of the czar, a building of great extent, approaching to the form of a square, being 450 feet in length, 350 in breadth, and 70 in height. In the same part of the town (the first Admiralty quarter), stood the summer palace, now demolished. The Hermitage is a separate palace, built by the Empress Catherine. The marble palace is an elegant structure, partly of marble, more of stone. The Taurida, a very large building, erected by Potemkin, and now belonging to the crown, has extensive galleries and fine gardens. It is now, however, used for barracks. In a suburb to the north is a wooden palace, belonging to the grand duke Constantine. In the Vasili-Ostrov is the imperial academy, a fine stone structure; also the academy of the fine arts, and the great building for the cadets, which contains a garden and an open space for military exercises. The Admiralty contains store-houses, and docks for the construction of eight or ten ships of war. At no great distance from it are the senate-house, the post-office, the pawn-bank, and the office for foreign affairs. Among the other public edifices are the royal tables, the police-office, the medical college, and the founding hospital, all in the second quarter of the Admiralty. In this quarter also is the town-house. In point of education and the state of knowledge, Petersburg is at a low ebb. There are several collections of books; but none were open to the public until 1812. There are between 30 and 40 booksellers' shops, and about half as many printing-houses. The Petersburg university is of so late a date as 1819; but there are inferior institutions in considerable number, such as schools for medicine, surgery, navigation, mining; also several military colleges and charity schools. Here are also several academies, one of sciences, another of the fine arts, and a third for promoting a knowledge of the Russian history and language. The charitable institutions in Petersburg are various. The principal are the founding hospital, the infirmary, the sailors' hospital, the lazaretto, the work-house, the house for inoculating, the asylum for the blind, the deaf and dumb, the medical philanthropic institute, the humane society, and an association of widows who attend sick persons in the hospitals, or in their own houses. The manufacturing establishments in this capital are very various. There is on account of government, a grand tapestry work, a large manufacture of aquafortis, a mint, and assay-office in the citadel, a bronze-work, a foundry of metal, a foundry of cannon, and powder-mills; also on account of individuals, manufactures of silk, cotton, woollen, paper and cards, wax-cloth, snuff, tobacco, leather, watches, glass, printing types. There are also mathematical and musical instrument makers, coach-makers, jewellers and gold-smiths; ship-wrights, potters, and soap-boilers. The exports of St Petersburg are hemp and flax, leather and tallow, iron, and the skins of hares and foxes from the forests; also canvas and other coarse linen. The minor articles are bees wax, linseed, linseed oil, tar, potash, and tobacco. The imports to St Petersburg are colonial produce and manufactures. The number of ships that enter the Neva annually varies from 1000 to 1700, of which nearly the half are British. In the neighbourhood are several imperial palaces. The country is flat, and presents no rural beauties. Population, by a late survey (in 1817), 285,000, of whom 55,000 were connected with the land and sea service, and 25,000 were foreigners. 435 miles E. by N. Stockholm, 1400 E. N. E. London. Long. 30. 12. 45. E. Lat. 59. 56. 23. N.

PETERSBURG, a borough and port of entry of the United States, in Dinwiddie county, Virginia, on the Appomattox, 12 miles above its junction with James river. It is one of the handsomest towns in the state, being the emporium of export and import to a large district. It contains a court-house, jail, an academy, and 5 churches for different denominations of Christians. Population 5668. 25 miles S. by E. Richmond.—It is also the name of various townships.

PETERSFIELD, a market town of England, county of Hants. It sends two members to parliament. Population 1440. 18 miles N. E. Portsmouth.

PETERSHAM, a village of England, in Surrey, on the Thames. Population 516. 10 miles W. S. W. London.

PETERSHAM, a township of the United States, in Massachusetts. Population 1490.

PETERSHALL, a village of Germany, 24 miles E. S. E. Strasburg. Population 2000.

PETERSWALD, a village of Bohemia, 20 miles S. by E. Dresden. Population 1500.

PETERSWALDAU, a town of Prussian Silesia, 9 miles S. Schweidnitz. Population 3000.

PETERWARDEIN, or PETER-VARA, a strong town of Slavonia, on the Danube. The works are extensive, and the garrison considerable. Population 3700.

* PETHERTON, NORTH, a village of England, county of Somerset. Population 3091.

PETHERTON, SOUTH, a market town of England, county of Somerset. Pop. 2090.

PETITE RIVIERE, a river of Canada, which falls into the Utawas.

PETRELLA, a town of Naples. Pop. 3000.

PETRINIA, a town of Croatia, 55 miles E. Carlsstadt. Population 2900.

PETROWELL, a town of Austria, 12 miles W. by S. Presburg. Population 3000.

PETROSAPOLSK, a town of European Russia, 65 miles N. E. Olanetz. Pop. 3000.

PETCHORA, a large river of European Russia, which falls into the Arctic ocean.

PETTEN, a village of North Holland, on the German ocean, 10 miles N. Alkmaar.

PETTINENGO, a town of Piedmont, province of Biella. Population 2900.

PETWORTH, a well built market town of England, in Sussex, on the Arun. The streets are irregular. The church has a square tower, and is the place of interment for the Percies, Earls of Northumberland. In the centre of the town is a very handsome market-house of stone. It has a charity school, alms-house, and an hospital; also a bridewell. Petworth house, the magnificent mansion of the Earl of Egremont, stands close to the town. Population 2761. 12 miles N. E. Chichester.

PEVENSEY, a village of England, in Sussex, on a small river which falls into Pevensey bay. Its importance has declined, owing to the receding of the sea. Population 876. 14 miles S. W. Hastings.

PEVEN, a small river of England, in Cheshire, which runs into the Weaver.

PEVRAU, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne. Population 1600.

PEYRIGRADER, a town of France, 20 miles E. by N. Bayonne. Population 2000.

PEYTONSECK, a post village of the United States, in Pittsylvania county, Virginia.

PFÄLSDORF, a village of Prussian Silesia, 1 mile N. Liegnitz.

PFÄFFENHAGEN, a town of Bavaria, 5 miles N. N. W. Mindelheim. Pop. 3000.

PFÄFFHOFEN, a town of Tyrol, on the Inn, 14 miles W. Innsbruck. Pop. 2400.

PREDERSHEIM, a town of Germany, 23 miles S. Mentz. Population 1700.

PREFFENHEIM, a town of France, department of the Upper Rhine. Population 1700.

PREFFICOX, a town of the Swiss canton of Zurich, 11 miles E. Zurich. Pop. 2700.

PREIN AND ENZ, a circle or district of the grand duchy of Baden, in Germany. Population 132,000.

PRÖTZHEIM, a town of Germany, in Baden, at the junction of the Wurm and the Nagold. It has manufactures of linen, trinkets, and hardware articles. Population 5400. 22 miles W. N. W. Stuttgart.

PRÖNDTEN, a village and parish of Bavaria. Population 2200.

PRELLENDORF, a town of Germany, 19 miles N. by E. Constance. Population 1500.

PRILLINGEN, a town of Germany, in Württemberg. Population 3200.

PRUNGERSTADT, a village of Germany, on the Mosel, 5 miles S. S. E. Darmstadt. Population 2100.

PRYH, a small but neat town of Switzerland, canton of Thurgau.

PUAISBOURG, a town of France, 30 miles N. W. Strasburg. Population 2000.

PHARSAALIA, the ancient Pharsalus, a town of Thessaly, 18 miles S. E. Larissa. Pop. 5000.

PHARSAALIA, a post village of the United States, in Chenango county, New York.

PHILPS, a township of the United States, Ontario county, New York. Pop. 3400.

PHILADELPHIA, a city and port of entry of the United States, in Pennsylvania, and county of the same name, on the west bank of the Delaware. It is 120 miles from the Atlantic, by the course of the river and bay, and is situated on the narrowest part of an isthmus, between the Delaware and the Schuylkill rivers, about six miles above their confluence. The buildings now occupy a space upwards of three miles long, from north to south; and they extend from the Delaware to the Schuylkill. The streets are regular and spacious. Broad-street is 113 feet wide; High, or Market-street, 100; Mulberry-street, 60; and the other streets, in the original plan, 50 feet wide. The squares are numerous, amounting to 304. The public buildings are the late state-house and office, two city court-houses, a county-house, a state penitentiary, a bridewell or jail, a university, the philosophical society's hall, the hall for the academy of natural sciences, the Washington hall, a public library, a hospital, the Friends' alms-house, three dispensaries, an alms-house, two dramatic theatres, a medical theatre, a laboratory, an amphitheatre, a masonic-hall, ten incorporated banks, and fifty-nine houses of public worship, nine for General Assembly Presbyterians, two for Associate Reformed Presbyterians, two for Dutch Reformed Presbyterians, two for Reformed Presbyterians, one for Associate Presbyterians, one for German Presbyterians, eleven for Methodists, six for Episcopians, six for Friends, five for Baptists, four for Roman Catholics, two for German Lutherans, one for English Lutherans, one for Swedes, one for Moravians, one for Universalists, one for Unitarians, one for Drinkers, a New Jerusalem church, and a Jews' synagogue. Several of the churches are very spacious and elegant edifices. The state-house was erected in 1763, and its architecture is much admired. The bank of Pennsylvania is a remarkably elegant edifice of marble. The masonic hall is an elegant Gothic edifice, with a handsome steeple. The houses of the city are generally constructed of brick, without much ornament, but have a striking appearance of convenience, comfort, neatness, and opulence. The city contains five different markets, the principal of which is in Market or High-street, and extends from the Delaware through six squares. The United States bank is in this city; and here is the mint of the United States, in which the national money is coined. Philadelphia exceeds all other towns in the United States, in the variety and excellence of its manufactures. It has manufactures of cottons, nails, distilleries, breweries, tanneries, paper mills, rope walks, glass works, marble yards, printing offices, and numerous other manufacturing establishments. Over the Delaware, Schuylkill, and Susquehanna, in the approaches to the city, there are 10 excellent bridges. The Delaware is navigable to this place for a 74 gun ship. The literary and benevolent institutions are numerous. The Philadelphia library originated with Dr Franklin. There is, besides, a museum, a philosophical apparatus, the Philadelphia library, and the Loganian library. There are various other libraries, and literary and philosophical institutions. The library of the society of Friends contains about 2000 volumes. The oldest seminary of learning in Pennsylvania is that incorporated by William Penn, by the title of Friends Public Schools. It supports a number of schools. The Pennsylvania hospital was established in 1752. The number of patients is usually from 190 to 220, including 90 lunatics. The university of Pennsylvania consists of four departments, of arts, medicine, natural science, and law. Connected with the university is the academy, in which youth are instructed in the learned languages, preparatory to college; and a charity school for the education of poor children. Population of the city and liberties in 1790, 43,525; in 1802, 62,000; in 1810, 92,247; in 1820, 108,116. 90 miles S. W. New York. 321 S. W. Boston. Long. 75. 10. W. Lat. 39. 57. N.

PHILIP, FORT ST., a celebrated fortress of the island of Miporea. The works were levelled by the Spaniards in 1805.

PHILIP, ST., a village of Mexico, in South America, on the Rio del Norte.

PHILIP ISLAND, the name of various islands in the South Pacific ocean.

PHILIPPEVILLE, a town of the Netherlands, 22 miles S. by W. Namur. Pop. 1200.

PHILIPPI, a town of European Turkey, in Macedonia, 80 miles E. by N. Salonica.

PHILIPPINES, an archipelago in the Eastern seas, consisting of a great number of islands of various sizes, on many of which the Spaniards have establishments, while others are but little known. They extend from the 13th or 14th degree, as far as the 19th or 20th degree of N. lat. The largest island is Luzon, or Luconia. All these islands are nominally subordinate to the Spanish government at Manila. The Philippines, from their situation, possess the peculiarities of a tropical climate, although they are not liable to any intense heats. Their principal production is rice, which is the chief food of the natives. The other products are different sorts of pulse. The natives also cultivate the bread fruit, beans, and the cocovata. The fruit trees are few in number, and of an indifferent quality, except the plantain, to which may be added the orange and mango. Manila produces indigo of an inferior quality, but the tobacco is excellent. The islands contain mines of gold and iron. The mountains afford excellent timber, both for ship and house-building. Horses and horned cattle, introduced by the Spaniards, have thriven exceedingly. Among the curious birds found here are the swallows, which form the edible nests so highly esteemed by the Chinese; and the biche de mer, another Chinese delicacy, is also procured on the coast. These islands continue, notwithstanding their fertility, in a very desolate state, owing partly to the sloth of the native inhabitants, and partly to the illiberal and intolerant policy of the Spaniards, who will not allow the industrious Chinese to settle in them. All kinds of India piece goods may be imported here with advantage, and all kinds of European cutlery and iron. The exports are birds nests, cassia, gold dust, pepper, rattans, sugo, tortoise shell, wax, wild honey, amber, marble, tar, brimstone, and many other articles of inferior note. These islands were first discovered by Magellan in 1521; but it was not till the year 1565 that they were taken possession of. Manila was constituted the capital of the Spanish possessions in the Philippines. It was taken by the English in 1762, but restored in 1764.

PHILIPPOPOLI, a large town of European Turkey, in Macedonia, on a small island formed by the Maritza. Before the dreadful earthquake which took place here in 1818, by which the town was in a great measure destroyed, Philippopoli was a thriving place, containing 30,000 inhabitants. 95 miles W. N. W. Adrianople.

PHILIPPSTADT, a fortified town of Germany, 5 miles S. Spire. Population 1100.

PHILISTOWS, a poor town of Ireland, in King's county, 36 miles W. Dublin.

PHILISTURAC, a post village of the United States, Orange county, New York.—The name of various townships.

PHILLISTON, a poor village of the United States, Worcester county, Massachusetts.

PHILOKIA, a town of European Turkey, 58 miles S. by E. Joannina.

PHOSIDE, a township of England, in Derbyshire. Population 504.

PIACENZA, or PIACENTIA, a town of Italy, duchy of Parma, near the junction of the Po with the Trebia. It is defended by a castle. Of its streets, a few are broad and straight, but most of them are narrow and gloomy. Of the public squares, one contains two fine equestrian statues in bronze; representing individuals of the Farnese family. The town has two other squares of inferior interest, one of them containing the ducal palace, the other the cathedral, a heavy building. It contains, however, a number of fine paintings. The theatre is neat and commodious, but small. The university is of no great note, but the town library contains 30,000 volumes; and there are several extensive private collections. It has manufactures of silk stuffs, woollen, fustian, stockings, and hats; also a great yearly fair held in April. Pop. 20,000. 32 miles W. N. W. Parma. Piacenza is also the name of a duchy of Italy.

PIAZA DE' GUERRA, a town in the north of Sicily, 16 miles S. W. Palermo.

PIANELLA, a town of Naples, in Abruzzo Ultra, on the Pescara. Population 3200.

PIANEZZA, a town of Piedmont, on the Dora Riparia, 9 miles W. Turin. Pop. 2000.

PIANOZZA, a small island of the Mediterranean, between Elba and Corsica.

PIAVE, a large river of Italy, which flows through the territory of Venice, and falls into the Adriatic north-east of Venice.

PIAZZA, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Noto. It is noted for the number of its churches and convents. Population 13,500. 80 miles S. E. Palermo.

PICARDY, a large province in the N. of France, bounded W. by the English channel, and E. by the Netherlands. Since 1790, it forms the department of the Somme, and part of those of the Oise, Aisne, and Pas de Calais.

PICCIANO, a town of the kingdom of Naples, in Abruzzo Ultra. Pop. 3800.

PICHINCHA, a very lofty mountain and volcano of Quito. Lat. 0. 11. 32. S.

PICKAWAY, a county of the United States, in the central part of the state of Ohio. Population 7124.

PICKERING, a market town of England, in the East-Riding of Yorkshire. It has a large church, with a lofty spire. Here are also chapels for the Presbyterians, Methodists, and Quakers. Population 2740. 23 miles N. E. York.

PICKMERE, a small river of England, in Cheshire, which runs into the Pever.

PICO, a mountainous island near the coast of Africa, one of the Azores, 7000 feet high, and crowned with a magnificent dome, while its sides are covered with vineyards and varied cultivation.

PICOT, a small isle, river, bay, and settlement, in Nova Scotia, at the southern extremity of the gulf of St Lawrence.

PIDNIE, a river of England, in Dorsetshire, which falls into the Bristol channel.

PIEDIMONTE, a town of Naples, in Terra di Lavoro. It has manufactures of cloth and paper. Population 4700.

PIEDMONT, the principal province of the continental states of the king of Sardinia, forming the north-west portion of Italy, having France on the west, and Lombardy on the east. Its area is 13,000 square miles. Its surface presents a succession of mountains and hills. It is of an oblong form, extending in length from north to west. It is watered in its whole breadth by the Po, which receives the two Doras, the Stura, the Orco, the Sesia, the Tanaro, the Borbio, the Balbo, the Bormida, and the Varo. The climate in the mountains is cold; and the excessive heats of the plains are moderated by the breezes from the mountains. The soil is very fertile, the plains yielding wheat, rye, barley, and maize; and in the lower grounds rice. The hills are in general covered with vineyards. Olives, almonds, chestnuts, and in a smaller quantity, figs, oranges, and lemons, are raised here. The pastures are extensive and rich. Silk is raised in immense quantities, and, on account of its fineness and strength, is preferred to all the silks of Italy. Population, 1,750,000. The country was subdivided in 1818 into 26 districts.

PIELIS-YEEVI, a large lake in the east of Finland, in Carelia. It is 67 miles in length, and from 6 to 14 in breadth. It communicates with the Lake Onego.

PIENZA, a town of Italy, in Tuscany, 45 miles S. Florence.

PIERRE, a town of France, department of the Saône and Loire. Population 1500.

PIERRE, St., a town of France, 20 miles N. E. Boulogne. Pop. 2700.—Also a small island on the north-west coast of France.

PIERRE, St., a river of Guadeloupe, which enters the sea.

PIERRE, St., a seaport of Martinico, in the West Indies, on the W. coast of the island, five leagues S. Port Royal. It is the chief place of business in the island. Houses 2000.

PIERRE, St., a river of North America, which joins the Mississippi, Lat. 44. 10. N.

PIERRE, St., a small island near the coast of Newfoundland.

PIERRE DU CHEMIN, St., a town of France, department of La Vendée. Population 1700.

PIERRE SUR DIVE, St., a town of France, 20 miles S. St. Caen. Population 1300.

PIERRE L'ÉGLISE, St., a town of France, 13 miles E. Cherbourg. Population 2000.

PIERRE LE MORTIER, St., a walled town of France, 20 miles N. by W. Moulins. Population 2000.

PIERRE D'OLÉRON, a town of France, on the island of Oléron. Population 3000.

PIERRE DE FLEURBAIS, a town of France, department of the Ille and Vilaine. Population 1000.

PIERRELETTIE, a town of France, department of the Drome. Population 2300.

PIETRAIOJA, a town of the kingdom of Naples, Terra di Lavoro. Pop. 1700.

PIETRA SANTA, a well built town of Italy, with regular streets, and handsome churches. 34 miles N. by W. Leghorn.

PITRUS, St., anciently Ugentus, a small island in the Mediterranean, on the south-west coast of Sardinia.

PIETRO A PATEPISO, St., a town of the kingdom of Naples. Population 2500.

PIETRE DI SACCO, a town of Austrian Italy. Pop. 5100. 10 miles S. E. Padua.

PIGNA, a town of Piedmont. Pop. 2300. 20 miles N. E. Nice.

PIGNAN, a town of France. Pop. 2300. 23 miles N. E. Toulon.

PIKE, a county of the United States, in Ohio, on both sides of Scioto river.—2d. In the Alabama territory. Population 2611.—3d. A township of the United States, in Ohio, on the Scioto. Houses 20.

PIKEVILLE, a port village of the United States, in Baltimore county, Maryland.

PILAYA Y PASPAYA, or CINTI, a province of Peru, 40 leagues S. La Plata.

PILCOMAYO, a large river, formerly of Peru, but now in the viceroyalty of Buenos Ayres, province of Charcas. It falls into the Paraguay, by two branches, one near the city of Assumption, the other near the confluence of the Verango.

PILGRAM, a town of Bohemia, 57 miles S. S. E. Prague. Population 2500.

PILGREY, a town and fortress of Hindostan, province of Delhi, on the river Gowrah. PILICA, a rapid river of Poland, which falls into the Vistula.

PILKINGTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1870.

PILLAR, a village of the island of Itamarca, on the coast of Pernambuco, Brazil.

PILLAR, CAPE, the south-west point of the Straits of Magellan from the Pacific ocean, on the coast of Terra del Fuego. Long. 76. 40. W. Lat. 52. 45. S.

PILLAU, a well built seaport of East Prussia, at the extremity of a narrow peninsula, between the Baltic and the long maritime inlet called the Frische Haff, with a commodious harbour. Population 3000. 22 miles W. S. W. Königsberg.

PILNITZ, a village of Saxony, on the Elbe, 4 miles E. S. E. Dresden.

PILSEN, the chief town of a circle of the same name in Bohemia, at the angle formed by the Misa and the Itabusa. It has manufactures of woollens, cottons, and leather. Population 7400.

PINCKNEY, a county of South Carolina. PINCKNEYVILLE, a village of Louisiana, 5 miles E. Mississippi. Houses 40.

PINE, CAPE, on the south coast of Newfoundland. Long. 52. 20. W. Lat. 46. 42. N.

PINE CREEK, a river of Pennsylvania, which runs into the Susquehanna.

PINE GROVE MILLS, a post village of the United States, in Pennsylvania.

PINE HILL, a post village of the United States, in York district, South Carolina.

PINK RIVER, the name of various small rivers of North America.

PINEROLO, a town of Piedmont, on the Clusone. It contains a spacious place of arms, and manufactures woollens, silk, paper, and leather. Pop. 10,000. 23 miles S. S. W. Turin.

PINUEL, an inland town of Portugal, 7 miles N. E. Almeida. Population 1600.

PINNER, a township of England, in Middlesex. Population 1070.

PINOS, several islands in the Atlantic ocean.

PINEX, a trading town of Russian Lithuania, 100 miles S. S. E. Grodno. Pop. 4500.

PIONONE, a town of France, department of the Vaucluse. Population 1700.

PIONNA, a small river of the kingdom of Naples. It falls into the Adriatic.

PIONINO, a town of Italy, the capital of a principality of the same name, on a rocky promontory opposite the island of Elba. Population 4000. 40 miles S. by N. Leghorn.

PIONNARCO, a town of Piedmont, 10 miles W. S. W. Turin. Population 3200.

PIONARO, a town of Italy, States of the Church, 35 miles S. S. W. Rome.

PIRLEY, a town of Hindostan, province of Bengal, on the Subanreeka river. Long. 87. 31. E. Lat. 21. 42. N.

PIRRA, a flourishing town of the United States, in Miami country, Ohio.

PIRANCA, a village of Brazil, province of Rio Grande. Near it are gold washings.

PIRANO, a town of Austrian Illyria, in Istria, 14 miles S. S. W. Trieste. Pop. 6200.

PIRATINA, a town of European Turkey, in Romania, 118 miles E. Moscow. Pop. 10,000.

PIRECU, the capital of a province of the same name in New Granada, 15 miles from the city of Barcelona. Population 1800.

PIRMASEN, a town of the Bavarian province of the Rhine, 35 miles W. Spire. Population 3300.

PIRENA, a fortified town of Saxony, on the Elbe, 9 miles S. E. Dresden. Pop. 3800.

PIRNITZ, a town of Moravia, 43 miles W. Brunn. Population 2300.

PISA, a city of Italy, in the grand duchy of Tuscany, on the Arno, which divides it into two nearly equal parts. The quays which run along either bank are spacious, and are bordered by rows of good houses. The bridges are three in number, and the middle one is built of marble. The circuit of the town is more than six miles. Pisa contains a number of public edifices. The cathedral, with its attendant buildings, the baptistery, the cemetery, and the belfry, is perhaps the finest specimen that exists of the style of building called by the Italians the Gothico-Moresco. It contains statues and paintings. The Campo Santo is a large oblong building, containing funeral monuments, sarcophagi, and other Greek and Roman antiquities. But of all the buildings of Pisa the most curious is the belfry, a cylindrical tower of 186 feet in height, graceful in its proportions, and constructed of successive rows of pilars, chiefly marble, but remarkable above all for its inclination about 15 feet out of the perpendicular, whence it is commonly called the leaning tower. Besides the cathedral, the city contains several other elegant churches. The square of the university likewise contains several marble buildings; and among the public establishments of the city, the hospital for 300 patients is conspicuous. The university of Pisa is one of the oldest in Italy. It has 4 colleges, with 40 professors; also a library, a botanical garden, a cabinet of natural history, and an observatory. Pisa is a place of great antiquity, having been one of the twelve towns of Etruria, and afterwards augmented by a colony from Rome. Its trade has long been very limited. The mildness of the climate during winter attracts hither a number of invalids; and the celebrated baths in the neighbourhood are resorted to from a great distance. Population 17,000. 42 miles N. by E. Leghorn.

PIRACATA, a river of the United States, in New Hampshire, which joins the Lamprey.

PIRACATAQUA, a river of the United States, in New Hampshire, which flows into the Atlantic, below Portsmouth.

PIRACATONIA, a river of the United States, in Maine, which joins the Fundicut.

PIRACATONIA, a river of the United States, which runs E. S. E. into the Merrimack.

PISCATAWAY, a township of the United States, in Middlesex county, New Jersey. Population 2478. Also of Prince George county, Maryland.

PISCATAWAY, a river of the United States, in Maryland, which joins the Potomack.

PISCERTA, a town of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 3700.

PISCO, a seaport town of Peru, in the province of Ica, with a good port. It was destroyed in 1837 by an earthquake. It now contains 300 families. 118 miles S. Lima.

PISONE, a town of Austrian Italy, on the lake of Isèo. Population 3000.

PINOS, a town of France, department of the Landes. Population 1600.

PISTOIA, a town of Italy, grand duchy of Tuscany, near the Ombrone. The streets are spacious, and the houses well built. It contains few public buildings of note: the cathedral, notwithstanding all the profusion of Carrara marble with which it is embellished, has the appearance of a village church. Here are, on a small scale, manufactures of hardware, woollens, leather, and silk. Population 10,000. 14 miles N. N. W. Florence.

PISUERGA, a river of the north of Spain, which falls into the Duero near Valladolid.

PITCAIRN'S ISLAND, an island in the South Pacific ocean, without a river or harbour, noted as the place of asylum for the mutineers of the Bounty, after they left Otaheite. Long. 133. 21. W. Lat. 23. 2. S.

PITCAITHLY, a village of Scotland, in Perthshire, noted for its mineral waters.

PITREA, a small seaport of Sweden, in West Bothnia. Pop. 800. Lat. 65. 10. 30. N.

PITREA LAPPMARK, one of the divisions of Swedish Lapland, extending along the river Pithea, from Norway to West Bothnia.

PITREVIERS, a town of France, department of the Loiret, on the Ouef, 21 miles E. N. E. Orleans. Population 3100.

PITRUSSA ISLES, the name of a group of islands in the Mediterranean, of which the principal is Ivice. It produces corn, oil, and wine, and has good pasturage.

PITULLANO, an inland town of Italy, in Tuscany. Population 2000.

PITZASTZ, a village of Scotland, in Fifeshire, 4 miles W. Cupar.

PITT, a county of the United States, in the east part of North Carolina. Population 9108, including 3550 slaves.

PITZBURGH, a village and parish of Scotland, in Fifeshire, near Dunfermline.

PITZBURGH, a royal burgh and seaport of Scotland, in Fifeshire, on the north side of the frith of Forth, on an elevated situation above the harbour. The houses are in general old fashioned. It joins with East and West Anstruther, Kircubny, and Crail, in sending a member to parliament. Pop. 1200. 24 miles N. E. Edinburgh.

PITTSBOROUGH, a town of the United States, and capital of Chatham county, North Carolina. Houses 54. 54 miles N. N. W. Fayetteville.

PITTSBURG, a flourishing commercial town of the United States, and capital of Allegheny county, Pennsylvania. It is situated on a beautiful plain, on a broad point of land, where the confluence of the Allegheny and Monongahela forms the Ohio. It contains a court-house, a jail, a national armory and magazine, an academy, a library of about 2000 volumes, 4 banks, including a branch of the United States bank, and 8 houses of public worship. Pittsburg is a place of great domestic and foreign commerce. The surrounding country is one great bed of fossil coal. It also abounds in iron ore, and various mineral and vegetable productions. These natural advantages have given rise to various manufactures, which are every day growing more extensive. Steam-engines of great efficiency are made here, and applied to various purposes; and it contains iron foundries, glass-houses, air furnaces, breweries, flour mills, besides various other mills and manufactories. Vessels of 200 or 300 tons at some seasons descend the Ohio from Pittsburg. The distance to New Orleans, by the river, is 2000 miles. Steam-boats sail this distance in 20 days. Pop. 12,000. 230 miles W. N. W. Baltimore, and 297 W. by N. Philadelphia.

PITTSFIELD, a post township of the United States, in Berkshire county, Massachusetts. Population 2663.

PITTSFORD, a township of the United States, in Rensselaer county, New York. Population 3692.

PITTSYLVANIA, a county of the United States, on the south side of Virginia. Population 17,172. Slaves 6312.

PUBRA, a province of Peru, bounded N. E. by the province of Iloxa, E. by that of Jaen de Brachmoros, S. E. by the district of Huambos, W. by the Pacific ocean, and N. W. by the bay of Guayaquil. It is 66 leagues from N. to S. and 14 wide. It abounds in maize, cotton, sugar, French beans, melons, quinces, and other European fruits.

PURNA, the capital of a province of the same name, in Peru, on the river Pium, which falls into the Pacific ocean in Lat. 5. 32. S. It has an hospital and church. Population 7000. 480 miles N. N. W. Lima, and 7 from the ocean.

PIZZANITONE, a fortified town of Austrian Italy, on the Adda, 30 miles S. E. Milan. Population 3800.

PLACENTIA BAY, a spacious bay on the south coast of Newfoundland. Long. 54. to 55. 10. W. Lat. 47. to 47. 50. N.

PLAINFIELD, a township of the United States, in Otsego county, New York. Population 2122. The name of various other townships in the United States.

PLAQUEMINE, an outlet on the western bank of the Mississippi, which unites with the Chafalia, 15 miles from the Mississippi.

PLASEVIA, a town of Spain, in Extremadura, 120 miles W. by S. Madrid. Pop. 4800.

PLASSET, a town of Bengal, district of Nuddah, on the Baggarutty or Hoogly river.

PLATA, Rio de la, a river of South America, one of the largest in the world. It is, properly speaking, a continuation of the Paraguay, which has its sources about the 13th degree of S. lat., and flowing through a flat country, is joined by the Parana, which robs it of its name; and by a variety of smaller streams, the Parana being joined by the Uruguay. They together expand into the sea-like Plata; and it is to this part of the stream that the appellation of the Rio de la Plata properly applies, namely, to the channel through which the great body of water formed by the confluence of the Parana, the Paraguay, and the Uruguay, flows into the ocean, which forms an estuary of fresh water without parallel in the rest of the world, for width and magnificence, being 150 miles broad at its mouth, from Cape St Maria on one side, to Cape St Anthony on the other, and between Monte Video and the Punta de Piedra, or stony point, which some have considered as its proper limits, 80 miles broad. At Buenos Ayres, 200 miles from the mouth, it is about 50 miles broad; and the shores being little elevated, the eye can seldom reach from one side to the other. This wide and noble expanse is, notwithstanding its extent, deformed by rocks and sand-banks, and rendered of dangerous navigation not only by its shoals and shallows, but likewise by the impetuous torrents of wind which sweep, at intervals, over the vast plains of the Pampas, to the south-west of Buenos Ayres, whence they are called Pamperos, and rush down this wide opening with unequalled fury. The only safe port is that of Monte Video, though those of Maldonado, Barragon, Buenos Ayres, and Colonia, afford different degrees of anchorage and security.

PLATA, La, or SEBASTIAN DEL ORO, a city of South America, in New Granada, 45 miles E. Popayan.

PLATEA, anciently a town of Greece, in Boeotia; the scene of the famous battle with the Persians.

PLATAMONA, a town of Thessaly, on a river of the same name. Population 2000.

PLATTE, LITTLE RIVER, a small river of Louisiana, which falls into the Missouri.

PLATTE, LA, or SHOAL RIVER, a large river of Louisiana, falls into the Missouri.

PLATTSBURG, a village of the United States, in Clinton county, New York, on the Lake Champlain, at the mouth of the Saranac. It is beautifully laid out, and contains a court-house, a jail, a Presbyterian church, &c.

PLATE, New, a township of the United States, in New York. Population 3999.

PLAUX, a town of Saxony. It has large muslin manufactures and cotton printing works. Population 6100. 75 miles W.S.W. Dresden.—Also a village 1 mile from Dresden.

PLEASANT RIVER, a river of United America, in the district of Maine.

PLEASANT VALLEY, a flourishing village of the United States, Dutchess county, New York.—Also in Essex county, New York.

PLEAUX, a town of France, department of the Cantal. Population 2690.

PLEIN RIVER, a river of the United States, which flows into Indiana.

PLEINE FOUGERE, a town of France, 31 miles N. by E. Rennes. Population 2400.

PLEINIZ, a river of Saxony, which falls into the Saale.

PIZZAR, a town of Prussian Silesia, 32 miles E. S. E. Ratibor. Population 2300.

PLESTIN, a town of France, 12 miles N. E. Morlaix. Population 3500.

PLEULE, a town of European Turkey, in Bosnia. Population 3000.

PLEYHEN, a town of France, department of Finisterre. Population 2700.

PLUCK, one of the eight palatinates into which the kingdom of Poland is divided.

PLUCK, or PLOTZK, a town of Poland, 55 miles W. N. W. Warsaw. Population 3000.

PLEON, a town of Holstein, 22 miles N. by W. Lubeck. Population 2000.

PLERMEL, a town of France, 34 miles W. by S. Rennes. Population 4500.

PLELAGAT, a town of France, department of the Cotes-du-Nord. Population 2100.

PLETAY, a town of France, department of the Morbihan. Population 3700.

PROVENCAT, a town of France, 20 miles N. W. Morlaix. Population 2200.

PLONGASTEL, a town of France, 7 miles E. Brest. Population, with parish, 4000.

FLORA, a town of France, department of the Cotes-du-Nord. Pop. with parish, 3100.

PROUZEVEDE, a town of France, department of Finisterre. Population 2400.

PLENE ISLAND, a small island in the Atlantic, near the coast of Massachusetts.

PLEME, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Population, with its parish, 2700.

PLYMOUTH, a town of England, in Devonshire, the largest in the county, and, on account of its harbour and docks, one of the most important maritime places in the kingdom. It is situated at the head of the capacious haven of Plymouth sound, formed by the rivers Plym and Tamar, at their confluence with the sea. The town of Plymouth stands on the eastern side of the tongue of land inclosed between those two rivers, at the mouth of the Plym; and about a mile and a half to the west, on the Tamar, stands the Dock, or Plymouth Dock, a separate town, dependent on the docks, and nearly equal to Plymouth in size and population. Between Plymouth and Dock intervenes the populous town of Stonehouse, which connects the two together, and forms almost a continued line of buildings from the one to the other. Plymouth is not remarkable for elegance or neatness. Of the public buildings, the most ancient is the parish church, which consists of a nave, side aisles, and chancel, with a tower at the west end, ornamented with pinnacles. There are also various meeting-houses and chapels, and a synagogue for the Jews. There are about 21 charitable in-situations in Plymouth, consisting of almshouses, hospitals, schools, &c. The other public buildings and establishments are, the guild-hall, the public prisons of the town, the theatre and hospital, the public library, an exchange, and a new market-place. Government has several military establishments at Plymouth, such as barracks, hospitals, and prisons. Various fortifications have been at different times erected for its security. The citadel was built in the time of Charles II. in the year 1679. Under its eastern walls is the victualling office, an extensive range of buildings, containing the granaries and ovens for supplying the navy with bread. The port and harbour of Plymouth is distinguished for its great extent and capacity, and the security which it affords in its different parts. It is capable of containing about 2000 sail of shipping, and is altogether one of the finest harbours in the world. It consists of several divisions or harbours. Sutton Pool is that which immediately adjoins the town, being almost encircled by the buildings. Cat-water harbour is an extensive sheet of water, formed by the estuary of the Plym. The harbour or bay of Hamoaze is a magnificent basin at the mouth of the Tamar, about four miles long, and half a mile wide. At the mouth of these harbours, the great bay of Plymouth sound forms an excellent roadstead, which is now rendered secure by the construction of the breakwater across its entrance. This work, which is just finished, and opposes a barrier to the heavy swell rolling in from the Atlantic, is a mole, or vast heap of stones, in the middle of the sound, stretching across its entrance, occupying nearly the half of its width, and leaving a five passage for vessels, both on the eastern and western shores. It was proposed that the breakwater should begin 360 feet on the eastward of St Carlos rocks, and extend 1800 feet west of the Shovel rock; the whole length to be 1700 yards, or very nearly a mile, 4000 feet in the middle being quite straight, and the two extremities having a slope up the sound. This work has fully answered the expectations of its projectors. The Edystone lighthouse is an important appendage to the harbour, without which its entrance would be extremely dangerous. The harbour is defended by several works raised on different points. Besides the importation of coals, culm, corn, wine, timber, and articles for town consumption, Plymouth carries on a considerable trade. The town of Dock is of recent origin, and owes its rapid increase to the establishment of the dock-yard and naval arsenals. The streets are regular, and generally well built; they intersect each other at right angles. The town and dock-yard are surrounded by fortified lines, which were begun in the reign of George II. but have since been improved and extended. Here are other works on different eminences, and it is in contemplation to fortify the town regularly. Without the lines a new town has been erected, named Marice-town. Dock has two chapels, and several meeting-houses for dissenters; who are very numerous. Here are few charitable institutions. Of the public buildings, the government-house is a handsome edifice, erected for the dispatch of military business, court-martials, &c. On the other side of the bay, in the front, is a grand parade. There are 11 different barrack establishments, which can accommodate 3000 men. The dock-yard is one of the finest in the world. It extends in a circular sweep along the shores of Hamoaze, 3500 feet in length, with a width at the middle, where it is the greatest, 1600 feet, and at each extremity 1000, this including an area of 96 acres. It is fitted up with every thing necessary for the repair and equipment of ships of war. The basin, which was made in the reign of William III. is not large, being only 250 feet in length, by 100 in breadth; but this small extent is compensated by the excellent harbour of Hamoaze, along the bank of which the wharf wall extends, and which, from the depth of water, allows the largest ships to range along the jetties, and take in their stores, &c. immediately from the wharf. There are two dry-docks for ships. There is, besides, a graving dock without gates, and a canal or causer, similar to that in Portsmouth yard, for the admission of vessels bringing stores into the yard. On the southern part are three building slips for the largest class of ships, and two for smaller vessels. Adjoining to these is the boiling house, for boiling the planks that are to be bent into a particular shape. Here also are the outer mast pond and mast houses, the timber births, saw-pits, and smithery, which last is a spacious building, 210 feet square, and containing 13 forges. Anchors are made here of the weight of five tons. There is also a ropery, at which the largest cables are made. There are, besides, buildings constructed of iron, where are different kinds of stores, rigging houses, and sail lifts. The victualling establishments of the dock-yard are on a large scale. The naval hospital is at Stonehouse. In the 16th year of Henry VI. Plymouth was incorporated as a borough. It returns two members to parliament. The population of Plymouth, Dock, and the suburbs, is 61,212. 43 miles S. W. Exeter. Long. 4; 7. W. Lat. 50; 25. N.

PLYMOUTH, a county of the United States, in the east part of Massachusetts. Population 39,159.

PLYMOUTH, a seaport town of the United States, and capital of Plymouth county, Massachusetts. It contains a court-house, a jail, a bank, and four churches; and has iron works, and cotton and woollen manufactories. Population 4228. 36 miles S. E. Boston.

—2d, A township and village of Graham county, New Hampshire, on the Merrimack.

PLYMOUTH, a seaport of the United States, in Washington county, North Carolina.

PLYMPTON, PLYMPTON EARLS, or PLYMPTON MAUMACE, a market town of England, county of Devon; near the Plym. Sir Joshua Reynolds was born here in 1723, and his picture is in the guild-hall. On the north side of the town stand the ruins of the castle. Plympton sends two members to parliament. Pop. 762. 8 miles E. Plymouth.

Po, one of the great rivers of the north of Italy, which it traverses from west to east. It rises in the Cottian Alps, flows north-east to Turin, and holding an eastern course throughout the whole length of Lombardy, discharges itself by a number of mouths into the Adriatic, about 30 miles S. Venice. Its course, with its windings, is above 500 miles.

POCKINGTON, a market town of England, in Yorkshire, on a small stream which falls into the Dore-rynt. It has no manufactures; nor any considerable trade. Population 1962. 14 miles S. E. York.

PONCOWA, a town of the Austrian states, in Galicia, on the Vistula, opposite to Cracow. Population 4000.

PONLACHIA, one of the eight palatinates of the new kingdom of Poland, bounded N. and E. by the Bug, S. by the palatinate of Lublin, W. by the Vistula. Area 5829 square miles. Population 433,000.

PODOLIA, an extensive province or government of the south-west of European Russia, lying adjacent to the Austrian province of the Buckowine. Area 20,400 square miles. Population 1,330,000.

POOY, or NASSAU ISLES, on the west coast of Sumatra, at the distance of 20 or 30 leagues. They extend from Lat. 2. 18. to 3. 16. S. Their inhabitants are savages.

POIN, an island of the Baltic, on the coast of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. Population 1200.

POINT DE GALLE, a seaport on the south-west point of Ceylon. The harbour is good. It is in general the station of one or two ships of war, and the rendezvous of the fleets from the three presidencies. The fortress stands very high, but is much out of repair. The town is also inclosed with a wall, but is a place of no strength. Long. 80. 15. E. Lat. 6. N.

POINX PÉTRO, a town of Ceylon, at its N. extremity. Long. 80. 25. E. Lat. 9. 52. N.

POINTE CLAIRE, a village of Lower Canada, in the island of Montreal. Houses 100.

POINTE ROSE LA ROCHE, or LE YONNE, a town of France, 5 miles N. W. Fontenay. Pop. 4200.

POINTE, a town of Piedmont, on the Bona, 12 miles S. E. Turin. Population 5000.

POISEY, a town of France, on the Rongean, 14 miles S. E. Vassy. Population 1800.

POISSY, a town of France, on the Seine, 9 miles N. W. Versailles. Population 2500.

PORTIERS, a large town of France, department of La Vienne, near the river Choue. It is divided into four quarters, all built in a mean and antiquated style. The streets are for the most part steep, winding, and ill paved. It has several squares, the finest of which is the Place Royale. The cathedral is in Gothic style, and wants only a little more elevation. Of the other churches, the most interesting is that of St. Hilaire. It has several Roman antiquities. Its only manufactures consist of woollen cays and stockings, leather, and gloves. It is well known as the scene of the celebrated victory of the son of Edward III., surnamed the Black Prince. Population 21,300. 256 miles S. W. Paris.

POTZOU, the name, before the revolution, of a large province of France, now divided into the three departments of La Vienne, the Deux Sevrés, and La Vendée.

POT, St., a town of France, on the Tennoise, 22 miles N. W. Arras. Pop. 3000.

POLAND, a large country of continental Europe, bounded W. by Germany, E. by Russia, S. by Hungary, Walachia, and Moldavia. The form of Poland, exclusive of Lithuania, is that of an oblong, extending in length from east to west. Population, though not exactly ascertained, about 15,000,000. The principal towns are Warsaw, Dantzic, Lemberg, Cracow, Widna, Brody, Kiev, Posen, Charkov, Mohilev, Vitepsk, Iassa, Ratzitz, Lublin, Jaroslaw, Dubno, Kalisch, and Kaminiac. The partition of Poland between Russia, Austria, and Prussia, took place at three distinct epochs, 1772, 1791, and 1795: and the result of the whole was in the last of these years, nearly as follows:—

	Square Miles.	Population.
To Austria,	64,000	4,800,000
To Prussia,	52,000	3,500,000
To Russia,	168,000	6,700,000
	284,000	15,000,000

Some inconsiderable changes have since taken place. Of these territories, the Prussian part is in the north-west, the Austrian in the south, the new kingdom of Poland in the middle, while the Russian acquisitions, larger than all the rest collectively, occupy all the country to the east, extending in a vast oblong, from Lithuania in the north, to the Ukraine in the south. The face of the country is almost everywhere level, and in many places marshy. All the great rivers, except the Niemen, run in shallow channels, and overflow their banks. The only great mountains are the Carpathians, which form the boundary between Poland and Hungary. A range, far inferior in height and length, advances from Silesia into a part of the south-west of Poland. All the rivers either flow into the Baltic or into the Euxine. Of the former, the chief are the Vistula, the Bug, the Niemen, the Pregel, the Dwina: of the latter, the Przypiec, the Dnieper, the Dniester. The climate is remarkably severe, owing to the east winds blowing off the frozen plains of Russia, and the south winds from the Carpathians. The humidity and cold of the climate, joined to the exhalations from the marshes and vast forests, have rendered Poland hitherto an unhealthy abode for foreigners, and often for the natives. The most pleasant, and at the same time the most fertile part, is in the south-east, particularly the Ukraine. This country abounds in iron, but the quality is indifferent. The mines of lead are productive in particular districts; those of gold and silver are few and insignificant. There are mines on a very extensive scale at Bochma and Wieliczka, both situated in Galicia. The state of cultivation is extremely backward throughout almost the whole of Poland. The use of manure is in a manner unknown, the common practice being to cultivate a field till it be exhausted, and then to abandon it. The export of corn is nevertheless computed to average 4,000,000 of English quarters. The export of cattle is also considerable. The state of society in Poland is very backward. The peasantry live in a most degraded state, in cabins built of logs, the chimneys and crevices of which are stopped up with the rudest materials. The best buildings are occupied by the Jews, whose filth would be intolerable in any other country. Men, women, children, hogs, cows, and poultry, all live under the same roof; and the traveller is frequently obliged to share the only apartment in the house with these crowded inmates. The German settlers present a striking contrast to the natives. They have the cheerful look of industry and opulence, and their houses are cleanly and comfortable. The inhabitants are partly Catholics, and partly of the Greek church. The latter are on the increase in the provinces acquired by Russia. The Jews occupy a conspicuous place in the population of Poland. They are the men of business for almost the whole country; the current money of the kingdom is chiefly in their hands; and a great proportion of the land is mortgaged to them. They are at liberty to exercise any trade or profession, and were formerly exempt from several of the taxes. The Russians and the Poles are the two most illiterate nations in Europe. Universities were established in Poland a considerable time before the partition, viz. at Cracow, Wilna, and Posen; but there were no schools till of late years. Additional universities have also been established at Lemberg and Warsaw. The Poles were for a long time governed by elective chiefs, bearing the title of duke; nor was any dynasty established before the reign of Piast, or Piastus (A.D. 940), whose family swayed the sceptre for more than five centuries; but the crown became afterwards strictly elective, and party divisions prepared the decline of the state. The confusion occasioned by these contests, became the pretence for the neighbouring powers to interfere in the affairs of Poland; and the country was finally partitioned between the great powers of Russia, Prussia, and Austria. In 1772, Russia seized a large part of the eastern provinces, while Austria appropriated a fertile tract to the south-west, and Prussia a commercial district in the north-west, including the lower part of the Vistula. In 1793, Poland was again invaded by the partitioning powers, particularly by Russia. In 1795 a final division was made of the remaining provinces among the three powers, Russia obtaining on each occasion by far the largest share. By the victories of Bonaparte, the share of Poland possessed by Prussia was wrested from her, and various other changes were made. But after the destruction of the French power, a partial restitution was made to Prussia and Austria, of their late possessions, and the remainder given to Russia.

POLAND, KINGDOM OF, the only portion of the preceding country that still retains officially its ancient name, comprises the chief part of that which, from 1007 to 1013, formed the dukedom of Warsaw. It consists of the central provinces of Poland, bounded all along its frontier by the respective acquisitions of Russia, Austria, and Prussia. The form of the territory approaches to a square of 200 miles; in the middle stands the capital, Warsaw; but there is also a detached tract extending in a north-east direction towards Lithuania. Its area is 47,000 square miles, and its population 2,800,000. This country, though subject to the same sovereign as Russia, is governed in every respect as a separate monarchy.

POLCEWISO, a town of Italy, 23 miles N. Treviso. Population 3000.

POL DE LEON, ST. a town of France, department of Finisterre. It has manufactures of leather and pottery. Population 5400. 34 miles N. E. Brest.

POLGAR, a town of Hungary, 32 miles N. N. W. Debreczin. Population 4000.

POLGAVIE, a village of Scotland, in Perthshire, on the river Tay.

POLIGNAC, a town of France, department of the Upper Loire. Population 2000.

POLIGNARO, a town of the kingdom of Naples, 10 miles E. S. E. Bari. Pop. 6000.

POLIGNY, a town of France, department of the Jura. It has manufactures of sulphate, cobalt, and stoneware. Population 5400. 26 miles S. S. W. Besancon.

POLIZZY, a town of Sicily, 18 miles S. E. Palermo. Population 4000.

POLLA, a town of the kingdom of Naples, Principato Citra, with 3500 inhabitants.

POLLARDVILLE, a post village of Greenville district, South Carolina.

POLLOCKSHAW, a village of Scotland, in Renfrewshire, on the Cart. It has extensive bleachfields and printfields, and a cotton mill. 2½ miles from Glasgow.

POLMONT, a village and parish of Scotland, in Stirlingshire. Population 2171.

POLNA, a town of Bohemia, 70 miles E. S. E. Prague. Population 3000.

POLIO, one of the Philippine islands, off the west coast of Luzon or Luconia.

POLONTSKI, a town and fortress of Nindistan province of Hyderabad, above two miles in circumference. It has a manufacture of matchlocks and other weapons. Long. 81. 19. N. Lat. 17. 28. N.

POLOTZK, a town of European Russia, in the government of Vitepsk, at the confluence of the Polotsa and the Dwina. Population 3500. 73 miles W. by N. Vitepsk.

POLTAVA, the capital of the government in Russia of the same name, on the river Vorskla. The houses are indifferently built, but the streets are wide and straight, and in the centre of the town is a very good square, with a fine monument of granite, in honour of Peter the Great. The Swedes were completely defeated here in 1709 by Peter I. Population 9000. 737 miles S. by E. Petersburg. Long. 34° 14' E. Lat. 49° 30' N.

POLTAVA, an extensive province of European Russia, lying between the governments of Cherson and Charkov, and extending from 48½ to 50½ degrees of N. latitude. Area 16,000 square miles. Population 1,500,000.

POLTEN, St., a town of Lower Austria, on the Traiser, with a manufacture of coltons and paper. Pop. 4300. 30 miles W. Vienna.

POLYNESIA, a term applied to the numerous islands in the Pacific ocean, east of Australasia and the Philippine islands.

POMAHANA, the capital of a province of the same name, in Peru, on the Parapeti. Long. 64° 8' W. Lat. 19° 55' S.

POMARES, a town of France, department of the Landes. Population 1500.

POMBAL, a town of Portugal, in Estremadura, 21 miles S. Coimbra. Pop. 3100.

POMBREIRO, a town of Portugal, province of Beira. Population 1700.

POMERANIA, a large province of the Prussian states, lying along the south coast of the Baltic, and extending from Long. 12° 29' to 18° 2' E. and from Lat. 52° to 54° 44' N. Its form is oblong, its length (from east to west), being above 200 miles, while its breadth varies from 30 to 60, and in some places 80 miles. Area 12,000 square miles. Pop. 67,000. It is divided into the governments of Stettin, Stralsund, and Coslin. The chief towns are Stettin, Stralsund, Stargard, Anklam, Colberg, Stolpe, Wolgast, and Coslin. Pomerania consists almost entirely of a tract of flat country, extending along the shore of the Baltic, nearly as the Dutch provinces or East Friesland extend along the German ocean. The largest river is the Oder; the others are the Leba, the Stolpe, the Rega, the Persante, the Ucker, and the Ihna. The Gulf is a large inland bay, or rather lake, of an oblong form, which communicates with the Baltic by the mouths of the Oder. The inhabitants have numerous herds of cattle. Fishing is carried on along the sea coast and in the rivers. The forests are extensive, and abound in game. The common fuel is wood and turf. Minerals are comparatively rare, and are almost confined to marsh iron, alum, and salt. The chief manufacture is the woolen. The other fabrics far inferior in quantity, are linen, leather, and iron; hardware and glass are made in small quantities; and amber is occasionally found on the coast.

POMERELIA, or LITTLE POMERANIA, a district of the Prussian states, bounded N. by the part of the Baltic called the Gulf of Dantzic, S. by Poland, and W. by Pomerania. It is 90 miles long, and 50 in breadth.

POMIGLIANO D'ARCO, a town of Naples, near the capital. Population 4800.

POMMERAT LES BAINS, a town of France, department of the Cotes du Nord. Pop. 2400.

POMONA, or MAINLAND, the largest of the Orkney islands, from 10 to 25 miles in length; its breadth is in some places 16, in others 0, and at Kirkwall not exceeding 3 miles. It is so much intersected by arms of the sea, as to have 140 miles of coast. The whole extent may be 212 square miles, or 135,680 acres, of which about 14,000 are rudely cultivated. The general appearance of the country is bleak and barren, covered with heath, destitute of trees, and encumbered with hills, marshy swamps, and fresh water lakes.

POMPEII, or POMPEIIA, an ancient city of Italy, at the foot of Mount Vesuvius, which was buried by an eruption of that mountain in the year 79. Its ruins have now been discovered. About a fourth part of them has been cleared; so that in the contemplation of these ancient remains, there is ample scope for the gratification of antiquarian curiosity.

POMPEY, a township of the United States, in Onondago county, New York. Pop. 5660.

PONCIS, a town of France, department of the Ain. Population 2700.

POND CREEK, two rivers of the United States, one in Virginia, which runs into the Ohio; the other in Kentucky.

PONDAN, a town and celebrated fortress of Hindostan, province of Bejapore.

PONDICHERRY, a city on the sea coast of the south of India, province of the Carnatic. It was formerly a village, but being purchased by the French from the king of Bejapore, in the year 1672, it became a handsome and regular town, the houses in general two stories high, with flat roofs, and colonades in front, and was the capital of all the French establishments in India. In 1761 it was taken by the army under Colonel Coote, but was restored at the peace of 1763. In 1778 it surrendered to the British force under Sir H. Munro, and was again restored at the peace of 1773. It was again taken in the revolutionary war, and restored at the general peace. Long. 79° 58' E. Lat. 13° 56' N.

PONDICHANKA, a seaport town of Hindostan, district of Cicacole. Long. 83° E. Lat. 17° 37' N.

PONERRADA, a town of Spain, 22 miles W. Astorga. Population 2200.

PONS, a town of France, department of the Lower Charante. Population 3000.

POSSÈS THOMIERE, St., a town of France, 90 miles W. by S. Montpellier. Pop. 4700.

POSTA DE AGADA, capital of St. Michael's, one of the Azores. Population 4000.

POSTA-MOUREY, a town of France, on the Moselle, 18 miles S. by W. Metz. Population 1800.

PONTAIGNE, a town of France, on the Doubs, 10 miles S. E. Besancon. Pop. 3900.

PONT AUDEMER, a town of France, on the Rille, 25 miles W. by S. Rouen. Pop. 5200.

PONTCHARRA, a town of France, department of the Isère. Population 2800.

PONTCHARTRAIN, a lake of the United States, in Louisiana, about 35 miles long and 25 broad. It communicates with Lake Borgne, Lake Maurepas, and with the city of New Orleans, by Bayou St John on the south.

PONTCHATEAU, a town of France, 23 miles N. W. Nantes. Population 2700.

PONT DE CE, a town of France, on the Loire, 3 miles S. by E. Angers. Pop. 3000.

PONT DE VAUX, a town of France, in Burgundy, on the Reysseque. Population 2300.

PONT DU CHATEAU, a town of France, on the Allier, 7 miles E. Clermont. Pop. 2900.

PONTÉ, a town of Piedmont. Pop. 3600.

PONTE-CORVO, a town of the States of the Church. It has a castle, a cathedral, and six churches. It gave the title of prince to Barnadotte. Pop. 5200. 50 miles N. W. Naples.

PONTE DE LIMA, a town of Portugal, on the Lima. 41 miles N. Oporto. Pop. 2000.

PONTE D'ERA, a town of Tuscany, near the Era, 16 miles E. N. E. Leghorn. Pop. 3000.

PONTEFRAC, or POMFRET, a market town of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, near the river Aire, not far from its junction with the Calder. The streets are open, spacious, and clean; and the houses are handsome. It has but one parish church, which is of great antiquity, being mentioned so early as the reign of Henry I. The church of All Saints or All Hallows, which was formerly the parish church, is now a ruin. There are, besides, places of worship for the Methodists, Quakers, Roman Catholics, and other dissenters; also a charity school and various charity hospitals, and the king's free grammar school. The town-hall is of modern erection, and the theatre is a neat building. But a small part of the ruins of Pontefract castle are now in existence. It was finished in 1000; but was, after three successive and desperate sieges, taken and demolished by the parliamentary army. It sends two members to parliament. Pop. 4477. 23 miles S. S. W. York.

PONTE STURA, a town of Italy, at the junction of the Stura and the Po, 7 miles W. by N. Casale. Population 1400.

PONTE VERRA, a town of Spain, in Galicia, 14 miles N. Vigo. Population 2000.

PONTEVICO, a town of Austrian Italy, 13 miles S. Brescia. Population 4700.

PONTIAN ISLANDS, small islands in the Mediterranean, belonging to the kingdom of Naples, and situated opposite to the coast of Terra di Lavoro.

PONTINE MARSHES, THE, an extensive marshy tract of Italy, in the southern part of the Campagna di Roma, extending from Cisterna in the north, to Terracina in the south, a distance of 25 miles.

PONTREVE, or BOUASOY, LA VILLE, a town of France, department of the Morbihan, on the Biavet, containing, with its parish, 3100 inhabitants.

PONT L'ÉVÊQUE, a town of France, department of Calvados, on the Yguaque. Pop. 2500.

PONTOISE, a town of France, on the Oise, and traversed by the small river Viorme, 20 miles N. W. Paris. Population 5200.

PONTREMOLE, a fortified town of Italy, in Tuscany, 40 miles S. W. Parma. Pop. 2400.

PONT ST ESPRIT, a town of France, department of the Gard, on the Rhone. It is ill built, with narrow, winding, and gloomy streets. It has a citadel; but the object of greatest interest is its bridge over the Rhone, remarkable for lightness and solidity of construction. Pop. 4100. 53 miles N. E. Nismes.

PONT ST MAXENCE, a town of France, on the Oise, 24 miles E. by S. Beauvais. Population 2900.

PONTYPOOL, a market town of England, in Monmouthshire. It consists of two principal streets. The town has a parish church, an ancient building, with a square stone tower at one end, but contains no chapel of ease, nor meeting-house of any kind. Pontypool owes its origin entirely to the mineral riches with which the neighbourhood abounds. Three forges are now continually at work in the town and neighbourhood. Here is still also a large manufactory of japan ware. Pop. with parish, 3931. 15 miles S. W. Monmouth.

PONZA, or PONTIA, one of the Pontian islands, in the Mediterranean, opposite to Cape Circello. Population 600.

PONZOSI, a town of Italy, 20 miles W. N. W. Genoa. Population 2200.

POOLE, a market town of England, and seaport, in the county of Dorset, on a peninsula connected with the mainland by a narrow isthmus. The town consists of four principal streets, and a fifth crossing these, together with several minor streets or lanes. The church is an ancient structure, consisting of a body, two aisles, and a tower. It has also a town-hall, built in 1572, under which is a prison. The market-house was rebuilt in 1761. Besides the church, here are meeting-houses for Presbyterians, Quakers, and Anabaptists; also several grammar and charity schools, and a well attended Sunday school. Poole harbour is one of the best in the English channel for merchant ships. The quays have lately been greatly improved, and now almost encircle the town. The principal branch of business consists in the Newfoundland fishery. A trade is also carried on to the Baltic, Norway, America, Portugal, Greenland, &c. Near the mouth of the harbour is a bank, on which are vast quantities of oysters. It sends two members to parliament. Pop. 6399. 40 miles W. S. W. Winchester.

POONAH, a city of Hindostan, province of Bejapour, and capital of the Mahratta chief called the Peshwa. It is a modern town, and not fortified; but covers about two miles square of ground. The streets are long and narrow, but the houses very irregularly built. The better kind are raised with large blocks of granite, to the height of about 14 feet, after which the superstructure is composed of timber frames, with slight brick walls. The houses of the common people are only one story high, with tiled roofs. The palace is surrounded by high and thick brick walls, with round towers at the angles, and has only one entrance, which is through a pointed arch. A British resident is stationed at Poonah, to direct the machine of government. Long. 71. E. Lat. 14. 30. N.

POORNEER, a seaport and fortress of Hindostan. Long. 69. 50. E. Lat. 21. 37. N.

POORNEEN, a celebrated town and fortresses of Hindostan, province of Bejapore, Long. 74. 5. E. Lat. 18. 16. N.

POOTE DES NIDS, a town of France, 26 miles N. E. Mayenne. Population 2800.

POTAYAN, a province and government of New Granada, in South America, bounded N. by the Ildanos de Neiva, W. by Choco and the Pacific, E. by the government of Quixos, S. by that of Atacames. It is 120 leagues long from N. to S. and nearly 100 wide from E. to W. It is for the most part mountainous and rough. The central and loftiest branch of the three parallel chains of the Andes runs through the northern part of it. It is of great elevation, and its summits in many parts tower above the limit of perpetual snow: of these, Barangan, Quindiu, and Guanacens, are the most lofty.

POTAYAN, the capital of the above province, situated on an extensive plain, 5905 feet above the level of the sea, about a league from the Cauca. The streets are all in straight lines, regular, broad, and level; and the buildings have mostly only one story, and are very handsome. There are some pretty small squares in the town, and a beautiful grand square. It has a cathedral, and several convents and churches, with two nunneries. It is also the seat of the royal mint. Population 25,000. 405 miles S. S. W. Santa Fe.

POPERINGEN, a town of the Netherlands, in West Flanders. It contains several well built churches, and has manufactures of coarse woollens, and of serge. Pop. 3000. 26 miles S. by W. Ostend.

PORLAN, a hamlet of England, in Middlesex, 4½ miles E. by S. St. Paul's cathedral, London. Population, with Blackwell, 12,223.

PORLAN CREEK, two rivers of the United States, in Tennessee and Maryland.

PORLAN GROVE, a post village of the United States, in Newbury district, S. Carolina.

PORLAN ISLAND, an island in Chesapeake Bay, about 10 miles in circumference.

PORLAN SPRINGS, a post village of the United States, Arundel county, Maryland.

PORO, a cluster of islands in the Eastern sea, the chief of which is 36 miles in circuit.

POPER, a town of Italy, on the Arno, 25 miles E. N. E. Florence. Population 1800.

PORENA, a river of the Austrian empire, which falls into the Danube.

PORNA, a seaport of India, province of Travancore. Long. 74. 24. E. Lat. 8. 23. N.

PORCO, or TALAVERA DE POMA, the capital of a province of the same name, in Peru. Long. 67. 56. W. Lat. 19. 40. S.

PORCOA, some small islands at the mouth of the river Amazona.

PORCUNA, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, province of Jaen, on the Salado, 20 miles W. N. W. Jaen. Population 4900.

PORDEKOVE, a town of Austrian Italy. Population 1000. 24 miles W. S. W. Udine.

PORRETRU, a neat town of Switzerland, 20 miles E. S. E. Bale. Population 2100.

PORLOCK, or PORTLOCK, a small seaport, market town, and parish of England, in Somersetshire, on the Bristol channel. The church is an ancient building, and contains several old tombs. Population 789. 167 miles W. London.

PORO ISL., on the south-west coast of Sumatra, 33 miles long, by 8 the average breadth. Long. 99. 16. E. Lat. 2. 12. S.

POROMUSIA, the second of the Kurile islands, in the North Pacific ocean, about 43 miles in length, and 12 in breadth.

PORRIST CAPE, a cape of North America, district of Maine. Long. 70. 23. W. Lat. 43. 22. N.

PORT ANTONIO, a harbour on the north-east coast of Jamaica.

PORT DALRYMPLE, a harbour or estuary on the north coast of Van Diemen's Land, into which the Tamar runs. A British settlement was established here in 1804.

PORT DUNDAS, a village of Scotland, in Lanarkshire, 1 mile from Glasgow. Here is a spacious basin, and large warehouses for the accommodation of the traders on the canal.

PORT ETCHES, a bay or harbour on the south-west of Hinchinbrook island, at the entrance of Prince William's sound, where the Russians have a factory.

PORT GENESKE, a port of entry of the United States, in Genesee county, New York, on Lake Ontario.

PORTGLASSON, a neat little village of Ireland, county of Antrim, on the Bann, 97 miles N. Dublin.

PORT JACKSON, a bay and English settlement on the east coast of New Holland. The entrance is between two heads, which are distant from each other one mile and three quarters. Long. of 'Cattle point', 151. 11. 49. E. Lat. 33. 56. S.

PORT LEITHEN, a small fishing village of Scotland, in Kincardineshire.

PORT LOUIS, a seaport of France, department of the Morbihan, at the mouth of the Blavet. Pop. 2700. 4 miles N. by E. Lorient.

PORT LOUIS, a seaport town, capital of the island of Mauritius or the Isle of France, in the Indian sea. After having been long the chief settlement of the French in this part of the world, it is now finally in possession of the British. It is situated on the west side of the island, in a low and flat valley. The houses of the town are built chiefly of wood. The town is irregularly built. The quay is commodious, both for the loading and unloading of vessels. In 1817, Port Louis was almost entirely burnt to the ground; but has been since rebuilt. Long. 57. 32. E. Lat. 20. 10. S.

PORT MARQUANNE, an inlet on the east coast of New Holland, into which enters the Hastings. Long. 152. 53. E. Lat. 31. 25. S.

PORT MAYON, a seaport of the island of Minorca, and the chief place of a district. It is surrounded by the sea on the east, south, and west sides, and is built chiefly on lofty rocks. The houses are in general good, all being provided with cisterns, and many with terraces. The place d'armes is square, large, and handsome; on one side are barracks, capable of containing 1200 men. The Alameda is the only public walk, and is merely an alley of trees. It has a good harbour. On one side of the harbour is a dock-yard, and on the other a natural mole. Long. 4. 5. E. Lat. 36. 17. N.

PORT MORAY, a bay on the south coast of Jamaica. Long. 76. 2. W. Lat. 17. 54. N.

PORT-NA-HAVEN, a fishing village of Scotland, in the island ofIslay.

PORT PATRICK, a town and parish of Scotland, on the coast of the Irish sea, being the nearest point of Great Britain to Ireland; the distance being only 21 miles. The town of Port Patrick is delightfully situated. It is an excellent bathing quarter, and is much frequented during the summer months. Formerly the harbour was small and incommodious, but it has now one of the finest quays in Britain, with a reflecting light-house. Four packet-boats regularly sail between this port and Donaghadee, on the Irish side, with the mail and passengers. The town and its commerce have, in consequence of the improvements in its port, greatly increased. To the west is an excavation in the rock, which has a remarkable echo. Pop. 1814, 75 miles W. Dumfries, 133 S. W. Edinburgh.

PORT PENN, a village of the United States, in Newcastle county, Delaware.

PORT AU PRINCE, a seaport town of the island of Hispaniola, situated on the west coast. In 1770, great part of it was destroyed by an earthquake. In 1791 it was set on fire; and in 1794, it was taken by the English. In 1796, it consisted of about 600 houses, and contained 2754 white inhabitants. Long. 73. 10. W. Lat. 18. 35. N.

PORT ROYAL, a seaport of the island of Jamaica, situated on the south side of the island, on a narrow neck of land, in which a thousand sail of ships could anchor with the greatest convenience and safety. It contained 2000 houses, very handsomely built; when, on the 9th June 1692, a dreadful earthquake buried nine-tenths of it eight fathoms under water. The town being rebuilt, was laid in ashes by a terrible fire about ten years after. It was again rebuilt, and again destroyed in 1722, by one of the most dreadful hurricanes ever known. It is now reduced to three streets, a few lanes, and about 200 houses. It contains, however, the royal navy-yard, for heaving down and refitting the king's ships; the navy hospital, and barracks for a regiment of soldiers. The fortifications are kept in excellent order, and are remarkably strong. 20 miles S. W. Kingston. Long. 77. W. Lat. 17. 50. N.

PORT ROYAL, a town of the United States, Caroline county, Virginia, on the Rappahannock. Houses 50. 30 miles from Washington.

PORT ROYAL ISLAND, an island of the United States, near the coast of S. Carolina. Beaufort is the principal town. Lat. 32. 12. N.

PORT ST MARIE, a town of France, on the Garonne, 70 miles S. E. Bourdeaux. Pop. 3700.

PORT SEATON, a seaport village of Scotland, in Haddingtonshire, on the frith of Forth.

PORT-SUR-SAONE, a town of France, department of the Upper Saone. Pop. 1900.

PORT TOBACCO, a town of the United States, and capital of Charles county, Maryland. Pop. 500. 45 miles S. S. W. Annapolis.

PORT VENDRE, a fortified town of France, on a large gulf of the Mediterranean, 20 miles S. E. Perpignan. Population 2100.

PORT WILLIAM, a thriving village of Scotland, Wigtonshire.

PORT WILLIAM, a town of the United States, Kentucky, at the conflux of the Kentucky with the Ohio. Population 130.

PORTADOWN, a town of Ireland, county of Armagh, on the Ban, 16 miles N. Newry.

PORTAHERY, a town of Ireland, county of Down, 80 miles N. N. E. Dublin.

PORTAGE, a county of the United States, in the N. E. part of Ohio. Pop. 2995.

PORTAGE, a river of the United States, in Ohio, which runs into Lake Erie.

PORTALEGRE, a town of Portugal, in Alentejo, 96 miles E. by N. Lisbon. Pop. 5000.

PORTARIA, a small town of Greece, in Magnesia, 42 miles S. E. Larissa.

PORTARLINGTON, a populous and well built town of Ireland, on the Barrow, partly in King's county, and partly in Queen's county, 36 miles S. W. Dublin.

PORTCHESNEN, a village and parish of England, noted for its ancient castle. Population 757. 4 miles N. Portsmouth.

PORTEL, a town of Portugal, in the province of Alentejo. Population 1800.

PORTENBOCK, a small seaport of Western Africa. Lat. 18. 6. N.

PORTOFLE, a town of Austrian Illyria, 17 miles S. by E. Trieste. Population 2260.

PORTICI, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro, at the foot of Mount Vesubius, 4 miles E. Naples. Population 6200.

PORTLAND ISLE, a small island, or rather peninsula of England, county of Dorset, in the English channel, opposite Weymouth. It is connected with the mainland by a long narrow ridge of pebbles, called the Chesil Bank, which extends 17 miles westwards from the island, along the coast, and at no great distance from it, being separated by a long narrow channel called the Fleet. The island extends about 4½ miles in length, and 2 in breadth. It consists nearly of one continued mass of freestone, and this forms the famous Portland stone, of which such quantities are exported to the metropolis and other places. Two light-houses are erected on the island. Population 2254. 3 miles S. Weymouth.

PORTLAND, a town and port of entry of the United States, in Cumberland county, Maine. It is a very pleasant town, finely situated on a peninsula in Casco bay. It contains an elegant court-house, an almshouse, a market-house, &c. and 8 churches, 3 for Congregationalists, 2 for Baptists, 1 for Episcopalians, 1 for Methodists, and 1 for Friends. It has a good harbour, near the entrance of which is a stone light-house, 70 feet high, erected in 1790. It is also defended by 2 line forts on opposite sides of the ship channel. Population 9000. 54 miles N. N. E. Portsmouth, and 115 N. N. E. Boston.

PORTLAND ISLANDS, in the Eastern ocean. The north-east point of the most eastern isle is in Long. 147. 10. 45. E. Lat. 2. 36. S.—24, An island near the east coast of New Zealand.—34, One of Queen Charlotte's islands, in the South Pacific ocean.

PORTLAND KAY, a small island near the south coast of the island of Jamaica.

PORTLAND POINT, a cape on the south coast of the island of Jamaica.

PORTNEUF, a river of Lower Canada, joins the St. Lawrence, 35 miles above Quebec.

PORTO BELLO, a thriving village of Scotland, 2 miles S. E. Edinburgh, on the coast of the frith of Forth. It is resorted to for sea bathing quarters, and the inhabitants carry on a considerable trade in making stone-ware, brick, tiles, and various preparations of lead.

PORTO BELLO, a noted seaport of South America, on the north coast of the isthmus of Darien, with an excellent harbour, as its name denotes. It stands near the sea, on the side of a mountain which embraces the harbour. It consists of one principal street, crossed by several others up the side of the mountain. It contains two squares, two churches, two convents, a custom-house, and some other public buildings. During the time of the galleons, this place had an annual fair, and was then excessively crowded with people. The houses at present are chiefly of wood, with a few of stone, and the latter sort do not amount to 150. The climate of this city is bad in the extreme, for the heat is excessive; and there are almost continual and deluging rains. The entrance of the harbour is defended by a castle, called Todo Hierro, or All Iron. A small river discharges itself into the harbour near the town, called the Cascajal. Porto Bello was taken in 1596 by Sir Francis Drake, who died in a subsequent voyage, in its harbour. It was taken and plundered by John Morgan; and in 1739, by Admiral Vernon. Pop. inconsiderable, being chiefly negroes and mulattoes, with about 30 white families, and the garrison of the forts. 65 miles N. Panama, 236 W. S. W. Cartagena. Long. 79. 26. W. Lat. 10. 27. N.

PORTO ENCOFRE, a small town of Italy, in Tuscany, 20 miles N. W. Civita Vecchia.

PORTO FARINA, a seaport of Tunis. Long. 10. 16. E. Lat. 36. 30. N.

PORTO FERRATO, the chief place of the island of Elba, on a lofty point of land projecting into a bay. Population 3000. It was the residence of Buonaparte, after his first abdication of the throne of France. Long. 10. 19. 35. E. Lat. 42. 49. 6. N.

PORTO LONGONE, a strongly fortified town on the island of Elba. Population 1500.

PORTO MADERA, a harbour on the E. coast of St. Jago, one of the Cape de Verd islands.

PORTO MAURICIA, a town of Genoa, with 3000 inhabitants. 56 miles S. W. Genoa.

PORTO DE NAOR, a harbour on the S. coast of Lancerota, one of the Canaries.

PORTO NOVO, a seaport of India, in the Carnatic. Long. 79. 52. E. Lat. 11. 30. N.

PORTO RICO, an island in the West Indies, situated 60 miles to the eastward of Hispaniola; about 140 miles in length from east to west, and 30 in breadth from north to south. It is extremely fertile, and enjoys all the benefits of the most temperate climate, being beautifully diversified with woods, hills, and vallies, and well watered with a variety of streams. Its meadows are very rich. It produces all the different fruits which are common in the West Indies. The principal trade of the natives consists in their sugar, ginger, hides, and cotton, both raw and manufactured, cassia, mastic, salt, oranges, lemons, and sweetmeats. Long. 65. 39. to 67. 45. W. Lat. 18. to 19. 35. N.

PORTO RICO, St. Juan de, capital of the island of Porto Rico, on a peninsula on the north coast of the island, with a good harbour, defended by a citadel and castle. Long. 66. 20. W. Lat. 18. 30. N.

PORTO SANTO, a small island in the Atlantic, a sort of appendage to the island of Madeira. It is about 15 miles in circuit.

PORTO SANTO, a province of Brazil, bounded N. by the province of Los Ilheus, S. by that of Espirito Santo, E. by the Atlantic, and W. by the river Francisco.

PORTO SANTO, the capital of the above province, situated on the sea coast, in the port of the same name, on the top of a steep hill, formed by a reef of rocks, that run about a mile out, in a direction parallel to the land, forming a natural mole. The houses are generally of one story, low, and ill built. They all appear dirty and wretched. The church is plain, and has glass windows, and is by far the best erected building in the place. A new one has been erected. On the banks of the river below, stands a village full as large as the town, the whole containing 3000 inhabitants, including slaves and Indians, all employed in fishing. 206 miles N. N. E. Espirito Santo. Long. 30. 37. W. Lat. 16. 7. S.

PORTO VECCHIO, a town in the island of Corsica, on a gulf of the same name, with an excellent harbour. Population 1300. 59 miles S. Bastia.

PONTORUANO, a town of Austrian Italy, at the confluence of the Lemene and Reghona, 20 miles W. by S. Palma Nuova. Pop. 4000.

PORTREE, a town and parish of Scotland, in Inverness-shire, in the island of Skye. The town is small, but thriving, and admirably adapted for trade and the fisheries. Population 3174. Long. 6. 7. W. Lat. 57. 24. N.

PORTSMOUTH, a hamlet of England, in Southamptonshire, 4 miles N. Portsmouth.

PORTSMOUTH, a town of England, in the county of Hants, and noted seaport in the English channel, being the principal rendezvous of the British navy. It is situated on the western side of the island of Portsea, at the mouth of the bay termed Portsmouth harbour, and consists of the old town of Portsmouth, included within its fortified walls, and the new town of Portsea, which was only begun about a century ago, on a common to the north of the town, but has already outgrown in size, population, and importance, the parent town itself. Portsmouth is still the seat of the civil and military establishments, and the residence of the port-admiral; and its civil jurisdiction extends over Portsea; but the latter has the advantage of containing within its precincts the vast establishments of the dock-yards and gun-wharf, which form, together with the harbour and the fortifications, the most striking features in the town. Portsmouth harbour excels decidedly every other in Great Britain for its capaciousness, depth, and security. At its entrance at Portsmouth, the harbour is very narrow, but it soon expands to a great width, and extends, in several branches, up to Fareham, Portsmouth, and Port-bridge. Everywhere the anchorage is good, the depth sufficient for ships of any size, the shelter complete, and the extent sufficient to contain almost the whole navy of England. Another capital advantage is the neighbourhood of the famous roadstead of Spithead, between Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight, which is so spacious, that it can contain 1000 sail of vessels in the greatest security. Portsmouth harbour is completely defended from any assaults of an enemy, by the number and strength of its batteries. The fortifications of the town were begun by Edward IV., and have been gradually strengthened and extended by succeeding monarchs. The works are so elevated as to command the whole of the adjacent country. The ditches are wide and deep, and the entire line is further secured by strong and capacious outworks. At the head of the creek which separates Portsea from Portsmouth, is an extensive ravelin, which connects these works with those of Portsmouth. The latter, extending along the beach to Southsea castle, form a noble semicircular terrace, which is planted with elms, and being kept in excellent order, forms a delightful promenade, more than a mile in length. Portsmouth dock-yard being the grand naval arsenal of England, and the general rendezvous of the British fleet, is by far the largest in the kingdom. The sea wharf wall of the dock-yard extends 3500 feet along the western shore of the harbour. The mean breadth is about 2000 feet, and the whole includes an area of 180 acres. In the centre of the wharf wall, facing the harbour, is the entrance into the great basin, 300 feet in length, by 200, and including an area of $\frac{3}{4}$ acres. Into this basin open four excellent dry docks; and on each of its sides is a dry dock opening into the harbour, all of them capable of receiving ships of the largest class. Besides these, there is a double dock for frigates. Here is also a camber or canal, with a wharf wall on each side, 600 feet in length, and of sufficient width to admit transports and merchant ships bringing stores to the dock-yard. In the same face of the yard are three building slips, capable of receiving the largest ships, and a small one for sloops, besides two building slips for frigates on the northern face of the yard, and a smaller one for sloops. The dock-yard is entered from the town through a lofty gateway, beyond which the porter's house, the must-houses, and a large modern guard-house, are the first objects that present themselves. A little farther on stands the pay office; beyond it is the royal naval college, which consists of a centre and two wings; and fronting this, an elegant edifice has been erected, as the school of naval architecture. The naval college has been recently new modelled, the number of scholars being limited to 100 in time of war, and 70 in time of peace; of whom 50, the sons of officers of the navy, are maintained and educated free of expense; the rest are sons of noblemen, gentlemen, civil and military officers, who pay 1.72 a-year. Next to these buildings, the commissioner's house appears, and to it succeeds an immense range of storehouses, to the right of which is a handsome modern chapel. From this a visitor is generally conducted through the anchor-wharf, where hundreds of anchors are piled up ready for immediate service; then to the ropery, a spacious pile, three stories high, 54 feet broad, and 1094 feet long. Passing now various storehouses, stables, and other buildings, and many vast piles of timber, a sort of square displays in its centre a statue of William III. in a Roman habit. On the east side of the square is a row of handsome houses, appropriated for the residence of the chief officers of the yard; and on the north and south sides are various offices, storehouses, &c. The next object of attention in proceeding is the vast building or smithery, where anchors are wrought, weighing from 70 to 90 cwt. each. Many other parts of this celebrated arsenal are well deserving the attention of the curious. The range of storehouses on the north-east, and the rigging-house and sail-loft on the south-west side of the chamber, are magnificent buildings; also the two hemp-houses and the two saw-store houses; and the tarring house and other appendages of the ropery. Contiguous to the smithery is an iron mill, a copper mill, and a copper refinery, at which is remelted and rolled all the old copper from ships' bottoms; and here also are cast bolts, gudgeons, and various other articles of copper used in the navy. At the head of the north dock are the wood mills, where every article of turnery, rabbitting, &c. is made for the use of the navy. The gun wharf is an immense arsenal, consisting of various ranges of building, for the reception of naval and military stores, artillery, &c. The small armoury is a spacious building of late erection, capable of containing 25,000 stand of arms. In the Portsmouth division of the town, the principal public buildings connected with naval affairs, are the victualling-office, the government-house, the houses of the lieutenant-governor and port-admiral, and the marine and military barracks. The church of Portsmouth is a spacious structure, dedicated to St Thomas a Becket. The tower, which is the most modern part, forms a good mark to seamen. Portsea parish church is two miles from the town; but its place is supplied by several handsome chapels. Besides these churches, there are ten or twelve meeting-houses in the town and neighbourhood, for the various sorts of dissenters. The town-hall of Portsmouth is a large building. A prison has been recently erected. In Broad-street, which forms part of the western suburb Portsmouth point, is the custom-house, a large and convenient building, with an extensive establishment, including fast sailing cutters for the prevention of smuggling. There are various charitable institutions. The theatre is the principal amusement. Portsmouth received its first charter from Richard Cœur de Lion. It sends two members to parliament. It is a place of considerable antiquity. The earliest mention of it occurs in the Saxon Chronicle, A. D. 501. Edward IV. surrounded it with fortifications, which were greatly extended afterwards by succeeding monarchs. Pop. of Portsmouth 7269; Portsea, 34,785. 72 miles S. W. London. Long. 1. 6. W. Lat. 50. 47. N.

PORTSMOUTH, a handsome town and port of entry of the United States, in Rockingham county, New Hampshire, on the Piscataqua river. It contains a court-house, a jail, an alms-house, an academy, an atheneum, &c. and seven churches belonging to Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Baptists, Methodists, and Universalists. The Episcopal church is a spacious and elegant brick edifice. The harbour is one of the best in the United States. The entrance is defended by two forts. There are three other forts built, but not garrisoned. There is also a light-house. It has suffered severely by fire. In the Piscataqua, opposite to the town, is Navy island, on which there is a United States navy yard. 375 miles N. E. by N. Philadelphia, 56 N. by E. Boston.

PORTSMOUTH, a pleasant and regularly built town of the United States, in Norfolk county, Virginia, on Elizabeth river.

PORTSMOUTH, a seaport of the United States, in Carteret county, North Carolina.

PORTSOY, a considerable seaport of Scotland, in Banffshire, on a point of land projecting into the Moray frith, which forms a safe harbour. It has a manufacture of thread and fine linens, and sends out a number of vessels to the fishery. 74 miles W. Banff. Long. 2. 36. W. Lat. 57. 38. N.

PORTUDAL, a seaport of Western Africa, to the north of the Gambia. Long. 16. 56. W. Lat. 14. 36. N.

PORTUGAL, the most western kingdom of Europe, is bounded by Spain and the Atlantic, and extends from 36. 56. to 42. 7. of N. lat. and from 7. 34. to 9. 30. of W. long. Its form is oblong; its length from north to south 350 miles; its average breadth about 120. Population 3,685,000. The principal towns of Portugal are, Lisbon, the capital, Oporto, Elvas, Coimbra, Braga, Setubal, Evora, Beja, Santarem, Lamego, Estremoz, Faro, Tavira, Portalegre, Braganza, Viseu, Leiria, Castel Branco, Lagos. Several of the great mountain chains of Spain penetrate into this country, intersect it from east to west, and terminate in large promontories in the Atlantic. The most remarkable of these chains are the Serra de Estrella, nearly in the centre of Portugal, and the Serra de Monchique, the extremity of which, Cape St Vincent, is the south-west point, not only of Portugal, but of Europe. The chief rivers are the Tagus, the Douro, the Minho, and the Guadiana. The products of Portugal are wheat, barley, oats, flax, hemp, vines and maize in grounds of a warmer temperature; and rice in the low grounds. The chief fruits are olives, oranges, and lemons. Silk is made of very good quality. The mineral productions of this country are considerable, though none but iron mines have as yet been wrought. The mountains abound in fine marble, and contain traces of gold and silver. Of salt, large quantities are formed in bays along the coast, by natural evaporation. Manufactures are in a very backward state. They are principally for woollens, silk, and earthenware. Cotton has been attempted of late years; and paper, glass, and gunpowder, are made in a few places. From long time past, the import and export trade has been managed chiefly by foreign merchants, particularly British, settled at Lisbon and Oporto. The exports consist almost entirely of wine, silk, and wool. The imports are very various, viz. corn, flour, fish, woollens, linen, cotton, lace, hardware, hats, shoes, stockings. The religion of Portugal is the Roman Catholic, maintained in a state of gross superstition. A great number of monasteries (above 400) are still kept up. There are in Portugal two universities, that of Coimbra, founded in 1308, and attended by several hundred students; and the smaller university of Evora, founded in 1533. Lisbon has its royal academy, and the small town of Thomar has an academy of sciences; but in general literature is at a very low ebb, and education very ill conducted. The higher classes are divided into the Titulados or high nobility, and the Fidalgos or gentry. The women in the capital are loose and dissolute; in the country the people are indolent and listless, which dispositions are unfortunately confirmed by the endless holidays of the Catholic church. The Portuguese are temperate in eating and drinking; and among the national amusements, the predilection for bull-fights is as great as among their neighbours. A want of cleanliness is equally complained of in the capital and in the provincial towns. It is least perceptible in Oporto, and a few other towns in the north. Portugal, from its maritime advantages, was known, at least along its coast, to the Phœnicians and Carthaginians. It constituted a Roman province under Augustus. It was over-run by tribes of Alani, Suevi, and Visigoths, and by the Moors in the eighth century. In the 13th century the Moors were expelled from the kingdom. Portugal afterwards became a great naval power, her navigators making many discoveries in Africa. In 1807 a French army occupied Lisbon, and the royal family removed the seat of government to Brazil. They have now returned. The government of Portugal was formerly despotic, every thing being in the power of the king. But a revolution took place in 1816, which originated with the army, the soldiers declaring their attachment to a free constitution, and their resolution to submit no longer to the present despotism. A free government was accordingly organised, and was proceeding very peaceably with various important reforms, both civil and ecclesiastical, when, after the entrance of the French troops into Spain in 1823, a counter-revolution took place, and the old despotism was again restored.

PORTUGALETZ, a town of Spain, on the coast of Biscay, at the mouth of the Ybaichaval. Population 1800.

PORTUGUESA, an important river of South America, in Venezuela, joins the Apurê.

PORTUMNA, an ancient village of Ireland, county of Galway, 75 miles S. W. Dublin.

POSCHEWA, a town of Sclavonia, on the Orlova. Pop. 4100. 11 miles E. Gradisca.

POSEN, GRAND DUCHÉ, one of the provinces of the Prussian states, comprising that part of Poland which was restored to Prussia by the treaty of Vienna in 1815. It is bounded E. by the new state called the kingdom of Poland, and S. and W. by Silesia and Brandenburg. It lies between Lat. 51. 16. and 53. 32. N. and is of an oblong form, with a long projection, however, to the south-east. It contains about 12,000 square miles. The province is watered by the Netza, the Wartha, the Obra, and the Brabe. Population 500,000. —It is also the name of one of the two governments into which the grand duchy is divided.

POSEN, the capital of Prussian Poland, at the confluence of the Proszna and the Wartha. It is surrounded with a mound and ditch, and is built with tolerable regularity. Of its public edifices, the cathedral and council-house are old; the principal guard-house, and the building that was the Jemita' college, are comparatively recent. Here also is a theatre, a theological seminary, a college, a school, &c. The manufactures are on a small scale, the principal being of linen, leather, and watches; also fire-arms. Here, as in the rest of Poland, the sale and purchase of goods is chiefly managed by Jews, who occupy a particular quarter of the town. Population 20,000. 144 miles E. Berlin, and 106 W. Warsaw.

POSEY, a county of the United States, in Indiana. Population 3000.

POSING, a town of Hungary, 11 miles N. N. E. Presburg. Population 3700.

POSTANO, a town of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 4000.

POSSESSION ISLAND, two islands in the South Pacific ocean, one in Long. 41. 40. E. Lat. 46. 30. S.; the other in Long. 218. 21. W. Lat. 10. 33. S. —It is the name of several capes.

POSSNECK, a town of Germany, 53 miles S. S. W. Leipzig. Population 3000.

POSTIGLIONE, a town of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 1000.

POTENZA, a small town of Naples, in the Basilicata, 73 miles E. Naples.

POTT, a town in the western part of the district of Chocoma, 80 miles W. S. W. Cotatla.

POTOMAC, a river of the United States, which rises in two branches, the north and south, originating in and near the Alleghany mountains, and forms, through its whole course, part of the boundary between Virginia and Maryland, and flows into Chesapeake bay, between Point Lookout and Smith's Point. It is 7½ miles wide at its mouth, and 1½ at Alexandria, 290 miles from the ocean.

POTOMAC CREEK, a river of the United States, in Virginia. It falls into the Potomac.

POTOSI, a government, formerly of Peru, but now added to the viceroyalty of Buenos Ayres, and one of the most valuable of its territories. It is bounded N. by the chain or cordillera of Vilcanota, which separates it from the Peruvian provinces, and by countries inhabited by wandering tribes; on the E. it has the mountains of Arequipa, the Pacific ocean, and the Chilian Andes; on the W. the governments of Paraguay and Buenos Ayres; and on the S. that of Buenos Ayres.

POTOSI, a city of South America, in the above province, situated in a narrow glen on the river of the same name, on the mountain which contains the mines; in a cold climate, owing to the height of the ground, and in a barren country, the sides of the hills being covered only with moss, and their summits capped with eternal snows. In 1547 was founded the town of Potosi, which is entirely supported by the mines. A royal mint was established in 1562; and so rapidly did its population increase, that in 1611 the town contained 160,000 inhabitants. The population has continually decreased, and is at present 30,000. Potosi has a mint, six convents, two nunneries, a college, and an hospital; and its inhabitants are still chiefly concerned in the working of the mines, and consist of whites, mestizos, and Indians. The celebrated mines of Potosi are in the mountain on which the city is built. The ores were found by Helms, the German mineralogist who visited these mines, to contain from 6 to 8 ounces of silver in 50 hundredweight. There was also a solid silver ore, each caxon or 60 hundredweight of which yielded about 26 pounds of silver. Above 300 mines or pits are worked, but all of them, according to Helms, so irregularly, as if it were for plunder. Few of them accordingly penetrate to the depth of more than 70 yards. Nothing can equal the ignorance with which the mining is here carried on. The mines, many of them extremely productive, are filled with water, which, by the application of proper machinery, might be easily drained off. Still greater ignorance (says Mr Helms) was, if possible, displayed by the directors of the smelting houses and refining works at Potosi; in consequence of which they wasted the quicksilver, and did not succeed in extracting half the quantity of metal which the ore contained. Mr Helms and his associates suggested various improved methods for extracting the silver from the ore, and also for draining the mines of the water; and "as soon as the water in the pits (he observes) can be got under, the mines of Potosi will be in a more flourishing condition than ever." The mint of Potosi coined in 1790, 299,246 piastres of gold, and 3,293,173 of silver, or £306,620 sterling. From the discovery of these mines till the year 1803, they have supplied 1,095,500,000 piastres, or £237,368,334 sterling, which has paid the royal duties; and this also only includes silver, consequently the gold and smuggled metals must have made the total furnished by the works much greater. 45 miles S. W. La Plata, 1617 N. W. Buenos Ayres, 1215 N. E. Lima. Long. 67. 22. W. Lat. 19. 47. S.

POTOSI, SAN LUIS, a province or intendancy of Mexico or New Spain, which comprehends the whole of the north-east part of the kingdom of Mexico. As the intendancy of San Luis Potosi borders either on desert countries, or countries inhabited by wandering or independent Indians, its northern limits can hardly be determined. On the south it is bounded by the intendancies of Vera Cruz, Mexico, and Guanajuato; on the east by the gulf of Mexico, and on the west by Zacatecas and Durango. This immense country includes a greater surface than Europe or Spain; but though it is gifted by nature with the most precious productions, and situated under a serene sky in the temperate climate, it is in general a wild desert, more thinly peopled than the governments of Asiatic Russia. Population 354,000.

POTOSI, SAN LUIS, a town of Mexico, in the above intendancy, on the eastern declivity of the table land to the west of the sources of the Rio de Panuca. Population 42,000. Long. 100. 41. W. Lat. 22. N.

POTSCHIKKI, a town of European Russia, government of Niachnei-Novgorod. Pop. 4000. 117 miles S.S.E. Niachnei-Novgorod.

POTSDAM, a province of the Prussian states, in Brandenburg, comprehending the districts formerly termed the Ucker Mark, the Mark of Priegnitz, and the greatest part of the Middle Mark. It lies between Pomerania and West Prussia N., and the province of Saxony S. and W. The city of Berlin, with a small district lying around it, forms a distinct government. Towards the N. W. this province is bounded by the Elbe and the Havel, and N. E. by the Oder. Area about 8000 square miles. Pop. 428,000.

POTSDAM, the chief town of the above government, on the Havel, which here spreads its waters in one expanded after another, like a succession of small lakes. Potsdam is to Berlin, what Versailles is to Paris. It is indebted for its chief improvements to Frederick II. The old town consisted of only four streets. The new town was either built or repaired entirely by Frederick II. The streets are regular and spacious, but they are not as yet all paved. On the whole, however, Potsdam may vie in beauty with Mannheim, or any town in Germany. It is surrounded by a wall and ditch, and has four gates towards the land, as well as four towards the river. The form of the town, exclusive of the suburbs, is compact, and approaches to a square. The palace, situated on the bank of the Havel, is a magnificent structure. Connected with it also are a theatre, a menagerie, and spacious stables. The town-house of Potsdam was built in 1754, on the plan of that of Amsterdam. There are extensive barracks; a great hall for exercising the troops in bad weather; and in the garrison church there are statues of Mars and Bellona. In this church is the tomb of Frederick II. There are in the town six other churches and a synagogue. The market-place is ornamented by an obelisk, and by statues of the Kings of Prussia. The schools are the lyceum, two public schools of inferior extent, and one belonging to the garrison. The charitable establishments are an infirmary, a poor-house, and an orphan-house on a large scale, for the children of soldiers. Pop. 17,000, exclusive of military, who are in general 6000 or 8000. The palace of Sanssouci, the favourite retreat of Frederick II., is $\frac{1}{2}$ of a mile N. W. Potsdam. 15 miles W.S.W. Berlin, 61 E.N.E. Dresden.

POTTENDORF, a town of Lower Austria, 21 miles S. Vienna. Population 2000.

POTTENSTERN, a town of Lower Austria, 20 miles S.S. W. Vienna. Pop. 1900.

POTTER, a county of the United States, on the north side of Pennsylvania. Pop. 1581.

POTTON, a market town and parish of England, county of Bedford. Population 1498. 19 miles E. Bedford.

POVERTY BAY, a bay on the east coast of New Zealand, in the South Pacific ocean.

POUGET, a town of the Sardinian states, in the county of Nice. Population 3000.

POUGHKEEPSIE, a township and village of the United States, and capital of Dutchess county, New York, on the Hudson. Population 4678. The village contains 422 dwelling-houses. 75 miles N. New York.

POUILLOU, a town of France, 6 miles N. Dax. Population 2800.

POUILLY, a town of France, on the Loire, department of the Nievre. Pop. 2400.

POVRIENA, a large river of Kamtschatka, which falls into the Kamtschatka.

POULTON, a market town and parish of England, county of Lancaster, at the mouth of the river Wyre. Population 1011.

POVOA DO VARZIM, a town of Portugal, in Entre Douro e Minho. Population 3000.

POWBAIN, St., a town of France, on the Sionle. Population 3000.

POWBAIN DU BORN, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Pop. 1700.

POWANGHUR, a celebrated fortress of Hindostan, province of Gujerat.

POWELL'S CREEK, 3 rivers of the United States, 2 in Virginia, and 1 in Pennsylvania.

POWHATAN, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 3073. Slaves 3001.

POWOW, a river of the United States, in New Hampshire. It joins the Merrimack.

POYAI, a town of North America, on the Black River, province of Honduras, about 110 miles W. N. W. Secklong. Here Sir Gregor Macgregor enticed a number of settlers, by exaggerated representations of the country, who, after suffering the greatest misery from famine and disease, were taken from the country, by the British governor at Balize.

POYSDORF, a town of Lower Austria, 33 miles N. by E. Vienna. Population 3900.

POZZOLENGO, a town of Austrian Italy, 8 miles W. N. W. Verona. Pop. 2000.

POZZOL FORMIGARO, a town of Italy, 2 miles N. Novi. Population 2400.

PRACELS, a range of small islands, about 60 miles E. Cochin-China.

PRACHATITZ, a town of Bohemia, 70 miles S. by W. Prague. Population 2300.

PRACHIN, one of the sixteen circles into which Bohemia is divided, occupies the southwest corner of the kingdom, adjacent to Upper Austria and Bavaria. Its area is 1820 square miles; its population 110,000.

PRANES, a town of France, on the Tet, 25 miles W. by S. Perpignan. Population 2400.

PRAGA, a town of Poland, on the Vistula, opposite to Warsaw, with which it communicates by a bridge of boats. In 1787, it contained 7000 inhabitants; but in 1794, the Polish insurgents took refuge here, and it was stormed by Suwarrow, and given up to pillage and massacre, when about 20,000 lives were lost.

PRAGUE, the capital of Bohemia, situated on the Moldau, over which is a bridge of 16 arches, at about an equal distance from the east and west frontiers of the kingdom. The streets are in general well paved, with raised footpaths for passengers; and the town contains several squares. It may be divided into three parts. The whole is surrounded by a moat and earthen mound; and though, from the irregularity of its form, the circuit is not less than ten miles, the elevation of the ground, in different parts, renders this city capable of a temporary defence. Of the three divisions, the old town is the largest, and contains in one part the quarter of the Jews. The new town, on the other hand, has the best streets, while the Radeschin, a detached quarter, has the finest view, being built on a high precipitous hill, at some distance from the river. It contains a number of houses belonging to the nobility and country gentry; also the cathedral and the archbishop's palace. In a low lying track, to the north and east of the Radeschin, is the quarter called Klein-seite, or Little Prague, said to be the oldest part of the town; and at the river side is the only suburb of this capital, called Smichow. Prague, long the capital of Bohemia, contains the ruins of what was once the residence of the sovereign. It has also another building, called a palace, but less ancient, used for public offices. It is so large as to contain 150 rooms, with a hall inferior only to that of Westminster. The cathedral is a fine old Gothic structure. The theatre of Prague is large; and of public buildings generally, such as churches, convents, schools, family mansions, the number is greater than in most other towns of the size; but few of them are good edifices. The houses in Prague are built in general of stone, some in the modern taste (having been rebuilt after the bombardment of 1757); but many more are of old architecture. Prague is still the general rendezvous of the nobility and gentry who do not figure among the grandees of Vienna. The university of Prague is the oldest in Germany, having been founded in 1348. It has various other seminaries. Of the charitable institutions of Prague, the principal are three hospitals, two orphan-houses, and a lying-in-hospital. Linen, cotton, and silk, are manufactured extensively at Prague; also hats, and, on a smaller scale, paper, brass-ware, trinketry, plated goods, glass, tobacco for government account; likewise mathematical and musical instruments. Prague, though a capital, is far more backward than an English, or even a French city of corresponding size; the shops being in general ill furnished, and the lower orders living in penury. Prague is an ancient city, and has often been exposed to the calamities of war. Population 85,000; nearly 7000 are Jews. 144 miles N. N. W. Vienna, 75 S. S. E. Dresden. Long. 14. 25. 10. E. Lat. 50. 5. 23. N.

PRAIRIE DE LA MADELAINE, a small village in Lower Canada. Houses 100. Long. 73. 15. W. Lat. 45. 32. N.

PRALEBINO, a town of Austrian Italy, delegation of Brescia. Population 2500.

PRAELIN, an island in the Indian sea. Long. 55. 47. E. Lat. 4. 10. S.

PRAIAS, a cluster of islets and rocks in the Chinese sea, 300 miles S. S. E. Canton. Long. 115. 43. E. Lat. 15. 32. N.

PRATO, a walled town of Italy, district of Florence. The chief ornament of the town is the cathedral, a fine edifice of white marble. There are also two poor-houses, four hospitals, and an hospital for foundlings. Prato has manufactures of silks, woollens, hats, and soap. Pop. 10,500. 9 miles N.N.W. Florence.

PRATS DE MOLO, a town of France, department of the Eastern Pyrenees. Pop. 3000.

PRAUSENITZ, a town of Prussian Silesia, 18 miles N. Breslau. Population 1800.

PRAYA, a seaport, capital of the island of Terceira, one of the Azores. Pop. 3000.

PRAYA, PORTO, capital of St. Jago, one of the Cape de Verd islands. It is situated on a table plain at the top of a rock, perpendicular on all sides towards the sea. The bay is of easy access, and the anchorage safe. A fort placed on the summit of a hill, commands the harbour. Porto Praya is the residence of the governor-general of the Portuguese settlements. Its trade consists in supplying provisions and refreshments to the outward bound Guinea and East Indianmen.

PRAIRIE COUNTY, a county of the United States, in Ohio. Population 5304.

PRECHAC, a town of France, 34 miles S. S. E. Bourdeaux. Population 2700.

PRECOINE, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 2100.

PRECORIA, a town of European Turkey, on a branch of the Moravia, 16 miles W. Nissa. Population 6000.

PRECK, a town of Denmark, in Holstein, 9 miles N. E. Kiel. Population 3100.

PRECKEL, a river of East Prussia, formed by the junction of the Angerap and Pissa, which joins the Frische Haff, below Königsberg.

PREZZLOW, a well built town of the Prussian states, the chief place of the district of Brandenburg called the Ucker Mark, on the lake and river Ucker. Here are four Lutheran, two Calvinist, and one Catholic church, several schools and hospitals, and 8000 inhabitants. The town has several breweries, and a considerable trade in corn. The chief employments are the woollen manufactures, and those of tobacco. Here, in 1806, 20,000 Prussians surrendered to the French. 56 miles N. N. E. Berlin.

PREPARI, the most northern of the Andaman islands, in the eastern entrance of Bengal bay. Long. 93. 40. E. Lat. 14. 50. N.

PREBAU, the chief place of a circle of the same name, in Moravia, 140 miles E. S. E. Prague. Population 2300.

PREBURG, or POSONYI-VAHMEGYE, a palatinate of Hungary, lying in the angle formed by the March and the Danube, at their junction. Its area is 1740 square miles, and its population about 300,000.

PRESBURG, a large town of Hungary, on the Danube, which is crossed by a flying bridge. This town was once the capital of Hungary. The kings are still crowned here, and the viceroy and palatine reside in the more central situation of Buda. The fortifications of Presburg have been demolished; and no distinction is now made between the town and suburbs. The town is neatly built. The suburbs are much watter, and bear marks of modern improvements. There are here two squares, each adorned with statues. The principal church is an old Gothic edifice. The other public buildings are the mansion of the palatine of the county, the barracks, the corn-market, and the town-house. The manufactures are woollens, silk, oil, tobacco, and snuff. The trade of the place is in a great measure transit, particularly in corn and linen. It is noted for the treaty here concluded between France and Austria in 1805. Population 30,000. 38 miles E. by S. Vienna.

PRESCOT, a market town of England, in Lancashire. The church is a large and spacious building, with a lofty steeple. Here is, besides, a meeting-house for dissenters; also a free school and several alms-houses. The manufacture of cotton, also of sail-cloth and of earthenware, have been introduced; but the chief trade consists in the making of watch-tools, for which the town has been long celebrated, and of watch movements. Near this town is an extensive manufacture of plate-glass; also one for smelting and refining copper ore. Pop. 4460. 8 miles E. Liverpool.

PRESQUE ISLE, an island in Lake Huron. Long. 83. 40. W. Lat. 45. 4. N.

PRESSNITZ, a town of Bohemia, on the borders of Saxony. Population 2300.

PRESTON, a market and borough town of Wales, in Radnorshire, on the Lugg. From an inconsiderable village, it has now become the handiwork and best built town in the county. Pop. 1941. 30 miles W. N. W. Worcester.

PRESTON, a decayed village of Scotland, in Kirkcudbrightshire.—Another decayed village in Haddingtonshire.

PRESTON, a borough town of England, in Lancashire, on a gentle elevation above the Ribbles, about 15 miles from its confluence with the Irish sea. The town was incorporated by Henry II. in 1160. By a subsequent charter, granted in the reign of Henry III., the officers of the burgh were authorised to hold a guild merchant for the renewal of freedom to the burgesses, and for other purposes. This privilege is made the occasion of great festivity. The town sends two representatives to parliament, and affords a practical example of universal suffrage, every male inhabitant, whether housekeeper or lodger, who has resided six months in the town, and who has not been chargeable to any township as a pauper for 12 months, having a right to vote for two candidates at elections. The cotton spinning has been introduced with great success, and an increase in the wealth and population of the place has followed. The streets are generally broad and well paved, but the town cannot boast much in respect to public buildings. The Roman Catholics possess two large chapels; the Methodists have also a large meeting-house; and there are slender congregations of Independents, Quakers, and Unitarians. Most of the public offices belonging to the county palatine and duchy of Lancaster, as well as the county court, are kept in this town. The quarter sessions for the hundreds of Amounderness, Blackburn, and Leyland, are also held here; and there is a house of correction built on the plan of Howard. The Ribble does not admit vessels of large burden, on which account the maritime trade of the town is confined to the western coasts of Great Britain, and some of the ports of Ireland. The public foundations of the town are a dispensary; a national school on the system of Dr Bell, a Catholic school, a free grammar school, and several other minor institutions. There is an extensive library for the use of the town, left by a physician and alderman, with the interest of £1,000 for its support and enlargement. Population 24,575. 22 miles S. Lancaster.

Pekston, a township of England, in Cumberland. Population 4256.

Preston, a county of the United States, in the north part of Virginia.—The name also of two townships.

Preston's Creek, or Wood Creek, a river of Kentucky, which joins the Ohio.

Preston-kill, a village of Scotland, in East-Lothian. It has an extensive distillery.

Prestonpans, a parish and town of Scotland, in Haddingtonshire. It is noted for its salt-works, and its manufactures of earthenware, oil of vitriol, spirit of salt, aqua fortis, Glauber's salts, bricks, tiles, &c. It has also a fishery of oysters, which has long been an object of importance. The town consists of a street about half a mile in length. A little above this village, the king's troops, under Sir John Cope, were defeated in 1745. Pop. of parish 2058. 8 miles E. Edinburgh.

Przewa, a seaport of European Turkey, in Albania. It is built out of the ruins of the ancient Nicopolis, which are situated at a small distance to the north. Population 8000. 46 miles S. by W. Joannina.

Préz en Pail, a town of France, on the Mayenne. Population 2300.

Priddle, a river of England, in Dorsetshire, which falls into Pool Haven.

Priego, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, province of Cordova. Population 2500.

Priestholm, a small island in the Irish sea, near the N. E. coast of Anglesey.

Prince's Island, an island in the Eastern sea, situated off the N. W. extremity of the island of Java.—2d, Also an island off the W. coast of Africa, in the gulf of Benin.—3d, Four small islands in the sea of Marinsara, near the straits of Constantinople.

Prince Edward, a county of Canada.—Also a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 12,409. Slaves 6806.

Prince Edward's Island. See John's, St.

Prince George, a county of the United States, in Maryland. Pop. 20,508. Slaves 9189. Chief town, Upper Marlborough.—2d, In Virginia. Pop. 8660. Slaves 4486.

Prince of Wales's Archipelago, a large island in the North Pacific ocean, 110 miles long, by from 30 to 40 broad. Long. 236. 20. to 238. 26. E. Lat. 54. 42. to 56. 21. N.

Prince of Wales, Cape, the north-western extremity of the American continent, forming, with East Cape on the opposite shore of Asia, Behring's straits, which separate the two continents of America and Asia. Long. 191. 43. E. Lat. 65. 46. N.

Prince of Wales's Islands, supposed to extend from New Holland to New Guinea.

Prince of Wales's Island, called also Pulo Pinang, or Betel Nut Island, an island situated off the west coast of the Malay peninsula, from which it is separated by a narrow strait, about two miles broad, which forms the harbour, and affords excellent anchorage for the largest ships. This island is near five leagues in length, and is seven or eight miles in breadth. Throughout the centre of the island there is a range of lofty hills, decreasing in magnitude as they approach the south; and from these flow numerous fine streams, which supply the island abundantly with water. The principal productions are pepper, betel-nut, betel-leaf, coconuts, coffee, sugar, paddy, ginger, yams, sweet potatoes, and a great variety of vegetables. The fruits are the mangosteen, rambutan, pine apples, guavas, oranges, citrons, pomegranates, &c. This island was originally granted to the East India company by the king of Queda. An establishment was begun here in 1786, which rapidly increased; and in the year 1797, there were 6037 inhabitants on the island, exclusive of Europeans and the garrison; and in 1801, they had increased to 10,310, of which 1222 were slaves. In 1806, the inhabitants of all descriptions were estimated at 14,000, and have since been progressively increasing, and exhibit an uncommon diversity of races. Here are to be seen British, Dutch, Portuguese, Americans, Arabs, Persians, Chinese, Chulias, Malays, Bugessas, Birmans, Siamese, Javanese, &c. &c. In 1803, it was constituted a regular government, subordinate only to the governor-general of India. The fort, which is called Fort Cornwallis, is built on the north-east point of the island. The town, called George Town by the English, and Panjau Panaique by the Malays, is of considerable extent. The streets, which cross each other at right angles, are spacious and airy. There is a large pier for landing and shipping goods, to which fresh water is conducted by pipes. Since the island has become the seat of government, considerable alterations have taken place in every department. A government-house, a church, a jail, and several substantial bridges, have been built; the fortifications have been improved and strengthened, and the public roads repaired and widened. Long. of N. E. point, 100. 19. E. Lat. 6. 23. N.

Prince William, a county of the United States, in the north-east part of Virginia. Population 11,311. Slaves 6220.

Prince William's Sound, a great inlet of the North Pacific ocean, on the North American coast, which occupies at least a degree and a half of latitude, and two of longitude. Long. 147. W. Lat. 60. to 61. N.

PRINCE WILLIAM HENRY'S ISLAND, in the Pacific ocean, 70 miles in circumference. Long. 149. 30. E. Lat. 1. 32. S.

PRINCESS ANNE, a county of the United States, in the south-east corner of Virginia. Population 4692. Slaves 3926.

PRINCESS ROYAL'S ISLANDS, lie on the western coast of North America, to the eastward of Queen Charlotte's islands.

PRINCETON, a town of the United States, in New Jersey, with 100 dwelling-houses. 40 miles N. E. Philadelphia.

PRINCIPATO CITRA, or CITERIORE, a province in the central part of the kingdom of Naples, having the Mediterranean to the west. It is of an irregular form, about 90 miles in length from north-west to south-east, and 45 at its greatest breadth. Its territorial extent is 2400 square miles. Its surface is for the most part mountainous, though it is traversed by a great plain, and watered by the rivers Silaro, Sarno, Calore, and Negro. Population 245,000.

PRINCIPATO ULTRA, or ULTERIORE, another province of the kingdom of Naples, to the south of the former, with a superficial extent of 1000 square miles, and a population of 350,000. It is traversed by the Appennines, and is watered by the rivers Sabato, Tammaro, Calore, and Ofanto. The chief town is Avellino.

PRINCE, a town of the island of Cuba, on the north coast, with a good port.

PRINKIPO, the largest and most eastern of the Prince's islands, bay of Marmora.

PRITZWALK, a town of Prussia, 63 miles N. W. Berlin. Population 1800.

PRIVAS, a town of France, department of the Ardèche, on three rivulets near the Rhone. Population 3000.

PRONOLINGO, the capital of a district of Java, of the same name.

PRONSTHEIM, a village of Saxony, to the east of Leipzig, remarkable as the scene of the most sanguinary part of the great battle of 18th October 1813.

PROBUS, a village and parish of England, in Cornwall, noted for the beautiful tower of its church. Pop. 1333. 3 miles W. Grampound.

PROCINA, an island of the Mediterranean, on the coast of Naples. Population 12,000.

PRONG, or PRONG, a city of the Birman empire, province of Ava, on the Irrawaddy river. Long. 93. E. Lat. 14. 56. N.

PROSPECT, a township and village of the United States, on the west side of the Penobscot. Population of the township 1300.

PROSSNONS, a village of Ireland, county of Kildare, 5 miles N. N. W. Naas.

PROSSNITZ, a town of the Austrian states, in Silesia, 9 miles S. S. W. Olmutz. Population 7000.

PROSNA, a river in the west of Poland, which falls into the Wartha at Peisern.

PROVENCE, a large province in the south-east of France, bounded E. by Italy, S. by the Mediterranean, W. by Languedoc, N. by Dauphiny. Since the revolution it has formed the following departments:

	Square Miles.	Population.
The Lower Alps.....	2845	146,000
The Var.....	2820	284,000
The Mouths of the Rhone 2272		320,000

Total.....7937 750,000

To these is to be added a portion of the department of the Vaucluse. The principal towns of Provence are Marseilles, Toulon, Aix, Arles, and Grasse. Provence is commonly divided into Upper and Lower, correspondent to north and south. The former consists of the valley of the Durance, and other vallies opening into it, comprising a part of the Alps; while the name of Lower Provence is given to the comparatively level country extending to the Mediterranean. The climate of the mountains is cold and wet; but in Lower Provence it is uncommonly dry, and the heat would be intense, were it not moderated by a keen north wind, which begins regularly in the morning, during summer, and continues till night. In the north are found extensive pastures, numerous herds of cattle, fine corn fields, and such fruits as apples, pears, and plums; but little wine. The middle of the country produces chestnut, walnut, peach, and apricot trees; but in the produce of the southern part we trace all the features of the climate of Italy or Spain.

PROVINCENCE, one of the Bahama islands, and the second in point of size. It is about 25 miles long, and 9 broad, narrowing towards the east and west extremities of the island. It has a good harbour. A small light-house was erected in 1801, upon Fort Fincastle. It differs little in its appearance, soil, productions, &c. from the rest of the Bahamas. In general, the surface of this island is rocky and barren, but along the north side there are fertile and well cultivated spots. The town of Nassau is situated along the south side of the harbour, and is a remarkably well built town, and the streets wide and airy. Population in 1803, 1768 whites, 817 people of colour, and 2515 slaves; total 5090. This island, after it came into possession of the British government, was made the seat of government in the Bahamas. Long. between 77. 10. and 77. 32. W. Lat. 25. 2. N.

PROVINCENCE, an island in the western part of the Caribbean sea, near the coast of Honduras, 11 miles long and 4 wide.

PROVIDENCE, a county of the United States, in Rhode Island. Population 30,793.

PROVIDENCE, a town of the United States, a port of entry, and chief town of the above county, built on both sides of Providence river, and connected by a very elegant bridge, 90 feet in breadth. It contains a court-house, a jail, a university, a public library of about 2000 volumes, a Friends boarding school, 5 public schools, 7 banks, including a branch of the United States bank, 6 insurance offices, and 8 houses of public worship, 3 for Congregationalists, 2 for Baptists, 1 for Episcopalians, 1 for Friends, and 1 for Methodists. Among the manufacturing establishments are four cotton manufactories, a large woollen manufactory, a paper-mill, a bleaching, dyeing, and calendering company. The university is a respectable and flourishing seminary. Population 10,071. 15 miles N. N. W. Bristol, and 40 S. S. W. Boston.—It is the name of several townships, and of various small islands in the Pacific and Indian oceans.

PROVIDENCE RIVER, a river of the United States, in Rhode Island, which flows into Narraganset bay, 6 miles below Providence.

PROVINCE ISLAND, a fertile island of the United States, in the river Delaware, 6 miles below Philadelphia.

PROVINCETOWN, a town of the United States, in Barnstable county, Massachusetts, on the hook of Cape Cod, 3 miles S. E. Race point, with a good harbour. The inhabitants depend almost wholly on the fisheries. Population 936. 110 miles S. E. Boston.

PUVISA, a town of France, department of the Seine and Marne, on the Vauzic. It has some manufactures of woollens, and an important commerce in corn. Population 5500. 60 miles E. E. Paris.

PRUDENCE, an island of the United States, in Narraganset bay.

PRUSSIA, or the PRUSSIAN STATES, an extensive kingdom in Europe, occupying the north of Poland, and great part of the north of Germany. Its form is long and irregular, extending from south-west to north-east: its breadth varies from 70 miles to 300, while its length, 800 miles, is greater than that of France or Spain, countries of twice its extent. A century ago, the Prussian dominions were said by Voltaire to stretch along the map of Europe, like a pair of garters. The government has long laboured to give it a more compact form; and to lessen the discrepancy of provincial laws and usages. Frederick II. made considerable efforts with this view; and after the general pacification of 1814, there was adopted a new plan of territorial repartition, possessing most of the advantages of the French departmentis, and exempted from several of their defects, the principal divisions being larger, and the administrative functions less frittered down. The whole kingdom is divided (by a decree of 30th April 1815), into the following 19 provinces, namely, East Prussia, West Prussia, Brandenburg, Pomerania, Westphalia, Cleves and Berg, Silesia, Posen, Saxony, and Lower Rhine; which are divided into 28 governments, and these are subdivided into 8 districts. Population 10,330,000. For military purposes, the kingdom is divided into five great parts, viz. Prussia, Brandenburg and Pomerania, Silesia and Prussian Poland, Saxony, and finally Westphalia with the Lower Rhine. The principal towns are, Berlin, Breslau, Königsberg, Dantzic, Cologne, Magdeburg, Aix-la-Chapelle, Stettin, Posen, Potsdam, Elbing, Erfurt, Düsseldorf, Dresden, Brandenburg, Frankfurt on the Oder, and Stralsund. Of provinces so widely scattered, the surface must necessarily be far from uniform, and it is difficult to make any comprehensive remark, except that a low surface predominates throughout the Prussian states. The chief part of the Prussian territories is, however, far from fertile, the soil being often sandy, and covered with heath: population, accordingly, is thin, not only in Prussia proper, but in Brandenburg. No country in Europe is more favoured than Prussia in regard to water communication in its interior. The Baltic forms a number of bays, or rather lakes, along its coast, such as the Frische, the Curische, the Putzig, and Stettin Hafs; and a succession of large navigable rivers are found at no great distance from each other, such as the Niemen, the Pregel, the Vistula, the Oder, the Elbe, the Weser, and the Rhine, with their numerous tributary streams. Iron, copper, lead, vitriol, alum, saltpetre, are all found, and, in a smaller degree, silver, in the high grounds of the Westphalian and Rhenish provinces, particularly in the mountainous district of the Harz. Salt from brine springs is abundant in some parts of Prussian Saxony; also coal. Wheat, oats, barley, potatoes, and other similar products, are most generally cultivated; but the capital applied to agriculture is inconsiderable. Cattle and sheep are raised; also horses. Flax is an object of general culture in Westphalia in the west, as in Silesia in the east. Wool also is a general article. With regard to manufactures, Silesia and Westphalia have long been noted for their linens. Woollens also are made, more or less, in almost every town or large village. Cotton works are of recent introduction, and have been established near the Rhine, at Berlin, at Erfurt, at Elberfeld, and in particular quarters of Silesia. Next in importance is the leather manufacture, and after it earthenware, glass, paper, tobacco; also starch, potash, vitriol. Brewing is here, as in the rest of Germany, a branch of great importance. The exports of Prussian manufactures consist of linen, and, in a much less degree, of woollens and hardware, with a long list of raw products, viz. corn, wool, timber, pitch, tar, potash, linseed, tobacco, and wax. To these are to be added horses, horned cattle, hogs, salt meat, and, from a few maritime towns, the produce of the fisheries. Distilled spirits are, like corn, an article of export from the eastern and most thinly peopled part of the kingdom. The imports are equally diversified, comprising coffee, cotton, sugar, tea, and other produce of the colonies; the wines, silk, fruit, and bay-salt of the south of Europe; manufactures, such as printed cotton, and the finer hardware; also miscellaneous articles, as tin, furs, and dye-stuffs. The religion of the royal family of Prussia, and of the majority of the population, is the Calvinist. The universities are four in number, viz. Berlin, Halle, Breslau, Konigsberg; and there are in these, and at Danzig, Magdeburg, and a number of other towns, academies (under the name of gymnasia, colleges, or high schools), in which are taught partly the classics and mathematics, but more the modern languages, drawing, and other accomplishments highly useful in genteel professions. The revenue of the Prussian states amounts to about £7,000,000; the debt may be estimated at £40,000,000 sterling. There is no paper currency in Prussia; all is paid in gold and silver. The army amounts to 150,000 men. The government of Prussia is still despotic; the king having delayed to fulfil his pledge made during the great crisis of 1813, 1814, and 1815, to give his people a popular constitution, and to assemble a representative body. The house of Brandenburg succeeded in obtaining from the emperor the royal dignity, in 1700. The king died in 1713; his successor availed himself of the distress of the Swedes, to seize the chief part of Pomerania. Frederick II. after suffering a great deal of hard treatment from his father, ascended the throne in 1740, which he succeeded in keeping. In 1756, a new war burst forth, which, notwithstanding the great military talents of the king and his fine army, brought the Prussian monarchy to the brink of ruin. The king died in 1766. He was succeeded by Frederick William II. a weak voluptuous character. His son, Frederick William III., came to the crown in 1797, and having taken up arms against France, lost the battle of Jena; and the peace of Tilsit restored little more than half the Prussian states. The peace of Paris in 1814, after Bonaparte's fall, confirmed by that of 1815, gave them not the same extent of territory in Poland (see Poland), but an ample equivalent in Saxony and the Lower Rhine; and restored Prussia to all her former importance.

PRUSSIA PROPRIA, a great division of the Prussian dominions, having on the one side the northern frontier of Poland, on the other the coast of the Baltic. This country is composed of the provinces of East and West Prussia, divided formerly by the Vistula, but now by a line a few miles to the east of that river. East Prussia, or Ducal Prussia as it has frequently been called, lies between 53. 20. and 54. 15. of E. long. and 52. 32. and 56. 3. of N. lat. It has a superficial extent of 15,000 square miles, with 256,000 inhabitants. West Prussia is a less extensive country, its area being 10,000 square miles; its population 308,000. It is divided into the governments of Danzig and Marienwerder.

PRUTH, a large river which rises in the peninsula of Marmarosch, in Hungary, and falls into the Danube below Galatz.

PRZEMYSL, the chief town of a circle of the same name in Austrian Poland, on the San. Pop. 7400. 122 miles E. Cracow.

PRZEWORSK, a town of Austrian Poland, 9 miles W. N. W. Jaroslav. Pop. 2200.

PRZEBRAM, a town of Bohemia, 33 miles S. S. W. Prague. Population 2300.

PRZEWIEZ, a large river of Russian Poland, which falls into the Dniester.

PSKOV, a large government or province of the north-west of European Russia, lying between those of Jivonia and Smolensko. Area 22,000 square miles; pop. 700,000.

PSKOV, a town of European Russia, capital of a government of the same name. It has a number of churches, two convents, and a high school. Population 7000. 531 miles W. N. W. Moscow.

PURNA, a populous town of Bengal, district of Betteoria, on the Ganges. Long. 89. 12. E. Lat. 24. N.

PUCHACAY, a province of Chili, bounded N. by the province of Tinta, E. by Huilquillan, S. by the river Biobio, and W. by the Pacific ocean. It is 12 leagues from N. to S. and 23 from E. to W. Population 13,000.

PUCKO, a town of Hungary, on the Wang, 22 miles N. by F. Trentschin. Pop. 3000.

PUDLIN, a town of Hungary, on the Popor, 9 miles N. N. E. Resmark. Pop. 2100.

PURNEY, a township of England, in Yorkshire, 4 miles E. Bradford. Pop. 6229.

PUEBLA DE LOS ANGELES, one of the twelve intendancies into which Mexico or New Spain is divided. It has a coast of about 76 miles towards the Pacific ocean; and as it extends from 16. 57. to 20. 40. of N. lat. it is wholly situated within the tropics. It is bounded N. E. by the intendancy of Vera Cruz, E. by the intendancy of Oaxaca, S. by the ocean, and W. by the intendancy of Mexico. Its greatest length is 116 leagues, and its greatest breadth 150 miles. The greater part of this intendancy is traversed by high cordilleras. Beyond the 18th degree of latitude the whole country is a plain, eminently fertile in wheat, maize, agave, and fruit trees. This plain is from 5900 to 6360 feet above the level of the sea. In this intendancy is also the most elevated mountain of all New Spain, the Popocatepetl, a volcano continually burning. Population 813,300.

PUEBLA, LA, DE LOS ANGELES, a town of Mexico, and capital of the intendancy of Puebla, is, after Mexico, Guanajuato, and the Havannah, the most considerable city of the Spanish colonies in the new continent. Its temples are sumptuous; its streets are wide, and drawn in a straight line from east to west, and from north to south. The principal square in the centre of the city is very magnificent. It is adorned on three sides with uniform porticoes, where are shops filled with all kinds of commodities; and on the other is its grand cathedral, which has a very beautiful front, and two lofty towers. Besides the cathedral, there are various other churches and convents, well built and finely adorned. There are also several colleges and charity schools, both for male and female pupils. It has a manufacture of hard soap; also manufactures of iron and steel, particularly swords, bayonets, &c. 70 miles E. & E. Mexico, and 150 W. N. W. Vera Cruz. Height of the plain on which it is built, 7381 feet. Population 67,800.

PUENTE DE DON GONZALEZ, a town of Spain, province of Cordova. Population 4800.

PURUS, a town of the Netherlands, 12 miles S. by W. Antwerp. Population 4800.

PUERTO REAL, a town of Spain, province of Seville, near the mouth of the Guadalete. Its streets are airy and clean. This is the great depot of the salt made in the tanks that surround the isle of Leon and the bay of Cadiz. Population 10,000. 5 miles E. Cadiz.

PUERTO DE SANTA MARIA, or ST MARY'S, a seaport of Spain, province of Seville, at the mouth of the Guadalete. The town is unfortified, but well built: its streets are broad, well paved, and kept carefully clean. The church and monasteries are remarkable only for a profusion of tasteless ornaments. The public walk is very fine; and on the bank of the Guadalete there is a beautiful garden. The quay is also good, but large ships cannot come up, on account of some sand-banks before the mouth of the river. Its inhabitants, 12,000 in number, are employed partly in the manufacture of linen and printed cotton, more in preparing the bay-salt procured by evaporation from the adjoining salt pits. 5 miles N. E. Cadiz.

PUGANTZ, or BAKA BANJA, a free town of Hungary, 73 miles E. N. E. Presburg. Population 2400.

PUISCELEY, a town of France, department of the Tarn, on the Vera. Population 1500.

PUVERT, a town of France, department of the Aude, on the Blau. Population 1400.

PUJOIS, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Population 2100.

PUJOLS, a town of France, on the Ciron, 28 miles E. Bourdeaux. Population 2000.

PULARUM ISLE, one of the smallest of the Banda isles. Long. 123. 45. E. Lat. 5. 35. N.

PULASKI, a county of the United States, in Kentucky. Population 6897, including 468 slaves.—24; In the N. W. part of Georgia. Population 2093, including 528 slaves.

PULLICAT, a seaport town of the south of India, province of the Carnatic, on a salt water lake, 33 miles in length, by 11 in breadth. The inhabitants are principally weavers and fishermen. It is here that the esteemed Pullicat handkerchiefs are manufactured. Long. 80. 25. E. Lat. 13. 25. N.

PULO AY, a small island in the Eastern seas, to the westward of the Great Banda.

PULO BANJACK ISLE, a small island, about 25 miles in circumference, off the west coast of Sumatra.

PULO BATE, an island about 40 miles off the western coast of Sumatra, 40 miles long, and 12 broad.

PULO BRASSE, an island about 10 miles in circumference, near the N. W. coast of Sumatra.

PULO CANNIRAZ ISLE, a small island on the S. coast of Java, 20 miles long, by 6 broad.

PULO DAMMEN, an island, 30 miles in circumference, near the south coast of Gilolo.

PULO LAUT, an island in the Eastern seas, at the south entrance of the straits of Macassar, near the south-east coast of the island of Borneo, about 100 miles in circumference.

PULO NAKO-NAKO, a cluster of small islands in the Eastern seas, near the western coast of the island of Nias.

PULO NAMCY, an island near the north coast of Sumatra, 20 miles in circumference.

PULO PINANG. See Prince of Wales's Island.

PULO PIRANG, one of the Banda islands, 2 miles N. E. Banda Neira.

PULO PRAMPTON, one of the Banda islands.

PULO ROM, a small island in the Eastern seas, near the south-east coast of Gilolo.

PULO RAGINA, a cluster of small islands in the eastern seas, north of Sumatra.

PULO ROOFAT, an island in the straits of Malacca, 120 miles in circumference, separated by a narrow channel, from the island of Sufatra.

PULO SAMBOLONG, i. e. NINE ISLANDS, a cluster of islands in the Eastern seas, on the coast of Malacca.

PULO SANDING, or SANDIANG, two small islands in the Eastern seas, near the S. E. extremity of the Nassau or Porgy isles.

PULO TIMOAN, an island in the Eastern seas, inhabited by Malays. Long. 104. 23. E. Lat. 3. N.

PULO VARELLA, an island in the straits of Malacca, 20 miles off the N. E. coast of Sumatra. Long. 99. 36. E. Lat. 3. 47. N.

PULO WAY, one of the Spice islands, in the Eastern seas, 9 miles W. Gomong Apes.

PULO WAY, an island, 30 miles in circumference, near the north coast of Sumatra.

PULTNEVILLE, a post village of the United States, in Williamson county, New York.

PULTUSK, a town of Poland, on the Narew, 84 miles N. N. E. Warsaw. Population 2100.

PUNA, a city of Peru, province of Paucarolla, on Lake Chucuito. It is a rich and beautiful place, containing many illustrious families, with a beautiful church for the whites, and another for the Indians. Near it are rich silver ores; but the mines are filled with water. 14 miles N. W. Chucuito. Long. 70. 26. W. Lat. 16. 28. S.

PUNA, an island, district, and city of South America. The island is situated at the mouth of the Guayaquil, about six leagues long, and as many broad. The city is poor, and much decayed. The port is eight leagues from the city. Long. 76. 50. W. Lat. 2. 50. S.

PUNDZKROON, a town of Hindustan, province of Benjapore, on the Decmal. Long. 75. 12. E. Lat. 17. 55. N.

PUNED ISLANDS, at the mouth of the river Gabon, near the coast of Benin.

PUNHETA, a small town of Portugal, 8 miles W. N. W. Abrantes. Population 1100.

PENITZ, a town of Prussian Poland, 45 miles S. Pozna. Population 1400.

PENJAB, or FIVE RIVERS, an extensive region of Hindostan, principally situated in the province of Lahore, but including part of Multan.

PENALCA, a village of New Granada, in the province of Popayan, on a great plain among the Andes, 10,000 feet high.

PURBECK, ISLE OF, a peninsular district of England, in the county of Dorset. It is situated on the English channel, is nearly surrounded by the sea and the river Frome, and comprehends the whole of the south-eastern corner of the county, from Luckford lake eastwards. Its greatest length is about twelve miles, and the average breadth about seven. Purbeck has been long famous for its stone, which is in great demand both for building and paving.

PURCHENA, a town of Spain, in Granada, 73 miles E. Granada. Population 3000.

PURPLET, a village of England, Essex, on the Thames, 20 miles E. by S. London.

PUGATINO, a small island near the city of Naples. It serves for performing quarantine.

PURMEMENT, a town of the Netherlands, province of North Holland. Pop. 2400.

PURNEAU, an extensive district of Bengal, forming the north-west division of that province. It is watered by several rivers, and is extremely fertile, and abounding with luxurious pastures. Population 1½ million.

PURSKAI, the capital of the above mentioned district, on the Scraw river. It has a good trade, and is the residence of the judge, collector, &c. of the district. Long. 68. 23. E. Lat. 23. 45. N.

PURYSBURG, a town of the United States, South Carolina, on the Savannah. Houses 50.

PURSTENAU, a district of the Austrian states, in Tyrol, on the borders of Carinthia, 50 miles long, and 18 broad.

PURTEL, a town of the interior of European Russia, government of Kursk, on the Seni. It has numerous churches and chapels, a monastery, several public buildings, and 9000 inhabitants.

PUTNAM, a county of the United States, in the west part of Georgia. Population 10,029, including 3220 slaves.—2d, Of New York. Population 10,293.

PUTNAM, a flourishing town of the United States, Muskingum county, Ohio. Pop. 400.

PUTNEY, a large and pleasant village and parish of England, county of Surrey, on the Thames, separated from Fulham, on the opposite side, by a wooden bridge. The church is an old Gothic building. At the east end of the south aisle is a small chapel, the roof of which is adorned with rich Gothic tracery. On Putney heath are numerous villas of merchants and other opulent citizens of the metropolis. Population 3394. 4½ miles W. London.

PUTTER, a village of the Netherlands, 23 miles N. W. Utrecht. Population 2300.

PUTUMAYO, also called Ica, a river of South America, which joins the Amazonas, in Long. 50. 40. W. Lat. 3. 30. S.

PUY, L'E, an ill built town of France, capital of the department of the Upper Loire, on the Borne. Here is a large cathedral, less remarkable for its architecture, than for a miraculous image of the Virgin. It has manufactures of blankets, linen, lace, and silk; also stoneware. Population 12,000. 70 miles S. W. Lyons.

PURCEADA, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, 53 miles W. N. W. Gerona. Pop. 1500.

PUY NE DOME, an extensive department in the central part of France, towards the east, comprising the northern part of Auvergne. Its superficial extent is about 3400 square miles; its population 543,000, partly Protestants, but mostly Catholics. Its surface is mountainous; its soil, in the high grounds, is dry and stony; but in the beautiful valley of Limagne, it is a fertile vegetable mould. This department is watered by the Allier, the Dore, the Sioule, the Couze, the Dolore, the Veyre, and several inferior streams.

PUY LAURENS, a town of France, 20 miles E. Toulouse. It has manufactures of woollens. Population 5100.

PUY LA ROQUE, a town of France, 10 miles S. E. Cahors. Population 2000.

PUZZUOLI, or POZZUOLI, anciently Puteoli, once a celebrated town of Italy, delightfully situated on a point projecting into the sea, nearly in the centre of the fine bay of Puzzuolo. Commerce has long since forsaken this place, and the devastations of war and earthquakes have greatly reduced it. Its population, hardly exceeding 1000, is now confined to the little prominent point which formed the ancient port; and there remain only a few vestiges of its former grandeur. 7 miles W. Naples.

PWLLHETS, a market town and seaport of Wales, county of Caernarvon, on Carligan bay. It joins with Caernarvon in sending a member to parliament. 27 miles S. Caernarvon.

PUEBLO ISLANDS, in the N. Pacific ocean, near the W. coast of North America. Lat. 50. 19. N.

PRLOS, anciently a town of Greece, in the Morea; now only a village, called Old Navarin.

PYNACKER, a town of the Netherlands, 7 miles N. N. W. Rotterdam. Pop. 1200.

PYRAMIDS, a range of ancient and stupendous Egyptian monuments, extending northwards from Cairo, on the opposite side of the river, for about 20 leagues.

PYRENEES, a range of lofty mountains in the south of Europe, which divide France from Spain, and extend, almost in a straight line, from St Sebastian on the Bay of Biscay, to Port Vendres on the Mediterranean, a distance of fully 250 miles. They have been divided into two chains, nearly continuous, which form both the natural and political boundaries of the two kingdoms of Spain and France, and separate at their sources the streams which flow towards each. From them proceed, under various names, a number of inferior ramifications of mountains along the French territory to the north, and the Spanish to the south. The acclivity of the Pyrenees, on the side of Spain, is often extremely steep, presenting a continued succession of rugged chasms, abrupt precipices, and huge masses of naked rock; on that of France, the ascent is generally gradual, and the mountains both more accessible, and of more pleasant aspect. These mountains are highest towards Mont Perdu, about 100 miles from the Bay of Biscay. They attain there an elevation of between 10,000 and 12,000 feet, and contain glaciers, as in the Alps; but these masses of permanent ice are much less extensive. In an extent of 250 miles, there are necessarily many passes; the total number, including paths for pedestrians, exceeds fifty, but the carriage roads hardly exceed five; and of these, the most frequented are from Jonquera to Perpignan on the east, from St Sebastian to St Jean de Luz on the west, and at some distance inland, from Pampeluna to St Jean de Pied de Port. The passes in the interior are over very high ground; thus, that of Pineda is 8248 feet above the sea; Gavarnie, 7640; Lavareze, 7350; and Tourmalet, 7195.

* PYRENEES, EASTERN, a department in the south of France, comprising what formerly constituted the provinces of Roussillon, Cerdagne, and part of Languedoc. It is bounded S. by Spain, and E. by the Mediterranean. It has a superficial extent of 1630 square miles, but a population of only 127,000. The surface is mountainous, but with not so great a degree of elevation as in the centre of the Pyrenees; and on the coast of the Mediterranean there is an extensive plain. The rivers which water this department are the Tet, the Tech, the Gly, and other inferior streams.

PYRENEES, LOWER, an extensive department in the S. W. of France, including the ancient provinces of Bearne and Navarre, &c. the N. W. part of the Pyrenees, and the country between them and the Bay of Biscay. Its superficial extent amounts to 3100 square miles; its population to 383,000. The face of the country is mountainous; the scenery extremely diversified and romantic. It is watered by the Adour, and a number of mountain streams called gaves, all flowing westward from the Pyrenees to the sea.

PYRENEES, UPPER, a department in the S. W. of France, less extensive than the preceding, and formed of a portion of the Pyrenees about 70 miles from the Bay of Biscay, and of the tract of country to the north. Its extent is about 1800 square miles; its population nearly 200,000. Its surface is mountainous, and is remarkable for its picturesque views and diversity of scenery. The soil in the elevated regions is stony, and little fit for cultivation. It is watered by the Garonne, the Gimone, the Louzon, the Save, the Gers, and a multitude of inferior streams.

PYRGO, an Albanian village of European Turkey, in the Morea.

PYRGOUS, a small town of Greece, in the island of Santorin, in the Archipelago.

PRATZ, a town of Prussia, in Pomerania. Pop. 1700. 15 miles S. by W. Stargard.

PRYMONT, the chief town of a district of the same name in the north-west of Germany. It contains 2000 inhabitants, and is in great repute for its mineral springs. 33 miles S. S. W. Hanover.

Q.

QUACKENBUSH, a small town of Germany, in Hanover; 20 miles N. Osnabruck.

QUADRA AND VANCOUVER'S ISLAND, on the N. W. coast of North America, between Queen Charlotte's sound and De Fuca's straits.

QUAINTON, a village and parish of England, in Buckinghamshire. The church is a large and ancient building. Population 1017.

QUARK, a stream of Scotland, in the county of Peebles, which flows into the Tweed.

QUAKER HILL, a village of the United States, in Pawling, New York.

QUALATCHE, a town of the United States, in Georgia, 40 miles W. N. W. Tugloa.

QUALLA MOORAH, a river and port on the western coast of Malacca. The river is large and rapid; but is frequented, on account of the tin mines in its vicinity. 18 miles S. Queda.

QUANG-KE, a province of China, situated on the south-western frontier, bordering on Tonquin. Population 10,000,000.

QUANGTONG, a large and populous province in the south of China, washed on the east and south by the sea. Population reported to Sir George Staunton at 21,000,000.

QUANTICO, a river of the United States, in Virginia, which runs into the Potomac.

QUANTICO MILLS, a village of the United States, Somerset county, Maryland.

QUANTUNG, a town of the Birman empire, province of Ava, on the east side of the Irrawaddy river. It has a great trade. Long. 96. 55. E. Lat. 24. 2. N.

QUANREVILLE, a post village of the United States, in Brunswick county, Virginia.

QUARNITZ, a town of Prussian Silesia, 8 miles W. by S. Glogau. Population 1200.

QUARRIES LES TOMES, a village of France, department of the Yonne. Population 1000.

QUARRBETOWN, a village of Scotland, in Renfrewshire, 4 miles W. Paisley.

QUATRE BRAS, a hamlet of the Netherlands, 7 miles W. Ligny, noted for the obstinate conflict between the British and French, on 16th June 1815.

QUEBEC, a city of North America, and capital of Canada, on a promontory of the St. Lawrence, formed by that river and the St. Charles. This ridge of land is from one to two miles broad. It has Cape Diamond, a bold promontory which rises 345 feet above the level of the water, on the north; and across it, at the north-east or lower end, the town of Quebec is built. The fortifications extending across the breadth of the peninsula, shut in the ground on which the city stands, the circuit of which is about 2½ miles. The town is divided into two parts, namely, the Upper and Lower. The Upper town may be said to be situated on Cape Diamond, at least upon the side of it which slopes towards the St. Charles. The Lower town is situated immediately under Cape Diamond. The ground on which it is situated is gained from the tide. The streets run from the upper side of Cape Diamond down to the river St. Charles, a distance of about half a mile; they are of considerable breadth, and the houses are large and commodious. The communication from the Lower to the Upper town is by a winding street, at the top of which is a fortified gate. The peculiar situation of the city occasions great irregularity and unevenness in the streets. These have been lately greatly improved, as also the houses, which are now built in the modern style. The principal public buildings are the castle of St. Louis, on the summit of the rock, a handsome stone building, seated near the edge of a precipice, something more than 200 feet high; the court-house, on the north side of St. Louis-street, a large modern stone structure, 136 feet long, and 44 broad; the Protestant cathedral, situated near the court-house, 136 feet long, by 75 broad, with a lofty spire, light and elegant, and covered with tin; the Catholic cathedral, a lofty, spacious, plain stone edifice, 216 feet in length, by 108 in breadth; the Ursuline convent, a substantial stone edifice; the new jail, a very handsome building of fine grey stone, 160 feet in length, by 68 in breadth; the artillery barracks, a range of stone buildings two stories high, 527 feet in length, by 40 in breadth. Besides sufficient room for quartering the artillery soldiers of the garrison, there is an ordnance office, armuary, store-houses, and workshops. There are two market-places, a place d'armes, a parade, and an esplanade. In its present state, Quebec may rank as a fortress of the first consequence. The basin is very spacious, being sufficient to contain 100 sail of the line. The depth of water is 38 fathoms, with a tide rising from 17 to 18, and at the springs, from 23 to 24 feet. Quebec was begun by the French in 1608. In 1629, it was taken by the English, but afterwards restored. It was again taken, in 1759, by the English, under the command of General Wolfe, who fell in the engagement; and by the peace in 1763, it was ceded, with the rest of Canada, to the conquerors. The climate of Quebec is intensely cold during the winter; but it is not always that the river is frozen over. Quebec exports grain, flour, timber, lumber, ashes, &c. In return, all the manufactured articles of Europe are imported. Mr. Bourchette, in his elaborate work on Canada, estimates the population at 18,000. Long. 71. 10. W. Lat. 46. 50. N.

QUEENA, a country of Asia, situated on the western coast of the peninsula of Malacca. It extends about 150 miles along the coast, between 4. 19. and 7. 30. N. lat. and stretches inland from 20 to 25 miles.

QUEENSBURG, a town of Prussian Saxony, on the Rude. Its abbey church is handsome, but the others are remarkable only for antiquities. The inhabitants, 11,000, are employed in the manufacture of woollen. 30 miles S. E. W. Magdeburg.

QUEZENT, a river of the United States, in Vermont, which joins the Connecticut.

QUEEN ANN, a county of the United States, in Maryland. Pop. 16,648. Slaves 1381.

QUEENBOROUGH, a market town and borough of England, in Kent, Isle of Sheppey. The church is an ancient building; and the new guild-hall, lately finished, is very neat. The inhabitants are mostly fishermen. It sends two members to parliament. Population 881. 14 mile S. Sheerness.

QUEEN CHARLOTTE'S ISLANDS, a group of islands in the North Pacific ocean, off the west coast of North America. The largest is 170 miles long, and in some places 60 broad. Their inhabitants are savages. Long. from 131. to 133. 7. W. Lat. 52. to 54. 22. N.

QUEEN CHARLOTTE'S ISLANDS, a group of islands discovered by Captain Carteret, in the year 1767, consisting of Egmont's island or New Guernsey, Lord Howe's island or New Jersey, and several others. Long. 163. 30. to 165. 10. E. Lat. 9. 50. to 11. 20. S.

QUEEN CHARLOTTE'S TOWN, a bay at the N. end of the northern island of New Zealand.

QUEEN'S COUNTY, a county of Ireland, bounded N. and W. by King's county, E. by Kildare and part of Carlow, S. by Kilkenny, and S. W. by Tipperary. It is 23 English miles in length, and as many in breadth. Along the western boundary of the county runs a range of high and steep mountains. In the eastern division of the county, the Dysart hills form a prominent and picturesque object. These heights command the view of a fine and beautiful country, adorned with rich plantations and splendid dwellings. The principal rivers are the Barrow and the Nore. There are no lakes deserving of notice in the county. The chief towns are Maryborough, the county town; Portlington, and Stralbelly. Almost every description of soil is found in this county, from a very stiff clay, to a light but fertile sandy loam. The principal mineral productions of Queen's county are coal and limestone. It sends three members to the British parliament. Pop. 90,000.

QUEEN'S COUNTY, a county of the United States, in New York, in the west part of Long Island. Population 19,336.

QUEENSFERRY, a royal borough of Scotland, county of Linlithgow, on the coast of the frith of Forth. It consists of one regular street. It has an old chapel, still pretty entire, with a stone roof. The town derives its chief consequence from the ferry over the frith of Forth. It unites with Stirling, Dunfermline, Inverkeithing, and Culross, in sending a member to parliament. Pop. 696. 9 miles W. Edinburgh.

QUEENSTOWN, a neat well built place of Upper Canada, on the Niagara. It is the depot for all the merchandise and stores brought from Montreal and Quebec. Queenstown suffered much during the late war between Great Britain and the United States.

QUEICH, a river of Germany, which joins the Rhine near Gernersheim.

QUEIS, a river of the Prussian states, which falls into the Rober.

QUEZUS, a village of Portugal, about 10 miles to the north-west of Lisbon.

QUENNY, a river of England, in Salop, which falls into the Ony.

QUENTIN, ST., a tolerably well built town of France, department of the Aisne, on the Somme. It has a public square, in which is situated the town-hall. This and the ancient cathedral, both in the Gothic style, are the only buildings of interest in the town. It has long been noted for its thread, linen, cambric, lawn, gauze, and more recently for its cottons. The Spaniards defeated the French here in 1557. Pop. 11,000. 22 miles S. Cambray.

QUERETARO, a city of Mexico, in the intendancy of Mexico. It is a fine city, and the largest, after Mexico, in the intendancy to which it belongs. From north to south it is sheltered by a mountain; and from thence begins its celebrated glen, where the delightful fields and shady groves are irrigated by a large river, the waters of which are introduced by means of hidden aqueducts. It has three grand squares, from which extend all the streets, running to the four cardinal points. Here is also one celebrated channel for carrying the water to the city, upon more than 40 arches of 35 yards high. The parish church is magnificent and rich; and there are several convents. In this city are many workshops, in which are fabricated fine cloths, baizes, serges, &c.; a great number of shops and stalls, furnished with all sorts of provisions; and also tanneries, in which they dress leather and make belts. Humboldt also visited a great manufactory of cegars. It is 6374 feet above the level of the sea. Population 35,000. 95 miles N. W. Mexico. Long. 100. 11. W. Lat. 20. 38. N.

QUERFURT, a walled town of Saxony. Population 2506. 29 miles W. Leipzig.

QUERINBA, the name given to a range of islands, extending along the eastern coast of Africa, to the south of Cape Delgado. The principal island is four or five miles long, containing about 30 farm houses, and a small fort. Long. 40. 58. E. Lat. 12. 20. S.

QUESADA, a town of Spain, province of Jaen. Population 2000.

QUESNOY, a fortified town of French Flanders, 20 miles E. by N. Cambray. Pop. 4000. — It is the name of another town on the Deule, 6 miles N. W. Lisle. Pop. 3700.

QUESTEMANT, a town of France, department of Morbihan. Pop. with its parish, 3500.

QUERAZON, a small town of France, department of the Morbihan, on a long and narrow peninsula of the same name, which, with some islands, forms one of the largest bays in Europe. In 1793 a body of French emigrants landed here, and were overpowered by the republican troops, and dispersed. Those who were taken were shot. Population 3000. 24 miles S. S. E. L'Orient.

QUICKEN, North and South, two small rivers of Scotland, in Kinross-shire, which fall into Leckleven.

QUIEVRAIN, a town of the Netherlands, 9 miles E. N. E. Valenciennes. Pop. 1500.

QUILLERUP, a town of France, department of the Euro, on the Lower Seine. Population 1200.

QUILLIMANE, a small town, with a fort, of Mozambique, in Eastern Africa, at the mouth of the Zambeze. Lat. 17. 37. S.

QUILOTA, a province of Chili, on the Pacific ocean. It is 25 leagues in length, and 16 in breadth. Population 14,000.

QUILLOTA, the capital of the above province, pleasantly situated on the Aconcagua. Long. 71. 18. W. Lat. 32. 50. S.

QUILOA, a city and seaport of Eastern Africa, once the capital of the Portuguese settlements in Eastern Africa. It now consists of a few scattered huts. Long. 39. 47. E. Lat. 8. 41. S.

QUIMPER, a town of France, department of Finisterre, at the confluence of two navigable rivers. The only objects of interest are the cathedral, the exchange, the public library, and the botanical garden. Population 7000. 34 miles S. E. Brest.

QUIMPEREC, a town of France, department of Finisterre, 12 miles N. W. L'Orient. Population 4200.

QUINCE ISLAND, an island near the southwest coast of Ireland, county of Cork.

QUINERUO, formerly Mohegan, a river of the United States, in Connecticut.

QUISTIN, a town of France, department of the Cotes du Nord, on the Goy. Pop. 4000.

QUINZIN, ST., a town of France, 14 miles N. by E. Nimes. Population 1600.

QUINZANO, a town of Austrian Italy, 11 miles N. Cremona. Population 3000.

QUINRICANCA, a province of Peru, 35 leagues long. Population 7200.

QUINSAE, a town of France, 20 miles W. by N. Nimes. Population 1400.

QUINZATO, a small town of Austrian Italy, 12 miles S. S. W. Mantua.

QUIVO, a province, or an extensive country, of South America, bounded N. by Santa Fe, and having within its audience some districts of Popayan, which also forms a part of its northern frontier; E. by the Portuguese frontiers; W. by the Great Pacific ocean, from the gulf of Puna to the government of Atacama; and S. by Peru. It is estimated to extend 600 miles from N. to S. by 1800 from E. to W. In this immense extent, the population is chiefly confined to the valley, which is formed on the very ridge of the main chain of the Andes, by the parallel summits making a prolonged series of small narrow plains. The eastern governments are chiefly immense tracks, thinly scattered with missionary villages. The vegetable productions of Quito vary with the elevation of the ground. The champaign country produces abundant crops of maize; and the deep ravines, where the temperature is hot, produce sugar-cane. The lands which are in elevated situations in the mountains, possess a colder climate, and produce corn, barley, and all other sorts of grain. In its mountain plains feed very large flocks of sheep, which with their wool furnish materials for the manufactures of this province.

Quito, the capital of the above country, on the eastern slope of the western branch of the equatorial Andes, 35 leagues from the coast of the Pacific ocean. The volcanic mountain of Pichincha is the basis on which this celebrated city rests; and owing to the inequality of the ground, the streets are very irregular and uneven. The principal square in Quito has four sides, in one of which stands the cathedral, and in the opposite the Episcopal palace; the third side is taken up with the town-house, and the fourth by the palace of the audience. It is very spacious, and has in the centre an elegant fountain. Four streets, terminating at the angles of the square, are straight, broad, and handsome. All the streets, except the four above mentioned, are crooked, and destitute both of symmetry and order. The principal streets are paved, but the others not, by which means they are almost impassable after rain, which is here very common. Besides the principal square, there are two others in Quito, and both very spacious, together with several others that are smaller. In these the greatest part of the convents are situated, and make a handsome appearance. The great danger of Quito is from earthquakes, and from the vicinity of burning mountains, which often break out into the most tremendous eruptions. On the 4th February 1797, the country was shaken by a most dreadful concussion; the face of the whole district was changed; and in the space of a second, 40,000 persons were hurled into eternity. During this tremendous scene the ground opened in all directions, and vomited out sulphur, mud, and water. Since this period violent shocks of earthquakes have been frequently experienced. The height of Quito above the level of the sea is 8610 feet. The community may be divided into four classes, Spaniards or whites, mestizoes, Indians or natives, and negroes. Population estimated at 70,000. Long. 78. 10. 15. W. Lat. 0. 13. 27. S.

QUITOS AND MACAS, the last and most easterly province of the audience of Quito, and kingdom of New Granada.

QUOJA, a country of Africa, in the interior from Sierra Leone, between the 8th and 10th degrees of W. long., and between the 7th and 9th degrees of N. lat.

QUORONARA, a small river of Brazil, which falls into the Atlantic.

R.

RAAB, or GYORI VARNEGYE, a county of Hungary, on both sides of the Danube, and of the river Raab. Area 600 square miles. Population 70,000.

RAAB, GYON, or NAST-GYON, the capital of the above country, nearly surrounded by the Danube, the Raab, and the Raimitz. It is fortified both by nature and art, is regularly built, and has several handsome houses. The chief manufacture is of knives and swords. An academy was erected here in 1786. Here also the Lutherans have a college. Pop. 11,000. 33 miles S.E. Freeburg.

RAAB, a large river of the Austrian states, which falls eventually into the Danube.

RAABSTADT, a village of the Netherlands, in South Holland. Population 1500.

RAASAY, or RAASA, a considerable island of the Hebrides, between the mainland of Scotland and the Isle of Skye, from which it is separated by a narrow sound. It is a rough, rocky, and indifferently fruitful island, with bold and dangerous shores, 18 miles long by about 2 broad. Population 1000. Long. 6. W. Lat. 57. 25. N.

RAABH, a town of Austrian States, 20 miles W. Troppau. Population 1800.

RAABSTEIN, an ill built town of France, department of the Tarn, on the Tarn, 13 miles N.E. Toulouse. Population 5000.

RABNARAN, a low island in the bay of Bengal, 15 miles in length, and 5 in breadth. Long. 90. 25. E. Lat. 22. N.

RABYASAD, a town of Bengal, on the eastern bank of one of the numerous branches of the Delta of the Ganges.

RACANELLO, a small river of Naples. It falls into the gulf of Teanto.

RACCA, a town of Diarbekir, pachalic of Ourf, on the eastern bank of the Euphrates, at the mouth of a small river named Beles. Long. 38. 54. E. Lat. 36. 5. N.

RACCON, an island of the United States, near the coast of South Carolina.

RACONN, CARR, two rivers of the United States, in Ohio, which run into the Ohio.

RACCOON KEYS, small islands near the coast of South Carolina.

RACE, CAPE, a cape on the south-east coast of Newfoundland.

RACE OF ALDERNEY, a narrow strait of the English channel, between the Isle of Alderney and Cape La Hague.

RACKET, a river of the United States, in New York. It flows N. into the St. Lawrence.

RACKETON, a village of the United States, in Louisville, New York.

RACKIBURN ISLAND, a small island of the Atlantic, near the west coast of Ireland.

RACKONE, one of the Kurile Isles, 13 miles long, and the same broad.

RACONTE, a town of Piedmont, province of Saluzzo, on the Grana. Population 10,500. 20 miles S. Turin.

RACHTIG, a small river of West Prussia. It falls into the Motlau near Dantzig.

RADERBERG, a town of Saxony, on the Roder, 8 miles N. E. Dresden. Population 1800.

RADEN, a town of Prussian Westphalia, 16 miles N. W. Minden. Population 1000.

RADÉ VON DEM WALDE, a town of Germany, 24 miles E. Dusseldorf. Pop. 2700.

RADENBURG, a town of Styria, 107 miles S. by W. Vienna. Population 2400.

RADNORE, a hamlet of England, in Staffordshire, 5 miles from Lichfield.

RADNOR, a county of South Wales, bounded N. by Montgomeryshire and Shropshire, E. by Herefordshire, and S. and W. by Brecknockshire and part of Cardigan. It lies between 2. 54. and 3. 40. W. long. and 52. 4. and 52. 55. N. lat. It extends about 24 miles from north to south, and 28 from east to west. Area from 450 to 500 square miles. It contains one borough, New Radnor, two other market towns, Knighton and Presteigne, and 52 parishes. It sends a member to parliament. The face of the country is throughout extremely wild, bleak, and mountainous, except towards the eastern and southern borders, and also where it is intersected by several valleys, which are watered by the principal rivers of the county. These are the Wye, the Ithon, the Teme, the Euphrates, and the Eden. The valleys afford a considerable extent both of meadow and of arable land, especially the vale of Wye-side, and the vale of Radnor. Population 22,452.

RADNOR, NEW, a market town and borough of Wales, in Radnorshire, on the Somersell. It was formerly a place of great importance, but it has now dwindled into poverty and insignificance. It had a strong castle, a small part of which still remains. The public buildings are the town-hall, the prison, and the church. It joins with other boroughs in sending a member to parliament: number of voters 300. Pop. 2138. 7 miles N. W. Kingston.

RADZIVITSE, a town of European Turkey, in Romania. Population 2000.

RADZYNO, a town of Poland, on the San, 7 miles E. S. E. Jaroslav. Population 1800.

RADZIVILOV, a town of European Russia, government of Volhynia, 7 miles N. W. Brody.

RADATZ, a neat town of Switzerland, capital of St. Gall, on the Tamn, near Sargans.

RADCLIFFE, a small village of England, in the county of Monmouth, noted for its stone. 8 miles W. Monmouth.

RADDER, a town of East Prussia, on the Memel, 6 miles S. E. Tilsit. Pop. 2500.

RAGUSA, a circle or district of Austrian Dalmatia, containing the territory of the republic, with the islands of Curzola, Lagosta or Agoata, Mileda, Guipana, Moxto, Calamata, and a few others. Area 700 square miles. Population 50,000. The rivers are the Narenta, Drino, Giluta, and Orsila.

RAGUSA, the chief town of the above district, on a peninsula on the Adriatic, which forms two large and commodious harbours, protected by works of considerable strength. The streets are narrow, with the exception of one which traverses the town from N. to S. The mansion where the chief magistrate formerly resided, the cathedral, and some of the churches, are good buildings. Population 10,000, who weave silk and woollen stuffs, and build some shipping. This petty republic did not lose its independence until the successes of Bonaparte, who conferred on Marshal Marmont, the title of duke of Ragusa. 278 miles E. by N. Rome.

RAGUSA, a populous town of Sicily, Val di Noto, on the Ragusa. Population 20,000. 28 miles W. by S. Syracuse. The vicinity of Ragusa produces vines, olives, and other fruit; it is noted also for its breed of horses and mules.

RARDENPORE, a town of Hindostan, province of Gujarat, on the Puddar river. It possesses a respectable citadel. Long 71. 45. E. Lat. 24. N.

RARMANIE, a considerable town of Lower Egypt, situated at the junction of the Nile with the canal of Alexandria. The French, during their occupation of Egypt, made it a fortified station. 42 miles E. S. E. Alexandria.

RARON, a town of Hindostan, province of Lahore, belonging to the Sikhs.

RASTHAM, a village and parish of England, in Kent. Population 1030.

RAINOW, a township of England, 3 miles N. E. by E. Macclesfield. Pop. 1530.

RAINTON, EAST and WEST, two villages of England, near Durham. Pop. 671-1100.

RAINY LAKE, a lake of North America, divided by an isthmus into two parts. The broadest part is not more than 20 miles; its length, including both, about 300 miles.

RAINY RIVER, a river of the United States, which joins the Illinois.

RAISIN, two rivers of America, which run into Lake Erie and Lake Michigan.

RAISMES, a village in French Flanders, 3 miles N. Valenciennes. Population 2000.

RAIT, a village of Scotland, in Perthshire.

RAITENBUCH, a small town of Germany, in Bavaria, 9 miles N. Eichstätt.

RAZARARY, a considerable trading town of Bengal, district of Dacca, on the majestic river Megna. Long 96. 21. E. Lat. 23. 25. N.

RAJAHNAGAR, a town of Bengal, district of Dacca, on the Hoogles. Long. 93. 14. E. Lat. 23. 22. N.

RAJAMUNDROO, a town and fortress of Hindostan, province of Bejapoor. It commands the entrance into the valuable estuary and navigable river of Mirjee. Long. 73. 30. E. Lat. 14. 30. N.

RAJSHAHAL, the Royal Residence, an ancient city of Bengal, on the Ganges. It has fallen into decay, the modern town consisting only of one street. Long. 87. 43. E. Lat. 24. 2. N.

RAJETS, a town of Hungary, 116 miles N. E. Vienna. Population 4400.

RAJKA, a town of Hungary, 11 miles S. S. E. Presburg. Population 2300.

RAJSTHAN, a town of Hindostan, province of Alibabad. It is the residence of a rajah. Long. 62. 50. E. Lat. 24. 37. N. There are several other places of this name.

RAJSAI, a river on the north-east coast of Sumatra, and the largest in the island.

RAKONITZ, the chief place of a circle of the same name, on the Rakonitz, 20 miles W. Prague. Population 2000.

RALEIGH, a town of the United States, and metropolis of North Carolina, in Wake county. It contains a state-house, a court-house, a jail, a governor's house, a market-house, a theatre, state bank, two dissenting churches, &c. Population upwards of 1000. 60 miles N. Fayetteville.

RALEIGH'S, a town of Prussia, province of the Lower Rhine, near Juliers. Pop. 1600.

RAM HEATH, a cape, on the south coast of Ireland, and county of Waterford.

RAM ISLAND, a small island of Ireland, in Lough Neagh, 8 miles S. Antrim.

RAM ISLAND, an island of the United States, in Long Island sound.

RAMA, a considerable town of Palestine, described by the Arabian geographers in the middle ages, as the capital of that country. Remains of very considerable edifices may still be observed there. 23 miles W. N. W. Jerusalem.

RAMALLOA, a river of the province of Buenos Ayres, which falls into the Parana.

RAMAPO WORKS, a village of the United States, in New York, on Ramapo River.

RAMBERT, SANTA, a town of France, on the Loire, 9 miles N. W. St Etienne. Population 3000.

RAMBERT LE JOUR, St., a town of France, department of the Ais. Population 2300.

RAMBAYLERS, a town of France, department of the Vosges. Population 4900.

RAMBLA, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, 17 miles S. by W. Cordova. Pop. 6000.

RAMBULART, a town of France, 30 miles S. W. Paris. Population 2000.

RAME, a village of England, in Cornwall, near Mount Edgecumbe. Population 507.

RAMETTA, a town of Sicily, 8 miles W. Messina. Population 2000.

RAMPUR, the capital of a district of the same name in India, on the Dummoodah river. Long. 85. 43. E. Lat. 23. 33. N.

RAMILLIES, a village of the Netherlands, in South Brabant, noted for a victory gained here in 1708 by the Duke of Marlborough, over the French. 26 miles S. E. Brussels.

RAMNISSEBAM ISLE, an island situated in the straits between the continent of Hindostan and Ceylon, 11 miles long, by 6 broad, noted for a magnificent Hindoo temple.

RAMNAGRA, a town of Hindostan, province of Alibabad, on the Ganges.

RAMONCHAMP, a town of France, on the Moselle, 21 miles S. E. Remiremont. Pop. 2400.

RAMPOO, a city of Hindostan; and capital of an extensive district of the same name, on the Gossila river. It contains the palace of the nabob Fyzoola Khan, and some other good houses; but is chiefly composed of sun burnt brick houses, with thatched or tiled roofs. Long. 78. 58. E. Lat. 20. 30. N.

—Ram being the name of one of the Hindoo demigods, there are innumerable places called by his name.

RAMPTON, two villages of England, in Cambridgeshire and Nottinghamshire.

RAMSTURY, a village of England, in Wiltshire. The church is a large and spacious structure. Population 1300.

RAMSBURY and RAMSDEN, two villages of England, in Hampshire, and Oxfordshire.

RAMSDEN BELLINGHOPE, and RAMSDEN CHAPEL, villages of England, in Essex.

RAMSEY, a town of England, in the Isle of Man, in a spacious bay, which affords good anchorage, though the harbour is bad. Pop. 1533. 16 miles N. Douglas.

RAMSEY, a market town of England, Huntingdonshire, formerly noted for a wealthy Benedictine abbey, of which there are now scarcely any remains. Population 2814. 11 miles N. N. E. Huntingdon.

RAMSEY, an island of Wales, coast of Pembroke-shire, 4 miles S. S. W. St David's.

RAMSEY, a market and seaport town of England, in Kent, noted for its excellent artificial harbour, and also as a fashionable resort for sea-bathing, on the eastern coast of the island of Thanet. It has of late years greatly increased in size and population, and great improvements have been made in the accommodations of the town. The streets are well paved and lighted; the old houses have been much improved, and many new streets and buildings of handsome appearance have been added, for the use of its numerous visitors. Of the public buildings, the parish church of St Lawrence stands about half a mile from the town. The chapel of ease, erected in 1785, is a plain but handsome building; and there are, besides, three places of worship for Methodists, Baptists, and Independents, which are well attended. But the harbour is by far the most striking feature in the town. It now consists of two immense piers, extending from the coast about 600 feet into the sea, and bending towards each other, so as nearly to approach and inclose a circular area of 30 acres, which forms the harbour. The width of the entrance is 240 feet. The general breadth of the pier is 36 feet, including a strong parapet, which defends the outer sides next the sea. An advanced pier was begun in 1787, the utility of which became apparent as the work advanced, and greatly facilitated the entrance of shipping in tempestuous weather. Between the years 1793 and 1803, several additional buildings were made, viz. a new stone light-house on the head of the west pier, a handsome house for the business of the trustees, another for the residence of the harbour master, a watch-house, &c. The harbour is secured at its entrance by two batteries. The rooms for the accommodation of bathers are commodious, and four warm salt-water baths have been erected: also a plunging and shower bath; to which are attached convenient waiting and dressing rooms. The pier forms a very delightful promenade, and is accordingly the favourite walk of the company. The sea-views are very fine, and in good weather the cliffs of Calais may be seen, though at the distance of 30 miles. The walks along the shore towards East Cliff, are also extremely agreeable. The assembly-room is situated near the harbour, and is a neat building, with annexed coffee, tea, billiard, and card rooms. The amusements are under the direction of the master of the ceremonies of Margate. There are several valuable and extensive libraries. Here are several excellent boarding schools; also several good day schools for boys, and a charity school for boys and girls. Since the completion of the harbour, the trade of the town has been greatly increased. Boat-building, and the repairing of ships, are carried on sometimes to a considerable extent. Ramsgate is a member of the Cinque Port of Sandwich. Since the peace, vast quantities of provisions have been brought in small boats from the French coast. Population 6031. 5 miles S. Margate.

RAMSMOLT, a village of England, in Suffolk, near Woodbridge.

RAMSTON, a village of England, in Durham and Yorkshire.

RAMTHORPE, a village of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, in Northdale.

RAMTON, a village of England, in Staffordshire, near Wotton Waven.

RANAL, or ORANAL, one of the Sandwich islands, in the North-Pacific ocean. Pop. 20,400. Long. 180. 23 E. Lat. 20. 51. N.

RANARUKK, Point, a cape of Scotland, on the west coast of Kintyre. Long. 5. 36. W. Lat. 55. 41. N.

RANBY, two villages of England, in Nottinghamshire and Lincolnshire.

RANCAJA, a province of Chili, inclosed between the rivers Mapo and Cachapual, and extending from the Andes to the sea. The capital is of the same name, on the river Cachapual. 55 miles S. Santiago.

RANCON, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienna. Population 1000.

RANMALSTOWN, a town of Ireland, county of Antrim, 4 miles W. N. W. Antrim.

RANDAZZO, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Demone, on the Alcantara. Pop. 12,000. 68 miles N. Catania.

RANDERANT, a town of the Prussian province of the Lower Rhine, on the Worm, 10 miles N. W. Jullers. Population 2200.

RANDERS, a trading town of Denmark, in North Jutland, on the Guden. It has a considerable trade in corn. Population above 4000. 30 miles N. by W. Aarhus.

RANDOLPH, a county of the United States, in the north-west part of Virginia. Population 2654. Slaves 111—2d. In the central part of North Carolina. Population 10,112, including 799 slaves—3d. Of Illinois. Population 7573—4th. Of Georgia. Population 7573, including 1826 slaves—The name also of several townships.

RANDWICK, a hamlet of England, in Gloucestershire. Population 804.

RANGASUTTE, the capital of a district of the same name in Bengal, between the rivers which fall into the Brahmapootra. Long. 90. E. Lat. 20. 0. N.

RANGWORTHY, a village of England, in Gloucestershire, 10 miles from Dursley.

RANGOON, a city and principal port of the Birman empire, province of Pegu, on the Irrawaddy river, about 30 miles from the sea. It has a citadel, surrounded by a stockade 14 feet high. The streets are rather narrow, but straight, and paved with brick. The houses are constructed of timber, and raised several feet from the ground. Ship-building is carried on to a great extent. There is both a Portuguese and Armenian church in the town, which serve for Christians of all denominations. Population 30,000. Long. 90. 0. E. Lat. 16. 47. N.

RANOW, a village of England, in Cheshire.

RANATON, a village of England, in Dorsetshire, near Shroton.

RAN L'ETARE, a town of France, 24 miles S. E. Nancy. Population 2000.

RAPALLO, a town of the Sardinian states, 18 miles E. S. E. Genoa. Population 2000.

RARAG, a dilapidated village of Ireland, county of Donegal. The cathedral was built in the 11th century. 21 miles N. E. Donegal.

RARIN, a river of the United States, in Louisiana, which falls into White river. Another which falls into the Missouri.

RAYDON, a county of the United States, in Louisiana, of Red river. Population 2200.

RAPPANHAMOCK, a navigable river of Virginia, which flows into the Chesapeake.

RAPPENSWIL, a town of Switzerland, canton of St. Gall. Population 2000.

RARITAN, a river of the United States, in New Jersey, formed by two branches, which unite about 20 miles above New Brunswick. It flows by New Brunswick and gradually becomes broader and deeper, it passes Ansted, and then widens into Raritan Bay, which is immediately connected with the ocean.

RAS AL KHREMA, a town of Arabia, on the Persian gulf, the capital of the Firsat coast. It stands on a sandy peninsula, and is de-ended by batteries. There is a suburb of bamboo huts, roofed with date-tree leaves. It is defended by several castles, one the residence of the chief, and another a protection for naval stores. This place, in consequence of the depredations of the pirates, was twice taken by the British. Long 55. 30 E. Lat. 25. 49 N.

RANDELL, a village of England, in Westmoreland, near Ship.

RASHLEY and RASHTON, two villages of England, in Devonshire and Shropshire.

RASSEH, a town of France, department of the Orne. Population 2200.

RASTANT, a town of Germany, in Baden, on the Murg. It has a magnificent mansion, formerly occupied by the princes of Baden.
It has manufactures of carriages, fire-arms, mathematical and philosophical instruments;
also silver and plated wares; and has been the scene of repeated diplomatic conferences.
Pop. 4200. 20 miles N. N. E. Strasburg.

RATZBURG, a town of East Prussia, on the Guber. Population 2200.

RASTHORN, a village of England, East
Riding of Yorkshire, near York Wolds.

RASTRICK, a township of England, West
Riding of Yorkshire. Population 2790.

RATAN, a harbour of the north of Sweden, government of Umea. Lat. 63. 33. 43. N.

RATBY, a village of England, in Leicestershire, 4 miles from Leicester.

RATCLIFF, five villages of England, one in Lancashire, two in Nottinghamshire, one in Middlesex, and one in Leicestershire.

RATHANGAN, a town of Ireland, county of Kildare, 28 miles S. W. Dublin.

RATHNY, a village and parish of England, in Lincolnshire, S. W. of Louth.

RATHCORMICK, a town of Ireland, county of Cork, 14 miles N. Cork.

RATHFRY, a town of Ireland, county of Wicklow, 26 miles S. S. E. Dublin.

RATHENAU, a town of Prussia, in Brandenburg, on the Havel. Here are manufactures of woollen, linen, leather, and gloves.
Population 4100. 42 miles W. Berlin.

RATHER, or NETHER, a river of England, in Yorkshire. It joins the Dent.

RATHLIN ISLAND, an island about seven miles from the north coast of Ireland, six miles long, and scarcely a mile wide.

RATHMEL, a village of England, in Yorkshire, 3 miles from Long Preston.

RATHMINES, a village of Ireland, about 14 miles from Dublin castle.

RATHO, a village and parish of Scotland, in Mid Lothian, 8 miles W. by S. Edinburgh.

RATHON, a town of Prussian Silesia, on the Oder, 67 miles S. E. Breslau. Pop. 3500.

RATISBON, an ancient city of Germany, long known as the place of meeting for the diet of the empire. It is in Bavaria, on the Danube, opposite to the influx of the Regen.
It is still surrounded with an earthen mound, though not tenable against an army. It is built of stone, but it has all the defects of an old town; the streets being narrow and crooked, and the houses high and old fashioned. The town-house is gloomy. The best edifices are the cathedral and the church of St. Emerau, the former a venerable Gothic pile, the latter containing a number of good paintings.

After these come the episcopal residence; a building formerly the Jesuits college; the arsenal and the Haidplatz, where tournaments were given in the days of chivalry. Here is a public drawing-school, and two public libraries; also several hospitals. The town has a number of breweries and distilleries; also extensive dock-yards for the building of boats and lighters, but few manufactures. It has also a considerable trade on the Danube.
In the river is an island crossed by a bridge of great length, extending across the Danube, and connecting Ratisbon with its northern suburb, called Stadt am Hof. Population
22,000. 63 miles N. N. E. Munich.

RATLEY, two villages of England, in Buckinghamshire and Warwickshire.

RATLINGCOTE, a village of England, in Kent, near Nonington.

RATOATH, a town of Ireland, county of Meath, 12 miles N. W. Dublin.

RATSEY and RATTEY, two villages of England, in Yorkshire and Sussex.

RATTENBORO, a village of England, in Essex, near Havericay.

RATTEVROW, two villages of England, in Northumberland and Cumberland.

RATTINGEN, a town of the Prussian province of Cleves and Berr, 4 miles N. E. Dusseldorf. Population 3800.

RATTRAY, a parish and straggling village of Scotland, Perthshire, 4 miles W. Alth.

RATTRAY HEAD, a dangerous promontory of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire, 7 miles E.
Kinnaird's Head.

RATYU, a village of England, 3 miles from Leicester.

RATZEBURG, a town of Denmark, duchy of Lauenburg, 11 miles S. by E. Lubeck. Population 2000.

RATZKVE, a small town of Hungary, on the Danube, 17 miles S. W. Buda.

RAYA, a town of Bulgaria, on the Danube.
Population 2000.

RAUDNITZ, a town of Bohemia, on the Elbe, 23 miles N. N. W. Prague. Pop. 1100.

RAVEL WATER, a river of Ireland, which runs into the Mayne.

RAVELLO, a town of Italy, 23 miles S. E.
Naples. Population 1700.

RAVELY, GREAT and LITTLE, villages of England, in Huntingdonshire.

RAVENHALL, RAVENFIELD, and RAVEN-
ISHAM, three villages of England, in Lincolnshire, Yorkshire, and Norfolk.

RAVENNA, a large and well known town in Italy, States of the Church, situated near the mouth of the Montone. The situation is pleasant, but the air is unhealthy, from the marshy nature of the ground. The most interesting objects in it are the monuments of antiquity, in particular the ruins of the palace of Theodoric and the Porta Aurea, a splendid gate of marble, built by the Romans. The cathedral is a fine modern edifice, having its nave supported by four ranges of columns of Grecian marble. The church of St Vitale is likewise supported by pillars of Grecian marble, brought from Constantinople. Another church, called the Rotonda, is very ancient. Ravenna was made a Roman colony by Augustus, was the seat of the emperor Honorius, and was successively occupied by the barbarians who invaded Italy. Its manufactures, chiefly of silk, are inconsiderable. Population 12,000. 70 miles N. E. Florence.

RAVENNA, a town of the United States, Portage county, Ohio, on the Cuyahoga. It has a woollen manufactory. Lat. 41. 17. N.

RAVENSBURG, a town of Germany, 21 miles E. N. E. Constence. Population 3500.

RAVENSSBURG, a river of England, in Kent, which runs into the Thames.

RAVENSTOCK, RAVENSDEN, RAVENSFIELD, three villages of England, in Cheshire, Bedfordshire, and Yorkshire.

RAVENSSASS, a market town of England, in Cumberland, at the mouths of the rivers Irt and Esk. Population not separately returned. 204 miles N. N. W. London.

RAVENSTEIN, a town of the Netherlands, North Brabant. Population 1500.

RAVENSTONDALE, a village and parish of England, in Westmoreland.

RAVENTON and RAVENTON, two villages of England, in Lancashire and Buckinghamshire.

RAVEY, the Hydrantes of the Greeks, a celebrated river of Hindostan. It joins the Indus, after a course of 500 miles.

RAUCENY, NORTH and SOUTH, two villages of England, in Lincolnshire.

RAUCHING, a village of England, in Nottinghamshire, near Higham Parson.

RAVILPANDY, a large and populous town of Hindostan, province of the Punjab.

RAVITZ, or RAWITZ, a town of Prussian Poland, near the confines of Siberia. It is fortified by a wall and ditch, has 4 gates, is regularly built, and the streets generally paved. Pop. 2000. 55 miles S. Posen.

RAVITZ, a port of European Russia, in Finland, 6 miles N. by W. Abo. Pop. 1700.

RAW, a village of England, on the coast, near Hasleholme, Durham.

RAWA, a town of Poland, 40 miles S. W. Warsaw. Population 1800.

RAWAK, a small island in the Pacific ocean, off the north coast of Waygion.

RAWAY, or BRIDGE TOWN, a lively commercial village of the United States, in Middlesex county, New Jersey. Houses 60.

RAWCLIFF, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1000.

RAWCLIFFE, NORTH and SOUTH, two hamlets of England, in Leicestershire.

RAWDON, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1000.

RAWFERN, a village of England, in Essex, S. E. of Bellingham.

RAWSTON, two villages of England, in Derbyshire and Dorsetshire.

RAWTHWATE, a village of England, in Cumberland, S. of Freby.

RAYLEIGH, a village and parish of England, in Essex. Population 1200.

RAYNE, OLD, a small town of Scotland, Aberdeenshire, 84 miles W. N. W. Aberdeen.

RE, a small island near the west coast of France, opposite to La Rochelle, 12 miles long and 3 broad. Population 17,000.

REA, a village of England, in Cornwall, near Truro.

REA, a river of England, in Worcester and Staffordshire. It joins the Tame.

READING, a market town and borough, the chief town of the county of Berks, in England, on the river Kennet, at its junction with the Thames. The principal streets of the town are spacious, and well paved and lighted. There are three churches; St Mary's, regarded as the most ancient and generally admired for its tesselated tower; St Giles's, which was much damaged in the reign of Charles I. by the cannon of the parliamentary army; and St Lawrence's. Besides these churches, there are meeting-houses for dissenters of all denominations, nearly one half of the population being either Quakers, Anabaptists, Independents, or Methodists. The town-hall is a neat building. A new county jail has recently been erected. The bridewell was formerly a priory. Of the once celebrated abbey of Reading, which occupied a circumference of nearly half a mile, nothing now remains but fragments of massive walls, composed of flint and gravel. Various charitable institutions have been founded at different times at Reading. The principal is a work-house, founded by a legacy left for that purpose. The trade is considerable. Reading had formerly woollen manufactories, which have now entirely declined. There is, however, an extensive gauze and ribbon manufactory, and also manufactories of sailcloth, backing, and pins. It sends two members to parliament. Pop. 12,867. 39 miles W. London.

READING, a town of the United States, and capital of Berks county, Pennsylvania, on the Schuylkill. It contains a court-house, a jail, 2 banks, a large edifice for the public offices, and four churches for Lutherans, Calvinists, Roman Catholics, and Friends. It has a manufactory of hats. Pop. 3403. 54 miles N. W. Philadelphia. Also various townships.

REALAJO, a town of Spanish America, in Nicaragua, on the Pacific ocean, on a river of the same name, which is deep and spacious. It is a pretty large town, has three churches, and an hospital, surrounded by a very fine garden. 18 miles S. W. Leon. Long. 87. 403 W. Lat. 12. 45 N.

REALMONT, a town of France, department of the Tarn. Population 2000.

REALVILLE, a town of France, 6 miles N. E. Montauban. Population 2500.

REBEQUE, a town of the Netherlands, in South Brabant. Population 1200.

REBENANT, a town of Italy, 12 miles S. Ancona. Population 1000.

Recco, a town of Italy, 10 miles E. S. E. Genoa. Population 2000.

Reche, a little market town of England, in Cambridgeshire.

Rechnitz, a town of Hungary, 7 miles S. S. W. Guntz. Population 2200.

Reckleva, a village and parish of England, in the county of Kent. Pop. 260.

Red Deer River, a river of North America, which empties itself into Red Deer lake.

Red Islands, two islands, one near the east coast of Labrador; the other near the west coast of Newfoundland.

Red Lake, a lake of North America. Long. 95. 10. W. Lat. 47. 40. N.

Red River, a river of the United States, in North America. It joins Lake Winnipeg.

Red River, two rivers of the United States, in Kentucky.—Also two in Canada.

Red River, or Natchitoches, a large river of North America, in Louisiana, which rises about Long. 105. W. Lat. 35. N., and flows into the Mississippi, 240 miles above New Orleans, in Long. 91. 48. W. Lat. 31. 13. N. after a winding course of nearly 2000 miles.

Red Sea, an extensive gulf of the Indian ocean, dividing Arabia from the opposite coast of Africa. It extends in a north-north-west direction, from the straits of Babel-mandel to Suez, where it is only 80 miles distant from the Mediterranean; and the isthmus between these seas forms the only connecting point of the long continents of Asia and Africa. Its length cannot be estimated at less than 1400 miles, lying between the 12th and the 30th degrees of north latitude. Its breadth does not exceed 200 miles in any part.

Redmay, a village and parish of England, in Hertfordshire. Population 1744.

Redmich, a hamlet of England, in Worcestershire.

Redman, a township in Lancashire. Pop. 374. 44 miles S. E. by E. Manchester.

Redmea, a town of Portugal, 15 miles S. by E. Coimbra. Population 2000.

Redmyn and Redman, two villages of England, in Somerset and Cumberland.

Redmanshall, a village of England, county of Durham, 6 miles W. N. W. Stockton.

Redmills, a village of England, in Leicestershire, 13 miles N. by E. Melton Mowbray.

Rednitz, a river of Franconia. It falls into the Main below Bamberg.

Redon, a town of France, department of the Ille and Vilaine, on the Vilaine, 40 miles S. W. Rennes. Population 4000.

Redondo, a town of Portugal, in Alentejo, 14 miles E. N. E. Evora. Population 2700.

Redoven, a market town and parish of England, in Cornwall. It consists chiefly of one long street. The parish church is a neat building. There are, besides, meeting-houses for the Baptists, Methodists, and Quakers.

Some remains of a chapel, dedicated to St. Rumbold, are still to be seen in the town. It has a public school; also a Sunday school. Redruth owes nearly all its importance to the neighbouring mines of tin and copper. Population 6007. 9 miles W. Truro.

Redsham, Gray and Little, two adjoining villages of England, in Suffolk.

Redstone, a flourishing town of the United States, in Pennsylvania, on the Alleghenys. It has flour-mills, a rope-walk, and a manufactory of paper. Population 500.

Redwood River, a river of America, which runs into the Wabash.

Redworth and Reud, two villages of England, in Durham and Suffolk.

Reedness, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 683.

Reedy Creek, a river of New Jersey, which runs into the Atlantic.

Reedy Island, an island of the United States, in the river Delaware.

Reefham, a market town and parish of England, county of Norfolk. Pop. 345.

Rees, a town of the Prussian states, 11 miles E. Cleves. Population 2300.

Rega, a river of Germany, which falls into the Baltic, near Treptow.

Regen, a considerable river of Germany, which falls into the Danube.

Regen, Circle of the, a province of Bavaria, adjacent to Bohemia, with the circle of the Upper Main on the north-west, and that of the Lower Danube on the south-west. Area 3800 square miles. Population 358,000.

Reggio, Regium Julii, a considerable town of Naples, and capital of Calabria Ultra, on a strait which separates Sicily from the mainland. Its public edifices are all religious, consisting of a cathedral, 11 churches, 7 convents, and 2 colleges. Reggio was almost totally destroyed by an earthquake in 1703. Population 16,500. 6 miles S. E. Messina. Long. 16. 53. E. Lat. 38. 6. N.

Reggio, a town of Italy, capital of a small duchy of the same name, on the river Tersouze, surrounded with a rampart. The streets are regular, and bordered with arcades or piazzas. The only public edifices of interest are the cathedral with its paintings, the church of St. Prospero, that of the Augustine friars, the town-house, the theatre, the Porta Nuova. Pop. 13,000. 12 miles W. N. W. Modena.

Regis, St. John or, an island of the St. Lawrence, in Lower Canada.

Regnitz, a river of Bavarian Franconia, which falls into the Main below Bamberg.

Reichenau, an island of the Lake of Constance. Population 1400.

Reichenau, a town of Upper Lotharia, near the confines of Bohemia. Pop. 3300.

Reichenau, a town of Bohemia, 16 miles E. N. E. Reichenstadt. Population 3300.

Reichenbach, one of the four governments into which Prussian Silesia was divided in 1815. It is in the west of that province, and comprises the county of Glatz, the principalities of Münsterberg, Brieg, and Schweidnitz, and a considerable part of that of Jauer. Area 2350 square miles. Pop. 420,000. The chief town, of the same name, is 11 miles S. E. Schweidnitz. Pop. 3300.

REICHENBACH, a town of Saxony, 13 miles N. N. E. Plauen. Population 3300.

REICHENBERG, a town of Bohemia, circle of Bautzen, on the Neisse. It has three churches, and 12,000 inhabitants. It has four great manufacturing establishments for woollens, with fulling-mills and dye-houses. 62 miles N. N. E. Prague.

REICHENHALL, a town of Bavaria, on the Sala, 65 miles E. S. E. Munich. Pop. 2400.

REICHENWESER, a town of France, 4 miles N. N. W. Colmar. Population 1750.

REICHSTADT, a town of Bohemia, 40 miles N. N. E. Prague. Population 1200.

REIKIAVÍK, a village on the south-west coast of Iceland. Population 500.

REINERZ, a town of Prussian Silesia, county of Glatz. Population 1000.

REINSBURG, a town of Prussia, on the Rhine, 40 miles N. N. W. Berlin. Pop. 1700.

REINSAVA, a large and populous town of Java, on the north coast.

REMEDIOS, a city of New Granada, 89 miles N. W. Santa Fe. Housekeepers 500.

—Another city of New Granada.

REMIEN, a town of the Netherlands, on the Moselle. Population 1600.

REMYEUX, a town of France, on the Moselle, 14 miles S. E. Epinal. Pop. 1000.

REMSY, a river of Wales, which falls into the Severn a little below Cardiff.

REMO, St., a seaport of the Sardinian states, in Genoa. Pop. 7500. 66 miles S. E. Genoa.

REMY, St., a town of France, department of the Mouths of the Rhone, remarkable for nothing but its circular promenade. Population 5100. 42 miles N. W. Marseilles.

REMY, St., a town of France, department of the Pays de Dome. Population 2700.

RENAISEK, a town of France, on the Ronson, 6 miles W. Roanne. Pop. 1700.

RENAIX, a town of the Netherlands, in East Flanders. Pop. 10,000. 7 miles S. Oudenarde.

RENCHEM, a town of Germany, on the Rensch. Population 2000.

RENNES, REXPUR, RENNHOL, three villages of England, in Gloucestershire, Suffolk, and Bedfordshire.

RENNETAM, a village and parish of England, in Suffolk. Population 249.

RENNESBO, a town of Denmark, 50 miles N. Hamburg, on the Eyder. Its chief manufacture is of pottery. Population 4500.

RENNES, a county of Scotland, which extends in length from S. E. to N. W. 31½ miles, and 15½ broad. It is bounded E. by Lanarkshire, S. by the county of Ayr, and on the remaining sides it is washed by the firth of Clyde, except a small portion of about 1200 acres. Area 241 square miles, one half of which is arable. The face of the country is diversified with hill and dale, and with wood and water. The hills of more elevated district is by far the most extensive. It forms the south and west parts of the county. It has no rugged or lofty mountains. There is, besides, a part of the county formed of gently rising hills, which being interspersed with various coloured copes, and often watered at the bottom by winding rivulets, present prospects at once rich and various. The flat lands lie along the Clyde, the White Cart, Black Cart, and Grange, which, with the Lavers, constitute the chief rivers. This county abounds in coal, lime, and freestone. The inhabitants are much devoted to trade, and in a particular manner to the different branches of the weaving manufacture, almost all the towns and villages being engaged in the prosecution of the linen or cotton trade. Pop. 112,170.

RENFREWSHIRE, an ancient royal burgh and parish of Scotland, in Renfrewshire, near the mouth of the Cart and the river Clyde. It is recently built, consisting of one street, and several bye-lanes. The principal branch of trade is thread, but there are also soap and candle works. There are about 200 looms employed in the muslin weaving. On the castle hill stood a palace of Robert II., of which not a vestige now remains. It unites with Glasgow, Dumbarton, and Rutherglen, in sending a member to parliament. Population 2616. 6 miles W. Glasgow.

RENINGEN, a town of West Flanders, 8 miles N. by W. Ypres. Population 2000.

RENNES, a large town of France, capital of the department of the Ille and Vilaine, situated at the confluence of these two rivers, the latter dividing the town into two parts, connected together by bridges. The part built on the left bank is called the Lower town. That on the right bank, called the Upper town, stands on an eminence, and forms the finest and most considerable part of the city. It has several fine squares, meriting the notice of the traveller. The principal promenades are called the Cours and the Labor. The principal public edifices of Rennes are the cathedral, dedicated to St Peter, with its lofty towers and its relics; the building, formerly the house of meeting for the parliament of Brittany; the town-hall, the arsenal, and the college formerly belonging to the Jesuits. Rennes is the seat of a small university. The manufactures consist of sailcloth, blankets, hats, thread, stockings, gloves, hardware, all of which are exported. Pop. 30,000. 60 miles N. Nantes. Long. 1. 36. W. Lat. 48. 7. N.

RENO, a river of Italy, which joins the Po.

RENSSELAER, a county of the United States, in New York. Pop. 30,300. Chief towns Troy and Lansingburgh.

REXTOWN, a village of Scotland, Dumfriesshire, 3 miles N. W. Dumfries.

REXWICK, a village of England, in Cumberland, on the Raven.

REXT, a small but trading town of European Turkey, 35 miles W. S. W. Ismail.

REZELLE, a town of France, on the Garonne. Pop. 3500. 24 miles S. E. Bourdeaux.

REZEN, a town of Prussia, in Brandenburg, 10 miles E. Frankfurt on the Oder. Population 2300.

REZTON, once a considerable town, now a village and parish of England, in Derbyshire. The church is a handsome Gothic building, with a high spire. Population 2164.

REQUENA, a town of Spain; province of Cuenca. It has straight streets, houses tolerably built, and a neat square. Population 6040. 41 miles W. by N. Valencia.

REQUISAT, a town of France, department of the Aveyron. Population 3600.

RESEM, the capital of Ghilan, in Persia. Houses 2000. Long. 49. 50. E. Lat. 37. 20. N.

RESINA, a town of Italy, and built partly on the site of the ancient Herculaneum, 5 miles E. Naples. Population 7800.

RESOLUTION ISLAND, one of the Society islands, in the South Pacific ocean, 4 miles long.

RESTORATION COVE, a bay on the north-west coast of North America, in Burke's canal, not far from Fitzhugh's sound.

RETFRON, a market town, borough, and parish of England, Nottinghamshire, on both sides of the river Lile, over which there is a bridge. The church of East Retford is a neat Gothic building. The town-hall is plain, but handsome and commodious. It has a free school, an hospital, and an almshouse. The church of West Retford is dedicated to St. Michael. It has also an hospital. Retford sends a member to parliament. Number of voters 112. Population 2465. 30 miles N. Nottingham.

RETHEN, a town of France, department of the Ardennes, on the Aisne. It has manufactures of woollens, cottons, linen, hats, and leather. Pop. 4900. 24 miles N.E. Rheims.

RETIMO, a seaport of European Turkey, on the N. coast of the island of Candia. Pop. 6000.

RETZ, a town of Prussia, province of Brandenburg. Population 1400.

RETZ, a well built town of Lower Austria, on the Theya. It contains, with its surrounding parish, 2200 inhabitants.

RETZAT, one of the circles into which the kingdom of Bavaria was divided in 1808, to the north of the Danube. Area 3400 square miles. Population 520,000.

REVEL, the capital of Esthonia, a province in the north-west of European Russia, on a small bay of the gulf of Finland. It has an excellent and well defended harbour. The town is divided into three parts, called the town, the suburb, and the Donberg. The streets are narrow and irregular. The churches are 18 in number, of which six are for the Greek faith, and the others for the Lutheran. Here is a public library, a military academy, and several schools, infirmaries, and poor houses. Population 13,000. 200 miles W. Petersburg.

REVEL, a town of France. It has manufactures of linen, woollens, stockings, and caps. Population 3800. 30 miles S. E. Toulouse.

REVELLO, a town of Piedmont, 9 miles N. W. Saluzzo. Population 6000.

REVERA, a town of Austrian Italy, in the Milanese, on the Po. Population 3300.

REVERE, a town of France, 9 miles N. W. Bar sur Orpain.

REVILLA GIGEDO, ISLAND OF, a large island on the broken coast of North-west America, 50 miles in length, and 25 in breadth. Long. 228. 27. to 229. 15. E. Lat. 55. 6. to 55. 55. N.

REVELLY, a town of France, department of the Indre. Population 1700.

REVIN, a town of France, department of the Ardennes. Population 1800.

RIEVA, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, about six miles from the sea. It has manufactures of silk, cottons, leather, hats, as well as of brandy and liquors. Population 20,000. 8 miles W. Tarragona.

RIESS, a principality of the interior of Germany, in Upper Saxony, divided into two parts, of which the one adjoins the Prussian, the other the Bavarian territories. Area 609 square miles. Population 35,000.

RIESS, one of the largest rivers of Switzerland, which issues from the lake Lucerne, and falls into the Aar, near Bruck.

RIEWINGEN, a town of Germany, in Wurttemberg, on the Elsenz. It has manufactures of woollen, linen, cotton, &c. The church is in the Gothic style, and the town-hall is also of old date. Population 8300.

RYE, a river of England, in Wilts, which joins the Thames at Cricklade.

REYES, a city of the Caracas, in Venezuela, 40 miles S. S. W. Caracas.

REYNOJA, a town of Spain, 35 miles N. W. Pavia. Population 1500.

RHAYADER, a market town of Wales, in the county of Radnor. It derived its chief importance from its castle, of which no vestige remains, except the fosse. Population 647. 16 miles N. W. Radnor.

RHFA, a county of the United States, in East Tennessee. Population 2504.

RHEENX, a town of the Netherlands, 6 miles E. N. E. Arnheim. Population 3400.

RHELENEN, or RHEKEN, a town of the Netherlands, 22 miles S. E. Utrecht. Pop. 2200.

RHEIDT, a town of the Prussian province of Cleves and Berg, on the Rhine. Pop. 3600.

RHEIMS, a large and ancient city of France, department of the Marne, on the Vesle, in a fine plain. The form of the city is oblong. It is surrounded with a ditch and earthen mound. A considerable part of the space inclosed within the walls is occupied by gardens and walks. The closely built part, not one half of the space inclosed, is a regular oval, of which the square called the Royal square may be considered the centre. The streets are in general wide and straight; in some quarters, however, they are winding and narrow. One of the streets is the very long street, which leads in a straight line, across the whole width of the town, from the eastern to the western gate, passing through the centre of the Royal square. The town has six gates, all of a fine appearance, from the spacious and shady avenues leading to the city. The most remarkable public building is the cathedral, a vast Gothic edifice of the 12th century, and one of the finest spe-ciens of that kind of architecture in France. The church of St Remy is worth notice, both for its architecture, and as the depository of the famous phial of oil with which the kings are anointed. The episcopal palace, near the cathedral, is a fine building. The town-hall is remarkable for its vast size, and the beauty of its front. Rheims contains three hospitals, and presents to the antiquary a considerable field for research. A university, founded here in 1517, is now replaced by a royal college, or high school. The chief manufactures are cotton and woollens; also hats and stockings. Pop. 33,000. 160 miles E. by N. Paris.

RHEINA, a town of Prussian Westphalia, on the Rhine. Population 2100.

RHEINBERGEN, a town of the Prussian states, government of Cleves. Pop. 1700.

RHEINEN, a small town of Switzerland, canton of St Gall, 24 miles E. S. E. Constance.

RHEINFELDEN, a town of Switzerland, on the Rhine, 9 miles E. Bale. Pop. 1200.

RHEINWILS, a fortress of the Prussian grand duchy of the Lower Rhine, on an island in the Lower Rhine, at St Goar.

RHEINWILS, a town of Germany, 7 miles E. S. E. Darmstadt. Population 1600.

RHEINWILS, a town of Prussia, government of Coblenz, on the Rhine. Pop. 800.

RHEINWILS, i. e. the Valley of the Rhine, a district of the Swiss canton of St Gall, lying along the Rhine, from the lake of Constance to the lordship of Sax. It is above 16 miles long, and 4 broad. Population 15,000.

RHINE, the greatest river in Europe, after the Danube and the Volga. It has its source in the central and highest part of Switzerland, on the north-east side of Mount St Gothard, and is joined, almost at the outlet of its course, by a surprising number of rivulets. It passes through the lake of Constance, receiving a great addition to its volume, by the junction of the Aar, the Reuss, and the Limmat; and lower down in its course, by the Neckar and Maine on the side of Germany, and the Moselle on that of France. Continuing its course to the north, it enters the kingdom of the Netherlands, and turning to the west, divides into two great branches, of which the southern takes the name of the Waal, receives the Maas, becomes like an arm of the sea, and flows into the German ocean by Dort, Rotterdam, and Willemstadt. The northern, or less considerable branch, is further divided, first above, and afterwards below Arnhem; and the name of Rhine is finally retained, by a small slow flowing water, which passes Utrecht and Leyden in its way to the sea, or rather to the sands near Catwyk. From its source to Mentz, it is called the Upper Rhine, and from Mentz to Holland, the Lower Rhine. The course of the Rhine is about 200 miles.

RHINE, CIRCLES OF, a province subject to Bavaria, to the west of the Rhine, between Weissenburg in the south, and Worms in the north. It was ceded to Bavaria in 1814. Area 1000 square miles. Pop. 365,000.

RHINE is also the name of a province of the grand duchy of Hesse, to the north of the Bavarian circle of the Rhine. Area 1000 square miles. Population 153,000.

RHINE, LOWER, GRAND DUCHY OF, or, a province of the Prussian states, composed of territories taken in 1814, from France and the grand duchy of Berg, and assigned to Prussia by the congress of Vienna. It is bounded N. by the province of Cleves, and Berg, E. by Nassau and Hesse-Darmstadt, S. by the French, and W. by the Dutch frontier. Area 6700 square miles. Pop. 650,000. The capital of the whole is Aix-la-Chapelle.

RHINE, CIRCLES OF THE LOWER, and UPPER, two divisions of the German empire, abolished in 1806.

RHINE, LOWER, a department in the north-east of France, consisting of the north part of Alsace, and forming an oblong tract. Area 1900 square miles. Pop. 440,000.

RHINE, UPPER, another department in the north-east of France, of an oblong form, the Rhine flowing along its eastern limit, and the long chain of the Vosges extending on its western side, in a course nearly parallel to that river. Area 1700 square miles. Protestants 57,000; Jews 10,000; Anabaptists 3000; Catholics 250,000.

RHO, a small but populous town of Italy, on the Olona, 8 miles W. Milan.

RHODE ISLAND, including Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, one of the United States, which is situated between 41. 22. and 42. 0. N. lat., and between 6. 0. and 6. 50. E. long. It is bounded N. and E. by Massachusetts, S. by the Atlantic, and W. by the Connecticut. It extends 40 miles from the Atlantic on the south, to the Massachusetts line of boundary on the north, and the greatest width is 37 miles. It contains 5 counties. Its chief towns are, Bristol, East Greenwich, Newport, Providence, and South Kingstown. The face of the country is mostly level, except in the north-west part, which is hilly and rocky. The soil is generally better adapted to grazing than tillage. Here are found some of the finest cattle in New England. Corn, rye, barley, oats, and in some places wheat, are produced. Iron ore is found; also copper ore and coal. The manufactures consist chiefly of iron, cotton, woollen, paper, oils, spirits, and straw bonnets. The exports for the year 1791, were 470,131 dollars; 1800, 1,322,945; and 1810, 1,331,576. They fell off owing to the war with Great Britain; but they have since increased. The imports are West India produce, logwood from Honduras bay, and the manufactures of Europe and of India. The climate of this state is somewhat milder than that of Massachusetts, the cold of winter being less intense, and the heat of summer less oppressive. There are numerous dairies, and the butter and cheese is of an excellent quality. Fruit thrives here extremely, especially the apple, of which more cider is made than is required for home consumption.

The wild animals, deprived of their cover, have disappeared. The shores and rivers abound with fish. The rivers are Pawtucket, Providence, Pawtuxet, Pawtucket, and Wood river. There are also Narraganset and Providence bays, in which are numerous islands. The most considerable towns are Providence, Newport, Bristol, Warren, South Kingston, East Greenwich, Smithfield, and the villages of Pawtucket and Pawtuxet. The harbours are Newport, Providence, Wickford, Pawtuxet, Bristol, and Warren.

	Population	According to the 10.
1730,	17,935	2,433
1774,	59,674	5,213
1800,	69,122	380 7,301 free Blacks.
1810,	76,931	163 2,609

RHODE ISLAND, the island from which the above state takes its name, is situated in Narraganset bay, near the coast of Massachusetts. It is about 15 miles from north to south, and 3½ wide, and is divided into three townships, Newport, Portsmouth, and Middletown. Long. 71. 20. W. Lat. 41. 25. N.

RHODES, an extensive island of the Mediterranean, near the coast of Asia Minor. In ancient times, it was one of the most celebrated of the states of Greece, and distinguished above all others by its wealth, commerce, and naval power. It was among the last states which yielded to the Romans; and she was allowed even to enjoy the forms of liberty, till the reign of Vespasian. The island became one of the last retreats to the knights of St John of Jerusalem, who baffled the efforts of Mahomet II. the conqueror of Constantinople, and were not reduced by Solymann the Great, till after one of the most memorable sieges recorded in history. Rhodes, which occupies so great a place in history, is reduced by the oppressions of the Porte, and the arbitrary exactions of its governors, to a state of the most wretched poverty, notwithstanding its great natural advantages. In the centre rises Mount Attandra, which forms the pinnacle of a range of mountains, on which grow those forests of pine which supplied the ancient navies of the Rhodians, and are still sent in great quantities to the arsenal at Constantinople. Beneath this range rises a tract of lower hills, which produce some of that pernicious wind so much prized by the ancients. The tract beneath, forming the greater portion of the island, slopes gradually down to the sea, and being watered by numerous streams descending from the higher regions, is capable, under proper cultivation, of producing the most luxuriant crops. The oppression of the pacha, and the insecurity of property, have rendered these gifts of nature of no avail. A great part of the island is left entirely waste, though the natural fertility of the soil is great. Corn and olives are raised, but not in sufficient quantity for the wants of the inhabitants. The quantity of cotton raised is barely sufficient for the supply of this island. The exportation of wine, figs, and other fruit, is, however, considerable. The climate of Rhodes is delightful. The capital is inhabited chiefly by Turks. There are five villages occupied by Mussulmans. Five towns and 41 villages are inhabited by Greeks. The families in the island are stated at 4700 Turks, 2500 Greeks, and 100 Jews, making in all 7300 families, which, at five persons to each family, would amount to 36,500. On the contrary, Mr. Turner calculates the whole number at 20,000.

RHODES, a city, and capital of the island of the same name. From a distance, Rhodes presents some vestiges of its ancient grandeur. On entering the city, however, scarcely any thing is found to correspond with the expectations thus excited. The streets are narrow and winding, devoid at once of regularity and elegance. The inhabitants consist of 5000 Turks and 1600 Jews. The state of the buildings bears marks of the desolation occasioned by tyranny. One half of the houses in the city are in ruins, and one half of those in the suburbs uninhabited. The principal public buildings which remain are the church of St John, and another; the palace of the grand masters, and a convent, all large massy buildings, in the Gothic style. The churches are converted into mosques; and a large hospital is used by the Turks for a granary. Of all these buildings, the old palace is the largest and handsomest. The suburbs, occupied by the Greek inhabitants, are very beautiful, consisting of good stone houses, with gardens well stocked with all the fruits of the climate. Rhodes has two good harbours. They are separated only by a mole, running obliquely out into the sea. The two extremities are defended by towers, distant 200 feet from each other; while in the centre of the mole there is a square tower, 120 feet high. Long. 26. 12. E. Lat. 36. 26. N.

RHONZE, a town of France, capital of the department of the Aveyron. It is a gloomy place, with narrow and dark streets. It has two squares, and the cathedral is tolerably built. It has also a lycee or academy, a public library, a neat school, and a small exchange. Pop. 4500. 70 miles N.E. Toulouse.

RHOE, MICALE, one of the Sthetland isles, on the south of the Mainland, 24 miles in circumference, containing 14 families, or 63 inhabitants. Little Rhoe adjoins it.

RHODNE, a great river in the south of Europe, which rises in the central and highest part of Switzerland, at the foot of Mount Furg, only five miles from the source of the Rhine. It flows in a western direction, through a long and wide valley of the Swiss canton of the Valais, and being swelled by a variety of mountain streams, it passes through the lake of Geneva. Flowing southward, and being joined by the Saône and other streams, such as the Saône and Durance, it discharges itself, after a course of nearly 300 miles, by three mouths, into the part of the Mediterranean called the Gulf of Lyons.

RHONNE, a department in the south-east of France, bounded by the departments of the Saône and Loire, the Ain, the Isère, and the Loire. Area 1050 square miles. Pop. 320,000.

RHOŶE, MOUTHS OF THE, a department in the south-east of France, formed of a part of Provence, and bounded by the Mediterranean and the departments of the Gard, the Vaucluse, and the Var. Area 3000 square miles. Population 293,000.

RHONHOUSE, a village of Scotland, stewartry of Kirkcudbright.

RHUABEN, a village of Wales, in Denbighshire, 6 miles from Wrexham.

RHIDDLAN, a village of Wales, in Flintshire, anciently of considerable importance. It still retains its elective franchise as a contributory borough. It is situated in the vale of Clwyd, its castle, of which some detached towers still remain, was once a place of great strength. Population 1487.

RHYNS, or RHYNS OF GALLOWAY, is a term applied to that peninsula of Wigtonshire, Scotland, formed by the approximation of the bays of Loch Ryan and Glenelgue.

RIAGA, a river of Spain, which runs into the Douro, at Roca.

RIANS, a town of France, 36 miles N.W. Toulon. Population 3200.

RIAZAN, the capital of a government of the same name in European Russia, on the Oka, 123 miles S. S. E. Moscow. It has an unusual number of churches. Population 5000.

RIÑA, a small town of Spain, on the Tormes, 6 miles E. S. E. Salamanca.

RIBADAVIA, a town of Spain, 45 miles S. S. E. Santiago. Population 2400.

RIBADIVO, a town of Spain, in Galicia, at the mouth of the Eo. Population 2000.

RIBATUA, a town of Portugal, province of Entre Minho e Douro. Pop. 2000.

RICHMOND AND RIBbles, two villages of England, in Worcestershire and Lancashire.

RIBBLE, a considerable river of England, which falls into the Irish sea below Preston.

RIBBLETON and RIBBLESTON, villages of England, in Lancashire. Pop. 151-1760.

RIBE, or RIBEX, an ancient but decayed town of Denmark, on the west coast of Jutland. Pop. 2600. 120 miles N. Hamburg.

RIBEAUVILLE, a town of France, department of the Upper Rhine. Population 4700. 9 miles N. by W. Colmar.

RIBEMONT, a town of France, 21 miles N. W. Laon. Population 2400.

RIBESAC, a town of France, department of the Dordogne. Population 3000.

RIBNITZ, a town of Germany, 12 miles N. E. Rostock. Population 1900.

RIBSTON, GREAT AND LITTLE, two hamlets of England, in Yorkshire.

RIBTON and RIBT, two villages of England, in Cumberland and Lancashire.

RICA, VILLA, a town of Brazil, at the source of the Rio Francisco.

RICCARTON, a small village of Scotland, in West Lothian, 3 miles S. Linlithgow.

RICCARTON, a parish and village of Scotland, adjoining Kilmarnock. Pop. 2122.

RICCIA, a town of Naples, in the province of Molise, with 4500 inhabitants.

RICEBOROUGH, a town of the United States, in Liberty county, Georgia. Houses 30.

RICÉVA, L'ÎLE, a town of France, department of the Aube, 28 miles S. E. Troyes. Population 4000.

RICHMOND, a small village of England, in the county of Kent, supposed to have been the first and principal station of the Romans. No traces of the town are now to be found. The remains of the castle, by their immense mass, have alone withstood the ravages of time. 2 miles N. N. W. Sandwich.

RICHMUND, a town of France, on the Aisne, 35 miles S. W. Tours. Pop. 3200.

RICHLAND, a county of the United States, in the north part of Ohio.

RICHLAND, a district in the central part of South Carolina. Population 9027, including 5238 slaves.

RICHLAND, a river of the United States, in Tennessee, which joins Elk river.

RICHLAND, a post village of the United States, in Giles county, Tennessee.—Also the name of various townships.

RICHFIELD, CHAMBLEY, OR SORREY RIVER, a river of Lower Canada, which flows from Lake Champlain in a northerly course, and joins the St. Lawrence.

RICHFIELD ISLANDS, a cluster of islands in the river St. Lawrence, at the S. W. entrance of Lake St. Peter, nearly 100 in number.

RICHMOND, a village of England, in the county of Surrey, on an eminence on the south bank of the Thames. It is a spot of great celebrity, both for the beauty of its scenery, and from its being the seat of a royal palace during several centuries. This palace is now totally demolished, and its site occupied by several houses, which hold of the crown. Richmond Park is first mentioned in the reign of Edward I.; and several ornamental buildings were erected here by Caroline, George II.'s queen. George III. frequently resided here in the early part of his reign. At a short distance an observatory has been erected, from designs by Sir William Chambers, and amply provided with the finest astronomical instruments. Part of the Old Park forms a grazing and dairy farm, formerly occupied by George III. The remainder is occupied by the beautiful royal gardens, which in summer are opened to the public. The New or Great Park, formed by Charles I. is kept in its proper state, well stocked with deer; it is inclosed by a brick wall, 8 miles in compass. The rich scenery of Richmond and its vicinity have been the theme of general admiration, and have attracted a number of families of distinction, whose seats render the village and neighbourhood remarkably gay and splendid. The village extends about a mile, or more, up the hill, from the Thames, skirted and intermingled with agreeable gardens. The view from Richmond Hill is particularly celebrated. Richmond church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, consists of a nave, two aisles, and a chancel, built of bricks, with a square embattled tower at the west end. Among the monuments in the church is one to Thomson the poet. In the village there are several almshouses, and a charity school. An elegant stone bridge was erected over the river here, of five semicircular arches. Population 3211. 9 miles W. S. W. London.

Richmond, a market and borough town of England, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, on the N. declivity of a lofty eminence, rising boldly from the bank of the Swale. The castle crowns the summit, and still bears marks of its former importance. The ground covered by it comprises nearly six acres. Richmond contains two churches, one of which is both parochial and collegiate. The market-place is a spacious and handsome building, surrounded with good shops and houses. Richmond was incorporated in the 19th of the reign of Elizabeth. It sends two members to parliament. Number of voters 270. The chief trade of Richmond is in corn and lead. It has also a manufacture of knit yarn, stockings, and woollen caps for seamen. Population 3546. 40 miles N. W. York.

Richmond, a county of the United States, in the north part of Georgia. Population 4189, including 3536 slaves.—23. In New York, occupying all Staten Island. Population 5347.—33. In the south part of North Carolina. Pop. 6395, including 1231 slaves. 4th. In Virginia. Pop. 6214. Slaves 3176.

Richmond, a city and port of entry of the United States, and metropolis of Virginia, in Henrico county, on the north side of James river, between 50 and 60 miles by the course of the river above City Point, and 150 miles from its mouth, immediately below the falls, at the head of tide water, and opposite Manchester, with which it is connected by two bridges. It is one of the most flourishing, wealthy, and commercial cities of the United States. It has various manufactures, namely, a glass-house, a sugar-refinery, an iron foundry, and a cotton manufactory. Its public buildings are, a capitol or state-house, a house for the governor, an armory, a penitentiary, a court-house, a jail, an almshouse, and eight churches for different sects of Christians. The falls extend nearly 6 miles. A canal with three locks, is cut on the north side of the river, terminating at the town, in a basin of about two acres. It has an extensive inland trade, and its foreign commerce is considerable. In 1811, the theatre at Richmond took fire, and in the conflagration 72 persons lost their lives. An elegant Episcopal church of brick has since been erected on the spot. Pop. in 1800, 5637; in 1817, 14,333. 25 miles N. Petersburg.

Richthausen, a market town of Switzerland, on the lake of Zurich. Pop. 2401.

Richthausen, a hamlet of England, in Cumberland, in the vicinity of Carlisle.

Richthausen, a market town of England, in Hertfordshire. The church is a spacious building, consisting of a nave, aisles, and chancel. There are several cotton, flour, silk, and paper mills in the vicinity. The females manufacture straw plait. Population 3946. 18 miles N. W. London.

Ridale, a small river of England, in Yorkshire. It joins the Swale.

Rindern, a village of the Netherlands, in South Holland. Population 2700.

Ribe, a village of England, in the Isle of Wight, on an eminence opposite Portsmouth, 9 miles N. E. Newport.

Rineau River, a river of Canada, which runs into the Unawas river.

Rizzo, a neat market town of Upper Austria, 18 miles E. Braunau. Population 3000.

Rientzen, a town of Germany, on the Danube, 28 miles W. S. W. Ulm. Pop. 1500.

Ringer, a town of Germany, in Baden, on the river Elz, with 1700 inhabitants.

Riesenau, a town of West Prussia, 12 miles E. Marienwerder. Population 2400.

Rieti, a town of Italy, States of the Church. It has some manufactures of woollens. Pop. 6500. 37 miles N. N. E. Rome.

Rituelin, a town of France, department of the Aveyron. Population 1800.

Rieux, a town of France, on the Reze, 28 miles S. by W. Toulouse. Pop. 1700.

Rieux, a town of France, department of the Morbihan, on the Vilaine. Pop. 2200.

Riez, a town of France, department of the Lower Alps, on the Colostre, 40 miles N. E. Aix. Population 2000.

Riga, a city of European Russia, and the capital of Livonia, situated about nine miles from the sea, in a large plain on the Dwina or Duna, which is crossed by a bridge of pontoons 40 feet broad, and 2600 feet long. During the winter the river is crossed on the ice. The town stands on the right, the suburbs on the left bank of the river. Without being a regular fortress, Riga has considerable strength. The entrance of the river is guarded from maritime attacks by the fortress of Dünaburg. The town on the whole is unhandsome, the streets being narrow and crooked. Of the public buildings, the principal are the town-house, the exchange, the house of assembly for the states or representatives of Livonia, the arsenal, the hospital of St. George, and the Catharinehof. The church of St. Peter is remarkable for its fine tower, commanding a magnificent view of the harbour. Of the inhabitants of Riga, the majority are Germans and Livonians, the Russians being comparatively few. The export trade is chiefly managed by English and Scotch houses: the principal articles are timber, flax, hemp, and corn. The manufactures of Riga are insignificant, being confined to starch, a sugar refinery, and other small articles. There is here a lyceum or academy, and a high school, with a provision for maintaining and educating poor children. There is here also a public library, a cabinet of natural history, and a literary society. Pop. 36,000. 285 miles W. S. W. St. Petersburg. Long. 24, 7. 45. E. Lat. 56. 5. 1. N.

RIGA, GULF OF, a bay of the Baltic, between the coasts of Courland, Livonia, and Esthonia.

RIGNAC, a town of France, department of the Aveyron. Population 2000.

RIGNANO, a town of Naples, 18 miles W. N. W. Manfredonia. Population 2000.

RIGTON and RUALL, two villages of England, in Yorkshire and Rutlandshire.

RIELLE, a river of France, in Normandy, which falls into the Seine.

RILLINGTON, a village of England, in Yorkshire, 5 miles N. E. New Malton.

RIMINI, a town of Italy, in the Ecclesiastical states, on the Marecchia, near its influx into the Adriatic. The town is extensive, but dull and deserted, its population being reduced to 8000. Its streets are straight, and contain several churches and family mansions of Istrian marble. It has several fine squares. The cathedral, and several of the churches of Rimini, are ornamented with beautiful marble. The church of St Francis, a fine edifice of the 15th century, has a profusion of sculptures, statues, and bas-reliefs. Rimini contains several valuable remains of Roman antiquities. Rimini, called formerly Ariminum, from the river Ariminus, which washed its walls, is very ancient, and formed at one time a small independent republic. 50 miles S. W. Ancona.

RIMOST, a town of France, department of the Arriege. Population 1200.

RIMSWELL, a hamlet of England, East Riding of Yorkshire.

RINO ISLAND, a small island of the United States, on the Massachusetts coast.

RINCAY, a river of England, in Cheshire.

RINGKOPING, a small town of Denmark, in North Jutland, 45 miles S. W. Wiborg.

RINGSTEAD, two villages of England, in Norfolk and Dorsetshire.

RINGSBUD, a petty town of Denmark, in the island of Zealand. Population 700.

RINDWON, a market town and parish of England, in Hampshire, on the Avon. It is noted for its breweries of strong beer and ale. Pop. 3804. 30 miles S. W. Winchester.

RINTELN, a town of Germany, on the Weser, 30 miles W. S. W. Hanover. Pop. 2700.

RIO, a town of Tuscany, in the island of Elba. Near it are iron mines. Pop. 1000.

RIONAJA, the capital of a province of the same name in Quilo, at the extremity of an extensive valley. It was almost ruined by the eruptions of the volcano of Cotopaxi, in 1698 and 1746; and in 1797 it was destroyed by an earthquake. It has been rebuilt in a more convenient spot. It is large and handsome, with two churches, four convents, two nunneries, and an hospital. Pop. in 1818, 20,000. Lat. l. 42. 8.

RIO BERSO, a river of the island of Jamaica, which runs into the sea.

RIO CORAL, a river of Jamaica. It passes Spanish Town, and runs into the sea.

RIO GRANDE, a province of Brazil, of considerable extent, and bounded N. by the ca-pitania of St Paul's, W. by Marão Grosso, and S. by the Spanish territories between it and the Rio de la Plata. The climate is considered very fine, and the soil so productive, that this district may be called the granary of Brazil. The wheat grown here is shipped to all the ports on the coast where bread is good. The principal occupations of the inhabitants are, the breeding of cattle, for which the immense track of pasture land is so well adapted; the drying and preparing of hides, and the making of charque, i. e. beef salted and dried in a particular manner. The quantity of hides exported from hence is almost incredible. Tallow forms another considerable article of commerce. Horns and horse-hair form an inferior branch of the commerce, and are shipped from this port in great quantities. All European merchandise, they bring wine, oil, olives, glass, and a great variety of English commodities, particularly iron, baizes, coatings, stout woollen cloths, Manchester velvets of various qualities and colours, printed cottons, calicoes, muslins, handkerchiefs, silk, cotton, and worsted hosiery, hats, flannels, &c.; saddle-stuff, cordage, anchors, tar, paints, fowling-pieces, ammunition of all sorts, hardware of every description, particularly slaughter-knives, some plated ware, and fancy articles.

RIO MISO, a river of Jamaica, which runs into the sea in Carlisle bay.

RIO DEL RIO, a river of Western Africa, the most southern of that succession of large estuaries which fall into the gulf of Benue. Long. of its mouth, $0^{\circ} 5. E.$ Lat. $4. 30. N.$

RION, a regularly built town of France, department of the Tny de Dome. The dark colour of its houses, built of basalt, gives it a dull and gloomy appearance. It was once a place of some strength, and has still a small arsenal, but its earthen mound is now planted with trees, and serves as a promenade. Its chief structures are its theatre and public fountains. Pop. 13,500. 50 miles S. by W. Montlins.

RITORA, a town of Spain, 17 miles S. by W. Alcanaz. Population 4000.

RIPAMONTE, a town of Naples, province of Molise. Population 2500.

RIPA LEMOSANA, a town of Italy, in Naples, 9 miles E. Molise. Population 3100.

RIPLEY, a market town and parish of England, in Yorkshire, on the Ryd. Population of the parish, 1132.—2d, A township in Derbyshire. Pop. 1626.—3d, A village in Kent, 4½ miles S. Sandwich.

RIPOLL, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, on the river Ter. Population 2400.

RIPON or RHYON, a market town and borough of England, in Yorkshire, near the confluence of the Ure and the Wharfe; over the former of which is a stone bridge of 17 arches. It consists almost entirely of narrow and crooked lanes. The church is a large and venerable Gothic structure. The market-place is a handsome and spacious square, ornamented with an obelisk, 90 feet high. There is also an elegant town-hall, a free grammar school, a public dispenary, Sunday schools, and a school of industry, besides four hospitals. Here is also a theatre. Ripon was once celebrated for its manufacture of spurs. The town is still a staple for wool, though its woollen manufactures have declined. It sent members to parliament in the 23d of Edward I. Pop. 4663.

RISANO, a town of Austrian Dalmatia, 8 miles N. Cattaro. Population 1800.

RISBOROUGH MONKS, a market town of England, Buckinghamshire. Pop. 934.

RISSTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1170.

RITHWOLTH, a township of England, in Yorkshire. Population 1566.

RITTON, a hamlet of England, in Northumberland, 11 miles N. W. Morpeth.

RITTON-CROFT-DUNMORE, a village of England, near Stoneley-Abbey.

RIVA, a small town of Austrian Italy, on the lake of Como. 6 miles S. Chiavenna.

RIVA, or RHEIF, a town of Tyrol, on the lake Garda, 17 miles S. W. Trent. Pop. 3100.

RIVA DI CHIARI, a town of Italy, 10 miles E. by S. Turin. Population 2300.

RIVAROLA, a well built town of Piedmont, 18 miles N. N. E. Turin. Pop. 6200.

RIVAROSSA, a town of Piedmont, province of Turin. Population 1400.

RIVEROSE, a town of Spain, 11 miles W. by N. Tarragona. Population 2400.

RIVE DE GIER, a town of France, department of the Loire, on the Gier, 23 miles S. S. W. Lyons. Population 4300.

RIVELLO, a town of Naples, province of Basilicata. Population, with the adjacent village of Boia, 5400.

RIVER, HAVER, a town of Savoy, near Chamberry. Population 5000.

RIVERHEAD, a village of England, in the county of Kent.

RIVALSUTER, a town of France, on the Calv, 6 miles N. by W. Perpignan. Pop. 1800.

RIVER DES PRAIRIES, a river of Lower Canada, which joins the St. Lawrence.

RIVIERE ROUGE, a river of the United States, enters Lake Michigan, in Green bay.

RIVINGTON, a village of England, in the county of Lancaster, 5 miles from Bolton.

RIVOLI, a town of Italy, in Piedmont. It has manufactures of linen, woollens, and silk. Pop. 4100. 9 miles W. Turin.

RIVOLI, a small place in Lombardy, on the Adige, 12 miles N. W. Verona.

RIZE, a river of France, joins the Adour.

RITTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 990.

ROA, a town of Spain, province of Burgos, on the Douro. Population 2500.

ROADS, a township of England, in Somersetshire, 4 miles N. E. by E. Frome.

ROANNE, a town of France, on the Loire. It has still the appearance of a village, its streets stretching out in various directions into the open country, and the most remote houses being intermixed with trees. Pop. 5000.

ROANOKE, an island in the Atlantic, near the coast of North Carolina.—2d, ROANOKE

LITTLE, a river of the United States, in Virginia.—3d, ROANOKE INLET, a channel of the United States, on the coast of North Carolina, which leads into Albemarle sound.

ROANOKE RIVER, a river of the United States, in North Carolina, which enters Albemarle sound, Long. 76. 56. W. Lat. 35. 58. N.

ROARING RIVER, a river of the United States, in Tennessee.—Also one in the North-western Territory.

ROARING WATER, a river of Ireland, which runs into Roaring Water bay, on the south coast of Ireland.

ROBE, a river of Ireland, which runs into Lough Corrib.

ROBECQ, a village of France, department of the Pas de Calais. Population 2300.

ROBEL, a town of Germany, 28 miles W. S. W. New Brandenburg. Pop. 1800.

ROBERINDALE, a village of England, in Lancashire, 43 miles E. N. E. Lancaster.

ROBERTSON, a county of the United States, in West Tennessee. Pop. 7270.

ROBESON, a county of North Carolina. Population 7523, including 1346 slaves.

ROBINHOOD'S BAY, a village of England, in Yorkshire, on a bay of the same name, 6 miles S. E. Whitby.

ROBLEDO, a town of Spain, New Castile, 33 miles S. by E. Ciudad Real. Pop. 6400.

ROCA, a small river of the island of Martinique, which enters the sea.

ROCCA, a village of Italy, in Piedmont, province of Turin. Population 2200.

ROCCA, Cano da, in Portugal, the most westerly point of land in Europe. Long. 9. 29. 21. W. Lat. 38. 46. 8. N.

ROCCA D'AMAZZO, a town of Italy, 6 miles E. Atri. Population 2000.

ROCCA D'ASPIDO, a town of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 2900.

ROCCA DE BALDI, a town of Italy, in Piedmont, on the Pesio. Population 2300.

ROCCA MANDOLFI, a town of Naples, 40 miles N. Naples. Population 3400.

ROCCA MONFIERA, a town of Naples, in Terra di Lavoro. Population 2900.

ROCCA S. FELICE, a town of Naples, in the Principato Ultra. Population 2100.

ROCCA SERCA, a town of Naples, in Terra di Lavoro. Population 2500.

ROCCARUNA, a town of Italy, in Piedmont. Population 1500.

ROCCAPORTE, a town of Italy, in Piedmont. Population 2500.

ROCCATONE, a town of Italy, in Piedmont. Population 2700.

ROCHDALE, a town of England, county of Lancaster, on the Roch, over which is a neat stone bridge of three arches. The church, an ancient building, stands on an eminence, to which there is an ascent by a flight of 126 steps. Another church has been erected of stone, of the Gothic order, an elegant structure. Besides this, the town contains a chapel of ease; with meeting-houses for the Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists, &c. & a free grammar school, an English free school, several Sunday schools, and a national school. Here is also a theatre, and two assembly rooms. It has manufactures of hosiery, flannels, kerseys, coatings, and brand cloths. Population not separately returned. 11 miles N. by E. Manchester.

ROCH, a small river of England, in Lancashire, which runs into the Irwell.

ROCH, a town of the Netherlands, province of Liege. Population 1400.

ROCHE, a town of Switzerland, with extensive salt-works. 46 miles E. by N. Geneva.

ROCHE, a town of Savoy, 12 miles S. by E. Geneva. Population 2300.

ROCHE-CHARENT, a town of France, 22 miles W. Limoges. Population 1500.

ROCHEREAU, a town of France, department of the Lower Charente, on the Charente. The streets are broad, straight, and laid out on a plan of perfect regularity. Nearly in the centre of the town is a spacious square. The principal objects of interest are the arsenal, the cannon foundry, the barracks, the extensive magazines of naval stores, and the docks; likewise the civil and marine hospital, and the navigation school. The harbour, one of the great naval stations of the kingdom, is protected by five forts. It is formed by the Charente, which, if not wide, is secure, and capable, from its depth, of admitting vessels of great size. Here are, however, several manufactures, viz. cordage, stoneware, and oil; also sugar refining. Pop. 15,000. 20 miles S. E. La Rochelle.

ROCHEREAU, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire. Pop. 2400.

ROCHEREAU, a town of France, on the Tanaro, 58 miles S. Molins. Pop. 2400.

ROCHELLE, a town of France, capital of the department of the Lower Charente, at the bottom of a small gulf of the Atlantic. Its form is nearly oval. Its fortifications, the work of the famous Vauban, are in good condition. The town is well built, the streets broad, and in general straight. La Rochelle has several squares. One called the Place d'Armes, consists of a spacious area, planted with trees, and commanding a view of the roadstead and shipping. The principal public buildings of La Rochelle are the cathedral, the hospital, the orphan-house, and the exchange. La Rochelle has long been an interesting place in a commercial view: its port stretches into the interior of the town, like that of Marseilles, and, if not large, is secure. It has, all along its sides, a mole, of which the total length is three quarters of a mile: it is capable, at high-water, of admitting vessels of great burden. Its entrance is defended by two old Gothic towers of great height, and crossed by a ponderous iron chain. The roadstead, formed by two projecting points of land, is spacious, and tolerably secure. Its trade, both to the colonies and to European ports, is considerable. La Rochelle is an ancient town, and was for some time in possession of the English, prior to 1224, when the French retook it. In 1637, after being frequently besieged by the Catholics, it was taken by Louis XIII. after a memorable siege of 13 months. Population 17,500. 78 miles S. Nantes.

ROCHESTER, a very ancient, though now an inconsiderable city of England, in the county of Kent, on the Medway. On the east it is connected by a continued range of buildings, with the town of Chatham, and on the west, by the bridge over the river, with the village of Strood. It consists chiefly of one main and spacious street. The chief public buildings of Rochester are the castle, the cathedral, the churches, the town-hall, the bridge, and Watt's charity-house and dormitories. The castle stands on an eminence rising abruptly from the river Medway on the west. The outward walls, which formed an irregular oblong, 300 feet in length, were strengthened by several square and round towers, all of which are now, however, verging to a state of decay. It was founded by William the Conqueror. The cathedral is on the east of the castle. From the various styles of its architecture, it appears to have been a work of different ages. It is in the form of a cross, and is divided into a nave, aisles, two transepts, and a choir, with a low tower, and a spire rising at the intersection of the nave and great transept. The cathedral, on the whole, extends in length 300 feet from east to west. The breadth of the nave, with the side aisles, is 75 feet, and that of the choir nearly the same. The western transept is 124 feet, and the eastern 40 feet long; the west front is 54 feet wide, and the great tower 156 feet high. Several of the monuments in the cathedral are curious, both from their antiquity and workmanship. Adjoining to the cathedral are the remains of the chapter-house and cloister, belonging to the priory, which exhibit a very beautiful series of Norman arches and ornaments, but in a state of great dilapidation. Rochester had formerly four churches, besides the cathedral; St Nicholas church, built in 1421, consisting of a nave, aisles, and a chancel, with an embattled tower on the north-west; and St Margaret's church, St Clement's church, and St Mary's: the last is entirely demolished; and St Clement's forms part of some dwelling-houses. The town-hall is a handsome brick building, supported by stone columns of the Doric order. In the lower division is the city prison, and in the upper the hall, in a spacious area behind, a large and lofty room, beautifully enriched with carved work, and containing full length portraits of King William and Queen Anne, by Sir Geoffrey Kneller, and of several persons of distinction connected with the city. The bridge over the Medway was built in the reign of Richard II; it consists of 11 arches, three of which have been rebuilt, and otherwise beautified and improved. Rochester has various charitable institutions, a grammar school, and a free school. It sends two members to parliament. Number of voters about 1050. It was a Roman station, but did not attain any celebrity until more than a century after the arrival of the Saxons. Population, including Chatham, 21,063. 27 miles N. W. Canterbury, and 29 S. E. London. Long. O. 30. E. Lat. 51. 23. N.

ROCHESTER, a village of England, Northumberland, 26 miles N. N. W. Hexham.

ROCHESTER, a flourishing post-village of the United States, in Genesee county, New York.—The name also of several townships.

ROCHETTA, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples. Population 4000.—2d, Of the Sarlinian states, in Montserrat. Pop. 2600.

ROCHFORD, a market town and parish of England, county of Essex, on the Broomfield, over which it has two small bridges. Population 1362. 16 miles S. E. Chelmsford.

ROCHFORD, a village of England, in Worcestershire, 3 miles E. Tenbury.

ROCHLIFF CASTLE, and ROCHLIFF CHURCH, 2 villages of England, Cumberland.

ROCHLITZ, a town of Saxony, 28 miles S. S. E. Leipzig, on the Mulde. Pop. 2100.

ROCK, a village of England, in Northumberland, 5 miles N. N. E. Alnwick.

ROCK FISH CREEK, a river of the United States, in Virginia.

ROCK HALL, a post-village of the United States, in Kent county, Maryland.

ROCK LANDING, a post-village of the United States, in North Carolina.

ROCKMARTIN, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 10,316.

ROCKCASTLE, a county of the United States, in Kentucky. Population 1731.

ROCKINGHAM, a market town and parish of England, in Northampton. 64 miles N. by W. London. Population 2711.

ROCKINGHAM, a county of the United States, in the S. E. part of New Hampshire. Pop. 50,175. Chief-towns, Portsmouth, Exeter, and Concord.—2d, In the central part of Virginia. Pop. 12,753, including 1491 slaves.—3d, On the N. side of North Carolina. Pop. 10,316, including 2114 slaves.—The name also of several townships.

ROCKLAND, a county of the United States, in New York. Population 7738.

ROCKSavage, a village of England, in Cheshire, on the Weaver, near Halton.

ROCKVILLE, two post-villages of the United States, in Maryland and Virginia.

ROCKY-BRIDGE, a post-village of the United States, Christian county, Kentucky.

ROCKY HILL, a post-village and parish of the United States, Connecticut.

ROCKY MOUNTAINS, a great ridge of mountains in North America. They run the whole length of the continent, from its southern to its northern extremity, where they terminate in the Icy sea, in the latitude of 70.

ROCKY RIVER, two tributaries of the Mississippi, in Louisiana.—2d, Two of Lake Erie, in the Michigan territory.—3d, One of the Wabash.—4th, Of Lake Michigan.

ROCKY HILL and ROCKY SPRING, two post-villages of Ohio and North Carolina.

ROCKY, a town of France, 44 miles S. E. Mons. Population 2900.

RONA, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, 6 miles N. N. E. Vique. Population 2100.

RONA, LA, a town of Spain, in La Mancha. Population 2400.

RONNOSE, two villages of England, in Wiltshire and Warwickshire.

RONDEX, a small river of England, in Salop.—Also a hamlet in Wiltshire.

RONDELLO, an inland town of the Netherlands, province of Gelderland. Pop. 1700.

RODEROSCH, a village of Germany, in Saxony, on the Gorisch. Population 2000.

RONI, a town of Naples, in the Capitanata. Population 3000.

ROVERA, a small river of England, in Essex, which falls into the Thames.—Also the name of eight parishes of England, in Essex.

RODOSTO, a town of European Turkey, in Rumania, near the sea of Marmora. It has good streets, and several good public buildings. It has a good harbour. Population 16,000. 68 miles W. Constantinople.

RONZ, a town of France, in Alsace. Population 2700.

ROE, a river of Ireland, in the county of Donegal, which runs into Lough Foyle.

ROEHAMPTON, a pleasant hamlet of England, in Surrey.

ROER, the name of two rivers in the Prussian states. The one falls into the Meuse; the other into the Rhine.

ROERLO, a town of the Netherlands, in the province of Hainault. Population 2500.

RORENO, a town of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 2300.

ROSEN, a town of Prussian Poland, 24 miles N. by E. Posen. Population 3500.

ROSIATE, a village of England, on the Severn, in Monmouthshire.

ROSLANO, a town of the kingdom of Naples, in Calabria Citra. Population 3400.

ROSEN, a town of France, 12 miles N. W. Aix. Population 2000.

ROHAN-ROHAN, a town of France, department of the Two Seves. Population 1000.

ROHILLYN, properly KERTAZER, an extensive and valuable district of Hindostan, formerly belonging to the province of Delli, but now included in the district of Bareilly. It stands between the Ganges and Gogra, between Lat. 28. and 30. N. It is extremely well watered by several rivers, and the soil is remarkably fertile. It contains the following towns:—Bareilly, Bissowly, Budaron, Moradabad, Owlah, Pilibhet, Rampore, Simbul, and several other places.

RONN, a market town of Germany, in Bavaria, near the river Isar.

ROHNSDORF ROBER, a village of Prussian Silesia, on the Rober. Population 1000.

ROHNSDORF GROSS, a village of Saxony, 11 miles N. E. Dresden. Population 2000.

ROISON, a town of France, department of the Isere, on the Galaure. Population 2400.

RORTACH, a village of Prussian Saxony, government of Merseburg. Pop. 2700.

ROKERY and ROKELY, two villages of England, in Yorkshire and Wiltshire.

ROKITZAN, a town of Bohemia, 43 miles W. S. W. Prague. Population 2300.

ROLEIA, a small town of Portugal, on the coast road leading from the north to Lisbon.

ROLLE, a town of Switzerland, canton of Vaud, 13 miles N. N. E. Geneva. Pop. 2400.

ROM, a village of France, department of the Two Sevrer. Population 1300.

ROMAGNÈSE, a town of the Nardinian states, province of Bobbio. Pop. 3200.

ROMALD KIRK, a village of England, North Riding of Yorkshire, on the Tees.

ROMANBY, a village of England, North Riding of Yorkshire, near Northallerton.

ROMANIA, ROMELIA, or ILIRIA, a very extensive province, or rather portion of European Turkey, comprising, with the exception of Bosnia, Moldavia, and Wallachia, all the Turkish possessions on the continent of Europe. It is bounded N. by the Danube, E. by the Black sea, S. by the Mediterranean, and W. by the Adriatic, Dalmatia, and Bosnia. This comprises, together, Bulgaria and Servia, which are by some considered distinct provinces. But without these, Romelia has an extent of nearly 120,000 square miles, with a population of about 6,000,000.

ROMANO, a town of Austrian Italy, 26 miles E. Milan. Population 3200.

ROMANO, a town of Piedmont, 5 miles S. Ivrea. Population 2000.

ROMANOV, two towns of Russia, government of Jaroslavl, on the Volga. Population 4200—3100.

ROMANS, a town of France, department of the Drome, on the Isere, with a bridge over that river. It has manufactures of woollen and silk. Population 6500.

ROBINHOOD, ROMINGHAM, and ROMNEY, three villages of England, in Hertfordshire, Suffolk, and Kent.

ROME, a large and famous city of Italy, formerly the seat of the Roman empire, and the capital of the world, situated chiefly on the left bank of the Tiber. The space inclosed by walls approaches to the form of a square of three, or somewhat more than three miles each way, the circuit of the walls being in all about 13 miles. This is equal to the circumference of Rome in its greatest splendour; but of the seven eminences on which the former stood, several, viz. Mons Aventinus, Palatinus, Caelius, and in some degree Mons Esquilinus, Viminalis, and Quirinalis, were at that period covered with buildings; nor they are covered with vineyards, corn fields, or villas, the close population being confined to the level track between the eminences and the river, and occupying little more than a third of the space included within the walls. The most regularly built part of Rome is that which is adjacent to the northern gate, called Porta del Popolo, and the quarter of Borgo, on the right of the river. The great drawback on its beauty as a city, is the mixed nature of its buildings, a mansion entitled to the name of palace, being too often placed amidst a group of hovels. The points from which Rome can best be viewed, are the Pincian hill, Mount Janiculum, the tower of the Capitol, and the tops of the Trajan or Antonine columns. The streets of Rome have seldom any foot pavement; they are in general narrower than those of London, and wider than those of Paris. Three of the finest streets of the city are those which diverge from the Piazza di Popolo, near the northern gate, viz. the Corso, extending to the foot of the Capitol; the Strada del Babuino, ending in the Piazza di Spagna, and the Strada di Ripetta, leading to the Tiber. The Corso is the great public walk of Rome, and the scene of carnival festivities. The other fine streets of the city are the Strada Felice, the Strada Langara, the Strada Maggiore, and the Strada Flaminia. The squares of Rome are small, but numerous, and in general adorned with obelisks, fountains, or other monuments. The space in front of St Peter's church is a large area of an oval form, surrounded with a magnificent colonnade, the work of the celebrated Bernini. In the middle, between two elegant fountains, stands an Egyptian obelisk, of a single piece of granite, 78 feet in height. The Piazza Navona, a square in the centre of the town, the next in size to that of St Peter, stands on the ruins of the Circus Agonalis. The Roman forum was anciently bordered with temples, and lined with statues: it was bounded on one side by the Palatine hill, with the imperial residences; on the other by the Capitol. All these monuments have disappeared from the modern Piazza; and a few scattered porticos, with here and there an insulated column standing in the midst of broken shafts, fragments of marble, capitals, and cornices, are now the only memorials of the Roman forum. The Piazza di Campo Marzio is small, and takes its name from the ancient Campus Martius, which is now in a great measure covered with buildings. The Piazza di Monte Cavallo is one of the finest squares in the city, both for its situation and its buildings. The wall that surrounded Rome in the time of the emperors, is in many places in good preservation. Among the ancient edifices is conspicuous the Pantheon or Rotonda, a structure distinguished equally for solidity and elegance. A still more imposing object is the Colosseum or amphitheatre of Vespasian, a structure of an oval form, 681 feet in length, 461 in breadth, and 1616 ft in circumference, being the largest amphitheatre ever known. At a short distance from this, near the Viminal and Quirinal hills, stands another monument of ancient grandeur, a portion of the vast temple of Mars, now converted into a church. The inscription of the emperor Antonin has been converted into a clock. One of the triumphal arches of ancient Rome, the only one remaining, is the arch of Constantine, with pillars, statues, and bas-reliefs, all of the finest marble. The arch of Septimius Severus is of marble, but its bas-reliefs are much damaged. The arch of Titus has also suffered great

The Colonna Trajana, or Trajan's pillar, still stands on the spot where it was erected by that emperor, and is still covered with admirable bas-reliefs. The pillar erected in honour of the Emperor Marcus Aurelius, is of equal, or somewhat greater height, but of inferior execution. Of the ancient aqueducts, there remain only three; yet their supply of water is extremely copious. As to public baths, those great objects of Roman luxury, there remain of those of Caracalla little but the walls; but the baths of Titus are in better preservation. No city in Europe is superior to Rome in the number and magnificence of its churches. The oldest, called the church of St Clement, is one of the best models now extant of Christian churches in their original form. The church of St Pietro di Vincoli is a noble hall, supported by 30 pillars of Pausan marble, and adorned with elegant tombs. That of St Martin and St Silvester is built of part of the materials of the baths of Titus, and is a beautiful edifice. The church of St Andrea, on Monte Cavallo, though small, is highly finished. That of St Cecilia, in Trastevere, as well as those of St Maria in the same quarter, St Sebastiano and St Pietro in Montorio, are all of great antiquity. The last contains the famous picture of the Transfiguration, by Raphael. The churches of St Grisogono and St Giovanni e Paolo are splendidly decorated with pillars. Santa Maria Egizia, a building of the Ionic order, is supposed to be the ancient temple of Fortuna Virilis, and Santa Maria Sopra Minerva, a temple of that goddess; while the church of Ave Cris is considered as occupying the site of the temple of Jupiter Capitolinus. The Pantheon, and the seven patriarchal basilica, or cathedrals, are all remarkable for their architecture. The Pantheon, built in the reign of Augustus, and called, from its circular form, the Rotonda, contains the busts of a number of eminent characters. Of the cathedrals, Santa Maria Maggiore, a noble structure, is situated on the Esquiline mount, and has two fronts, each of modern architecture. St Giovanni, in Laterano, is the regular cathedral of the bishop of Rome. Another cathedral, that of Santa Croce, in Giesusalemme, was erected by Constantine on the ruins of a temple of Venus. A third church, begun by Constantine, but much extended since his reign, is that of St Paul, outside of the city wall, near the gate of Ostia. The cathedral of St Lorenzo is also outside of the city, and situated on the Via Tiburtina. In the church of St Peter's, the arts of architecture, sculpture, and painting, are all displayed in the highest perfection. The original structure was erected by Constantine, and was repaired and improved in after ages. The most celebrated architects of modern times, Bramante, Raphael, Michael Angelo, Vignola, Bernini, and Borromini, have displayed their talents on this vast undertaking; the total expence of which must have amounted to at least £ 12,000,000 sterling. Entering a circular room, formed by a vast colonnade, the spectator is struck by the majestic front of the building, extending 400 feet in length, and rising to the height of 180. The interior of the church corresponds perfectly with its outward grandeur. On entering either of the fine portals, the spectator beholds the most spacious hall ever constructed by human art, expanding in magnificent perspective, its length being above 600 English feet; the aisles and altars adorned with ancient pillars; the walls with festoons, wreaths, tiaras, and other ornaments of marble. The patriarchal chair of St Peter is a throne, elevated to the height of 70 feet. The high altar has below it St Peter's tomb; above it a magnificent canopy of brass, towering to the height of 132 feet. But of all the objects in this admirable edifice, the most surprising is the dome, the vault of which rises to the height of 400 feet, and extends over the spectator like a firmament. Here are three palaces of the Pope, viz. the Lateran, the Quirinal, and the Vatican. The first, situated close to the patriarchal church of that name, presents three fronts of great extent and simplicity, and is striking by its size and height. The Quirinal palace has become, from the height and salubrity of its situation, the summer residence of the popes. Its exterior presents two long fronts, plain and unadorned. Lastly comes the great palace of the Vatican, situated on an eminence to the north-west of the city, near St Peter's. Its exterior presents neither magnificence nor symmetry, having been erected by different architects at different eras, and forming, not one, but an assemblage of edifices. Its extent is immense, and the number of its rooms, great and small, is estimated at 10,000. Part of it is built with grandeur, and its walls are adorned with the cartoons of Raphael and Michael Angelo. Here also are collections of medals and other antiques; apartments lined with marble, or paved with Roman mosaic, containing vases, candelabras, and altars. Here also are the celebrated statues of the Apollo Belvedere, the Laocoon, and the Antinous. The family mansions are here termed palaces, and are in great numbers; but the far greater part of them are less remarkable for their outward architecture, than for their size and internal decorations. The Palazzo Doria is one of the finest in the city, presenting three large fronts, inclosing a spacious court surrounded with a piazza. It has a fine stair-case, which leads to a magnificent gallery filled with pictures. The Palazzo Ruspoli has a still finer stair-case, consisting of four flights, of 30 steps each, each step of a single piece of marble, nearly ten feet long, and two broad. The Corsini palace is remarkable for its size, its furniture, and its gardens. The Palazzo Orsini, that of Giustiniani, of Attieri, and of Cicciopori, are all distinguished buildings. The Palazzo Farnese is of great size, and occupies one side of a handsome square. There are various others, some of which are rich in the paintings of the first masters. Rome is well supplied with hospitals, but they are conducted on an antiquated plan, and very deficient in interior order and arrangement. The Tiber, though deep, is only about 200 feet wide. It is crossed at Rome by four bridges. Rome is the seat of several seminaries; a university, a Greek, a German, and a Jesuit college. The Propaganda, or college for the diffusion of the Christian faith, is on an extensive scale, containing a number of youths of different nations, and a press for printing books in more than thirty languages. Rome contains likewise several literary associations. A monthly publication, partaking of the mixed nature of a review and magazine, appears under the title of Giornale Arcadico di scienze, lettere, ed arti; and, since 1819, there is published weekly, a Giornale Enciclopedico, containing articles on the physical sciences, chiefly translations, along with some pieces of poetry. Of the libraries of Rome, by far the largest is that of the Vatican. The other libraries are those of the Augustines, of the Dominicans, of the Barberini, Chigi, Colonna, and Corsini families; also that of the Collegio Romano, with its museum of antiquities and cabinet of natural history. The university library is called, from its founder, Pope Alexander VII. the Alexandrine library; and the library del Emo contains a collection of medals and mathematical instruments, along with a museum of natural history. It has manufactures of woollens, silks, velvets, hats, gloves, stockings, liquors, pomade, and artificial flowers. Population in 1817, 131,000, a number which seems to have formed, with little variation, its population for a century past. Of these, 6000 are Jews.

ROME, a flourishing township of the United States, Oneida county, New York. Pop. 2000. 108 miles W. N. W. Albany.

ROMNEY, a market town of England, in Essex. Near the middle of the town stand the market-house and town-hall. The church is an ancient building, consisting of a nave, chancel, and north aisle, with a tower at the west end. Here is, besides, one dissenting meeting-house, an almshouse, and a workhouse for the poor. Adjoining the town are cavalry barracks. Population 1838. 17 miles S. W. Chelmsford.

ROMILLY, a town of France, department of the Aube. Population 2000.

ROMNEY, New, a market town and borough of England, in the county of Kent, one of the Cinque Ports. It has an ancient church, and the hall or Brotherhood house, where the mayors, jurats, and commons of the Cinque Ports, and of the two towns of Rye and Winchelsea, usually keep their court, called the Brotherhood. It returns two members to parliament. Old Romney stands about two miles westward. Pop. of New Romney 562. 71 miles S. E. London.

ROMORANTIN, a town of France, department of the Loir and Cher, on the Sautre. Population 6100.

ROMSLEY, a village of England, in Salop, 8½ miles S. E. Bridgenorth.

ROMNEY, a small river of Wales, in Glamorganshire.

ROMSEY, a market town of England, county of Hants, on the Test. The church is a spacious building, in the form of a cross, with a low tower rising from the intersection of the nave and transept. There is, besides, a large meeting-house for Presbyterians, an almshouse for 6 widows, a charity school for 30 boys, and a free school for 16. The town-hall is a small old building. Population 5120. 8 miles N. N. W. Southampton.

ROMULUS, a township of the United States, Seneca county, New York, 200 miles W. Albany. Population 2700.

ROMA, a small island in the Northern ocean, supposed to be the north-westernmost of any part of Europe. Long. 6° W. Lat. 58. 32. N.—3d. A small island of the Hebrides.—4d. A small island of Scotland, near the island of Raasay.

RONALDSKAY, North and South, two small islands of the Orkneys. Pop. 420-1840.

ROKAR, an island of the Hebrides.

ROUSSE, a town of France, 8 miles N. Isle. Population 2200.

RONDA, a large town of Spain, in Granada, on the Guadaira. It consists of the town and a large suburb called El Mercadillo, on the other side of the river. It has 6 churches, 4 monasteries, and 2 convents. Few towns can be more romantically situated: it stands on the summit of a rocky mountain, divided by a deep ravine or fissure, over which there are two bridges, each of a single arch, the one at the height of 120 feet above the water, but the other at the almost unparalleled height of 300 feet. The public walk at Ronda is extremely romantic and beautiful. The chief manufactures of Ronda are leather and silk stuffs. Population 20,000. 38 miles W. by N. Malaga.

ROSENZOOE, a town of Piedmont, 20 miles N. N. E. Turin. Population 2500.

ROSKA, a town of Denmark, in Bornholm, 25 miles E. S. E. Copenhagen. Pop. 2200.

ROSENBERG, a town of Germany, 60 miles W. Dresden. Population 2000.

ROSENBERG, a town of Germany, 14 miles E. S. E. Dusseldorf. Population 5400.

ROSENBERG, a town of West Flanders, 20 miles S. W. Ghent. Population 4000.

ROSENBERG, a town of North Brabant, 7 miles E. N. E. Bergen-op-Zoom. Pop. 4000.

ROSA DE, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, on an eminence about a mile north of the rock of Gibraltar.

ROSENBERG, a town of France, department of the Var. Population 1700.

ROQUELAURE, a town of France, department of the Gers. Population 1800.

ROQUELAURE, a town of France, department of the Gard. Population 3200.

ROGUEVAINE, a town of France, on the Vienne, 14 miles N.E. Marseilles. Pop. 3100.

ROHAAS, a town of Norway, 67 miles S. S. E. Drontheim. It is noted for its copper mines. Population 3000.

ROUGEX, a town of the province of the Lower Rhine, near Aix-la-Chapelle. Population 3000.

RORSCHACH, a town of Switzerland, on the lake of Constance, 6 miles N. E. St. Gall. Population 2300.

ROSA, MOUNT, a mountain of the Alps, next to Mont Blanc the highest in Europe, being 15,000 feet high.

ROSANNA, a town of European Russia, 56 miles S. by W. Novogrodsk.

ROSARNO, a town of Italy, in Naples, 30 miles N. by E. Reggio. Population 2500.

ROSAS, a town of Spain, on the coast of Catalonia, 22 miles N. E. Gerona. Pop. 2600.

ROSNACH, a town of Prussian Saxony, 10 miles W. Lutzen, noted for the victory gained near it by Frederick II. Population 500.

ROSNACH, UPPER, a town of Germany, in Hesse-Darmstadt. Population 1000.

ROSTOR, a town of France, department of Finisterre. Population 2500.

ROSCOMMON, a county of Ireland, in the province of Connaught, separated from the counties of Longford and Westmeath, by the river Shannon on the east. It is bounded S. by Galway, W. by Mayo, N. by Sligo, and N. E. by Leitrim. Its greatest extent is 60 English miles, and its breadth 37 English miles. Roscommon is a flat open country, in some places sprinkled with rocks, in many interrupted by extensive bogs, and but little diversified with hills. The Shannon beautifully delineates the eastern confines, branching in a course of 50 miles into several fine lakes. The Suck divides it from Galway. The county has long been famed for its pastures; but with the increase of population, pasture has given way to tillage. The manufacture of linen and woollen stuffs has been diffused. Population 86,000.

ROSCOMMON, the chief town of the above county, 68 miles W. N. W. Dublin.

ROSCOMMON, a post village of the United States, in Steuben county, New York.

ROSEAU, or CHARLOTTE TOWN, the capital of Dominica, in the West Indies, seven leagues from Prince Rupert's bay. Houses 500, besides cottages occupied by negroes.

ROSEBURG, a post town of the United States, in Armstrong county, Pennsylvania.

ROSEDALE, EAST and WEST, two villages of England, in Yorkshire.

ROSEMARKET, a village of Wales, in the county of Pembroke.

ROSE MILLS, a post village of the United States, in Amherst county, Virginia.

ROSENAU, a town in the north of Hungary, 9 miles N. E. Gomer. Population 3200.

ROSENBERG, a town of Hungary, on the Danube. Population 3100.

ROSENHEIM, a town of Bavaria, on the Danube. Population 1700.

ROSETO, a town of the kingdom of Naples. Population 2200.

ROSETTA, a city of Egypt, near the mouth of that branch of the Nile which now forms one of the two great channels by which it enters the sea. This city was built by one of the caliphs; but the precise time is not recorded. In the 13th century it was an inconsiderable place. Rosetta is better built than Alexandria. The streets, however, are very narrow; and each successive story projects over that beneath, till at the top the opposite houses almost meet. Upon the whole, however, though the streets are not straight, and though there is no remarkable edifice, Rosetta, compared with the other eastern cities, has a neat and pleasing appearance. It is still more distinguished by the beauty of its environs, being completely embosomed in a grove of date, banana, sycamore, and other trees. The people are more employed in agriculture, and contain a smaller proportion of the rude Bedowina, or wandering Arabs, than in any other parts of Egypt. Though less turbulent, however, than the inhabitants of Alexandria and Cairo, yet, being less accustomed to Christians, they view them with a more intolerant hatred. Rosetta furnishes red cotton yarn, dressed flax, linen, and silk dyes, for the dresses common in the east. Long. 30. 22. 35. E. Lat. 31. 24. 34. N.

ROSEVILLE, a post village of the United States, in Delaware county, New York.

ROSEWAY PORT, a populous seaport on the south-east coast of Nova Scotia.

ROSHIM, a town of France, in Alsace, 14 miles W. by S. Strasburg. Pop. 3400.

ROSIERES, a town of France, 17 miles E. by S. Amiens. Population 2800.

ROSIERES AUX SALIES, a town of France, on the Meurthe, 12 miles S. E. Nancy. Population 2200.

ROSIERS, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire. Population 3000.

ROSIERES, CAVE, the south limit of the mouth of the river St. Lawrence.

ROSIERANO, a town of Italy, 6 miles S. Casale. Population 2000.

ROSHAVI, a town of European Russia, 60 miles S. S. E. Smolensk. Population 4000.

ROSTIN, a small village of Scotland, in the county of Mid-Lothian, remarkable for an ancient chapel and castle. The chapel, built A. D. 1446, is in a beautiful and rich style of architecture. 7 miles S. by W. Edinburgh.

ROSS, one of the most extensive counties in Scotland, extending from the eastern to the western seas, taking in the whole breadth of the island, and having the insular district of Lewis politically annexed to it. It is bounded N. by Sutherland, E. by Cromarty and the Moray frith, S. by Inverness-shire, and W. by the ocean, lying between 57. 0. and 57. 58. N. lat. and between 4. 0. and 5. 45. W. long. from Greenwich; towards the middle being 56 miles from north to south, but in other meridians from 23 to 34 miles.

and its greatest extent from west to east exceeding 70 miles. Area 2070 square miles. The form of this county is very irregular, being much indented by numerous lakes and friths, particularly the friths of Cromarty and Dornoch on the east coast, and on the west coast by Loch Carron, Loch Broom, and various other inlets of the sea. The eastern coast of Ross-shire, to a short distance from the sea, is well improved, abundantly fertile, and ornamented with a variety of country seats. Beyond this track, the inland districts become rude, lofty, and terrific; but, though wild and mountainous, there are many pleasant glens, or valleys, which afford abundance of pasture for black cattle and sheep. Some of the mountains in this county are of great height. Benvaish is almost perpetually covered with snow. There are many lakes in the valleys, the chief of which are Loch Mari, Loch Fannich, Loch Morrar, Loch Lichart, &c. which give rise to numerous rivers, which, while they fertilise the valleys, afford plenty of salmon and other fish to the inhabitants. The principal rivers are the Canon, the Orrin, the Beauly, which forms its boundary with Inverness-shire, and Ockel, which is the boundary with Sutherland. This county contains three royal burghs, viz. Dingwall, Tain, and Fortrose. Pop. 68,828.

ROSS, a market town and parish of England; in Herefordshire, on the Wye. Its streets are rough and narrow. The church is a handsome building, having a tower and well proportioned spire, rising from the west end. There are in the town two charity schools and an alms-house. It is noted for its cyder. Population 2957. 12-miles S. E. Hereford.

ROSS, a seaport town of Ireland, county of Cork, on a bay to which it gives name. The cathedral is a small Gothic structure. 25 miles S. W. Cork.

ROSS, a county of the United States, in Ohio. Pop. 15,514. Chief town, Chillicothe.

ROSS, NEW, a seaport town of Ireland, county of Wexford, on a large navigable stream, formed by the Nore and the Barrow. A severe battle was fought here in 1798, between the king's troops and the Irish insurgents. New Ross sends one member to the imperial parliament. 17 miles W. Wexford. Old Ross is 3 miles E. New Ross.

ROSSALL, a village of England, in Yorkshire, on the banks of the Derwent.

ROSSANO, a town of the kingdom of Naples, in Calabria Citra. Population 7000. 110 miles N. N. E. Reggio.

ROSSEL, a town of East Prussia, 51 miles S. S. E. Königsberg. Population 2300.

ROSLEBEN, a town of Saxony, on the Unstrut. Population 1100.

ROSAVILLE, a post village of the United States, in York county, Pennsylvania.

ROSWEIN, a town of Saxony, 24 miles W. Dresden. Population 2700.

ROSTAK, a city of Ommen, in Arabia, 70 miles W. Maskat.

ROSTOCK, a town of Germany, in Mecklenburg-Schwerin, on the Warnow. It is surrounded with old fortifications, has three suburbs, and is divided into three parts, the old, middle, and new towns; but the whole is built in an old fashioned style. This town contains a grand ducal mansion, and a university on a small scale. Here is also a poor-house and a Lutheran convent. Rostock has various manufactures on a small scale, viz. canvas, linen, ships' anchors, soap, vinegar; also some breweries, distilleries, and sugar refineries. Population 13,000. 40 miles W. S. W. Stralsund.

ROSTOV, a town of European Russia, government of Jaroslavl. It contains a richly ornamented cathedral, an archiepiscopal mansion, a seminary, and five churches. Population 5000. 40 miles S. S. W. Jaroslavl.

ROTA, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, on Cadiz bay. It has a castle and a monastery, and is noted for its wine. Population 6000. 7 miles N. N. W. Cadiz.

ROTHBURV, a parish and market town of England, in Northumberland, on the Coquet. The church font is remarkable for its curious sculpture. Population 891, of the parish 2009. 11 miles S. W. by W. Alnwick.

ROTHENBURG ON THE TAUBER, an old and irregularly built town of Bavarian Franconia. It contains a square and several public buildings. Population 5700. 28 miles S. S. E. Würzburg.

ROTHENBURG, a town of Germany, on the Fulda. Pop. 3000. 23 miles S. S. E. Cassel.

ROTHER, a river of England, which falls into the English channel at Hye. Also one in Derbyshire and Yorkshire.

ROTHERHAM, an irregularly built market town and parish of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, near the confluence of the rivers Rother and Don, over the latter of which is a handsome bridge of stone. The parish church is a handsome Gothic building, erected in the reign of Edward IV. Here are also meeting-houses for dissenters and Methodists. It has very extensive iron and steel works. Rotherham has an excellent weekly market for corn, cattle, and butchers' meat. Pop. 3648. 6 miles N. E. Sheffield.

ROTHERHAM, a village and parish of England, in Surrey, on the Thames, about a mile and a half east of London bridge. It is noted for its dock-yards, of which it contains no fewer than 11. Population of the parish 12,523.

ROTHERVAY, a parish and small well built royal burgh of Scotland, on the island of Bute, at the bottom of an extensive bay, in which there is safe anchorage. The inhabitants have prosecuted the herring fishery with great success. The burgh of Rothervay was formerly in a declining state; but since 1762 it has flourished; and this is owing to the herring fishery. The cotton manufacture is also prosecuted. It unites with Ayr, Irvine, Inverclyde, and Campbelltown, in sending a member to parliament. Pop. 4107.

ROTHENWISCH, a large village of Germany, in Saxony. Population 2000.

ROTHLEY, a hamlet of England, Northumberland, 11 miles W. N. W. Morpeth.

ROTHMELL, a village of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, near Settle.

ROTHSCHEN-SALM, a seaport of Finland, on the gulf of Finland, 11 miles W. S. W. Frederickscham; with a spacious harbour.

ROTHWASSER a town of Moravia, circle of Prerau. Population 2200.

ROTHWELL, a village and parish of England, in Northamptonshire. Pop. 1845.

ROTHWELL, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 2165.

ROTTENBURG, a town of Germany, in Wirtemberg. Population 4700.

ROTTERDAM, a large commercial city in South Holland, on the north bank of the Maase, which here resembles an arm of the sea, although nearly 20 miles from its mouth. The form of Rotterdam is triangular, its longest side (above a mile and a half in extent), stretching along the bank of the Maase. The town is surrounded by a moat, and entered by six gates towards the land, and four towards the water. It is traversed by the Rotte, a broad canal, which here joins the Maase. Rotterdam is intersected, even more than other towns in Holland, by canals, which divide the half of the town near the river into several insulated spots connected by draw-bridges. These canals are almost all bordered with trees. The row called the Boontjes is the finest in the city, as well in regard to buildings, as for its pleasant prospect across the Maase. Next to the Boontjes comes the Haring-vliet. The other streets are in general long, but narrow. The houses of Rotterdam are rather convenient than elegant. Their height is of four, five, or six stories. Of the public buildings of Rotterdam, the principal are the exchange, finished in 1736; the great church of St. Lawrence, from the top of which there is a most extensive prospect. After these come several other churches, the town-house, an old edifice, the admiralty, the academy, the theatre, the extensive buildings of the East India company, a number of large warehouses, and a few manufactories. Here are several commodious market-places. Rotterdam contains both an English Episcopal, and a Scotch Presbyterian church. It is of considerable antiquity; it became a privileged town, and was surrounded with walls, in the 13th century. It suffered, along with the general commerce of Holland, by the invasion of the French; but the overthrow of Bonaparte proved the harbinger of reviving prosperity to Rotterdam. Pop. 55,000. 14 miles S. E. the Hague.

ROTHWELL, a town of Germany, 42 miles N. W. Cassau. Population 2900.

ROVANO, a town of Austrian Italy, 10 miles W. N. W. Brescia. Population 5000.

ROUEN, a town of France, 20 miles W. Nantes. Population 2100.

ROVASSO, a town of Italy, in Piedmont. Population 2500.

ROUBAIX, a town of France, department of the North. It has manufactures of woollens, Turkish satins, camelots, serge, &c. Population 8000. 6 miles N. Lille.

ROUEN, a large and populous city in the north of France, the capital of the department of the Lower Seine, and formerly of Normandy. It is situated on the right bank of the Seine, in a fertile, pleasant, and varied country. The streets, though in general straight, are miserably narrow, and the town is dirty. A number of the houses are of wood. The most agreeable part of the town is that which adjoins the Seine. The squares of Rouen are small and insignificant. The ramparts, being levelled and lined with trees, contain pleasant walks. Rouen contains several public buildings of interest. The principal is the cathedral, built by William the Conqueror, and said to be one of the finest specimens of Gothic architecture in France; the church of St. Ouen, likewise a fine Gothic building, situated nearly in the centre of the town; and that of St. Maclou, considered a master-piece of its kind. The other churches and convents of the city, so numerous before the revolution, are of little note in point of architecture. The town-house, or municipality, is a handsome edifice; and the barracks, situated near the esplanade, are large and commodious. The old castle, the prisons, the exchange, and some of the buildings appropriated to the different manufactories, are worth the attention of the traveller. The great hospital is a handsome modern building; and in public markets, Rouen is not inferior to any city in France. Of the curiosities of the place, the most interesting is the bridge of boats over the Seine. Rouen has been long celebrated for its cotton manufactures; also for manufactures of woollens, linens, and in a smaller degree of iron ware, paper, hats, pottery, wax cloth, and sugar refineries. Dyeing, both of woollen and cotton, has for a number of years been conducted with care and success in this town. The manufactures of Rouen were favoured by the strict exclusion of English merchandize from the Continent; but after the peace of 1814, the general stagnation of trade, and the superabundance of hands, altered greatly for the worse the condition of the workmen. Rouen has various literary societies and schools. Its academy of belles lettres dates from 1744; its society of agriculture and the arts, from 1791. Here is a central school, classes for medicine and surgery; also a navigation and a drawing school, together with a public library, a collection of paintings and natural history, and a botanical garden. Rouen is a place of great antiquity. Pop. 87,000. 20 miles W. N. W. Paris. Long. 1. 2. 59. E. Lat. 49. 26. 27. N.

ROVERETO, a town of the Austrian states, in the Tyrol, near the Adige, once noted for its silk manufacture. 25 miles N. Verona.

ROUEN, a town of France, department of the Upper Rhine, on the Ombach. It has leather manufactures. Population 3300. 23 miles N. Altkirch.

ROUGE, a town of France, 4 miles N. W. Nantes. Population 2200.

ROUEN, a river of Ireland, which runs into the Kenmare.

ROVINGO, a town of Austrian Illyria, on the coast of Istria, built on a rock which projects into the sea, and forms two good harbours. Pop. 10,000, who are employed in the pilchard fishery, ship-building, and the sale of wood. 40 miles S. Trieste.

ROVIGO, a town of Austrian Italy, capital of a delegation of the same name, on a branch of the Adige. It is surrounded with a wall and moat, and has to the east a fortified castle. Pop. 9000. 33 miles S. S. W. Venice.

ROVLENA, a town of the Netherlands, in West Flanders, on a branch of the Lys. It has linen manufactures. Population 8500. 18 miles S. Bruges.

ROUNCESTON, EAST AND WEST, two villages of England, in Yorkshire.

ROUNSTONE BAY, a harbour on the west coast of Ireland.

ROUNDAWAY, a village of England, in Wiltshire, east of Devizes.

ROVNO, a town of Russia, government of Volhynia. Population 3300.

ROCSAY, one of the Orkney islands, about 9 miles long and 4 broad.

ROUSSELAAR, a town of the Netherlands, in East Flanders. Population 3100.

ROUSSILLON, a town of France, department of the Isere. Population 1500.

ROWAN, a county of the United States, in North Carolina. Pop. 21,543. Slaves 3767.

ROWENSTON AND ROWLEY, two villages of England, in Staffordshire and Yorkshire.

ROXBURGH, sometimes called TEVIOT.

ROXBURGH, a county of Scotland, of a very irregular form, bounded E. and S. E. by Northumberland, S. by Northumberland and Cumberland, S. W. and W. by the counties of Dumfries and Selkirk, N. and N. W. by Berwickshire, and a small portion of Mid-Lothian; lying between 55. 6. and 55. 43. N. lat. and between 2. 12. and 3. 7. W. long. from Greenwich; being from 18 to 35 miles from north to south, and from 15 to 25 and 35 from west to east; containing about 700 square miles, and 448,000 English acres, divided into 31 parishes. The surface of this county is finely diversified, and exhibits many scenes that are beautiful and romantic. The south and west divisions of the county are mountainous; but the east and north are upon the whole flat and fertile. The ridge of hills by which the county is traversed is of considerable elevation. They have mostly sloping sides, and are covered with a green sward to the very top. The prospects from their summits are extensive, variegated, and delightful. The numerous vales, whether of narrow or wide extent, are all watered by limpid streams; many of them are naked, and many fringed with wood. Some afford excellent pasture; others are in high cultivation. The extent of the whole shire has been computed as follows:—

	English Acres.
Arable and cultivated lands,	174,500
Gardens and pleasure grounds,	2,700
Natural woods,	800
Planted woods,	5,000
Pastures, mosses, roads, sites of houses, channels of lakes and rivers,	263,000

448,000

The chief rivers are the Tweed and Teviot, the Gala, the Leader, the Allan, the Eden, the Hermitage, the Liddel. The Aisle and Borthwick are northern branches of Teviot, which on the south is augmented by the Kale, the Ornam, and the Jed; and nearer to its source it receives the Rule, the Slit-rige, and the Allan. There is no coal in this county, but abundance of freestone, marble, and lime. The chief manufacture in this county is that of wool. In many parts there are sepulchral tumuli, or cairns, in which stone coffins and urns, containing human bones and ashes, have been found. There are also Druidical circles, or places of worship, and other antiquities. Valued rent, £314,663 Scots; real rent, £230,663 sterling. Population 40,892.

ROXBURGH, a parish and old city of Scotland, now altogether decayed. It stood on a peninsula formed by the junction of the Teviot and the Tweed, about a mile southwest of Kelso. The present village of Roxburgh is pleasantly situated on the Teviot. Population of the parish, 938.

ROXBURY, a township of the United States, 2 miles S. S. W. Boston. Population 3000.

—The name of various other townships.

ROVIN, a town of France, department of the Lower Charente. Population 2700.

ROSDON, a village and parish of England, in Essex. Population 790.

ROSE, a town of France, 36 miles E. by S. Amiens. Population 3100.

ROYSTON, a market town of England, in Hertfordshire, and partly also in that of Cambridge. It is noted for its corn trade. It has a church, which is the principal remains of the priory buildings; it consists of a nave, chancel, and aisles, with a low tower. In a cave under the market-place, is an ancient subterraneous chapel, discovered a few years ago, and supposed to be of Saxon origin. Population 1474. 27 miles N. London.

ROYSTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 4933.

ROZEV VOLODIMIROV, a town of European Russia, government of Tver, on the Volga. It contains 12 churches, most of them small, 3 schools, and an hospital. Population 7400. 144 miles W. N. W. Moscow.

RUABON, a neat village of North Wales, in Denbighshire. The church is handsome, and has some elegant monuments. Pop. 1352.

RUATAN, an island in the bay of Honduras, 30 miles long, and 9 wide.

RUHIANA, a town of Piedmont. Pop. 2500.

RUMICON, the ancient name of a small river in the north-east of Italy, noted chiefly as the limit prescribed by the Roman senate to the advancing of Caesar, when that commander became suspected.

RUCHIL, a river of Scotland, in Perthshire, which falls into the Erne.

RUCKINGEN, a small town of Germany, in Hesse-Cassel, on the Kinzig, 5 miles E. Hanau.

RUDENHEIM, a town of Germany, 15 miles W. Mentz. Population 2000.

RUDGELEY, a well built market town of England, in Staffordshire, near the Trent. The church is an ancient building, and consists of two low aisles. At the west end rises a handsome tower. The chief manufactures are hats and felt. Population 2677. 2½ miles E. S. E. Stafford.

RUDLAND, a river of England, in Northumberland, which joins the Coquet.

RUDOLSTADT, a well built town of Germany, on the Saale, over which is a stone bridge. It has a manufacture of flannel and other woollens. Population 4000.

RUE, a small river of Wales, in Montgomeryshire, which runs into the Severn.

RUEBOCK, a small river of Wales, in Merionethshire, which runs into the Dee.

RUEZ, a town of France, 9 miles N. W. Paris. Population 2500.

RUEASA, a town of Spain, in Valencia, bordering on New Castle. Population 5000.

RUEBACH, a town of France, 27 miles N. N. W. Bale. Population 3300.

RUEURE, a town of France, 34 miles S. Poitiers. Population 2100.

RUGBY, an irregularly built market town of England, in Warwickshire, on the Avon. It has a grammar school, now called the college. Pop. 2300. 10 miles E. N. E. Warwick.

RUGEN, an island in the Baltic, opposite to Stralsund, separated from Pomerania by a narrow channel, about a mile in breadth. It is about 30 miles in length, and from 15 to 25 in breadth; its area is about 300 square miles; its population 28,000.

RUGENWALD, a town of Prussian Pomerania, on the Wipper, 38 miles E. N. E. Colberg. Population 2500.

RUHLA, a town of Germany, 5 miles S. E. Eisenach. Population 2500.

RUISWOLD, an inland village of the Netherlands. Population 1000.

RULK, a river of Scotland, in Roxburghshire, which falls into the Teviot.

RUM, an island of the Hebrides, 9 miles long, and from 5 to 7 broad. Population 600.

RUMBERG, a town of the Netherlands, in West Flanders, 20 miles S. S. W. Bruges. Population 6000.

RUMBERG, a town of Bohemia, 58 miles N. Prague. Population 2700.

RUMFORD, a river of the United States, in Massachusetts. It joins Taunton river.

RUMILLY, a town in Savoy, 10 miles N. Chamberry. Population 3100.

RUHMELSBURG, a town of Prussia, in Pomerania. Population 1500.

RUMSEY, a village of England, Monmouthshire, on the Rumney. 3 miles from Cardiff.

RUMST, a town of the Netherlands, 7 miles E. by S. Antwerp. Population 2000.

RUNCOMB, a township of England, in Cheshire, 4 miles N. by W. Frodsham. Pop. 3163.

RUNOPORE, the capital of a district of the same name, in Bengal, on the Gogget river. Long. 69. 5. E. Lat. 25. 47. N.

RUSHALL and RUSHAM, two villages of England, in Norfolk.

RUSHMORE, a village of England, in Cheshire, near the mouth of the Mersey.

RUSHMORT, in England, 5 miles E. Windsor, in Surrey. This spot is celebrated for the conference held there on June 1215, between King John and the barons of England.

RUSWICK, a small fishing town of England, in Yorkshire.

RUTHWATE, a village of England, in Westmoreland.

RUSWELL, two villages of England, in Somersetshire and Essex.

RUSWICH, a village of England, in Gloucestershire, north-west of Stroud.

RUSSEMOND, a town of the Netherlands, on the Scheldt, 3 miles S. by W. Antwerp. Population 2000.

RUTTEN, NEW, a regularly built town of the Prussian province of Brandenburg. It has a church, school, council-house, barracks, hospital, &c. Population 4600.—Population of Old Ruppen, a little farther to the north, 1000. 35 miles N. N. W. Berlin.

RUEHMONDE, a tolerably well built town of the Netherlands, at the influx of the Roer into the Maase. It has a manufacture of woollen and other stuffs. Population 4300. 27 miles N. by E. Maastricht.

RUSA, a town of European Russia, 68 miles W. Moscow. Population 2400.

RUSHCARRACH and RUSHCROW, two villages of England, in Cornwall.

RUSHFORD, two hamlets and villages of England, in Norfolk and Yorkshire.

RUSHTON, SPENCER, a hamlet and village of England, in Staffordshire.

RUSHTON, two villages of England, in Cheshire; and one in Dorsetshire.

RUSSEBACH, GREAT, a town of Lower Austria, 20 miles N. Vienna. Population 1900.

RUSSELL, a county of the United States, in the south-west part of Virginia. Pop. 6316.

RUSSELLVILLE, a town of the United States, and capital of Logan county, Kentucky. It contains a court-house, a jail, a bank, and an academy. Population 532. 200 miles S. W. Lexington.

RUSSEA, an empire which, in point of superficial extent, is the greatest in the world; for it stretches all along the north of the eastern hemisphere, from the Baltic in the west, to the Pacific in the east, a distance of above 9000 English miles, being from the 10th to the 192d degree of E. long. From north to south, its extent, though less vast, is still great, being from the 39th to the 70th, and in some parts to the 76th degree of N. lat., exhibiting an average breadth of nearly 1500 miles, and a total extent of above 7,000,000 square miles. The Russian empire is divided into 51 provinces, of which the whole of 41, and part of 4 others, are in Europe, while Asiatic Russia, though far larger than European Russia, is so thinly peopled as to count only the remaining part of the 4 frontier and 6 entire provinces. The population of Russia is very imperfectly ascertained. According to any estimate that has been made, it amounts to 38,995,000. Such are the returns for 45 great provinces, and 2 smaller divisions. Adding the whole of Asiatic to the whole of European Russia, the amount, if we may believe recent official statements, would be 53,000,000; to which, adding nearly 3,000,000 for the kingdom of Poland, the result would be a total of 56,000,000 subject to the imperial crown. The chief towns are St Peterburgh, with 630,000 inhabitants; Moscow, 200,000; Riga, 36,000; Odessa, 36,000; Tula, 30,000; Wilna, 25,000; Cherson, 20,000; Tver, 20,000; Kiev, 20,000; Jaroslavl, 19,000; Kasan, 18,000; Kaluga, 17,000; Orsk, 16,000; Karsk, 15,000; Tscherniask, 15,000; Charkov, 15,000; Mohilev, 13,000; Revel, 13,000; Smolensko, 12,000; Woronez, 12,000; Mittau, 12,000; Viborsk, 12,000; Abo, 11,000; Vologda, 11,000; Tambov, 11,000; Simbirsk, 11,000; Smar, 11,000; Nischnei-Nowgorod, 10,000; Veliki-Ustug, 10,000; Penza, 10,000; Pskov, 10,000; Poltava, 9,000. European Russia is in general a level country, the only mountains of magnitude being those of Russian Lapland in the north, and of the Crimea in the south. A very different aspect is presented by the Oural mountains, which form part of the boundary between Europe and Asia, and stretch, under different denominations, from the Caspian in the south, to Nova Zembla in the north. Their elevation is 6000, 7000, or 8000 feet. The northern parts of European Russia are too bleak for tillage, and the inhabitants live chiefly by hunting and fishing. Another region almost equally bleak, is the north-west division, containing Finland and the adjacent country to the east. The country to the south of St Petersburg, comprising the long range of Valdai hills, and extending from 51. to 59. N. lat., has a more congenial climate. The south-west division of European Russia extends towards the Euxine, and is watered by the Dnieper and Don. The south-east region, formed of the immense plains which are traversed by the Volga in the lower part of its course, has a soil less fertile than might be supposed from its climate, being in many parts rendered unfit for vegetation by strong saline impregnations. Of these divisions, the warmest climate is that of the Crimea. The great natural feature of European Russia is its steppes, which are vast plains formed in great part of sand, and with little wood except stunted birches. The cold of Russia is proverbial, being far greater than that of the west of Europe. Corn crops cannot be at all depended on above 60. nor is it till at or near lat. 50. that the fruits of temperate climates are generally raised. On the other hand, the summer heats in Russia, as in North America, are much greater than under the same parallels in the west of Europe. Russia does not abound in lakes, except in its north-west angle, where there are the great lakes of Ladoga and Onega, with others smaller. Marshes are more frequent. Of rivers, the principal are the Volga, the Dnieper, the Dniester, the Don, the Dwina, the Duna, the Neva, the Volchov, the Msta, and the Petschora, all waters of considerable magnitude, and all navigable in consequence of the general flatness of the country. The most extensive mines are in the elevated region of the Oural and other mountains, which form the boundary between Europe and Asia; others, however, are less remote; and the iron mines at present most productive are not above 60 miles from Moscow. Salt is found in great abundance in particular districts. Agriculture is in general in a very backward state. Rye, barley, and oats, are the principal grains of the northern provinces, wheat being cultivated only in the southern. Potatoes are found in the coldest districts. Hemp and flax are adapted to a great part of the empire. Among the products of the south are tobacco and maize, the latter chiefly in the Crimea. Grazing is a natural occupation in almost every province of the empire. The Russian wool, however, is not as yet fit for the finer cloths. Goats are found in many provinces; and in the south the export of their skins is a branch of commerce, being covered with a kind of silky hair, adapted to the manufacture of shawls. Hunting and fishing occupy a considerable proportion of the inhabitants of particular districts. The most profitable objects of chase are the beaver, the ermine, the martin, the musk deer, and the musk rat. Among the other wild animals are the chamois, the antelope, the elk, the wild goat, and the reindeer; also wild sheep, and bears, and wild fowl, especially the quack and the cyder duck. Large quantities of feathers are annually exported. Manufactures are in a very backward state. The principal branches are linen, woollen, hardware, leather, soap, oil, potash, and mats. As to hardware, Tula, to the south of Moscow, is the Sheffield of Russia. Of woollens, the coarser qualities are made in various parts, the finer almost solely at Jaroslavl, in the province of St Petersburg. Moscow contains some silk works, and, along with Petersburg, the chief manufactures of the empire.

The chief seaports of Russia are St Petersburg, Riga, Odessa, and Archangel.

Those of less consequence are Revel and Lielau in the Baltic, with Cherson and Nicolai on the Euxine. Of these, by far the greatest is St. Petersburg; but Odessa (see that article) is likely soon to take the lead of Riga. Archangel is of importance, from being the only shipping place of consequence, along a remote and dreary coast. There are about 28 seaports, great and small, on the Russian coast. The chief exports from Russia are hemp, flax, seeds, leather, tallow, potash, wax, soap, timber, pitch, tar, train oil, linen, ropes, thread, poultry, and iron in bars. The imports are sugar, coffee, cotton, and other colonial goods; superfine woollens, cotton cloth, silks, dye stuffs, wine, and brandy. The value of the imports and exports are from 10 to 15 millions sterling each. The established religion is that of the Greek church, with a free toleration, however, of all sects, even Mahometans, since the beginning of the 18th century. The followers of each in European and Asiatic Russia, appear, as far as they have been enumerated, to be—

Greek church,	34,000,000
Catholics and united Greeks,	5,500,000
Lutherans,	2,500,000
Mahometans,	1,000,000

Education is still at a very low ebb in Russia, the country being too backward to provide almost any establishments except those supported by government. In 1807 were established six universities, viz. at St. Petersburg, Moscow, Wilna, Dorpat (in Livonia), Charkov in the south, and Kusan in the east. Each of the 31 great provinces of the empire has a gymnasium; each of the circles or lesser divisions a high school; while an elementary school is or ought to be established in each or in every two parishes, according to their population. Newspapers and periodical publications are of late introduction. Moscow can as yet (1830) boast of only one magazine. Petersburg has several weekly and monthly tracts, but they consist chiefly of translated essays and poetical effusions. The amusements of the Russians are like those of any other semi-barbarous people. They are in general far from cleanly. Drunkenness is a very general vice among them. Gambling is also prevalent. The Russian nation consists in fact of only two classes, the nobility and the bondsmen. The intermediate body, consisting of freemen, comprises, even in the large towns, hardly any other than foreign settlers or their descendants. The nobility are the owners of the land. The property and persons of this favoured class are exempt from taxation. They live in the most sumptuous style, and support a very numerous establishment of servants. The Russian peasantry are in a very abject condition, being bought and sold along with the estate which they cultivate, and sometimes even separately. The nobles are ignorant, proud, sensual, and in general devoid of principle. The lower orders are equally coarse in their appetites, and in many situations equally open to charges of deceit and falsehood. The Russian government is an absolute monarchy. The present emperor has given the senate the right of remonstrating against any abuse or edict contrary to law. Each of the 31 great provinces has a civil and military governor. The former has a provincial council, a court of justice for civil, and another for criminal offences; a court also for financial matters, and another for petty questions. Each circle or division of a province has a court of justice of the second rank, exclusive of local jurisdictions, such as those of the magistrates in towns, and of the nobles or petty courts in the country. The national debt, due partly to Dutch creditors, is about 1,350,000,000 sterling; the interest, at 7½ percent is £2,250,000, and £4,000,000 adding to it the provision for the sinking fund. The total revenue of Russia is loosely estimated at £15,000,000 sterling, and the highest war expenditure, in 1812 and 1813, was about double that sum. The Russian army was estimated to amount, in 1819, to—infantry, 563 battalions, 613,000 men; cavalry, 563 squadrons, 118,000 men; artillery, 47,000 men; irregulars, infantry, and cavalry, 408,000 men. The naval force of Russia consisted in 1820 of 30 ships of the line, 30 frigates, 15 sloops, and 200 galleys. The chief naval stations are Cronstadt, Revel, Sventberg in the Baltic, and Cherson, with Sevastopol, in the Euxine. The history of Russia, previous to the three last centuries, is obscure and uncertain. In 1682, Peter the Great ascended the throne, and laid the first foundation of Russian greatness. He died in 1725, in his fifty-third year, and was succeeded by his wife Catherine I. who reigned only two years, and her son Peter II. reigned only three. Anne, a niece of Peter, came to the throne in 1730, and reigned until 1740. Ivan III. a child, bore the name of sovereign hardly two years; but the reign of Elizabeth, daughter of Peter I. who came to the throne in 1742, lasted 20 years, and proved a period of considerable splendour. Peter III., a great admirer of Frederick II., succeeded, and concluded a peace. He lost both his throne and his life in the first year of his reign. From that time the imperial power was vested in his widow, the well known Catherine II.; under whose reign Russia was greatly aggrandized. Catherine died in the end of 1796, leaving her throne to her son, the feeble and vacillating Paul I. who interfered in the affairs of Europe as an enemy of France; and, under Suvorow, the Russian arms gained great fame. Paul, however, owing to his intolerable tyranny, was soon murdered; and his son Alexander, the present emperor, succeeded him. The history of Russia, since this period, is intimately connected with that of Europe.

Russia, Rxb., formerly an independent duchy, which belonged to Poland after 1396.

RUSSIA, WHITE, once a part of Lithuania, now forms the governments of Smolensk, Mohilev, and Vitepsk.

RUSSECHUK, a large town of European Turkey, in Bulgaria, at the influx of the Cara Lou into the Danube. It has a castle of considerable strength, with several mosques, baths, and other public buildings. It has considerable manufactures of cotton, silk, linen, woolen, and tobacco. Population 24,069, composed of Greeks, Turks, Armenians, and Jews. 40 miles E. Nicopol.

RUTCHESLER, a township of England, in Northumberland.

RUTHERFORD, a county of the United States, in North Carolina. Pop. 18,302. 24, in West Tennessee. Population 10,363, including 2701 slaves.

RUTHERFORDTON, capital of Rutherford county, United States, in North Carolina.

RUTHERGLEN, or RUTHER, a parish and royal burgh of Scotland, in Lanarkshire, 2½ miles above Glasgow. It was erected into a royal burgh by King David I. in 1125. It now consists of one principal street, nearly half a mile in length, and upwards of 100 feet in breadth. It was noted for its ancient castle, which is now demolished. The church, an ancient Gothic building, was pulled down in 1794, and a new one built in its stead. It unites with Glasgow, Renfrew, and Dunbarton, in sending a member to parliament. Population 4649. 9 miles W. Hamilton.

RUTHIN, an ancient market town of North Wales, in the county of Denbigh, and still a respectable and flourishing place. It extends about a mile in length. The church is a large building, of considerable antiquity. It has a town-hall, and a new jail, which is a handsome and commodious building. It contributes with Denbigh, in sending a member to parliament. Population 1294. 15 miles S. W. Holywell.

RUTHVEN, a small river of Scotland, in Perthshire, which falls into the Erne.

RUTOLIANO, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples. Population 4500.

RUTLAND, an inland county of England, bounded by Leicestershire W., Lincolnshire N. and E., and Northamptonshire S. E. and S. It lies within 6. 25. and 6. 45. W. long. and 52. 15. and 52. 32. N. lat. It is the smallest county in England, extending only about 10 miles in length, and 15 in breadth. Area 200 square miles. The aspect of Rutlandshire and face of the country is generally speaking, very beautiful, especially where well timbered, being much diversified by small and gently rising hills running E. and W., with valleys of about half a mile in width intersecting them, so that fresh views occur at the distance of every few miles. The chief rivers are the Welland and the Gwash or Wash, the Chater and the Little Eye. The climate has always been considered as mild, healthy, and pleasant. The soil is very various, but is on the whole fertile. Limestone is found in various parts. Chalybeate springs also abound. Rutlandshire is almost entirely an agricultural country. Population 18,457.

RUTLAND, a small island near the west coast of Ireland.

RUTLAND, a county of the United States, on the west side of Vermont. Pop. 39,488.

RUTLAND, a township and village of the United States, capital of Rutland county, Vermont, on the Otter creek. Population 2397. 48 miles W. by N. Windsor.

RUTURUSSE, a town of Hindostan, province of Gundawach. Houses 1000. Long. 82. 35. E. Lat. 22. 15. N.

RUVI, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples, province of Bari. Population 3300.

RUVSARKE, a village of the Netherlands, in South Brabant. Population 3100.

RUTAZELAND, a town of the Netherlands, province of West Flanders, 18 miles W. Ghent. Population 3400.

RYAONE, a river of Wales, in Denbigh and Montgomeryshires.

RYKMAN, a town of European Russia, on the Volga. Population 2300.

RYDAL, a village of England, Westmoreland, 3 miles from Ambleside.

RYE, a river of Scotland, in Ayrshire, which falls into the Gamock.

RYE, a regular and well built market town and borough of England, in Sussex, and one of the Cinque Ports, at the mouth of the Rother. The church is reckoned one of the largest parish churches in the kingdom. There are, besides, meeting-houses for Methodists, Quakers, Baptists, and other dissenters. Rye trades chiefly in hops, wool, timber, and iron goods. The herring and mackerel fisheries are also prosecuted to a great extent, and the trawling for flat fish. It sends two members to parliament. Formerly Rye was a considerable port; but it has been superseded by the rise of other ports on the same coast. Population 3500. 63 miles S. E. London.

RYE, a town of Denmark, in North Jutland, 18 miles W. Aarhus.

RYE, a township and village of the United States, in Rockingham county, New Hampshire. Population 1620.

RYEGATE, a market town, borough, and parish of England, in Surrey, consisting of two streets. The church is built of squared shafts of limestone, and has two aisles, and an embellished tower. There are no remains of its castle. The market-house is a small brick building, with piazzas below, and a chamber above, for the purposes of a town-hall. Ryegate is a very ancient borough, and has sent two members to parliament since 21d Edward I. Population 2000. 10 miles E. Guildford.

RYEGATE, two hamlets of England, East and West Ridings of Yorkshire.

RYEMAN, a hamlet of England, in Rutlandshire, 13 miles E. Oakham.

RYEMORE, a village of England, in Durham, near Sunderland.

BEIR, GARD, and LITTLE, two hamlets of England, in Northumberland.

BYLER, a hamlet of England, in Dorsetshire, near Whitechurch.

RYLSE, a town of European Russia, government of Kursk, 52 miles W. S. W. Kursk. Population 4000.

S.

SA, a village on the ruins of Sais, formerly the metropolis of Lower Egypt.

SAANE, a town of Arabia, the most important in the Sahan, or mountainous district of Yemen, 388 miles N. N. E. Mocha.

SAARFELD, a town of Germany, duchy of Saxe-Coburg. Population 3700. 50 miles W. S. W. Altenburg.

SAANE, a river of Switzerland, which falls into the Aar, 7 miles W. Bern.

SAANEN, a well built town of the Swiss canton of Bern, 25 miles E. S. E. Lausanne.

SAARBRUCK, a town of the Prussian province of the Lower Rhine, on the Sarre, 18 miles E. Luxembourg. Population 2700.

SAAR-LORAIN, a fortified town of the Prussian province of the Lower Rhine, 34 miles E. Thionville. Population 4100.

SAAR UNION, a town of France, department of the Lower Rhine, on the Saar, 45 miles N. E. Nancy. Population 2800.

SAATZ, the chief town of a circle of the same name, in Bohemia, on the Egria, 39 miles W. by N. Prague. Population 3800.

SAAI, an island in the West Indies, belonging to the Dutch, about 12 miles in circumference, extended in one delightful valley, which produces necessaries for the inhabitants, and materials for several manufactures; but being destitute of any port, its commerce is inconsiderable. 15 miles N. W. St. Eustatius, and 24 S. W. St. Bartholomew.

SARINE, a river of North America. It rises in the plains to the N. W. of Natchitoches, in about the 33d degree of N. lat., and flows into the gulf of Mexico, Long. 92. 57. W. Lat. 23. 30. N.

SARONETTA, a town of Austrian Italy, 19 miles S. N. W. Mantua. Population 6000.

SARLS, a town of France, department of the Sarthe, at the junction of the rivers Sarthe and Elve. Population 8100.

SARLE, a river of the United States, in New York, which rises in Essex county, and runs north-east into Lake Champlain.

SARLE, an island in the North Atlantic ocean, 30 miles in circumference. 90 miles E. E. Cape Breton.

SARLE, a river of Canada, which runs into St. John's lake.—Also of America, which runs into Lake Erie.

SARLES D'OLONNE, LES, a seaport of France, in La Vendee, 40 miles E. Nantes. Population 3300.

RYESEN, a small town of the Netherlands, province of Overijssel. Population 1500.

RYSWYK, a small town of the Netherlands, 2 miles S. E. the Hague. Population 1700.

RZESZOW, a town of Austrian Poland, on the Wisloka, chief place of a circle of the same name. Population 4600.

SABRES, a small town of France, department of the Landes. Population 1800.

SABUGAL, a town of Portugal, province of Beira. Population 1400.

SACALA, a district of Abyssinia, famous for its excellent honey.

SACANDAGUA, a river of the United States, in New York. It joins the Hudson.

SACKET'S HARBOUR, a post village and port of entry of the United States, in Jefferson county, New York, at the mouth of Black river, on Hungry bay, at the east end of Lake Ontario. It is one of the best harbours in the state. It has a dock-yard, with large store-houses, and is strongly defended by forts and batteries. There are two sets of barracks, capable of accommodating 4500 men. At the bottom of the harbour is the village, that contains from 60 to 70 houses. The works in different situations altogether render the place very secure, and capable of resisting a powerful attack. From recent events, the Americans have attached much importance to it, and, with their accustomed courage, have spared no exertion to render it formidable. This place is rapidly increasing in population and importance. 176 miles N. W. Albany.

SACON, a post town and port of entry of the United States, in York county, Maine, on the Saco, opposite Biddeford, with which it is connected by three bridges. It is a considerable town, favourably situated for trade and manufactures. 100 miles N. N. E. Boston.

SACO, a river of the United States, which rises in New Hampshire, and runs into the sea, below the town of Saco.

SACRAMENTO, ST. or COLONIA, a city and colony held by the Portuguese, opposite the city of Buenos Ayres, on the shore of the river Plata. It is now of little comparative importance.

SADAO, a river of Portugal, in Alentejo. It falls into the Atlantic at Setubal.

SAMPLEWORTH, a village of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire.

SARTILLARA, a town of the Netherlands, in East Flanders. Population 2300.

SAFFI, a seaport of Morocco, capital of the province of Abda. It has a very fine road, affording safe anchorage in every season, except in winter. It was long the centre of European commerce; but the emperor having given to Mogador the monopoly of the trade with Europe, obliged the merchants to transfer their warehouses thither. Population stated by Mr Jackson at 12,000. Long. 9. 5. W. Lat. 32. 30. N.

SAFFRON WALDEN, a market town and parish of England, in Essex, so named from the great quantities of saffron formerly cultivated in the vicinity. The town is irregularly built, and not paved. The church is a spacious and very elegant pile of English architecture, chiefly of the age of Henry VII. and VIII. Besides the church, here are meeting-houses for Independents, Baptists, and Quakers. It has some almshouses and a free school. The keep of the ancient castle is still to be seen. It has a considerable trade in maling, and a manufacture of bolting cloths, checks, and fustians. Fine yarn and socks are also made here. The town was incorporated by Edward VI. in the year 1549. Pop. 4154. 27 miles N. W. Chelmsford.

SAGAN, a town in Prussian Silesia, on the Bober. The chief manufactures are woollens and linen. Population 4700. 63 miles N. W. Breslau.

SAGATUCK, a river of the United States, in Connecticut, which runs into Long Island sound.

SAGHAIEEN, called also ORU JESAO, or UPPER JESAO, and by the natives Tobolsk, a large island or peninsula, situated at the eastern extremity of Asia, immediately to the north of the large island of Jesso or Matemi. It is about 440 miles in length from north to south, and from 40 to 130 in breadth from east to west. It is separated from the continent by a narrow channel, called the channel of Tartary.

SAG HANOUR, a port village and port of entry of the United States, in Suffolk county, New York, on the east end of Long Island, and on the Atlantic. Houses 80.

SAGRE, a village and commune of Switzerland, canton of Neuchâtel. Pop. 1200.

SAGUNA, a town, on a bay of the same name, in Corsica.

SAGOON, or GARZA SAGOON, an island of Bengal, at the entrance of the Hoogly or Bhaguratty river. It is 8 miles in length by 4 in breadth. Sagoon island has been for time immemorial a celebrated place of Hindoo pilgrimages.

SAGUES, a petty town of Portugal, province of Algarve, 146 miles S. Lisbon.

SAGUENAY, a large river of Canada, which, after a course of about 100 miles, flows into the river St Lawrence, on the west bank, at the town and harbour of Tadoussac. Its current is broad, deep, and uncommonly vehement, liable to interruptions from rocks, and it is also of an extraordinary depth. At its discharge, attempts have been made to find the bottom with five hundred fathoms of line, but without effect.

SAGY, a town of France, department of the Saône and Loire. Population 2100.

SAGAUN, a town of Spain, province of Leon, on the Cea. Population 4000.

SAHARA, or the GREY DESERT, an immense track of territory in Northern and Central Africa, interposed between the states of Barbary and Soudan, or the countries watered by the Niger. It presents, almost throughout, the spectacle of a naked burning plain of sand, destitute alike of water or vegetation, and altogether unfit for the support of human life. In its greatest length it stretches nearly across the whole of Africa, from the Atlantic to the Nile, forming a space of forty-five degrees of longitude, or about 3000 miles. Its breadth from Barbary to Soudan is not so great, and may be estimated at 12 degrees, or 1000 miles. It forms thus by much the most extensive desert to be found in any part of the world.

SAHARUNPORE, the capital of a district of Hindostan, province of Delhi, situated chiefly between the Jumna and the Ganges. It is an open town, and suffered much from the Mahrattas, but is now recovering. Long. 77. 23. E. Lat. 34. 18. N.

SAID, or SAHID, a name applied to Upper Egypt, comprehending the territory extending along the Nile, from the vicinity of Cairo, to the frontier of Nubia.

SAIDA, or SEIDA, a seaport town of Syria, built on the site of the ancient Sidon. This is celebrated as the most ancient of the Phœnician cities, preceding even Tyra. Like other Turkish towns, it is now dirty, ill built, and full of modern ruins. The ground in the neighbourhood, however, is laid out in orchards and gardens, which appear very beautiful at a distance. The magnificent harbour, composed of vast moles stretching out into the sea, is now entirely destroyed. The trade of Saïda is still considerable, as being the emporium, not only of Damascus, but of the surrounding country. The exports consist of corn, silk, raw and spun cotton, particularly the last. Population 7000 or 8000. Long. 35. 14. E. Lat. 33. 23. N.

SAINTON, or SAUNTON OF THE HILL, a township of England, in Cheshire.

SAINA, a lake, or rather a succession of lakes, in European Russia, government of Finland, said to be 250 miles in length.

SAINS, a village of France, department of the Aisne. Population 2300.

SAINT, a small river of Wales, in Caernarvonshire, which runs into the Menai strait, at Caernarvon.

ST ANTONIO, the most northerly of the group of the Cape de Verd islands. It is about 9 leagues long and 4 broad, and is very fertile, yielding plentifully maize, plantains, potatoes, melons, oranges, &c. Pop. 2500. Long of N. W. point, 25. 3. W. Lat. 17. 10. N.

ST DENIS, a wooden built town of the island of Bourbon, and residence of the governor. It is the only spot on the island where a landing is possible. Long. 35. 20. E. Lat. 21. 50. S.

ST GEORGE, a small island forming part of the group of the Azores, near the western coast of Africa. It forms a long narrow ridge, about 10 leagues in length and 2 in breadth. Long. 28. W. Lat. 38. 39. N.

St JAGO, an island near the coast of Africa, the largest of the group of the Cape de Verd islands. It is about 60 miles in circumference, mountainous, but fertile and well cultivated. It yields grain in abundance; also sugar, indigo, coffee of superior quality, orchilla wood for dyeing, and most kinds of tropical fruits, as oranges, guavas, coconuts, limes, plantains, pine apples, tamarinds, and a species of apple called custard apple. Cotton is produced in great plenty, and manufactured throughout the island.

St JAGO, or RENEIRA GRANDE, a town of St Jago, formerly the capital, and containing the residence of the governor. It has a large church, and a convent with twenty-four Portuguese monks. A castle commands the town. 7 miles S. W. Porto Praya.

St LUCIA, one of the smaller Cape de Verd islands, between St Nicholas and St Antonio, 24 miles long and 6 broad. St Vincent is rocky and dangerous.

St MARY, a small island, one of the Azores. Long. 23. G. W. Lat. 37. N.

St MATTHEW, a small island in the Atlantic ocean, 340 miles N. Ascension.

St MAWES, a small borough town of England, in the county of Cornwall. It is chiefly inhabited by persons concerned in the fishery. The town is of very remote origin. The family of the Marquis of Buckingham possesses the chief influence and property in the borough. St Mawes castle is nearly opposite that of Pendennis, which forms the chief defence of Falmouth harbour. 2½ miles E. N. E. Falmouth.

St MICHAEL'S, an island of the Atlantic, the largest of the group called the Azores. It is nearly 100 English miles in circumference, and contains one city, five principal towns, 84 parishes, and about 60,000 inhabitants. It is covered with mountains of various forms, and some of stupendous magnitude, produced apparently by volcanic eruptions. There are boiling springs in this island; also a number of hot and cold springs in the immediate vicinity of each other. The soil is fertile, and yields abundant crops of wheat, maize, and beans. There are also vine and orange trees. The oranges of St Michael's are particularly esteemed.

St NICHOLAS, one of the Cape de Verd islands, near the coast of Africa. Pop. 6000.

St PETER and St PAUL, a seaport village, situated in the bay of Awatka, on the south-eastern coast of Kamtschatka.

SAINTE, a town of France, department of the Lower Charente, near the Charente. Its streets are narrow and winding, and its houses ill built; but it contains several ancient remains, such as a Roman amphitheatre, an aqueduct, and a triumphal arch of white marble on the bridge across the Charente. There is likewise an ancient cathedral. Pop. 2400. 84 miles N. Bourdeaux.

SAINTONGE, the former name of a province in the west of France, lying along the Atlantic, to the north of Guienne.

SAKARA, a village of Upper Egypt, about 20 miles above Cairo.

SAKIT, a village of Upper Egypt, on the western side of the Nile.

SAL, a neat town of Sweden, government of Westera. Population 2100.

SAL, an island forming part of the group of the Cape de Verd islands, about 16 miles long, and 6 or 7 broad.

SALA, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples, 13 miles N. Policastro. Population 5500.

SALABILLO, a river in the province and government of Buenos Ayres, which falls into the sea near the mouth of the river Plata.

SALADO, an abundant river of South America, in the province of Tucuman, which rises in Lat. 24. S. and joins the Parana at Santa Fe, in Lat. 31. 40. S.—It is the name of various rivers in South America.

SALAHIAH, a fortress on the eastern frontier of Egypt. Population 6000.

SALAIGNAC, a town of France, department of the Dordogne. Population 2100.

SALAMANCA, a province in the west of Spain, forming the south part of the kingdom of Leon, and bordering on Portugal. It lies between 6. and 7. of W. long., and 40. and 41. 33. of N. lat.; has a superficial extent of 1500 square miles, with 210,000 inhabitants. It consists of mountains and plains, and is watered by the Douro, the Agueda, the Yeltes, the Tormes, and the Alagon. The mountains are rich in minerals. The more favourable exposures produce vines, and those fruits which require a warm climate. The soil is good.

SALAMANCA, an ancient city of Spain, on the ascent of three hills, with the river Tormes flowing at their base. The town is surrounded by a wall, has 13 gates, several squares, and fountains, and a number of masonry buildings; but the streets are all on uneven ground. The principal square is extensive, with piazzas all around. The houses are uniform, and of a good height, with balconies in front; and one of the sides of the square is occupied by the town-house. The other public buildings are the cathedral, the university, the churches, and the convents. The cathedral is a majestic Gothic edifice, entered by a fine gate, and admired in the interior for the beauty of the vaults, and the finish of the sculpture. The churches, great and small, are in number 25, the monasteries 20, and the convents 11. The university of Salamanca was founded in 1228. The buildings are extensive, and the number of professorial chairs is fully 60. Population 13,600. It is noted for the defeat of the French under Marmont, by the British, in 1812. 183 miles W. N. W. Madrid.

SALAMANCA, a pretty little town of Mexico, in the intendancy of Guanajuato, 7075 feet above the level of the sea. 150 miles N. W. Mexico.

SALAMANCA DE BALCALAR, a city of the province of Yucatan, in New Spain, 180 miles S. Merida.

NALAMIGUA, the ancient Panora, a considerable river in Thessaly, which discharges itself into the gulf of Salonica.

NALAMIA DE LA SERENA, a town of Spain, in Estremadura, 27 miles N. E. Llerena.

NALANCHÉ, a town of Saray, 28 miles S. E. Geneva. Population 1400.

NALAPICHÉ, a river of South America, which falls into the gulf of Darien.

NALAT, a river of France, which falls into the Garonne.

NALDANIA BAY, a bay of the Atlantic, on the southern coast of Africa, to the northward of the Cape of Good Hope.

NALDANNA, a town of Spain, province of Leon, on the Carrion. Population 4000.

SALEM, a well built seaport of the United States, and capital of Essex county, Massachusetts. It is chiefly built on a tongue of land, formed by two inlets from the sea, called North and South rivers; over the former of which is a bridge, upwards of 1500 feet long, connecting Salem with Beverly; and the latter forms the harbour. It contains a court-house, a jail, an almshouse, a market-house, a custom-house, a grammar-school, an orphan asylum, and 11 churches for different sects. It has numerous public and private schools. None of the public buildings are remarkably splendid. The appearance of Salem is very irregular. It has an elegant common, containing about 10 acres, surrounded by a handsome public walk, which is planted with rows of trees. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in trade and navigation. The shipping belonging to this port in 1816, amounted to 34,484 tons. The East India trade has, for several years, been carried on here with great spirit and advantage. Population 12,613. 14 miles N. N. E. Boston. The name also of numerous towns.

SALEM, a county of the United States, in New Jersey. Population 12,761.—2d. In South Carolina.

SALEM, a township and handsome village of the United States, in Washington county, New York. Pop. 2033. 46 miles N. E. Albany.—2d. A post township of Salem county, New Jersey, on Salem Creek, 31 miles from Delaware bay. It contains about 200 houses.

—3d. A handsome Moravian town of Stokes county, North Carolina. Here is an excellent Moravian academy for females. 100 miles W. Raleigh.

SALEM CROWN ROADS, a post village of the United States, in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania.

SALEM, an inland town of Sicily. It has a number of churches and convents. Population 8000. 38 miles S. W. Palermo.

SALERNES, a town of France, département of the Var. Population 2300.

SALERNO, a city of the kingdom of Naples. The streets are narrow and irregular, and have a gloomy appearance. There is in front of the cathedral 28 ancient granite columns, with Corinthian capitals, of good workmanship. The town contains a number of other churches and convents. Population 10,000. 20 miles E. S. E. Naples.

SALFEBURY, two villages of England, in Hertfordshire and Lancashire.

SALÉYEN, an island in the Eastern seas, off the southern extremity of the island of Celebes, about 40 miles in length, and 8 in breadth. Population 60,000.

SALFORD, a village of England, in Somerset, on the Avon.

SALFORD ARNOTTS, or LITTLE, a village of England, in Warwickshire.

SALFRAZ, an island in the Eastern seas, divided from Calour by a narrow strait, about 7 mile wide; 8 or 10 miles in circumference, and admirably cultivated. It contains 12 villages. Population 3000.

SALFERTO, a town of Piedmont, 18 miles E. Mondovi. Population 3000.

SALINA, or SALINÉ, anciently Disyma, one of the Lipari islands, in the Tuscan sea, belonging to Naples, 18 miles in circuit.

SALERS, a post township and village of the United States, in Oneida county, New York, with 90 dwelling-houses, and about 80 houses for the manufacture of salt. Spots the salt springs which abound here. Population 1357. 130 miles W. Albany.

SALWAR, the name of various capes, points, and bays, in South America and West India.

SALWY, a village and parish of Scotland, in Fifehire, on the road from Dunfermline to Auchtermuchty. Population 1123.

SALINE, a river of the United States, in Illinois, which flows into the Ohio.—Also a river of Louisiana, which unites with Black Lake river.

SALINER, a village of the United States, in the Missouri territory, on the Mississippi, note: for salt works.

SALINO, a river of Naples, which falls into the gulf of Venice.

SALINA, a tolerably well built and fortified town of France, département of the Jura, on the Furieuse. It has a trade in wine and brandy; but the principal article of export is salt. Pop. 8203. 92 miles S. Besançon.

SALISBURY, or NEW SALISBURY, an ancient city of England, in Wiltshire, in a vale on the Avon. The place consists of two parts, the Close and the City. The Close comprises an area of nearly half a mile square, and is occupied entirely by the cathedral, the bishop's palace, the deanery, prebendal houses, and some handsome private dwellings, held chiefly under the bishop and chapter. It is strictly ecclesiastical property, and is separated from the City, which is occupied by the civil and trading part of the community, by a lofty wall on the east and south sides. The principal streets of the city are laid out with great regularity. Five of them run from north to south, and other five cross these at right angles. This arrangement gives great airiness and cleanness to the town. Each street also has a channel, through which runs a perpetual stream of water supplied from the river Avon. Numerous small bridges have been erected over these rivulets; and hence this city has been compared to Venice. The principal public buildings are the cathedral, the bishop's palace, and the college of matrons, in the Close; and in the City, the parish churches, the new council-house, the infirmary, and the county jail. The cathedral is justly regarded as one of the finest ecclesiastical buildings in Europe, and as a highly interesting specimen of the architecture of the 13th century. It is also remarkable for being the most uniform, regular, and systematic structure of the kind in England. The whole building may be viewed as composed of four distinct portions, viz. the church, the tower and spire, the cloister, and the chapter-house. The church consists of a nave, with two lateral aisles, a bold and lofty porch projecting on the north side, near the west end, a large transept with an eastern aisle, a choir with lateral aisles, and a second or small transept with an aisle, a lady chapel at the west end, with an intermediate vestibule or double aisle terminating the choir. On the south side of the church are a cloister, chapter-house, consistory court, and a vestry. The tower above the roof of the church consists of two divisions, and is decorated with pilasters, columns, canopies, &c. The bishop's palace, which stands near the south-east corner of the cathedral, is a large irregular building, evidently the work of different and distant periods. The college of matrons, erected by bishop Ward, is a regular building, with commodious gardens. The parish churches in the city are St. Martin's, St. Thomas's, and St. Edmund's, none of which are particularly distinguished. The new council-house is of brick, with the angles of each front ornamented with rustic work in stone. Courts of law occupy the left, and the council the right wing. There are, besides, the infirmary, a new county jail, assembly and court rooms, and a theatre. The grammar school, at which the celebrated Addison was educated, is in a very flourishing condition. Here are also two charity schools. In Catholic times, Salisbury appears to have contained a great variety of religious establishments, the remains of some of which are still in existence; and the hospital of St. Nicholas continues still to maintain a master and 12 poor persons. The other hospitals in the city are Trinity hospital, Brickley's, Eyre's, Blackwell's, Taylor's, and Broad's, besides which there are various almshouses. Salisbury is noted for its manufacture of cutlery. Formerly it was also remarkable for its manufacture of flannels, fancy woollens, serges, fustians, &c. but that branch of trade is now nearly extinct. The market-place is a spacious open square, near the centre of the city. Salisbury sends two members to parliament. A parliament was summoned to meet here in the reign of Edward I.; and ther was held in 1326. Population 3763. 21 miles N. E. Southampton.

SALISBURY, a post village of the United States, in Orange county, New York. 23. A post town and port of entry of Somerset county, Maryland. Hayes 100. 24. A flourishing post town and capital of Rowan county, North Carolina. Population 600. 24 miles S. W. Salem. 25. A post township and village of Essex county, Massachusetts, on the Merrimack. Pop. 2017. 36 miles N. N. E. Boston.—The name of various other townships.

SALZELD, LITTLE, a hamlet of England, in Cumberland, near the parish of Great Salfield.

SALIZ, YA, a town of France, department of the Gard. Population 2080.

SALLER, a large seaport on the western coast of Morocco, at the mouth of a river of the same name. It was formerly the great hold of Moorish piracy, and immense depredations were committed from it upon European commerce. It has still an immense and dreary dungeon, forced under ground, for the reception of the unfortunate captives. The river, which formerly admitted large vessels, is now choked up with sand. Saller is a walled town, and has a battery of 24 pieces of cannon, which commands the road, and a redoubt that defends the entrance of the river. On the opposite side of the river stands Rabat, called often New Saller, and which is properly to be considered as another quarter of the same town. It has been chiefly frequented by Europeans, and contained once numerous factories belonging to them. But by the arbitrary fiat of the emperor, the trade has been transferred to Mogador. Near the mouth of the river are the remains of a very large and strong castle. Long. 6. 40. W. Lat. 34. 3. N.

SALLIER, a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Population 6400.

SALLI, the name of several principalities or domains in Germany.

Saller, a small river of Germany, which falls into the Moselle.

SALT, ORS, a town of the Prussian province of the Lower Rhine, 45 miles N. Luxembourg. Population 2500.

SALMON, a river of the United States, in Connecticut, which joins the Connecticut.

SA, another which flows into Lake Ontario.—The name of various other small rivers.

SALO, a town of Austrian Italy, in the Duchy of Tyrol. It has manufactures of linen, yarn, and thread. Population 4000. 20 miles N. W. Vienna.

SALON, a town of France, in Provence, 19 miles E. Arles. Population 6000.

SALONICA, a town of European Turkey, in Thessaly, at the foot of Mount Parassus. The district here contains several well built mosques and churches, as well as spacious and commodious baths. Population 2000. 43 miles N. E. Lepanto.

SALONICA, a large and handsome city of European Turkey, in Maccalon, at the northern extremity of a great bay or gulf. It is built on the acclivity of a steep hill, which rises from the bay at its north-east extremity. The circumference of the walls is about five miles. The domes and minarets of mosques are seen rising from among the other buildings, environed, as usual in Turkey, by cypresses, and giving a general air of splendour to the place, which is more comfortable and cleanly than most Turkish towns. It trades in cotton, tobacco, corn, and wool. Salonica has few antiquities. Population 70,000. 273 miles W. Constantinople.

SALSAS, a fortress in the south of France, 9 miles N. Perpignan.

SALSETTE, an island on the western coast of Hindostan, formerly separated from Bombay by a strait 200 yards wide, across which, in the year 1805, a causeway was carried. It is 18 miles long by 14 broad, and is well adapted for the cultivation of sugar, cotton, hemp, indigo, &c.; but it has hitherto been kept in a state of nature, for the purpose of supplying Bombay with wood, charcoal, and sea salt, of which there is a considerable manufactory. Salsette is remarkably rich in mythological antiquities; and the remains of reservoirs, with flights of stone steps round them, and the ruins of temples, &c. indicate a former state of prosperity and extensive population.

SALSTON and SALT, two villages of England; in Cambridgeshire and Staffordshire.

SALT, a river of the United States, in Kentucky, which enters the Ohio.—2d, Another tributary to the Scioto.—The name of various islands and rivers in the West Indies and United States.

SALT, or SALINE RIVER, two rivers of Louisiana, which fall into the Missouri and Mississippi.

SALTA, a river of South America, which runs east, and enters the Vermejo.

SALTA, OF SAN MIGUEL DE SALTA, a city and district of Tucuman, in South America, in the beautiful valley of Lerma, through which passes a river, on whose shore the city stands, having a fine bridge over it. It contains 400 houses, and 500 men capable of bearing arms. Long. 64. 1. 30. W. Lat. 24. 17. S.

SALTASH, a market town and borough of England, in Cornwall, on the Tamar, from which the main street rises with a direct and steep ascent. The houses rise above each other to the summit of the hill, near which stand the chapel dedicated to St Nicholas, and the mayoralty hall. Here are meeting-houses for Baptists and Methodists, and a small school. A considerable traffic is carried on in malt and beer, &c. It sends two members to parliament. Pop. 1548. 219 miles S.W. London.

SALTCOATS, a seaport of Scotland, in Ayrshire, originally a natural harbour, which has been improved so as to admit of full loaded vessels of 100 tons burden. It has large salt-pans for the manufacture of salt. It exports large quantities of coals, and imports grain.

It is a cheerful place, and is much resorted to for sea-bathing. 23 miles S. Greenock.

SALTCOTE, a village of England, in Cumberland.

SALTEES, two rocky islets in St George's channel, near the Irish coast.

SALTERFORD, a hamlet of England, county of Nottingham.

SALTERFORTH, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

SALTERGATE, a hamlet of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

SALTERNESS, a seaport, village of Scotland, in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright.

SALTPLEET, a seaport town of England, in Lincolnshire. Population 185.

SALTILLO, a town of Mexico, province of Cohahuila. Population 6000.

SALTMARSH, a village of England, East Riding of Yorkshire, on the Ouse.

SALTON, a village of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

SALTON, a parish of Scotland, in Maddingtonshire, containing two small villages, East and West Salton. Population 684.

SALTWARY, a village of England, in Wiltshire. Population 462.

SALTWATER, a village of England, in Sussex, S.W. of Chichester.

SALTWICH, a village of England, in Northumberland, near Stannington.

SALVADOR, St, the name given by the Portuguese missionaries, to the capital of the kingdom of Congo, in Western Africa. The Portuguese had a quarter assigned to them, which they built partly of stone, and enclosed. The British expedition under Captain Tuckey, though they found no Portuguese on any part of the Zaire, were yet informed that a few still remained in the capital.

SALVADOR, St, a large and opulent city of Brazil, at the entrance of All Saints bay. It is erected on the summit of a hill, with the exception of a single street that ranges parallel to the beach. The buildings are chiefly of the 17th century, ill constructed, and of slight materials. As in all Catholic cities, the churches are the most distinguished edifices. The cathedral is large, but falling into ruin; while the college and archiepiscopal palace, or rather house, adjoining, are kept in thorough repair. The grand church of the ex-Jesuits is by far the most elegant structure in the city. It is composed entirely of European marble, while the internal ornaments are superfluously rich. The college and monastery adjoining it have lately been converted into a commodious hospital. The church and monastery of the Franciscans are extensive buildings. The Carmelite church is more modern and more elegantly ornamented than that of the Franciscans; and the monastery adjoining is immensely rich. Among the parochial churches, those of the Conception, Pillar, and St Peter, are the most distinguished within the city, and those of St Antonio and Victoria near the bar, which stand in such striking situations, as to form excellent spectacles. There are, besides these, several other churches, and a variety of chapels, monasteries, and convents; all presenting the same tedious load of ornaments, bad taste, and excess of superstition. The principal squares or places are, the one immediately adjoining the palace, and that of the Jesuits. The streets are confined and narrow, wretchedly paved, never cleaned, and therefore disgustingly dirty. In the royal square is the house or palace of the governor, which is an old insignificant building; and opposite are the mint and public offices. The third side contains the court-house, and the remaining one the hall of the senate, and the prison. The custom-house and wharfs are on the beach, as is also the dock-yard; near which are the marine store-house and offices, with the house of the intendant, or port commander. In the vicinity of the town are the villas of the superior class of inhabitants. The city is protected by a number of forts and batteries; but, with the exception on the sea side, of one of eighteen guns, of St. Philips, and Do Mar, they are nearly nugatory, from the want of ordinance. The city is defended on the land side, at the south and north passes, which are parallel to the beach, by three forts; on the south by the extensive fortification and outworks of St. Pedro's, the completest of the whole, but at the present moment nearly dismantled. The government dock-yard admits on the stocks only a ship of the line at a time. There are several private dock-yards near the city, in which well modelled merchant ships of all dimensions are built. This capital carries on a considerable commerce, chiefly in linen, cloths, hats, silk and thread stockings, grain, rice, flour, biscuit, port-wine, household utensils, negroes, oil, cheese, butter, and bacon; in exchange for which, it exports gold, sugar, tobacco in leaf and in dust, brazil wood, skins, balsam of copahu, ipocacuanha, and many other drugs. Population 100,000, of whom 30,000 are whites, 30,000 mulattoes, and the rest negroes. Long. 38. 32. 30. W. Lat. 12. 58. S.

SALVADOR, ST. a town of Guatimala, in South America, on the banks of a river, which, at the distance of 12 miles, runs into the Pacific ocean. Pop. 5000 Indians, whites, and castes. Long. 69. 20. W. Lat. 13. 14. N.

SALVADOR, ST. one of the Bahama islands, in the North Atlantic ocean. Population 657. Long. 73. 40. W. Lat. 24. 20. N.

SALVADORE, ST. a town of the Sardinian states, duchy of Montserrat. Pop. 5260.

SALVAGES, a group of uninhabited islands, or rather rocks, off the coast of Africa, immediately north of the Canaries.

SALVATERRA, a town of Portugal, 144 miles E. N. E. Lisbon. Population 2000.

SALVATERRA, the name of four small towns of Spain, in Galicia, Navarre, Estremadura, and Alava.

SALUDA, a river of the United States, in South Carolina, which unites with Broad river.

SALVATERRA, ANGERS, a town of France, 561 miles W. Montpelier. Pop. 2650.

SALVIAC, a town of France, department of the Lot. Population 1000.

SALIZZO, a town of the Sardinian states, at the foot of the Alps, near the Po. It contains the cathedral, and several churches worth notice. Pop. 18,000. 28 miles S. Turin.

SALIZZOLA, a town of Piedmont. Population 2000.

SALZA, a large river of Austria, which falls into the Inn.

SALZBURG, a province of the Austrian empire, lying between Styria, Tyrol, and Bavaria. Area 2800 square miles. It consists partly of a great valley, with the river Salza flowing along the middle; partly of a track of alternate mountains and defiles. The ground is highest in the south, where it approaches to, or rather forms part of, the Noric Alps. This country produces, in favourable situations, wheat, oats, barley, and other corn. Its pastures are more extensive; but its chief wealth consists in its minerals, viz. the salt of its northern, and the metals of its southern mountains. Pop. 142,000.

SALZBURG, a city of Austria, on the Salza. The cathedral is more remarkable for solidity than elegance. The university is now converted into an academy. The most striking feature of the place is its romantic situation amidst lofty mountains. The citadel stands in a bold and commanding situation, and one of the gateways is cut through a solid rock, being 300 feet in length, 30 in height, and 24 in breadth. Population 13,000. 63 miles E. S. E. Munich.

SALZBURG, a town in the N. E. of Hungary, noted for its brine springs. Pop. 4000.

SALZUNGEN, a town of Germany, on the Werra, 10 miles N. W. Schmalkalden. Population 2200.

SALZWEDDEL, a town of Prussian Saxony, government of Magdeburg, on the Elbe, which divides it into the old and new towns. Pop. 6000. 72 miles E. Hanburgh.

SAMADONG, a large town of the island of Java, 144 miles S. E. Batavia.

SAMALOUT, a village of Upper Egypt, on the Nile. 14 miles S. Girge.

SAMANA, a large bay at the east end of the island of St. Domingo.

SAMANAP, a town on the S. E. coast of the island of Malacca. Long. 114. E. Lat. 7. 3. S.

SAMAR, one of the Philippines, situated south-east from the huge island of Luzon, from which it is separated by a strait about five leagues in breadth. Its length it may be estimated at 140 miles, by 60 the average breadth. In this island the soil is extremely fertile, easily cultivated, and rewards the industry of the labourer with at least forty fold. Sugar-canes, cabbages, garlic, onions, melons, the Chinese oranges, lemons, vegetables, and several other kinds of fruit, are cultivated in this island. The cocoa tree grows to an uncommon size. Long. 124. 15 to 123. 52. E. Lat. 11. 15 to 12. 45. N.

SAMARANG, a town of the island of Java, on the north coast, and the principal central station in the island. It is a large town, with a considerable European population. It is defended by a stone parapet and rampart, with bastions and a wet ditch. The town has a neat appearance, with a number of good houses. It has also a fine large church, a new town-house, and a variety of other public buildings, both elegant and commodious, within and without the city. Here was formerly a public school. The Chinese and native population here are very considerable. Crowded villages overspread the neighbourhood. 343 miles E. Batavia. Long. 110. 38. E. Lat. 6. 54. S.

SAMARCAND, a great city of Asia, once the capital of Independent Tartary, and, under Timur, of an empire which extended over a great part of the continent. Its population was estimated in 1400 at 150,000. Its inland commerce was most extensive with Russia, Tartary, India, Turkey, and particularly China. The pomp of Timur's court, and of his numerous palaces, is said to have almost surpassed description. Our information with regard to the modern state of this once celebrated capital, is very imperfect. Of late, under the government of Shah Murad Bey, Samarcand has recovered somewhat of its former greatness, and still contains many fine buildings. 130 miles S. Bukh. Long. 64. 9. E. Lat. 39. 37. 23. N.

SAMATA, a village of Upper Egypt, on the left bank of the Nile.

SAMATAN, a town of France, in Gascony, on the Save. Population 1600.

SAMBAJLAS, a name given to a numerous cluster of small islands near the coast of America, in the Spanish Main, extending in clusters along the northern shore of the isthmus of Darien. Long. 74. 25. W. Lat. 0. 26. N.

SAMBASS, a town and river on the west coast of Borneo. Long. of the river 109. 5. E. Lat. 1. 12. N. The town is about 40 miles up the river. It was attacked in 1812 by the British, who were repulsed; and again in 1813, when they had complete success. Long. 109. 25. E. Lat. 1. 3. N.

SAMBAYA, or SOLÉ RIVER, a river on the north coast of the island of Java, and the largest in the island.

SAMBOANGAN, a Spanish fortress and settlement on the south-west extremity of the island of Magindano. Population 1000. Long. 122. 10. E. Lat. 6. 45. N.

SAMBOR, a town of Austrian Poland, on the Dniester, 160 miles E. S. E. Cracow. Population 6400.

SAMBRE, a river which rises in French Flanders, and falls into the Meuse at Namur.

SAMER, a town of France, 12 miles S. E. Boulogne. Population 1600.

SAMLESBURY, a village of England, in Lancashire. Population 1779.

SAMONX, a town of Italy, in Savoy, 24 miles W. Geneva. Population 3100.

SAMOGITIA, a tract of country in Russian

Lithuania, forming the north-west part of that great province, and bearing the title of county. It lies to the south of Courland, and to the north of Prussia proper, having part of its western boundary along the Baltic, but without any harbour of consequence. It is a very backward country, the inhabitants living in wretched hovels. The wild animals are bears and wolves; occasionally the elk and wild ox. The soil is in many parts productive.

SAMOS, an island of the Grecian archipelago, separated only by a narrow strait, from the opposite continent of Asia Minor. It was much celebrated by the ancients for its fertility, and for the excellence of its fruits. This reputation it still preserves. It contains, indeed, two ranges of very lofty mountains, some parts of which are verdant, covered with woods, and display the most beautiful scenery; but others are bleak and rocky. Between these, however, are rich and cultivated plains, which produce abundantly grain, vines, and all the fruits of this climate. The population is estimated by Tournefort, at only 12,000; but Mr. Turner, the most recent traveller, states it at 60,000, dispersed through 18 large, and 20 small villages. A Turkish aga, indeed, resides here; but the whole power is in the hands of the Greeks. Each village elects, from among its principal inhabitants, three persons, called primates; these choose annually three chiefs, who are the rulers of the island. Samos flourishes, and is reckoned the richest island of the archipelago. It exports from 20,000 to 25,000 cantars of grapes, 15,000 barrels of raisins, with wine to such an extent, that the duty amounts to 36,000 piastres. It produces also valuable marble, and contains mines of lead, silver, and even, it is said, of gold. On the east end of the island, about two leagues from Cora, are the remains of the ancient city of Samos, the magnificence of which was much boasted in antiquity.

SAMOSCH, two rivers of Transylvania, one of which joins the other at Deca. The great Samosch joins the great river Theiss.

SAMOTRACE, a savage people who traverse the immense and frozen desert extending along the ocean, which forms the northern boundary of Asia.

SAMFORD GREENEY, a hamlet of England, in Devonshire, 4 miles E. by N. Tavistock.

SAMPTOWN, a village of the United States, in Middlesex county, New Jersey.

SAMSEBY, a village of England, in Lancashire, on the Ribbles, N. E. Preston.

SANSÓN, a county of the United States, in North Carolina. Population 6620, including 2849 slaves.

SANSÓN, a city of Asia Minor, on the coast of the Black sea. It lies on the site of the ancient Sansus. The modern town contains 2000 inhabitants.

SAN, a large river of Austrian Poland, which falls into the Vistula, near Sandomir.

SAN ANTONIO, a town of the Canasas, on the Apur. Lat. 7. 30. N.

SAN BLAS, a small seaport on the western coast of Mexico, on an island formed by the Rio Grande de Santiago, as it enters the Pacific.

SAN FERNANDO, a town of Chili, and capital of the province of Colchagua.

SAN JOSE, a town of West Florida, on a bay of the same name, near Cape St Blas, in the gulf of Mexico.

SAN PEDRO DE BATOPILAS, a town of Mexico, in the intendancy of Durango, formerly noted for its mines. Pop. 8000.

SAN SALVADOR, the capital of a province in Guatimala, of the same name, 12 miles from the coast of the Pacific ocean, and 140 miles S. E. Guatimala.

SANAA, a city of Arabia, capital of Yemen, and residence of the Imam. It is situated in a barren and stony valley, enclosed by lofty hills. 128 miles N. N. E. Mocha. Long. 44. 9. E. Lat. 15. 21. N.

SANA, the capital of a province of the same name in Peru, on the shore of the river of its name, on the coast of the Pacific ocean, 80 miles N. Truxillo. Long. 79. 35. 30. W. Lat. 6. 52. S.

SANCERRE, a town of France, department of the Cher. Population 2500.

SANDA, a small island of Scotland, on the coast of the peninsula of Kintyre, near the Mull of Kintyre.

SANDA, a small island of the Hebrides.

SANDAY, one of the Orkney isles, about 13 miles from north-west to south-east, and varying in breadth from 1 mile or less in some places, to 2 or 3 in others. It is of an irregular figure, having many extended points, with bays running inland. Being low and flat, which prevents it from being seen at a distance, it is remarkable for shipwrecks. A lighthouse is now erected in the vicinity of Sanday; 100 feet above the level of the sea, which displays a strong revolving light every other minute. Population 1860.

SANDRACH, a market town of England, in Cheshire. Here is a large ancient church, and a chapel for the Methodists. Population 2005. 26 miles E. Chester.

SANDEC, New, the chief town of a circle of the same name in Austrian Poland, on the Donjeitz, 160 miles W. Lemberg. Pop. 3700.

SANDRIWOOD ISLE, a large island in the Eastern sea, about the 10th degree of N. lat. about 100 miles long, by 30 of average breadth.

SANDRAX, a small island of the Hebrides, in the district of Barra.

SANDSFORD, a hamlet of England, in Berkshire, 34 miles E. Reading.

SANDSGATE, a hamlet of England, in Kent, a few yards from the sea. It is resorted to for sea-bathing, and is accommodated with comfortable inns for that purpose.

SANDHEAD, a village of England, in East Medina, Isle of Wight.

SANDHOLM, a hamlet of England, in Northamptonshire, 4 miles E. N. E. Hexham.

SANDHOLM, a village of England, East of York, on the Coulney.

SANDING ISLES, Pulo Sanding, or Sanding, two small islands off the S. W. coast of Sumatra.

SANDOMIR, a palatinate or province of the kingdom of Poland, according to the territorial division of 1915. It is bounded on one part by the Vistula, on another by the Pili-ca, and by the palatinate of Cracow. Area 4700 square miles. Population 448,000.

SANDOMIR, a town of Poland, on the Vistula. Population 2100.

SANDOWN, a village of England, in the Isle of Wight, 2 miles S. Brading.

SANDTOWN, a village of the United States, in Gloucester county, New Jersey.

SANDVIJET, a town and fortress of the Netherlands, on the Scheldt. Pop. 1100.

SANDUSKY RIVER, a river of the United States, in Ohio. It runs into Sandusky bay.

SANDUSKY, a town of the United States, in Huron county, Ohio, on Sandusky bay.

SANDUSKY LAKE OR BAY, at the south-western side of Lake Erie, 20 miles long, and 24 broad.

SANDWICH, an irregularly built market, borough, and seaport town of England, in the county of Kent, one of the Cinque Ports, and formerly a place of considerable trade and business, but now much decayed, on account of the choking up of its harbour with sand. It stands on the Stour, about two miles from the coast. Sandwich contains three parish churches. St Clement's is a spacious building, consisting of a nave, chancel, and aisles, with a massive tower of Norman architecture, rising from four semicircular arches in the centre of the building, and supported on strong piers. St Mary's church is also large, consisting of a nave, chancel, and north aisle. St Peter's appears to be the work of different periods. Sandwich has a guild-hall, of three stories; also a free grammar school, and a charity school. As one of the Cinque Ports, it sends two members to parliament: number of voters about 350. Population 2912. 13 miles E. Canterbury.

SANDWICH, a town of Lower Canada, on the river Detroit. Houses 100.—Also two townships of the United States.

SANDWICH ISLANDS, a group of islands in the North Pacific ocean, discovered by Captain Cook and King, in the year 1778, and which have been subsequently visited by Vancouver, Meares, Turnbull, and various other navigators. They consist of 11 islands, extending in latitude from 18. 54. to 22. 15. N. and in longitude from 159. 30. to 205. 6. E. They are called by the natives, 1. Owhyhee. 2. Mowee. 3. Raiat, or Oranai. 4. Morotinee, or Morokinnee. 5. Kahouroe, or Tahoorowa. 6. Mutotoi, or Morakoi. 7. Woa-hoo, or Oahoo. 8. Atoui, Atowi, or Towi, and sometimes Kowi. 9. Nehechow, or Onechew. 10. Orehoua, or Reehoua; and 11. Tahora; and are all inhabited, excepting Morotinee and Tahora. Besides these islands, Captain Cook was told of another by the Indians, called Atahapapa, or Kamodapapa. In respect of climate, they differ little from the West India islands, though they are more temperate. The inhabitants of the Sandwich islands are undoubtedly of the same race with those of New Zealand, the Society and Friendly islands, Easter island, and the Marquesas; a race that possesses, without any intermixture, all the known lands between the latitudes of 47. S. and 20. N. and between the longitudes of 164. and 260. E. Their manners are also similar, though they have greatly improved by their intercourse with civilized nations. These islands were visited in 1802 by Captain Turnbull, who found that great improvements had taken place since they had been visited by Captain Vancouver. It was only in 1794 that Vancouver laid down the keel of Tamaahua's first vessel; but so effectually had he applied himself to the establishment of a naval force, that when Captain Turnbull was at the island, he had upwards of 20 vessels of different sizes, from 25 to 70 tons; some of them were copper bottomed. His palace is built after the European style, of brick, and glazed windows, and defended by a battery of ten guns. He has also between 200 and 300 body guards to attend him. The Sandwich islanders are anxious to open a communication with China. They have grown industrious and enterprising, and are fast advancing in the arts of civilized life. Pop. 400,000.

SANDWICH LAND, a name given by Captain Cook to the most southerly land discovered in the South Atlantic ocean.

SANDWICH, a hamlet of England, in Cumberland, 3 miles S. by W. Whitelaven.

SANDY, BIR, a river of the United States, in Ohio, which falls into the Tuscarawa.

SANDY DESERT, an extensive and barren tract of Hindostan, province of Gujerat.

SANDY FORK, a post village of the United States, in Mecklenburg county, Virginia.

SANDY HILL, a post village of the United States, in Kingsbury, New York.

SANDYHILLS, a village of Scotland, 3 miles E. Glasgow.

SANDY HOOK, a small island of the United States, on the coast of New Jersey.

SANDY HOOK, a post village of the United States, in Culpeper county, Virginia.

SANDY ISLAND, one of the smaller western islands of Scotland.—The name of various insignificant islands in the Atlantic and Eastern seas.

SANDY LICK, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania. It joins the Alleghany.

SANDY POINT, a town on the south-west coast of the island of St Christopher.

SAROVY RIVER, a river of Canada, which runs into Lake Superior.—2d, A tributary of the Kennebeck, United States, Maine.—3d, A river of the United States, which runs into the Ohio.

SARVAG, a town of Piedmont, province of Alba. Population 8600.

SARGANER, a town of Hindostan, province of Ajmeer, district of Kotah. Lat. not ascertained.

SANGAY, a mountain of South America; in Quito, 16,123 feet high.—Also a river of Quito.

SANGERSHAUSEN, a town of Prussian Saxony, 44 miles W. by N. Leipzig. Pop. 3000.

SANGIR, an island in the Eastern seas, between 36 and 40 miles in length, and between 10 and 15 miles in breadth. Population 12,000. Long. 125. 44. E. Lat. 3. 28. N.

SANGUESA, a town of Spain, 81 miles N. W. Saragossa. Population 2600.

SANKEY, GREAT, a village of England, in Lancashire. Population 531.

SANOK, a circle of Austrian Galicia, on the borders of Hungary, between the circles of Jaslo and Sambor. Its area is about 1800 square miles; its population 211,000.

SANQUEZ, one of the largest rivers of Pataguna, in South America, which enters the Rio Negro.

SANQUHAR, a parish and royal burgh of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, on the river Nith. It has only one principal street. The town or council-house, with a school-house and prison connected, is a handsome building, with a beautiful spire. On an eminence stands the old castle of Sanquhar, once a building of considerable magnitude and extent. The east end of the parish church is of remote antiquity, and appears to have been a place of worship in the times of Popery. There are, besides, two meeting-houses for the United Secession Church, and one for Baptists. The different branches of carpet manufacture is carried on here. Sanquhar joins with the burghs of Dumfries, Annan, Kirkcubright, and Lochmaben, in electing a representative to parliament. Population 3026. 33 miles S. Kilmarnock, and 57 S. Glasgow.

SANSANDING, a large town of Bambarra, in Central Africa, on the Niger, the seat of a very considerable trade, particularly salt. The market-place is an extensive square, constantly crowded with people, and where the different articles are exposed on stalls, shaded by mats from the heat of the sun. 25 miles N. E. Segou.

SANTA, the capital of a province of the same name in Peru, 216 miles N. N. W. Lima.

SANTA, a river of the same province, which enters the Pacific ocean.

SANTA BARBARA, a seaport on the coast of North America, in New California. It was founded in 1786, and contains 1160 inhabitants. Long. 240. 43. E. Lat. 34. 24. N.

SANTA CRUZ, a seaport, capital of the island of Tenerife, and residence of the governor of the Canaries, situated on a plain, surrounded by bleak and barren mountains. Its only advantage is in its road, which affords safe anchorage. The streets are tolerably broad and straight, and many of the houses are well built. The society consists chiefly of merchants. Travellers remark the vast number of ecclesiastics to be seen on the streets; they complain also of the crowd and importunity of beggars. Population 6400.

SANTA CRUZ DE LA SIERRA, a province of the viceroyalty of Buenos Ayres, already described under the title of Cruz. It is also the name of the capital of the province, which was founded in 1558, and afterwards removed 160 miles more to the south, to the place where it now stands, in Lat. 14. 20. S. at the foot of a chain of mountains.

SANTA FE, a town of Mexico, intendancy of Guanaxuato, 60 leagues W. N. W. Mexico. Lat. 22. 4. N.

SANTA ROSA, a town of Mexico, in the province of Cohahuila. Population 4000.

SANTANDER, the capital of a canton of the same name in Spain. Its port is commodious, and well-sheltered. The harbour is protected by two forts or castles, and the entry of vessels into the inner basin is facilitated by a fine pier 30 feet wide. Population 10,000. 60 miles N. W. Bilbao.

SANTAREM, a town of Portugal, on the Tagus, 47 miles N. E. Lisbon. It is divided into the Lower Town and the Upper Town. It has 13 parish churches, and 14 monasteries. Population 8000.

SANTE, a river of the United States, in South Carolina, formed by the union of the Congaree and Wateree.

SANTFAY, a town of Majorca, 30 miles E. S. E. Palma. Population 3000.

SANTIA, a town of Piedmont, 28 miles N. E. Turin. Population 2900.

SANTILAYA, a town of Spain, 92 miles E. by N. Oviedo. Population 1600.

SANTILLIEN, a town of France, department of the Ardèche. Population 2100.

SANTON AND SANTON DOWNHAM, two villages of England, in Cumberland and Suffolk.

SANTONA, a harbour in the north of Spain, 18 miles E. Santander. The adjoining village and fort were occupied in 1813 by the French, with a considerable garrison.

SANTORINI, or NANTORIN, an island in the Grecian archipelago, lying between the islands of Naxos, Nio, and Candia. Length and breadth 8 miles. Population 10,000.

SANTOS, a well built town and port of Brazil, in the captaincy of St Paul's. It is a place of considerable trade: its population, consisting chiefly of merchants, shopkeepers, and artificers, amounts to 7000. From this port the Spanish territories, as well as Rio Grande, receive a great proportion of their sugar, coffee, rum, rice, mandioca, indigo, &c.; in return they bring hides and tallow, which are generally exported hence to Europe. The harbour of Santos has a safe entrance, and is very secure. Long. 46. 31. W. Lat. 23. 59. 30. S.

SANTOS, a town of South America, in Panama, on the bay of Panama. Long. 81. 8. W. Lat. 8. N.

SANXAY, a town of France, department of La Vienne. Population 1700.

SANZANO, a town of Italy, Principato Citra. Population 2400.

SAOZA, a small river of Naples, which falls into the sea at Gaeta.

SAONA, an island in the West Indies, to the south-east of the mainland of Hispaniola. From the sea it has a low, long, level appearance, is 21 miles in extent, and 7 wide.

SAONTE, a large river of France, which joins the Rhone at Lyons.

SAONE, UPPER, a department in the east of France, including the northern part of Franche Comte, and inclosed N. by the department of the Vosges, and E. by that of the Upper Rhine. Superficial extent, 2300 square miles. Pop. 312,000. The principal rivers are the Saone, the Oignon, the Drugeon, and the Amaine.

SAONE AND LOIRE, a department in the east of France, comprehending the southern part of Burgundy, and bounded by the departments of the Jura, the Rhone, and the Allier. Area 3500 square miles. Population 471,000. The principal rivers are the Saone, the Loire, the Arroux, the Doubs, and the Nille.

SAORGIO, a well built town of the Sardinian states, county of Nice. Pop. 3100.

SAPAROUA, one of the small Ambuyna isles, about 35 miles from Ambuyna.

SAPNEER, a village of the Netherlands, 10 miles S. E. Groningen. Population 2100.

SAPONARA, a town of the kingdom of Naples, Principato Citra. Population 3200.

SAPRI, a town of the kingdom of Naples, Principato Citra. Population 1500.

SARAGOSSA, a celebrated city of Spain, the capital of Arragon, on the Ebro, which is here about the middle of its course, and separates the city from its suburbs. Without being regularly fortified, it is surrounded by an earthen wall, and is entered by 12 gates. It is built throughout of brick; the houses are seldom above three stories in height; the streets narrow and crooked, except one long and wide street called the Cozo. Here are two bridges over the Ebro, one of wood, the other of stone. Saragossa has 17 churches, and nearly 40 convents. Its cathedral is a large Gothic building, in a good style of architecture. The city has no fort of consequence, but it has a university founded in 1478; also an academy of fine arts, with schools for drawing, and other branches of education. Here are also two public libraries, but both are on a small scale. It is noted for the dreadful sieges which it supported in 1693 and 1699. Population 50,000. 175 miles E. N. E. Madrid. Long. 1. 42. 15. W. Lat. 41. 34. 15. N.

SARAIK, a town of European Russia, on the Ostr, 40 miles W. N. W. Riazan. Pop. 3700.

SARALBE, a town of France, department of the Moselle. Population 2000.

SARANAC, a river of the United States, in New York. It flows into Lake Champlain.

SARANSK, a town of European Russia, government of Penza, on the rivers Innara and Saranja. It has manufactures of soap and leather. Population 8000. 63 miles N. Penza.

SARAPIL, a town of European Russia, government of Viatka, on the Kuma, 168 miles S. E. Viatka. Population 6000.

SARATOGA, a county of the United States, in New York, bounded N. by Warren county, E. by the Hudson, S. by Albany county, S. W. by Schenectady county, and W. by Hamilton and Montgomery counties. Population 33,147.

SARATOGA, a township and flourishing village of the United States, in Saratoga county, New York, on the Hudson. It is memorable as the place where General Burgoyne's army surrendered in 1777.

SARATOV, a great province or government of Russia, partly in the south-east of Europe, partly in Asia. It lies along both sides of the Volga, in the form of a triangle, having on the one side the country of the Don Cossacks, on the other that of Astracan. Area, 91,000 square miles. Population 1,000,000.

SARATOV, a neatly built wooden town of European Russia, capital of the above government, on the Volga, 465 miles S. E. Moscow. Population 5000.

SARAYT, a village of Herat, in Persia, 66 miles N. S. E. Hamadan.

SARRENB, a town of France, department of the Meurthe, on the Sarre. Pop. 1500.

SARDINIA, the name of a kingdom in the south of Europe, composed in part of the island of Sardinia, but in a much greater proportion of Piedmont, Savoy, and the territory of Genoa. For an account of these, see the different articles. The Sardinian states became in 1814, nearly what they had been in 1792, with the important addition of the Genoese territory. Area 27,500 square miles; population 4,000,000. The principal towns on the continent are Genoa, containing 76,000 inhabitants; Turin, 65,000; Alexandria, 30,000; Nice, 19,000; Coni, 17,000; Verucelli, 17,000; Mondovi, 14,000; in the island, Cagliari, 35,000; Sassari, 30,000.

SARDINIA, a large island of the Mediterranean, situated to the south of Corsica, between Long. 7. 57. and 9. 51. E. and Lat. 38. 53. and 41. 17. N. The geographical division is into the two nearly equal parts of Capo di Cagliari and Capo di Sassari; the former being the southern, the latter the northern part of the island. The political divisions are into marquisates, counties, baronies, &c. The form of the island is oblong; its length from north to south is 162 miles, its breadth between 60 and 70. The surface of the island presents a pleasant variety of hill and dale. The climate of Sardinia has less intensity of heat or cold than is common in continental countries under the same parallels of latitude. The soil is in general fertile, but the system of agriculture is wretched. Several of the mountains contain valuable minerals, particularly lead and silver. The vine and the olive flourish; also the mulberry, the lemon, the orange, the fig, and in the warmest situations, the pomegranate and palm tree. Sugar, cotton, coffee, and indigo, might be cultivated in the warmer valleys; but all is backward in this country, the interior of which contains extensive tracks of desert, and still more extensive forests of aged oak, chestnut, and cork trees. Even horses range in a wild state in these unfrequented spots. Sardinia is very favourably situated for commercial intercourse, having a number of good harbours, such as Palmas, Nova, and Cagliari. It has no manufactures, except some coarse linens and woollens; no exports, unless rude produce, such as corn, cattle, salted provisions, the proceeds of the tunny fishery, hides and skins, fruit, some wine and brandy, but, above all, large quantities of salt. Area 9250 square miles; pop. 620,000.

SARDOAL, a town of Portugal, 3 miles N. Abrantes. Population 3000.

SAREFTA, a town of European Russia, on the Volga. Population 800.

SARRENG, a small town of Switzerland, 45 miles E. S. Zurich.

SARGE, a town of France, department of the Loir and Cher. Population 1000.

SARQUEMINES, a town of France, department of the Moselle. Population 2300.

SARX, a small island in the English channel, dependent on Guernsey. Pop. 300. Long. 2. 52. W. Lat. 49. 30. N.

SARX, a small river of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire. It falls into the Solway firth.

SARLAT, a town of France, department of the Dordogne, on the Sarlat, 98 miles E. by N. Bourdeaux. Population 4000.

SARNEN, a town of Switzerland, on the Aa, 9 miles S. Lucerne. Population 2000.

SARNO, a town of Italy, near the eastern base of Mount Vesuvius. It is noted for the superior quality of the silk raised in its environs. It is the see of a bishop. Population 12,000. 20 miles E. Naples.

SAROS, or SCHARON, a county in the north of Hungary, bordering on Austrian Galicia, from which it is separated by the Carpathians. Area 1400 square miles. Pop. 142,000.

SAROS, NAGY or GREAT, a town of Hungary, county of Saros. Population 2000.

SAROS-PATAJ, a well built town of Hungary, on the Bodrog. It has a Catholic, a Calvinist, and a Greek church. Population 3000. 14 miles N. by E. Tokay.

SARP, or SARPEN, a town of Norway, 10 miles W. S. W. Fredericksstadt.

SARRAINS, a town of France, department of the Vaucluse. Population 2000.

SARRE, a village of England, county of Kent, in the Isle of Thanet.

SARRE, or SAAR, a river of Germany, which joins the Moselle at Conserbruck.

SARREBOURG, a town of France, department of the Meurthe, on the Sarre. Pop. 1500.

SARTHE, a river of France, which joins the Mayenne, 6 miles above Angers.

SARTHE, or SARTE, a department in the north-west of France, comprising the greater part of the ancient province of Maine, and bounded by the departments of the Orne, the Loir and Cher, and the Mayenne. Area 2450 square miles. The principal rivers in this department are the Sarthe, the Loir, and the Huise. Population 119,000.

SARUM, OLN, an ancient borough of England, in the county of Wilts, which, though now reduced to a single farm-house, still sends two members to parliament.

SARZANA, an ancient town in the Genoese territory, on the Magra, 43 miles E. S. E. Genoa.

SARZEAU, a town of France, department of the Morbihan. Population 5400.

SARZEDAS, an inland town of Portugal, 117 miles E. N. E. Lisbon. Pop. 3000.

SASCACHAWAN, a large river of North America, which rises in the rocky mountains, and falls into Lake Winnipeg, in Lat. 51. 45. N.

SAZLAVI, a town of European Russia, in Vollynia. Population 5100.

SASAPRAS, a river of the United States, in Maryland. It falls into the Chesapeake.—There is a village near its head.

SASANO, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples. Population 3700.

SASSARI, a large and well built town of Sardinia, near the north-west coast. It is the seat of the provincial government and courts of justice, as well as of a university, erected in 1775. Here are also several lesser seminaries. Population 30,000.

SASSEBACH, a neat village of Germany, near which Marshal Turenne was killed by a cannon ball on 27th July 1675. Population 900. 17 miles E. by N. Strasburg.

SASSUOLO, a town of Italy, duchy of Modena, near the Secchia, 8 miles S. Modena. Population 3100.

SAS VAN GHENT, a town and fort of the Netherlands, 10 miles N. Ghent. Pop. 1900.

SATALIA, or ANTALIA, a city of Caramania, in Asia Minor, beautifully situated at the head of a gulf to which it gives name, round a small harbour. The streets appear to rise behind each other like the seats of a theatre. The city is inclosed by a ditch, a double wall, and a series of square towers, about 30 yards asunder. Population 8900. Long. 30. 45. E. Lat. 36. 60. N.

SATANAH, a celebrated town and fortress of Hindostan, province of Bejapore. It capitulated to the British, in February 1818. Long. 74. 3. E. Lat. 17. 50. N.

SATAUKET, a post village of the United States, on Long Island. Houses 70.

SATKELIGH and SATENTHWAITE, two villages of England, in Devonshire and Lancashire.

SATHMAR, a county of Hungary, lying adjacent to the north of Transylvania, on both sides of the river Sarmos. Area 2350 square miles. Population 187,000.

SATHMAR, a town of Hungary, in the palatinate of the same name. The inhabitants carry on an active trade, and cultivate a large quantity of wine. In the neighbourhood are salt mines. Pop. 10,000. 255 miles E. Presburg.

SATILLA GREAT and LITTLE, two rivers of the United States, in Georgia, which run into the sea.

SATILDEU, a town of France, department of the Ardèche. Population 2100.

SATURNIN, ST., a town of France, department of the Mouths of the Rhone. Population 1500.—Another in the department of the Puy de Dôme. Population 1500.

SAVA, a town of the kingdom of Naples, in the Terra d'Otranto. Population 1600.

SAVAGE ISLAND, in the South Pacific ocean, 33 miles in circumference. Long. 169. 37. W. Lat. 19. 1. S.

SAVANNAH, a river of the United States, which is formed by the union of the Tugelo and Keowee. It separates South Carolina from Georgia, and runs south-east into the Atlantic. It is navigable for large vessels to the town of Savannah, 17 miles, and for boats of 100 feet keel to Augusta, 340 miles, above Savannah.

SAVANNAH, a city and port of entry of the United States, in Chatham county, Georgia, on the Savannah, 17 miles from its mouth. It contains a court-house, a jail, an almshouse, an hospital, a theatre, a public library, an academy, an exchange, and seven churches for different sects. The city a few years since was almost wholly built of wood, with very few elegant houses; but a large proportion of the houses recently erected are handsomely built of brick. The city is regularly laid out, and contains 10 public squares, each consisting of two acres, with a pump in the centre. The squares and public walks are planted with china trees, which contribute much to the ornament, comfort, and salubrity of the place. Savannah is the great emporium of the state, and is a place of much trade. On the east side of the city is Fort Wayne; at Five Fathom Hole is Fort Jackson; and on Tybee island, near the mouth of the river, there is a light-house. 118 miles N. W. Charlestown, and 123 S. E. Augusta. Long. 81. 10. W. Lat. 32. 8. N.

SAVANNAH CHANNEL, towards the S. E. point of the S. side of the island of Jamaica, a short way west of Port Morant harbour.

SAVANNAH LA MER, a town on the south side of the island of Jamaica, in Cornwallis county, which has a good anchorage for large vessels. Houses from 60 to 70. Long. 78. G. W. Lat. 18. 12. N.

SAVANNAH LA MER, a town at the east end of the island of St Domingo, on the south side of the bay of Samana.

SAUCONA CREEK, in Pennsylvania, runs into the Schuylkill.

SAVE, a large river of the Austrian empire, which rises in Illyria, and joins the Danube between Semlin and Belgrade.

SAVELLI, a town of the kingdom of Naples, province of Calabria Citra. Population 2100.

SAVENAY, a town of France, in Brittany, 18 miles N. W. Nantes. Population 1900.

SAVENDROOG, a celebrated fortress of the south of India, province of Mysore. Long. 77. 29. E. Lat. 12. 56. N.

SAVENIERES, a town of France, 9 miles S. S. W. Angers. Population 2500.

SAVERDUN, a town of France, 18 miles N. E. Foix. Population 3000.

SAVERNE, a well built town of France, department of the Lower Rhine, 22 miles W. N. W. Strasburg. Population 4000.

SAUGATUCK, a post village of the United States, in Fairfield county, Connecticut.

SAUGHALL, GREAT, LITTLE, and MASSEY, three villages of England, in Cheshire.

SAUGUES, a town of France, department of the Upper Loire. Population 3500.

SAVIGLIANO, a fortified and well built town of Piedmont, on the Maira, 25 miles S. Turin.

SAVIGNANO, a town of Italy, 23 miles S. by E. Ravenna. Population 5000.

SAVIGNANO, a town of Naples, Principato Ultra. Population 1800.

SAVIGNE L'EVEQUE, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 2300.

SAVIGNY SUR BRAY, a village of France, department of the Loir and Cher. Population 2000.—The name of three other towns.

SAVIN, St., a town of France, 18 miles N. Bourdeaux. Population 1900.

SAVINES, St., a town of France, in Saintonge, on the Charente. Population 2000.

SAUXON, a town of France, department of the Lower Charente. Population 1600.

SAULGAT, a town of Germany, in Württemberg. Population 1900.

SAULON, St., a town of France, department of the Nièvre. Population 1700.

SAULIEU, a town of France, 33 miles W. Dijon. Population 2900.

SAULT, a town of France, department of the Vaucluse. Population 1600.

SAULT DE NAVAILLES, a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Population 2300.

SAULT, a small river of Lower Canada, which flows from the north into the St Lawrence, opposite the island of Orleans.

SAUMON, a town of France, in Anjou, on the Loire, over which there are two bridges. The principal street, built on a line with one of the bridges, traverses the greater part of the town, and contains the theatre and several other elegant buildings. The castle, situated on an eminence which commands the town, is a very ancient building, flanked with towers. The new cavalry barracks are spacious and handsome. The town contains several squares, but part of it is not paved, and other parts are inconveniently steep. It has some interesting remains of Roman and Celtic antiquities, but its great attraction is the beauty of the surrounding scenery. Population 10,000. 36 miles W. S. W. Tours.

SAUNDERS'S ISLAND, an island in the South Atlantic ocean, so called by Captain Cook. Long. 26. 44. W. Lat. 37. 49. S.

SAVOLAX, a large district of Finland, bounded E. and S. by Russia proper, and W. by the Finland province of Tavastland. It is 200 miles in length, and 100 in breadth.

SAVONA, a well built maritime town of Italy, in the Genoese territory. It had formerly two harbours, but one of these, spacious and secure, was filled up by the Genoese. Savona was once a place of great trade, and contained 25,000 inhabitants; but, in 1648, an explosion of 1000 barrels of gunpowder, deposited in the Citadel, destroyed the half of the houses. The population does not now exceed 10,500. The principal articles of trade are silk, wool, and fruit, and heavy iron ware. 20 miles W. S. W. Genoa.

SAVOY, a duchy in the south of Europe, forming the north-west part of the continental states of the kingdom of Sardinia, and extending from Lat. 45. 4. to 46. 22. N. It is bounded W. by France, and E. by Piedmont. It is 94 miles long, and between 60 and 70 broad. Area 3800 square miles. The surface of Savoy is in the highest degree bleak and rugged: mountains, rocks, precipices, forests, and roaring waters, all the materials of the sublime, are its characteristic features. Savoy is the region of Mount Blanc, Mount St Bernard, Mount Cenis, Mount Isern, Mount Valaisan, and Mount Tounet, all connected together, and forming a stupendous barrier between Savoy and Piedmont. The plough is of use only in the valleys. The high grounds are, however, cultivated with great industry; and, by various ingenious contrivances, are made productive. The products of the valleys are wheat, oats, barley, rye, and hemp. The slopes of the mountains are covered with pasture, and in favourable situations, with vines. The mountains contain also mines of iron, copper, and silver; while the forests supply fuel, both for working these, and for domestic purposes. The revolutionary war brought Savoy under subjection to France so early as the close of 1793, a situation in which it continued above 21 years. In 1815, the king of Sardinia took part with the allies, and obtained the restoration of the country of his ancestors, with the exception of a small district. Pop. 450,000.

SAURAT, a town of France, department of the Arriege. Population 3500.

SAVE, an island in the Eastern sea, about 20 miles in length. It is beautiful and fertile. Long. 122. 30. E. Lat. 10. 35. S.

SAUVES, a town of France, in Languedoc. Population 3000.

SAUVETAT, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Population 2000.

SAUVETERRE, a town of France, between the Aveyron and the Vaire. Pop. 3500.

SAVEUR, St., a town of the Netherlands, province of Hainault. Population 1900.

SAVEUR LE VICOMTE, St., a town of France, department of La Manche. Pop. 2800.

SAUXILLANGE, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Pop. 2100.

SAWHEDGE and SAWDON, two hamlets of England, in Warwickshire and Yorkshire.

SAWMILL CREEK, a river of the United States, which runs into the Potomac.

SAW-PYTT, a post village of the United States, in West Chester county, New York.

SAWYER'S FERRY, a small post town of the United States, in North Carolina.

SAX, a village and district of Switzerland, canton of St Gall. Population 3000.

SAX, a town of Spain, in Murcia, on the Teradla. Population 2200.

SAXBY, a village of England, in Lincolnshire.

SAXGOTHA, a village or settlement of the United States, in South Carolina.

SAXMUNDUM, a market town and parish of England, in Suffolk. Population 283.

SAXONS, LAND or PROVINCE OF, in Transylvania, one of the three great divisions of that principality, forming the south part, adjacent to the frontier of Turkey. Area between 3000 and 4000 square miles. Pop. 360,000.

SAXONY, KINGDOM OF, is situated towards the N. E. of Germany, and bounded S. by Bohemia, and N. by the Prussian states. Previous to 1814 it contained above 2,000,000 of inhabitants (exclusive of the part of Poland subject to this crown); but it was greatly reduced by the congress of Vienna. At present it contains the circles of Meissen, Leipzig, Erzgebirge, Vogtland, part of Merseburg, and Upper Lusatia. Area 7188 square miles. Population 1,237,000. The chief towns are Dresden, the capital, containing 48,000 inhabitants; Leipzig, 33,000; Chemnitz, 11,000; Bautzen, 11,000; Freyberg, 9000; Zittau, 7200; Plauen, Meissen, Elsasbach, Mittweida, Schneeberg, Annaberg, Heidenrodorf, Eyla, Zwickau, Döbeln, Zschopau, Pirna, Grimma. This kingdom may be said to resemble a triangle, of which the longest side is the frontier on the side of Bohemia, formed by a range of mountains, extending in a long line from south-west to north-east. The length of Saxony is 140 miles, its greatest breadth about 75. The chief rivers are the Elbe, which issues with a full stream from Bohemia; the two Elsters, the two Muldas, and the Queiss. In the southern and mountainous parts of Saxony, the valleys only are well cultivated; but in the level districts in the north, tillage is general: the products are wheat, barley, oats, and other grain; also some tobacco and hops; and in a few situations of favourable exposure, vines. Few countries equal Saxony in mineral riches, and in none has this department of natural history been more fully described. The topaz occurs frequently; and there are found also chrysolites, amethysts, chalcodones, cornelians, agates, jasper, garnets, and tourmalines; and among the coarser stones are serpentine, asbestos, amianthus, barites, and statues of lime. The porcelain clay in the neighbourhood of Meissen is well known; here are also fullers-earth, terrapign, and other minerals with an argillaceous base: petrifications are very common. The lofty primitive mountains abound in iron; the secondary in copper and lead. Next to these are arsenic, cobalt, antimony, manganese, zinc, sulphur, alum, vitriol, and borax. The salt mines and springs of Saxony are included in the districts ceded in 1815 to Prussia. There are also a few silver mines. The manufactures and trade are of greater extent than in most inland countries. The weaving of linen is an employment of old date. Woollens likewise are manufactured in a number of towns. Cotton spinning and weaving forms at present a great object of manufacturing industry at Chemnitz, Plauen, and other parts. The machinery used in Saxony, though inferior to the English, has of late years been much improved. There are silk manufactures on a small scale at Leipzig, and in several smaller towns. Tanneries are more general, and the paper manufactures are not inconsiderable. Every town of consequence has breweries and distilleries. The manufactures connected with the mines are of considerable extent, particularly at Freyberg. At Dresden also there are foundries of cannon and balls. The exports consist, in regard to raw produce, in wool and minerals; as to manufactures, in linen, yarn, woollens, and lace. The imports are silk, flax, cotton, coffee, sugar, wine, and, in certain seasons, corn. The institutions for education in this country are numerous and well conducted. Of the universities, Halle now belongs to Prussia, but Leipzig remains to Saxony, and maintains all its former reputation. After being, during many centuries, an electorate, Saxony was formed in 1806 into a kingdom, in consequence of the occupancy of Prussia by Bonaparte. The king of Saxony, as a member of the Germanic confederation, has the fourth rank in the smaller, and four votes at the larger assembly. The court, formerly kept with a certain degree of magnificence, has adopted a style of great simplicity, since the cessions of territory in 1815.

SAXONY, a large province of the Prussian states, to the W. of Brandenburg, and N. of the kingdom of Saxony. It comprises almost the whole of the cessions made by the latter power at the congress of Vienna, and with these have been incorporated by the Prussian government, the principalities lying to the N. of the duchy of Anhalt, and to the W. of the rivers Elbe and Havel; so that the whole now forms an area of 9830 square miles, with rather more than 1,000,000 of inhabitants. It lies between Long. 9. 50. and 15. 50. E. Lat. 50. 52. and 53. 3. N.; and is divided into the governments of Magdeburg, Merseburg, and Erfurt. It forms a distinct military division; and the chief town is Magdeburg.

SAYFAN, one of the Ladrone islands, in the Eastern seas, about 20 miles in circumference. Long. 145. 55. E. Lat. 16. 13. N.

SCAER, a town of France, department of Finisterre, containing, with its parish, 4100 inhabitants.

SCAFATI, a town of the kingdom of Naples, on the Sarno. Population 2300.

SCALA, a town of the kingdom of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 1000.

SCALA NOVA, a well built seaport town of Asia Minor. Population 1000 Turkish families. 600 Greek, 10 Jew, and 60 Armenian. 40 miles S. Smyrna.

SCALBY, a hamlet of England, East Riding of Yorkshire, 5 miles E. Howden.

SCALBY, a village of England, in Lincolnshire.—2d. In Yorkshire.

SCALBY, East and West, two adjacent villages of England, in Cumberland.

SCALDWELL, a village of England, in Northamptonshire.

SCALE, or SCALES, a village of England, in Cornwall, near the Land's End.

SCALEBY, a village of England, in Cumberland, near Stanwix and Kirkcington.

SCALENGHE, a town of Piedmont, province of Pinerolo. Population 2600.

SCALLOWAY, an ancient and scattered town on the mainland of Shetland. Long. 0. 31. W. Lat. 60. 0. N.

SCALPA, a small island of the Hebrides. Also one of the Orkneys.

SCALPAY, one of the Harris isles. On the eastern extremity a light-house was erected in 1708.

SCAMPS, a beautiful village of the Swiss canton of the Grisons, Upper Engadine.

SCAMINO, a town of European Turkey, in Livadia, south of Negroponte. Pop. 1200.

SCANDARETTA, or SCANDERBOON, a village of Syria, only six miles from Tyre.

SCANDINAVIA, a general name given by the ancients to the great track of country lying to the north of Germany, comprising Denmark, Norway, and Sweden.

SCANIA, or SCONEN, a province of Sweden, in South Gothland, bounded S. by the Baltic, and W. by the Sound. The latter separates it from Denmark. Length above 65 miles, breadth nearly 50. Pop. 260,000.

SCANZANO, a town of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 1500.

SCARBA, a small island of the Hebrides, separated from the north end of Jura by a narrow sound.

SCARBOROUGH, a market and seaport town of England, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, a place of considerable trade, and much noted and frequented for its mineral waters and sea-bathing. It stands in the recess of a beautiful bay, on the borders of the German ocean, and rising from the shore in the form of an amphitheatre. The town is well built. The principal streets are spacious and well paved. The new buildings on the cliff are very striking, and stand almost unrivalled in respect of situation, having in front a beautiful terrace, nearly 100 feet above the level of the sands, and commanding a variety of delightful prospects. The gardens and public walks are agreeable; and an elegant assembly-room and a handsome theatre are open alternately in summer evenings. The rides are also varied and romantic. Scarborough had formerly four churches, all of which, however, are now demolished, except St Mary's, which constitutes the only church now in town; and even of this, only a small part remains. The dissenting places of worship are an Independent, Baptist, and Roman Catholic chapel, a meetinghouse for Quakers, and another for Methodists. There is an asylum for aged and infirm persons, and other charitable institutions, in the town, such as an amicable society, a Lancasterian school, a seaman's hospital, a spinning school, and several friendly societies and Sunday schools. The ruins of the ancient castle form a very picturesque object, and great ornament to the town. The promontory on which they stand rises nearly 300 feet above the level of the sea, which washes the bottom of it on the north-east and south sides. The area of the castle contains about 15 acres. Scarborough castle was built about the year 1136, and became the scene of many important transactions in English history. At present there are two batteries for the protection of the town and harbour. The harbour of Scarborough is the only haven of consequence on the eastern coast, between the Humber and Tynemouth; hence it is much resorted to during the violent easterly storms which often prevail here. It is extensive and commodious, of easy access, and has been much improved by extensive works erected at different times. From the advantages of its harbour, the trade of Scarborough is very considerable. But to its celebrated mineral waters the present prosperity of Scarborough is chiefly owing, which have rendered the town a place of fashionable and general resort, both for health, pleasure, and amusement. The Spa is situated on the sea-shore, close to the southern extremity of the town. Here are two wells, the south and the north. In the town is a manufacture of malicloth. It sends two members to parliament, chosen by the corporate body. No mention of Scarborough is made in the Doomsday book, and it is hence supposed not to have existed before the Norman conquest. Population 8533. 40 miles N. E. York.

SCARBOROUGH, a town of Upper Canada, near Lake Ontario.

SCARBROFT, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

SCARBULL, a hamlet of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

SCARISBRICK, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1544.

SCARLE, South, a small village of England, in Nottinghamshire.

SCARNAPICU, a town of Piedmont. Population 2600.

SCARPANTO, or KOJE, the ancient Corpathos, a small island in the Mediterranean, between Candia and Rhodes.

SCARPE, a river of French Flanders, which discharges itself into the Scheldt.

SCARPERIA, a town of Tuscany, at the foot of the Apennines. Population 1600.

SCARY, a river of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, which unites with the Nith.

SCARTHLOWELL, a village of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

SCASATI, a town of the kingdom of Naples, Terra di Lavoro. Population 2200.

SEASCAL and SEASWERTII, two villages of England, in Cumberland and Nottinghamshire.

SEEAUX, a village of France, 5 miles S. Paris, with a manufacture of stone-ware. Population 1400.

SEEFRIED, or SEAHAN, a considerable seaport of Hadramant, on the southern coast of Arabia. Long. 47. 50. E. Lat. 14. 10. N.

SCHERDING, a town of Upper Austria, on the Inn, 6 miles S. Passau. Pop. 2000.

SCHNIBURG, a town of Transylvania, near the Great Kockel. It is divided into the Upper and Lower town. Population 6000. 120 miles N. E. Temesvar.

SCHAFHAUSEN, one of the best towns in the north of Switzerland, near the frontiers of Suabia, on the Rhine. It is a place of antiquity. Its public buildings are the large parish church of St John, an academy with seven professors, besides other teachers, the town library, the town-hall, and the market-house. It has manufactures of cotton, silk, and leather, and exports the wine raised in the neighbourhood. A wooden bridge, of very ingenious construction, is here thrown across the Rhine, and forms the only channel of communication between this town and the rest of Switzerland. 25 miles W. Constance.

SCHAFHAUSEN, a canton in the north of Switzerland. Area 170 square miles. Population 32,000.

SCHAGEN, a town of the Netherlands, in North Holland. Population 1500.

SCHAGEN, a town of North Holland, 11 miles N. Alkmaar. Population 1500.

SCHAGEN, a village of East Prussia, near the great maritime inlet the Curische Hafl, 15 miles N. N. E. Königsberg.

SCHAMACHI, a city of Persia, capital of the province of Shirvan. It was once large, populous, and commercial, but is now nearly ruined. Long. 48. 45. E. Lat. 40. 27. N.

SCHANNIS, a small town of Switzerland, canton of St Gall, on the Linth.

SCHARANS, a large village in the Swiss canton of the Grisons.

SCHATTAU, or SCHATTOW, a town of Moravia, 4 miles S. E. Znaim. Pop. 1800.

SCHATEK, a town of European Russia, government of Tambov, on the Schata. Population 6700. 216 miles S. E. Moscow.

SCHAUENSTADT, a principality of the German empire, in Westphalia. Area 210 square miles. Population 24,000.

SCHENAR, a town of European Turkey, in Bessarabia. Population 3000.

SCHNIEDT, or SCHNEIDE, a large river of the Netherlands, which rises in the French department of the Aisne, and flows in a northerly direction past Cambray, Bouchain, and Douai, to Valenciennes, where it becomes navigable. It passes Conde, Tournay, and Oudenarde, and reaching Ghent, is joined by the Lys. From Ghent it winds its course to Antwerp, where it is divided, into the two branches of East and West-Scheldt, both of which discharge themselves into the German Ocean.

SCHIELESTADT, a town of France, department of the Lower Rhine, on a canal that communicates with the Ille. It has manufactures of tobacco, caps, stockings, saltpetre, potash, soap, and earthen-ware. Population 7500. 25 miles S. W. Strasburg.

SCHIELENSBERG, a town of Bavaria, 2 miles N. Berchtesgaden. Pop. 1800.

SCHIELING, or TERSCHELLING, an island about 9 miles from the coast of Friesland, 15 miles long and 3 broad. Population 2000.

SCHENIMITZ, or SELMETZ-BANJA, a large mining town in the north-west of Hungary, in the midst of the most picturesque scenery, near the Raab. It is irregularly built, on account of the unevenness of the surface. Population 23,000, of whom 12,000 are employed in or about the mines. The mines of Schenimitz are the most extensive in Hungary, and are hardly surpassed by any in Europe. The chief metals are gold, silver, and lead, combined with copper and arsenic. 83 miles E. by N. Presburg. Long. 18. 54. 6. E. Lat. 47. 45. N.

SCHENECTADY, a county of the United States, in New York, on the Mohawk. Population 10,201.

SCHENECTADY, a city of the United States, a post township, and capital of Schenectady county, New York, on the Mohawk, across which is an elegant bridge, 15 miles N. W. Albany. It is regularly laid out, and contains a court-house, a jail, a bank, a college, an academy for young ladies, and 4 churches. It has a college, richly endowed. Population of the township, 5000.

SCHENKENSCHANS, a fortress of the Netherlands, in Gelderland, on the Rhine.

SCHENKSTEDT, a town of Germany, 10 miles E. Wolfenbittel. Pop. 2100.

SCHERRENHUVEL, a town of the Netherlands, in South Brabant. Pop. 1700.

SCHERWEINER, a village of France, department of the Lower Rhine. Pop. 2200.

SCHERKEJEV, a town of European Russia. Population 1800.

SCHESTAKOV, a town of European Russia, government of Viatka. Population 1200.

SCHIEVELING, a maritime village of the Netherlands, in South Holland. Pop. 2900.

SCHIEDAM, a town of the Netherlands, in South Holland, on the Schie. It is noted for its distilleries of gin. Population 9000. 4 miles W. Rotterdam.

SCHIERLING, a village of Germany, in Bavaria, 11 miles S. Ratibon. Pop. 500.

SCHIERMOND, a small island on the coast of Friesland. Population 1100.

SCHIEVELBEIN, a town of Pomerania, on the Rega, 53 miles E. N. E. Stettin. Pop. 1700.

SCHIFFRAU, a village of the Prussian province on the Rhine. Population 1900.

SCHILDESCHKE, a town of Westphalia, 2 miles S. S. W. Minden. Pop. 2000.

SCHILLINGSFURST, a town of Bavarian Franconia, 11 miles W. Anspach. Pop. 1500.

SCHIRKENACH, a village of Switzerland, canton of Aargau.

SCHRO, a town of Austrian Italy, 24 miles N. by E. Verona. Population 5000.

SCHREIBBEIL, a town of East Prussia, on the Alle. Population 2000.

SCHREIBITZ, a town of Prussian Saxony, on the Elster. Population 1500.

SCHRIKOV, a town of European Russia, on the Dniester. Population 2000.

SCHLAGE, a town of Prussian Pomerania, 76 miles W. Danzig. Population 1300.

SCHLAGENTIS, a town of Prussian Saxony, duchy of Magdeburg. Population 2700.

SCHLAX, a town of Bohemia, 18 miles N. W. Prague. Population 3000.

SCHLEIDAL, a village of France, department of the Lower Rhine. Pop. 1800.

SCHLEITZ, a town of Saxony, county of Reuss, 25 miles S. by E. Jena. Pop. 4700.

SCHLEUSINGEN, a town of Germany, in Upper Saxony. Population 2200.

SCHLAGEL, a village of Prussian Silesia, county of Glatz. Population 1300.

SCHLECKANAU, a town of Bohemia, 30 miles E. Dresden. Population 2800.

SCHLESSELBURG, a town and fortress of European Russia, on the Neva, where it issues from the lake Ladoga. It has manufactures, on a small scale, of cotton and porcelain. Population 3200. 24 miles E. St. Petersburg.

SCHMIDLERBERG, a town of Prussian Silesia, among the Riesengebirge mountains, 56 miles W. S. W. Breslau. Population 3000.

SCHMIEGEL, a town of Prussian Poland, 42 miles S. S. W. Posen. Population 2200.

SCHMOLLEN, a town of Germany, principality of Altenburg. Population 2700.

SCHMOLNITZ, a mining town of Hungary, in a valley among the Carpathians. The mines are of silver, copper, iron, and sulphur. Population 5500. 22 miles W. Caschau.

SCHNAIDT, a large village of the west of Germany, in Württemberg. Population 1600.

SCHNEIDER, a town of Saxony, 53 miles W. S. W. Dresden. It has a large manufacture of smalts. Population 4400.

SCHNEIDMÜHL, a town of Prussian Poland, on the Kuddow, 50 miles W. Bromberg. Population 2300.

SCHODAC, a township of the United States, in Henselaer county, New York, on the Hudson. Population 3166.

SCHODAC LANSING, a post village of the United States, Columbia county, New York.

SCHOENECK, a town of Prussia, on the Fers, 23 miles S. Danzig. Pop. 1600.

SCHOENINGEN, a town of Germany, 18 miles N. Halberstadt. Population 3000.

SCHOHARIE, a county of the United States, in the central part of New York. Pop. 18,915.

SCHOHARIE, a post township and village of the United States, and capital of Schoharie county, New York. The village is situated on Schoharie falls, and contains the county buildings, two churches, and a number of elegant houses.

SCHOHARIE, a river of the United States, in New York, which runs into the Mohawk.

SCHOMBERG, a town of Silesia, 51 miles W. S. W. Breslau. Population 1900.

SCHOMBERG, a town of Moravia, 29 miles N. by W. Olmutz. Population 3400.

SCHONACH, a village of Germany, 10 miles N. E. Freyberg. Population 1600.

SCHONAU, Gross, a village of Germany, in Saxony, 6 miles W. Zittau. Pop. 4000.

SCHONBERG, a town of Moravia, 45 miles N. W. Olmutz. Population 3400.

SCHONBRUNN, a village and palace belonging to the emperor of Austria, 3 miles S. W. Vienna. It is the usual residence of the imperial court.

SCHONBRUNN, a town of Prussian Saxony, on the Elbe. It has a manufacture of salt from brine springs. Population 6100. 7 miles S. E. Magdeburg.

SCHONFELD, a town of Bohemia, 18 miles E. Egra. Population 1900.

SCHONFELDS, a town of Prussia, 63 miles E. N. E. Berlin. Population 1800.

SCHONGAR, a town of Germany, 37 miles S. W. Munich. Population 1300.

SCHONHEIDE, a village of Saxony, 9 miles W. S. W. Schwarzenberg.

SCHONTANKE, a town of Prussian Poland, 15 miles W. S. W. Schneidemühl. Pop. 3600.

SCHONSTEDT, a town of Bohemia, 33 miles E. S. E. Dresden. Population 2200.

SCHOSWALD, a village of Prussian Silesia. Population 1600.

SCHODIAK, a river of America, which runs into Passamaquoddy bay.

SCHODHOVEN, a town of the Netherlands, province of Utrecht. Population 2500.

SCHODDISSE, a village of the Netherlands, in West Flanders. Population 3100.

SCHODDEN-LADT, a town of Germany, in the duchy of Brunswick. Population 1700.

SCHODL and SCHODLDAK, two villages of the Netherlands, in North Holland.

SCHORNBERG, a town of Germany, 17 miles E. Stuttgart. Population 3500.

SCHOTLIS, a town of Germany, in Hesse-Darmstadt. Population 1700.

SCHODWEN, an island forming part of the province of Zealand, at the mouth of the Scheldt, 15 miles in length and 5 in breadth.

SCHRAMBERG, a town of Germany, in Württemberg. Population 1000.

SCHREIBERSWALD, a village of Silesia, 65 miles W. by S. Breslau. Population 2000.

SCHREIBELM, a town of Germany, in Baden. Population 2200.

SCHREIBSHOFEN, a town of Bohemia, 70 miles S. W. Prague. Population 2600.

SCHROBENHAUSEN, a fortified town of Bavaria, 21 miles N. E. Augsburg. Pop. 1500.

SCHUMLA, a large town of European Turkey, on the great road leading from Constantinople to Wallachia, about 50 miles S. the Danube. It contains several handsome mosques and baths. It has also a castle. Population 35,000. 227 miles N. N. W. Constantinople.

SCHUPPEN, a village of the Swiss canton of Lucerne, on the Lauce. Pop. 2300.

SCHUTTENHOFFEN, a town of Bohemia, on the Wutawa. Population 2500.

SCHUTZEN, GREAT, a town of Hungary, 33 miles N. E. Vienna. Population 3000.

SCHUYLKILL, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania.

SCHUYLKILL, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania, which runs south-east into the Delaware, 6 miles below Philadelphia.

SCHWABACH, a town of Bavarian Franconia, principally of Anspach, on a river of the same name, which divides it into two parts. It is partly built, and has four gates and four castles. It has manufactures of cotton, fine tobacco, and broad cloth. Population 7000. 8 miles S. W. Nuremberg.

SCHWABENHOF, a town of Germany, in Bavaria. Population 2000.

SCHWABSEN, a town of Switzerland, canton of Glaris, at the confluence of the Linth and the Sarne. Population 4000.

SCHWABINGEN, a district of Germany, divided into two parts. One of these divisions adjoins the Goths; the other, considerably farther to the south, is near the Russian province of Erfurt. Area 1160 square miles; population 100,000.

SCHWARTZBURG, a small principality of Franconia. Area 100 square miles; population between 12,000 and 13,000.

SCHWARTZBACH, a small river of Germany, which falls into the Saale.

SCHWATZ, a river of Moravia, which joins the Rhine.

SCHWATZAU, a small river of Bavarian Franconia, which falls into the Regnitz.

SCHWATZAU, a village of Franconia, on the Rhine, 13 miles E. Würzburg.

SCHWATZBURG, a town of Bavarian Franconia, on the Saale. Population 1700.

SCHWATZBACH, the name of five rivers of Silesia: three flow into the Oder; the fourth joins the Kaczawa; and the fifth the Stoben.

SCHWATZ, a well built town of the Austrian states, in Tyrol, on the Inn. It has some manufactures, and in the environs are mines of copper and silver. Population 4000. 55 miles S. Vienna.

SCHWATZ, a town of Prussia, on the Oder, 63 miles S. W. Berlin. Population 5700.

SCHWATZ, a town of Prussian Silesia, the chief town and principal city of the same name. It has manufactures of woollen and linen. It was well known in the war of 1745. Pop. 1000. 20 miles W. S. W. Breslau.

SCHWATZ, a town of Germany, in Wirtemberg. Population 1800.

SCHWATZBURG, a town of Bavarian Franconia, on the Rhine, 23 miles N. N. E. Würzburg. Population 3200.

SCHWITZ, or SEWITZ, a canton of Switzerland, lying contiguous to the lakes of Zug and Lucerne. Area 406 square miles; population barely 30,000.

SCHWITZ, the chief town of the preceding canton, situated in a valley, about 3 miles from the lake of Lucerne. Pop. 5000. 28 miles S. E. Zurich.

SCHWELM, a town of Prussian Westphalia, on the river Schwelm, 27 miles N. E. Cologne. Population 2300.

SCHWENINGEN, a large village of Germany, in Wirtemberg. Population 2500.

SCHWERIN, the capital of the grand duchy of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, in the north of Germany, on the lake of Schwerin. The grand ducal palace is situated on an island in the lake. The chief buildings and institutions are the high church, formerly a cathedral, two other Lutheran churches, a Catholic church, a poor-house, an orphan-house, an infirmary, and a synagogue. Pop. 8500. 60 miles E. Hamburg.

SCHWERN, or SEWERNYA, a town of Prussian Poland, 55 miles W. by N. Posen. Population 3000.

SCHWERNITZ, a town of Prussian Poland, 61 miles E. Posen. Population 3700.

SCHWETA, a village of Saxony, in Upper Lusatia. Population 2300.

SCHWETZ, a town of Prussian Westphalia, on the Roer. Population 1400.

SCHWETZ, a town of West Prussia, on the Vistula. Population 2300.

SCHWETZINGEN, a town of Germany, 6 miles W. by S. Heidelberg. Pop. 2200.

SCHWETZ, a town of the Prussian province of Brandenburg, 104 miles N. N. W. Breslau. Population 3000.

SCHWYDEL, a village of the Netherlands, in North Brabant. Population 3100.

SCIACCA, or XACCA, a seaport on the south-west coast of Sicily, in the Val di Mazzara, called anciently Therme Scelluntæ, from the warm baths in the vicinity. It has a good appearance from a distance, but is found, on entering it, to be wretchedly built. It contains subterranean granaries, under the direction of government, for warehousing corn for export. Population 12,000. 41 miles S. S. W. Palermo.

SCIACIANO, a town of Italy, in Calabria Citra. Population 3700.

SECCIO, a town of the kingdom of Naples. Population 3000.

SEILLY ISLANDS, a group of islands, situated at the western extremity of the English channel, about 30 miles westward of the land's end, and included in, or belonging to, the county of Cornwall. In fine weather they are easily discernible from the coast of Cornwall, appearing like a cluster of cliffs, or fragments of ruined castles, round which rolls the vast Atlantic. The islands are numerous; but six only of them are inhabited, viz. St. Mary's, Tresco, St. Martin's, St. Agnes, Sampson, and Brighth. The climate here is mild and healthy. The view from the islands has in general extremely picturesque, and greatly diversified by the various vessels that are continually navigating the contiguous channels, or the more distant ocean. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, in fishing, and in the manufacture of kelp. Cattle are fed in most of the islands; but they are neither numerous, not remarkable for size. The crops of corn principally raised are barley, pease, and oats, with a small proportion of wheat. The number of inhabitants in all the islands is about 2000, of which St. Mary's contains 1270. This is the largest, the most important, and best cultivated of the whole group. It possesses three towns, a pier, a garrison, custom-house, and other public buildings.

Scio, an island of the Grecian archipelago, the ancient Chios, 30 miles in length, from 10 to 18 in breadth, and 90 in circumference. It is composed of very high, and in many places rugged and rocky mountains; but these, by the industry of the inhabitants, are rendered very productive. The plain, extending for some leagues round the town of Scio, consists almost wholly of country houses and gardens, filled with orange and lemon trees. The air of Scio is very good, though, from its great communication with other places, it is exposed to the ravages of the plague. It is watered only by a few streams, which can scarcely be considered as more than mountain torrents; but there is a great number of fine springs; and water is found almost everywhere by digging. The corn raised is not sufficient for the consumption of the island. The herbage is also scarce. One production almost peculiar to Scio is the mastic, with which it almost exclusively supplied Constantinople. The chief trade consists in the export of manufactured damask, and other silks, to carry on which they import a large quantity of raw silk. Their wine was celebrated in antiquity; but though they make it still good, and in considerable quantity, it is not sufficient for their own consumption. The number of towns and villages in the island amounts to about fifty. Pocock reckons the population at 100,000, Oliver at 110,000, and Turner at 150,000.

Scio, a city, capital of the island of the same name, situated on the eastern coast of a shallow bay. There is a good road for the largest shipping, and a mole, which forms a tolerable harbour. To the east of the present city is the old town, chiefly inhabited by the lower rank of people. The town is built of stone and brick, and though the streets are narrow, contain many handsome houses. Population 35,000. Long. 25. 34. E. Lat. 36. 23. 27. N.

Scioto, a county of the United States, in the state of Ohio, situated on both sides of the river of the same name. Pop. 3350.

Scioto, a river of the United States, which flows in the state of Ohio, and runs into the Ohio, 362 miles below Pittsburg, in Lat. 38. 34. N.

Scioto, Little, a tributary of the Ohio. Scioto Salt Springs, a spa village of the United States, in Ross county, Ohio.

Scitovon, a village of England, in Devonshire, on the river Dart.

Scythia, a province in the south of the Austrian empire. Its shape is long and narrow, the Drave and Danube running along its northern frontier, and separating it from Hungary; while the Save, also a great river, extends along its southern confines, dividing it from Turkey. Its area is about 6000 square miles; its population about 530,000. It lies between the 45th and 46th degrees of N. lat.; and is a frontier province. It is divided throughout almost its whole length, by a chain of lofty mountains, extending from east to west, and covered with forests. The rest of the country consists of fine plains, with a fertile soil, and a climate almost as mild as that of Italy. The mountainous tracts of Slavonia are barren in dry years, and in the low grounds there are many districts too marshy for cultivation; but the greatest part of the country is well adapted to tillage, producing wheat, barley, maize, flax, hemp, and madder. The fruits are chestnuts, plums, and vines; also figs, almonds, and other products of a warm climate. The forests contain the finest oak, and water conveyance only is wanted to render it a valuable article of export. The domestic animals, horses, cattle, and sheep, are numerous, but reared with little care; and hogs, vast numbers are reared in the woods. Of wild animals, the bear, the wolf, the fox, the polecat, and the culture, are common. The only minerals known to exist in large quantities, are limestone, sulphur, coal, and some ferruginous substances. Manufactures are here in a very backward state.

Scotcheras, a village of England, in Cumberland, near the sea.

Scotness, a small village of the Isle of Skye, 8 miles S. Portree.

Scotow, or Scott, a parish and village of Scotland, in Perthshire, on the Tay, above Perth. It is noted for its palace, recently the residence of the Scotch king, the place of their coronation, and the scene of many great actions. Pop. of the parish 1700.

Scopia, a town of European Turkey, in Bulgaria. It contains several mosques, has a fortified castle, an aqueduct, and other remains of antiquity. Population 110 miles N. by W. Salonica.

Scotroth and Scottholm, two villages of Scotland, North and West Lothian, Yorkshire.

Scotrow, a village of England, in Northamptonshire, on the River N. E. Worktop.

Scotry, a village of England, in Cumberland, near Carlisle.

Scotch Plains, a village of the United States, in Essex county, New Jersey.

Scotforth, a village of England, in Lancashire. Population 1770.

Scotholm, one of the smaller Scottish Isles. Long. 1. E. W. Lat. 56. 25. N.

Scotland, a country of Europe, which, united with England and Wales, forms the northern division of Great Britain. It is bounded W. by the Atlantic ocean, N. by the Deu-caledonian or North sea, E. by the German ocean, S. E. by England, N. by the Holway frith, and S. W. by that part of the Irish sea called the North Channel. It is situated between 54. and 59. N. lat., but including the Orkney and Shetland islands, it extends to 61. 12. and between 1. and 6. W. long. from Greenwich; but the Western islands extend much farther. Its greatest extent from N. to S. is 214 miles; but a direct line from Carlisle northward to the Moray frith, does not exceed 180 miles. From the Mull of Cantyre the western coast stretches 230 miles in a straight line to Cape Wrath. The breadth under different parallels is various, from 117 to 70, and even 36 miles. Area of Scotland and its isles, 29,000 square miles, or 10,044,000 English acres, of which 913,450 are cultivated, and 13,900,550 uncultivated lands; besides 635 square miles occupied by lakes and rivers. Scotland is divided into the following counties, viz. Berwick, Roxburgh, Selkirk, Dumfries, Kirkcubright, Wigton, Ayr, Renfrew, Leith, Peebles, Haddington, Edinburgh, Linlithgow, Stirling, Dunbarton, Clackmannan, Kinross, Fife, Forfar, Perth, Argyre, Kincairdine, Aberdeen, Banff, Elgin, Nairn, Inverness, Ross, Sutherland, Caithness, Cromarty, Orkney Islands, and Bute. These are subdivided into 477 parishes. Scotland is of a most diversified surface. In the northern parts it is mostly mountainous and barren, while towards the south it extends into fertile plains. It has been separated into the two great divisions of the Highlands and the Lowlands, and also into the Northern, the Middle, and the Southern. The first or Northern division is cut off from the Middle by the chain of lakes which stretch from the Moray frith to Loch Lomond. The second or Middle division is separated from the Southern, by the friths of Forth and Clyde, and the Great canal. The Northern division consists generally of an assemblage of vast and dreary mountains, with some fertile valleys intervening, chiefly towards the south and east coasts. A portion of them is clothed with green herbage, more especially where sheep-farming prevails; but in general they are covered with heath, or resting above peat, rock, or gravel; and they frequently terminate in mountain caps of solid rock, or in vast heaps of craters of bare and weather-beaten stones. The Middle division is also very mountainous, the Grampian ranges intersecting this district, and extending from the eastern to the western sea, and being from 40 to 60 miles in breadth. The western parts of Argyleshire, which are also included in this district, are rugged, mountainous, and deeply indented by gulfs of the sea. In these two divisions, which comprehend more than two-thirds of Scotland, the arable ground bears but a small proportion to the mountainous regions. On the eastern coast, however, the country bears a greater resemblance to England, and the proportion of the cultivated to the uncultivated land is much greater. In the Southern division we find every variety, verdant plains, watered by copious streams, and covered with innumerable cattle; gently rising hills and bending vales, fertile in corn, waving with wood, and interspersed with meadows, lofty mountains, craggy rocks, deep narrow dells, and tumbling torrents; nor are there wanting, as a contrast, barren moors and wild uncultivated heaths. In this district are the different ranges of the Cheviot hills; the Sidlaw hills, terminating at Perth; the Ochil hills, forming the middle division; and a third called the hills of Kilsyth and Campsey. Between the Sidlaw ridge and the Grampian mountains, lies the extensive, pleasant, and fruitful valley of Strathmore. Few countries in Europe display a greater extent of sea coast. From Berwick, at the south-east extremity of the kingdom, the coast bends north-west to the frith of Forth, which is an extensive inlet of the sea. The eastern part of Fife divides this frith from that of Tay, whose breadth does not exceed two or three miles. Northward on the coast of Caithness, there is a vast bay of a triangular form, the base or eastern line of which is 70 miles. The interior part of this bay is subdivided into the friths of Moray, Cromarty, and Dornoch, separated by narrow peninsulas. The north coast, between Dunamshead and Cape Wrath, along the Pentland frith, is bold, rocky, and dangerous. Along the western shores are many openings or inlets, where the sea runs far inland, forming safe and commodious harbours. The entrance into the frith of Clyde is a capacious bay, bounded on the one side by Ayrshire, and on the other by Cantyre, Arran, and Bute. Thence the coast extends southward to the Mull of Galloway, the south-west extremity of Scotland. Between that point and the bottom of the Solway frith, lie the deep bays of Wigton and Glenelg. Scotland has numerous rivers, the chief of which are, in the Northern division, the Beaulie, Naver, Caledon, &c; in the Middle division, the Spey, the Dee, the Don, and the North and the South Esk. About 30 miles farther south is the Tay, one of the largest rivers in Britain. In the Southern district we have the Forth, the Clyde, and the Tweed, and the numerous rivers which empty themselves into the Irish sea and the Solway frith: the Ayr, the Girvan, the Southern Dee, the Nith, the Annan, and the Uddal. Besides these, there are numerous other rivers and streams of inferior note. The lakes or lochs of Scotland are numerous and extensive. Scotland cannot at present boast of mines of the more precious metals. No mines are now wrought solely for silver; but the lead mines contain that metal. Ironstone, iron ore, and septaria ironstone, are abundant. Copper has been discovered in many places. The other metallic substances hitherto discovered are cobalt, bismuth, manganese, wolfram, plumbago, and arsenic; the latter in very small quantities. Coal is abundant in the Southern and Middle districts. Limestone, freestone or sandstone, and slate, are found in every district. Marbles are also found. Most of the gems and precious stones have been found among the mountains of Scotland, the diamond excepted. The Scotch pebbles are of many beautiful hues; blue and white, red and white, and frequently to be met with of all these colours, blended together in veins, and in every gradation of shade. Jasper is also found in great variety; and rock-crystal, commonly denominated cairngorms, from the mountain of that name in Shetlandshire. Chalcedony is found. The nature of the soil is various. There are many vallies or straths, even in the Highlands, which are exceedingly productive; and the southern and middle districts contain excellent land, and are as productive as any in the island. Scotland produces wheat, rye, barley, oats, pease, beans, hay, potatoes, turnips, &c. Flax and hemp, but in no great quantities; and, in general, all the sorts of crops which are raised in the southern part of the island. Horticulture is making rapid increase in every part. Apples and other fruits are produced in abundance. Of late many extensive tracks of waste land have been planted with wood. The algæ marina, or sea-weed, which grows in great luxuriance on the rocky coasts, constitutes a valuable article of commerce, from the burning of it into kelp. Owing to its situation in the midst of a great ocean, and in a high northern latitude, the climate of Scotland is extremely variable. From its insular situation, however, the cold in winter is not so intense, nor the heat in summer so great, as in similar latitudes on the continent. The greatest height of the thermometer that has ever yet been observed is 92 degrees of Fahrenheit, and the lowest at Edinburgh, 31st December 1783, is 3 degrees below zero. Its ordinary range is from 34 to 6 degrees, though it seldom maintains these extremes for any length of time. The annual average temperature may be estimated at from 45 to 47 degrees. Like most other insular countries, it is subject to rain, especially on the western coasts. The general average quantity of rain that falls appears to be from 30 to 31 inches. The wild animals of Scotland are the fox, the badger, the otter, the wild-cat, the hedgehog; these are now becoming scarce; the stag, the wild roe, the hare, the rabbit, the weasel, the mole, and other small quadrupeds. The domestic animals are the same as those of England; but the native breeds of black cattle and sheep are considerably different, being smaller in size, but reputed to afford more delicious food. Of the feathered tribe, pheasants are to be found in the woods, though scarce; also that beautiful bird called the capercaillie, or cock of the wood, now becoming exceedingly rare; the ptarmigan, the black game, and grouse, are abundant in the heathy mountains; and in the low grounds are partridges, snipes, plovers, &c. Scotland has also most of the English and Irish birds, except the nightingale. The aquatic fowls are numerous in the islands. Scotland land has made great advances in all the finer manufactures. Flax and hemp are manufactured into a variety of fabrics, such as sheetings, osenburghs, haggings, and canvas. The manufacture of finer linen has fallen off in Scotland, having been superseded partly by the importation of Irish cloth. Spinning machines have now been generally introduced in different parts of Scotland. The cotton manufactures have also been carried, by means of machinery, to an astonishing degree of extent and perfection. Muslins and other fabrics are executed in great perfection. To these have been added broads, lappets of all sorts, imitation shawls, plain and lined gauzes, spidered, wooded, and numerous species of draw-loom, and other work of the most fanciful, delicate, and ornamental kinds. Immense quantities of cambrics, shirtings, sheetings, towels, stripes, checks, pulicates, ginghams, shawls, &c. are manufactured in Scotland in a superior manner. Within these few years also cotton has been manufactured into flannel, which has become an article of general use, and of which large quantities are exported to the West India, Glasgow, Paisley, and the surrounding districts, are the chief seats of the cotton manufacture. Calico printing in all its branches is also carried to a great extent. The great iron-works established in Scotland deserve particular attention, and that at Carron, near Falkirk, is the largest manufactory in Europe. A considerable proportion of Scottish ironmongery is exported to America, the West India, and other British colonies, such as anchors, bolts, wagon axles, sugar-mill gudgeons, vices, and various articles of mill and steam-engine work, with domestic utensils of every kind, as well as hoes, axes, adzes, hammers, and similar tools. Almost all kinds of articles into which timber is manufactured are produced in great plenty and perfection in Scotland; and since the introduction of machinery to such an extent, a numerous class of workmen are occupied in making and upholding the different machinery which is at work. Coach-making, musical instrument-making, &c. are carried on in all the principal towns; ship-building also forms a most important branch of national industry; and dock-yards for building and repairing vessels are established in the different seaports. There are manufactories of glass for all the different sorts of bottle, window and flint glass; also of soap, candles, and starch; salt, &c. There are tanneries and breweries in all the considerable towns, and distilleries for spirits in different parts, on an extensive scale; and it may be generally remarked, that almost all articles of ordinary use are manufactured in Scotland. The different fisheries have been prosecuted with great industry and success. The whale fishery to Davis' Straits and Greenland at present employs a greater number of ships than at any former period. The white fishery is also prosecuted with great industry.

along the Moray frith, Shetland, and the Western islands, which bring profitable returns. The herring fishery is carried on along the whole coast of the kingdom with great success; as also the salmon fishery in all the different rivers. From the ports on the eastern coast of Scotland a great trade is carried on to Holland, Norway, Sweden, and the different states on the shores of the Baltic. This trade has greatly increased of late years. The imports principally consist of flax, hemp, yarn, linen, iron, corn, wood, tallow, and other commodities produced in these countries; and in return, colonial produce, cotton goods, and other manufactured articles, are exported. The chief shipping ports are Leith, Dundee, Arbroath, Montrose, Aberdeen, Peterhead, Banff, and Inverness. The trade with Spain, Portugal, and the Mediterranean, is carried on from Leith and other ports; and the connection with Canada extends to all the most considerable towns on the east coast of Scotland. The commerce of the west coast centres almost entirely in the Clyde, which is the grand emporium of the American, West Indian, and South American trade. Several vessels have sailed from Greenock, to carry on the trade to India, since, by the relaxation of the company's monopoly in 1814, it was partially thrown open to the merchants of this country. The inhabitants of Scotland may be divided into two great classes, viz. Highlanders and Lowlanders. The language, dress, and customs of these two classes are very different. The language of the Highlanders is that species of the Celtic called in Scotland Gaelic or Farse. The ancient dress of the Highlanders is fast giving way to a more modern costume, although it is still retained in many places, and often worn by gentlemen on particular occasions. It is formed of woollen stuff, chequered with different colours, well known by the name of series. This dress is said to bear some resemblance to that of the ancient Romans. The inhabitants of the low country more resemble the English in their dress and manners, though in the country parts some peculiarities remain. The language of the low country is English, with a mixture of the Scotch, which, however, in the ordinary dialect of the better classes more especially, is fast giving way to the English. The Presbyterian system of religion was established in Scotland by act of parliament, in 1690, and was afterwards secured in the treaty of union. This system is founded on a parity of ecclesiastical authority among all its presbyters, excluding all pre-eminence of order, all its ministers being held equal in rank and power. It is also exceedingly simple in its forms, admitting of no outward splendour or ceremony, nor of any of those aids to devotion which are supposed to be derived from painting or music. There are in Scotland 630 parishes, and 289 established clergymen, who discharge the duties of the pastoral office in their several parishes. They are assisted by elders, who are selected from their congregation, for the propriety of their conduct; these, with the minister, compose a kirk-session, which is the lowest ecclesiastical judicature in Scotland. The ministers of several contiguous parishes constitute what is called a presbytery, which has cognizance of the conduct of the clergy, and of all ecclesiastical matters within its bounds. Synods form the next gradation in the scale of ecclesiastical judicature. They are composed of several presbyteries, and of a ruling elder from every kirk-session within their bounds. They are courts of appeal, and review the procedure of the presbyteries. The general assembly, which is a representative body, consists of delegates from presbyteries, universities, and royal burghs, in the following proportions, namely, for the presbyteries 200 ministers, and 80 elders; for royal burghs 67 elders; and from the universities 3 ministers or elders; in all 361. Besides the Presbyterians, the established religion, there are numerous dissenters, namely, the Episcopalians, Burghers and Antiburghers, Quakers, Brethren, Baptists, Glasites, &c. There are Catholic churches in the principal towns; and in the northern parts of Scotland this religion has not been entirely superseded by the reformation. In no country is there perhaps such ample provision for education as in Scotland. An act passed in the reign of William and Mary, ordains that there shall be a school and a school-master in every parish. These establishments, in which are taught reading, writing, arithmetic, and also Latin and Greek, have been attended with the happiest effects; having spread the spirit of improvement among all classes. Scotland has also four universities, namely, at Edinburgh, St Andrew's, Glasgow, and Aberdeen. The ancient constitution of Scotland was superseded at the time of the union with England. In the parliament of England, the Scots nobility are represented by 16 peers. In the house of commons, the freeholders of the counties, amounting to about 2429, are represented by 50 commissioners or knights of the shire. The royal burghs, which are 65 in number, exclusive of the city of Edinburgh, which sends one member, are divided into 14 districts, which return as many members, elected by a delegate from each burgh. Scotland, however, still retains her own ancient laws and institutions. Civil and criminal justice is administered by the college of justice, instituted by James V. in 1532, after the model of the French parliament. It is the highest court in Scotland, and consists of a president, and 14 ordinary lords. In 1607, the court of session was formed into two divisions, the first, consisting of seven members, under the lord president; the second division, under the lord justice clerk, consisting of six members. In 1818, a jury court was established under a lord chief commissioner, and two other commissioners, for the trial of civil cases. The court of justiciary is the highest criminal court in Scotland. The court of exchequer has the same powers, privileges, jurisdiction, and authority over the revenue of Scotland, as that of England over the revenue of England. In the high court of admiralty there is only one judge, who is the king's lieutenant and justice general upon the seas, and in all ports and harbours. He has a jurisdiction in all maritime causes; and by prescription he has acquired a jurisdiction in mercantile causes not maritime. The commissary court consists of four judges nominated by the crown, and has an original jurisdiction in questions of marriage and divorce, and reviews the decrees of local commissary courts. Besides the above national judges, every county has a chief magistrate called a sheriff, whose jurisdiction extends to certain criminal cases, and to all civil matters, which are not by special law or custom appropriated to other courts. In cases of inferior importance also, the magistrates of cities and royal burghs have a jurisdiction, which is subject to the review of the sheriff. Scotland was first visited by the Roman troops under Agricola, who penetrated to the foot of the Grampian mountains. It was afterwards the prey of hostile tribes, and was exposed to the ravages of the Norwegians and Danes, with whom many bloody battles were fought. Various contests were also maintained with the kings of England. Robert Bruce, however, secured the independence of the country, and his title to the throne, by the decisive battle of Bannockburn, in 1314. He was succeeded by his nephew Robert Stewart, and he by his eldest son Robert. He being a weak prince, the reins of government were seized by the duke of Albany, who stoned to death the eldest son of the king. James, his second son, to escape a similar fate, fled to France; in the year 1424 he returned to Scotland; and having excited the jealousy of the nobility, he was assassinated in a monastery near Perth. James II. his son, an infant prince, succeeded him in 1437. He was killed by the bursting of a cannon at the siege of the castle of Roxburgh. James III. succeeded the throne at the age of seven years. His reign was weak and inglorious; and he was murdered in the house of a miller, whither he had fled for protection. James IV. a generous and brave prince, began his reign in 1488. He was slain at the battle of Flodden. James V. an infant of less than two years of age, succeeded to the crown. He died in 1542, and was succeeded by his daughter, the celebrated Queen Mary, whose history and tragical end are well known. She was succeeded by her son James, who, in 1603, ascended the throne of England, vacant by the death of Queen Elizabeth, when the two kingdoms were united into one great monarchy.

SCOTLAND, a small hamlet of England, in the Isle of Purbeck, Dorsetshire.

SCOTT, a county of the United States, in the north part of Kentucky. Population 12,419, including 1723 slaves.—2d. A county in the south-west part of Virginia.

SCOTROW, a hamlet of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

SCRAPTON, a hamlet of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

SCRAMERBURN, a village of the United States, in Bergen county, New Jersey.

SCRATCHEMAN, a village of England, East Riding of Yorkshire.

SCRINAN, a large and handsome port of the east coast of the Isthmus of Panama.

SCRIVER, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1374.

SCRYVEN, a county of the United States, Georgia. Pop. 4477, including 1218 slaves.

SCYRIA, a small river of Italy. It falls into the Po, N. of Tortona.

SCYTHIA, a river of the United States, New York, the N. E. branch of the Hudson.

SCYTHIA, a lake in the west of European Turkey, in Albania, about 18 miles in length, and 7 in breadth.

SCUTARI, a large fortified town of European Turkey, in Albania, on the river Bojana, at the S. E. extremity of the lake of Scutari. Its position is very favourable for defence, and its highest point is occupied by a castle. The town consists of four quarters. It has several mosques and Greek churches. Population, Turks, Greeks, and Albanians, 12,000, 448 miles W. Constantinople.

SCUTARI, a large village, an inland city, on the Bosphorus, immediately opposite to Constantinople. Its site is one of the most beautiful imaginable. The summits of Scutari, and the hills above it, command the most brilliant views of Constantinople and the surrounding scenery. It carries on a considerable trade, being a rendezvous for the caravans which come from the interior of Asia. Population 30,000.

SCYLLA, a well known promontory and current of the Mediterranean, in the straits of Messina, which separates Sicily from the Neapolitan territory. Its height about 500 feet.

SCYLLIS, or SCYLLI, two islands in the Grecian archipelago, between Naxos and Andros. The larger island is about 17 miles in length, the other island is only 3 miles in length.

SEA, a river in the north of Spain, which flows south, and joins the Tagus.

SEABOARD, a hamlet of England, in Somersetshire and Dorsetshire.

SEACROFTON, a hamlet of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

SEACROFT, a village of England, in Yorkshire, 10½ miles N. E. Great North.

SEACROFT, a hamlet of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

SEAFORTH, Loch, an arm of the sea on the coast of Scotland, on the north side of the island of Lewis.

SEAFORT, Upper and Lower, two hamlets of England, in Wiltshire.

SEALE, NETHER and OVER, two adjoining hamlets of England, in Leicestershire.

SEALOTT, a celebrated city and fortress of Hindostan, province of Lahore. Long. 73. 58. E. Lat. 32. 44. N.

SEANER, two hamlets of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

SEANER, a small river of England, in Yorkshire, which falls into the Ure.

SEARA, a town and fortress of Brazil, and capital of the province of the same name. It contains three churches, the governor's palace, the town-hall and prison, a custom-house, and the treasury. Pop. 1000 to 1200. Long. 38. 28. W. Lat. 3. 31. S.

SEATMOUTHON, a small village of England, in Cumberland, near Cockermouth.

SEATON, a fishing village of Scotland, in Ross-shire, on the Moray frith.

SEATON, a township of England, in Cumberland. 3 miles N. E. Workington.

SEATOR, a river of England, in Cornwall, which falls into the English channel.

SEATOR, a hamlet of England, in Durham. Also a village in Yorkshire.

SEATOR CAREW, a village of England, on the sea coast of Durham.

SEATOR DELAVAL, a village of England, county of Northumberland.

SEBASTIAN, St. a well built town of Spain, province of Biscay, at the mouth of the small river Uruma. The town is fortified with bastions and half-moons; the citadel stands on a conical eminence, accessible only by a path winding round it in a spiral form. The harbour is small, and capable of containing only about 30 merchantmen; but it is perfectly secure. Here are three churches, five convents, an hospital, and about 12,000 inhabitants. Ships' anchors, cables, and leather, are manufactured in the town. St Sebastian has been repeatedly taken by the French: in 1719, in the revolutionary contest of 1794, in Bonaparte's invasion in 1808, and lastly, in the invasion of Spain by the Duke d'Angoulême in 1823. It was retaken by the British in 1813. 8 miles W. Fontarabia. 40 E. Bilbao.

SEBASTIAN, St. a seaport, and capital of the island of Gomera, one of the Canaries.

SEBASTIAN, St. an island in the Atlantic ocean, separated from the coast of Brazil by a strait about 3 leagues wide. Lat. 23. 45. S.

SEBASTIAN, St. DE LOS REYES, a city of the Caracas, in the province of Venezuela, on the Guairico. Its pastures feed large herds of cattle. Population 3300. 28 leagues S. 4 S. W. Caracas. Lat. 8. 54. N.

SEBASTIANO, St. a town of Italy, in Piedmont. Population 1000.

SEBASTICOOK, a river of the United States, in Maine, which flows into the Kennebeck.

SEBETICO, a well built town of Austrian Dalmatia, nearly in the mouth of the Kerka, 143 miles N. W. Ragouza. Pop. 6300.

SEBETTEL, a town of Germany, in Saxony, 9 miles E. S. E. Dresden. Pop. 2400.

SEBIO, a considerable river of Morocco, which falls into the sea near Algiers.

SEBURNHAM CHURCH, a village of England, in Cumberland.

SECHELLEN, a cluster of small islands in the Indian ocean, only three of which are inhabited.

SECHURA, a town of Peru, jurisdiction of Piura, on the Piura, about a league from the coast of the Pacific. It has 400 families, all Indians. 180 miles N. N. W. Truxilla.

SECKENHEIM, a village of Germany, 4 miles E. Mannheim. Population 1200.

SECKINGEN, a petty town of Germany, in Baden. Population 1600.

SECLIN, a town of French Flanders, 4 miles S. Lille. Population 2500.

SECONDIGLIANO, a town of the kingdom of Naples. Population 4800.

SECONNO, St. a town of Italy, in Piedmont. Population 1600.

SEDAK, a strongly fortified town of France, department of the Ardennes, on the Meuse. The town is divided into Upper and Lower. It has manufactures of superfine woollens; also of fire-arms and copper articles; and a cannon foundry. Population 11,000. 170 miles N. E. Paris.

SEDDYBON, a market town of England, in Yorkshire. It has a manufacture of iron articles. Population 2022.

SEDEFIELD, a township of England, county of Durham. Population 1268.

SEDEGWICK, a hamlet of England, in Westmoreland, 4½ miles S. Kendal.

SEDEWILL, a hamlet of England, in Northumberland, 6 miles from Newcastle.

SEDEWICK, a seaport and post township of the United States, in Maine, on Penobscot bay. Population 1352.

SEDLITZ, a village of Bohemia, 17 miles W. Leutmeritz, noted for its mineral waters.—Also a village of Germany, in Saxony, 2 miles S. W. Pirna.

SEE BEERO, or St BIRN ISLE, an island on the west coast of Sumatra, about 70 miles in length by 10 in average breadth. It lies between the 1st and 2d degrees of S. lat. and the 98th and 99th of E. long.

SEEBAUER, a town of Prussian Saxony, 15 miles W. Brandenburg. Population 1700.—Another, 70 miles W. N. W. Berlin. Population 2100.

SEED, or SEEN, a pleasantly situated village and parish of England, in Wiltshire. Population 1011.

SEEN, a principality of Arabia, in the province of Ommen, extending from Cape Muscaten, along the coast of the Persian gulf.

SEESER, a town of Lower Saxony, duchy of Brunswick. Population 2000.

SEEWEE BAY, or BELL'S HARBOR, on the coast of South Carolina.

SEEX, an old town of France, in Normandy, on the Orne. It has manufactures of woollens, cottons, fustians, and stockings. Population 3500. 125 miles W. Paris.

SEGARY, a village of England, in Wiltshire, situated on the Avon.

SEGBERG, a town of Denmark, in Holstein, on the Trave, 28 miles N. E. Hamburgh. Population 1400.

SEGO, a large city, capital of the kingdom of Bambarra, in Central Africa, first visited by Mr Park. This city is divided into four distinct towns, two of which are on the northern, and two on the southern bank. These towns are surrounded with high mud walls; the houses are built of clay, of a square form, with flat roofs; some of them have two stories, and many of them are white washed. Moorish mosques are also seen in every quarter. Population 30,000. Long. 2. 30. W. Lat. 14. 10. N.

SEGOZAC, a town of France, department of the Charente. Population 2500.

SEGOUBE, a town of Spain, in Valencia, on the Murviedro. Its cathedral has some good paintings. It has manufactures of paper, starch, and pottery. Population 15,000. 34 miles N. W. Valencia.

SEGOVIA, an inland province of Spain, in Old Castile, lying between the provinces of Madrid and Valladolid. The rivers are the Ebro, the Fresma, the Xarama, and the Duraton. Area 3650 square miles; pop. 171,000.

SEGOVIA, a town of Spain, in Old Castile, on a rocky eminence, between two deep valleys, the one watered by the river Fresma, the other by a brook. It is surrounded with a wall in the Moorish style, crowned at intervals with turrets. The streets are narrow, crooked, and in several parts steep: the suburbs are built on more even ground. It contains a number of convents and churches, of which the most remarkable is the cathedral, a large pile, partly Grecian, partly Gothic, erected in the 16th century. The Alcazar or ancient palace is a Moorish building. The most remarkable monument of Segovia is the aqueduct, a Roman work of great boldness and grandeur. It is built of freestone without cement, and contains in all 159 arches, supported on pillars, some of which are 80 feet in height. Segovia has long been noted for its woollen manufactures. Other branches of industry are dyeing and the making of pottery, paper, and lead. Population 10,000. 47 miles N. N. W. Madrid.

SEGRE, a petty town of France, department of the Maine and Loire.

SEGURA, a large river of Spain, which joins the Ebro near Mequinenza.

SEIGUN, an island of the United States, on the coast of Maine, with a light-house, 3 miles from the mouth of Kennebeck river.

SEIGUN, a town of France, department of the Aveyron. Population 1600.

SEIGUN, a small town and castle in the east of Portugal, province of Beira, situated on a hill.

SEIGUN, a large river of Spain, which enters the Mediterranean, 10 miles S. W. Alcant.

SEIGUN, a small town in the N. E. of Spain, 21 miles S. S. W. St Sebastian.

SEIGUN DE LA FLORERA, a city of Mexico, in the intendancy of Mexico, 70 miles from Nahappa. Population 1000.

SEINO, a town of Hispaniola, on a small river, and containing, with its jurisdiction, 5000 persons. 50 miles E. N. E. St Domingo.

SEINFORD, a village of England, in Gloucestershire, 4 miles from Stow.

SEIL, one of the Hebrides, belonging to Argyleshire, about 3 miles long, and 2 broad.

SEILLANS, a town of France, department of the Var. Population 2300.

SEILLE, a river of France, which falls into the Saone, near Tournus.

SEILLE LA GRANDE, a river of France, which falls into the Moselle.

SEINE, one of the four great rivers of France. It rises in the mountains of Burgundy, flows northwards through Champagne to Troyes, receives the Aube, and turning to the west, is joined by the Yonne, a river from the south, and before reaching Paris, by the Marne, a larger stream flowing from the west. At Paris, the Seine varies from 300 to 500 feet in width; and it soon after receives an addition to its stream by the influx of the Oise, when, pursuing a winding course to the north-west, it passes Rouen, and discharges itself into the sea at Havre de Grace. Length of its course 400 miles.

SEINE, a department in the north of France, which is in fact nothing more than the capital. Its district forms a tract nearly square, of which the breadth is about 16 miles.

SEINE, LOWER, a department in the north of France, comprising the north-east part of Normandy, and bounded on the north and west by the English channel. Extent 2500 square miles; population 600,000. The only large river is the Seine.

SEINE AND MARNE, a department in the north-east of France, occupying the western part of Champagne. The rivers are the Seine, the Marne, the Great and Little Marne, and a number of lesser streams. Extent 2320 square miles; population 310,000.

SEINE AND OISE, a department of the north-east of France, adjacent to that of the Oise, and to that of the Seine and Marne. Its chief rivers are the Seine, the Marne, and the Oise. Extent 2200 square miles; population 440,000.

SESDON, a hamlet of England, in Staffordshire, 6 miles from Wolverhampton.

SEISTAN, or SEORSTAN, an extensive province in the east of Persia, lying between Candahar and Khorasan on the north, Mekran and Balouchistan on the south; about 300 miles in length, and 100 in breadth.

SEIZ, a town of France, department of the Arriège. Population 3000.

SEI, HADAN, a village of Lower Egypt, on the site of the ancient Sais, several remarkable monuments of which may still be traced. 18 miles S. S. E. Fovu.

SEIN, a town of Bavarian Franconia, 14 miles S. E. Hof. Population 1500.

SEISY, a market town of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, on the Ouse, over which is erected a handsome wooden bridge. The principal business within the town consists in ship-building, and in the manufacture of leather, sail-cloth, and iron articles. Selby is a place of great antiquity. It was noted as the birth-place of Henry I. son of William the Conqueror. William had, in 1070, erected a monastery here, of which the abbey church seems to have been a very spacious and elegant structure. Population 4097. 14 miles S. by E. York.

SELLE, a river of Italy, in the west of the kingdom of Naples. It falls into the gulf of Salerno.

SELEKRUH, a town of Caramania, in Asia Minor, near the mouth of a river called Çiliuk Sooyou, the ancient Calicandarus. The modern town is merely an assemblage of mud and wooden huts. It is chiefly distinguished by being on the site of the ancient Seleucia, considerable vestiges of which are still discovered. Long. 33. 55. E. Lat. 36. 20. N.

SELENGA, a considerable river of Siberia, in the southern part of the government of Irkoutsk, which falls by three mouths into the lake Baikal.

SELENGINSK, a town of Asiatic Russia, in the government of Irkoutsk, on the Selenga. Houses 150. Long. 107. 3. E. Lat. 51. 6. 6. N.

SELIGENSTADT, a town of Germany, on the Maine, 17 miles E. S. E. Frankfurt. Pop. 2300.

SELINTT, a cape of Caramania, in Asia Minor, formed by a bold and romantic headland, on which are the ruins of the ancient Trajanopolis.

SELINVA, or SELINUNTE, formerly a celebrated city on the coast of Sicily, at the mouth of the river Hydruntas. Its ruins are still seen.

SELKIRK, a county in the south of Scotland, of small extent, and of a singularly irregular figure, extending from south-west to north-east. Its boundaries are neither marked out by the natural division of mountains, nor by the course of running streams, and it intersects, and is itself intersected in various parts, by the encroachments of the neighbouring counties. Selkirkshire is bounded W. and N. by Peeblesshire and Mid-Lothian, E. and S. E. by Roxburghshire, and S. by the county of Dumfriesshire. Its greatest length is 27 miles, and its greatest breadth 17 miles. Area 172,100 English acres. The general appearance of this county is a continued succession of mountains, gradually rising one above another in loftiness, very different in shape and magnitude, mostly green and bare, though several are heathy, and one or two partly covered with trees. Between the hills there are narrow and well watered valleys every where interspersed; and the naked and gloomy scenery of this mountainous country, when seen at a distance in cloudy weather, is softened by the mild aspect of the intervening valleys. The chief rivers are the Tweed, the Eddrick, and the Yarrow, two pastoral streams, the banks of which are celebrated in Scotland, and the Gair. The chief manufactures are woollen cloth, stockings, tanned leather, and different implements of husbandry. Woollen cloth is mostly made at Galashiels. Sel-kirkshire contains two towns, viz. Selkirk, which is a royal burgh, and Galashiels. The valued rent is £80,367, and the real land rent is £26,320 sterling. Population 6637. Selkirkshire sends one member to parliament.

SELKIRK, a royal burgh of Scotland, and chief town of the county to which it gives name, pleasantly situated on a commanding eminence below the confluence of the Yarrow and the Eddrick, near the borders of Roxburghshire. The town was but poorly built, but has lately been greatly improved. Many new houses have been built in a good style, together with a new town-house, containing apartments for the town and sheriff-court, and a library; it has a handsome spire and clock. Stockings are manufactured on a small scale, and woollen yarn is spun. An inkle manufactory has also been long established here, and a tan-work. A new prison has been erected. Of 100 citizens, who followed James IV., and distinguished themselves at the battle of Flodden, a few only returned. The corporation of weavers still preserve a standard taken from the enemy by a member of that body. The sword of William Brydson, the town-clerk, who led the citizens to the battle, and was knighted for his valour, also remains in the possession of a citizen of Selkirk, his lineal descendant. Population 2720. 35 miles S. Edinburgh.

SELLA, a river of Spain, in the Asturias, which falls into the bay of Biscay.

SELLA, a town of Spain, in Valencia, north of Alicante. Population 2000.

SELLAY, a small island of the Hebrides, in the district of Harris.

SELLEZ, a town of France, department of the Loire and Olier. Population 3600.

SELONGEY, a town of France, department of the Cote d'Or. Population 1600.

SELSEA, a village and parish of England, on a peninsula formed by an inlet of the sea called Selsea harbour. Population 766. 7 miles S. Chichester.

SELTERS, or LOWER SELTERS, a village of Germany, 24 miles N. Montz, noted for one of the most celebrated mineral springs in Europe.

SELTZ, a town of France, on the Rhine, 27 miles N. Strasburg. Population 1500.

SELVA BAZA, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, 45 miles N. E. Rocas. Pop. 3600.

SEMAH, an island in the Eastern seas, 24 miles long, and from 6 to 10 broad.

SEMEENDIA, a town of European Turkey, in Servia, on the Danube, 30 miles S. E. Belgrade. Population 9000.

SEMINARA, a town of Italy, in the south of Naples. Population 1800.

SEMINOVON, a hamlet of England, in Wiltshire, 3 miles N. E. Trowbridge.

SEMLIN, a town of Slavonia, separated from Belgrade by the Save. Pop. 3000.

SENOT, a river of the Netherlands, which flows into the Meuse.

SENPACH, a small town of Switzerland, on Lake Lemano, 24 miles S. W. Zurich.

SEMRU, a town of France, 34 miles N.W. Dijon. Population 4300.

SEMA, a Portuguese settlement in Eastern Africa, about 247 miles up the great river Zambeze. Population 2000.

SEMAN, a township of England, in the county of Cornwall. Population 637.

SEMAS, a village of France, department of the Mouths of the Rhone. Pop. 1300.

SEMER, a river of England, in Leicestershire and Warwickshire. It joins the Anker.

SENECA, a county of the United States, in the state of New York. It is bounded N. by Cayuga county, E. by Cayuga county and lake, S. by Tompkins county, and W. by Seneca lake and county. Population 16,609. Chief towns Waterloo and Ovid.

SENECA, a village of the United States, in Junius county, New York. Also the name of a township.

SENECA CREEK, a river of the United States, Maryland. It joins the Potomac.

SENECA LAKE, a lake of the United States, in New York, 35 miles long, and from 2 to 4 broad.

SENECA RIVER, a river of the United States, in New York, which flows from Seneca lake N. E. into the Oswego.

SENECEY, a town of France, department of the Saone and Loire. Population 1800.

SENEFFE, a town of the Netherlands, province of Hainault, the scene of a sanguinary battle, on 11th August 1674, between the prince of Orange and the prince of Conde. Population 3000. 12 miles N. W. Charleroi.

SENEGAL, a large and remarkable river of Africa, the principal one, which falls into the sea on its western coast, and the course of which was not accurately known, till the journey of Mr Park into Africa. It has its source in the great range of mountains which traverses Manding and Jallonkadoo, and from the other side of which the Niger takes its rise. From these descend a succession of rivers, the principal of which, called on the spot the Ba Fing, or Black river, is considered as the principal branch of the Senegal. Its source has never been precisely explored; but it may be fixed pretty nearly in 7. 6. W. long. and 11. 40. N. lat. The Falemé, and the Ba Fée, or Kokoro, are also great streams, which, joining the Senegal in the kingdom of Gallam, render it a river of the first magnitude. After passing Gallam, the Senegal rolls over a level plain; and about 60 leagues from its mouth, the level is so complete, that the river does not descend in that space more than two feet and a half. It is bordered by vast woods, obstructed by thick underwood, and filled with numberless species of birds. The different kinds of monkeys and parrots in particular, are exhibited in vast variety. Crocodiles, and other species of amphibious animals, are abundant in the upper part of the river. The Senegal, in this level part of its course, separates into branches, which form several large islands. Its entrance is obstructed by a very formidable bar, consisting of a ridge of sand, stretching across its mouth at a little distance under water. The mouth of the Senegal is in Lat. 16. 5. N.

SENEGAL, GOVERNMENT OF, the name given by the French to their great African settlement, situated at the mouth of the above river, which was begun in 1637. St Louis, the capital of the French settlements on the Senegal and in Africa, is situated on an island in the middle of the river, which is here of considerable breadth. In 1787, the number of white inhabitants permanently established at Fort St Louis, did not exceed 60. The governor, the military, naval, and civil officers, and all the European servants, might amount to nearly 600; the free mulatto and negro population to 2400; and during the prevalence of the slave trade, about 1200 unfortunate negroes were always kept in confinement. Thus the whole population amounted to about 6000 souls. The most important branch of the commerce of this settlement, consists in procuring the gum known in commerce by the name of gum Senegal, which has been ascertained by experiment to be much superior to all the eastern kinds, and even to that of Arabia. In the war of 1756, this country yielded to Britain, and was ceded at the peace of 1763. The French retook it in 1779, and retained it by the peace of 1783. They lost it again in the revolutionary war; but on the restoration of the Bourbons, it was anew ceded to them.

SENGLEA, a town, or rather part of the city of Valette, in the island of Malta, divided by a canal from Vittoriosa. Pop. 6500.

SENJEN, a large island, on the coast of Norway, 52 miles long and 38 broad.

SENZIS, a town of France, department of the Oise. The cathedral is admired for its architecture. Pop. 4500. 30 miles N. Paris.

SENNA, a flourishing little town of Diarbekir, in Asiatic Turkey, 80 miles S. S. E. Mosul. Population 6000.

SENNAR, a country of Eastern Africa, having Abyssinia on the east and south, Darfur on the west, Dongola and the independent districts of Nubia on the north. The kingdom of Sennar is not of high antiquity. It was founded in 1604 by a body of Shilluk negroes, who descended from their settlements in the upper part of the Belr ab Abiad; drove before them, or subjected, the Arab inhabitants; and have since reigned over Sennar. The territory of Sennar, for several miles from the banks of the river, is of very remarkable fertility. At the time also of the rains, which take place about the end of August and the beginning of September, it assumes a most delightful appearance, resembling the pleasantest parts of Holland. The Nile flows through this immense plain above a mile broad, full to the very brim, but never overflowing. Soon after, however, the rains cease; the dourra then ripens, the leaves turn yellow and rot, the lakes putrify, smell, and are full of vermin; all the beauty disappears, and bare scorched Nu-bia returns, with all its terrors of poisonous winds and moving sands, glowing and ventilated with sultry blasts. Senaar produces within itself few commodities fit for trade; and that which it carries on consists chiefly in exchanging the productions of interior Africa with those of Egypt and Arabia. The most extensive communication is with Suakin, and Jidda, by Shendi, and thence across the track extending from the Nile to the Red sea. With Egypt the intercourse is conducted by two different routes. The commodities drawn from interior Africa, for export to Egypt and Arabia, are gold dust, called subar, ivory, civet, rhinoceros' horns, but above all, slaves. The foreign commodity chiefly sought after is blue cotton cloth from Surat; also spices, hardware, and toys, particularly a species of black beads made at Venice.

SENAAR, a city, capital of the above kingdom, on the shore of the Bahr el Azrek, a river of Abyssinia, about 200 miles previous to its junction with the Bahr el Atihad, or main branch of the Nile. It stands upon ground merely high enough to secure it against the rise which takes place during the rainy season. The city is large, and is supposed to contain 100,000 inhabitants, though the houses are in general poorly built. They have flat roofs, which form agreeable terraces. The king's palace is surrounded with a lofty brick wall, but the edifices which compose it are not arranged with any degree of order or taste. The apartments, however, are richly adorned with carpets. Neither rose, nor any species of jessamin, grow near the city; nor any tree, except the lemon. Long. 33. 30. 30. E. Lat. 13. 34. 36. N.

SENNE, a small slow flowing river of the Netherlands, which falls into the Dyle.

SENE, a town of France, department of the Yonne. Its cathedral is admired both for its exterior and interior. It has manufactures of woollens, velvet, stockings, gloves, and leather. Pop. 8600. 84 miles S. E. Paris.

SERIKO, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples. Population 3500.

SERVELDA, a town of Spain, province of Segovia, 24 miles E.N.E. Segovia. Pop. 1000.

SERAINO, a large village of the Netherlands, on the Meuse. Population 2000.

SERAMICA, a large river of South America, which, after a winding course of about 100 miles, falls into the Atlantic ocean.

SERANPORE, a town of Bengal, belonging to the Danes, on the Bhaggarutty or Hoggly river, 12 miles north of Calcutta. The houses are built of brick, plastered with mortar, and have flat roofs, with balconies and Venetian windows, but few of them are more than two stories high. There is a handsome church, and a battery of twelve pieces of cannon near the flag-staff, but the town is not fortified. Long. 88. 26. E. Lat. 22. 45. N.

SERANGANI, a cluster of small islands in the Eastern seas, about five leagues from Magindanan, between the 5th and 6th degrees of N. lat.

SERAVALLE, a town of Austrian Italy, district of Triviso, on the Alischio. Pop. 5000.

SERAVALLI, a town of Italy, on the Scrivia, 10 miles N. Genoa. Population 3400.

SERCHIO, a river of Italy, which falls into the Mediterranean, 4 miles N. N. W. Pisa.

SERKEPPE, the capital of a province of the same name in Brazil. It has a handsome parish church. Population 500 housekeepers. Long. 37. 30. 30. W. Lat. 11. 40. S.

SERKEPPE, a river of the same province and kingdom, which runs S.S.E. into the bay.

SEREGNO, a town of Austrian Italy, in the Milanese. Population 3300.

SEREA, or SERUS, a tolerably well built town of European Turkey, in Macedonia. It has a number of handsome mosques, baths, and other public edifices. Its manufactures of towels and other strong linen cloth, are the most noted in the Levant; and those of cotton stuffs are very extensive. Population 30,000. 45 miles N. E. Salonica.

SERETH, a large river of European Turkey. It joins the Danube at Brailow.

SERETH, a town of Austrian Galicia, on the river Sereth, 80 miles W. N. W. Jassy. Population 2000.

SEROGATCHI, a town of European Russia, 75 miles S.E. Niznei-Novgorod. Pop. 1000.

SERAGENES, a town of France, department of the Yonne. Population 1500.

SERINGAPUR, or GERWALI, a principality of Northern Hindostan, situated chiefly between the 30th and 32d degrees of northern latitude, and between the 77th and 79th of eastern longitude. It is estimated at 140 miles in length, by 60 in breadth.

SERINGAPUR, the capital of the above province, on the Alcananda. The town is about three quarters of a mile long, the houses built of rough stone and mud, and covered with slate, but seldom more than two stories high. The palace of the rajah is, however, elevated to four stories. The streets are narrow and dirty, but there are some good shops. Long. 78. 18. E. Lat. 30. 11. N.

SERINGAPATAM, a celebrated city of the south of India, and for a considerable period the capital of the province of Mysore. It is situated at the upper end of an island of four miles in length, by one and a half in breadth, in the river Cavary. It is an ancient fortress; but it was not till the reigns of Hyder Aly and his son Tippoo Sultan, that it attained any great degree of splendour or strength. In the month of February 1792, it was invested by the British and allied armies, under the command of Lord Cornwallis, on which Tippoo Sultan acceded to the terms of peace proposed to him. In the year 1790, a war having again broken out between the British and Mysore, Seringapatnam was again invested by the British and Nizam's forces, on the 14th of April, and was stormed about two o'clock in the afternoon of the 4th of May. On this occasion, Tippoo Sultan, and nearly 3000 of his followers, are reported to have fallen, and the whole of his family and treasures taken by the conquerors. Previous to the siege, the city and island are said to have contained 150,000 inhabitants, including the garrison; in the following year the inhabitants were reduced to less than 32,000. Serirapatnam has of course declined exceedingly in consequence. Long. 79. 51. E. Lat. 12. 26. N.

SERINGHAM, an island of the district of Trichinopoly, in the south of India. It is situated on the river Cavery, and is celebrated on account of its Hindoo temples.

SERRIO, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples. Population 7500.

SERRIONE, a town of Austrian Italy, on the lake of Garda, 16 miles W. Verona. Population 1600.

SERPA, a small but strong frontier town of Portugal, province of Alentejo. Pop. 1000.

SERPHTANTO, the ancient Seriphos, an island of European Turkey, in the Archipelago, between the island of Paros and the gulf of Engia. Pop. 1000, who live chiefly in the small town of Serphanto, which has a harbour.

SERPTCHOV, a town of European Russia, government of Moscow, on the Oka. It contains no fewer than 19 churches or chapels. Population 5700. 62 miles S. Moscow.

SERRE, a river of France, department of the Ardennes. It joins the Oise.

SERRI, a town of the kingdom of Naples, 24 miles N. E. Salerno. Population 1600.

SERRIERES, a town of France, on the Rhone, 15 miles N. Tournon. Pop. 1700.

SERVAS, St., a tolerably well built town of France, department of the Ille and Vilaine, at the mouth of the river Rance, about a mile to the south of St. Mala, from which it is separated by a narrow arm of the sea, dry at low water. Its manufactures, consisting chiefly of linen, sail-cloth, soap, and tobacco, are considerable. Population 9000.

SERVIA, an extensive province in the north of European Turkey, corresponding to the Moesia Superior of the Romans. Its form is nearly oblong, its length being about 180 miles, its breadth 100, its superficial extent 19,000 square miles, or somewhat more than the half of Scotland. Its population is not known with certainty, but calculated at nearly 1,000,000. It is a very uneven and even mountainous country, its surface containing a number of extensive forests, and large uncultivated heaths. The rivers are the Save and Danube on the north; the Morava on its eastern, the Drina on its western boundary, both tributaries of the Danube. The climate of Servia, though temperate, is less mild than might be expected in the 43d and 44th degree of N. lat., the winter being of considerable length, and spring not beginning till April. This is owing partly to the height of the great ridge of the Argenteo or Glubotin mountains, extending along its southern boundary; partly to the number of forests, and the general neglect of cultivation in its interior. Its soil also is in general fertile, the cultivated tracts producing abundant crops; but a small proportion of the country is as yet under tillage. The most common products are wheat, barley, oats, rices, hemp, flax, and tobacco; also vines, and fruit of various kinds. Cotton is raised in the valleys and other warm spots. Timber is abundant, and would form, with the aid of water communication, a great article of export. Mines of iron have been discovered in several parts; but like the mines of salt and other minerals, they are almost entirely neglected. The manufactures, still more limited in extent, are of woollen, cotton, and hardware, the whole for home consumption. Servia was occupied by the Turks in 1566. In 1601, an insurrection took place against their authority, under the standard of Czerai Georges, previously known only as the head of a band of robbers, but now honoured with the name of avenger of his country. In 1814, he judged proper to withdraw into Russia; and by a convention concluded between his country and the Porte in 1815, the Servians acknowledged the sovereignty of the sultan, but observed the free exercise of their religion, as well as their civil rights.

SERVIA, or NEW SERVIA, a district in the south-west of European Russia, in the government of Ekaterinoslav, between the Dnieper and the Bug.

SERVIAN, a town of France, department of the Herault. Population 2200.

SERVA, a river of the Nardinian states, in the Milanese. It joins the Po between Casal and Valenza.

SESSA, a town of the kingdom of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro, 29 miles N. N. W. Naples. Population only 3600.

SESSA, or SEZZA, a town of Italy, in the Ecclesiastical States, situated on an eminence near the Pontine marshes, 35 miles S. E. Rome. Population 5900.

SESTRANKE, a town of European Russia, in the south of Finland, at the mouth of the Sestra, 23 miles W. N. W. St. Petersburg. It has a manufactory of arms of different kinds; also of anchors and other instruments, the whole employing about 6000 persons.

SESTRI DI LEVANTE, a town of Italy, on the gulf of Genoa. It is defended by a castle. Population 4000.

SESTRO, Rio, a river of Western Africa, which crosses the Grain coast, and falls into the Atlantic, in Lat. 5. 30. N.

SETRV, a village of England, in Lincolnshire, 4 miles from Wragby.

SERCIZOU, a city of China, of the first rank. Long. 108. E. Lat. 27. 16. N.

SERCULEY, a village of England, in Norfolk, 8 miles S. Lynn Regis.

SERCUFEX, a province of China, on the western frontier. Population stated to Sir George Staunton at 27 millions.

SERZER, a town of Algiers, the ancient Sitipha, distinguished by the obstinate resistance it made against the Saracens. The old city is now in a state of complete ruin, 50 miles S. W. Constantina.

SETIA, a town of Candia or Crete, 44 miles E. S. E. Candia. Population 4000.

SETMURRAY, a hamlet of England, above Derwent, in Cumberland.

SETTIMO TORIN, a town of Piedmont, province of Turin, on the Sangal. Pop. 2300.

SETTIMO VITTORE, another small town of Piedmont, with 1700 inhabitants.

SETTLE, an irregularly built market town of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, on the river Ribbles. It has a spacious market-place. The cotton mills here and in the vicinity employ a great many hands. Population 1508. 58 miles W. by N. York.

SETTLERWOOD, a hamlet of England, in Gloucestershire, adjoining Hawkesbury.

SEVERAL, or St. Luis, a town of Portugal, on a bay of the Atlantic, at the mouth of the Sado, 16 miles S. S. E. Lisbon. In the dreadful earthquake of 1755, it was almost entirely levelled with the ground, but was soon rebuilt in a better style. It contains 6 churches, 11 monasteries, an hospital, and an arsenal. It exports the products of Portugal, such as lemons, olives, oil, wine; and, above all, bay salt. Population 12,000.

SEVASTOPOL, a town of the south of European Russia, in the Crimea, on a small bay of the Euxine. Its increase has been rapid since it came into the possession of Russia. It now contains above 3000 inhabitants, is the station of a part of the Russian fleet, and has several good establishments, such as hospitals, docks and dock-yards, barracks, an arsenal, a lazaretto, a large market-place, &c. The harbour is excellent. 42 miles S. E. Eupatoria. Long. 34. 11. E. Lat. 43. 41. 30. N.

SEVERNE, a river of France, which falls into the sea opposite the island of Oleron.

SEVER, or SIEVE, a river of Tuscany, which falls into the Arno.

SEVE, a small river of Hanover, which falls into the Elbe near Harburg.

SEVEN, a small river of England, in Yorkshire, which runs into the Derwent.

SEVENBECK, a small inland town of the Netherlands, in East Flanders. Pop. 1400.

SEVENBERGEN, a town of the Netherlands, in North Brabant, 8 miles N. W. Breda. Population 3200.

SEVENHAMPTON, a hamlet of England, in Wiltshire.

SEVEN ISLANDS, a cluster of small islands in the English channel, near the coast of France.—The name of various other small clusters in the Eastern seas and other parts.

SEVENNES, a chain of mountains in the south of France, extending over the departments of the Upper Loire, Ardeche, and Gard.

SEVEN OAKS, a well built market town of England, in Kent, so named from seven large oak trees which stood near it when first built. It is situated near the river Darent. The town consists chiefly of two wide streets, in one of which stands the ancient unmarket-house. The principal public building is the church, which forms a conspicuous object for several miles round the country. Here is also an hospital for the maintenance of aged people, with a free school. Population 3944. 33 miles S. E. London.

SEVEN, ST., a town of France, on the Adour, 73 miles S. by E. Bourdeaux. Population 2000.

SEVEN, ST., a town of France, in Normandy. Population 1500.

SEVERINA, ST., a town of the kingdom of Naples, 93 miles N. E. Reggio. Pop. 6000.

SEVERINO, ST., a town of the kingdom of Naples. Population 2100.

SEVERN, a large and important river of England, second only to the Thames, and also the principal river of Wales. It rises in Plinlimmon hill, on the borders of Montgomery and Cardigan shires, not far from the coast of Cardigan bay, and after a very circuitous course, passing through the counties of Montgomery, Shropshire, Worcester, and Gloucester; loses itself in the Bristol channel. It assumes its proper name of the Severn at Newtown. It passes the towns of Bridgenorth, Bewdley, Worcester, and Gloucester, dividing near the latter city into two channels, which reuniting soon afterwards, constitute a great tide river. Below Gloucester its course is chiefly to the south-west.

SEVERN, a river of the United States, in Maryland, which runs into the Chesapeake.—

3d, A river which runs into Hudson's bay.—

3d, A river of Virginia, which runs into the Chesapeake.

SEVERENDROOG, a small rocky island of Hindostan, on the coast of the Concan. Long. 73. 13. E. Lat. 17. 47. N.

SEVERO, ST., a town of the kingdom of Naples, 77 miles N. E. Naples.

SEVIER, a county of the United States, in the east part of East Tennessee. Pop. 4493.

SEVIERVILLE, a post town of the United States, in Sevier county, Tennessee.

SEVIGNAC, a town of France, department of the Cotes du Nord. Population 2100.

SEVILLE, a province in the south-west of Spain, forming the western half of Andalusia, and still retaining the title of kingdom. Its area is 2500 square miles. Population 750,000. The chief towns are Seville, the capital, with 100,000 inhabitants; Cadiz, 70,000; Ecija, 28,000; Xerez, 20,000; Osuna, 15,000; and St Mary's, near Cadiz, 12,000.

This province, particularly in the south, abounds with fine scenery, the surface being diversified, not with lofty mountains, but with beautiful plains, and with hills covered with vines and the finest fruit trees. The principal mountain chains are the Sierra Morena, the Sierra de Ronda, the Sierra de Comantina. The chief rivers are the Guadalquivir, the Guadiana, the Xerif, the Tinto, and the Ojuel. The climate is warm, and even hot, but the extremes are tempered by cool breezes from the sea or from the mountains. The soil differs greatly according to situation. The pasturages are good in those situations where the frequency of rain, the height of the ground, or the use of irrigation, protect the soil from the intense heats. The climate is very favourable to rice. Large tracts in the southern districts are covered with the fruit trees of a warm climate, oranges, lemons, citrons, limes; but other tracts of equal extent are almost desolate; thus, on going from Algeiras to Chikama, a distance of 40 miles, the traveller sees only a few villages and scattered cottages. The chief export of the province is the bay salt, prepared and shipped from Cadiz and the neighbourhood. The silk manufacture flourishes here. There are also manufactures on a small scale of coarse woollen, linen, leather, soap, pottery, and hats, all for home consumption.

SEVILLE, a large city in the south-west of Spain, in Andalusia, the capital of the preceding province. It stands in a fine plain on the left bank of the Guadalquivir, which is here a great river. It is surrounded by an old wall of considerable height, and in circuit between 5 and 6 miles, which is entered by 12 gates, and contains 166 towers. The interior is built in a great measure in the Moorish style, the streets being often extremely narrow. They are in general badly paved. The squares are neither numerous nor spacious; most of them have a fountain in the centre. There are here several beautiful public walks, one in particular on the bank of the Guadalquivir, which is frequented by the higher classes. There is a number of public edifices, no less than 30 churches, 84 convents, and 24 hospitals, great and small. The cathedral is a large and magnificent Gothic pile, built in the 15th century, and containing so many as 82 altars. Its tower, 230 feet in height, is reckoned the finest in Spain. Of the other churches and convents, several are elegant, but their chief attraction consists in their paintings. Of the edifices not ecclesiastical, the most conspicuous are the Alcázar or palace, the Lonja or exchange, the artillery school, and the mint. The Alcázar is a Moorish building. Though the outside is mean, the inside is very different, containing several courts, with fountains, galleries, and baths. The garden has also its fountains, ever-greens, and walks paved with marble. The Lonja is a modern edifice of the Tuscan order, and finely situated in the centre of a square. It was built by the merchants for an exchange, but now serves chiefly as a deposit for the old official correspondence with America, distributed formerly in several public buildings. Here are collections of letters from Cortez, Pizarro, and other invaders of the new world. Seville being one of the most ancient cities of Spain, contains several interesting remains of antiquity, Roman as well as Moorish. It had an academy and public library in the time of the Moors, and at present it has an academy for the physical sciences, another for the fine arts, and a medical society. To these is to be added a university founded in 1502. There is a public library in the cathedral, and another in the archbishop's palace. Silk is manufactured; also woollens of the coarser kind. There is a considerable manufactory of leather for private account, and a very conspicuous one of tobacco and stuff for account of government. Among the exports are wool, the skins of goats and kids, fruit, and, in a small quantity, oil and silk. The imports are various manufactures from England. Nuremberg wares from Germany, iron from Bilbao, and colonial produce from America. Seville stands on the site of the Hispalis of the Romans. The date of its foundation is unknown; it opened its gates to the Moors in 711. It was retaken by the Christians in 1247. In the autumn of 1800, it suffered from the pestilential fever which caused such mortality at Cadiz. It was occupied by the French in 1810, and remained in their hands till 1812, after their defeat at Salamanca. Pop. 100,000. 45 miles N. Cadiz. Long. 5. 30. 37. W. Lat. 37. 24. 20. N.

SEVRE NANTOISE, and SEVRE NOIRTAINE, two rivers in the north-west of France, department of the Two Sevres.

SEVRES, a town of France, 4 miles W. by S. Paris. Population 2700.

SEVRES, DEPARTMENT OF THE TWO, a department in the north-west of France, comprising about a third of the old province of Poitou, and bounded by the departments of the Maine and Loire, the Charente, and the Vendée. Its superficial extent is 2460 square miles; its population 260,000. The department is watered by the Two Sevres, the Diva, the Loire, the Thoue, and a number of inferior streams.

SEVRE, a town of France, department of the Cote d'Or, on the Saône. Pop. 2700.

SEVRE, a town of European Russia, 63 miles S. S. W. Orel. Population 2200.

SEVENTEY, a river of Wales, in Pembrokeshire, which runs into the Clothy.

SEWARDSTONE, a hamlet of England, in Essex. Population 865.

SEWDELY, a village of England, in Gloucestershire.

SEWDEY, a township of England, in the East Riding of Yorkshire.

SEWICKLY, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania. It joins the Youghiogeny.

SEWSTON, a hamlet of England, in Lancashire.

SEYRE, a town of France, department of the Var. It carries on an extensive sardine and tunny fishery. Population 6700. 2 miles S. W. Toulon.

SEYRE, a town of France, department of the Lower Alps. Population 2500.

SEYSAET, a town of France, department of the Ain. Population 2200.

SEZANNE, a town of France, department of the Maine. It has some manufactures of woollens, caps, and leather. Pop. 4200.

SIZZE ET VILLA FRANECA, a town of Sardinia, on the Morimida. Population 2200.

SFAK, a most thriving city of Tunis, in Africa. It has a trade in oil and cloth.

SHABOUB, a town of Lower Egypt, on the Komata branch of the Nile, 43 miles S. E. Alexandria.

SHACKLEWELL, a hamlet of England, in the parish of Hackney, Middlesex.

SHADWELL, a village of England, in Salop, south-west of Bishop's Castle.

SHADWELL, a hamlet of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

SHAFTESBURY, a township of the United States, in Bennington county, Vermont. It is flourishing, and contains an academy. Population 1973.

SHAFTON, EAST and WEST, two hamlets of England, in Northumberland.

SHAFTON, a hamlet of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

SHAFTESBURY, a market town and borough of England, in the county of Dorset, on a lofty eminence. Many of the buildings are mean, and the streets mostly irregular. The houses are chiefly built of a stone dug out of the neighbouring eminences. In ancient times, when its celebrated monastery was in a flourishing condition, it was of much more importance than at present. It contained, besides its abbey church, twelve other churches, several chantries and fraternities, and a priory or hospital of St John the Baptist. Of these buildings, only four churches now remain, dedicated respectively to St Peter, the Holy Trinity, St James, and St Rumbold. Of these, St Peter's is the principal. It is of considerable antiquity, and exhibits much elegance in its proportions and ornaments, but is greatly defaced by modern alterations. Shaftesbury abbey was founded by the great Alfred, and the charter of foundation creating his daughter Ethelgeda abbess, is still extant. Scarcely a vestige of the abbey is now visible, the whole having been demolished soon after the dissolution, except the high embattled wall, supported by buttresses, which formerly inclosed the park, and is in part standing on the side next the town. Besides its churches, Shaftesbury contains 140 houses for Presbyterians, Methodists and Quakers. The other public buildings of the town are the town-hall, a handsome edifice, built on five arches; a theatre but moderately endowed; and two churches. The borough has sent two M^{rs}. to parliament since the 25th Edward VI. 300 in number. Shaftesbury is of great antiquity. That it was so, the Romans, it is inferred from many of the people being found here, and other circumstances. Pop. 2963. 25 M^{rs}. E. Dorchester.

SHAFPORE, a considerable town of Hindustan, province of Malabar, on the Nago river. Long. 76. 18. E. Lat. 23. 8.

SHAH, SHANOF, SEVANOF, at Savanah of Hindostan, and capital of a district. It was formerly fortified, and contains a palace and many good buildings, the greater part of which are now in ruins. Long. 76. 22. E. Lat. 15. 1. N.

SHAHPOOR, a town of Hindostan, province of Gundwarah, on the Rhoir river.

SHAHPOORAH, a large town of Hindostan, province of Ajmeer, surrounded by a strong stone wall and ditch. It contains some good houses, and a public college. Long. 76. 9. E. Lat. 25. 43. N.

SHAHZADPORE, a town of Hindostan, province of Allahabad, on the Ganges. Long. 81. 41. E. Lat. 25. 42. N.

SHAIPT, or HOLY ISLES, three small islands of the Hebrides.

SHAKERSTONE, a hamlet of England, in Leicestershire.

SHALES, a village of England, situated on the Barbek, W. of Oton.

SHAMLY, a town of Hindostan, province of Delhi. It still contains some good houses. The bazars are well stocked. Long. 77. 10. E. Lat. 29. 53. N.

SHANGALLA, a race of savage negroes, inhabiting the northern frontier of Abyssinia, particularly on the lower part of the Mareb and the Tacozze. The country which they inhabit is entirely covered with deep and almost impenetrable forests, fit only for the production of wild animals, and still wilder men. The Shangalla are complete savages, who go naked, neither sow nor plant, and have no fixed habitations. Their food is procured by hunting.

SHANNON, the chief river in Ireland, which takes its rise from Lough Clean, and pursuing a S. and S. W. direction, divides the provinces of Leinster and Munster from Connaught. It passes Limerick, where it turns nearly to the W., and 60 miles below this city falls into the Atlantic ocean, between Kerry Head and Cape Lean, after a course of 200 miles. It is navigable nearly to Limerick for ships of the greatest burden, and for smaller vessels throughout the whole extent of its course. It traverses several large lakes, and forms many extensive bays and estuaries, interspersed with beautiful islands. It receives above thirty other rivers in its course. From the number of rivers, lakes, and springs, flowing into it, the mouth of the Shannon is increased to an immense magnitude, being nearly 10 miles in breadth for the last 15 miles, and from 20 to 30 fathoms deep. The principal towns situated on its banks are Leitrim, Carrick, Jamestown, Lanesborough, Athlone, Banagher, Portlanna, Killybeg, Castleconnell, Tarbert, and Killybeg; besides the city of Limerick, which it encompasses by different branches, and in some measure insulates.

SHANNONHAY, one of the Orkney islands, about 5 miles N. from the Mainland. It is about 7 miles long and 5 broad. Pop. 778.

SHARPLEY, a township of England, in Derbyshire, 7 miles S. E. Derby.

SHARPSHILL, a village of England, Staffordshire, 3 miles N. N. E. Wolverhampton.

SHARLESTON, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

SHARON, the name of various townships of the United States.

SHARPENTON, a hamlet of England, in Bedfordshire, 4 miles S. S. W. Silsbee.

SHARPERTON, a township of England, 16½ miles W. S. W. Alnwick.

SHARPLES, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 3005.

SHAT-TU-ARAB, a large river, or rather canal, formed by the united streams of the Euphrates and Tigris, before entering the Persian gulf.

SHATTON, a township of England, in Derbyshire, 6 miles N. E. Tideswell.

SHAUGH, a hamlet of England, in Devonshire. Population 551.

SHAVINGTON, a hamlet and village of England, in Cheshire and Salop.

SHAWANNEETOWN, a village of the United States, state of the Illinois, on the Ohio, 9 miles below the mouth of the Wabash. It contains 30 or 40 log buildings.

SHAWBURY, a village of England, in Salop, 3 miles from Ellesmere.

SHAWDON, a hamlet of England, in Northumberland, 2 miles W. Alnwick.

SHAWFORD, a village of England, in Southamptonshire, on the Itching.

SHAWA, a village of England, in Cumberland, noted for a medicinal fountain.

SHAWHEEN, a river of the United States, in Massachusetts. It joins the Merrimack.

SHEARBY, or SHEARBY, a hamlet of England, in Leicestershire.

SHEE, or BLACKWATER, a river of Scotland, in Perthshire, which unites with the Ardlie at Rochalzie.

SHEEN, EAST, a hamlet of England, in Surrey, on an eminence near the Thames.

SHEFRACOT, a river of the United States, in Lincoln county, Maine.

SHEFFICOT, a post village of the United States, in Lincoln county, Maine.

SHEFF'S TOW, a hamlet of England, in Devonshire, 7 miles S. E. Tavistock.

SHEFFWASH, a hamlet of England, in Northumberland, 1½ miles E. Morpeth.

SHEFF, GREAT and LITTLE, two villages of England, in Leicestershire.

SHEFFNESS, a market town of England, and seaport, in the county of Kent, on the isle of Sheppey, at the mouth of the river Medway, and noted for its strong and commanding fortress. This work was begun in the reign of Charles II.; but after the attack by the Dutch, who sailed up the river, government directed some strong works to be formed here. Since that period, the fort has been greatly enlarged and strengthened, new works have been added, and such improvements made as to command effectually the entrance of the river. It now also constitutes a regular garrison, commanded by a governor, lieutenant-governor, a fort major, and other inferior officers. Adjoining the fort is the king's yard or dock, which is chiefly used for repairing ships that have been slightly damaged. A resident commissioner, with two clerks, a master, ship-wright, and other officers, with labourers, are stationed here. A modern chapel has been erected at Sheerness, at the expence of government. Several old ships of war have been stationed on the shore as breakwaters; their hulls are occupied by 70 or 80 families; and the chimneys, being raised of brick from the lower gun decks, they have altogether a very singular appearance. A well has been sunk to the depth of 328 feet, by government, for the supply of the fort and the town. Population 817. 46 miles E. London.

SHEET, a hamlet of England, in Southamptonshire; adjacent to Petersfield.

SHEFFIELD, a large and populous manufacturing town of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, on an eminence, at the confluence of the rivers Sheaf and Don, over the fast of which is a stone bridge of five arches, called Lady's bridge, built in 1463; and over the Sheaf is another of one arch. Few places can boast of more handsome and regular streets. The houses are well built, and many of them elegant; they are now mostly of brick. The smoke of the numerous manufactories tends to give the town a sombre appearance: it is yet far from being dull, and is abundantly furnished with all the conveniences and elegancies of life. The public buildings are not particularly remarkable for architectural beauty, and are rather calculated for utility than show. The principal of these are the churches belonging to the establishment, the town-hall, cutlers'-hall, the general infirmary, the assembly-room, and the theatre. The churches are four in number, viz. St Peter's church, St Paul's, St James's, and the chapel of the Duke of Norfolk's hospital. St Peter's is a Gothic building, with a spire rising from the middle. St Paul's church is an elegant modern building, in the Grecian style. The chapel at the Duke of Norfolk's hospital is of an octagonal form, and calculated to contain a large congregation. The town contains, besides, seven meeting-houses for Protestant dissenters, one for Unitarians, two for Methodists, one for Quakers, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The town-hall is a handsome new edifice. The general infirmary is a large and commodious building, begun in 1783. The situation is healthy, and the plan of the building well adapted to promote the recovery of patients. Sheffield contains, besides, the Duke of Norfolk's hospital, on the eastern bank of the Sheaf; a hospital for poor cutlers' widows; and on the north-east of the town, and near the banks of the Don, the military barracks. They form a noble pile of building, with a fine esplanade in front. The free grammar-school was erected in 1640. Near it is a writing school for poor boys; and here are also two charity schools, one for boys and another for girls. A large market-place, with extensive and commodious stables, and other accommodations, was formed and finished in 1786. The works of the Sheffield glass light company, erected in 1819, form a highly creditable addition to the public buildings of Sheffield. They stand near the Sheaf bridge; and not far from them, the basin, warehouse, and wharfs of the new canal from Thinsley, opened in 1819, present a further example of the public spirit of the inhabitants of Sheffield, having been finished at an immense expense. Sheffield has been long noted for its manufactures of hardware, which comprise two great divisions, viz. those of cutlery and plated goods. To the first division belong the trades of making edge-tools, combs, cases, buttons, fenders, files, anvils, joiners' tools, lancets, forks, hammers, nails, pocket-knives, pen-knives, razors, muffers, common scissors. Fine scissors, saws, scythes, and hay and straw knives, sickles, sheers, awl-blades, bellows, &c.; and also the refining of steel. The trade of plated goods comprises an endless variety of articles, such as tea-urns, coffee-pots, sauce-pans, tankards, cups, candlesticks, and other pieces of table furniture, &c. The latter manufactures are wholly confined within the town, but those of cutlery goods are also carried on in all the villages and hamlets in the neighbourhood, to the distance of seven miles. Besides these manufactures, there are in the town and its vicinity, several extensive foundries for iron, brass, and white metal. For several centuries, its trade was inconsiderable, consisting almost entirely of sheath knives, scissors, sickles, and scythes; and it was not till the year 1786, that the town began to make any great figure as a manufacturing place. Since that time the town has advanced rapidly in population and wealth, and the progress of luxury and improvement has kept pace with its increasing prosperity. About the year 1788, the first steam-engine grinding wheel was uponed. In 1793, the first hackney coach was set up. The origin and remote history of Sheffield are unknown; in former times it was distinguished for its castle, a strong fortress, situated on the north-east of the town, near the confluence of the two rivers, and supposed to have been built during the reign of Henry III. During the civil wars in the time of Charles I. Sheffield castle sustained a long siege for the king. Scarcely a vestige of it can now be discerned. Population 42,157. 36 miles S. Leeds, and 163 N. W. London.

SHEFFIELD, a township of the United States, in Berkshire county, Massachusetts.

SHEFFIELD, a township of England, in Bedfordshire. Population 618.

SHEFFIELD, or HAMANI, a village of Upper Egypt, on the Nile.

SHEFFIELD, a town of Afghanistan, province of Peshawar, on the Indus.

SHEFFIELD, a hamlet of England, West Yorkshire.

SHEFFIELD, a county of the United States, in Pop. 14,770, including 34,144 slaves.

SHEFFIELD, BRACCAHAR and KIRK, a village of England, in Worcestershire.

SHEFFIELD, a hamlet of England, in Derbyshire. Also a village in Devonshire.

SHELL, a small river of England, which runs into the Tyne, near its head.

SHELLY, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1934.

SHELFORD, a small town of England, in Bedfordshire, 3 miles S. Bedford.

SHELLY, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1229.

SHELLY, a river of Algiers, which flows north into the sea. Length 200 miles.

SHELTEN ISLAND, an island of the United States, near the east end of Long Island, 190 miles E. New York. Population 349.

SHEKANDOH, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 13,646, including 1038 slaves.

SHEKANDOH, a river of the United States, in Virginia, which, after a course of 200 miles, joins the Potomac, in Lat. 38. 4. N.

SHEKANDOH, a river of the United States, in New York, joins the Susquehanna.

SHEKANDOH and SHEPARDING, two hamlets of England, in Leicester and Gloucestershire.

SHEKANDOH, a river of the United States, in Connecticut. It joins the Quinebaug.

SHEKANDOH, a village and parish of England, in Middlesex, on the Thames. Pop. 712.

SHEPHERD, ISLE OF, an island of England, in the county of Kent, situated at the mouth of the Thames and Medway, and separated from the mainland of the county by an arm of the sea called the Swale, which is navigable for vessels of 200 tons burden. It extends about 11 miles in length, and 8 in breadth. About four-fifths of the island consists of marsh and pasture lands; the remainder is arable.

SHEPHERD, a hamlet of England, in Dorsetshire, 3 miles E. by S. Bridport.

SHEPHERD, a market town and parish of England, in Somersetshire. It consists of about 70 streets and lanes, most of which are narrow and dirty. The church is a large and handsome building, in the pointed style of architecture, having a tower at the west end, surmounted by a spire. The market-cross is a very curious structure. Besides the church, here are places of worship for Methodists, Presbyterians, and Quakers. It has manufactures of woollen cloth and knit stockings. Population of the parish, 6071. 115 miles W. by S. London.

SHEPHERD, or SHEPHERD, an ancient market town and parish of England, in Dorsetshire. It had formerly a woollen trade, and a manufacture of buttons, haberdashery goods, and bone lace. These trades have decreased, and the silk and linen manufactures form now the chief occupation of the inhabitants. The church is a magnificent pile of building, and, from its magnitude and ornamental architecture, more resembles a cathedral. It was originally built by Bishop Adhelm, but was almost wholly removed in the time of King Henry VI. Besides the church, here were formerly two meeting-houses for dissenters, but there is now only one in Long-street. The other public buildings are the market-house, the work-house, an alms-house, and a free grammar-school. There are, besides, some other charitable institutions. Population 3622. 10 miles N. by W. Dorchester. —The name of various other parishes.

SUDBURY, a market town of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, on the road from Doncaster to York. Population 1144. 14 miles S. W. York.

SUDHARDS, a hamlet of England, in Worcestershire, 7 miles S. W. Worcester.

SUDRHEIL, a considerable town of Algiers, in Africa, situated in a most fertile and delightful country. It is generally supposed to be the city to which the younger Juba gave the name of Cæsarea, in compliment to Augustus. The ruins here are not inferior to those of Carthage: and fine pillars, capitals, spacious cisterns, and beautiful Mosaic pavements, give the highest idea of its ancient magnificence. Long. 2. 30. E. Lat. 36. 35. N.

SUDSTON, GREAT AND LITTLE, two adjoining villages of England, in Wiltshire.

SURET, a small river of England, in Kent, which runs into the Medway.

SUETLAND, or ZETLAND ISLES, the north-east division of the Scottish Northern Isles, about 15 leagues north-east of the Orkneys. The nearest part of the continent of Europe is Bergen in Norway, from which they lie 44 leagues west. The southern promontory of the Mainland (as the largest of the Suetland islands is termed) lies in 59. 48½. of N. latitude, and the northern extremity of Unst, the most remote of them all, in the latitude of 60. 52. N. The meridian of London passes through this last island. The islands belonging to this division are about 66 in number, of which 40 are inhabited, and the others small holms or rocky islets, used only for pasturage. The principal inhabited islands are the Mainland, Yell, Unst, Whaboy, Bressay, Burray, House, Trondray, Ketlar, Papa Stour, Mickle and Little Rhoe, Skerries, Noss, &c. with the small islands of Foula and Fair Isle, which lie in the strait between the clusters of Orkney and Suetland. The climate of these islands cannot be said to be agreeable. The winds are tempestuous, and the rains heavy. The sea swells and rages in such a manner, that for five or six months their ports are almost inaccessible. There is great diversity of soil. The general appearance is a scene of ruggedness and sterility. Some patches of miserably cultivated soil relieve the eye of a traveller; but no tree nor shrub is to be seen. The western parts are peculiarly wild, dreary, and desolate; consisting of grey rocks, stagnant marshes and pools, broken and precipitous coasts, excavated into vast natural arches and deep caverns. There is plenty of peat and turf for fuel. Great numbers of horses are bred in Suetland, though they are of very small size. These little animals, however, are full of spirit, and bear fatigue much better in proportion to their size, than larger horses, and evidently proceed from the Norway horse, though reduced in size, perhaps in some degree by scanty fare. The cattle of Suetland are also of a small size, though in point of shape perhaps inferior to the west Highland cattle only, of all our native breeds. The inhabitants are a hardy, robust, and laborious race, and hospitable to strangers. They have few manufactures. They make a coarse cloth for their own use, and a little linen; they likewise export great quantities of stockings wrought upon wires, manufactured from their own wool; some of which are so fine that they equal silk in price, and can be drawn through a finger ring. Their chief trade is to Leith, London, Dublin, and Barcelona, but they also deal some little by barter with the Dutch fishermen who visit their islands. They export annually 1000 tons of coal, tusk, and ling, and 500 tons of kelp, and about 1,5000 worth of stockings and mittens. Their whole exports may be estimated at 1,35,000. Population 26,145.

SUETUCKET, a river of the United States, in Connecticut.

SHIELDS, NORTH, a market town and seaport of England, in Northumberlandshire, near the entrance of the river Tyne, on its northern bank. It has of late years increased greatly in size and population, and improvements have been carried on upon an extensive scale in its streets, buildings, &c. It now contains many handsome streets, and two elegant squares, besides the market-place. On one side is a spacious quay, with a crane for the delivery of goods, where ships of 300 tons may load and unload with perfect safety. The parish church is that of Tyne-mouth; and the town contains places of worship for almost every class of dissenters. An elegant Catholic chapel has been built; and a spacious Scotch church; also a large building which now belongs to the Independents. The remaining buildings and establishments are a large school-house, on the Lancasterian system, erected in commemoration of the royal jubilee; a theatre, a dispensary, a subscription library, which contains an extensive collection of valuable books; an asylum for sick and friendless seamen, a lying-in-hospital, and many well conducted and flourishing benefit societies. The harbour of North Shields is calculated to accommodate 2000 sail of ships. The principal trade of North Shields, as that of the Tyne in general, consists in the exportation of coals to London, and other places along the eastern coast, both of England and Scotland. Some vessels are also employed in the Baltic and American trade. North Shields carries on various manufactures, such as ship-building, boat-building, rope and sail-cloth making, brewing, baking, &c. Here is a cast-iron foundry, an extensive tannery, a skinery, a tobacco manufactory, a glove manufactory, and five hat manufactories. North Shields is a place of considerable antiquity, and owes its origin to

He monks of T. remouth priory, who created a number of churches, &c. &c. in the remote Idw. 1861. Population 620. Head a mile W. from mouth.

Sunderland, a market town of England, county of Durham, at the mouth of the river Tyne, directly opposite to North Shields. Most of the streets are narrow, and the houses indifferently built. The church is a chapel of ease to Jarrow. Its outward appearance is rather heavy; but it is remarkably neat and commodious within. There are also some dissenting meeting-houses, the most important of which is that of the Methodists. The town-house is a respectable building, in the centre of the market-place, which is a spacious square. In the town are not less than 30 dissenting societies; there are also several public schools, and a theatre. North Shields, like North Shields, has of late years greatly increased in size and population. It was formerly noted for its salt-works; but these have now greatly declined. The ground formerly occupied by the pans had been converted into yards and docks for building and repairing ships, which, from the number of ships that repair here, are almost constantly employed. The dry docks are 11 in number; thus are commodious, and large enough to contain 16 vessels. The manufactures of the town are ship-building, glass-works, soap-works, and ammoniac-works, several extensive breweries, and some large roperies. There are also several machines for taking ballast out of the slugs. The houses have been increasing; and the inhabitants are 8833. 21 miles N. E. Durham.

Sunderwall, a market town and parish of England, county of Salop. Population 4111. 9 miles N. E. Bridgnorth.

Sunderwood, a hamlet of England, in Oxfordshire, 5½ miles E. by S. Witney.

Sutton, a hamlet of England, in Durham, 3½ miles S. E. Bishop's Auckland.

Suttonwood, a hamlet of England, in Oxfordshire, near the Thames.

Suttonwold, a hamlet of England, in Northumberland, 6 miles S. W. Morpeth.

Suttonwall, a hamlet of England, county of Durham, 2 miles S. E. Durham.

Suttons, a ridge of rocks on the coast of England, lying off the Isle of Wight.

Suttons, a romantic and picturesque stream of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire.

Suttons, a small island between Tern and the island on the coast of West Florida.

Suttons, a hamlet of England, in Cheshire, 2 miles S. E. Norwich.

Suttons, a village and parish of England, Somersetshire, 2 miles from Abington. Population 63.

Suttons, a hamlet of England, Northumberland, 4½ miles N. W. Alnwick.

Suttons, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1000.

Suttons, a township of England, 5½ miles N. N. W. Dunstable. Population 1000.

Suttons, a village of the United States, in Jefferson county, Kentucky, on the Ohio 2 miles below Lexington. Here is a slaughter-yard, rope-walk, and a flour-mill. It is the landing place for all goods ascend the river to Kentucky.

Suttons, a hamlet of England, in Berkshire, adjacent to Abingdon.

Suttons, or Suttons-ross-ross, a market town of England, in Worcestershire, on the Stour. It has no trade of any consequence; its manufactory of shoes is on the decline. Pop. 1861. 63 miles N. W. London.

Suttons, a hamlet of England, in Buckinghamshire, adjacent to Windsor.—2d, A town in the East Riding of Yorkshire.—3d, A hamlet in the North Riding of Yorkshire.

Suttons, or Lea-Harston, a hamlet of England, 5½ miles N. W. Windsor.

Sutras, a small river of Scotland, in Argyshire, which falls into Loch Fyne.

Sutras, a great city of Persia, capital of the province of Fars, and at several periods of the whole empire. Although, however, the Persian historians refer its origin to a high antiquity, there seems no satisfactory evidence of its possessing at least any importance before the establishment of the Afghometan power. It presents in fact no ruins similar to those of Persepolis, Shapur, and Susa, to attest its ancient greatness. The environs of Shiraz are described as almost unrivalled in point of beauty and fertility. They are laid out to a great extent in magnificent gardens, the flowers and fruits of which form a favourite theme of eastern poetry. Hafez, the Amazon of the east, was a native of Shiraz, and composed most of his productions in these delightful retreats. He is buried in a small garden, about half a mile from the town. The appearance of Shiraz, seen amid this beautiful scenery, is rather pleasing than grand. The lofty domes of the mosques, discovered from afar amid the trees, diversify and enrich the view. The internal aspect of the place presents, however, a striking contrast, the streets being narrow, winding, and dirty. Its magnificence consists solely in a few public buildings, of which the most remarkable is the great bazar, or market-place, built by Kurram Khan. The ark, or citadel, which forms the residence of the governor, is a fortified square, of eighty yards. The royal palace within is far from being an elegant structure. Its trade consists chiefly in exporting from Russia the spices and cotton goods of India, and transmitting them to Ispahan and Yezd. The neighbouring hills also produce excellent wine. Pop. 40,000. Long. 54. 44. E. Lat. 28. 30. N.

Sutras, a small river of England, in Wiltshire, which runs into the Avon.

Sutrocar, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 332.

Sutrocar, a hamlet of England, in Gloucestershire, 5 miles N. W. Bristol.

Sutrocar, a village and parish of England, Monmouthshire. Population 681.

SHIMLEYBURG, a village of the United States, in Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania.

SHIRVAN, a province in the north of Persia, forming the largest and most important division of the southern Caucasus. It consists of a large triangular peninsula, the point of which stretches into the Caspian. In consequence of this form, it varies extremely in breadth, which, at the extremity of the peninsula, is scarcely 16 miles, while in the interior part it amounts to 160. It is bounded N. and E. by Georgia and Daghestan, and S. by the Kur, which separates it from Ghilan and Aderbajan.

SHISHRA, a town of European Russia, on the Shishra. Population 1900.

SHITTINGTON, a hamlet of England, in Northumberland, 7 miles from Hexham.

SHITTINGTON, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 1635.

SHITTERTON, a hamlet of England, in Dorsetshire, near Wareham.

SHUAL CHIEK, a river of the United States, in Illinois, which joins the Kaskaskia.

SHOALS, ISLES OF, OF SMITH'S ISLANDS, seven islands on the coast of New Hampshire, 11 miles S. E. Portsmouth.

SHORDON, a village and parish of England, in Herefordshire. Population 536.

SHORTHY, NORTH AND SOUTH, two villages of England, in Essex, near the mouth of the Thames, opposite the Lady of the Nore.

SHOCKLACH CHURCH and SHOCKLACH OVIAT, two villages of England, in Cheshire.

SHOARPOON, the capital of a district of Hindostan, in Bejjapore, on the river Kistna. Long. 75. 40. E. Lat. 17. 43. N.

SHOLDEN, a hamlet of England, in Kent, 1½ mile W. Deal.

SHOLONGER, a town of the south of India, province of the Carnatic.

SHOOTER'S HILL, a village of England, in Kent, on a hill of the same name, beyond Blackheath, on the road to Dartford. The neighbourhood was formerly noted for robberies. 8 miles E. S. E. London.

SHOREHAM, NEW, a market town and borough of England, in Sussex, coast of the English channel, on the Adur. It owes its origin to the decay of Old Shoreham, which is now a very trifling village. The church is a curious and interesting specimen of ancient Norman architecture. It is noted for ship-building, which, with its dependent branches, forms the principal business carried on in the town. It has sent two members to parliament since 1295, the 23d of Edward I. Population 1047. 5½ miles S. by W. London.

SHORELAND and SHOREWOOD, two hamlets of England, in Kent and Durham.

SHORNE, a village and parish of England, in Kent. Population 776.

SHORWELL, a village and parish of England, in the Isle of Wight. Population 576.

SHOTERY, a hamlet of England, in Warwickshire, W. of Stratford-upon-Avon.

SHOTFORD, or SCOTFORD BRIDGE, a hamlet of England, in Norfolk.

SHUTLEY, a township of England, in Northumberland. Population 609.

SHUTLEY BRIDGE, a small village of England, 14 miles N. W. Durham.

SHUTOVAN, a hamlet of England, in Oxfordshire, 4½ miles E. by N. Oxford.

SIOFFLER, a township of England, in Derbyshire. Population 1007.

SITORTON, three villages of England, two in Durham, and one in Northumberland.

SUOJISMI, or CHOUJENOU, one of the Kurile islands, the nearest to Asia, 36 miles long, and 20 broad.

SUREWLEY, a hamlet of England, in Warwickshire, 4½ miles N. W. Warwick.

SURESWORTH, an ancient market town and borough of England, in the county of Salop, and the chief town of the county, beautifully situated on the Severn, in a kind of peninsula made by a bend of the river. The air is salubrious; and, standing on several gentle eminences, the town has a bold and commanding appearance. A margin of garden and meadow ground interposes between the buildings and the river, except at the points where it is crossed by the bridges, and the west of the town, between St Chad's new church and the river, is a very fine public walk, called the Quarry, along the banks of the Severn, overarched by magnificent lime-trees, which meet at their tops, and form a beautiful kind of Gothic vault. The interior of the town is far from corresponding with its external appearance. The streets are intricately arranged, many of them steep and narrow, and all indifferently paved. The public buildings, however, are much more respectable and well deserving of attention, both for their architecture and antiquity. The castle, which stands on a narrow neck of land on the Severn, was greatly enlarged by Roger de Montgomery, the Norman, who cleared away 51 houses for this purpose. From its present state little idea can be formed of its former extent and grandeur. The buildings of it now remaining consist of two round towers and a curtain, the work of Edward I., built perhaps on the site of the Norman keep; the walls of the inner court, now a garden; and the great arch of the interior gateway, 18 feet high, the only remaining part of Roger de Montgomery's work. Considerable traces of the ramparts and walls which once defended the town on its southern and eastern sides, still remain. The shire-hall is a modern building, finished in 1706, and exhibits a handsome stone front. Of the churches, which are six in number, St Giles's is a small plain building, consisting of a nave, chancel, and north aisle, &c. St Chad's church, of modern erection, is built on a plan extremely novel, the body of the church being externally a circle 100 feet in diameter. St Mary's church, which was likewise collegiate, is a large venerable building, in the form of a cross, and consists of a nave, side aisles, transept, chancel, choir, and chapels, with a western steeple. St Alkmund's church as formerly called, &c. The old church was taken down in 1793, and the present building raised in its stead. It presents a most wretched imitation of the ancient pointed architecture. Lastly, St Julian's church is a plain substantial building, rebuilt in 1759. Besides these churches, and the Abbey church not yet described, Shrewsbury contains a Roman Catholic chapel, and meeting-houses for Presbyterians, Unitarians, Baptists, Methodists, and Quakers. The charitable institutions of Shrewsbury are, the infirmary; the house of industry, originally a foundling hospital, and only converted to its present uses in 1784; also an hospital, founded by Mr James Millington, draper, in 1734; together with several alms-houses. The free grammar school was founded and endowed by Edward VI. and afterwards augmented by Queen Elizabeth. It has also several charity schools. The town and county jail and bridewell now form one building, which stands near the castle. Its situation is healthy and beautiful. The market-house, built entirely of freestone, is one of the largest and most magnificent buildings of the kind in England. It was erected in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, in the year 1595; and in the centre of the principal front, over a spacious portal, are the arms of Queen Elizabeth, in high relief, under a rich canopy. The theatre is part of the palace that formerly belonged to the barons of Powis. It is tolerably fitted up within. There are two bridges over the Severn at Shrewsbury, the Welsh bridge and the English or East bridge, both of them of recent erection, and in the place of older ones which had gone to decay, and from their narrowness were extremely inconvenient. In the suburb called the Abbey Foregate, are the remains, though now inconsiderable, of the abbey dedicated to St Peter (to whom St Paul was afterwards added), founded by Roger de Montgomery, and at one time a great resort of people from all parts of the kingdom, to the shrine of St Winefrid, of which the monks here had got possession. The church was a spacious and magnificent building. The only part that remains is the nave, which is now used as a parish church, under the name of the Holy Cross, and in which the beauty of the ancient structure may still be traced in many parts. Besides the abbey, Shrewsbury had formerly a convent of Augustine friars, founded about the year 1256; two other convents, and five chapels, dedicated to their respective saints. Shrewsbury is a place of considerable trade. Flannels used to be the staple articles, and a coarse kind of woollen cloth made in Montgomeryshire, called Welsh webs. This trade in flannels, of which Shrewsbury had formerly a kind of monopoly, is now open to other parts of the county, but the town still continues a common mart for all sorts of commodities for Wales. Some manufactures are also carried on in the town, viz. two large manufactories of linen yarn, a porter brewery, and an extensive iron foundry. Shrewsbury is famous for its excellent bran, which is sent to various parts of the kingdom. Shrewsbury sends two members to parliament, and has done so from the earliest period of representation. It is a place of great antiquity, and of considerable note in history. Its origin is referred to the 6th century, when the Britons are thought to have established themselves here, on account of the security afforded by the situation. It was hence often visited by the English monarchs, became the scene of many military events, and took uniformly an active share in the various contests of these turbulent periods. About two miles from the town was fought the famous battle of Shrewsbury, in which Henry V. then prince of Wales, first distinguished himself in the field, and the brave Hotspur was slain. At the entrance of the town from London is a splendid column of freestone, to commemorate the military achievements of the gallant Shropshire hero, Lord Hill. Population 24,695. 40 miles W. Lichfield.

SHREWSBURY, a post township of the United States, in Monmouth county, New Jersey, 77 miles N. E. Philadelphia. The compact part contains an Episcopal church and a Friends' meeting-house. Population 3773. The name also of various other townships.

SHREWSBURY, a river of the United States, in New Jersey.

SHRIGLEY, a village of England, in Cheshire, 4½ miles N. N. E. Macclesfield.

SHRIVENHAM, a village of England, in Berkshire. Population 696.

SHROPSHIRE, or SALOP, an inland county of England, on the borders of Wales, bounded N. by Denbighshire, the detached part of Flintshire, and Cheshire, E. by Staffordshire, S. by Worcestershire and Herefordshire, and W. by Radnorshire, Montgomeryshire, and Denbighshire. It lies nearly within the parallels of 52 and 53 degrees N. lat. and the meridians of 2 and 3 degrees W. long. Its figure is that of an irregular parallelogram, somewhat approaching to an oval, extending about 44 miles in length from N. to S., and 28 miles in breadth from E. to W. Its circumference is 134 miles, and it contains 1403 square miles, or 898,000 acres, with 143 inhabitants to each mile. It is divided into 14 hundreds, and 222 parishes; contains 16 market towns, viz. Shrewsbury, Bishop's Castle, Bridgenorth, Ludlow, Wenlock, Church Stretton, Cleobury, Drayton, Ellesmere, Madeley, Newport, Oswestry, Shifnal, Wellington, Wem, and Whitechurch; and sends 12 members to parliament, 2 for the county, and 2 for each of the boroughs of Shrewsbury, Ludlow, Bridgenorth, Wenlock, and Bishop's Castle. The aspect and face of the country is greatly diversified, and comprehends every variety of picturesque landscape. From Shrewsbury northwards, extends with little interruption, over the whole breadth of the county, a vast plain termed the plain of Salop. This low land extends also southward as far as Ludlow, leaving towards the south-west a district of high and mountainous land, being a lateral branch of the great range of mountains on the west. The river Severn runs through the very middle of Shropshire, and is the great glory and ornament of the county, winding beautifully through deep romantic vallies, covered with wood. Its tributary streams belonging to the county are the Camlet, the Vyrnwy, the Perry, the Meole Brook or Rea, the Tern, the Cund Brook, the Warf, the Morbrook, the Bore Brook, and Dowles Brook. The other rivers of any consequence in the county are the Teme, the Shelbrook, the Elf Brook, the Weaver, the Clun, the Ony, and the Corve. Shropshire contains also various lakes. The soil and surface of Shropshire are exceedingly various, and have been also variously described; so that every general account of them must be taken with considerable limitation. All sorts of land are to be found in the county, except chalk and flint. Shropshire, though no way remarkable for the excellence of its agriculture, is in general well cultivated, producing large quantities of grain of various kinds, much of which is sent down the Severn for exportation. Many cattle are fed in the level parts of the county; and much of the cheese sold under the name of Cheshire, is made here. The hilly district is chiefly devoted to the pasture of sheep, whose wool is of fine quality, and is employed in the manufactories of Wales. All the ordinary white and green crops are generally cultivated; hops, hemp, flax, and cabbages, are also raised, but in small quantities, and the hops chiefly on the Herefordshire and Worcestershire border. Notwithstanding large annual falls of timber, there still remain in Shropshire some fine woods of oak, and a vast number of good hedgerow trees, chiefly ash and oak. But it is its mineral riches, and the trade and manufactures to which they have given rise, by which Shropshire is chiefly distinguished. Coal is found in great abundance, and of excellent quality, in different parts of the county. Ironstone has also been found. The ironstone is not rich; but the abundance of coal and of limestone with which it is accompanied, renders the working of it, notwithstanding, an object of profit; and it is this conjunction with the ore of both the fuel and the flux, to extract the purer metal, that has rendered Colebrook Dale and the adjoining country the seat of the most extensive ironworks in the kingdom, and which have proved the source of vast wealth to individuals, as well as the permanent support of a numerous population. In the other parts of the county, intermediate between the coal fields, the rocky masses that occur are chiefly sandstone, limestone, trap-rocks, and schistus; and the principal minerals which they contain are lead and calamine. Between the road from Shrewsbury to Bishop's Castle and the vale of Montgomery, rises a high rocky track, the most elevated peak of which is called the Stiperstones; and it is here that the lead mines of the county are situated. This metal is procured in considerable quantity from various parts of the Stiperstones, but chiefly from the Hope and Smilbeach mines. The sandstone, which occurs so extensively in this county, affords an excellent building stone. Of the manufactures of Shropshire, the most extensive are the iron-works, which are carried on in different parts of the great coal and iron district east of Shrewsbury. In the Dale a work is carried on for obtaining coal-tar from the condensed smoke of the coal; and considerable potteries have also been established in this district. At Broseley, garden pots and other vessels of a coarse fabric are made; and this place is also noted for the manufacture of excellent tobacco pipes. At Caughley is a china manufacture of great excellence. At Coalport coloured china of all sorts is made, and also Queen's or Wedgwood's ware. Shropshire also contains several mills for dyeing woollen cloths, and some cotton and linen manufactories. The trade, manufactures, and even the agriculture of Shropshire, have been greatly advanced by its canals, which, though of late introduction, owing perhaps to the natural advantages which it enjoyed by means of the navigation of the Severn, have been carried here to a great extent. During the various revolts that occurred after the death of Edward I. and also during the wars of York and Lancaster, Shropshire was occasionally the scene of military events, the principal of which was the battle of Shrewsbury. Of the antiquities of Shropshire, the chief Roman stations in it were Uriconium, now Wroxeter, Ruturium, thought by some to be near Went. Of the Norman and subsequent ages, many remains exist in the castles, priories, and churches of the county, which contain also various emblems. Pop. 206,153.

SHRILE, a river of Ireland, which runs into the Mourne, 5 miles S. Strabane.

SHEKASKI, a large village of Irak Arabi, on the western bank of the Euphrates.

SHUSTAR, a city of Persia, capital of the province of Khuisistan, at the foot of a range of mountains, and on an eminence overlooking the rapid course of the Karoon. Its old stone wall is now fallen into decay. The houses are good, but the streets are narrow and dirty. There is a considerable manufactory of woollen stuffs, which are exported to Basora, in return for Indian commodities. It contains ruins which testify it to have been a place of vast extent and considerable magnificence. Population 15,000, Persians and Arabs. Long. 43. 50. E. Lat. 32. N.

SHUSTOCK, a hamlet of England, in Warwickshire, $\frac{3}{4}$ m. S. E. N. E. Colehill.

SHUTFORD, EAST and WEST, adjoining hamlets of England, in Oxfordshire.

SIAX, a river of Sumatra, and one of the largest in the island, which enters into the sea nearly opposite Malacca, in 1. 40. N. lat.

SIAM, a town and district of Sumatra, extending about 450 miles along the N.E. coast.

SIAM, an extensive kingdom of Eastern Asia, situated in the heart of the great peninsula between India and China. It is bounded W. by the Birman empire, N. by parts of China and Thibet, E. by ranges of mountains which separate it from Cambodia and Cochín-China, S. by the gulf of Siam and the peninsula of Malacca. Siam may be considered as composed chiefly of the valley of the Menam, a great river which descends from the heart of Thibet. A great part of the country consists of mountains covered with wild animals, and fit only for hunting; while at their feet are extensive swamps and jungles, equally unproductive. The grounds bordering on the Menam, however, yield extensive crops of rice, the only grain of the country, and the staple food of the inhabitants. A great part of the country being inundated for part of the year by the overflowing of the Menam, yields most ample crops, though the rice grown on drier grounds is considered more substantial and of better quality. There is not a region of the world which produces fruits more various and more exquisite. Elephants are found chiefly in the outer districts of the kingdom, among the mountains and jungles, which form its eastern and western boundary. Elephant hunting is a monopoly of the crown, and is carried on with a view both to pleasure and profit. The most numerous and dangerous, however, of all wild animals is the tiger, particularly the royal tiger, the very fierceness of whose aspect is sufficient to appal the most courageous. The monkey race, as in other wooded countries between the tropics, are found in vast variety. Lizards of various kinds, cameloons, tortoises, hedgehogs, and a species of porcupine, which yields valuable bezoar, are found in Siam. Horses are few, and little esteemed; and the same may be said of all domestic animals, except the hog, the flesh of which is superior to that of Europe. Fish is very plentiful in the rivers, which exhibit, somewhat as in China, the aspect of a considerable population residing constantly upon them, and carrying on this employment. The mineral riches of Siam have been very little explored. It has the reputation of containing mines both of gold and silver; but the produce has hitherto been confined to a few grains picked up in the rivers. Tin is produced more plentifully than any other metal, so as to become even an object of exportation. Mines of lead and iron are likewise worked, but with so little diligence, that the latter article is largely imported from Europe. The sovereign of Siam appears to be quite absolute, there being no power in the state which can in any degree control his supreme will. Their laws and institutions are rude, and their punishments are barbarous in the extreme. The religion of Siam appears clearly to belong to that system which has diffused itself so extensively over the whole east and north of Asia, though Thibet may now be considered as its central station. It is variously called the doctrine of Boudh or Buddha, of Gaudma or Godama, and in Tartary of Shamanism. In Siam the chief object of worship is called Sommo Codom, which last syllables probably differ from Gaudma only by a variety of European pronunciation. The language of their sacred books differs entirely from that of ordinary life, and is called Bâli, apparently the same ancient Indian language which is called Pali by the Birmans. An universal characteristic of this system consists in an order of monks professing celibacy, and residing in convents, like those of Catholic Europe. The temples of Siam are distinguished, even beyond those of the rest of Asia, by their magnificence, and by the gigantic statues which they contain. The principal pagoda in the city is of a long and narrow form, covered externally with tin. The interior presents a complete blaze of gold, and contains an idol, 45 feet in height, and reaching to the roof, entirely composed of that precious metal. In the arts and sciences the Siamese are backward, compared with any European country. They have made some progress in mathematics, in which, however, they still fall short of the Brahmins. The branch most cultivated is arithmetic, on account of its utility in commerce. Their astronomy does not extend beyond astrology, and some of the humblest of its practical applications. Music and poetry form the ruling passion of the Siamese; but their taste in music does not appear to be very refined. Instrumental music is always valued solely in proportion to the loudness of the noise produced. Their tragedies represent generally extravagant fables; but their comic writers indulge in a pointed ridicule against the reigning manners, and often against persons in power, who choose to wink at these liberties. Dancing and wrestling form also common public exhibitions; and their puppet-shews are carried to greater perfection than in Europe. According to a census taken about a century ago, the number of adults did not exceed 1,900,000, which would make the entire population scarcely reach four millions. Siam is not one of the oriental countries the trade of which has had any great attraction for Europeans. The Dutch, who once had a splendid factory here, have now, notwithstanding their proximity, entirely withdrawn. The Portuguese at present are the chief traders in Siam, though the English merchants at Calcutta have occasionally sent ships with advantage. The staple articles are tin, tutenague, elephants' teeth, lead, and saffron wood, but these are all monopolised by the king, from whom alone the merchant can procure them. From the private merchants may be procured betel, birds' neets, beech de mer, copper in small quantity, but excellent, a little gold dust and diamonds, rattans, pepper, salt, and wax. The articles best suited to the market are piece goods, silk, scarlet cloth, opium, arms, hardware, cutlery, tea, sweetmeats, toys, and a variety of other articles for internal consumption.

SIAM, more properly called JUTHIA or ODIA, the capital of the kingdom of Siam, situated on the river Menam. The city is surrounded with a brick wall, which, on the north and south sides, is about 25 feet high, well turreted, and in good condition. The city is intersected by several large canals, generally running at right angles to each other, with many smaller ones branching out from them. The streets run along the canals, so that ships from the river may enter the town, and land their cargoes near the principal houses. Some of the streets are tolerably large, but most of them are narrow and very dirty; and a few are liable to be inundated. Numerous Chinese and Moors reside here in very small and low stone houses, covered with flat tiles; while those of the natives are generally composed of timber and bamboos, roofed with palm leaves. The numerous bridges over the canals are built, the larger of stone, and the smaller of wood. There are three royal palaces in the city, the principal of which is built according to the Chinese architecture, with many gilded roofs, and containing the stables for the elephants. The second palace is square, but small, and generally inhabited by the elder prince. The third palace is smaller than either. Round the city are many suburbs.

SIAM, GULF OF, a great bay of the Eastern ocean, having on the west, part of the peninsula of Malacca, and on the east the kingdom of Cambodia. It extends from about the 9th to the 14th degree of N. lat., and from the 100th to the 104th of E. long.

SIAO I-LE, an island about 35 miles in circumference, situated off the north-eastern extremity of the island of Celebes.

STATISTA, a town of European Turkey, in the southern part of Macedonia, 55 miles W. S. W. Salonica. Population 4000.

SIBERIA, a vast territory of Asia, including the whole northern part of that continent. On the north it is bounded throughout its whole extent by the Frozen ocean; on the west by the chain of the Ourals, which running nearly from north to south, separate it from Russia in Europe, and the provinces of Orenbourg and Astracan; on the south it is separated by the Altai and the chains of Sayansk and Yablonoy, from Independent Tartary, and the tribes nominally subject to the Chinese empire; on the east by the branch of the great Pacific known under the name of the Eastern ocean. This stupendous expanse of territory stretches from about the 50th to the 75th degree of N. lat. and from the 60th to the 150th degree of E. long. Its length from east to west may be rudely calculated at 4300 miles; while its breadth from north to south varies from 1200 to 2000. A great proportion of its lands are included within the limits of the frozen zone; and even those which, from their position, might have been entitled to a milder climate, are exposed, by peculiarities in their physical structure, to a degree of cold which ranks them with the least favoured countries in Europe. The situation of Siberia, too, nearly excludes it from all communication with the civilized and improved parts of the world. The shores of the Northern ocean are barred by almost perpetual ice, while those of the Eastern sea can be reached by European vessels only after performing more than the entire circuit of the globe. Yet Russia, since she obtained this mighty appendage to her empire, has made vast exertions to improve and place it on a level with more civilised regions. In its mines and its furs she has found considerable sources of wealth; and commercial routes to China and the Pacific have been opened, though with difficulty, across its wide stretching plains and rivers. The Greeks and Romans appear to have been almost as entirely ignorant of this part of the world, as they were of America; and the exploration of Siberia dates from the period when Russia began to emancipate herself from the yoke of the Tartar conquerors, under which she had long groaned. It was by the Russians that Siberia was penetrated and brought under subjection, as far as the frontiers of China. Among the most prominent features in this immense region, are the extensive ranges of mountains with which it is traversed. The Ourals, the boundary between Europe and Asia, extend along nearly the whole of its western frontier, for a distance of upwards of 1200 miles. They are covered with tall firs, larches, birch, and other trees peculiar to a northern climate. The Ourals, at their extremity, lock in with that mighty chain which traverses Northern Asia from west to east through its whole extent. The first parts of it, called Algydim Zana and Uluk Tag, form a communication between the Ourals and the celebrated range of the Altai. The Great Altai stretches beyond Siberia, through the regions of Tartary. The Little Altai alone, an inferior terrace of the great one, forms the southern boundary of this division of Asia. In approaching the Baikal sea, the great central chain of Asia enters the Russian territory, and her southern mountains assume thenceforth a grander character. The range which extends from the Yenisei to the Baikal, is called the Sayanskoi mountains. They consist chiefly of steep and rugged cliffs, scarcely frequented even by hunters, and containing much granite. To the east of the Baikal, the name assumed is that of the Yablonoy or Apple mountains, in consequence of their vast summits being formed into a shape somewhat resembling that fruit. The rivers of Siberia are nearly on the same grand scale as its mountains, and several of them rank among the most considerable in the globe. They do not, however, in their course, display the same pomp, nor convey the same benefits to the regions which they water, as the great streams of other countries. One great disadvantage is, that their course is at right angles to the only line which the Russian merchants can follow with advantage in travelling through Siberia. This line is from west to east, leading to the Pacific ocean and the frontier of China, while all the rivers run from south to north. The benefit of water carriage, therefore, can be obtained only upon some parts of the great streams which bend east and west, and elsewhere by ascending and descending their tributaries; and the tortuous navigation thus obtained, is attended with the repeated inconvenience of lading and unlading. The most westerly, and the largest of these rivers, is the Obi, with its tributary the Irtysh; the Yenisei, the Selenga, and the Lena, which rolls its long course through the dreary regions of Yakoutsk, traversed only by a few wandering Tungouses. Farther east still are the Indigirka and the Koryma, falling still into the Frozen ocean. The Eastern ocean does not receive any river of importance. Another feature strikingly characteristic of this region, consists in the steppes or vast level plains, which cover a very great portion of its surface. In their extent, and the dead uniformity of their aspect, they resemble the deserts of Arabia and Africa, but differ entirely as to the nature of the soil. This is marshy, covered with long rank grass and aquatic shrubs, and filled with almost numberless saline lakes. It is characterized by the excessively saline character of all its waters. Connected with this, and reaching from the Irtysh to the Yenisei, occurs another vast steppe, the aspect of which is still more dreary. It is almost entirely covered with marshes, and tenanted only by a few wretched natives, who reside in houses half sunk in the ground, and employ themselves in hunting. Still more dreary is the vast northern steppe, which extends between the Lower Obi and the Lower Yenisei. Its marshy plains consist of mud, almost constantly frozen, and covered with moss and a few drooping plants. The countries from the Yenisei to the Lena, and from the Lena to the Koryma, are also considered by the Russians as steppes, and consist in many parts of similar tracks to that now described; but the level does not appear to be quite so uniform. The mountains of Siberia abound in minerals. Its mines of gold, though not of the first importance, are not wholly inconsiderable. Its mines of copper and iron are much more extensive and valuable. Katherinenburg, a city founded in 1723, by Peter the Great, forms the centre of all the foundries and forges of Siberia. The forges of the Altai were originally situated chiefly at Kolyvan. It is now, however, in a very languishing state. Schlangenbergl, or the Serpent mountain, forms now the main scene of mining operations. It seems to consist of one entire mineral mass: whenever its covering of slate rock is taken off, all the substances beneath are found to yield gold, silver, copper, and plumbago. Zinc, arsenic, and sulphur, also abound. Between 1741 and 1771, it is stated to have produced 12 348 pounds of gold, and more than 324,000 pounds of silver. It still yields annually 36,000,000 pounds of mineral of every description. The mines of Nertschink and Arguski, to the south of the Baikal, consist of lead, mixed with silver, and a small quantity of gold. Siberia possesses, besides, mines of tale, situated in its eastern regions, particularly on the Witim, the great tributary of the Lena. Near Solikamskoi, among the Ourals, are found specimens of that singular mineral called the asbestos. The rock salt which supplies the vast chain of saline lakes, seems to exist chiefly in the mountains along the southern frontier. Malachite, a beautiful ore of copper, is found in peculiar perfection among the Ourals. Red lead, sulphur, alum, sal ammoniac, vitriol, nitre, and natron, are found in abundance. Siberia yields also gems of considerable value. It abounds with wild animals. Of those yielding fur, the most precious is the species of weasel called the sable. They are found in almost every quarter; but the most valuable are those of Yakoutsk, which for some time was called, on account of their abundance, the Peru of Siberia. One skin will sometimes be sold on the spot for ten pounds. The black fox ranks next in value; and after it, the ermine, the martin, and different species of squirrel. In the northern districts, the prevailing animal is the rein-deer, that precious gift of nature to the frozen zone. The Siberian dog is of extraordinary size and strength, and is used not only in Kamtschatka, but sometimes in other districts, for drawing sledges like the rein-deer. The most formidable tenant of this part of the world is the bear, which is found not only on the shores of the Arctic ocean, but among all the mountains, even of the southern part of Siberia. There are few other ferocious animals except the wolf, the lynx, and the wild hog. The elk is very general as far as the 65th degree. Among curious animals is the dahigehi, found in the mountains of Daouria, combining the qualities of the horse and the ass. It has a light and slender form, and a superb covering of hair; but its mane and tail resemble those of the ass, and its back is long and square. It is perhaps the swiftest animal in nature, surpassing in this respect the horse. The argali again, combines the qualities of the sheep and the goat. But the most remarkable phenomenon in this respect consists in the prodigious remains of animals, none of which are now found in Siberia, and some not in any part of the world. The bones of the elephant and rhinoceros occur in vast quantities. The bones of the mammoth, a species of elephant, are found in great numbers in the frozen earth. The bones of the rhinoceros are also found in great numbers. The bones of the elephant and rhinoceros occur in vast quantities.

ties, not only in the southern regions bordering on Tartary, but in the isles of Liakhof, situated in the Frozen ocean. Not only the bones, but several entire carcasses have been found of the mammoth, that extraordinary animal, no longer found alive in any part of the world, but which surpasses in bulk any known land species. The waters throughout Siberia do not less swarm with life than the land. Siberia abounds moreover with winged game, particularly those that delight in rivers and marshes, as wild ducks, geese, swans, &c. Notwithstanding the general severity of its cold, swarms of mosquitoes and other troublesome insects are generated in the summer months. Siberia is much less distinguished by vegetable than by animal productions. A climate which, as in the greater part of this territory, is subject during nine months of the year to perpetual frost, must necessarily be barren and inhospitable. A great portion, even of the southerly districts, is covered with lofty mountains buried in snow, and which intercept the breezes of a more genial region. The environs, however, of Tobolsk, of Tomsk, and of Yeniseisk, are sufficiently favourable for pasture, and for the inferior descriptions of grain; while the southern frontier affords some districts of almost unparalleled fertility. Woods cover a considerable extent of Siberia; but they consist chiefly of those trees of dark foliage and resinous sap, which are calculated to defy the utmost rigours of winter. The oak and the hazel, found even in high European latitudes, cannot exist to the north of the Altai. The great streams of Asiatic Russia are bordered with gloomy forests of pine, fir, larch, Tartarian maple, black and white poplar, birch, alder, and aspen. On the bushes grow numerous berries, which the inhabitants eat, both fresh and preserved; while roots of various kinds supply in many places the deficiency of bread. The political aspect of Siberia is that of a region of almost boundless extent, thinly occupied by wandering tribes of hunters, and held in subjection by a handful of undisciplined troops, occupying a series of fortified posts, scattered at wide intervals over this vast dominion. Lines of fortification, composed of ostrags or wooden forts, are formed chiefly along the southern frontier, following the course of the great rivers, as a defence against the Tartars and Kirghises. The civil officers compose a comparatively small class. A much larger one is furnished by the descendants of those unfortunate persons who were doomed, by the government, to exile in these dreary regions. The most numerous body of this description ever sent, consisted of the Swedish captives taken after the fatal battle of Pultava. These, however, being established at and around Tobolsk, have done more than any other to soften the rudeness and barbarism in which they found the country involved. Travelers mention that the inhabitants of Irkoutsk are acquainted with the most recent European literature, the knowledge of which was transported thither by the military officers who were continually going and returning. In the smaller provincial towns, the manners of the inhabitants seem marked by that stupid and barbarous luxury which characterises a people living in plenty, and strangers to any but sensual gratifications. The mass of the population of Siberia consists of the native tribes, who are subjected to the Russian empire, but on whom the yoke presses very lightly, merely obliging them to pay a certain tribute, and allowing them to retain all their pursuits and habits unmolested. These tribes are very various, and wholly dissimilar to each other. The government of Tobolsk contained, according to the census of 1801, taken by Giorgi, 622,422 inhabitants, besides about 22,000 Cossacs, and several tribes of the wandering Tartars. The government of Irkoutsk was found by the same census to contain 451,937. The religion generally diffused throughout this territory consists of that widely extended system of Boodh, or of the Lamas, which, originating in Hindostan, has now its central seat in Thibet, and is generally professed over all the east and centre of Asia. Christianity has hitherto made very little progress among the natives of Asiatic Russia, though considerable efforts have recently been made, and with some success, both by the Russian government and the British missionary societies. The commerce of Siberia consists chiefly of two branches. The first, a native one, is formed by the exportation of its metals and furs; the second is a mere transit trade, consisting in the overland intercourse carried on across Siberia with the Chinese empire. The former is in a great measure in the hands of government, who have monopolised the most valuable mines, and to whom the tribute of all the wandering tribes is paid in furs. The Chinese take from the Russians skins, furs, cloths of various colours and qualities, a number of coarse manufactures, glass, and cattle; in return for which they receive silk and cotton, both raw and manufactured, tea, tobacco, rhubarb, porcelain, and a variety of little trinkets and pieces of furniture. Siberia is divided into two great governments, those of Tobolsk and Irkoutsk; and each of these is divided into four circles. Tobolsk is divided into the circles of Tobolsk proper, Tomsk, Yeniseisk, and Kolyvan. Irkoutsk is divided into Irkoutsk proper, Nertschinsk, Yakoutsck, and Okhotsck, which last includes Kamtschatka and the islands.

SIBFORD FERRIS and SIBFORD GOWER, two hamlets of England, in Oxfordshire.

SIBOURN, a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Population 1900.

SISON, a hamlet of England, in Huntingdonshire, on the river Nene, 7½ miles N. W. Stilton.

SITR, one of the Philippine islands, about 210 miles in circumference.

SIBU, or ZIBU, a town in the above island, containing 5000 houses; the see of a bishop, and residence of a governor. Long. 123. 41. E. Lat. 10. 36. N.

SIGENI, a small town of the island of Malta, with 2300 inhabitants.

SICHEM, a town of the Netherlands, 14 miles N. E. IJouvaïn. Population 1500.

SIGIGNANO, a town of Italy, in Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 3400.

SICILIA, Two, KINGDOM OF THE, the title assumed for their dominions by the royal family of Naples, since the early part of the 18th century.

SICILY, the largest island of the Mediterranean, situated between Italy and the coast of Africa, and extending from Long. 12. 42. to 16. 10. E. Lat. 36. 30. to 38. 12. N. Its form is that of an irregular triangle; its length from east to west is 180 miles; its greatest breadth 130. Its extent, including the small islands along its coast, is about 12,500 square miles. Modern Sicily has long been divided into three parts, the Val di Mazzara, or western part; the Val di Demona, or north-eastern; the Val di Noto, or southern; of these, the first is the most extensive. But since 1015, Sicily has been divided into seven intendancies, viz. Palermo, Messina, Catania, Girgenti, Syracuse, Trapani, and Calatanissetta. The chief towns in the Val di Mazzara are, Palermo, containing 150,000 inhabitants; Marsala, 25,000; Trapani, 24,000; Termini, 20,000; Girgenti, Salerni, Alcamo, Naro, Corleone, Licata, Castel Vetrano, Sciacca, and Mazzara; in the Val di Noto, Modica, 24,000; Ragusa, 20,000; Noto, 16,000; Syracuse, Augusta, Vittoria, Scicli, and Castro Giovanni; in the Val di Demona, Messina, 90,000; Catania, 80,000; Nicosia, Randuzzo, and Cefalu. Sicily is separated from the Italian continent by a strait called the Faro di Messina, from 12 to 15 miles over in the broadest part, and in the narrowest not exceeding two. It has been sometimes conjectured that Sicily was joined to the continent, from which it was separated by a great convulsion, the principal chain of mountains, extending from east to west, being apparently a continuation of the Apennines. There are, however, other ranges branching off from north to south, and a few insulated mountains, of which by far the greatest is Etna. This mixture of mountain and valley causes a corresponding variety of products and scenery, the low grounds being appropriated to maize, wheat, and other corn, the higher to pasture and plantations. There are no carriage roads except in the vicinity of Palermo; and the only mode of travelling is on the backs of mules or horses. Sicily is well watered; but of all its streams, three only deserve the name of rivers, viz. the Fiume Gela, the Salso, and the Giaretta, the Simone being a rivulet. Of lakes, Sicily has but two, the Biviere and the Laguna; the first about eight miles south of Catania, which in winter has a circumference of 20 miles, while in summer it is reduced to one-half, leaving a swampy track, of the most pernicious operation on the health of the surrounding district. The climate of Sicily is very pleasant, the winter corresponding to our spring, and the heat of summer being tempered by the fresh breezes from the sea. Snow is confined to the lofty mountains; the low grounds exhibit the banana, the aloe, the sugar-cane, and other southern productions. Of the seasons, the spring is the most agreeable. The sky of Sicily is comparatively cloudless, its vegetation luxuriant, its scenery finely diversified. The drawbacks on these advantages are the unhealthiness of particular districts, the occasional occurrence of earthquakes, particularly in the neighbourhood of Messina, and the debilitating effect of the sirocco, or south wind, during a few days of July and August. Sicily has always been noted for its fertility. Agriculture is, however, very backward. The products are maize, wheat, and other corn; flax, hemp, vines, olives, saffron, and cotton. For silk the climate is highly favourable; also for the rich fruit of a southern latitude. Iron and copper are found in various parts; marble is very general; and stone for building is found in almost every part of the island. Agate, jasper, porphyry, and alabaster, are likewise found. Salt mines have been discovered near Castro Giovanni, in the centre of the island; and near Messina is a large coal mine. Game is found in abundance; and most of the wild animals of the continent of Europe exist in this island. The only manufacturing establishments of extent are at the three large towns of Palermo, Messina, and Catania; they consist of silk, cotton, and linen; in part also of woollens, though the wool of the island is of indifferent quality. If to these we add a few articles, such as hats, cutlery, harness, carriages, and household furniture, made at Palermo and the principal towns, we have the amount of the Sicilian manufactures. In respect to commerce, Sicily, from the variety of its products, the excellence of several of its harbours, and the general safety of its coast for navigation, would, under an enlightened government, acquire great importance. As yet, however, the exports and imports are comparatively small. The Sicilians resemble the Spaniards and Italians in the darkness of their complexion, and not less in the indolence of their habits. There have appeared in Sicily some successful candidates in the field of belles lettres, poetry, and natural history; and at present, Palermo, Catania, and Messina, contain individuals of distinguished attainments; but their efforts have been discouraged by the want of a free press, the inadequacy of the public libraries, and the difficulty of intercourse with the more enlightened part of Europe. Education may be said to be in almost the same incipient state. The religion of Sicily is the Catholic; the number of ecclesiastics in Sicily is said to amount to 70,000, exclusive of a still greater number of monks and nuns. Sicily has long had an assembly dignified with the name of parliament; but until 1810 it was merely a feudal institution, possessing hardly any marks of the elective franchise. Great and notorious abuses prevail in every branch of administration. The public officers are so inadequately paid, as necessarily to have recourse to peculation. As to the administration of justice, the laws, however good in the letter, are inoperative against a delinquent of influence or fortune. The British, when in possession of the island in 1821, began various reforms, and their residence among the Sicilians brought about also a considerable change in their ideas, and will no doubt pave the way for other reforms. The revenue of Sicily is computed at £1,000,000 sterling. The Sicilian army in time of peace does not exceed 10,000 men. The Sicilian navy is limited to one ship of the line, two frigates, and five sloops. Sicily was successively occupied by the Phenicians, the Carthaginians, and Romans. In the 8th and 9th centuries, the Saracens succeeded in conquering it, and, making Palermo their capital, remained in possession of the island about 200 years. They gave way to the Normans, who, attracted to Sicily on their progress to the crusades, made the conquest of the island in the 11th century. It passed successively into the possession of France, Germany, and Spain. By the peace of Utrecht in 1713, Sicily was given to the duke of Savoy, with the title of king. But in 1720, the Austrians prevailed on the new possessor of Sicily to exchange it for Sardinia, and added the former to the kingdom of Naples. The war of 1734, however, carried on by France and Spain against Austria, transferred the crown of Naples, or, as it was now termed, of the Two Sicilies, to a branch of the royal family of Spain. In their hands it remained without interruption, until the progress of the French revolutionists led, in January 1799, to the expulsion of the royal family from Naples. They took refuge in Sicily, where they remained till 1816, when the overthrow of Murat by the Austrians, led to the restoration of the former family to the throne of Naples, which they continue to possess. A revolution took place since, by which a free government was established; the country was, however, invaded by the Austrians, the popular government put down, and the king re-established in all his former absolute authority. Population 1,600,000.

SICKLINGHALL, a village of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

SICULIANA, a town of Sicily, Val di Mazara, at the mouth of the Canina. It has a harbour, and exports some wheat. Population 6000. 8 miles W. by N. Girgenti.

SICYON, the name of a once celebrated town of Greece, situated in the Morca, N.W. of Corinth. The ruins are considerable.

SINBURY, a hamlet of England, in Salop, 6 miles S. S. W. Bridgenorth.

SIDDINGTON, a village of England, in Cheshire. Population 481.

SIDELING CREEK, a river of the United States, in Maryland. It joins the Potomac.

SIDERO, a village of European Turkey, on the west coast of the Morea.

SIDLAW, or SUDLAW HILLS, a ridge of hills in Scotland, in the counties of Perth and Angus.

SIDLESHAM, a village and parish of England, in Sussex, 4½ miles from Chichester. Population 1020.

SIDMOUTH, a market town of England, in Devonshire, on the river Sid. It was formerly a seaport of some importance, but its harbour is now choked up. Of late years it has increased, being a resort for sea-bathing. The air is healthy; the bathing accommodations are good. Population 2747. 12 miles S. E. Exeter.

SIDNEY, a post township of the United States, in Kennebeck county, Maine. Population 1558.

SIEDLCE, a town of Poland, on the river Muchawica, 55 miles E. Warsaw. Pop. 2200.

SIEO, a river of Germany, in Westphalia, which falls into the Rhine.

SIEGBERG, a town of Prussian Westphalia, duchy of Berg, on the Sieg. Pop. 1800.

SIEGEN, a town of Prussian Westphalia, on the Sieg. It has manufactures of woollen cotton, and leather. Population 4000. 42 miles E. Bonn.

SIEGENT, a town of Malta. Pop. 2300.

SIEMIATYCE, town of Russian Poland, 7 miles S. S. W. Belcz. Population 3800.

SIENNA, TERRITORIO DI SIENNA, or SIENNESE, a province of the grand duchy of Tuscany, bounded by the Florentine and the territory of Pisa, 62 miles in length, and of nearly an equal breadth. Population 190,000.

SIENNA, or SIENA, an ancient city of Tuscany, the capital of the province of Sienna. Being built on three eminences, the streets are extremely uneven, winding, and narrow, so that the chief part of the town is impassable for carriages. The only handsome public square is that in which is the town-house, and which contains a beautiful fountain. The esplanade is a fine shady avenue leading to the citadel, the ramparts of which, planted with trees, and laid out in the form of terraces, afford several interesting points of view. The cathedral of Sienna is a magnificent marble structure in the Gothic style, and accounted inferior to none in Italy, except St Peter's at Rome. The town-house is a large building, also in the Gothic style, and surrounded with porticos. Adjoining is the theatre, rebuilt since 1750. There are in Sienna several family mansions, or, as they are termed, palaces, but none of remarkable architecture. The manufactures of Sienna are likewise woollen, leather, paper, and hats, but all on a small scale. Some traffic is carried on in corn. This town is the seat of a university. Sienna lays claim to great antiquity, its origin being almost as ancient as that of Rome,

It was long, however, a petty place. Augustus sent thither a colony; and Pliny mentions the town under the name of Colonia Senensis. Its prosperity, like that of Pisa, was greatest during the middle ages, when it enjoyed an extensive commerce, and is said to have been much more populous than at present. It long maintained itself as an independent republic; but intestine divisions favouring the designs of foreign powers, it became successively subject to French and Spanish invaders. Population 24,000. Long. 11. 10. 15. E. Lat. 43. 22. N.

SIENNE, a river of France, in Normandy. It falls into the English channel.

SIERADZ, a town in the west of Poland, on the Wartha. Population 1600.

SIERRA, the eastern part of New Castile, so called from its mountains. The word Sierra is a general name for mountainous ranges in Spain.

SIERRA LEONE, a country of Western Africa, situated on the Atlantic, and distinguished for the colony formed there by the British nation, rather from motives of generosity and philanthropy, than from those of political and commercial advantage. This country is traversed by a considerable river, derived from an unknown source in the interior, called the Mitomba or Sierra Leone. The name is derived from a long ridge of mountains, which rises at no great distance from the southern bank of the river, that on the northern bank being low and flat. From these mountains descend many streams or torrents, a number of which unite in a place called the bay of France, into a large basin, which affords the best watering place in all Guinea. This country fully equals, in point of fertility and populousness, any other in this part of Africa. Cultivation, however, has made a very slender progress, unless so far as it has been introduced by Europeans. It consists generally of one vast, almost impenetrable forest, only particular spots of which have been cleared and cultivated. Rice is raised wherever the ground is sufficiently watered for its production, and forms the constant food of the rich; but the poor content themselves with millet, yams, and plantains. There is great abundance of the most delicate fruits. The elephants' teeth brought to the coast here are valued above any other on the same coast, being remarkably clean, white, and free from specks. A considerable quantity of civet is brought to market, the produce of a peculiar species of cat. The woods and mountains are considerably infested with wild animals, particularly lions, from the multitude of which the country appears to have derived its name. Apes move about in vast bodies. There are swarms of insects, flies, mosquitoes, and particularly ants, the white species of which commit extraordinary devastation. The serpent species are also very numerous. The rivers, besides yielding an ample supply of fish for food, contain large alligators, and a species called the manilla or seaweed. The natives of this country are of so deep black a complexion as those of Cape Verd, nor have they the flat nose of the negro race to such a degree. The character of the different tribes varies greatly. The Portuguese were the first who discovered and formed settlements in the river Sierra Leone; but afterwards all the nations of Europe found their way thither. It was not till towards the close of the 18th century, that the British nation began to turn their views towards Sierra Leone, with a view to colonization; and the idea was partly suggested with a view to the more effectual abolition of the slave trade, by raising up an African colony, whither the slaves might be sent as freemen. A piece of ground was accordingly purchased; a proper site for a town was immediately chosen, on a rising ground fronting the sea; and a distribution of land was made among the colonists. A dreadful mortality ensued, which soon reduced their numbers to 276. Lastly, in November 1789, the town was plundered by an African chief, the colony dispersed, and its inhabitants obliged to seek refuge in Bance island. In 1791, Mr Falconbridge was sent out with a supply of stores, to collect the dispersed colonists, and form them anew into a regular settlement. A new site was chosen at Granville town. Meantime, the original association for the improvement of Africa, was incorporated by act of parliament, and, under the title of the Sierra Leone company, received a charter for 31 years, commencing 1st July 1791. Besides sending out immediately five vessels with stores, articles of trade, and some new settlers, they procured a number of free negroes, who, in the American revolution, having adhered to the loyal standard, were obliged to take shelter in Nova Scotia; and who now cheerfully agreed to the offer made of being transported to Sierra Leone; and 1200 were embarked by Lieutenant Clarkson, and arrived in March 1792. Operations were now carried on with increased vigour. But the prosperity of the colony was interrupted by many disasters and discontents. In September 1794, the town was plundered and entirely destroyed by a French squadron; and Sierra Leone was afterwards placed under the immediate jurisdiction of the government, like other colonies. Since this period, notwithstanding many discouragements and difficulties, arising from the distance from Britain, from the unhealthiness of the climate, &c. a gradual but decided improvement has taken place, and is becoming more sensible, as experience teaches the best modes of administering such an establishment. With the efforts of the institution have been combined those of the church missionary society, who have introduced, with great advantage, the British system of education. The schools contain now 360 boys and girls, and 180 adults. In consequence of the great increase of population from disbanded soldiers, and still more from captured negroes, a number of new towns have been founded in different parts of the territory. The principal of these is Regent's town, which was found in 1816, by Mr Johnson, the missionary teacher, in a state of the utmost barbarism. It contained 1100 captured negroes, belonging to 22 nations in all different parts of the continent, without any tie to each other, and many of them separated by deadly enmity. Great disorders at first took place among this mixed multitude; but at length the labours of the excellent missionary, seconded by those of some intelligent negroes, produced the happiest effects. The town is now laid out with regularity; 19 new streets are formed and levelled, with good roads round the place; a large stone church rises in the midst of the habitations; a government-house, a parsonage-house, school-houses, store-houses, a bridge or several arches, some native dwellings, and other buildings, all of stone, are either finished, or on the point of being so. The state of cultivation farther manifests the industry of the people: all are farmers; gardens fenced in are attached to every house; all the land in the immediate neighbourhood is under cultivation; and there are fields even to the distance of three miles; vegetables and fruits are raised in abundance; and there is a good supply of domestic animals. Many of them, besides the cultivation of the ground, carry on trades. In these various ways, upwards of 600 of the negroes provide for their own maintenance. They are all now decently clothed; almost all the females have learned to make their own clothing; about 400 couple are married. In the more immediate vicinity of Freetown, there are also the townships of Charlotte, Leopold, Gloucester, and Wilberforce; and four new and more distant stations have been formed; Waterloo, bordering on the Timmanees, and containing already 700 inhabitants; Wellington, near to Kiskey; and Hastings, not yet risen to any importance. On the south-western side of the colony is York, bordering on the Sherbro, where a settlement called Kent had already been formed. Connected also with the colony, a settlement has been formed called Bathurst, at St Mary's, on the Gambia. The population is increasing. The climate is said to be healthy, and provisions much cheaper than at Sierra Leone; and the opportunity afforded of communicating with the populous countries on that river, renders it extremely valuable. The following is the amount of the population of Sierra Leone, according to a census taken in 1820:—Europeans, 120; Nova Scotians, 739; Maroons, 694; natives, 2909; liberated negroes, 8070. These statements are exclusive of the military (European and native) and their families.

SIERRA MADRE, a great ridge of mountains in North America, forming part of that vast chain which, under the different appellations of the Andes and Rocky Mountains, runs through the whole extent of the American continent, beginning at Terra del Fuego, and ending at the icy ocean in the north. The term of Sierra Madre or Tojia, is, however, more strictly applied to that elevated part of this immense ridge which commences near Guadalupe, and extends 450 miles in a northerly direction into New Mexico.

SIGAN, a town of France, department of the Aude. Population 1800.

SIGAN, a small river of Silesia, principality of Glogau, which falls into the Oder.

SIGETH, NAOT, or SIGETHVAN, a market town of Hungary, near the river Almasch. Pop. 3009. 160 miles S. S. E. Vienna.

SIGETH, a town of Hungary, at the confluence of the Itza and the Thevsa. Population 6500. 243 miles E. by N. Pest.

SIGGESTON and SIGGESTHORPE, two villages of England, in Yorkshire.

SIGHELL, a village of England, in Northumberland, 6 miles N. W. North Shields.

SIGMARINGEN, a town of Germany, on the Danube, 29 miles N. Constance. Pop. 800.

SIGNES, a town of France, 11 miles N. Toulon. Population 1500.

SIGNETT, a hamlet of England, in Oxfordshire, 1 mile S. by W. Burford.

SIGNY LE GRAND, a town of France, department of the Ardennes. Pop. 2100.

SIGTUNA, a town of Middle Sweden, 10 miles N. Stockholm. Population 500.

SIGÜENZA, anciently Segontium, a city of Spain, in Old Castile, province of Guadalupe. It contains three churches, three convents, two hospitals, a castle, and an arsenal. In the environs are salt springs. Population 5000. 75 miles N. E. Madrid.

SIRON, or SIRR, the ancient Jaxartes, a large river of Independent Tartary, rising on the western side of the mountains which separate that region from Cashgar, in Chinese Tartary. After a long course, it falls into the Aralsea.

SIKARIA, a considerable river of Asia Minor, which falls into the gulf of Erekli, in the Black sea.

SIKEVI, a small seaport of Circassia, on the Black sea, 30 miles S. E. Anapa.

SIKINO, a small island of the Grecian archipelago, between Polyandro and Nio.

SIKINO, the ancient Enne, a small island of the Grecian archipelago, 18 miles S. Paros. Population 900 Greeks.

SIL, a small river of Switzerland, which joins the Limmat near Zurich. Also a river of Spain, which joins the Minho in Galicia.

SILBERBERG, a small town of Prussian Silesia, 40 miles S. S. W. Breslau. Pop. 1000.

SILCHESTER, a village and parish of England, county of Hants, 7 miles from Basingstoke, supposed to have been once a populous city. The walls still remain, and consist of nine unequal sides, formed of rows of stones and flints alternately, being about 18 feet high, and 15 thick.

SILEZIA, a large and highly important province of the Prussian dominions, situated between Poland on the east, and Bohemia on the west, and extending from Long. 14. 25. to 18. 12. E. and from Lat. 49. 40. to 51. 50. N. The county of Glatz, and a portion of Lasatin, are now annexed to it. The form of the whole is oblong, extending in length, from south-east to north-west, 210 miles, in breadth about 100. Area 15,000 square miles; population 2,000,000. It is divided into the four governments of Breslau, Reichenbach, Liegnitz, and Oppeln. The chief towns are, Breslau, the capital, containing 63,000 inhabitants; Liegnitz, 10,000; Glogau, Neisse, Schweidnitz, Langen-Bielau, Glatz, Hirschberg, Jauer, Frankenstein, Schniedeberg, Oels, Oppeln, Leobachutz, Reichenbach, and Landshut. A long range of mountains bearing different names, such as the Riesengebirge, the Glatz mountains, Moravian mountains, &c. but all included in the Sudetic chain, divides Silesia from Bohemia and Moravia. From Hungary it is separated by the Carpathians. The great river of Silesia is the Oder, which flowing from south to north, traverses it nearly in the middle, and receives the Bober, the Queiss, and the Bartsch. The country to the east of the Oder is called the Polish side: it is perfectly level, with a soil often sandy or marshy, and consequently unproductive; while the western or German side, though hilly, and even mountainous, is cultivated by a more improved race. It is in fact the best portion of the Prussian territory, containing mines of coal and iron, and, on a smaller scale, mines of copper, vitriol, and cobalt. This is likewise a great manufacturing country, so that the population requires an annual import of corn and cattle. The linen manufactures being as general here as in Normandy or the north of Ireland, great attention is bestowed on the culture of flax, the quality of which is equal to that of any part of Europe. The wool of this province has also been improved since the latter part of the 18th century, by the introduction of the Spanish breed. Foxes and other beasts of game abound in the forests: the lynx is sometimes found in the mountains, as well as the beaver, but the latter is now rare. The extent of the linen manufacture of Silesia, conducted as it is with little aid from machinery, is surprising, the value annually made being estimated at £1,500,000 sterling, of which more than half is exported. After linen, woollens are the chief object of manufacture, but they are in general coarse, and the value as yet made in Silesia is computed at little more than half a million sterling. Cotton works date only from the latter part of the 18th century, and hardware has been made extensively only within the same period. Of tanneries, there are hardly enough to supply the consumption of the country. The imports into Silesia are various; hemp, lintseed, and hides from Russia; wine, potash, and hardware from Austria; colonial produce, silk, and the fruits of southern climates from different countries, all, or almost all, conveyed by the Oder. The Silesians are in general a people of good moral habits, with little information.

The proportion of Protestants, long inferior to that of Catholics, has of late begun to exceed it. Each counts nearly a million of followers: of Jews, the number in Silesia is about 12,000. Education was in a very backward state on the acquisition of this country by Prussia: a number of parish schools were founded by the aid of government; but on the eastern or Polish side, there still prevails much ignorance. At Breslau there is a university, partly Protestant, partly Catholic. Silesia was taken possession of by Frederick of Prussia in 1740, and gave occasion to a long and bloody war, begun in the year 1736, when the peace of Hubertsburg, in 1763, left it conclusively in the hands of Frederick. In 1807, Silesia was overrun by the French, but it was not separated at the peace of Tilsit, from the Prussian territory.

SILESIA, AUSTRIAN, that part of Silesia which was retained by Austria in 1742, when the province described in the foregoing article was ceded to Prussia. Area 1845 square miles; pop. nearly 350,000. It is divided into the circles of Troppan and Teschen, and is now completely incorporated with Moravia.

SILHET, an extensive district of Bengal, lying between the 24th and 26th degrees of N. lat. It is situated on the east side of the Brahmapootra river, and constitutes the north-east boundary of Bengal.

SILISTRIA, or DRISTRA, a town of European Turkey, in Bulgaria, on the Danube. It is well fortified, tolerably built, and has several handsome mosques and baths. Population 20,000. 155 miles N. N. E. Adrianople.

SILIVRI, the ancient Silymbria, a seaport of European Turkey, in Romania, near the sea of Marmora. Pop. 6000. 32 miles W. Constantinople.

SILKSTONE and SILKSWORTH, two villages of England, in Yorkshire and Durham.

SILLA, a large town of Bambarra, in Central Africa, on the Niger, where Mr Park terminated his first journey into Africa. Long. 1. 34. W. Lat. 14. 48. N.

SILLAH MEW, a considerable town of the Birman empire, on the Irrawaddy. It has a considerable manufacture of silk, tartans, &c. Long. 94. 30. E. Lat. 20. 50. N.

SILLE LE GUILLAUME, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 2000.

SILLY, a town of the Netherlands, province of Hainault. Population 2300.

SILPHOE, a village of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

SILSDEN ON THE MOOR, a village of England, in Yorkshire. Population 1904.

SILSOE, or SILVISHOE, a village of England, in Bedfordshire. Population 568.

SILTON, NETHER and OVER, adjoining villages of England, in Yorkshire.

SILVER RIVER, a river of Ireland, in King's county, which joins the Brosna.

SILVERDALE, a village of England, in

SILVERNINES, a village of Ireland, now ruinous, though formerly populous. 77 miles W. S. W. Dublin.

SILVERSTONE, a village of England, in Northamptonshire. Population 837.

SILVES, a town of Portugal, in Algarva, on the Silves. Population 2000.

SIMANCAS, a town of Spain, province of Valladolid, 15 miles S. W. Valladolid. Population 1000.

SIMBIRSK, a government or province of European Russia, on the borders of Asia. It lies along both sides of the Wolga, between 52. and 57. of N. lat., having the government of Kasan on the north, and that of Saratov on the south. Area 30,000 square miles; population 550,000. The province is divided into ten circles.

SIMBIRSK, the capital of the above government, at the confluence of the Sviaga and the Wolga, 410 miles E. S. E. Moscow. Population 12,000. It contains 10 churches or chapels, and several other public buildings. The chief articles of export are corn and fish.

SIMFEROPOL, a town of European Russia, in the Crimea. Population 1600.

SIMMERING, a village of Lower Austria, 2 miles S. E. Vienna. Population 2300.

SIMMERN, a town of Germany, 23 miles S. S. W. Coblenz. Population 1500.

SIMMINGTON, a village of England, in Wiltshire, 1 mile S. E. Melksham.

SIMOGA, a town of India, province of Mysore, district of Bednoor. It is situated on the Tunga or Tungabhadra river, and has a manufacture of cotton cloths.

SIMON'S IS., the easternmost of the three large islands at the mouth of the Altamaha river, in Georgia. It is 45 miles in length, and from 2 to 4 in breadth, and has a rich and fruitful soil.

SIMONDSLEY, a village of England, in the High Pecke of Derbyshire.

SIMONSHALL, a hamlet of England, in Gloucestershire, near Wootton-under-Edge.

SIMONSTONE, a village of England, in Lancashire, 5 miles W. by N. Burnley.

SIMONSWOOD, a hamlet of England, in Lancashire, 5 miles S. by E. Ormskirk.

SIMONYTORNYA, a small town of Hungary, 57 miles S. S. W. Buda. Pop. 2000.

SIMONNE, a town of France, department of the Gers. Population 1400.

SIMPLON, or SIMPELN, a great mountain in the south of Switzerland, which separates the canton called the Valais, from the Piedmontese territory. The old road across it being impracticable for heavy carriages, a new one was formed at the joint expence of France and the kingdom of Italy, in the reign of Bonaparte. Though the ascent is everywhere gradual, the highest point of the road is nearly 6000 feet above the level of the sea, and the top of the mountain is seen rising to 11,000 feet above the same level.

SINAL, a mountain of Arabia, near the head of the Red sea, celebrated in scripture history as the spot whence the law was given to Moses. It is situated in the heart of a vast and gloomy desert, the few inhabited spots of which are occupied by hordes of Arabs, who subsist by plunder, and render the road impassable, unless for a large and well defended caravan; but the range to which Sinal belongs is called by the Arabs Jibbel Musa, and consists of several lofty summits, the vallies of which are composed of frightful gullies, between rugged and precipitous rocks. At the foot of the mountain is the Greek convent of St Catherine, which was founded there in 1331, by William Bouldenell, and has ever since continued to afford hospitality to the few pilgrims whose zeal impels them to brave the perils of this road. The monks are kept, as it were, imprisoned in this convent by the wild Arabs of the surrounding country. 150 miles S. E. Suez.

SINAMARI, a large river of Guiana, which falls into the Atlantic, in Lat. 5. 30. N.

SINAN, a small and winding river of Algiers. It falls into the Wed el Mallah, about five miles before its junction with the sea.

SINANO, an assemblage of mud hills in Greece, in the Morea, supposed to occupy the site of the ancient Megalopolis.

SINARUCO, a large river of New Granada, which enters the Orinoco.

SINAX, a village of the Netherlands, 16 miles N. E. Ghent. Population 3400.

SINGAPORE, or SINGAPORA, an island, with a town of the same name, near the south coast of Malacca, which gives name to the narrow sea called the straits of Singapura. Long. 103. 30. E. Lat. 1. 12. N.

SINCLAIRTOWN, a village of Scotland, in Fifeshire. Population 1211.

SINDE, an extensive province of Hindostan, formerly included in that of Moultan, and situated on both sides of the river Indus, lying principally between the latitudes of 24. and 27. N. This country bears a very striking resemblance to Egypt. It consists of a level plain, with a noble river fertilising the banks as far as the inundation extends, after which the face of the earth becomes a sandy desert, beyond which rises a range of barren mountains. The islands in the Delta of the Ganges, are composed of sand, and are covered with a prickly shrub, very nourishing to camels, on which account a great number are bred in this district. The cultivation in Sind depends on the proper management of the irrigation by means of canals and drains from the river, from which the water is frequently raised by wheels. The produce is sugar, indigo, and all kinds of grain; they have also extensive pasturage. The principal towns are Hyderabad the capital, Tatta, Bhukor, and Corachie: the latter is the chief port, the river being now unnavigable for ships up to Tatta; and Lary or Lahary Bunder, having fallen to decay, in consequence of the impediments in the navigation. Sind produces but few articles of commerce. Its exports are confined to rice, butter, pot-ash, hides, saltpetre, assafetida, frankincense, indigo, horses, and camels. Its imports are sugarcandy, sweet pepper, cocoa-nuts, ivory, metals of all kinds, Bengal and China silks, porcelain, and pearls. The present rulers of Sinde do not keep up a standing army, but there are 42 tribes who hold their lands on a military tenure, and are obliged to furnish a certain number of cavalry when called on, by which means a numerous army is shortly collected. They have also a considerable number of fortresses dispersed throughout the country, and garrisoned by local troops. The natives of Sinde are now mostly Mahomedans of the Soony sect. Of the ancient history of Sinde, little is known from the period when it was overrun by the Greeks under Alexander, till about the middle of the 6th century. It was invaded by the Persians, and was the scene of many revolutions, and of great anarchy. It was invaded from Delhi, and long continued to pay a tribute to the Mogul. In 1739, all the territories west of the river Indus were ceded by the emperor Mohammed Shah, to the Persian usurper Nadir Shah. The assassination of that person in the year 1747, liberated the rulers of Sinde from their allegiance to Persia, and they again nominally professed themselves subjects of the court of Delhi. In the year 1746, the Sindian chiefs acknowledged themselves feudatories of Cabul, and agreed to pay an annual tribute, while the Shah issued a commission to Puteh Aly and his three brothers, constituting them Ameers, or rulers of Sinde, on his behalf. At present, Sinde is ruled by a triumvirate of two brothers and a nephew, who appear to act with great concord and unanimity. They have recently taken possession of the strong fortress of Amerkote, situated in a desert, 30 miles east of the Indus, to which they have sent all their treasures. In the year 1603, the Bombay government sent an embassy to the Ameers of Sinde; and a native agent, or charge d'affaires, resides at Hyderabad, on the part of the East India company.

SINDE. See Indus.

SINDE, a river of Hindostan, province of Malwah, which, after a winding course, falls into the Jumna.

SINDELINGEN, a town of Germany, 9 miles S. W. Stuttgart. Population 3000.

SINDERBY, a hamlet of England, in Yorkshire, 4 miles W. by S. Thirsk.

SINES, a seaport of Portugal, province of Alentejo. Population 1400.

SINEU, a town of Majorca, 20 miles E. Palma. Population 5500.

SINFAR, a town of Portugal, in the province of Beira. Population 2500.

SINFIN, a hamlet of England, in Derbyshire, 3½ miles S. by W. Derby.

SINGHOOM, the capital of a district of the same name, in Hindostan, province of Orissa. Long. 83. 55. E. Lat. 22. 37. N.

SINGEN, a village of Germany, in Baden, 11 miles W. N. W. Constance. Pop. 1000.

SINGPOORAM, a town of Hindostan, in Long. 83. 24. E. Lat. 19. 35. N.

SINGHIA, a town of Hindostan, province of Bazar, on the Gunduck, surrounded by land, which produces the finest saltpetre. The East India company have long had a factory here, and now monopolise the whole of that article throughout their provinces. Long. 85. 15. E. Lat. 25. 52. N.

SING-SING, a village and landing place of the United States, in West Chester county, New York, on the Hudson, 36 miles N. New York.

SINIGALIA, a well built town of Italy, duchy of Urbino, on the Misa, at its influx into the Adriatic. Its cathedral, of the Corinthian order, and some other churches, are worth notice. The principal source of its wealth is a well frequented fair, held annually in July. Pop. 6200. 17 miles S. E. Pesaro.

SINKEL, a town of Sumatra, on a river of the same name, about 40 miles from the sea. Long. 98. 2. E. Lat. 2. 15. N.

SINORE, a seaport on the northern coast of Asia. It is now greatly reduced. Population 5000. Long. 35. E. Lat. 41. 6. N.

SINTON, a hamlet of England, in Worcestershire, 6 miles S. W. Worcester.

SINZHEIM, a town of Germany. 14 miles S. S. E. Heidelberg. Population 2200.

SION, an ancient town of Switzerland, on the Rhone. It has an episcopal palace, a cathedral, several churches and monasteries, a town-house, and a public school. Pop. 5000. 60 miles E. Geneva.

SIOX, a town and fortress of Hindostan, on the island of Bombay, 9 miles from the city of that name.

SION, a hill of Palestine, celebrated as the site of the ancient citadel of Jerusalem.

SIRAPU, a river of Guiana, which enters the Orinoco near its mouth.

SIRAXTO, an island of Greece, belonging to the Archipelago, and situated to the west of Paros. It is nearly 30 miles in length, and about 7 in breadth. Pop. 4000, all Greeks.

SIRPO, a river of the United States, in the Ohio, which flows into the Scioto.

SIRSEY, a river of the United States, in Alabama territory. It joins the Tombighee.

SIR CHARLES HARDY'S ISLANDS, in the S. Pacific ocean, discovered by Captain Cook.

SIR HENRY MARTIN'S ISLAND, an island in the Pacific ocean, about 16 miles in circuit. Long. 220. 19. E. Lat. 80. 51. S.

SIRAVAN, a village of Khuisistan, in Persia, 48 miles N. N. E. Shuster.

SIRGOOJAH, capital of a district of Hindostan, about 12 miles from the British frontier. Long. 83. 50. E. Lat. 23. 5. N.

SIRHIND, the ancient capital of a district of Hindostan. Long. 75. 55. E. Lat. 30. 40. N.

SISSACH, a town of the Swiss canton of Bale, 13 miles S. E. Bale. Population 1600.

SISSOPOLI, or SIZEBOLI, the ancient Apollonia, a town of European Turkey, in Romania, 115 miles N. N. W. Constantinople.

SISTERON, a town of France, department of the Lower Alps, on the Durance. It has a fine cathedral. Pop. 4000. 48 miles N. E. Aix.

SISTON, a village of England, Gloucestershire, 6 miles E. by N. Bristol. Pop. 802.

SISTOVA, a town of European Turkey, in Bulgaria, on the Danube. It has a citadel. Population 20,000. 25 miles E. Nicopol.

SITANG, a large river of the Birman empire, province of Pegu.

SITTARD, a town of the Netherlands, on the Gheete. Population 3300.

SITTINGBOURNE, an ancient market town of England, in Kent, and a great thoroughfare on the road from London to Dover. It consists chiefly of one wide street, and depends chiefly for its support on the resort of travellers. The church is a spacious building, consisting of a nave, two aisles, a chancel, two chapels, and a tower rising at the west end. Pop. 1537. 11 miles S. E. Rochester.

SITZENDORF, a small town of Austria, 33 miles N. N. W. Vienna. Population 1400.

SIVANO SAMUDRA, a remarkable island in the river Cavery, province of Coimbatore, in the south of India. It is nine miles in length, and contains an extraordinary cataract, 150 feet perpendicular. It contains many remains of Hindoo antiquities.

SIVAS, or SIWAS, a considerable city of Asia Minor. It is situated on the great river Kizil Irmak. It is dirty and ill built. Long. 37. E. Lat. 39. 55. N.

SIVRY, a town of the Netherlands, 18 miles S. S. W. Charleroi. Population 2200.

SIUT, a large town of Upper Egypt, on the western bank of the Nile. The inhabitants consist chiefly of Copts, in whose hands almost all the commercial transactions of Egypt are placed. They are employed in an extensive manufacture of blue cloth. Siut is also the rendezvous of the caravans which proceed from Egypt southwards into the interior of Africa, to Senaar and Darfur; from which countries they bring a considerable quantity of slaves and gold. Long. 31. 13. 26. E. Lat. 27. 10. 14. N.

SIWAH, or SIUAH, a considerable oasis or fertile island, occurring in the Libyan desert, on the route from Egypt to Fezzan. This valley is described by Horneman as 50 miles in circumference, hemmed in on every side by barren rocks.

SIX MILE BRIDGE, a small village of Ireland, county of Limerick, on the river Maig, 102 miles S. W. Dublin.

SIX MILE BRIDGE, a village of Ireland, county of Clare, on the Gearn, 8 miles S. W. Limerick.

SIXPOURS, a town of France, 9 miles S. W. Toulon. Population 2600.

SIZELAND, a village of England, in Norfolk, 5 miles from Bungay.

SIZUN, a town of France, department of Finistère. Population 2000.

SKAGEN, a town of Denmark, in Jutland, on the Cattegat. Population 900.

SKAGEN, a cape on the N. coast of North Jutland. Long. 10. 31. E. Lat. 57. 46. N.

SKALHOLT, or REINKIRKIR, a small trading town, or rather village of Iceland, on the Huikna. It has a cathedral, and in the neighbourhood are the famous hot springs called Geysers. Long. 16. W. Lat. 64. N.

SKALITZ, a town of Hungary, 48 miles N. Presburg. Population 5700.

SKANDERBORG, a town of Denmark, 14 miles S. S. W. Aarhus. Population 500.

SKARA, an old town in the south of Sweden, in West Gothland, near the lake of Wener. It contains hardly 1000 inhabitants, having been in 1719 totally destroyed by fire. It has a college, with a botanical garden, an hospital, a medical school, and a large cathedral. 77 miles N. E. Gottenburg.

SKARR WATER, a small river of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire. It joins the Nith.

SKERBY, a hamlet of England, in Yorkshire, 2½ miles N. E. Richmond.

SKEEN, a town of Norway, on a river which bears its name. It has productive mines of iron and copper. Population 1800. 38 miles S. S. W. Christiania.

SKELBROOK, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

SKELEEN, a hamlet of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

SKELFLETE, a small river of England, in Yorkshire, which runs into the Humber.

SKEEL, a small river of England, in Yorkshire, which runs into the Yaura.

SKEELLAND, a hamlet of England, in Suffolk, 2½ miles from Stowmarket.

SKEELLIGS, two small islands on the southwest coast of Ireland, about six or seven miles S. W. Bolus Head.

SKELOWE and SKELMANTHORPE, 2 townships of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

SKELENSDALE, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 922.

SKELEMERCH, a hamlet of England, in Westmorland.

SKELTON, a village of England, East Riding of Yorkshire, on the Ouse.

SKELTON, two townships of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

SKELEWITH, a township of England, in Lancashire, 3½ miles N. Hawkeshead.

SKENEATILES, a post village of the United States, in Onondaga county, New York, on Skeneatiles lake, 163 miles W. Albany.

SKEPETH CASTLE, a fortress of England, in Monmouthshire.

SKEKINGE, a town of Sweden, in East Gothland, on the Skena. Population 900.

SKENNA, a small river of England, in Durham, which runs into the Tees.

SKEKES, or SKEERY ISLES, three small islands of Shetland, 15 miles N. E. Whalsay.

SKERTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1263.

SKETX, a small river of Wales, in Merionethshire, which falls into the Irish sea.

SKEVENLEY, a hamlet of England, in Leicestershire, 2 miles S. E. Hinckley.

SKESWAY, a township of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

SKIATHI, a small island of the Grecian archipelago, in circumference about 30 miles.

SKIATHI, the chief place of the foregoing island. Population 1000.

SKIBBEREEN, a town of Ireland, county of Cork, on the Den. 34 miles S. W. Cork.

SKIDBY, a township of England, East Riding of Yorkshire.

SKIDDAW, one of the highest mountains of England, in Cumberland, distinguished also for its grand and romantic scenery, as well as for the lakes in its different hollows, and near its base. Height 3022 feet.

SKIELSKION, a town of Denmark, in Zealand, 62 miles W. S. W. Copenhagen.

SKINBURNESS, a village of England, in Cumberland, 11 miles N. W. Wigton.

SKINNERSVILLE, a post village of the United States, in North Carolina.

SKINNINGHOVE, a township of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

SKIPPON, a small river of England, in Lancashire, which runs into the Wire.

SKIPTON, a market town of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, in the middle of the vale of Skipton. The town consists chiefly of one wide and long street. The church is a spacious structure, with a tower at the west end. It contains also a grammar school, and a town-house lately built. Skipton castle is an ancient structure, said to have been originally erected soon after the conquest. It surrendered to the parliamentary army in 1645. Skipton has a great trade in grain. Great numbers of cattle and sheep are also sold here in the course of the year. It has a paper-mill, a glazing-mill, a considerable twist-mill, a cotton manufactory, &c. Population 3411. 44 miles W. York.

SKIPTON, a hamlet of England, North Riding of Yorkshire, 5 miles S. W. Thirsk.

SKIRCOAT, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 3323.

SKIRETHORNS, a hamlet of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

SKIRINGGLASS, a small island, near the west coast of Scotland.

SKIRINTARSAN, a small island near the east coast of Skye.

SKIRLAUGH, NORTH and SOUTH, two townships of England, East Riding of Yorkshire.

SKIRLINGTON and SKIRPENBECK, 2 townships of England, East Riding of Yorkshire.

SKOPELOS, an island of the Grecian archipelago, on the coast of Magnesia, 30 miles in circumference. Population 12,000.

SKOPELOS, the chief place of the foregoing island. It is the see of a bishop. Pop. 5000.

SKRYNE, a village of Ireland, county of East Meath, 19½ miles N. W. Dublin.

SKUTSCH, a town of Bohemia, 70 miles E. by S. Prague. Population 2500.

SKYE, one of the most considerable of the Hebrides, on the coast of Scotland, and in the county of Inverness, separated from the mainland of Scotland by a channel three leagues broad, but at the ferry of Glenelg not more than half a mile. It lies between 57. and 57. 38. N. lat. and between 5. 33. and 6. 40. W. long. 64 miles in its greatest length, and in breadth from 35 to 3 miles, being on an average 13. It contains 342,100 English acres, of which about 30,000 are arable; the rest, consisting of mountain and hill pasture, lakes, morasses, rocks, and other waste lands, may be 750 square miles, deeply indented with inlets of the sea; and those inlets are so distributed, that no spot in the island is four miles from salt water. The climate is mild, but humid and variable. The surface is very irregular. In several districts are bleak elevated ridges of hills, covered with heath; and below are vallies watered by rapid streams, fresh water lakes, morasses in which trunks of trees are found, gently sloping declivities, and level fields. There is every diversity of soil, except pure sand. There is abundance of freestone, limestone, granite, with some veins of marble, and appearances of lead and iron ore in various places. Agriculture is still in a very backward state; and if the land were inclosed, drained, and sheltered, the aspect of the country would be entirely altered. Many curious grottos, Druidical monuments, and ancient forts, are found in this island. The island is divided into seven parochial districts, which contain upwards of 13,000 inhabitants, who dwell for the most part in scattered villages, as convenience or the situation invites.

SKYHO, an island of the Grecian archipelago, east of Negroponte, about 60 miles in circumference. Long. 24. 33. E. Lat. 38. 52. N.

SLARTOWN, a village of the United States, in Burlington county, New Jersey.

SLAGELSE, a town of Denmark, 50 miles W. S. W. Copenhagen. Population 1800.

SLAITHWAITE, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 2071.

SLANE, a town of Ireland, in the county of Meath, on the Boyne, over which is a bridge, 3 miles W. Drogheda.

SLANEY, a river of Ireland, which runs into Wexford harbour.

SLATE RIVER, a river of the United States, in Virginia, which joins James river.

SLAUGHTERFORD, a hamlet of England, in Wiltshire, 5 miles W. by N. Chippenham.

SLAUFORD, NEW, a flourishing market town of England, county of Lincoln, on a small rivulet called the Slee. The church is a handsome and spacious Gothic structure. The castle is now levelled with the ground. Population 2094. 16 miles S. Lincoln.

SLAUFORD, OLD, a hamlet of England, in Lincolnshire, about a mile from the foregoing.

SLEDDALE, LONG, a township of England, in Westmoreland, 8 miles W. by N. Kendal.

SLEDDALE, WEST, a hamlet in the above county, 5½ miles N. N. W. Orton.

SLEDMEERE, a township of England, East Riding of Yorkshire.

SLEEKURN, EAST and WEST, adjoining hamlets of England, in Durham.

SLEEPE, a hamlet of England, in Hertfordshire, near St Alban's.

SLEEPY CREEK, a river of the United States, North Carolina. It enters the Atlantic.

Slieve, a hamlet of England, in Dorsetshire, 5 miles E. by S. Wareham.

Sliswick, a duchy or province of the Danish dominions, which has Jutland to the north, and Holstein to the south, while on the east and west it is bounded by the sea. Its form is oblong; its length is about 70 miles; its breadth, including the islands to the east and west, from 30 to 56 miles. Like Jutland, it has no mountains, and not many elevations sufficient to the purpose of hills. It is consequently not rich in minerals, but most parts of it are fit for tillage. The productions are barley, oats, and rye, with comparatively little wheat, hemp, or flax. Population 300,000 on the mainland, and 40,000 on the islands. It has good pasture, on which are bred horses and horned cattle. The chief towns are Flensberg, containing 15,000 inhabitants; Kiel; Sleswick, Tondern, and Tonningen. The chief manufactures, woollen and linen, are carried on, not in collective establishments, but in the cottages of the manufacturer. Fishing forms a considerable occupation on the coast, as well as in the arms of the sea.

Sleswick, the capital of the duchy of the same name, on the river Sles. It is a long irregular town. The objects of interest are the cathedral, with its altar and the monuments of the princes; the town-house, a neat structure; the orphan-house, the work-house, and the nunnery of St John; also 5 churches. Here are manufactures of refined sugar, earthenware, leather, and mill-cloth. Population 7000. 108 miles S. W. Copenhagen. Long. 10. 34. E. Lat. 54. 32. N.

Slektrawijk, a town of the Netherlands, in East Flanders. Population 2300.

Slektrawijk, a small town of the Netherlands, in South Holland. Pop. 2400.

Sligo, a county of Ireland, in the province of Connaught, bounded E. by the county of Leitrim, S. by Roscommon, S. W. and W. by Mayo, and N. by the bay of Donegal. Its greatest length is 30 English miles, and the greatest breadth 27. It contains 620 square miles, English. The soil is generally light, sandy, gravelly, gravelly loam, or mossy, mixed with some stones on a strong gravelly bottom, tolerably productive of potatoes, barley, and oats. In some parts the lands are rich and fertile, equally adapted for tillage or for fattening the heaviest oxen. It is mountainous in many parts. Among these hills there are many large lakes, and abundance of rivers. The chief waterfalls there are the Sligo, the Bann, the Glenties, the Ussie, the Ouse, the Bann, and the Moy. Lead, iron, silver, and copper have been discovered in different places. The mountains near Lough Gill, which give indications of coal. The lake of Sligo is unfertile in the county. Pop. 10,000.

Sligo, a town of Ireland, situated on the county of the same name, and a small pleasantly situated on the mouth of the river which flows from Lough Gill to Sligo bay.

The trade of Sligo has been increasing for many years. Its public buildings consist of a jail, a barrack, a court-house, an infirmary, and a charter school. This town owes its origin to a castle and an abbey, erected here about the year 1082. The castle was destroyed and rebuilt in 1316. Its ruins now stand in a former splendour. Sligo sends one member to the imperial parliament. Population 2000, but they have since increased. 100 miles N. W. Dublin.

Slonimsk, a town of European Russia, government of Viatka. Population 4700.

Slonimsk, a town of Russian Lithuania, government of Grodno. Population 4400. 44 miles S. E. W. Novogrodek.

Sloterum, a village of the Netherlands, near Amsterdam. Sl. A village of the Netherlands, in Friesland. Pop. 4000.

Stoveum, a village of England, in Buckinghamshire. The celebrated Sir H. Knollys had here his residence and observatory.

Stura, or Solusa, a fortified town of the Netherlands, 10 miles N. Brugges. Pop. 1200.

Styria, a hamlet of England, in Lancashire, 8½ miles N. Lancaster.

Smaloxin, a province in the south of Sweden, lying between the Baltic and the province of Halland. Area 3700 square miles. Population 215,000. It is well watered, both by rivers and lakes.

Smalcalden, the chief town of the above district, on a river of the same name. It contains a castle, three suburbs, and 4900 inhabitants. It has near it mines of iron, which is converted into steel, and manufactured in the town into knives, saws, needles, and other hardware; also several silk-works. In 1631, the Protestants formed here their famous league. 58 miles S. W. Cassel.

Smalcalden, Leffla, a town of Germany, 4 miles W. Smalcalden. Pop. 1500.

Smalmsnorth, a hamlet of England, in Northumberland.

Smarden, a village and parish, formerly a market town, of England, in Kent, 36 miles S. E. by E. London. Population 1000.

Smarden, Gerrard, and Leffla, two villages of England, Northumberland.

Smarden, Kiln, and Smarden, Leffla, two townships of England, in Northumberland.

Smarden, a small town of England, in Northumberland, which includes the town.

Smarden, a county of the United States, on the north side of Washington. Population 11,000, including the town.

Smarden, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, is the south of Cape Fear river, and the town of the coast of Virginia.

Smarden, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, is the south of Cape Fear river, and the town of the coast of Virginia.

Smarden, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, is the south of Cape Fear river, and the town of the coast of Virginia.

Smarden, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, is the south of Cape Fear river, and the town of the coast of Virginia.

Smarden, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, is the south of Cape Fear river, and the town of the coast of Virginia.

Smarden, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, is the south of Cape Fear river, and the town of the coast of Virginia.

SMITHWICK, a village of England, in Staffordshire. Population 1930.

SMOLENSKO, a government or province of the Russian empire, to the west of the government of Moscow, between 30. 50. and 35. 30. E. longitude, and 53. 30. and 56. 25. N. latitude. Area 21,400 square miles. Population 1,050,000, mostly Russians, with some Poles, Germans, and Jews. The principal rivers are the Duna, the Dnieper, the Desna, the Sosha, the Kasplia, the Uga, and the Viasma. The lakes are also numerous.

SMOLENSKO, a considerable town of European Russia, and the capital of the above government, built partly on two hills, and partly in a valley between them, watered by the Dnieper, here a navigable stream. The part to the south of that river is surrounded with a masonry-wall 30 feet in height, 15 thick, and a mile and three quarters in circuit. The whole is surrounded with a ditch and a sort of covered way; and some modern redoubts have been erected as outworks. Smolensko was the scene of an obstinate conflict between the French and Russians in 1812; but on quitting it in their disastrous retreat in November following, the French blew up part of the works; and as most of the houses were of wood, about the half of them were destroyed on these two occasions. Smolensko is thinly inhabited, containing within its circumference several large gardens. One large street divides it into two, and is paved with stone; but the others are paved, or rather floored, with planks. The part rebuilt since 1812 is of a good construction, and the number of public edifices is considerable. Here are nearly 30 churches and chapels, besides two cathedrals, and places of public worship for Lutherans and Catholics. The manufactures are linen, leather, soap, and hats; and there is a pretty active trade in corn and hemp. Population 12,600. 235 miles W. S. W. Moscow, and 360 S. by E. St. Petersburg. Long. 31. 56. 38. E. Lat. 54. 50. N.

SMYRNA, a large and commercial city of Asia Minor, situated at the head of a long and winding gulf of the Grecian archipelago. Smyrna is one of the most celebrated of the ancient cities of Asia. It has ever since continued a flourishing city, and in modern times has been particularly distinguished for its trade. The present town is about 4 miles in circuit, and extends about a mile along the water, in approaching from which it makes a very beautiful appearance. The interior does not correspond to the splendour of its approach. The streets are narrow, dirty, and ill paved. The bazars, though well provided with goods, are by no means splendid in their structure. There are two very fine caravanserais inclosing square courts, and which being covered with cupolas, make a very handsome appearance. The bestestinas or shops also are arched over, and very fine. At the east end of the city is a large hill, which the castle was built. Of the sumptuous edifices which rendered Smyrna one of the brightest ornaments of the Lesser Asia, scarcely any remains can now be traced. In 1814 the plague produced such ravages, that its victims were estimated at from 50,000 to 60,000. The inhabitants of Smyrna are usually reckoned at 100,000, of whom Mr Turner supposes the Turks to amount to between 50,000 and 60,000, the Greeks to 30,000, the Armenians to 8000, and the Franks or Europeans to 2000 or 3000. The export trade of Smyrna consists of very rich commodities, raw silk, Turkey carpets, unwrought cotton, and the beautiful goat hair or mohair of Angora, which is used in several of our finer manufactures. It sends out also a considerable quantity of raisins, a little muscadine wine, and a variety of drugs, as rhubarb, amber, musk, lapis lazuli, and guma. A certain number of pearls, diamonds, and other precious stones, are also exported. The imports are chiefly woollen cloths, lead, tin, glass, and wrought silks. Long. 27. 4. 45. E. Lat. 38. 29. N.

SMYRNA, a post township of the United States. New York. Population 1334.

SMAYTON, a township of England, North Riding of Yorkshire. Population 603.

SMAYTH, a market town and parish of England, in Yorkshire, on the Aire. Population of the town 834. 22 miles S. by E. York.

SNEECK, a fortified town of the Netherlands, in Friesland. It has manufactures of linen. Population 5000.

SNEETON, a village of England, 1 mile from Nottingham. Population 1212.

SNIAZYŃ, a town of Austrian Galicia, 28 miles W. Czernowitz. Population 4000.

SNITTEN and SNITTERTON, two hamlets of England, Northumberland and Derbyshire.

SNOREHAM, a hamlet of England, in Essex county, 5½ miles S. S. E. Maldon.

SNORING, GREAT and LITTLE, a parish and hamlet of England, in Norfolk.

SNOWDON MOUNTAIN, the highest mountain of Wales, in Caernarvonshire. It is 3571 feet above the level of the sea.

SNOWHILL, a post town and port of entry of the United States, and capital of Worcester county, Maryland, on the Potomack, 24 miles from its mouth. It has a courthouse, a jail, an academy, and 3 churches. Population 1600. 126 miles S. Philadelphia.

SNYDALL, or SNIDALE, a hamlet of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

SNYTT, a river of England, which rises in Leicestershire, and runs into the Dean.

SOANX, a river of Hindostan, which joins the Ganges 29 miles above the city of Patna, in Bihar, after a winding course of 500 miles.

SOAX, or SOUX, a river of England, which runs into the Trent.

SOAY, a small island of Scotland, near the Isle of Skye.—3d. Two small islands on the coast of Harris.—3d. A small pasture island on the coast of Sutherlandshire.

SOCERY ISLANDS, a cluster of islands in the South Pacific ocean, so named by Captain Cook, in the year 1769. They are Ulitea, Otaha, Bolabola, Hushaine, Tubai, and Maurua; the two last are very small. They are situated between the latitude of 16. 10. and 16. 35. S. and between the longitude of 156. 57. and 166. 37. from the meridian of Greenwich. The inhabitants, climate, and produce are similar, in many respects, to those of Otahiti, from which island they are not above 40 leagues distant towards the north-west. They are similar in their manners, being addicted to the same superstitions and customs; and being also under a similar climate, their mode of living is generally the same. Influenced by the instructions of the missionaries, the sovereigns of many of these islands, together with a large proportion of the inhabitants, have relinquished the superstitions of their forefathers, and professed their belief in the truths of Christianity. This change has extended to several of the Society islands, viz. Humeine, Hainea or Ulitea, Taha or Otaha, and Borabora or Bolabola.

NOCKACKOW, a town of Poland, on the river Baura. Population 3000.

NOCKBRIDGE, a hamlet of England, in Westmoreland.

NOCKBURN, a village of England, in Durham, 7 miles S. E. Darlington.

NOCHERO, one of the Itzvilagigredo islands, in the North Pacific ocean, about 360 miles from the west coast of Mexico.

SOCORRO, a town of New Granada, province of Santa Fe. Population 3599.

SOCOTARA, an island of the Indian ocean, about 40 leagues to the eastward of Capo Guardafui, 27 leagues long, and 7 broad.

SODERFORA, a small town of Middle Sweden, in Sudermania, government of Upsal. Here is a manufactory of officers.

SODERHAM, a town of Sweden, on the gulf of Bothnia. It has manufactures of linen and iron. Population 2000.

SODERFELIX, a town of Sweden, 18 miles W. S. W. Stockholm. Population 1000.

SODUS, a post township of the United States, in Ontario county, New York, on Great Sodus bay. Population 1557.

SODUS BAY, GEMAT, a bay on the S. side of Lake Ontario, 4 miles across, and 2 deep.

SOEAT, a town of Prussian Westphalia, 32 miles S. E. Munster. Population 5460. Long. 8. 30. E. Lat. 51. 34. 51. N.

SOFALA, a country and city of Eastern Africa, situated at the mouth of a considerable river of the same name. At the time of the first arrival of the Portuguese, it was a place of great commercial importance. Since Mozambique became the capital of the Portuguese settlements, it has sunk into insignificance. The Portuguese, however, still maintain here a fort. Long. 34. 46. E. Lat. 20. 15. S.

SOFIA, or SOUMIA, a large city of European Turkey, the capital of Bulgaria, on the river Bogana. It has a very extensive trade, which is for the most part in the hands of Greeks and Armenians. It contains a number of handsome baths and mosques, but the streets are narrow, uneven, and dirty. Population 50,000. 200 miles W. N. W. Constantinople. Long. 23. 14. E. Lat. 42. 50. N. SOHAN, or MOON'S SEMAR, an irregularly built market town of England, in Cambridgeshire, on the Cam. It has a church, a spacious building, in the form of a cross; also a charity school, and three almshouses. Population 2084. 7 miles S. E. Ely.

SOHAN, an ancient and celebrated city of Ommen, in Eastern Arabia.

SORENRES, an inland town of the Netherlands, 25 miles S. W. Brussels. Pop. 4760.

SORENRES, a town of France, department of the Aisne, on the river Aisne. It is built. The cathedral is an exquisite edifice. The other remarkable objects are the church of Notre Dame, the academy established in 1674, the lycee, the theatre, and a pleasant walk on the banks of the Aisne. Its trade is in corn, and its manufactures are of coarse linen, stockings, thread, leather, and ropes. Population 7500. 65 miles S. E. Amiens.

SOLANDER'S ISLAND, an island near the south coast of New Zealand.

SOLANO, a town of Spain, 103 miles S. by E. Madrid. Population 1200.

SOLDIN, a town of the Prussian states, 70 miles E. N. E. Berlin. Population 3200.

SOLENO, a town of the Sardinian states, province of Alessandria. Population 2000.

SOLENNES, a town of France, 0 miles E. N. E. Cambry. Population 3900.

SOLETHUS, or SOLOTHURN, a town in the north of Switzerland, and the capital of a canton of the same name. It stands at the foot of Mount Jura, on the Aar, which divides it into two parts. It has several good offices. Population 4200. 18 miles N. by E. Bern.

SOLFATARA, a lake of Italy, in the Campagna di Roma, near Tivoli.

SOLDATIKAVA, a town of European Russia, government of Kostroma. Pop. 2300.

SOLIKAMSK, an old town of European Russia, government of Perm, with salt springs and copper mines. Population 3800.

SOLIMAN, a seaport in the bay of Tunis, 20 miles E. S. E. Tunis.

SOLINGEN, a town of Prussian Westphalia, on the Whipper. Population 4100.

SOLIPACI, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro. Population 2000.

SOLLER, a town of Spain, in the island of Majorca, 14 miles N. Palma. Pop. 5700. It has a harbour, defended by two forts.

SOLLASA LE POSE, a town of France, on the Lot, 9 miles N. E. Toulon. Pop. 1000.

SOLMS, a district in the west of Germany, in Westphalia. Population 35,000.

SOLU, or SALUA-CORRA, an island town of Java, the capital of a district, and residence of an emperor. It is a large and populous town, intersected with broad and shaded avenues or streets, running at right angles. The Crattan, where the emperor resides with his court, is very spacious, and comprises several palaces in its area. The other edifices and nobility live in villas, surrounded by high walls, interspersed through the town and neighbourhood. The European town and fort are very neat.

SOLOFKA, a town of Naples; Principato Ultra. It has manufactures of gold and silver plate. Population 6100.

SOLONON'S ISLANDS, a group in the South Pacific ocean, situated chiefly between Long. 165. and 160. E. Lat. 5. and 12. S.

SOLOTAČEV, a town of European Russia, government of Slohodak Ukraine, on the Uda, with two churches. Population 4800.

SOLSONA, or SALSONA, a town of Spain; in Catalonia. Population 3000.

SOLWAY FRITH, a navigable arm of the sea, which extends eastward from the Irish sea, forming the boundary of England and Scotland for upwards of 60 miles.

SOLYMANIA, called also SHEHR ZOOR, a town of the territory of Kurdistan. Population 6000. 54 miles E. Kerkook.

SOMBRERO, a small island in the West Indies, about 3 miles long. Long. 63. 28. 30. W. Lat. 18. 37. 40. N.

SOMEREX, a town of the Netherlands, in North Brabant. Population 2800.

SOMERFORD, a village of England, in Staffordshire, situated on the Penk.

SOMERFORD BOOTH, a hamlet of England, in Cheshire, near Congleton.

SOMERSET, a maritime county of England, bounded N. W. by the Bristol channel; N. by Gloucestershire and the county and city of Bristol; E. and S. E. by Wiltshire and Dorsetshire; and S. and W. by Devonshire. Its figure is irregular, somewhat resembling a crescent. Its greatest breadth is 30, and its extreme length is 70 miles. It contains 1549 square miles, or 990,000 acres, with 200 inhabitants to each square mile. It is divided into 43 hundreds, 7 liberties, and 462 parishes; and contains 2 cities, Bath and Wells, and part also of Bristol; 5 boroughs, Bridgewater, Ilchester, Milborne Port, Minehead, and Taunton; and 27 other market towns, viz. Axbridge, Bruton, Milverton, Castle Cary, Chard, Crewkerne, Dulverton, Dunster, Frome, Selwood, Glastonbury, Ilminster, Keynsham, Langport, North Cary, Pennford, South Petherton, Porlock, Stogumber, Shepton Mallet, Somerton, Stewy, Watchet, Wellington, Wincanton, Wivelcomb, Wrington, and Yeovil. It sends 16 members to parliament. One for each of the cities and boroughs. Few districts of the kingdom present greater diversities of surface than Somersetshire. It possesses every gradation from the lofty mountain and barren moor, to the rich and highly cultivated vale, and thence descending to the unimproved and unimprovable marsh and fen. The Quantock hills extend northward from Taunton, and descend into a cultivated vale of some extent. Westward the county is entirely mountainous and hilly. It is divided into various ridges, running from east to west, and from which numerous lateral branches are detached. Between these occur steep vallies, which form, when richly wooded, some of the most striking features of the beautiful scenery for which this coast is celebrated. Along the slope and skirts of the hills, this low land is dry and well cultivated, but from thence towards the coast it forms a vast and wide spreading district of water formed lands, known by the name of the Marishes; in the middle of which, and separating them into two great divisions, rises boldly to view a range of high ground. The rivers of Somersetshire rise chiefly in these high grounds within the county, and are none of them of any great magnitude, except the Avon, which rises in Wiltshire, and divides the county from Gloucestershire. The Avon is the principal river. The others are the Parret, the Ivel, the Tone, the Brue, and the Ax. The soil of Somersetshire scarcely admits of any general description or character, almost every species being found in various parts of the county, except chalk, of which there is very little. It is mostly, however, of a highly fertile and productive quality. Somersetshire stands high in reputation for its agricultural and rural produce. The plains are remarkable for their luxuriant herbage, which furnishes not only a sufficiency for its own consumption, but also a considerable surplus for other markets. London, Bristol, Salisbury, and other parts of the kingdom, are annually supplied with fat oxen, sheep, and hogs, together with many other articles in great abundance. Nor are the hills by any means deficient in their arable productions. But grazing and the dairy form the great objects of the husbandry of this district, grain not being raised to such an extent as to supply its own consumption, so that vast quantities are imported from the adjacent counties of Wilts and Dorset. The oxen of this county are scarcely inferior in size to those of Lincolnshire; and the grain of the flesh is thought finer. The best goose feathers for beds come from the marshes here. Much cheese is made in the lower parts of the county; and that of the Cheddar district is said to exceed any in the kingdom. The minerals of Somersetshire constitute an important article of its produce. The great mining district is the Mendip hills, which afford lead, calamine, and coal, the latter of which is also found in great abundance, and in various parts to the north of these hills. Besides these minerals, limestone, of which there are extensive quarries in the Quantock hills, paving stone, tiling stone, freestone, marl, and fullers earth, are found in different parts of the county. The manufactures of Somersetshire, which are considerable, consist chiefly in articles of clothing. At Frome and Shepton Mallet there are some manufactures of woollen cloth and knit stockings, and of narrow cloth at Ilminster, Chard, Crewkerne, &c. In the middle district of the county are many manufactures of coarse linen, such as double, tick, &c.; also gloves, gill-net, &c. The woolen manufactures are also carried on at Taunton and Wellington. Several canals have been formed to facilitate its intercourse with the adjacent districts. Pop. 355,314.

SOMERSET, a county of the United States, in Maine. Pop. 12,310.—3d, in New Jersey. Pop. 14,728.—3d, On the south side of Pennsylvania. Pop. 11,284.—4th, in Maryland. Population 17,105, including 6975 slaves.

SOMERSET, a borough and township of the United States, in Somerset county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 500. 61 miles E. S. E. Pittsburgh.

SOMERSET, a river of the United States, in Maine, which joins the Kennebeck.

SOMERTON, a market town and borough of England, in Somersetshire, on a branch of the river Parret. The town consists of five streets. The church is an ancient building. It has also an excellent free school, and a well endowed almshouse. Somerton is supposed to have been a Roman citadel. Part of the walls and a round tower still remain. Population of the parish, 1643. 123 miles W. by S. London.

SOMERVILLE ISLAND, a small island in the Polar sea, discovered by Captain Parry. Long. 96. 25. W. Lat. 74. 41. N.

SOMMA, a town of Italy, situated at the foot of Vesuvius. It has a castle. Population 6800. 12 miles E. Naples.

SOMMARIVA DEL BOSCO, a town of Italy, in Piedmont. Population 6100.

SOMME, a river of France, which falls into the English channel.

SOMME, a department in the north of France, comprising the western part of Picardy, and bounded W. by the English channel, and N. by the department of the Pas de Calais. Area 2360 square miles. Population 495,000. Besides corn, pasturage, fruit, and vegetables, a large quantity of colseed, rapeseed, and oleaginous grains, are raised, as well as flax and hemp. Amiens is the capital. The other towns are Abbeville, Doullens, Péronne, and Montdidier.

SOMMELDYK, a town of South Holland, on the island of Overflakke. Pop. 1600.

SOMMERDA, a town of Prussian Saxony, 15 miles N. N. W. Weimar. Pop. 1900.

SOMMERIK, a town of Hungary, 11 miles S. E. Presburg. Population 2700.

SOMMERGEN, a town of the Netherlands, in East Flanders. Population 6400.

SOMMIERS, a town of France, department of the Gers. Population 2400.

SOMOSIERRA, a small town of Spain, 52 miles N. Madrid.

SONCINO, a town of Austrian Italy, on the Oglio, 30 miles N. Cremona. Pop. 3900.

SONDERSBORG, a town of Denmark, 21 miles W. S. W. Rosborg. Population 2700.

SONDERSHAUSEN, a town of Upper Saxony, on the Wipper. Population 3100.

SONDURJO, a town of Austrian Italy, on the Multer. Population 3200.

SONNEBURG, a town of the Prussian states, 11 miles E. S. E. Custrin. Population 1700.

SONNENBERG, a town of Germany, 40 miles S. Weimar. Population 1900.

SONORA, an intendancy or province of Mexico, which is very thinly peopled, and extends along the gulf of California, for more than 300 leagues from the great bay of Bayama, or the Rio del Rosario, to the mouth of the Rio Colorado. It is bounded W. by the sea, S. by the intendancy of Guadalupe, and E. by a very uncultivated part of New Biscay. Its northern limits are very uncertain. Population 121,000.

SONNECK, a town of the Prussian province of Cleves and Berg. Population 1500.

SONSONWARR, or THUNDAT, the capital of a district of the same name, in Guatemala, near a bay on the Pacific coast. Pop. 2800. Long. 89. 45. W. Lat. 16. 46. N.

SONTHORZ, a town of Bavaria, on the Iller. Population 2500.

SOOLOO ISLAND, a chain of islands, about 60 in number, deriving their name from Sooloo, the principal island in the group. They extend from Borneo to Magindano, and are comprehended between the 4th and 7th degrees of N. lat. The island of Sooloo is situated in Long. 119. E. Lat. 6. N. It is 30 miles long, 12 broad, and has 60,000 inhabitants.

SOORBA, the capital of a district of Hindostan, between the 14th and 15th degrees of N. lat. It was formerly extensive and populous, but was taken by Hyder Aly, and destroyed. Long. 74. 58. E. Lat. 14. 34. N.

SOORENGAONO, a town of branches of the Lucka and one of the branches of the Brahmapootra river. It was a large and flourishing city in the 15th century. It is now reduced to a mere village. Long. 90. 43. E. Lat. 23. 30. N.

SOORANGUR, a town of Hindostan, province of Orissa, near the Mahanuddy river.

SOOTMILL, a township of England, 6 miles N. W. Wakefield. Population 5000.

SOOTY, a town of Bengal, near the head of the Bhagarutty or Cominatar river. Long. 88. 2. E. Lat. 24. 26. N.

SOPHIA, a town of Russia, 15 miles S. St. Petersburg. It has a magnificent church. Population 600.

SORA, a town of Naples, on the Gorigliano, 60 miles N. W. Naples. Population 7200.

SORAU, or ZAROWE, a seat town of Lower Lusatia, 69 miles S. S. E. Frankfurt on the Oder. Population 3600.

SOREL, or WILLIAM HENRY, a town of Lower Canada, pleasantly situated at the confluence of the Richelieu, or Sorel river, with the St. Lawrence. It is laid out with regularity. Some trade is carried on. Population 1500. Long. 72. 58. W. Lat. 46. 5. N.

SORREZ, a town of France, department of the Tarn. Population 1700.

SORSEZ, a large river of France, in Provence. It falls into the Rhone near Avignon.

SORSUZA, a town of France, department of the Vaucluse. Population 1400.

SORTA, the chief town of a district of Spain, in Old Castile, situated on the Duera. I.

has 15 churches and chapels, 11 monasteries, and 4 hospitals. It has also manufactures of silk stockings, leather, soap, and woollens. Population 6000. 110 miles N. E. Madrid.

SORIANO, a town of Naples, in Calabria Ultra, with 3600 inhabitants.

SORRENTO, a town of Italy, on the gulf of Naples. It has a manufacture of silk. Population 4200. 15 miles S. S. E. Naples.

SORTINO, a town of Sicily, in the quarter called Val di Noto. Population 6000.

SOS, a town of Spain, in Arragon, 4 miles S. S. E. Sanguesa. Population 2400.

SORELLO, a town of Piedmont, on the Be-vera. Population 3200.

SUDAN, the name given by the Moors of Northern Africa to a vast tract of territory in the interior of that continent.

SOUTZMATT, a village of France, department of the Upper Rhine. Population 2100.

SOUND, or ØRESUND, the strait or narrow sea between the island of Zealand, in Denmark, and the continent of Sweden, through which vessels pass from the North sea into the Baltic. It is about 4 miles across, and the Danes exact a toll on all ships that pass through the strait.

SOURABAYA, a large and flourishing town of Java, on the north-eastern coast, and capital of a district of the same name, situated at the mouth of a navigable river, $\frac{1}{4}$ mile from the sea shore. The river separates the European part of the town from the Chinese and the native quarter. A fine bridge, with draw-chains to raise it up for the passage of vessels, connects the European town with that of the natives. The houses are very good, and some are elegant, particularly the newly erected country seats of private individuals. The general hospital is an attracting object. There is also a fine arsenal, and other extensive works, calculated for equipments on a very large scale. Here guns are cast, and carriages of all descriptions constructed. Vessels also, with their various appointments, are built and equipped at Sourabaya. A mint is likewise at work here, on a new silver and copper coinage. Sourabaya is situated within that narrow strait which is formed by the islands of Java and Madura, and is defended by batteries. The mouth of the river on which Sourabaya is situated, is defended by Fort Calinas, a circular battery mounting 40 guns. When the French had possession of Java, it was intended to have erected Sourabaya into a port of consequence, and General Ilegueld, expended large sums in the construction of works for the defence of the harbour, and was proceeding in his plans when the island was taken by the British. Long. 113° 56. N. Lat. 7° 14' S.

SOURVAL, a town of France, department of La Manche. Population 4000.

SOURAN, a town of Ekremadura, 12 miles S. W. Coimbra. Population 3200.

SOUAS, a town of Portugal, 15 miles W. Faro. Population 4000.

SOURVOY, a town of France, department of the Ardennes. Population 2500.

SOUTCHEOUFOO, a large city of China, capital of the eastern part of the province of Kiangnan, intersected by rivers and canals. It is one of the most beautiful cities of the empire. Long. 120. E. Lat. 31° 22' N.

SOUTHERAINE, a town of France, department of La Creuse. Population 2000.

SOUTHAM, a market town of England, in Warwickshire. The church is a handsome building. Pop. 1161. 82 miles N. W. London.

SOUTHAM, a hamlet of England, in Gloucestershire, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. E. Cheltenham.

SOUTH AMERICA, the southern division of the American continent, and separated from the northern division by the Isthmus of Darien. It comprehends, under the appellation of Terra Firma, the governments of Panama, Porto Bello, Veragua, and Darien; the viceroyalty of New Granada, the government or captain-generalship of the Caraccas, the kingdom of Quito, all of which are sometimes included in the viceroyalty of Granada; the extensive country of Guiana; the viceroyalty of Peru, of Buenos Ayres, and the captain-generalship of Chili; also Brazil, under the dominion of the Portuguese. To the south of the Spanish possessions, and in many extensive tracts of the interior also, it is occupied by savage tribes. Of the different countries which compose this great continent, a geographical account will be found under their respective titles.

SOUTHAMPTON, a considerable town of England, in the county of Hants or Southampton, is a county of itself, and is styled the town and county of the town of Southampton. It is situated on the large estuary called Southampton water, on a tongue of land which is bounded by that water S. and W., and by the river Itchen E. The ground in this peninsula rises towards the centre, forming a very moderately elevated ridge, on which the town is built. It presents a picturesque appearance from different points of view. The High-street runs from the quay northwards; it is upwards of half a mile long, and is particularly handsome and spacious. The entrance to this street from the land side is by the Bar-gate, a venerable piece of antiquity. Within the last fifty years the town has more than doubled its buildings and its population; the latter probably amounting to between 10,000 and 12,000. Of the public buildings, there are five parish churches, St Michael's, All Saints, Holy Rood, St Lawrence, and St Mary. There was formerly another church, that of St John. St Michael's church forms the eastern side of the square of the same name. It consists of a nave, chapel, and side aisles, with a low tower rising from the centre, and terminating in a fine slender octagonal spire, which forms a very conspicuous object. It contains a handsome monument to the Lord Chancellor Walsley. All Saints church is an elegant modern building, in the Grecian style. Holy Rood church is a large building, with a tower at the south-west angle, and a colonnade in front. There are, besides, remarkably neat chapels of the Independent and Baptist denominations. The other public buildings are the assembly-rooms, situated near the west quay, and a commodious theatre. Near the town, on the north, is a military asylum for the orphans of soldiers, on the same plan as the well-known institution at Chelsea. It contains about 300 boys, and is under admirable regulations. A free grammar school was established in Southampton by Edward VI. There are also Sunday schools, and schools on the plans of Bell and Lancaster; and near the entrance of the town, on the right, is a neat range of almshouses. There are various buildings of considerable antiquity in different parts of the town. The Bar-gate already mentioned, is a curious ancient fortified gate-house. Near the quay is part of the front of a spacious mansion, supposed to have been a palace occasionally inhabited by the Saxon and Danish kings. The Damus Dei is an hospital, founded, according to Leland, in the reign of Henry III. by two merchants, brothers. There are no remains of the castle. Southampton carries on a considerable trade in wine, corn, timber, &c. Hemp, iron, and tallow, are imported from Russia, and tar and pitch from Sweden. A silk-throwing manufactory employs a few of the poor. Ship-building is also carried on. During the last war, contracts for biscuits for the navy, and bread and clothing for the army, were executed to a considerable extent. Near the west quay, and farther towards the channel, are convenient baths. Here is also a chalybeate spring. Southampton sends two members to parliament. Number of voters 700. Population 13,353. 12 miles S. S. W. Winchester, and 76 W. & W. London.

SOUTHAMPTON, a post township of the United States, in Suffolk county, New York, 100 miles E. New York. Population 8508. —The name also of five townships in Pennsylvania, and one in Massachusetts.

SOUTHAMPTON, a county of the United States, in the south-east part of Virginia. Pop. 13,497, including 6400 slaves.

SOUTHBOURN, a hamlet of England, in Kent, 24 miles S. by W. Tunbridge.

SOUTHBOURN, a post township of the United States, in Worcester county, Massachusetts. Pop. 940. —2d. A post township in New Haven county, Connecticut. Pop. 1415.

SOUTHEM, a hamlet of England, in Essex, at the mouth of the Thames, nearly opposite Sheerness. It is in repute for sea-bathing.

SOUTHERP, ELYHAM and LUNHAM, two small villages of England, in Kent. —2d. A hamlet of England, in Gloucestershire.

SOUTHERRY, a hamlet of England, in Cumberland, 144 miles N. W. Penrith.

SOUTHFIELD, a town of the United States, and capital of Richmond county, on Staten Island. Population 1007.

SOUTHWATE, a hamlet of England, in Middlesex, on the skirts of Epsom Chase.

SOUTH-HAMS, several small villages of England, in Devonshire, near Torbay.

SOUTHS LELAND, the name of several small islands in the Pacific ocean and Eastern seas.

SOUTH MOLTON, a market town of England, in Devonshire, on an eminence near the west side of the river Moulton. The church is spacious and handsome; the guild-hall is also a commodious building, and the market-place extensive and well built. Here is a respectable free school. It has manufactures of serges, felts, and shalloons. South Molton is an ancient town. Population 3314. 194 miles W. Barnstaple.

SOUTHORPE, two hamlets of England, in Lincolnshire and Northamptonshire.

SOUTH RIVER, two tributaries of the Chesapeake, in the United States, Maryland.

SOUTHWARK, a town of England, in the county of Surrey, the chief town of the county, and which forms also a suburb of the city of London. It is commonly called the Borough, and, together with the adjacent parishes, with which it is united by a continued range of buildings, constitutes that great division of the metropolis which lies to the south of the Thames. The borough extends about 19 miles from east to west, and about 1 mile from north to south; the whole of the included area being now covered with houses, public buildings, and streets; while the bank of the river is occupied with warehouses, timber and coal-yards, glass-houses, manufactories, &c. Southwark contains many good streets. There are five parishes, viz. St. Olave, part of which is in the city of London; St. John Horselydown; St. Saviour, commonly called St. Mary Overy's; St. Thomas; and Christ Church. St. Olave's church is situated in Tooley-street, near the south end of London bridge. It is a plain building; the interior is neat, and in the west gallery is a handsome organ. On the north side of Tooley-street, next to the Thames, is a building termed the Bridge-house, which seems to be coeval with London bridge, having been used as a store-house, for stone, timber, and other materials used in its repair. Below the bridge-house, on the banks of the Thames, stood the inn of the abbot of Battle, the site of which is still called Battle Bridge. In front of this mansion were the gardens belonging to it, which, from their intricate embellishments, were called the Maze, a name the place still retains. This parish has a free grammar school, founded by Queen Elizabeth. Here is also a charity school. Eastward of St. Olave's is the parish of St. John Horselydown, having been originally a grazing ground for horses. St. Thomas's church stands on the south side of the street of the same name. St. Thomas's hospital is a noble charity, appropriated to the reception of indigent persons labouring under sickness or accidental injuries. The building consists of four quadrangles, into the first of which, facing the street, is the entrance by large iron gates, which occupy one side of the square,

The other three sides are encompassed with a colonnade. It has hot and cold baths, a surgery, theatre, apothecary's shop, brewhouse, and other offices. The whole establishment contains 19 wards, and 474 beds; and since its foundation, this excellent institution has afforded relief to an immense number of patients. Near St Thomas's is the kindred institution of Guy's hospital, a great and singular monument of private munificence. It is named after its founder, Thomas Guy, a citizen and bookseller of London, who, by industry and frugality, amassed a very large fortune, which he determined, when arrived at his 78th year, to apply to this benevolent purpose. The expence of erecting and furnishing the hospital, amounted to £.1878; and Mr Guy, by his will, endowed it with the residue of his estate, which amounted to £.219,400. The buildings consist of a centre and two wings. The former is for the reception of patients; and behind it is a small neat building for lunatics. In the centre of one wing is a spacious hall and rooms for public business, and in the other a neat chapel, in which is a finely executed statue of the founder, by Bacon. The whole comprehends 13 wards, and 411 beds. The out patients of this institution are also very numerous. St Saviour's church, commonly called St Mary Overy; originally belonged to a nunnery, founded by a female, prior to the Norman conquest, and endowed by her with the profits of the ferry across the river at this place, prior to the erection of London bridge. The present church is built on the plan of a cathedral, though of small dimensions. A part only of the original architecture remains; and this is in the interior of the west front of the church, all the rest of the building exhibiting the styles in use between the 13th and 16th centuries. The tower in the centre rises in three stories, the walls finishing with battlements, and being adorned at the angles with turrets and pinnacles. Contiguous to the priory of St Mary Overy, formerly stood Winchester house, the town residence of the prelates of that see. It was erected about the year 1107, by bishop Gifford, and was one of the most magnificent structures in the city or suburbs of London. It continued to be the abode of his successors, till the beginning of the 17th century, when it was forsaken for the more agreeable residence at Chelsea. From its present remains, which form parts of the various warehouses now occupying the site, no adequate idea can be formed of the former extent and arrangement of this magnificent palace. What is now called Bankside was formerly a range of dwellings, licensed by the bishop of Winchester, "for the repair of incontinent men to the free women." On the Bankside was a jail called the Clink; also the principal theatre of the time, called the Globe, where the plays of Shakespeare were first represented, and the scenery of which is still retained in the name of Globe Alley. In this district of the borough several important improvements have been lately planned and partly executed. Of these are the very elegant bridge over the Thames called Southwark bridge, which crosses the river from Bankside to Queen-street, and a handsome street from this to St Margaret's hill. Not far from St Saviour's church is the Borough Market, a spacious area, surrounded with stalls and other conveniences. In Deadman's place, on the west side of this market, is an hospital or college, founded in the reign of Elizabeth, by Thomas Cure. At the end of the High-street is St Margaret's hill, the site of the ancient church of the same name, which was converted into a sessions-house and prison, since removed to Mill-lane, and denominated the Borough Compter. The whole has lately been rebuilt. In the front, facing Blackman-street, the hangings for the election of representatives for the borough are usually erected. On the east side of Blackman-street is the Marshalsea, a court of law and a prison, originally intended for the determination of differences between the king's menial servants, and under the control of the knight marshal of the royal household. The prison contains about 60 rooms; it is too small, and much out of repair. Southward of the Marshalsea, and on the same side of the street, is the church of St George the Martyr. The original building was of very ancient foundation. The present structure was erected in 1736. In the old church was interred Edward Cocker, the celebrated arithmetician, and also the noted bishop Bonner, who died miserably, in the Marshalsea, in 1536. Opposite St George's church formerly stood Suffolk-place, a magnificent mansion, erected in the reign of Henry VIII. by the duke of Suffolk. Its name was afterwards altered to Southwark-place, and it was used as a royal mint. It was afterwards converted into streets, which still retain the name of Mint. In Union-street, northward of the Mint, is the public office of Union-hall, a handsome building; and, at the south-east end of Blackman-street, in Horseman's-lane, is the county jail and house of correction for Surrey. The King's Bench prison is situated at the south-west corner of Blackman-street. It consists of one large pile of brick building, comprehending 224 rooms. The liberties, or rules of the prison, as they are termed, extend about three miles round the buildings. Of the parishes adjacent to Southwark, Christ Church was taken out of that of St Saviour's. The present church was erected in 1737. It stands on the west side of the road leading from Blackfriars bridge. In this parish is a charity school, a work-house, and a neat church-yard. On the west side of Blackfriars-road, very near the bridge, is the building formerly occupied by the extensive museum collected by Sir Ashton Lever, and which now forms the premises of the Surgery Institution, an edifice bleishment for the diffusion of science, comprising a series of lectures, an extensive library and reading-rooms, a chemical laboratory, and philosophical apparatus. The Surrey chapel, on the east side of Blackfriars road, is a large octagonal building, erected for the use of the Methodists, by the friends of Bowland Hill, who reside here. Farther to the south stands the Magdalen hospital, for the reception, maintenance, and employment of unfortunate females. In the central point, where the great south road from London, and the roads from Westminster, Southwark, Newington, and Lambeth, unite, stands the obelisk, a plain structure of freestone, erected in 1771, during the mayoralty, and in honour of Brass Crosby, Esq. who had been confined in the tower with alderman Oliver, for the conscientious discharge of his duty as a magistrate. At the end of Blackfriars road, near the obelisk, is the Surrey theatre. Between the obelisk and King's Bench prison, is the school where Lancaster first practised his system of education. St. George's Fields, so frequently noticed in English history, and which about half a century ago were little better than a continual swamp, have, since the erection of Westminster and Blackfriars bridges, been almost covered with streets and buildings, from the ditch at the end of Great Surrey-street, to the Fishmongers almshouse on the one hand, and from the Marshalsea prison to the late Dog and Duck on the other. The Dog and Duck, so designated from its sign, was formerly a house of public entertainment, which took its rise from a mineral spring that was discovered here, but which, in consequence of the disorders to which it gave rise, was shut up by the magistrates, and the premises were latterly occupied as a school for the indigent blind. Near this school is the house of the Philanthropic society. On the site of the Dog and Duck is erected a most noble hospital for lunatics, instead of the old building in Moorfields. Of the parishes adjacent to Southwark, Newington Butts lies contiguous to the parish of St. George, at the distance of about 4 miles from London bridge. Bermondsey parish is bounded on the west by St. John's, St. George's, and St. Oliver's, and by those of Deptford and Rotherhithe on the east. The present structure was erected in 1808. For a more particular account of Lambeth and Rotherhithe, see those parishes. Southwark still retains the privilege of sending members to parliament. The right of election is in the inhabitants paying rent and tax. Number of voters 2000. Population 85,000. For further information, see London.

SOUTHWALK, a village and parish of England, in Essex. Population 1835.

SOUTHWELL, a market town of England, in Nottingham, on the little river Great. It was formerly larger than it is at present. The church forms the most interesting object in the town, and has been long celebrated for its antiquity, and for the beauty and variety of its architecture. It consists of a nave, with two aisles, two towers at the west end, a transept, a choir with aisles, and a chapter-house. The extreme length from east to west is 306 feet, the width of the transept from north to south is 121 feet, and the breadth of the nave 50 feet. The archbishop of York had formerly a palace here. The ruins of it are still extensive, and being overshadowed with ivy, and embosomed among trees, they form a great ornament to the place. Another building in the town deserving of notice is the county bridewell, which is used as a prison for the various manors belonging to the archbishopric within the county. Population 5061, 14 miles N. E. Nottingham.

SOURA-WEST ISLES, seven small islands, dependent on the Banda Islands.

SOUTHWICK, a hamlet of England, adjoining to the city of Gloucester.—It, a village and parish in Southamptonshire. Pop. 711.

—Id. A township, 3 miles N. W. Sunderland. Pop. 1001.

SOUTHWICK, a small river of Scotland, which falls into the Solway frith.

SOUTHWOLD, a market town of England, in Suffolk, at the mouth of the river Blyth. The church is a very fine building, 148 feet in length, and 55 wide. It has a considerable trade in the herring and sprat fishery, and also in salt and old beer. Pop. 1070. 20 miles S. Yarmouth.

SOUTHWORTH, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1567.

SEVIGNY, a town of France, department of the Allier. Population 3700.

SEUZEL, a town of Portugal, in the province of Alentejo. Population 2000.

SEW, a tributary of the Trent, in Staffordshire.—Also a river in Warwickshire.

SEWTER, two townships of England, in Westmoreland and Yorkshire.

SEWZERT, a township of England, 4 miles W. S. W. Waffre. Population 690.

SEWZER CHURCH, a township of England, in Cumberland.

SEA, a town of the Netherlands, province of Liege, romantically situated on the banks of a rivulet. A number of its houses are of wood. Its streets, however, few in number, and built in the form of a cross, are wide and regular. The adjacent country being rugged and unproductive, Spa can boast of little else than its famous medicinal springs and baths. These waters were known to the Romans, and are mentioned by Pliny. They all spring from the adjacent hills, which are formed of calcareous earth, mixed with siliceous substances. They are all chalybeates. The effect of these waters is diuretic and exhilarating. Population 12000. 20 miles S. E. Liege.

SPACHENBERG, a town of Germany, 31 miles S. S. W. Strassburg. Population 2000.

SPAIN, a great country in the south-west of Europe, bounded by the Atlantic, the Mediterranean, Portugal, and France. It extends from Long. 9. 13. W. to 3. 15. E. and from Lat. 36. 0. to 43. 46. N. Its length from east to west (from the extreme point of Catalonia to that of Galicia) is 650 English miles; its greatest breadth from north to south 550. Its form, were Portugal added to it, would approach to a square. Spain is divided into a number of provinces, which formed as many separate governments under the Moors or under the Christian chieftains. The whole have been united under one head since the close of the 15th century; but the divisions, and even the titles (generally of kingdom, for what has become a province) were retained, and were attended with consequent discrepancies in the mode of administration. The following are the divisions, viz. New Castile, containing the provinces of Madrid, Guadalajara, Cuenca, Toledo, La Mancha; Old Castile—Aragon, Segovia, Soria, Burgos; Extremadura; Andalusia—Cordova, Jaen, Seville; Granada; settlements in Sierra Morena; Murcia; Arragon; Valencia; Catalonia; Balearic Isles—Majorca, Minorca, Ivisa and Formentera; Navarre; Biscay—Biscay proper, Guipuzcoa, Alava; Asturias; Leon—Leon, Palencia, Salamanca, Valladolid, Zamora, Toro; Galicia. At present the population may be computed at 12,000,000. No country in Europe, except Switzerland, possesses an equal extent of mountainous surface. The Pyrenees, forming its north-eastern barrier, are second only to the Alps, and are connected with, or rather continued by, the long Cantabrian chain, which extends throughout the north of Spain, parallel to the bay of Biscay, until it terminates in Cape Finisterre. Near the middle of this great range (about Long. 4. 13. W.) a secondary chain separates from it, and stretching to the southward, extends, in a long irregular line, all the way to Cabo-de-Gata, in the province of Granada. From this great range, called by some the Iberian mountains, there project four other chains; which extend from east to west till they reach the Atlantic. In each of the valleys formed by these mountains, flows one of the great rivers of Spain, to which the smaller streams are tributary. These are the Duero, the Tagus, the Guadiana, the Guadalquivir, and the Ebro. The interior of Spain (comprising part of Old and New Castile) forms an elevated tableland, containing several towns, at a height above the level of the sea not usual in the rest of Europe. Thus Madrid is 2800 feet above the sea, and St Ildefonso no less than 3000. No mountainous country is naturally rich in minerals; and the ironworks of Biscay, Arragon, and Asturias, have been of great note for several centuries. Precious stones are found on excavating particular spots; and there are indications of coal mines in various parts of Spain, though they are as yet wrought only in Asturias. Salt forms one of the chief products of Spain; it is procured by evaporating sea water, a process to which the climate of Spain is as favourable as that of Portugal and Sardinia. The agricultural products are wheat, maize, rice, barley, and oats. The Spanish hemp and flax are both of the best quality, and might, were their culture extended, be made the basis of very extensive manufactures. In the warm climate of Granada, coffee, cotton, sugar, and cocoa, are raised to an extent limited only by the want of capital. Vines are cultivated in every province; in the south-west, near Xeres, are made the well known sherry and tent wines; in the south and east, the Malaga and Alicante wines. The other fruits are olives, oranges, lemons, almonds, and in the warmest provinces, the pomegranate and the palm. Mules are in general use for travelling; and as to horses, the famed breed of Andalusia is considered as degenerating. If we except Catalonia, where both silks and cottons are made in large quantities, the only manufactures conducted with spirit in Spain are the twisting of silk, the tanning of leather, and the working of Sparto or Esparto grass (Spanish broom) into mats, baskets, shoes, and other articles. Bad roads, monopolies on the part of government, the enforcement of restrictive laws that ought long since to have been abrogated, are among the principal causes of the backward state of the productive industry of Spain. From the Baltic, the imports of Spain are corn and naval stores; from Greece, the coast of Africa, and the Kuxipe, they are in general confined to corn. The exports from Spain consist chiefly of wool, wine, brandy, fruit, olive oil, silk, salt, and barilla. All these, but in particular wool, salt, fruit, and wine, form exports to England. In return, the chief imports of Spain are woollen cloth, hardware, and cottons from England; linen from Germany and Ireland; woollens, jewellery, and paper, from France; and salt fish from England and Newfoundland. The annual value of exports from Spain, may be estimated at L. 2,000,000 or L. 2,000,000. The principal seaports are Cadix, Barcelona, Cartagena, Malaga, Alicante, Corunna, Bilbao, and St Sebastian. The Catholic was, till so lately as 1826, the only religion openly tolerated in Spain. The property of the church was one of the earliest objects of attack on the part of the revolutionists in 1809, and with reason; for the division of income was so unequal, that while several prelates, such as the archbishop of Valencia, had an income of L. 30,000 sterling, and the archbishop of Toledo three times as much, the lower clergy lived in a state of poverty. They were besides far too numerous; for while the prelates of Spain consisted of 4 archbishops and 41 bishops, the minor clergy were not short of 40,000, distributed throughout 18,571 parishes. In addition to these, 2000 monasteries contained nearly 50,000 monks; and 1075 convents, about 20,000 nuns. Part of these monasteries and convents were abolished in 1821, and the inmates allowed a small pension for life. The universities of Spain, formerly 24 in number, have been progressively reduced to 11; and of these, few are either well conducted or much frequented. Madrid has a public library of fully 100,000 volumes; and there are collections on a smaller scale in other cities; but as yet, at least, they are greatly deficient in good modern publications. The administration of justice in Spain, is in the hands of a gradation of judges, as in other countries, beginning with the alcaldes, officers corresponding to the justices of peace in Britain. Next, the corregidores and alcaldes mayores, a class whose jurisdiction is somewhat more comprehensive, and still limited to a district, and subject to review by the audiencias, or great courts, whose jurisdiction is extensive, and whose decisions can be reversed only in Madrid. These audiencias are established in a number of the principal towns, such as Seville, Granada, Valencia, Barcelona, Saragossa, Valladolid, Oviedo, Corunna, Caceres in Extremadura, and Palma in the island of Majorca; to which are to be added, the council of Navarre, and the council of Castile at Madrid, the latter forming, like the court of cassation in France, the final judicature, or court of appeal for the kingdom. Another peculiarity in the administration of justice in Spain, is the number of special courts, such as those for church affairs, for military, naval, mercantile, or even medical questions, all founded on a proper principle, but suspected, from their imperfect constitution, of partiality to the particular class, at the expense of the public. A more substantial ground of complaint lies in the great distance to which, in this thinly peopled country, a person was often obliged to travel, before reaching a competent court. The military establishments of Spain were entirely new modelled by the revolution that took place in 1808; and since the constitution established at that time has been put down by the French, her whole system, both civil and military, has been disorganised, so that no account of the state of her armies can be given. The country is divided into eleven military governments, viz. Madrid, Old Castile, Aragon, Catalonia, Valencia, Murcia, Navarre, Guipuzcoa, Andalusia, Galicia, and Extremadura. Each of these had, before the late revolution, a governor or captain-general, and each is divided into several smaller governments. The Spanish navy suffered severely from the war with England, begun in 1796; and has never since recovered any degree of respectability. The chief naval stations are Cadix, Ferrol, and Oporto. The revenue of Spain arises chiefly from taxes, but in some measure also from the royal domains, and from the crown and chantry dues. The taxes consist, as in the other countries of Europe, of the customs, the excise, the post-offices, and the government monopolies, the chief of which are salt, tobacco, lead, gunpowder, and cards. Among the principal imports is a tax of two per cent. on Spanish, and three times as much on foreign articles, whenever they change hands. Among the farther taxes are the millones, or impost on hearths and spirituous liquors, at first a free gift, but perpetuated by royal edict; and the crusade, arising from the sale of indulgences to eat meat on certain fast days, a tax of no slender amount in so bigotted a country. The government of Spain was long a limited monarchy, the people being represented by their Cortes. But after the union in the 16th century of the different provinces into one kingdom, the concentration of power in the executive branch enabled the latter to dispense with the Cortes, and to encroach on the privileges of the provinces; so that, on the accession of the house of Bourbon in 1700, there remained hardly any vestige of independence, except in Biscay. In Spain, as in Germany, there prevails a great deal of aristocratic pride, and a scrupulous distinction of classes. The nobility bear, as in Britain, the titles of Duke, marquis, or count, and are styled collectively, titulos. The gentry are called hidalgos, a term applied to all who are of genteel birth, or whose designations, such as doctor in law, or doctor in medicine, distinguish them from the mass of agriculturists, merchants, and manufacturers. Spain was first known to the Phœnicians, subsequently to the Carthaginians, and in the third century, before the birth of Christ, to the Romans. It was completely subdued under Augustus, after which it enjoyed tranquillity for nearly 400 years. This state of peace was disturbed by the irruption of the northern barbarians, the Suevi, the Vandals, and the Alani. Christianity was introduced into Spain about the end of the 5th century. The invasion of the Moors took place about the year 711. They overran the whole country except the Asturias. They were finally expelled from Spain in the year 1492. Under Charles V. Spain made a great figure in the general affairs of Europe. Charles reigned forty years, and resigned the crown in 1556, to his son Philip II., who died in 1598, and bequeathed to his successor Philip III. Belgium, Naples, Sicily, and Portugal. Charles II. the last prince of the Austrian branch, reigned from 1686 to 1700, after which began the well known war for the succession to the Spanish dominions, in which the claim of Austria was supported by the grand alliance against Louis XIV.; however, notwithstanding the opposition of the allies, the grandson of Louis XIV. reigned in Spain, relinquishing the Belgic provinces to the house of Austria. Philip V. the first king of the French line, had a long and turbulent reign. After him, Ferdinand VI. a prudent prince, introduced various reforms, and maintained peace, but dying in 1759, his son Charles III. went to war with Great Britain. Peace ensued in 1763, and continuing ed till 1778, when Spain, at first neutral in the contest of Britain with her North American colonies, was prevailed on to take up arms against her, and obtained, at the peace of 1783, the Floridas and the island of Minorca. Charles IV. the late king, succeeded to the crown in 1788, became soon after a party to the coalition against republican France; but was, after Prussia, the first of the great powers to conclude a treaty of peace in 1793; and in little more than a year, the cabinet of Spain joined its late opponent, and declared war against Britain. The abdication of the royal family of Spain, took place at Bayonne in May 1808. It was followed, as is well known, by the general resistance of the inhabitants, by the invasion of Spain under Bonaparte, and by the subsequent expulsion of the French by the troops of Great Britain, combined with those of Portugal and Spain. The dissatisfaction and indignation excited by the tyrannical proceedings of Ferdinand, led, in the beginning of 1820, to a revolution of great importance, by which the constitution of the Cortes, as established in 1812, was restored, and such salutary restraints established on the power of the crown, as seemed best calculated for securing the rights of the people. In 1823 Spain was again invaded by French troops, under the Duke d'Angoulême, whose object was to put down the new government, and to restore Ferdinand to absolute power. They penetrated the country without resistance; and having laid siege to Cadix, the king was surrendered to them, and afterwards the town; and they are now proceeding to re-establish the despotic government of Ferdinand.

SPAILLA, a town of Tunis, the ancient Suffala, distinguished by its magnificent remains of ancient architecture. 110 miles S.W. Tunis. Long. 6. 10. E. Lat. 35. 10. N.

SPALATRO, a seaport of Austrian Dalmatia, on the gulf of Venice. It stands on a peninsula, in the form of a semicircle, connected with the mainland by a narrow isthmus, and has a harbour spacious and deep. It has manufactures of woollens, silk, and leather. The fishery on the Adriatic is considerable, as well as the shipping business. Spalatro contains several splendid Roman edifices. Pop. 7800. 110 miles N.W. Ragusa.

SPALDING, an ancient and neat market town of England, in Lincolnshire, on the Welland, which runs through the town; and having numerous drains in its vicinity, it has been compared to a Dutch town. The church is a large and ancient building, with a handsome spire, having crockets at the angles. There are five chapels for dissenters. Spalding has a theatre, an excellent jail, also a free grammar school, besides others. The market is very spacious and commodious. At the north-west end of the market place is the town-hall or court-house. Spalding has a considerable traffic in coals and corn. Wool runs a principal article of trade. Population 5307. 100 miles N. London.

SPANDAU, a fortified town of Prussia, in the Middle Mark of Brandenburg, at the confluence of the Havel and the Spree. It has a large work-house, and a manufactory for government accounts, of arms. The citadel stands outside of the town. Population 5000. 11 miles N. N.E. Potsdam.

SPANISH MAIN, that part of the Atlantic ocean which washes the north part of South America, from the Leeward Islands to the Isthmus of Darien.

SPANISH TOWN, or ST JAGO DE LA VEGA, a seaport of Jamaica, capital of the island, and residence of a governor or commander-in-chief. It is situated on the river Cobre, about 6 miles from the sea. Population 5000. Long. 78. 44. W. Lat. 18. 1. N.

SPARTANBURG, a district of the United States, in the north part of South Carolina. Population 14,259, including 2391 slaves—2d, The capital of the above district.

SPASK, a town of European Russia, government of Tambov. Population 3000.

SPAXW, a village and parish of England, in Berkshire. Population 2392.

SPICER'S TOWN, a seaport of the island of Barbadoes, on the west coast. It is a handsome town, containing about 350 well built houses. The trade is now mostly removed to Bridge Town. It has a spacious church, dedicated to St Peter. The town is defended by two forts, besides another in Heathcote's Bay. Long. 63. 31. W. Lat. 13. 14. N.

SPKIZETOWN, a village of the United States, in Rensselaer county, New York.

SPENCER, a post township of the United States, 51 miles W. S. W. Boston. Population 1453.—2d, The capital of Tioga county, New York. Population 3128.

SPENCERTOWN, a village of the United States, in Columbia county, New York.

SPRY, a large and rapid river of Scotland, in Inverness-shire, which has its rise from Loch Spry, and falls into the sea, about 8 miles E. Elgin.

SPRUA, GUAF OR, the ancient Portus Luce, a bay of the Mediterranean, in the eastern part of the Genoese territory.

SPRUA, or SPRACIA, a town of the Sardinian states, 60 miles E. E. Genoa. Pop. 4000.

SPRUA, a small island of Greece, in the gulf of Napoli; about 100 miles from Napoli di Romania, 6 miles long and 3 broad.

SPRY, a river of Scotland, in Inverness-shire, which joins the Lochy.

SPRY, an island town of the Sardinian states, 60 miles N. W. Novi. Pop. 2300.

SPRY, a market town of England, Lincolnshire. It consists mostly of four streets, uniting at the market place. The town-hall is a plain brick building. The parish church is an irregular building, consisting of north and south aisles. Population 1234. 31 miles E. Lincoln.

SPRYBRO, a large lake of East Prussia, 75 miles E. E. Königsberg, 60 miles in circuit.

SPRY, an ancient town of Germany, at the confluence of the Spirebach and the Rhine. The only interesting building is the old cathedral, now falling into decay. Spire was frequently the seat of the German diet. Pop. 4000. 14 miles S. Mannheim.

SPIREBACH, a small river of the Bavarian circle of the Rhine, near Spire.

SPIRITU SANTO, a town of Brazil, in South America. Long. 41. W. Lat. 30. 10. S.

SPIRITS BAKTO Islands, or ANDROES, a chain of islands, E. W. of the Bahamas.

SPIVAL, a small town of Austrian Illyria, in Upper Carinthia, 20 miles N. W. Villach.

SPITHEAD, a noted roadstead for shipping in the English channel, situated between Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight, directly facing Portsmouth harbour. It is about 20 miles in extent, and is said to be capable of holding 1000 vessels in great security.

SPITZER and SPITZKESSER, two hamlets of England, in Cheshire and Lincolnshire.

SPITZBERGEN, or EAST GREENLAND, a group of islands in the Northern ocean, formerly supposed to make part of the continent, and distinguished by the name of East Greenland. They are situated between 70. 45. and 80. 30. N. lat. and between 2. and 30. E. long. The sea in the neighbourhood of Spitzbergen abounding in whales, this country has been long the common resort of the whale fishing ships from different countries. It was explored in 1773, by Captain Phipps.

SPOLTO, a town of the Ecclesiastical States, the capital of a duchy of the same name, on a hill, near the small river Mareggia. The buildings commonly noticed by travellers, are the cathedral and the castle, the former presenting a front of five Gothic arches, supported by Gothic pillars. The castle is a vast stone building, surrounded with a rampart. The only manufacture of this place is of hats. Pop. between 6000 and 7000. 35 miles N. N. E. Rome.

SPOTLAND, an extensive township of England, in Lancashire. Population 15,453.

SPOTSWOOD, a village of the United States, in Middlesex county, New Jersey. It has an Episcopal church. Houses 25.

SPOTSWYLDIA, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 15,200, including 7125 slaves.

SPOTT, a parish and village of Scotland, in East Lothian. Population 322.

SPREMA, a village of the Netherlands, in South Holland. Population 1108.

SREBAN, ESBAN, a village of the United States, in Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

SPRE, a navigable river of the Prussian states, which rises in Upper Loosia, and joins the Havel at Spandau.

SPREHNO, a town of Lower Loosia, on an island in the Sprea. Population 1700.

SPRE, a village of Saxony, on the Sprea, 30 miles E. Dresden. Population 1000.

SPRING, a town of Hanover, 14 miles S. W. Hanover. Population 1400.

SPRINGFIELD, a village of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, begun in 1773. In 1783 it consisted of 40 houses; and has since greatly increased.

SPRINGFIELD, a post township and village of the United States, and capital of Hampden county, Massachusetts, on the Connecticut. The village has considerable trade. There is here a very extensive establishment for the manufacture of arms. Population 5707. 80 miles W. by S. Boston.—2d, a post township of Hampden county, Massachusetts. Population 4199.—3d, Of Otsego county, New York. Population 1544.—4th, Of Essex county, New Jersey. Population 2362.—5th, Of Burlington county, New Jersey. Pop. 1600.—6th, Of Hamilton county, Ohio. Pop. 2034.—The name also of various other townships and post villages.

SPROG, or SPROCK, a small island of Denmark, between Funen and Zealand.

SPROCK and SPROCKBOUGH, two townships of England, in Cheshire and Yorkshire.

SPROTTA, a small river of Silesia, which falls into the Bober.

SPROTtau, a town of Prussian Silesia, 71 miles W. N. W. Breslau. Pop. 2500.

SPUILLACE, a small town of Italy, kingdom of Naples, 35 miles S. W. St. Severino.

STABLO, a town of the Netherlands, province of Liege. Population 2000.

STABROEK, a town of the Netherlands, 7 miles N. N. W. Antwerp. Population 1000.

STABROEK, a town of Dutch Guiana, on the Demerara river, about a mile from the sea. This town consists of wooden houses, seldom above two stories high, and on low brick foundations, roofed with a sort of red wood. The town has an oblong form, being about one-fourth of a mile broad and one mile long. There is a navigable canal on each side of the town, which fills and empties with the tide, and which becomes at times highly offensive, from being the receptacle of all the filth of the town, and thus tends to generate disease. There is a market-place, where the negroes assemble to sell their fruit, vegetables, fowls, eggs, and where the bucksters expose for sale articles of European manufacture. The public buildings in the town are the governor's house, and a range of offices for conducting public business. There is also the public jail, for the confinement of criminals, debtors, and runaway or arrested negroes. Population 1000 whites, 2000 free people of colour, and 6000 negroes.

STACHEOUR, a village of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

STAD, a village of Switzerland, canton of St. Gall, 20 miles E. S. E. Constantine.

STAND, a town of Germany, in Hanover, on the Schfwige. It has several good buildings, such as the council-house, merchant's hall, and gymnasium. It has two churches. Pop. 1800. 22 miles W. by N. Hamburg.

STANAN, a town of the Netherlands, 20 miles N. N. E. Ypres. Population 3200.

STANBRUNN, a town of Prussian Westphalia, on the Dymel, 19 miles S. Paderborn. Population 2300.

STADTHAGEN, a town of Westphalia, on the Dymel, 8 miles E. Minden. Pop. 1500.

STAFFA, a small island of the Hebrides, celebrated for its basaltic pillars, and for its remarkable natural caverns. It lies about 3 leagues west of the island of Mull, and 3 leagues from Lochm-kill. It is of an irregularly oval-shape, and about a mile and a half in circumference, presenting an uneven and sterile land, terminating nearly all round in cliffs of variable height. The cave of Fingal, which fronts the south-west, is celebrated by all travellers who have visited it, in terms of unbounded admiration. "The mind can hardly form an idea (says Sir Joseph Banks) more magnificent than such a space, supported on each side by ranges of columns, and roofed by the bottoms of those which have been broken off to form it. The outline of the aperture of this cave is perpendicular at the sides, and terminates above in a species of Gothic arch. The height from the top of the cliff to the top of the arch is 30 feet, and from the latter to the surface of the water at mean tide, 66 feet. On the western side the pillars which bound it are 36 feet high, while at the eastern they are only 18. The breadth at the entrance is 42 feet, as nearly as it is possible to ascertain it. The height of the cave within diminishes very soon to a mean measure, varying from 60 to 44 feet. The length is 227 feet. There are other caves, namely, Mackinnon's, or the Scart or Cormorant's cave, and the Boat cave.

STAFFORD, COUNTY or, an inland county of England, nearly in the centre of the kingdom, bounded N. by Cheshire and part of Derbyshire, E. by Derbyshire and Warwickshire, and between these for a short way also by Leicestershire, S. by Worcestershire, and W. by Shropshire and Cheshire. Its figure is an oblong or oval, much elongated, and stretching from north to south. Its extreme length is 60 miles; the greatest breadth from east to west 24 miles, and the average breadth from 18 to 20. It contains 1106 square miles, or 728,000 acres, with 284 inhabitants to each mile. It is divided into five hundreds, and 183 parishes, in which are the city, Lichfield; three boroughs, Stafford, Newcastle, and Tutnworth; and 17 other market towns, viz. Abbot's Bromley, Brewood, Burton, Burslem, Chesle, Eccleshall, Hanley, Lang Kind, Leek, Longton, Penkridge, Rugeley, Stone, Uttoxeter, Walsall, Wednesbury, and Wolverhampton. It sends ten members to parliament; two for the county, two for Lichfield, and two for each of the three boroughs. The aspect of Staffordshire is various; a range of hills runs along the north-western border, spreading out towards the north, over the whole breadth of the county. In this bleak and sterile district, in the north and north-west, the other parts of the county, in the south, middle, and east, present a striking contrast, being generally level, or only interspersed with gentle eminences. The rivers of Staffordshire rise mostly in these high grounds within the county. The chief are the Trent, with its tributaries; the Dove, the Manifold, and the Hamps or Huna, the Churnet, the Blithe, the Teyn, the Sow, the Pent, and the Tame. The Stour and Smeaton run southwards into the Severn. The climate of this county inclines to wet; the soil is various. The arable soils may in general be divided into, 1st, the stiff and strong clayey; 2d, the loose and light sandy; 3d, although the county has no chalk, yet in the limestone districts, lime, earth, or calcareous soil; and 4th, the mixed or composted soil or loam. Mr Pitt estimates the whole cultivated land of the county at 600,000 acres, of which 100,000 are meadow and pasture, and the rest arable. Of this arable there are 200,000 acres of clay loam, or friable mixed loam; 200,000 acres of gravelly and sandy loams; or other mixed, including calcareous soils; and 100,000 acres of light, sandy, gravelly, or other soils, tolerably adapted for turnip. Of the uncultivated lands, to the amount of 180,000 acres, there are 30,040 of roads, rivers, canals, &c. and 141,760 of waste lands, forests, woods, &c. of which 100,000 acres may be set down as irreclaimable. Staffordshire is not very remarkable for its agriculture, the industry and resources of the county being more directed to mines and manufactures. The field produce commonly cultivated is wheat, rye, barley, oats, beans, peas, vetches, buck-wheat, hemp, flax, turnips, potatoes, cab-bages, rape; to these may be added clovers, trevills, and two or three of the real grasses. The minerals of Staffordshire form the most important branch of its produce, and the sources and integrals of the trade, and of the various manufactures for which this county is so distinguished. Coal, iron, and limestone, are the most important and the most extensively distributed. Besides iron, both copper and lead ores exist in this county. In some places the limestone approaches to, and passes into, marble. The marble is of various kinds. Alabaster, which is a sulphate of lime, occurs in great abundance. Freestone of very good quality occurs in this county, and there are extensive quarries of it in different places. Clays of every description are abundant in this county, and form the principal material of the potteries. The various kinds of Staffordshire are various and extensive. Besides the blue sandries, black, freestone, and slitting soils, and other branches of the iron trade, which, especially in the southern districts, employ great numbers of people, they possess a variety of potteries, ware, glass, and stone-ware, which, china, soap, and painted goods. The pottery of Staffordshire have acquired the most extensive celebrity, from their vast extent, and more particularly from their perfection, and from the great improvements which were introduced into the manufacture by the inventive genius and indefatigable labours of Wedgwood. The potteries are concentrated in a district near the town of Newcastle-under-Lyme, which, though naturally barren, this manufacture has filled with population and wealth. From the natural advantages arising from the great abundance of the material, the pottery business was early begun here, and the existence of some kind of earthen-ware manufactory can be traced at least two centuries back. It was about the year 1700 that Mr Wedgwood began his famous improvements, and produced those different kinds of ware which are now in universal demand; and being fashioned by the industry and ingenuity of the manufacturers, into an infinite variety of forms, both for ornament and use, constitute nearly the whole of the present fine English earthen-ware and porcelain, which are become the source of a most extensive trade, and may, without doubt, be ranked among the most important manufactures of the united kingdom. The manufacture of glass is most considerable in the vicinity of Stourbridge, where a variety of very lofty and spacious glass-houses have been erected. Wolverhampton, and the many populous villages in its neighbourhood, are distinguished for their manufacture of locks, buckles, steel-boys, and particularly watch-chains; Wallall and its neighbourhood for shoe-buckles and clasps. Vast quantities of nails are also made in many of the country parishes. Wolverhampton and Bilston produce a variety of plated, lacquered, japanned, and also some enamelled goods. There are also manufactures of tobacco and snuff-boxes, shoes, and hats. Tin and brass are among the productions in Staffordshire; and there are several smelting and brass-works near the copper mines. The cotton manufactures are very considerable; and there is a manufacture of salt, obtained by boiling brine. The silk trade is carried on to a considerable extent; also the tape manufacture. The trade and manufactures of the county have been greatly advanced by the extensive system of inland navigation, which at once connects this country not only with the metropolis, but with the Severn, the Mersey, and the Humber, and the three corresponding ports of Bristol, Liverpool, and Hull. Pop. 341,000.

STAFFORD, a market town and borough of England, chief town of Staffordshire, on the Soar, about three miles from its junction with the Trent. The town is of an irregular oval figure. The houses are mostly built of brick. It contains two churches, St Mary's and St Chad's. The former is a spacious building, in the form of a cross. It consists of a nave, two side aisles, a transept, and a chancel of three aisles, with an octagonal tower in the centre, which contains a peal of eight musical bells. St Chad's church is a very ancient building. Stafford contains, besides, places of worship for Independents, Presbyterians, Methodists, and Quakers. The other public buildings are the county-hall, a spacious and neat modern building; and the assembly-room; the county infirmary; the county jail; a county lunatic asylum on a very extensive scale; and a free school. Behind the county-hall is a convenient market-place. Previous to the dissolution, Stafford contained a variety of monastic institutions. Its chief trade consists in the manufacture of boots and shoes. There is also a considerable business carried on in tanning. The borough sends two members to parliament: number of voters, 500. The earliest authentic mention of Stafford is in the Saxon Chronicle A. D. 913. Pop. 8730. 16 miles N. W. Lichfield.

STAFFORD, a post township of the United States, Connecticut. Population 2335.

STAFFORD, a county of the United States, in the N. E. part of Virginia. Pop. 9030.

STAFFORD, a post village of the United States, in Stafford county, Virginia.

STAFFSIO, a village of Sweden, in Suder-mania, near Nykloping.

STAGIRA, a small town of European Turkey, in Macedonia, 46 miles E. S. E. Salonica.

STAGOUR, an inland town of European Turkey, in Albania. Population 4000.

STAGSHAW, a small hamlet of England, in Northumberland.

STAINDROP, a township of England, in Durham. Population 1374.

STAINES, a market town of England, in Middlesex, on the Thames, over which there is a strong timber bridge. Of late years the town has been greatly improved. The church consists of a chancel, nave, and north aisle. Here are, besides, meeting-houses for the Quakers, Anabaptists, and Methodists. Pop. 1957. 16 miles from Hyde Park corner.

STAINESBY, a village of England, North Riding of Yorkshire, on the Tees.

STAINFIELD, a hamlet of England, in Lancashire, 34 miles N. W. Bourne.

STAINFORTH, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 694—2d, in the West Riding of Yorkshire.

STAINTHORPE, a hamlet of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

STAINLAND, a township of England, 44 miles S. by W. Halifax. Pop. 9814.

STAINLEY, North and South, two townships of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

STAINMORE, a township of England, Westmoreland. Population 610.

STAIRTON, two hamlets of England, in Durham and Cumberland.

STALTON, the name of six townships of England; one in Derbyshire, two in Cumberland, and one in Durham, Westmoreland, and North Riding of Yorkshire.

STALTON DALE, a township of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

STALWORTH, a market town of England, in Dorsetshire. It has a manufacture of stockings. Here is a large ancient church and a charity school. Population 287. 113 miles W. S. W. London.

STALLPOWEN, a town of East Prussia, 40 miles S. E. Elgig. Population 2340.

STALWYNE, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 507.

STAMFORD, an ancient and considerable market and borough town of England, in Lincolnshire, on the Willand, at the south-western angle of the county, on the borders of Rutlandshire and Northamptonshire. One of its parishes is in Northamptonshire, but the greater part of the town is built on the slope of a hill, on the Lincoln side of the river. St Michael's church, near the centre of the town, consists of a nave and choir, with north and south aisles, and chancels extending beyond the aisles. St George's church is a plain building, consisting of a chancel, a nave, north and south aisles, with a rectangular embattled tower at the west end. All Saints church is a large and well proportioned building, consisting of a nave, two aisles, and chancels. At the west end of the north aisle rises the steeple, a lofty and handsome structure. St John's church consists of a nave and two aisles. St Martin's church consists of a nave, two chancels and aisles, and a square pinnacled tower. Stamford formerly contained several monastic establishments, and is related by tradition to have been at one time the seat of a university. It has various schools. The charitable foundations are numerous. The other public buildings are, the town-hall, a small theatre, and a spacious assembly-room. It returns 2 members to parliament. Number of voters 600. Stamford is of great antiquity. It was a place of note in the time of the Danes and the Saxons. Pop. 5050. 48 miles S. E. Lincoln.

STAMFORD, a village and hamlet of England, in Bedfordshire and Northumberland.

STAMFORD, a township of the United States, in Delaware county, New York. Pop. 1654.

STAMFORD-BARROW, East and West, two adjoining hamlets of England, East Riding of Yorkshire.

STAMFORD-HILL, a small but improving village of England, in Middlesex.

STANCO, a small island in the Grecian archipelago, the ancient Cos, about 70 miles in circuit. Long. 34. 56. E. Lat. 38. 46. N.

STANDOROUGH, a village of England, in Huntingdonshire. Population 525.

STANDON, a market town and parish of England, in Hertford. Standon church contains many monuments and sepulchral memorials. Pop. 2135. 36 miles N. E. London.

STANFORD, a village and parish of England, in Worcester. Population 194.

STANFORD, a post township of the United States, and capital of Lincoln county, Kentucky. It has a court-house and jail. Pop. 100. 49 miles S. W. Lexington. 53. In Duches county, New York. Pop. 502.

STANFORD, a township of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

STANFORD, two villages of England, in Lancashire and Norfolk.

STANISLAWOW, a town of Austrian Poland, and capital of a circle of the same name. It has a Catholic and an Armenian church. It has also a considerable trade. Pop. 6250. 172 miles N. W. Jassy.

STANKITS, a town of Moravia, 21 miles E. S. E. Brunn. Population 1500.

STANLEY, a village of Scotland, Perthshire.

STANLEY, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 6330. 3d. A hamlet of England, in Wiltshire, 2 miles E. by S. Chippenham.

STANLEY-TOWN, a town of Pennsylvania, in the Allegheny mountains. Houses 50.

STANMORE, Great and Little, a village and two parishes of England, in Middlesex.

The village consists chiefly of houses erected on the sides of the great road from London to St Albans. Pop. 1702. 10 miles N. W. London.

STANTON, a hamlet of England, in Derbyshire. Population 710. 2d. Four townships of England, in Derbyshire, Northumberland, Staffordshire, and Leicestershire. Also two hamlets, in Dorsetshire and Lancashire.

There are a number of small parishes in England of the same name.

STANTON HARCOURT, a village and parish of England, in Oxford, on the Thames. Population 606.

STANTON HILL, a post village of the United States, in Charlotte county, Virginia. Also of Newcomb county, North Carolina.

STANTZ, a well built town of Switzerland, 43 miles E. Bern. Population 2100.

STANWICK, a small village of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

STANWICH, or STANWICK, a village and parish of England, in Cumberland. Population of the village, 1692.

STATION, a village of the Netherlands, province of Overysel. Population 2600.

STATIONBURST, a village and parish of England, in Kent. Population 1613.

STATIONTON, three hamlets of England, one in Leicestershire, and two in Yorkshire. Also a village in Herefordshire.

STATH, a village of Scotland, in Fifeshire, containing about 200 inhabitants.

STARAJA RUSSIA, a town of European Russia, 137 miles S. by E. Petersburg. Pop. 5300.

STARASOW, a town of Austrian Poland. Population 2500.

STATHOS, a village of England, in Derbyshire, 14 miles W. Loughborough.

STAREAN, a town of Roumania, on the Danube, which falls into the Black Sea. It contains, in a small scale, manufactures of wallens, soap, and tobacco; also breweries and distilleries. Pop. 2500. 21 miles E. by S. Galatz.

STARISMAN, a town of West Prussia, on the Vistula, 21 miles N. W. Danzig. Pop. 2000.

STARITSA, a town of European Russia, on the Volga. Population 2100.

STARKE, a village of the United States, in the west part of Ohio. Population 544.

STAROSARNOVO, one of the three large provinces of which the grand duchy of Hesse-Darmstadt is composed, between the Rhine and the Main.

STASOWA, a town of European Russia, government of Caucasiogov. Pop. 4000.

START PARVA, a town on the south-east coast of the county of Devon, in England.

STATEN ISLAND, an island of the United States, which forms Richmond county, state of New York. It is 16 miles long and 3 broad. Population 3347.

STAVANGER, a walled town of Norway, on the coast. Pop. 3000. 35 miles N. W. Christiania.

STAVELY, a town of the Netherlands, in West Flanders. Population 1000.

STAVENBERG, a town of the Netherlands, in Friesland, on the Zuyder-Zee. Pop. 1100.

STAVROPOLE, a port town of the United States, and capital of Augusta county, Virginia. It has two court-houses, a jail, and three churches. Population 1500. 130 miles W. N. W. Richmond.

STAYNTON, a principal branch of the Potomac, Virginia, in the United States.

STAYNOPOLE, a town of European Russia, on the Volga, government of Simbirsk. Pop. 2400.

STEENKOPPE, a fortified town of the Netherlands, in North Brabant, 19 miles W. Breda. Population 4200.

STEENKOPPE, a town of the Netherlands, province of Gelderland. Pop. 2000.

STEENKOPPE, a town of the Netherlands, province of Hainault, noted for the defeat of the allies by the French, on 24th July 1692. Population 700. 13 miles N. Africa.

STEENKOPPE, a town in French Flanders, 22 miles N. W. Lille. Population 3200.

STEENKOPPE, a town of the Netherlands, province of Overysel. Population 1800.

STEENKOPPE, a small rocky island of England, in the Bristol channel.

STEFANO, St., a small town of the island of Italy, on the northern coast of the Val di Demona. Population 3000.

STEFANO, St., a town of the Confederated German states, 14 miles E. S. E. Albs. Population 1900.

STEFANO, St., a town in the south of Naples. Population 1200.

STEIN, a town of Switzerland, 12 miles W. Constance. Population 1800.

STEIN, a town of the United States, in the Gulf of Mexico, S. E. Texas. Pop. 1000.

STEIN, a town of the United States, in the west of Canada.

STEIN, a town of Prussian Pomerania, the Oder, 14 miles N. W. Berlin. Pop. 2000.

STEIN, a town of Prussian Pomerania, in Hinterpommern, 14 miles N. E. Berlin. Pop. 2100.

STEIN, a town of the Prussian Pomerania, 14 miles N. E. Berlin. Pop. 1000.

STEIN, a town of the Prussian Pomerania, 14 miles N. E. Berlin. Pop. 1000.

STEIN, a town of the Prussian Pomerania, 14 miles N. E. Berlin. Pop. 1000.

STEIN, a town of the Prussian Pomerania, 14 miles N. E. Berlin. Pop. 1000.

STEIN, a town of the Prussian Pomerania, 14 miles N. E. Berlin. Pop. 1000.

STEIN, a town of the Prussian Pomerania, 14 miles N. E. Berlin. Pop. 1000.

STEIN, a town of the Prussian Pomerania, 14 miles N. E. Berlin. Pop. 1000.

STEIN, a town of the Prussian Pomerania, 14 miles N. E. Berlin. Pop. 1000.

STEIN, a town of the Prussian Pomerania, 14 miles N. E. Berlin. Pop. 1000.

STEINBOCK, a village 20 miles to the east of Cape Town, at the foot of a range of lofty mountains, near the Cape of Good Hope. It contains 70 habitations.

STEIN, a town of France, on the Meuse. Population 2000.

STEIN, a town of the Prussian states, on the Oder, 14 miles N. W. Berlin. Pop. 2000.

STEIN, a small island of Shetland, on the north-west of the Mainland.

STEIN, a town of European Russia, in Volhynia. Population 3700.

STEIN, a river of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEIN, a town of the north of Germany, which joins the Trave.

STEUBENVILLE, a flourishing and regularly built post town of the United States, and capital of Jefferson county, Ohio, on the Ohio. It had in 1817, 453 houses, 3 churches, an academy, 2 banks, and manufactures of woollens, cotton, &c. Its progress has been uncommonly rapid. In 1816, there were scarcely any houses where this town now stands. Pop. in 1816, 1800; in 1817, 2034. 60 miles by the river, below Pittsburg.

STEVENAGE, a village of England, formerly a market town, in Hertfordshire, 13½ miles N. Hertford. Population, 1694.

STEVENSTON, a village and parish of Scotland, in Ayrshire, 5 miles W. by N. Irvine. Population of parish 3564.

STEWART, a county of the United States, West Tennessee. Population 4262, including 778 slaves.

STEWARTOWN, a thriving town of Scotland, on the Annock water, Ayrshire, 4 miles N. by W. Edinburgh.

STEWARTSTOWN, a neat little village of Ireland, in the county of Tyrone.

STEWY, a neat town of Upper Austria, at the confluence of the rivers Steyer and Enns. It has manufactures of cottons and woollens, but chiefly of iron, which are said to give employment to above 12,000 men, in the town and neighbourhood. Population 10,000. 92 miles W. by S. Vienna.

STEWY, a river of Upper Austria, which falls into the Danube.

STEWYNG, a market town and borough of England, in Sussex, near the Adur. The church, of which the nave only remains, is a building of great antiquity, and contains some very curious specimens of early Norman architecture. It has also a free grammar school. It sends two members to parliament: number of voters 10. Population 1324. 61 miles S. by W. London.

STINN and STINNOR, two hamlets of England, in Lancashire and Gloucestershire.

STIRLING, a town of Russia, province of Bashkirta. Population 8000.

STIRLING, a river of the United States, in Ohio, which joins the Great Miami.

STIRLO, a town of the kingdom of Naples, 22 miles S. E. Mileto. Population 720.

STIRTON, a village and parish of England, in Huntingdonshire, chiefly noted for its excellent cheese. Population 710.

STIRTON, a river of Scotland, in Ayrshire, which falls into the sea at Bannock.

STIRTS, a county of Scotland, bounded N. by Perth and Clackmannan shires, E. by the firth of Forth and Edinburgh shires, S. and W. by the shires of Lanark and Dunbarton, lying between 55. 04. and 55. 17. N. latitude, and between 3. 17. and 3. 41. W. longitude from Greenwich, being from 12 to 17 miles from north to south, and 25 from east to west, consisting of about 600 square miles, or 137,200 English acres. It is diversified with mountains, hills, and plains, shaded with natural woods and plantations, the former covering about 48,000 and the latter 10,000 acres. An extensive plain, 40 miles in length, stretches from the water of Avon towards the north-west, terminated by the mountain of Benlomond, and intersected by the Forth, which includes the carse or valleys of Stirling and Falkirk, and contains the greatest quantity of fine land to be found in the kingdom, producing the most luxuriant crops. The central and southern districts are partly mountainous, and partly level and fertile. The principal rivers are the Forth; the Carron; the Bannockburn, which falls into the Forth; the Forth, the Blane, and the Kelvin. The navigable canal which respects the firth of Forth with the Clyde, is partly in this county. There are few districts in Scotland that abound more in minerals of various kinds than this county; and the abundance of coal in particular has given rise to many important branches of manufacture. There is also in the county abundance of freestone, firestone, and limestone; and more valuable minerals have been discovered, and in part wrought, as silver, copper, cobalt, and lead. In the hills between Dumbarton and Stirling, are piles of basaltic rocks. Stirlingshire is a noted scene of the most important historical events. In the early ages it was a subject of bloody contention between the Scots and Picts. Near Bannockburn was fought the eventful battle between Robert Bruce and Edward III. The castle of Stirling has frequently sustained the longest sieges recorded in the Scotch annals. Stirlingshire contains one royal burgh, viz. Stirling, the towns of Falkirk and St. Mirren, and several large villages. Pop. 65,376.

STIRLING, an ancient town, capital of the above county, and irregularly built, in the midst of a plain watered by the Forth, on the sloping ridge of a rock, the precipitous and of which, towards the north, is occupied by the castle. The street on the summit of the hill is broad and spacious, but the other streets are narrow and irregular. Considerable improvements, however, have been made within the last 20 years, on the general appearance of the place. There is a large church, called from its situation, the High Church, which is a very fine building, erected by the Cardinal Beaton. The latter is a structure of much older date, and is a specimen of what is called the Gothic. The cathedral has been destroyed in any part of its walls, so that there is little room for doubt, but that it was the church of the monastery of Dunblane, which was founded near to the walls of Stirling, by Alexander II. in the twelfth century. The church has been almost repaired. There are three hospitals, one for the support of poor tradesmen; another, founded in 1635, for 12 decayed and infirm men; and a third for the maintenance and education of the children of decayed tradesmen. The other public buildings are, the town-house, a new jail upon an approved plan, a spacious and elegant hall for the circuit and sheriff courts, and a new and elegant are the chief exports. The manufactures of Stockholm, without being on a large scale, are diversified, comprising iron foundries, glass works, sugar refineries; also leather, cotton, hats, stockings, silk, watches, clocks, mathematical instruments, articles of gold and silver. Stockholm appears to have been founded in the 13th century, and to have owed its gradual increase to the commercial advantages of its situation. Population 80,000. 330 miles N. E. Copenhagen, 420 W. St Petersburg, and 830 N. E. London. Long. of the observatory, 18. 3. 50 E. Lat. 59. 20. 51, N.

STOCKHOLM, an extensive province of Sweden, which comprises the eastern parts of Up-land and Sudermania, or the districts of Roslagen and Soderbott, having an area of 2786 square miles, with 100,000 inhabitants.

STOCKPORT, a large market town and borough of England, in Cheshire, on the Mersey. The ground on which the town is built is very uneven. The central part stands on the top of a hill, which has a very steep descent towards the Mersey. Towards the north the hill becomes perpendicular for a height equal to that of the houses, a row of which encircles the base. An upper row of houses on the top of the rock completely encircles the market-place; and from this central part the town branches off in different directions. The streets are some of them so steep, that loaded carts can with difficulty be driven down them. The principal public buildings in the town are the places of religious worship. Of these, the parish church of St Mary is the most ancient. It is a spacious structure, consisting of a nave, chancel, and side aisles. St Peter's, the other parish church, is a modern building, built and endowed in 1768. The town contains, besides these, a Calvinist chapel, various meeting-houses for Presbyterians, Methodists, Quakers, and other dissenters; and a Roman Catholic chapel. The chief public institutions are; a free school, an almshouse, and a dispensary. A large school was erected by subscription in 1805. Stockport has extensive manufactures, of cotton, on which the importance of the town chiefly depends. The hat manufacture also flourishes here. The trade of the town in general has been greatly promoted by the canal which has been formed to Manchester, and which, by joining with the Duke of Bridgewater's canal at the latter place, communicates with, and forms a branch of, the extensive system of canal navigation in this part of the kingdom. Pop. 21,326. 7 miles S. E. Manchester.

STOCKTON, or STOCKTON-ON-THEES, a large market town and borough of England, county of Durham, on the Tees, over which is a bridge, about ten miles from its mouth on the German ocean. The principal street is remarkable for its width, which, in the centre, at the market-place, is upwards of 60 yards. It has a town-hall, a large square building, with a lofty cupola and spire. Near this is a handsome column of the Doric order, where the market is held. The church is a handsome brick building, with the doors and windows eased with stone. The town contains besides, meeting-houses for Presbyterians, Quakers, Methodists, and Roman Catholics. It has a custom-house, and a theatre, a neat building; also several schools and almshouses. Below the town, the river flows in a very circuitous course, and as it approaches the German ocean, expands into a large bay, upwards of three miles wide. A navigable cut was made across a neck of land, by which this winding in the river was greatly shortened. Stockton has manufactures of sail-cloth, damask, diaper, and huckabuck linens, two breweries, two rope-walks, a large dry dock, two ship-yards, &c. Pop. 8000. 2½ miles S. E. Durham. The name of various parishes.

STOCKWITH, EAST and WEST, two hamlets of England, in Lincolnshire and Nottinghamshire.

STONHART BAY, near the north-west point of the island of Jamaica, east of Sandy bay, and between it and Luena harbour.

STONK, PRANK, a town and parish of England, in Norfolk, on the Wissey. Population 703. The name of numerous parishes, townships, and hamlets of England, most of them insignificant.

STONES, a county of the United States, in the north-west part of North Carolina. Population 11,000.

STONESTREET, a market town of England, Yorkshire, on the Leven, consisting chiefly of one broad street. Population 1897. 43 miles from York.

STOLZNA, a town of the Prussian province of the Lower Rhine, government of Aix-la-Chapelle. Population 3000.

STOLZENAU HAUS, a town of Prussian Saxony. Near it are mines of copper and iron. Population 1200. 42 miles W. Halle.

STOLZENBERG, a village of Germany, in Baden, near the Rhine, 18 miles N. N. E. Strassburg. In 1703, lines were thrown up here, extending eastward to the Black Forest, and along the Rhine, towards Philipshurg. There the French attacked, but were defeated with heavy loss.

STONEX, a walled town of Prussia, on the Stolpe. Pop. 1000. 64 miles W. Danzig. Long. 16. 55. E. Lat. 52. 20. N.

STONKX, a village of Holland, 10 miles N. E. Rotterdam. Population 1000.

STONKXEN, a town of West Prussia, situated in Prussia. Population 1000.

STONKXEN, a village of Holland, near Gouda, with 1000 inhabitants.

STONK, a market town of England, Staffs, Lichfield, on the Trent. It consists mostly of one long street. It has a free school, and a church; but is famed for its ancient religious foundations. It has a manufacture of slates. Pop. 3000. 3 miles N. Stafford.

STONK-SANNE CREEK, a small stream of the United States, in Washington county, New York, so called from a natural stone bridge under which it runs.

STONEMAYE, a village of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

STONEHAVEN, or STONERIVER, a seaport town of Scotland, in Kincardineshire, at the confluence of the Coyle and Carron. It is composed of an old and new town. The new laid out upon a regular plan. The town consists of two considerable streets of houses. The harbour is a natural basin, and is very capacious and safe. Of late, the linen trade manufacture has been introduced with success. The place has, on the whole, a cheerful appearance. Population 3000. 15 miles S. by W. Aberdeen.

STONEHENGE, the name of the very remarkable ancient monument, supposed to have been a Druidical temple, in England, in the county of Wilt, situated in the middle of Salisbury Plain.

STONEHOUSE, a market town of England, in the county of Devon, between the towns of Plymouth Dock and Plymouth, to which it has all the appearance of being soon united. Here are excellent barracks for the royal marine corps, and one for 1000 regulars or militia. Here is also the royal naval hospital, two Episcopal chapels, and two chapels for dissenters. Population 5043. 14 miles S. W. by W. Plymouth.

STONELEY, a town and parish of England, in Warwickshire, on the Sow. Pop. 1301.

STONINGTON, a seaport, borough, and port township of the United States, in New London county, Connecticut. Population of the borough, 394; of the township, 3043.

STONETON, GREAT AND LITTLE, two hamlets of England, in Cheshire.

STONOVAT, a town and parish of Scotland, Ross-shire, at the head of Loch Stonoway, upon a point jutting into it. The harbour is excellent. White and herring fisheries are prosecuted with great success. It has a neat and commodious custom-house, a town-house, an assembly-room, an elegant church, and two commodious school-houses. Population 4119.

STONUNGERON, a town and parish of England, in Sussex. Population 301.

STONINGWELL and STONINGTON, two hamlets of England, in Shropshire and Leicestershire.

STON, a river of England, which rises in the county of Somerset, and falls into the English channel at Christ Church, in Hampshire.—2d. A river, which rises in Shropshire, and falls into the Severn at Stourport.—3d. In Dorsetshire, which runs into the Avon.—4th. In Oxfordshire, which falls into the Avon.

STON, or STONNE, GREAT and LITTLE, two rivers of England, in the county of Kent, which rising from different sources, join together. The united river then falls into the British channel at Pevensey.

STON, a river of England, which rises on the borders of Cheshire and Lancashire, joins the Orwell from Ipswich, and then united streams form the main harbour of Harwich.

whence they discharge themselves into the German ocean.

STOURBRIDGE, a market town of England, Worcestershire, on the Stour, and deriving its name from the bridge over that river. The general appearance is handsome, though the streets are irregular. It has a chapel erected in 1667, a new school building; a new chapel for the Lutherans, Presbyterians, Independents, and Methodists. It has also a theatre and a free school. It has extensive manufactures of glass; also, iron, cloth, and bricks. Pop. 6000. 60 miles N. Worcester.

STOURBRIDGE, one of the smaller Shetland Isles, on the north side of the Mainland.

STOURPORT, a market town of England, Worcestershire, on the Stour, near its junction with the Severn. It is a place of recent origin, and owes its existence to the formation of the Trent and Severn canal, which terminates in a basin at Stourport. It is now a scene of the greatest activity and business. A very extensive trade is here carried on in coals from the Staffordshire and Worcestershire collieries. It has also a good market for hops, and apples in their season, &c. The town is handsome, and has an air even of elegance. Here is a handsome chapel of ease. The bridge here over the Severn consists of a single arch of iron, 160 feet span, and about 30 above the surface of the water. Pop. about 3000. 11 miles N. Worcester.

STOURTON, or STOUR HEAD, a village of England, in Wiltshire, near the source of the Stour. Population 638.

STOVEN, a village of England, in Suffolk, 4 miles N. E. by E. Hildesworth.

STOW, a village and parish of Scotland, in Mid-Lothian, on the Gala water. Pop. 1313.

STOW CREEK, a river of the United States, in New Jersey. It joins the Delaware.

STOW MARKET, a market town of England, in Suffolk, on the Orwell. It is a thriving town, and contains many good and handsome houses. The church is a large and beautiful building, with a square tower, surmounted by a steeple 120 feet high. It has a manufacture of sacking, ropes, wine, and salmon. It has a good market. Hence much business is done in the mauling. One great source of the prosperity of Stow Market is the navigable canal from this place to Ipswich, which was opened in 1793. Pop. 1300. 134 miles N. N. W. Ipswich.—Stow is the name of various parishes in England.

STOW ON THE WOLD, a market town of England, in Gloucestershire. The houses are mostly low, and built with stone. The church is strong and well built. It consists of a nave, aisle, and chancel, with an embattled tower on the south side, 81 feet in height. It has also an almshouse, and a free school. The principal manufacture in Stow is that of stone. Population 1300. 11 miles S. E. London.

STOWTON, a town and parish of England, Somersetshire, 4 miles W. N. W. Taunton. Population 770.

STRABANE, a populous town of Ireland, county of Tyrone, 40 miles N. W. Armagh.

STRABALLY, a small neat village of Ireland, in Queen's county, 38½ miles S. W. Dublin.

STRABELLA, a town of Italy. It has manufactures of woollens and silk. Population 9900. 10 miles S. S. E. Pavia.

STRAFFORD, or SLANEY, a town of Ireland, Wicklow, on the Slaney. It has a very thriving cotton manufactory. 26 miles S. Dublin.

STRAFFORD, a county of the United States, in the east part of New Hampshire. Population 41,604.

STRAID, a small village of Ireland, county of Antrim, 89½ miles N. Dublin.

STRALSUND, one of the recently constituted governments of the Prussian states, including the part of Pomerania which belonged to Sweden until 1813, along with Rugen and other islands on the north coast. Area 1400 square miles; population 115,000.

STRALSUND, a town of Pomerania, long subject to Sweden, now to Prussia, situated on the strait which separates the island of Rugen from the mainland. It is accessible only by bridges. Its harbour is capacious and safe. The aspect of the town is gloomy. The streets are narrow, and indifferently paved. Of churches, there are four Protestant and one Catholic. The other public buildings are the government-house, the town-house, the mint, the arsenal, and the governor's residence. Of public institutions, the chief are the academy, the orphan-house, the poor-house, the lunatic hospital, and the public library. The manufactures are woollens, linen, tobacco, soap, glass; there are also breweries and distilleries. Stralsund was built about the year 1209, and became a member of the Hanseatic league. Corn is its principal export. Population 11,000. 90 miles N. N. W. Stettin. Long 30. 32. E. Lat. 54. 19. N.

STRAMBINO, a town of Italy, province of Ivrea, on the Chiusella. Population 3400.

STRAMFORD, a decayed town of Ireland, county of Down, 6 miles E. Downpatrick.

STRANFORD LOUGH, a large bay of Ireland, in the county of Down.

STRANGLANE, a neat little village of Ireland, county of Donegal, 119 miles N. W. Dublin.

STRATHRAE, a royal burgh of Scotland, in Wigtonshire, at the head of the bay of Loch Ryan. The greater part of the houses are old; but whole streets of elegant houses have been lately built; also a handsome town-house and prison. The cotton and linen manufactures are carried on to a considerable extent. There is also a considerable trade. The harbour is excellent. Strathrae unites with Wigton, New Galloway, and Whithorn, in electing a member to parliament. Population 2463. 50 miles S. Ayr.

STRASBURG, a large city of France, in Alsace, at the influx of the Rhine into the Ille, and only half a mile from the Rhine, over which is a wooden bridge, 3000 feet long. Its form approaches to the semicircular; and being built on a plain, it is divided into several parts by canals, over which there is a number of bridges. The houses are lofty, but often heavy and inelegant. Of the streets, some are wide and straight, but the far greater part are narrow. The fortifications are extensive. The citadel is a regular pentagon, composed of five bastions, and as many half moons, and with outworks extending almost to the Rhine. Of its public buildings, the principal is the cathedral or minster, justly classed among the most distinguished specimens of Gothic architecture that exist. Its tower, of 470 feet in height, is a master-piece of architecture, being built of hewn stone, cut with such nicety as to give it at a distance some resemblance to lace, and combining the most elegant symmetry of parts with the most perfect solidity. The clock of the cathedral is no less a master-piece of mechanism. There is a town-hall, a large structure; an episcopal mansion, a good modern building; and a handsome and spacious theatre. Here are two hospitals; also a foundling hospital and an orphan-house; an artillery school, a cannon foundry, and an arsenal, a telegraph station, and a monument to General Desaix. It exports corn, flax, hemp, wine, spirituous liquors; also linen, sail-cloth, blankets, carpets, hardware, leather, cotton, and lace. Snuff is also manufactured and exported. Strasburg contains a medical and a law school; a Protestant university; two public libraries of old date; and a botanic garden. For boys there is here a high school. Strasburg is a place of great antiquity, having existed prior to the Christian era. Its vicinity has been more than once the scene of military operations in the present age. Population 60,000. 66 miles N. Bale, 290 E. Paris. Long. 7. 44. 51. E. Lat. 48. 34. 56. N.

STRASBURG, a town of West Prussia, on the Dribenz. Population 1000. 2d. A town of the Prussian states, 55 miles N. Berlin. Population 2700.

STRASBURG, a post township and village of the United States, in Pennsylvania, 34 miles W. Philadelphia. Population 1770.

STRATFORD, a village of England, in Essex, which had of late years greatly increased. 34 miles N. W. London.

STRATFORD, a village and market of England, in Suffolk. Population 614. 503 miles N. E. London.

STRATFORD, or STRATFORD-UPON-AVON, a large and respectable market town of England, in Warwickshire, chiefly celebrated as the birth-place of Shakespeare. It is seated on the Avon, over which is a bridge of 14 arches. The town consists of 12 principal streets. The public buildings are the church, the chapel of the Holy Cross, and the town-hall. The church is a spacious and venerable structure. It contains numerous monuments and inscriptions. The most remarkable is the monument and bust of Shakespeare. The chapel of the Holy Cross is a handsome structure. Attached to it is a hall for the brethren of the guild, an almshouse, and a free grammar school. The town-hall, first erected in 1623, was partly taken down in 1709, and the present building erected in the year following. Stratford contains an old dilapidated house, in which it is said Shakespeare was born. Stratford has an inconsiderable trade in corn and malt. It is an ancient town, a monastery having existed here three centuries before the Norman conquest. Pop. 3100. 44 miles N. W. London.

STRATFORD, a post township of the United States, in Fairfield county, Connecticut, on Stratford river. Population 2265.

STRATFORD, PENNY, a market town of England, county of Buckingham. It has a manufacture of white thread lace. Its trade has been increased by the proximity of the Grand Junction canal. Population 521. 44 miles N. W. London.

STRATFORD, OLD, two hamlets of England, in Warwickshire and Northamptonshire.

STRATFORD, STONEY, a market town of England, in Buckinghamshire, on the Ouse, over which is a stone bridge. In 1743 it suffered greatly by fire. The church of St. Mary Magdalen was consumed, with the exception of the tower, which yet remains. St. Giles's church was rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, in the years 1770 and 1777. It is a handsome structure. The town contains, besides, meeting-houses for dissenters. There are several charities belonging to the town. Pop. 1400. 33 miles N. W. London.

STRATHVEN, a small town of Scotland, in Lanarkshire, on the Aven. Its chief manufacture is cotton. 16 miles S. E. Glasgow.

STRATHVILL, a small village and parish of Scotland, in Stirlingshire.

STRATHVILL, a district of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire.

STRATHVILL, a district of Scotland, in Perthshire, of a rich and fertile soil.

STRATHVILL, a town and parish of Scotland, in Perthshire, 12 miles S. E. Perth. Population 1843.

STRATHVILL, a name applied to the fertile valley extending from Stonehaven in Kincardineshire on the east, to the district of Cowal in Argyllshire, on the west.

STRATHVILL, a river of Scotland, in Sutherlandshire.

STRATHVILL, a river of Scotland, in Sutherlandshire. It runs into the Northern sea.

STRATHVILL, a parsonage of Scotland, in Sutherlandshire.

STRATTON, a market town and parish of England, in Cornwall, 40 miles W. Exeter. Population 1580. Also the name of numerous parishes in England.

STRAUBENZELL, a village of Switzerland. It has manufactures of linen and woollen.

STRAUBING, a walled town of Bavaria, on the Danube. It has several churches and charitable institutions, and a flourishing academy. Pop. 6200. 66 miles N. N. E. Munich.

STRAUBING, a town of the Prussian province of Brandenburg, 20 miles E. Berlin. Population 2700.

STRAUBING, a town of Moravia, 36 miles S. E. Brunn. Population 4100.

STREATHAM, a village and parish of England, in Surrey. It contains a newly built church, and a charity school; and in the neighbourhood are numerous handsome villages and country seats. Near it is the seat of the late Mr. Thrale, the friend of Dr. Johnson. Population 3516. 7 miles S. by W. St. Paul's, London.

STREATHAM, a town of Prussian Silesia, on the Odra, 22 miles S. Breslau. Pop. 3000.

STREATHAM, a village of Scotland, in Perthshire, 6 miles N. Perth.

STRELITZ, a city of Germany, the capital of the grand duchy of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, is situated in the lordship of Stargard, in the midst of lakes and marshes. It is divided into Old and New Strelitz. Old Strelitz contains 3000 inhabitants. New Strelitz, a better built place, has 4000. The manufactures are chiefly of woollen and linen. 57 miles N. by W. Berlin.

STRENGNAS, a town of Sweden, in Sudermania, on the Malar lake. It has a large cathedral. Population 1100. 32 miles W. Stockholm.

STRENSHAM, a village and parish of England, in Worcestershire, noted as the birth-place of Butler, the author of Hudibras.

STRIBOON, the name of five townships of England, one in Lancashire, two in Staffordshire, and two in Cheshire. It is also the name of various parishes.

STRICKEN, a village and parish of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire. Population 1000.

STRICKEN, a town of Prussian Silesia, 32 miles W. by S. Breslau. Population 2700.

STRIVALL, (the ancient Strophodon), a small cluster of islands in the Ionian sea, on the west coast of the Morea.

STRONACH, an island of Scotland, 1½ mile long, and 1 broad, in the Pentland frith. Long. 2. 53. W. Lat. 58. 35. N.

STRONACH, the most northerly of the Lipari islands, in the Mediterranean, 10 miles in circumference. It produces very good wine. It is noted for its volcanic eruptions. Its mountain has two summits, one of great height, but the crater is on its side, 16 miles N. N. E. Lipari.

STRONACH, a town of Scotland, at the south-west end of the island of Pomona, on a bay of the same name, with a safe and commodious harbour. Many vessels bound for the Greenland and Davis' Straits whale fisheries put in here. Its commerce has greatly increased within the last 40 years. Pop. 2230. Long. 2. 2. W. Lat. 58. 51. N.

STRONACH, the largest of the Faroe islands, in the North sea, belonging to Denmark, 30 miles long and 6 broad. Chief town Thorrhova, a small place with 500 inhabitants.

STRONSTADT, a town of Sweden, in West Gothland. Population 1100.

STRONKA, a town of European Turkey, in Macedonia. Population 1300.

STRONGOLI, a town of the kingdom of Naples, in Calabria Ultra. Pop. 1900.

STRONKAY, one of the Orkney Islands, on the coast of Scotland, 7½ miles long, and nearly as much in breadth, of a very irregular figure, deeply indented by the sea, and cut almost into three distinct islets. The manufacture of kelp is vigorously prosecuted by the inhabitants.

STROXTIAN, a place of Scotland, in Argyllshire, in the parish of Ardnamurchan, noted for its lead mines. There is a small village erected for the miners. 30 miles S. W. Port William.

STROPIANA, a small town of the Sardinian states, in the Piedmontese province of Verceili, with 1900 inhabitants.

STROUD, a market town of England, in Gloucester, near the confluence of the river Frome and the Stale-water. It is the seat of an extensive clothing trade, the waters of the Stroud and Stale being celebrated for their properties in the dyeing of cloth. The Stroud-water canal has been of great advantage to this trade. The church consists of a nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a tower and spire at the west end. Here are also commodious chapels for the Independents and Wesleyan Methodists. Population 7007. 11 miles S. E. Gloucester.

STROUD, a village and parish of England, in Kent, on the Medway, over which is a stone bridge of 11 arches. The church is a handsome building. Pop. 1461. 28½ miles E. London.

STROWAT, a small river of England, in Monmouthshire, which joins the Ewith.

STRAT, or STRAT, a town of Austrian Galicia, the capital of a circle of the same name, on the Str. Pop. 5500. 42 miles S. Lemberg.

STRATRA, a village of the Netherlands, 12 miles S. E. Rotterdam. Pop. 2000.

STUDHAM and STUDLAND, two hamlets of England, in Cumberland and Hertfordshire.

STUDLAND HAY, a bay of England, on the Dorsetshire coast.

STUDLES, two hamlets of England, in Buckinghamshire and Yorkshire.

STUDI-WASSERBURG, or STUDI-FERAN-VAR, a town of Hungary, the capital of a palatinate. It has been greatly injured by repeated sieges in wars with the Turks. It was formerly traversed by several canals, but these are choked up, and the waters have formed marshes, which render the town unhealthy. It has a high school, and barracks for soldiers. Here are some woollen manufactures. Pop. 13,000. 116 miles S. E. Vienna.

STUNTLEY, a hamlet of England, in the Isle of Ely, Cambridgeshire.

STURA, a considerable river of Italy, which falls into the Tiber, near Chiusi. Two other rivers of the same name, which fall into the Po.

STURMINSTER NEWTON, a market town of England, in Dorsetshire, on the Stour. The church is lofty and spacious. Population 1612. 20 miles N. N. E. Dorchester.

STURSTON, or STURTON, the name of various townships, parishes, and hamlets in England.

STUTTGART, a city of Germany, capital of Württemberg, on the Neckar, 2 miles from the Neckar, over which is an elegant bridge. It may be considered as divided into three parts; the town proper, which is badly built; the two suburbs, which are less antique, and somewhat better, particularly that of Eselingen, in which are the royal palace, which contains a good collection of paintings, and statues; the school, the barracks, and several public buildings. The town has also a public library. Its public buildings are an old palace, now converted into government offices, a mint, a town-house, a great church, and the royal stables. Though surrounded by a wall and ditch, Stuttgart is a place of no strength. It has manufactures of leather, hats, cotton, silk, plated goods, and snuff. 116 miles W. N. W. Munich.

STYRIA, a large province of the Austrian empire, situated between Austria proper and Illyria, and extending from 45. 54. to 47. 50. N. lat. Its extent is computed at 8500 square miles; its population is about 840,000. Its divisions are into Upper Styria towards the north, and Lower Styria towards the south. The former is subdivided into the circles of Judenburg and Bruck; the latter into those of Gratz, Marburg, and Celley. Upper Styria is very mountainous, consisting in a great measure of a continuation of the Alps. The principal rivers are the Enns, the Muhr, the Drave, and the Save. It produces wheat, barley, oats, rye, and, in the warmer situations, maize. Styria produces abundance of minerals. Coal is found in many places. Gold, silver, and copper, hardly defray the expense of mining; lead is less scarce; but the great produce is of iron. Salt is abundant; cobalt, arsenic, and molybdena, also occur.

STUTTGART, the better name of one of the ten circles or great duchies of Germany, bounded W. by France, and S. by Swabia. Land. Population 2,500,000.

STURIN, a seaport town of Nubia, on the western coast of the Red sea, a place of wealth and importance, now almost in ruins. The port, however, is still good and spacious. Two minerals give the town a handsome appearance at a distance; and the buildings being white washed, and on an elevated site, look much better than they really are. It is still the channel of communication, between Arabia and the interior of Africa, and the resort of pilgrims and slave dealers. Long. 37. 23. E. Lat. 10. 40. N.

STURIN, a river of Guiana, which enters the Orinoco.

STURIN, a river of Hindostan, which falls into the bay of Bengal.

SUCHITEPEQUEZ, SAN ANTONIO DE, a town of Guatemala, 72 miles N. W. Guatemala. It contains 1480 Indians.

SUCHTELK, a town of Prussian Westphalia, 17 miles E. N. E. Ruremond. Pop. 3800.

SUCK, a river of Ireland, which runs into the Shannon.

SUCZAKA, a town of Austrian Galicia, in the Bukowina, 70 miles W. Jasny. Population 4800.

SUD, RIVER, DE, a tributary of the St Lawrence, in Lower Canada.

SUDBURY, a market town and borough of England, in Suffolk, on the Stour, over which is a well built wooden bridge. It was one of the first places at which King Edward III. settled the Flemings, for the woollen manufacture. This business has long since declined. The town has still, however, a manufacture of sars, and also a silk manufactory. It has sent members to parliament ever since the reign of Edward IV. Number of freemen electors 725. Population 3850. 56 miles N. E. London.

SUDERMANIA, or SODERMANLAND, a province of Middle Sweden, situated to the west of Stockholm. Its greatest length is about 100 miles; its breadth from north to south 55; its territorial extent is 3470 square miles. Population about 166,000.

SUDBOURY, a hamlet of England, within a mile of the city of Gloucester.

SUDZHA, a town of European Russia, government of Kursk. It has a salt manufacture. Pop. 5700. 47 miles S. W. Kursk.

SVEABORG, a seaport and fortress on the gulf of Finland, 34 miles S. Helsingfors. The harbour of this place is capable of containing 70 men of war, and easily defended by batteries which sweep the channel forming the only entrance for large ships. It is formed by several small islands, of which the principal, called Wangoo, contains the arsenal, docks, basins, and magazines for fitting out or repairing men of war. Pop. 3000.

SUECA, a town of Spain, in Valencia. Population 4800.

SVEVENSBOE, a town of Denmark, on the island of Funen. Population 2000.

SUES, a city of Egypt, on the borders of Arabia; and remarkable by its situation at the head of the Red sea. The city of Sues appears to have been of modern origin. It was about the beginning of the 16th century, a flourishing mart, being at once the emporium of the trade with India, and the rendezvous of the numberless pilgrims, who, from every part of the Turkish empire, repaired to the holy shrine of Mecca. Since that time it has greatly declined, in consequence of the diminution both of the general trade of the Red sea, and of the concourse to Mecca. It sustained, also, irreparable injury from the wanton devastations committed by the French Sues, though a maritime place, is so situated, that vessels cannot approach nearer than 24 miles from the town. The surrounding country is a complete desert, entirely deficient in water, unless of the most offensive and noxious description. The town contains about 500 stone houses, of which more than half were destroyed by the French, and still continues in ruins. Frequent caravans come from Gaza, Jaffa, and Jerusalem, bringing soap, tobacco, and other goods. The staple import consists of coffee. Vessels being allowed, pickled ginger, and a great quantity of tamarinds. Long. 32. 28. E. Lat. 30. 1. N.

SUFFERIN, a post township of the United States, in Hartford county, Connecticut. Population 2680. 11 miles S. Springfield.

SUFFOLK, a maritime county of England, bounded N. by the county of Norfolk, W. by Cambridge, S. by Essex, and E. by the German ocean. The river Stour divides it from Essex, the Little Ouse and Waveney from Norfolk, and the Great Ouse and one of its branches from Cambridge. It lies within 2. 19. and 1. 46. E. long. and 51. 55. and 52. 36. N. lat. Its figure somewhat resembles a crescent. It is 47 miles long, and 30 broad. Area from 1260 to 1400 square miles. It is subdivided into 31 hundreds and 75 parishes, which contain 7 boroughs, and 21 other market towns. It sends 18 members to parliament, two for the county, and two for each of the boroughs. Suffolk is in general a level county, without any considerable eminences. The rivers are the Stour, the Waveney, the Ouse, the Orwell, the Deben, the Ald, and the Blyth, along the coast, and the Lark on the west. The soil of this county is various, but very distinctly marked. 1st, A strong loam or a clay marl bottom predominates through the centre and greatest part of the county, extending from Haverhill to Beccles on the one hand, and from near Ipswich to beyond Exworth on the other. 2d, On the east of this, and between it and the coast, extends northwards of the river Orwell, a district of sandy soil, and southwards a much smaller one of rich loam. 3d, To the west again occurs another considerable district of sand, which extends to the north-west corner of the county, where a fourth track of fen land is included between the Great and Little Ouse. Mr. Young has made the following estimate of the extent of the different kinds of land, viz. 30,000 acres of fen; 46,007 rich loam; 270,000 sand; and 423,333 strong loam; total, 800,000. The raising of crops is the principal object of the Suffolk husbandry, although the management of the dairy is also much attended to, as well as the rearing of sheep. The crops commonly cultivated are wheat, barley, oats, rye, beans, peas, buck-wheat, cole-seed, turnips, clover, trefoil, white clover, and sainfoin. Flax and hemp are raised. The cultivation of potatoes is little attended to. Butter is made in great quantities, also cheese, though of a bad quality. The Suffolk cows have long been celebrated for the abundance of milk, and it is no less noted for its breed of horses and hogs. Poultry is kept here in abundance, especially turkeys. Great quantities of pigeons are reared in the open field; and there are many rabbit warrens. The commerce and manufactures of Suffolk are considerable. Population 270,542.

SURREY, a county of the United States, in Massachusetts. Population 84,381—24. In New York, on the east part of Long Island, comprising about two-thirds of the island. This county is much indented by its numerous creeks and bays. Pop. 21,115.

SUGAR CREEK, a tributary of the Susquehanna, in Pennsylvania.—The name of several other rivers and townships.

SCHLA, a town of Prussian Saxony. It has 4 churches and 4 hospitals; also manufactures of fire-arms and cotton goods. Population 6000. 28 miles S. S. W. Erfurt.

SVILJAK, a town of European Russia, government of Kasan, on the Svija. Pop. 3100.

SVITZE, a town of France, department of the Maine. Population 2300.

SULKHOLME, or SOUCAM, a township of England, in Nottinghamshire.

SULLIVAN, a county of the United States, in New York. Population 6102.—Also the name of several townships.

SULLIVAN ISLAND, an island of the United States, at the mouth of Ashley and Cooper rivers, 6 miles below Charleston.

SULLY, a town of France, on the Loire; 21 miles S. E. Orleans. Population 2100.

SULMONA, a town of Italy, 72 miles N. Naples. Population 4000.

SULTANPORE, a town of Hindostan, province of Oude, on the Goomuty river. Long. 82. 3. E. Lat. 20. 10. N.

SULZ, a town of Germany, in Württemberg, on the Neckar. Population 2100.

SULZ, UPPER, a town of France, in Alsace. Population 4000.

SULZBACH, a town of Germany, in Bavaria, 36 miles N. by W. Ratisbon. Pop. 2200.

SULZBACH, a town of Bavaria, 64 miles W. S. W. Munich. Population 1700.

SUMATRA, a large island in the Eastern sea, the most western of that immense collection of islands which are so thickly scattered over the ocean from the coasts of New Holland and New Guinea to the coast of China to the east, and westward to the Malayan peninsula. It is divided obliquely by the equator into almost equal parts, and its general direction is north-west and south-east. The one extremity is in lat. 6. 56. N. and the other 5. 55. S. Its length may be estimated at 1000 miles, by 165 the average breadth. A chain of mountains runs through the whole extent of this island, and the ranges are in many parts double and treble. Among these ridges of mountains are extensive plains of great elevation, and of a temperate climate. The mountains being much nearer the western than the opposite coast, all the greatest rivers are run on the eastern side of the island. The rivers on the western coast having a shorter course, are but so large, though the Ketam, Indragiri, Tabuyong, and Sinkel, are considerable streams. The climate of Sumatra varies, of course, with the height of the ground. Even on the plains, however, the thermometer, about two in the afternoon, generally fluctuates between 62 and 85 degrees in the shade. In other places it is not infrequently at 87 and 88 degrees; at sunrise it is usually as low as 79, among the mountains it falls as low as 40. In this island, as well as all other countries between the tropics, the wind uniformly blows from the sea to the land for a certain number of hours in the four and twenty, and then changes and blows for about as many from the land to the sea; excepting only when the monsoon rages with remarkable violence. The land wind in Sumatra is cold, chilly, and damp; an exposure to it is consequently dangerous to health, and sleeping in it is almost certain death. Thunder and lightning are very frequent, especially during the north-west monsoon, when the explosions are extremely violent. The soil of the western side of Sumatra is generally a stiff, reddish clay. From this there springs a strong and perpetual verdure of rank grass, brush-wood, or timber trees; and a great proportion of the island is in consequence an impervious forest. The earth in Sumatra is rich in minerals, and other fossil productions; and the island has, in all ages, been famous for gold, which still continues to be procured in considerable quantities. There are also mines of copper, iron, and tin. Sulphur and saltpetre are collected in large quantities. Mineral and hot springs, in taste resembling those of Harrowgate, are found in many districts. There are also various earths, namely, the yellow, red, and white ochres. Rice is the most important article of cultivation; also the cocos-pat tree, the betel-but tree, the bamboo, the sugo tree, and the sugar cane. Maize, chilly pepper, turmeric, ginger, coriander and cumin seed, are raised in the gardens of the natives. Small plantations of tobacco are met with in every part of the country. There are other creeping plants, which are manufactured into twine, sewing thread, &c. All sorts of tropical fruits are abundant. Of shrubs and flowers, there is an innumerable variety and a perpetual accession throughout the year. Sumatra abounds in wild animals. The tiger grows in this island to a prodigious size and strength. Elephants are common. The hippopotamus haunts most of the rivers. The rhinoceros is a native of the woods; also the bear. There are many species of the deer kind, and the varieties of the monkey tribes are innumerable. Here are also sloths, squirrels, telegons, or stinkards, civet cats, tiger cats, porcupines, hedgehogs, pangolins, bats of all kinds, alligators, gnomes, cameleons, flying lizards, tortoises, and turtle. Among the domestic animals is the buffaloe, which supplies milk, butter, and beef. The breed of horses is small. The sheep are also a small breed. The other animals are the goat and hog, both domestic and wild; the otter, the cat, the rat, and the dog. With animals of the frog kind the swamps everywhere teem; and their noise upon the approach of rain is tremendous. They furnish prey to the snakes, which are found here of all sizes, and in great variety of species. On the coasts is found great variety of shell-fish. Birds are in great variety. The whole island swarms with insects, among which are cochroaches, crickets, bees, flies of all sorts, mosquitoes, scorpions, centipedes, and water and land leeches, &c. Of the productions which are regarded as articles of commerce, the most abundant is pepper; also camphor, benzoin or benjamin, cassia, &c. Rattens also furnish annually many large cargoes; and walking canes are found near the rivers which open to the straits of Malacca. The annual and the shrub cotton are cultivated by the natives; also the silk cotton. A drug named dragon's blood is procured from a large species of rattan, and is exported to China, where it is highly esteemed. Gambir juice is extracted from the leaves of a plant of that name. The agila wood or ligum aloes is highly prized in all parts, for the fragrant scent it emits when burning. The forests contain an inexhaustible store and endless variety of timber trees, many sorts of which are capable of being applied to ship-building; also the spreading banyan tree of Hindostan. Gold is found chiefly in the interior of the island. Colonies of Malays have settled themselves in almost all the districts where it is procured, and appear to be the only persons who dig for it in mines, or collect it in streams. The mines of gold are very numerous. The merchants carry the gold from the interior to the sea coast, where they harvest it for iron and iron working tools, opium, and the fine piece goods of Madras and Bengal. Sulphur, yellow arsenic, edible birds' nests, so much celebrated as a peculiar luxury of the table, especially among the Chinese; the kiche de mes, and bees wax, are all articles of trade. The forests abounding with elephants, ivory is consequently found in abundance, and is carried both to the Chinese and European markets. The most general articles of import trade are the following:— From the coast of Ceromandel various cotton goods, as blue and white long-cloth, chintz and coloured handkerchiefs, of which those manufactured as Pulicat are the most prized; and silk from Bengal, muslin, striped and plain, and several other kinds of cotton goods, as cambric, Indian, humming, &c. tulle and some other silks; and again in considerable quantities from the Malacca coast, various cotton goods, mostly of a coarse raw fabric; from China, various porcelain, kettles or iron pans, in sets of various sizes; tobacco shred very fine; gold thread, fine, and a number of small articles; from Ceylon, boxes (known here by the name of its chief province, Malagasy, Battis, and Maradu), Java, Lark, Ceylon, and other articles.

islands, rough striped cotton cloth; knives and other weapons; silk on kribelts, hats, small pieces of ordinance; spices, and also a little of a large grain; and sometimes rice chiefly from Bali: from Europe, silver, iron, steel, lead, cutlery, various sorts of hardware, brass wire, and broad cloths, especially scarlet. Generally speaking, the inhabitants have made no great progress in the arts of industry. They make nails; also various kinds of tools, such as axes of different sorts, axes, hoes, &c. In carpenters' work they are equally rude, being ignorant of the use of the saw, excepting where it has been introduced by the British. Painting and drawing they are quite strangers to. In carving, both in wood and ivory, they are curious and fanciful, but their designs are always grotesque and out of nature. In cane and basket work they are particularly neat and expert; as well as in mats, of which some kinds are much prized for their extreme fineness and ornamental borders. Silk and cotton cloths, of varied colours, manufactured by themselves, are worn by the natives in all parts of the country, especially by the women. Some of their work is very fine, and the patterns prettily fancied. The women are expert at embroidery, the gold and silver thread for which is procured from China, as well as their needles. Different kinds of earthenware are manufactured in the island; and they extract the cocoa-nut oil, which is in general use. Gunpowder is also manufactured in various parts. But of all their manufactures, their work in fine gold and silver filagree has been most admired, and it deserves the greater admiration, considering the coarse tools with which it is made. The inhabitants of Sumatra are particularly expert in the manufacture of fishing nets, and in making springs for catching birds. The Malayan language is everywhere spoken along the coasts of Sumatra. Among the modern political divisions of the island, the principal are the empire of Melancho and the Malays; in the next place, the Acheenese; then the Battas, the Rejungs, and next to them the people of Lampong. Almost all the forms of government throughout Sumatra are a mixture of the feudal and patriarchal; but the system of government among the people near the sea coast is much influenced by the power of the Europeans, who exercise, in fact, the functions of sovereignty, and with great advantage to their subjects. The districts over which the East India company's influence extends are preserved in a state of uninterrupted peace. The laws of the Sumatrans are properly a set of long established customs, handed down to them from their ancestors, the authority for which is founded in usage and general consent. The manners of the natives are in general pure and unexceptionable. They are brought up in the strictest decorum and chastity. Polygamy is permitted, but it is in general disapproved. The great ranks are most passionately addicted to gaming. They are even to a greater degree addicted to cock-fighting. The Sumatrans, and more particularly the Malays, are much attached, in common with the eastern nations, to the practice of smoking opium. The native Sumatran of the interior differs in some respects from the Malay of the coast, being mild, peaceable, and forbearing, unless when roused by violent provocation. He is temperate and sober, his diet being mostly vegetable, and his only beverage water. Their hospitality is very great, with very simple manners. On the other hand, they are litigious, indolent, dishonest in their dealings with strangers, which they consider as no moral defect, regardless of truth, mean, servile, and, though cleanly in their persons, filthy in their apparel, which they never wash. There is no estimation in any writer of the probable population.

SUMBAWA, a large island in the Eastern seas, extending about 230 miles in the parallel of 9 degrees S. lat. and separated from the island of Lombok by the straits of Allak. It is about 40 miles in average breadth. This island is divided into the different districts of Ikema, Dompo, Tambora, Sangur, Lokat, and Sumbawa, all governed by their respective chiefs. The island furnishes sapan wood, rice, horses, saltpetre, sulphur, wax, birds'-nests, tobacco, &c. though there is but little trade carried on now at this place.

SCIMHOONART, a town of Northern Hindostan, province of Nepaul. It owes its prosperity to a very celebrated temple, which is annually visited by innumerable pilgrims from Rootan and Thibet. Long. 85. 38. E. Lat. 27. 33. N.

SUMHULPOKE, the capital of a district of the same name, in Hindostan, between the 21st and 22d degrees of N. lat. on the Mahanuddy river. Long. 85. 47. E. Lat. 21. 33. N.

SUMENE, a town of France, department of the Gard. Population 2900.

SUMNAT, a seaport of Hindostan, province of Gujrat. It possesses a tenty, held in high estimation by the Hindoos.

SUNNER, a county of the United States, West Tennessee. Population 13,792.

SUNPICK, a district of South Carolina. Population 19,034, including 11,530 slaves.

SUNY, a large wooden town of Russia, government of Charlov, on the Psol. It contains several charitable institutions, and public depots and warehouses. Population 11,000. 90 miles N. W. Charlov.

SUNBURY, a borough and post township of the United States, Pennsylvania, on the Susquehanna. Population 700.

SUNBURY, a seaport and post township of the United States, Liberty county, Georgia, 49 miles N. E. W. Savannah. The harbour is safe and commodious.

• SUNDA, STRAITS or, the arm of the sea which separates the large islands of Sumatra and Java.

SUNDARBAN, an island of Bengal, at the mouth of the Ganges, 20 miles in length by 10 in breadth. Long. 91. 36. E. Lat. 22. 25. N.

SUNDHARSTEN, a small town of Denmark, in the island of Alslen. Population 2700.

SUNDERBUND, or CHUNDERBUND, an extensive and woody district of Bengal, situated in the Delta of the Ganges, and intersected by innumerable rivers or creeks, all of which are salt, and through the whole track nothing but brackish water is to be found.

SUNDERLAND, a large and populous market town and seaport of England, county of Durham, near the mouth of the Wear. It is joined to the town of Monk Wearmouth, on the opposite side, by the famous iron bridge; so that the whole, including Bishop Wearmouth, forms one connected town, which extends about a mile and a half in length, and about one mile (the river Wear included) in breadth. The High-street is spacious, and tolerably handsome, especially the central part, which rises with a considerable ascent. Some of the other streets which branch off from this are narrow and dirty; but of late years the general appearance of the town has been greatly improved. Of its public buildings, the church is a spacious and handsome edifice; a spacious and elegant chapel of ease has also been erected; and the town contains, besides, a large and handsome chapel for the Methodists, and meeting-houses for the Presbyterians, Independents, Baptists, Quakers, and Unitarians. It has various benevolent institutions and charity schools. The exchange at Sunderland is handsome; and here is also an excellent public library, a large assembly-room, and a neat theatre. The harbour of Sunderland is formed by two piers, situated on the south and north sides of the river. Near the extremity of the northern pier an elegant light-house has been erected, which was finished in 1802. The iron bridge of Sunderland is justly regarded as a magnificent work of art. It consists of an arch of iron frame-work, thrown over the river, 237 feet span, and rising 100 feet above the level of the water; so that ships even of 400 tons can sail under it, by only striking their top-gallant masts. The trade of Sunderland has been long on the increase. Coal is the staple article of export. Most of the coals go to the metropolis, and to different places along the eastern coast. Considerable quantities are also sent to the Baltic, and in tide of peace to France and Holland. The manufactures of Sunderland are chiefly those of flint and waste glass, earthenware, copperas, coal, tar, patent ropes, &c. Ship-building is carried on to a great extent. Sunderland is a borough by prescription. It sends no member to parliament. Population in 1831, 25,189; in this return sea-faring men, and persons serving in the army, or old militia, were not included. The real population, including these, will not be short of 35,000. 12 miles N. E. Durham.

SUNDERLAND, a township of England, in Northumberland. Pop. 666.

SUNDSWALL, a small town of Middle Sweden, on the gulf of Bothnia, 183 miles N. Stockholm. Population 1500.

SUNNINGHILL, a village and parish of England, Berkshire. There are some mineral wells in the neighbourhood. Pop. 1123.

SUPERIOR LAKE, a lake of North America, and the largest body of fresh water which has yet been discovered. It is almost of a triangular form; its greatest length 381, its breadth 161, and its circumference little less than 1152 miles. Long. 84. 46. to 91. 55. W. Lat. 46. 4. to 48. 45. N.

SURAJEPUR, a town of Hindostan, province of Allahabad, on the Ganges. It is adorned with many Hindoo temples. Long. 80. 37. E. Lat. 26. 10. N.

SURAT, a large and populous city of Hindostan, province of Gujerat, on the river Taptee, about 20 miles from its mouth. It is a fortified town, contains about 70,000 inhabitants, of all nations and religions, and carries on a very extensive trade, notwithstanding all large vessels are obliged to remain at the mouth of the river called Surat low roads. It was here that the English East India company obtained permission from the Mogul emperor Jehangire, to establish their first factory in Hindostan. The firman or order is dated in January 1612. Since the rise of Bombay, the value of its traffic has much declined; and now consists chiefly of raw cotton, a few of its own manufactures, and articles imported from Gujerat. Although Surat is inhabited by persons of all nations, the Parsees or fire worshippers are the most considerable in numbers. Surat is situated on a fertile plain, protected on one side by the river, and on the three others by a brick rampart and ditch. It also possesses a strong citadel, situated on the bank of the river, and surrounded by an esplanade. Of the ancient history of Surat under the Hindoo dynasties, we have no authentic records. On the decline of the Mogul authority, when the governor of every province assumed independence, those of Surat also wished to take advantage of the general confusion. First the Mahattas, then the British, were called in. They took possession of the fortress in the name of the emperor of Delhi; but there were other authorities in the place, and it was not till 1803 that the success of the British against the Mahattas compelled them to relinquish all claims on Surat, which is now governed by the East India Company's servants. Under this management Surat is fast recovering its prosperity; and although, owing to the vicinity of Bombay, it can never again attain its former splendour, it is still a rich and populous place, and of much political consequence. Long. 73. 3. E. Lat. 21. 13. N.

SURPLEY, a village and parish of England, in Lincolnshire. Population 612.

SURINAM, a flourishing colony of Guiana in South America, settled and improved by the Dutch. It is bounded N. by the Atlantic, E. by the river Marawina, S. by a country of Indians, and W. by the river Corentin; about 150 miles from east to west, and 60 from north to south. The principal rivers are the Surinam, from which the colony takes its name; the Corentin, the Copenamé, the Seramica, and the Marawina. Of these rivers, the first only is navigable. Sugar, coffee, cocoa, indigo, cotton, &c. are the products of this colony. In 1799 Surinam was taken by the British. It was given up at the peace of Amiens in 1802, but was again taken in the subsequent war, and is now retained by Britain. Paramaribo is the chief town. Long. 53. 40. to 56. 20. W. Lat. 4. 45. to 6. N.—Other particulars will be found in the article Guiana.

SURINAM, a river in the above province or district, which, after a winding course of about 140 miles, falls into the Atlantic ocean, in Long. 56. 46. W. Lat. 6. 25. N.

SURJINGHAM, a village of England, in Norfolk.

SURREY, one of the inland counties of England, in the southern part of the kingdom, and bounded S. by Sussex, E. by Kent, W. by Berkshire and Hampshire, and separated on the N. from Middlesex and a small part of Buckinghamshire by the river Thames. Its greatest width from north to south is 20 miles, and its utmost length about 38. Area 519,000 acres. The surface of almost the whole of this county consists of a gentle diversity of hill and dale, the hills in some parts rising to a considerable height, and presenting very bold and commanding views. In some parts naked heaths impart a wildness to the prospect, which is strikingly contrasted with the numberless beauties scattered over the surface of the country by the hand of art; while the hills, aspiring to the bold character and picturesque scenery of mountains, gradually decline into richly wooded dales, and plains covered with luxuriant harvests. The soil of this county is greatly varied, the different species lying intermixed in small patches. These, however, may be reduced to the general heads of clay, loam, and chalk. The climate is mild and healthy. Iron-ore is found in considerable quantities in the south-west part of the county; but in consequence of the high price of fuel, the iron-works have been totally neglected. Fuller's earth is found both to the north and south; also extensive quarries of stone. There are large quarries of excellent limestone near Dorking. Limestone is also dug and burnt in various other parts. Chalk is abundant, and is in general use as a manure. The principal rivers of this county are the Wey, the Mole, and the Wand; while the Thames also washes its northern border. The river Loddon skirts Surrey on its west side. Surrey may be considered inferior to agricultural improvement to many other districts. The produce of wheat is from two to five, and sometimes six quarters an acre, and that of barley from four to seven and a half. The latter is used only for malt-ing, for which purpose it is reckoned equal in quality to any in the kingdom. The climate of Surrey seems to be less favourable to oats than to wheat or barley. Garden peas and beans are cultivated in the immediate neighbourhood of the metropolis, and the sandy loams near the Thames, about Mortlake. Turnips are here raised in large crops. Hops are largely cultivated about Farnham, where they occupy about 900 acres. The crops which are only partially cultivated in Surrey are those of cabbages, potatoes, lucerne, and grass. Carrots, clover, sainfoin, and hops, are extensively cultivated; and a greater quantity of land is employed in raising physical herbs, than in any other shire in Britain. The cattle chiefly bred in Surrey are sheep, oxen, and hogs; many geese are also kept on the commons, and in the Weald. The situation of this county being contiguous to the capital of the Roman settlements in Britain, numerous antiquities are found within its limits. St George's Fields, Southwark, where coins and pavements have been found at different periods, was the centre of several Roman ways. Population 398,658. Surrey is represented in parliament by 14 members, two for the county, and two for each of the boroughs of Southwark, Guildford, Heygate, Haslemere, Blochingly, and Gotton.

SURRY, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 6836, including 3440 slaves.—2d, A county in the north-west part of North Carolina. Population 10,366, including 1469 slaves.

SURRY, a county of Jamaica, which contains the two towns of Kingston and Port Royal, and eight villages.

SUSA, a town at the foot of the Alps, 23 miles W.N.W. Turin. Population 1700.

SUSAQ, a town of Portugal, 17 miles W. Oporto. Population 2300.

SUAR, a province of Morocco, situated at its southern extremity, immediately bordering on the desert. It is the most extensive, and, unless in grain, the most fertile of any in the empire. It is traversed by the river of its name, which falls into the Atlantic.

SUNQUESHANNAH, a county of the United States, on the north side of Pennsylvania.

SUNQUESHANNAH, a river of the United States, and the largest river of Pennsylvania, which is formed by two branches that come from the east and west. These, after they unite, run south-east into the head of the Chesapeake, in Maryland.

SUSSEX, one of the southern counties of England, bounded W. by Hampshire, N. by Surrey, E. and N. E. by Kent, and S. by the British channel. It is 70 miles in length, and nearly 30 in average breadth. The aspect of Sussex is varied in a pleasing manner, by the inequalities of the downs, with the interesting valleys, through which the many little streams of the county pursue their respective courses to the sea. The wooded scenery which it presents, and the pasture land with which it is contrasted, give to the county in general a rural and a rich diversity of appearance. The wastes in Sussex are very considerable. They chiefly occupy the northern side of the county, where, in a district containing by computation 500,000 acres, these almost desert tracks form not less than 110,000. The climate is cold and damp. In the easternmost parts of the district called the Weald is found every sort of limestone. The Sussex marble is cut into slabs for ornamental chimney-pieces, and is highly esteemed. Iron-stone abounds in this county. Chalk is still more plentiful. Fullers' earth and red ochre are also found. All the rivers of Sussex, which are insignificant, fall into the British channel. Sussex is one of those counties which, from the remotest antiquity, has been celebrated for its timber, principally oak. The reigning feature of the Weald is its timber, which overspreads it in every direction. The crops commonly raised in Sussex are wheat, oats, clover, turnips, pease, barley, and tares. The crops not commonly cultivated are beans, potatoes, buck-wheat, lettuce, hops, carrots, rambagh, opium, sainfoin, lucerne, and chicory. In the western part of Sussex are some considerable orchards; and where the soil is adapted to the fruit, the plantations are thickly interspersed. It is distinguished for its breed of cattle and sheep. The county of Sussex contains many Roman, and some British antiquities. It sends 20 members to parliament, two for the county, two for the city of Chichester, and two for each of the four Cinque Ports that are situated within the county. Population 233,012.

SUSSEX, a county of the United States, in New Jersey. Pop. 25,549.—2d, A county in Delaware. Population 27,750.—3d, A county of Virginia. Population 11,362, including 6644 slaves.

SUTHERLANDSHIRE, one of the most northerly counties in Scotland, extending the whole breadth of the island, from the German to the Atlantic ocean. It is situated between Lat. 57. 53. and 58. 33. N. and between Long. 3. 40. and 6. 13. W. from Lond. do. It is bounded W. for a distance of 46½ miles, by the Myne, an arm of the Atlantic ocean, which separates it from the islands of Harris and Lewis; N. for a distance of 50 miles, by the Northern ocean; E. for a distance of 37½ miles, by the county of Caithness; S. E. for a distance of 32½ miles, by the Moray frith; and S. and S. W. for a distance of 52½ miles, by the Dornoch firth, the Oicel, and some lesser streams, which separate it from the county of Ross. The county of Sutherland, though it never has been surveyed, is computed to contain 1,540,000 acres, deducting 50,000 for salt water lochs. This county may be considered as divided into three districts, namely, the eastern, near the German ocean; the western, on the coast of the Atlantic; and the middle or central district. The eastern district con-ists of a strip of level land, which runs along the coast side, and is from a quarter to a mile in breadth. The middle district resembles the other parts of the North Highlands: it consists of the four straths or valleys of the rivers of Helmsdale, Brora, Fleet, and Cickel, with their tributary streams issuing from the adjoining mountains. The soil between the mountains is a sharp loam. Black cattle and sheep are the staple commodities on which the farmers and tacksmen depend for the payment of their rent. The shores bordering the Atlantic are bold; and the whole district is wild, rocky, and mountainous. The Assynt mountains are huge and barren, without scarcely a stalk of heath to be seen on their surface; yet the glens, ravines, and hollows, betwixt these mountains, are extremely favourable to pasturage. Owing to the vicinity of the Atlantic ocean, from which the west wind brings heavy clouds, there is no part of Scotland more subject to rain than the western district of the county of Sutherland. On the coasts of the numerous bays, there are many rugged and partially arable fields; but the climate, from the constant rains and mists, does not second the favourable properties of the soil. The vallies are occupied by numerous lakes and rivers, the chief of which are Loch Shin, which stretches 20 miles from north-west to south-east, and is about 1 mile broad, and abounds with salmon and trout. The rivers and streams, as may be supposed in such a mountainous country, are numerous. The most considerable of the rivers is the Cickel, or frith of Dornoch, which is navigable 13 miles for vessels of 40 tons; the water of Fleet, or Strathfleet; the water of Brora; the water of Helmsdale. On the northern and western coasts is the water of Hallilale, the water of Strathly, the river Naver, the waters of Kenloch, Hope, and Eribol. The N. W. and W. coasts are indented by numerous bays of great extent, and have many promontories extending into the ocean. Rock crystals and pebbles are found in many parts; also beautiful garnets, and specimens of native gold. Sutherlandshire sends one member to parliament. There are three great deer forests; and other kinds of game are found in great plenty, as common and alpine hares, moorfoal, black cocks, ptarmigans, wild pigeons, and partridges. The valued rent of the county is £36,193 10s. 9d. The real rent has been estimated at about £48,000 per annum. In no part of Scotland have greater changes and improvements taken place within the last 20 years, than in the county of Sutherland. Previous to the year 1803, this county was separated by physical obstacles, from the rest of Scotland. The country being intersected by the Moray frith, and by the four friths of the Beaully, Camnary, Dornoch, and Loch Fleet, all these dangerous and inconvenient inlets of the sea had to be crossed, in order to reach the shire of Sutherland, which was thus nearly insulated from the rest of the country.

try; and there were no inns for the accommodation of the traveller; and beyond the Dornoch frith there were no roads. In the year 1803, parliament having agreed to advance half the expence of constructing certain roads, and bridges in the Highlands of Scotland, the proprietors of Ross-shire and Inverness embraced the offer, and in consequence, a line of road has been constructed according to the best principles of the art, from the town of Inverness by Beaully and Dingwall, to the boundaries of the county of Sutherland, two excellent stone bridges, consisting of five arches each, having been built across the Beaully and Camnary rivers. An iron bridge was thrown over the frith of Dornoch, a frith which roads were furnished to different parts of the country. Over Loch Fleet a mound was constructed, with a bridge at one end. The roads thus formed became the bases of other roads, which have been since made out in other directions, and which have been found of incalculable benefit for the improvement of the country. Sutherlandshire was one of the last strongholds of the feudal system of Scotland, where that ancient state of ignorance prevailed, after it had been banished from the other parts of the country, by the progress of improvement and increased rents. Almost all the lands, and particularly those on the Sutherlandshire coast, have been disencumbered of their superfluous tenants, and their place has been filled up by active improvers. The lands which belonged to the ancient tenantry, under the tie of military service, have thus been taken from them, and they have been removed and converted into fishers on the sea coast, where they prosecute the herring and white fisheries. Many of these changes were resisted by the poor inhabitants, who could not be persuaded to abandon the inheritance of their forefathers; force had to be used, and the most afflictive scenes frequently took place in the course of these improvements. The removing of the tenants commenced in 1807, and has been since continued as the different tacks expired. In the years 1812, 1819, and 1820, when a great proportion of the tacks expired, numerous removals took place, which produced great agitation in the county, and gave rise to a violent controversy as to the propriety of these measures, and as to the manner in which they were carried into effect. Population 22,640.

BORRIS, a town of the Ecclesiastical State, 13 miles S. Viterbo. Population 1000.

BOSTON, the name of various parishes, hamlets, and townships, in England.

BUXTON, a town of Derbyshire, a neat market town of England, Warwickshire. The town contains many dwellings of an ornamental character. The church is a handsome structure, comprising a nave, chancel, and two side aisles. Here is also a grammar school. Within the last century, some manufactures connected with Birmingham have been introduced into the town. The common of Buxton Park lies to the north-west of the town, and contains about 3500 acres. Population 3466. 7 miles N. N. E. Birmingham.

SUTTLEGE, SETTLEGE, or SUDLEGE, a celebrated river of Hindostan, being the easternmost of the five rivers which are called the Punjab. It rises in the Himalaya mountains, and falls into the Indus, near the 20th degree of N. lat.

SWADELMAR, a neat smart village of Ireland, in the county of Cavan.

SWAFFHAM, a well built market town of England, in Norfolk, a respectable and genteel town. The chief public building is the church, a spacious handsome pile of building. The town has, besides, a Quaker meeting-house. Pop. 2236. 15 miles S. E. Lynn.

SWAFFHAM, PRIOR, or LITTLE SWAFFHAM, a village of England, in Cambridgeshire. Population 979.

SWAINBY, a hamlet of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

SWAINTHORPE, a village of England, in Norfolk, 4½ miles N. N. E. St Mary Stratton.

SWALE, a river of England, which falls into the Ure.

SWALE, EAST and WEST, two branches of the river Medway, in England, which run into the Thames.

SWALVE, a village of the Netherlands, in North Brabant. Population 2100.

SWAN ISLAND, an island of the United States, on the coast of Maine. Pop. 51.

SWAN RIVER, a river of North America, which runs into the Little Winnipeg lake.

SWANSEA, a market town and borough of Wales, in Glamorganshire. It stands on a beautiful bay of the Bristol channel, on the river Tawe, in the midst of the most inexhaustible mines of coal and of iron; while by means of its harbour, and of the navigable river Tawe, it commands a ready outlet for these productions of the interior. The town extends in length about a mile and a half, or two miles. The streets are numerous, and contain a large proportion of well built houses, occupied by opulent individuals. It is much resorted to during the summer for sea-bathing; and to accommodate these strangers, numerous elegant lodging-houses have been erected. Of the public buildings of Swansea, the parish church is a handsome modern edifice, containing a middle aisle, and two side aisles separated from it by two rows of pillars, with a large square tower at one end. The whole length of the building is 72 feet, and the width 54. The old church fell down in 1739, and some fragments of the walls still remain. There is another small church, formerly a chapel belonging to the knights of Jerusalem. There are here several other places of worship belonging to various classes of dissenters. The castle of Swansea is situated on an elevated spot in the middle of the town, but is surrounded by houses which conceal it on every side. On the eastern side of the tower, a large part of the original building is standing, which is surmounted by an elegant parapet, with arched openings. The apartments which are habitable have been converted into a poor-house, and a jail, principally used for the confinement of debtors. The town-hall of Swansea is spacious and handsome. It has also a commodious theatre, and a free school. Swansea has immense manufacturing establishments in iron, copper, brass, spelter, tin, and earthen-ware. It has also potteries on a large scale; a soap manufactory, and an extensive brewery. Great improvements have been made in the harbour. Besides its commerce and trade, Swansea derives considerable benefit from the great resort of visitors to the sea-bathing. For the accommodation of invalids, there are warm and cold salt water baths. Swansea joins with Cardiff in the return of the member of parliament for that place. Population 10,225. 45 miles W. Cardiff.

SWANSEY, a township of the United States, in Cheshire county, New Hampshire. Population 1400.—2d. Another in Bristol county, Massachusetts.

SWANTON, a poet township of the United States, in Franklin county, Vermont.

SWANTOWN, a village of the United States, in Kent county, Maryland.

SWANWICH, a town and parish of England, in Purbeck Isle, Dorsetshire. It exports immense quantities of stone.

SWARLAND, a hamlet of England, in Northumberland.

SWEDEN, an extensive kingdom in the north of Europe, which has experienced great territorial changes since 1809. It lost in that year the valuable province of Finland. Sweden, including Swedish Lapland, is a country of great length, stretching from 55. 20. to 69. of N. lat. about 1000 miles; its breadth is between 300 and 300 miles, in one part from 11. 10. to 23. 20. of E. long; area 172,000 square miles. Sweden is bounded N. by Norwegian Lapland; E. by the gulf of Bothnia and the Baltic, S. and W. by portions of the Baltic and by Norway. It consisted originally of three kingdoms, Gothland, Sweden proper, and Norrland, the last including Swedish

This distinction is now abolished, and the whole kingdom divided into the following districts:—Umea, Heringsand, Gedeberg, Upsal, Stockholm, Western, Nykoping, Orebro, Stora Kopparberg, or Falun, Carlstadt, Lidköping, Jonkoping, Kronoberg or Wexlo, Calmar, Carlskrona, Scarsborg, Elfsborg, Gottenburg, Halmstadt, Christadst, Malmoehus, and Wisby. Sweden, though inclosed by mountains on the west and north, is in general a very flat country; and it is remarkable, that along the whole road from Gottenburg in the west to Stockholm in the east, there is not a single activity of consequence, till within a few miles of the latter. The climate is less severe than might be expected in so high a latitude. In Stockholm the average of temperature throughout the year is four degrees higher than at St Petersburg. The quantity of rain that falls annually in Sweden does not exceed 19 inches. The most striking feature in the appearance of Sweden is the number and extent of its lakes, which are computed to occupy 9200 square miles, nearly an eighteenth of the whole surface. The lake of Wenner is the largest of all. The other great lakes are the Wetter and the Hjelmar, both to the southward of the capital, and at some distance from it. Of the rivers, the Ljusna, the Dal, and the Clara, rise in the mountains bordering on Norway, and flow, the first two into the gulf of Bothnia, the last into the lake of Wenner. The Angerman, the Umea, the Skefflen, the Pitea, the Julea, and the Torneu, are rivers of Lapland. The plants of Sweden are similar to those of Britain, with the exception, however, of several, such as broom, furze, and walnut trees, which have not strength to withstand the continued cold of a Swedish winter. Apple, pear, and cherry trees, grow here, but languidly; while berries of many different kinds are produced spontaneously, and spread luxuriantly. As to corn, wheat succeeds only in the southern provinces; oats are raised more generally, and in larger quantities; but rye and barley are the species of grain most frequently met with. In animals, at least such as are domestic, there is very little difference between Sweden and Britain. As to beasts of game, hares and foxes are as abundant as in Britain, with a long list of animals the natural inhabitants of wilds unknown in Britain, such as beavers, wolves, and, in the cold provinces of the north, bears. In the birds there prevails a greater similarity between Britain and Sweden. From the statistical survey of Sweden, it appears that hardly a thirtieth part of the surface of the country is arable, and if the wilds of Norrland were included, it would not be a sixtieth. Agriculture is in a very backward state; as also manufactures. The metals, particularly iron and copper, are the staple articles of manufacture. A number of the copper mines, at Fahlun and elsewhere, have become less productive. The iron works employ a much greater number of hands; the forges are small, but the ore, and consequently the iron, is in general of superior quality. Alum and copper ore are exported to the harbours in the south of the Baltic; but the pottery, glass-works, woollen manufactures, sugar refineries, snuff and tobacco works, are merely sufficient to meet the home consumption. The trade of Sweden is much cramped by impolitic restrictions; and though these are somewhat relaxed, they are still too much enforced. Sweden has suffered greatly in the present age from an excess of paper currency. The bank of Stockholm dates so far back as 1657, and was long conducted with regularity; but since the latter part of the 18th century, undue advances to government have produced an over issue, and consequently a depreciation of its paper. The exclusive privileges granted to the East India company, and some smaller associations, are also a source of public detriment. The revenue of Sweden is derived from various sources: the rent of the royal domains, a portion of the great tithes, duties on imports and exports, a tax on spirituous liquors, and one of more questionable policy, on mines, forges, and chimnies, along with a poll tax and a few monopolies. The amount of revenue is about one million sterling. The military force is on a very small scale. The established religion is Lutheranism; and the dissenters are, on the whole, far from numerous. The church establishments consist of one archbishop, 11 bishops, 70 archdeacons, and 3620 other clergymen. The university of Upsal was founded in 1477, and has in general maintained a good character, particularly for physical science. The university of Lund, in the province of Schonen in the south, is of much more recent date, and on a smaller scale. There are about 11 high schools. The scientific and literary societies of Sweden are numerous, and belong chiefly to Stockholm. In Sweden the royal prerogative is limited, and a considerable share of power is vested in the nobility and the people. The diet consists of four orders, the nobles, the clergy, the peasants, and the burghers. The nobles are too numerous for so thinly peopled a country. The clerical body is represented by one archbishop (of Upsal), the eleven bishops of the kingdom, and by deputies from the inferior clergy. The peasants consist of delegates from that body, and the burghers of deputies from the royal free towns. The two kingdoms, Gothland and Svenland, of which Sweden once consisted, were united in the 13th century by the failure of the royal line in the former. In the 14th century Sweden became subject to Margaret of Denmark, who has been styled the Semiramis of the North, and who joined the three kingdoms in one by the union of Calmar in 1397. Gustavus Vasa asserted the independence of Sweden, and ascended the throne in 1521. He bequeathed the crown to his posterity, who continued to reign, and in general with distinction, until the present age; but most of them, in particular Gustavus Adolphus, his daughter Christina, Charles XII. and Gustavus III. discovered a romantic spirit, approaching in the case of Charles XII. to a degree of infatuation; and the dynasty ended in a prince (Gustavus IV.) who had all the eccentricity, and hardly any of the talents of his predecessors. In 1809, this last monarch engaging in undertakings totally beyond the resources of his people, was deposed; and next year Bernadotte was elected. Pop. 2,425,700.

SWENSSONSTOWN, a post township of the United States, in Gloucester county, New Jersey, with 50 or 60 houses.

SWIFT SPRINGS, a post village of the United States, in Monroe county, Virginia.

SWIFT, a river of England, in Leicester and Warwick shires. It joins the Avon.

SWIFT, a river of the United States, in New Hampshire.

SWIFT'S CREEK, a river of Virginia, which runs into the Appomattox.

SWIFT GATE, a river of England, in Gloucestershire, which runs into the Avon.

SWILLY, a river of Ireland, county of Donegal, which runs into the Swilly Lough.

SWINDON, a market town of England, in the county of Wilts. The church is of mean architecture. The town has a respectable free school. Population 1530.

SWINON, a village of England, in Staffordshire.

SWINFLEET, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 956.

SWINMUNDE, a town of Pomerania, at the mouth of the Swine. Population 2400.

SWINESHEAD, a market town of England, in Lincolnshire, 7 miles S. W. Boston. Population 1696.

SWINTHORPE, SWINEYARD, and SWINFEN, three hamlets of England, in Lincolnshire, Cheshire, and Staffordshire.

SWINNA, a small island, about a mile long, in the middle of the Pentland frith.

SWINTON, three townships of England, in Yorkshire.

SWITZERLAND, a well known country in the interior of Europe, bounded W. by France, S. by Italy, and N. and E. by Germany. It extends from east to west nearly 200 miles, and from north to south about 140. It consists, since 1815, of the following 22 cantons, viz. Schwitz, Uri, Unterwalden, Berne, Zurich, Lucerne, Glaris, Zug, Appenzell, Schaffhausen, Fribourg, Solothurn, Bale, Grosse, Vaud, Ticino, St Gall, Thurgau, Aargau, Neuchâtel, Valais, and Geneva. The chief towns of Switzerland are, Geneva, containing 22,800 inhabitants; Bale, 15,000; Berne, 13,340; Zurich, 10,500; Lausanne, 10,000; St. Gall, 8200; Neuchâtel, 4800; Fribourg, 6500; Lucerne, 5000; and Solothurn, 4200. Switzerland, by far the most mountainous country in Europe, has the Alps not only along the whole of its southern and eastern frontier, but throughout the chief part of its interior; the only extensive tract of level ground, or rather of vales, with mountains of more moderate height, being to the westward, in the cantons of Bale, Zurich, and part of Berne; but even there the extreme frontier is formed by mountains, the Jura ridge, extending in a long line from north to south. Of the vales of Switzerland, the most remarkable is that of the Rhone, which is at once the widest, and surrounded by the highest mountains. The Alps vary in height from 5 to 8, 10, 12, and even 16,000 feet. After Mont Blanc, computed at 15,500 feet, comes Monte Rosa, 14,200 feet. Mount St. Gothard, the great St. Bernard, and the Simplon, are not equal in height to several mountains of the interior, such as Mount Cervin, 12,800 feet; the Jungfrau-horn, the Turstern-horn, the Furca, Schreckhorn, each nearly 14,000 feet; the Wetterhorn and Gallenstock, between 11,000 and 12,000, &c. The Alps branch out into a number of lateral chains, and exhibit at their base, on their ascent, and towards their summit, every variety of temperature and product; rich corn fields or luxuriant pastures extending along the lower part of many of these mountains. The middle consists of pastures less productive, but containing a great variety of plants; while the summits are often composed of rocks, craggy, inaccessible, devoid of vegetation, and covered with enormous masses of ice and snow. There are mines of silver, copper, iron, and lead, in different parts; there are also quarries of rock salt. Marble, porphyry, alabaster, crystal, and sulphur, are occasionally found in the mountains. Of mineral waters, the most considerable are those of Leuck and Schintzpuach, and the warm baths of Pfäfers. The glaciers occupy the plains or hollows which separate the peaks of the high mountains, being lakes of frozen snow accumulated to a vast height or rather depth, and detaching, from time to time, enormous masses called avalanches, which roll down with a frightful noise. The formation of glaciers takes place near the line of perpetual congelation (about 8000 or 9000 feet above the sea); although, in a winter of unusual rigour, their ramifications extend considerably lower. In the long Alpine range are reckoned no less than 400 of these glaciers, extending from 16 to 18 miles in length, by 1 or 2 in breadth. Their depth can with difficulty be ascertained, but is supposed to vary from 100 to 600 feet; the total extent of their surface has been calculated at 1000 square miles. The chief rivers are the Rhone, the Ticino, the Aar, the Rhine with its tributaries, the Thur, the Limmat, the Reuss, and the Aar. The lakes of Switzerland are numerous; the principal are those of Geneva, Constance, Neuchâtel, Bieme, Zurich, Walkenstadt, Waldstatter or Lucerne, Thun, and Brienz. No country exhibits a greater variety of temperature than Switzerland. While the vales, or the bases of the mountains, enjoy the warmth of an Italian sun, the ascent discovers a scanty vegetation, and the summit is doomed to all the rigours of an Icelandic winter. The products of Switzerland are wheat, barley, oats, maize, flax, hemp, and tobacco. The fruits of most frequent occurrence are vines, chestnuts, prunes, peaches, walnuts, cherries; in the colder situations, apples and pears; and in the southern vales, the almond and fig; the latter, however, in small quantities. Cheese, butter, tallow, hides, form the chief articles of export from the pastoral districts. After large cattle, the animals chiefly raised are goats, sheep, and hogs. The summit of the Alps are occupied by the chamois, the wild goat, the white and red fox, and a kind of hare which, in summer, resembles the hare of Britain, but in winter becomes as white as snow. The manufactures of Switzerland are linen, lace, thread, woollens, and cottons; clocks and watches have long been staple articles at Geneva and Neuchâtel; while leather, gloves, silks, porcelain, pottery, toys, tobacco, and snuff, are made in various places. Of the seminaries of Switzerland, the principal are the celebrated university of Geneva, and the university of Bale. There are academies or colleges at Zurich, Berne, and Lausanne, and schools of good repute in various towns. Switzerland, though a republic, has never, like Rome or Athens, formed one great community: it is, and has all along been, a confederacy of petty states, differing more from each other in their respective constitutions, than the Dutch provinces, or the component parts of the American union. In some cantons the form of government is democratic, but in most it is oligarchic. The general concerns of the republic are managed by a general assembly or diet, composed of deputies from each of the cantons. The federal republic of Switzerland had existed during nearly five centuries, and had seen very little of war, except in the service of foreign powers. At last, in 1798, the French directory, occupying Lombardy on the one side, and the liberal provinces on the other, determined to add Switzerland to their acquisition, invaded it with a force which it was impossible even for the mountaineers to resist, and succeeded in new modelling the Helvetic constitution. The treaty of Amiens provided for the evacuation of Switzerland by the French. It was invaded by Bonaparte, and reduced under his authority; but was emancipated by the victories of the allies in 1814. Its independence has been since recognised.

SWITZERLAND, a county of the United States, in Indiana. Pop. in 1815, 3500.

SWORDS, a long irregularly built town of Ireland, in the county of Dublin.

SYDNEY, a town of New Holland, and the capital of the British settlements in New South Wales, about 7 miles from the mouth of Port Jackson, in a cove to which it gives name. It stands principally on two hilly necks of land, with a proportion of flat ground intervening. These form together Sydney cove, which is one of the finest natural basins of water that can be imagined, and for safety and convenience rivals the best works of art. The appearance of the town is rude and irregular; though it has been of late much improved in this particular. It covers a great deal of ground in proportion to its population, owing to the large space of ground attached to each house, in most instances sufficient for a garden. Although the houses are for the most part small, and of mean appearance, the public buildings are more respectable. There is a very good market, although it is of very recent date. Here also is a bank, called the Bank of New South Wales. This town also contains two very good public schools, for the education of children of both sexes. There are, besides, other establishments for the gratuitous diffusion of education in every populous district throughout the colony. There are in this town and other parts of the colony, several good private seminaries for the board and education of the children of opulent parents. The harbour of Port Jackson is perhaps exceeded by none in the world. It is navigable for vessels of any burden for about seven miles above the town, i. e. about fifteen miles from the entrance. It possesses the best anchorage the whole way, and is perfectly sheltered from every wind that can blow. The value of land in this town is daily increasing; rents are in consequence exorbitantly high; and Mr. Westworth, in his statistical account of the British settlements in this quarter, mentions that it is very far from a commodious house that can be had for £100 a year unfurnished. Population 7000. Long. 151, 25. E. Lat. 33. 15. S.

SYENE, a town of Upper Egypt, the most southerly in that country, and forming its frontier towards Nubia. It has many remains of antiquity now; but the principal ruins are those of the Saracen town, which are very extensive. Although Syene is considered as a military station, yet the Aga is not provided with any force; and the castle is of no strength. Long. 32. 55. E. Lat. 24. 6. N.

SYLVEA, or SILVEA, a town of Portugal, province of Algarva. Population 2000.

SYMI, a small island near the coast of Asia Minor. The whole inhabitants reside in the town, which is built near the top of a high rocky mountain, and contains from 1800 to 2000 houses.

SYMPHORIEN DE LAÏ, St, a town of France, 24 miles N. W. Lyons. Pop. 3300.

SYMPHORIEN SUR COISE, St, a town of France, 18 miles S. W. Lyons. Pop. 1800.

SYRA, an island of the Grecian archipelago, in the midst of the Cyclades, near Delos. Length 14 miles. Long. 25. 34. E. Lat. 37. 22. N.

SYRACUSE, a celebrated town of Sicily, in the south-east of the island, and possessing, in ancient times, a larger population than Athens, or any of the Grecian cities. It was founded by a colony of Corinthians about 736 years before the Christian era. The shape of ancient Syracuse was triangular, one side being formed by the sea, the other by a line of rock, the third by a strong wall. The city consisted of four parts; that called Ortigia, situated between the two harbours, Agradina, a more extensive quarter, extending the sea side from north to south; and an equally large division; by Naxos, forming the western extremity of the city, and defended by a high and strong ground. At present, the only inhabited part of Syracuse is the south-east corner, containing Ortigia and part of Agradina. It is insulated, walled, and entered by draw-bridges. The streets are regular, but narrow, the houses tolerably built.

The cathedral or principal church is the ancient temple of Minerva. There remains also the ancient amphitheatre, of an oval form, above 300 feet in length, and 200 in width. In 1810 a beautiful statue of Venus was dug out from among ruins; and there are many other remains of antiquity. The harbour exists in all its beauty. It is capable of receiving vessels of the greatest burden, and of containing a very numerous fleet. Though at present entirely neglected, it might easily be rendered a great naval and commercial station. The exports from the town are limited to wine, oil, hemp, vitre, and some wheat. It contains no remarkable buildings, nor any thing that deserves the name of a square. It has, however, an hospital, and a number of churches and convents. Population 15,000. 80 miles S. S. W. Messina. Long. 15. 27. 3. E. Lat. 37. 3. 0. N.

SYRIA, a fine country of Asia, situated along the coast of the Mediterranean, which bounds it on the west, while on the north Mount Taurus and its branches divide it from Asia Minor, and on the east a vast and trackless desert, stretching northwards from Arabia. On the south it has Palestine. In the earliest periods of the Jewish history, Syria was formed into a powerful kingdom, having Damascus for its capital. Its most remarkable district, however, consisted of the sea coast, entitled Phœnicia, in which commerce flourished to a degree unexampled in ancient times. After the conquests and death of Alexander, Syria was erected by his lieutenant, Seleucus, into a separate kingdom. Under Antiochus it was reduced by the Romans. It then fell under the Saracen sway, and afterwards became one of the richest appendages of the Turkish empire. It has been since governed by the Turkish viceroys, some of whom have almost shaken off the Turkish authority. About the middle of the last century, the Turks were obliged to grant to Daher, a powerful Arabian sheik, an annual lease of his dominions, and then to confirm it to his successor, who was afterwards, however, attacked by the Turks, and put to death. His successor was the celebrated Dejemzar Pacha, who soon raised a power almost equally independent, but the savage energy of whose administration was not accompanied by the improving and protecting system of his predecessor. He joined with the British in resisting the invasions of Bonaparte. After the death of Dejemzar, the power reverted to the Porte, and Selim was appointed pacha. Syria has ever since been threatened by the formidable invader of the Wahabie, who have entirely blocked up the route to Mecca. The leading feature in the physical aspect of Syria consists in the great mountain chain traversing it from south to north, and known, from its highest pinnacle near Tripoli and Bairout, under the name of Lebanon, or Libanus, connected with Mount Chama, which stretches farther to the north; it forms a continued range, locking in with Mount Taurus on the frontier of Asia Minor. While Lebanon faces the Mediterranean, a parallel chain, called Anti Libanus, looks eastward upon the Syrian desert. Thus Syria, in its inhabited districts, may be considered as a country of valleys; but many of these valleys are blessed with extreme fertility, as well as with the utmost felicity of climate. Besides all the most valuable grains, its fruits are held in especial esteem, particularly the oranges of Tripoli, the figs of Bairout, and the pistachios of Aleppo. As we ascend the sloping sides of Lebanon, all the varieties of European climate are successively experienced. These mountain tracks being possessed by free and industrious tribes, are much more diligently cultivated than the plains, whose tenants are continually exposed to the extortions of the pachas. The vine and the mulberry are reared by care to great perfection: silk and wines are produced, which rival those of Italy and France. Olives and tobacco are also cultivated successfully, and to a great extent. The commerce of Syria is inconsiderable. Scanderoun, Tripoli, Saïde, and other ports on the Mediterranean, are the residence of a few Frank merchants, and carry on a limited intercourse with Europe. The land communication is interrupted by the distracted state of the country, and the domination of the Wahabie. Few countries present a greater variety of population. Its open plains, separated by no defined boundary from Arabia, Persia, and Asia Minor, are variously occupied by the wandering population of these respective countries. Turks and Greeks form, as elsewhere, the basis of population in the cities. The only tribes which can be considered as appropriate to Syria, are the tenants of the heights of Lebanon. The most remarkable of these are the Druses and the Maronites. The Druses live in a species of rude independence, and are the only people in this part of Asia who have any semblance of a free government. They can muster 40,000 men, which probably implies a total population of about 500,000. The Maronites are another people of Lebanon, inhabiting the mountain district of Kesrouan, which rises behind Tripoli. They are more orderly and peaceable than the Druses. They are Christians, and have joined the Romish communion. Their number is supposed to exceed 100,000.

SKARAW, a town of European Russia, government of Simbirsk, 78 miles S. Simbirsk. Population 6300.

SKARAWATZSA, a town of Hungary, district of Little Kumania, 43 miles S. by W. Pest. Population 4000.

SKAZAN, a county of Hungary, lying to the north-east of the Drave. Area 2130 square miles. Population 230,000.

SKAZOSEN, a town of Austrian Illyria, 22 miles N. by E. Carlsburg. Population 2700.

SKARVAS, a town of Hungary, palatinate of Ekecsch, on the Korecsch. It has a Lutheran school, and several other seminaries. Pop. nearly 8000, partly mechanics, more agriculturists. 82 miles E. S. E. Pest.

SNARYGRAD, a town of European Russia, government of Podolia. It is built chiefly of wood. Population 7000.

SNIECZKIN, a town of Poland, 104 miles N. N. E. Warsaw. Population 2000.

SZEORDIN, a town of Hungary, county of Csongrad, opposite to the confluence of the great rivers Theysa and Maros. It is surrounded by a mound and moat, and is one of the principal towns of Hungary, containing manufactures of woollens, leather, and toys. As to religion, the Catholics and the followers of the Greek church predominate. Here is a monastery of Minorites; a school taught by the monks called Piarists; a classical school; and a small philosophical seminary. The farther public buildings are several hospitals, a work-house, and a theatre. Population 26,000. 109 miles S. S. E. Pest.

SZEKESY-KERESZTUR, a town of Transylvania, province of the Szeklers. Pop. 4500.

SZEKESZARD, a neat town of Hungary, on the Sarvitz, 162 miles S. E. Vienna. Population 3500.

SZEKESZVAR, a village of Hungary, county of Arad. Population 3000.

SZENTES, a town of Hungary, county of Csongrad, on the Kurca. Population 1000.

SZOLLOS NAGY, a town of Hungary, on the Theysa, 72 miles E. Tokay. Pop. 2200.

SZOLNOK, BRESO or INYER, a palatinate of Transylvania, bordering on Hungary on the north. Area 1336 square miles. Population 110,000.

SZOLNOK, KOCSER or MINDEK, a county or palatinate of Transylvania, bounded by Hungary entirely on the north, and partly on the west. Area 835 square miles. Population 50,000.

SEWANEKE, a town of Prussian Poland, 6 miles E. Posen. Population 2500.

T.

TAAIF, a town of Hedjaz, in Arabia, 60 miles S. E. Mecca.

TAAH, or TAAKS, a considerable city of Yemen, in Arabia, on the road from Moclin to Sana, 40 miles E. N. E. Mecca.

TAB, a river of Persia, which falls into the Persian gulf near Eudian.

TABAS, a city of Korassan, in Persia, on the road from Herat to Yazd, 337 miles from the former. Population 20,000.

TABASCO, the chief town of a former province of Mexico. It is not large, but is well built. It stands on an island at the mouth of the Rio Gujalva, which divides itself near the gulf into two arms. 197 miles E. S. E. Vera Cruz. Long. 93. 36. W. Lat. 18. 34. N.

TABASCO, an island, or rather a neck of land, in the south-west part of the gulf of Mexico, and at the bottom of the gulf of Campechy, on which is built the town of Tabasco. It is about 36 miles in length, and 7 or 8 broad.—Also a river which runs into the bay of Campechy, Long. 93. 46. W. Lat. 18. 15. N.

TABERNA, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 4 miles N. N. E. Valencia. Population 4000.

TABLE ISLAND, the name of various small islands in the Pacific ocean and Eastern seas.

TABOR, a fortified town of Bohemia, and capital of a circle of the same name, 48 miles S. by E. Prague. Population 3800.

TACAMBA, a seaport town of South America, in a bay of the Pacific ocean to which it gives name. 110 miles E. W. Quito.

TACARIGUA, a large lake of South America, in the province of Venezuela.

TACAZZE, a great river of Abyssinia. It joins the Nile near Geos, in Lat. 17. 45. N.

TACHAU, a town of Bohemia, on the Misa. Population 2800.

TACKENBREET, a village of Algiers, 44 miles S. W. Oran.

TACUNGA, the capital of a district of the same name in Quito, 44 miles S. Quito. Pop. 12,000, the greater part being Spaniards and mestizcos. Long. 73. 23. W. Lat. 55. 14. N.

TADCASTER, an ancient well built market town of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, on the Wharf, over which it has a bridge. Besides the ancient church, here is also an hospital for 12 persons, and a free school. Pop. 1631. 9 miles S. S. W. York.

TADLEY, a township of England, in Southamptonshire. Population 507.

TAY, or TAAFFE, a river of Wales, Glamorganshire. It rises among the hills in Brecknockshire, and passes by the ancient city of Llandaff, and afterwards by Cardiff, towards the southern sea, which it enters in the small bay of Pinarth.

TAFALLA, a town of Spain, in Navarre, on the Odecos, 27 miles N. Tudela. Pop. 3000.

TAFILKLT, a large district or kingdom, situated to the south-east of the mountain chain of Atlas, and tributary to the empire of Morocco. It consists of a vast plain, presenting an unvaried surface, like the sea out of sight of land. Population, according to Jackson, 650,000.

TAMANNOG, a town of European Russia, government of Ekaterinoslav, near the northern extremity of the sea of Azoph. It has a harbour and fortress, maritime and commercial courts, a naval hospital, and a lazaretto. Pop. 6000. 27 miles W. N. W. Azoph.

TAGGAL, a prettily situated town of the island of Java, on the north coast, 244 miles E. Batavia.

TAGHMOH, a village of Ireland, in the county of Wexford, 82 miles S. Dublin.

TAGLIAMENTO, a large river of Austrian Italy, in the government of Venice, which flows southward till reaching the Adriatic.

TAGLIO, a river of the north-west of Italy, in the province of Genoa.

TAGUS, the largest of all the rivers of Spain, issues from a great spring in the mountains of Albaracin, between Arragon and Old Castile, at the distance of little more than 100 miles from the Mediterranean. Pursuing its course to the Atlantic, in a westward direction, a little inclined to the south, it passes the palace of Aranjuez, the cities of Toledo, Talavera, Alcantara, Abrantes, and Lisbon, and flows into the sea, 7 miles below the capital of Portugal.

TAIEF, a town of Hedsjas, in Arabia, 88 miles E. Mecca.

TAIN, a parish and irregularly built royal burgh of Scotland, and county town of Ross-shire, on the frith of Dornoch, 30½ miles N. by E. of Inverness. The town is old: it has an elegant building for assemblies and the meeting of free masons. The town has lately been increased by the building of a suburb, which is separated from the town by a small brook, over which is a handsome bridge. A large and elegant church was erected in 1815. There is a large and handsome building for an academy; also a grammar school. It unites with Dingwall, Dornoch, Kirkwall, and Wick, in sending a representative to parliament. Population 2881.

TAIN, or TEAN, a river of England, in Staffordshire, which runs into the Dove.

TAIN, a town of France, department of the Drome, on the Rhone, noted for its excellent wines. Population 1400.

TAINEE, or THAINEE, a town on the east coast of Tunis, in Africa, 69 miles S. S. E. Kairwan.

TAI-TONG, a city of China, of the first rank, in Shansee, 155 miles W. Peking.

TAI-YUEN, a city of China, of the first rank, in Shansee, 230 miles W. S. W. Peking.

TAJAPARU, a large arm of the great river Amazon, which branches off just before the main stream enters the sea.

TAJUNNA, a river of Spain, which falls into the Xaruma, a tributary of the Tagus.

TAKA, a considerable district of Eastern Nubia, occurring in the track between Shendy and Suakin.

TAKENHAM, a village of England, in Wiltshire, near Wootton Bassett.

TALANDA, a town of Greece, in the ancient Boeotia, 18 miles N. N. E. Livadia.

TALANDRE, a town of France, in Auvergne, department of the Puy de Dôme, Pop. 3300.

TALAVEIRA DE LA REYNA, an ancient town of Spain, in New Castle, on the Tagus, over which there is a bridge of 35 arches, 1200 feet in length. It is surrounded by a fertile plain of vast extent, intersected by the river. Part of the old ramparts are still in preservation, but they are little more than an object of curiosity. It contains several well built churches; in particular that of the Hieronymites: has two public walks; but nothing can be poorer than the general appearance of the place. The dwelling-houses are seldom more than one story in height. The streets are badly paved, and are crossed by a number of narrow lanes. It has four hospitals, a classical, a theological, and a divinity school. Silk manufactures are still carried on in the town, and in the neighbouring village of Cervera, as well as manufactures of soap, hals, and earthenware. Talavera is a place of great antiquity, and contains many Roman monuments. It is noted for the battle fought on 27th and 28th July 1809, between the French army and an allied force of British and Spaniards. The French were repulsed. Pop. 6000. 63 miles W. S. W. Madrid.

TALAVEIRA LA VIEJA, a small town of Spain, on the Tagus, 70 miles W. by S. Toledo.

TALBOT, a county of the United States, in Maryland. Pop. 14,230, including 4875 slaves.

TALCA, or ST AUGUSTINE, a considerable town of Chili, province of Maule, of which it is the capital, on the river Maule, 193 miles N. N. E. Concepcion. Long. 71½. Lat. 35. 13. S.

TALCAGUANO, a port on the coast of the kingdom of Chili, within the bay of La Concepcion, 2 leagues from the city of La Concepcion.

TALLAGH, a decayed village of Ireland, in the county of Waterford, 104 miles S. S. W. Dublin.

TALLAPOOSA, or OAKFUSKEE, a river of the United States, which rises in Georgia, flows south-west, and unites with the Coosa, to form the Alabama.

TALLEVEDE, a town of France, department of Calvados. Population 3000.

TALLWATER, a river of Ireland, county of Armagh, which runs, with the Callen, into Blackwater, near Charlemont.

TALLYA, a town of Hungary, 10 miles N. W. Tokay. Population 3700.

TALMONT, a town of France, department of the Lower Charente. Population 2500.

TALNEKE, a celebrated town and fortress of Hindostan, province of Khandesh. Long. 75. E. Lat. 21. 13. N.

TAMAN, an island in the south of European Russia, in the government of Taurida. It is formed by the straits of Taman, the sea of Azoph, and the Black sea.

TAMAR, a river of England, which rises in Devonshire; and on being joined by the Tavy, and passing near Saltash, it forms the noble harbour of Hamoaze, below Plymouth, falling into the sea at Mount Edgcumbe.

TAMAR, a river of Van Diemen's Land.

TAMARACA, a province of Brazil, bounded N. by the province of Paraíba, and S. by that of Oitinda, E. by the sea, and W. by the country of the Indians. It is 7 leagues in extent along the coast, but 20 or 40 in the interior of the country.

TAMARACA, the capital of the above dis-erity, situated on the top of a mountain. It has a magnificent parish church. Pop. 200 housekeepers. 14 miles N. Olinda.

TANUSCH, a village of Germany, 10 miles N. E. Schmaldden. Pop. 1400.

TANUO, a town of Peru, in the province of Cuzco and Ica, situated on the north shore of the river Quillabamba, 45 miles N. N. W. Cuzco. In the vicinity is a mountain, on which is to be seen a fortress which belonged to the Incas, built of large wrought stone, so beautifully fitted together, as that the junction is scarcely perceptible.

TAMBOV, a large province or government in the central part of European Russia, lying to the west of those of Penza and Saratov, between lat. 51. 38. and 55. 20. N. and long. 39. 40. and 43. 40. E. Area 21,000 square miles; population 1,135,000.

TAMBOV, a town of Russia, capital of the government of Tambov, on the Vna. It has manufactures of woollen, canvas, linen, and alum. Population 10,700. 286 miles S. E. Moscow.

TAMBE, a river of Spain, in Galicia, which flows into the Atlantic at Noya.

TAME, a river of England, which runs into the Thames below Dorchester.—Also a tributary of the Trent, in Staffordshire.

TAMIAQUA, a lake of Mexico, which joins the sea between the river Tampico and the Punta Delgada.

TAMISE, a town of the Netherlands, in East Flanders, on the Scheldt. It has some manufactures of linen and lace. Pop. 5700. 6 miles N. Dendermonde.

TAMMANT, ST. a county of the United States, in Louisiana, on the north side of Lake Pontchartrain, and west of Pearl river.

TAMMANT'S ST. a village of the United States, in Mecklenburg county, Virginia.

TAMMTOUL, a small village of Scotland, in Banffshire, on the banks of the Avo.

TAMPICO, an abundant river of Mexico, intendency of San Luis de Potosi, which runs into the gulf of Mexico.

TAMPICO, a town of Mexico, capital of a district of the same name, 214 miles N. W. Vera Cruz.

TAMWORTH, a well built market town and borough of England, in Staffordshire, divided by the Thame, over which is a bridge, into nearly equal parts. The church of Tamworth is supposed to occupy the site of a nunnery. It is a very spacious building. Here are, besides, several meeting houses for dissenters. It has an hospital, founded and endowed by Guy; and a grammar school, founded by Queen Elizabeth. Tamworth castle is still in existence; to a modern eye it appears dull and heavy, but the elevation of its site throws around it an air of considerable grandeur. It has a manufacture of superfine narrow woollen cloths, which has much decreased. The printing of calicoes, and the tanneries, have greatly advanced. It has also breweries of ale. It sends two representatives to parliament: number of voters 250. Population of the parish 7103. 8 miles S. E. Lichfield.

TANA, a large river of Lapland, which falls into the Arctic ocean, in long. 31. 30. E. Lat. 71. N.

TANAGRA, a town of ancient Greece, in the north of Attica.

TANAK, a river of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire, which falls into the river Dee.

TANARO, a considerable river of Piedmont, which falls into the Po.

TANAT, a river of Wales, which runs into the Severn.

TANCOA, a town of Portugal, on the Tagus, 68 miles W. N. W. Lisbon. Pop. 2000.

TANDERAGEE, a considerable village of Ireland, in Armagh, 61 miles N. W. Dublin.

TANETOWN, a post township of the United States, in Frederick county, Maryland.

TANFIELD, three hamlets of England, one in Cheshire, and two in Yorkshire.

TANGERANG, a considerable village of Java, about 15 miles west from Batavia.

TANGERANG, a river of Java, which falls into the ocean, about 20 miles W. Bantam.

TANGEMUNDE, a town of Prussia, on the Elbe, 59 miles W. Berlin. Pop. 3200.

TANGIER, a considerable seaport of Fez, in Morocco, situated on the straits of Gibraltar, a few miles to the east of Cape Spartel.

It is an ancient town, known under the name of Tinja to the Romans, who took it under Sertorius. In modern times Tangier has been a subject of eager contest between the Moors and the Portuguese. It now subsists chiefly by supplying the British garrison of Gibraltar with cattle and vegetables. The bay of Tangier is encumbered by the ruins of the mole and fortification, and is not very safe during winter in westerly winds. 38 miles W. S. W. Gibraltar. Long. 5. 50. W. Lat. 35. 42. N.

TANGIER ISLANDS, several islands of the Chesapeake, near the coast of Maryland.

TANGIYOLO, a river of the United States, which flows into Lake Pontchartrain.

TANGLEY, two hamlets of England, in Southamptonshire and Oxfordshire.

TANNAX, a town of Savoy, 22 miles E. by S. Geneva. Population 2500.

TANJORE, an extensive, populous, and well cultivated district of the south of India, province of the Carnatic, now in possession of the British. It is about 95 miles in length, by 50 in breadth.

TANJORE, a celebrated town and fortress, and capital of the above mentioned district. Including the suburbs, it is nearly six miles in circumference. There are two forts, one of which comprehends the palace and other public buildings; the other contains one of the handsomest temples in the south of India, and a college, formerly a celebrated place of Hindoo learning. Long. 79. 11. E. Lat. 10. 42. N.

TANWA, a town and fortress of Hindostan, district of Benjay, on the island of Salsette. The fort, which is very strong, commands the passage between the island and the mainland. The town is straggling, but not large, although it contains several Portuguese churches.—Another fortress situated on the Bhaggarutty or Hoogly river, about two miles below Calcutta.

TANNA, an island in the South Pacific ocean, and one of those called New Hebrides, discovered by Captain Cook in the year 1774; about 22 miles in length, and 10 in breadth. Long. 109. 44. E. Lat. 19. 32. S.

TANNER'S CREEK, a river of the United States, in Indiana. It joins the Ohio.

TANNENAR, or THANABIR, a town of Hindostan, province of Delhi. It is noted for a celebrated temple of Jug Soom. Long. 76. 40. E. Lat. 29. 55. N.

TANNESEHLM, a district of the Birman empire, extending along the sea coast, from the 11th to the 14th degrees of N. lat. and between the 90th and 90th degrees of E. long.—Its capital is of the same name.

TANNEY RIVER, a river of America, which rises in the Rocky mountains, and falls into the Missouri.

TANSHELLE, a village of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 354.

TANSLEY, a township of England, in Derbyshire. Population 449.

TAORMINA, a seaport of Sicily, in the Val di Demona, on a steep and craggy mountain on the eastern coast. It is noted for its numerous churches and convents, some of which are profusely decorated with marble. It is built on the site of the ancient Taunomeonium, and has many remains of antiquity. Population 4000. 26 miles N. N. E. Catania.

TAOS, a village of Mexico, in the intendancy of New Mexico, on the Rio del Norte. Population 6900.

TAPANOOLOO, a British settlement of Sumatra, on the small island of Puchong Kee-chil, at the bottom of the bay of Tapanooloo, which, with the island of Mapadar, forms one of the finest ports in the world. Long. 98. 50. E. Lat. 1. 46. N.

TAPAYOS, or TAPAJOS, a magnificent river of Brazil, in the capitania of Matto Grosso, which derives its copious sources from numerous branches rising in the interior mountains of Brazil. It is one of those great rivers which come from the south to feed the vast stream of the Amazon. Its course is north for more than 600 miles between the Chingru and the Madera, and it falls into the Amazon, in Long. 55. W. Lat. 2. 24. 50. S.

TAPIAT, a town in East Prussia, at the influx of the Deine into the Pregel, 20 miles E. S. E. Konigsberg. Population 1700.

TAPLOW, a village and parish of England, in the county of Buckingham, on the Thames, 25 miles W. London. Population 585.

TAROLTZAN, GLAZAT, a town of Hungary, 55 miles N. E. Presburg. Population 2700.

TAPPANAROCK, a port of entry of the United States, and capital of Essex county, Virginia, on the Rappahannock. 50 miles N. E. Richmond.

TAPPAN, a post village of the United States, in Rockland county, New York.

TAPTEE, a river of Hindostan. It falls into the sea near Surat.

TAPTON, or TUTTON, a township of England, in Derbyshire.

TANUARI, a river of Brazil. It falls into the Paraguay by many mouths, the largest of which is in Long. 54. W. Lat. 16. 15. S.

TAGUASO, a large river of the province of Darien. It enters the sea in the gulf of San Miguel.

TAR, or PANLICO, a river of the United States, in North Carolina, which runs into Pamlico sound, Lat. 35. 22. N.

TARANCON, an ill built town of Spain, province of Toledo, 43 miles S. E. Madrid. Population 3500.

TARANNOX, a river of England, in Montgomeryshire. It joins the Severn.

TARANRAY, one of the northern Harris Isles, on the west coast of Scotland.

TARANTAISE, a province of the Sardinian states, in Savoy, between Faucigny, Savoy proper, Maurienne, and Aosta. Area 780 square miles. Population 39,000.

TARANTO, an ancient town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples. It is built on a small island in the great bay called the gulf of Taranto. It has a castle of some strength for the protection of its harbour. The chief support of the inhabitants is derived from fishing. Taranto filled a conspicuous place in ancient history. Population 18,500.

TARANTO, GULF OF, a spacious bay of the Mediterranean, formed by the two S. E. and S. W. extremities of Italy.

TARASKE, a town of France, departement of the Rhone, 32 miles N. W. Lyons. Pop. 2800.

TARASCON, a town of France, on the Rhone. It has manufactures of woollens, silk, stockings, and exports wine, brandy, olive-oil, &c. Some of the churches are handsome buildings. Population 12,000. 55 miles N. W. Marseilles.

TARASCON, a town of France, on the Arriege. Population 1400.

TARAZONA, a town of Spain, 112 miles S. E. Madrid.—2d. Of Arragon, 50 miles W. N. W. Saragossa. Pop. 4000.

TARNER, a town of France, capital of the department of the Upper Pyrenees; on the Adour. It is surrounded with a wall, and defended by an old castle. The only public edifices worth notice are the cathedral, the churches, the residence of the bishop, the theatre, and the hospital. Population 8000. 125 miles S. by E. Bordeaux.

TARNOVOG, a post township of the United States, and capital of Edgecombe county, North Carolina, on the Tar, 38 miles S. H. Halifax. Population 600.

TARNEY, a handsome village of Ireland, in the county of Kerry, on the Shannon.

TARENT, a river of England, in Dorsetshire, which falls into the Moun.

TARR, a river of Scotland, in Kirkcudbright, which unites with the Dec.

TARF, a small river of Scotland, in Perthshire, which falls into the Firth.—2d. Another in Inverness-shire, which falls into Loch Ness.

TARIFA, a petty town of Spain, on the north side of the straits of Gibraltar. It has 1800 inhabitants, whose chief employment is fishing. 17 miles W. S. W. Gibraltar.

TARIJA, ST BERNARDO DE, the capital of a province of the same name, in South America. It has several convents. 320 miles N. St Miguel de Tucuman.

TARJA, a river of South America, which runs into the Vermeja.

TARLAND, a village and parish of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire. Population 964.

TARLTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1616.

TARMA, the capital of a province of the same name, in Peru, on the Chanchamayo. Near this place are two quicksilver mines; also mines of antimony, white silver, and native saltpetre. 103 miles E. N. E. Lima.

TARNUOLI, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples. Population 4000.

TARN, a department of France, formed of a part of the great province of Languedoc, and adjacent to the departments of the Aveyron and Upper Garonne. Area 2100 square miles. Population 206,000. Its products are wheat, barley, maize, hemp, flax, vines; and fruit of different kinds.

TARN AND GARONNE, a department in the south of France, formed of portions of the departments of the Lot and Upper Garonne. It lies to the west of the department of the Tarn, has an extent of 1500 square miles, and a population of 240,000. Its products are wheat, barley, maize, hemp, flax, vines, chestnuts, and several fruits of a southern climate, as almonds and figs.

TARNOPOL, the capital of a circle of Austrian Poland, on the river Sireth, 64 miles E. Lemberg. It has a Greek and a Catholic church, and 7100 inhabitants.

TARNOW, a town of Austrian Galicia, on the Dunajec, 47 miles E. Cracow. Pop. 4300.

TARNOWITZ, a town of Prussian Silesia, on the confines of Poland. Population 1500.

TARO, a river of the north of Italy, which falls into the Po.

TARPOURLEY, a market town of England, in Cheshire. It has a handsome church, in which are several fine monuments. Two miles southward of Tarporley rises the great insulated rock of Beeston, on which are the stately ruins of the far famed Beeston castle, whose almost impregnable strength was once proverbial. Its height is 206 feet. Population 800. 11 miles E. S. E. Chester.

TARRAGONA, a seaport of Spain, in Catalonia, near the mouth of the river Francolí. It is built on a hill, and surrounded by walls with turrets, erected either by the Moors, or by the Christians of the middle ages. It has a large and elegant cathedral, built in the Gothic style. It was taken by Marshal D'Elbret in 1811. Population 7800. 48 miles W. S. W. Barcelona.

TARRAS, a small river of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire. It joins the Esk.

TARRASA, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, 9 miles N. N. W. Barcelona. Pop. 4000.

TARREGA, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, 5 miles W. Cervera. Population 3800.

TARRING, a small town of England, in Sussex, 17 miles W. Brighton.

TARSUS, a large city of Asia Minor, the ancient capital of Cilicia. It certainly possesses a very high antiquity, and is said by Arrian and Strabo to have been founded by Sardanapalus. It was much favoured by Augustus, as well as Adrian, and rose to such celebrity as to rival Athens, Antioch, and Alexandria, in wealth and grandeur, as well as in the cultivation of literature and science. Hardly a single inscription, or any monument of beauty or art, can now be discovered. The city is situated in a fertile plain, on the Cydnus. The houses are intersected by gardens and orchards; they seldom exceed one story in height, are flat roofed, and mostly constructed of hewn stone, derived from the demolition of the ancient edifices. There is a castle said to be built by Bajazet. The city contains two public baths, a number of mosques, several handsome caravanserais, and a small ancient church. The port is about seven or eight miles distant from the town. Population 30,000.

TARTARO, a river of Austrian Italy, which expands into a number of marshes as it approaches the Adriatic.

TARTARY, the name vaguely given to a most extensive region of Asia, occupying nearly the whole central part of that continent; interspersed between Asiatic Russia on the north, and the great empires of Persia, Hindostan, and China on the south. Under the appellation of Tartars are comprehended many various tribes, having local names and characters, but who generally agree in being addicted to the pastoral life, living in tents in the open fields, without towns or villages; delighting in horsemanship, and having a breed of the finest horses in the world; living on horse flesh, and drinking mare's milk. This race was known and celebrated in antiquity under the name of Scythians, a people who are described under the same warlike, rude, and pastoral features which distinguish now the tenants of the same regions, and who were too formidable to all the civilized nations of antiquity. It was by these barbarous tribes that the Roman power in Italy, and in Constantinople was overthrown. In the 12th century Tartary became the seat of the most formidable and extensive empire that perhaps has ever been established. Zingis, originally an obscure Mongol chief, having succeeded in uniting under his standard all the neighbouring tribes, successively conquered China, Persia, and all Central Asia, from the Black sea to the Eastern ocean. His successors added Russia, and overran Poland, with part of Germany. Timur, a Tartar chief, conquered all Persia, broke the power of the Turks in Asia Minor, and established in India a dynasty, which continued to reign, and to form the most splendid court of Asia, till the close of the last century. China has always been subject to Tartar dynasties. For a long time, however, the power of this great race has been much on the decline. Russia has not only cleared her territory of these invaders, but began to annex part of their territories to her dominion; and Independent Tartary has now its limits so much reduced, that there appears no prospect of its again becoming formidable. The grand division of this extensive portion of Asia is into Independent Tartary and Chinese Tartary. Independent Tartary is bounded on the east by a great chain of mountains called the Beloor Taugh, connected with the Indian ranges of the Himalah and the Mooz Taugh, and which separates it from Cashgar and the other districts of Chinese Tartary. On the south it has the country of Balk or Bulkh (now forming part of the kingdom of Cabul), and the Persian provinces of Korassan; on the west it extends as far as the Caspian; while on the north it has the provinces of Oufa, Orenburg, and Tobolsk, belonging to Asiatic Russia. Since the time of Timur, the population and political state of this country have undergone an entire change. It has been occupied, and the ancient inhabitants either exterminated or expelled by the Uzbecks, a people of the widely extended race of Turk or Toork, but whose original seat is not precisely ascertained. Of the kingdoms into which Independent Tartary is now divided, Bokhara may be considered as the most important. The territory of the king includes the finest part of the country on the banks of the Oxus, and, though not very extensive, enables him to maintain an army of 80,000 or 100,000 cavalry. The city of Bokhara still contains upwards of 100,000 inhabitants, with very extensive establishments for the cultivation of learning. Samarcand, though greatly declined from its ancient splendour, contains many fine buildings. On the Jaxartes, the Bey of Koukou or Fergana possesses an extensive, fertile, and highly populous kingdom, scarcely known to Europeans. The rest of the country seems to be chiefly occupied by wandering tribes. Chinese Tartary includes the whole territory contained between Hindostan and Asiatic Russia, and from the Eastern ocean to the mountain boundary of Independent Tartary; a space comprising in its greatest dimensions, about 70 degrees of longitude, and 20 degrees of latitude. The southern and mountainous part of this tract passes under the name of Thibet, and is commonly considered as an appendage to India. The western part of what is usually called Chinese Tartary is among the regions of the globe with regard to which our information is most imperfect. The most westerly country, situated immediately on the other side of the Beloor Taugh, appears to be Cashgar, with a capital of the same name, forming the residence of a Chinese Amdan or viceroy. The great emporium of this region, however, is Yarsund, situated farther to the south, and forming the rendezvous of the merchants from India, Cabul, and Independent Tartary. Proceeding eastward, the two principal kingdoms are Koton or Khoten, and Hami or Chanill; the former represented as very flourishing; the latter described as a wealthy region, inhabited by a voluptuous and even dissolute people. One of the most distinguishing features of this country is the great desert of Shamo or Cobi, which extends from west to east through nearly its whole extent, and afterwards interposes between China and the Russian empire. It extends in this direction nearly 2000 miles, and could not be thus crossed without insuperable difficulties. The part of Tartary situated to the west and north-west of China, consists entirely of desert, or at least of naked plains, particular portions only of which afford pasture and water, and which is traversed by wandering tribes of Mongols, Kalkas, and Eluths. The most eastern extremity of Tartary, bordering on the Pacific, consists of the country of the Mantchoo Tartars, which, in consequence of having given a conquering dynasty to China, forms now a province of that empire. Besides these tribes, who inhabit the region properly called Tartary, a great part of the southern provinces of Asiatic Russia have a Tartar population. Among these we may particularly distinguish the Kalmucs and the Baschkirs. The Kalmucs established themselves in 1723, upon the banks of the Volga, from Tzaritzin to Astracan. They then numbered 14,000 tents or families. The number now inhabiting the Russian empire is supposed to be between 40,000 and 50,000. The Baschkirs inhabit the southern part of the provinces of Oufa and Orenburg, with part of Tobolsk, between the rivers Belsin, Kama, Volga, and Oural. By the enumeration of 1770, the Baschkirs were found to consist of 27,000 families, divided into 14 cantons.

TARTAS, a town of France, department of the Landes. Population 3200.

TARTAN, a small river of Scotland, in Peeblesshire, which joins the Lyne.

TARVEY, a village of England, in Cheshire, 6 miles E. by N. of Chester. The church here is a well built structure. Population 1000.

TARVIS, a small town of Carinthia, 40 miles N. by W. Trieste.

TASCHLIMESHA, a town of European Turkey, in Bosnia. Population 4500.

TACON, or TACACO, a town of Mexico, intendancy of Mexico, 80 miles S. E. Valladolid. It contains a beautiful parish church. Height above the sea 2562 feet.

TASHMUDON, a city of Northern Hindostan, province of Bootan. Long. 89. 30. E. Lat. 27. 40. N.

TATA, or THOTIA, a town of Hungary. 64 miles E. S. E. Presburg. Population 8600.

* TATARBASAR, or TATAR BAZARGIK, a town of European Turkey, in Bulgaria, 14 miles N. N. W. Philippopolis. Population 10,000.

TATTA, an ancient and celebrated city, and capital of a district, of Hindostan, near the bank of the Indus; about 130 miles from the sea. The houses are chiefly constructed of mud and timber. Population 15,000. Long. 68. 17. E. Lat. 24. 44. N.

TATTERHALL, a market town of England, in Lincolnshire, on the river Bain. It has a church, in the form of a cross, a beautiful and spacious edifice; also a castle. Population 627. 12 miles N. W. Boston.

TAVAT POENAMOO, an island in the South Pacific ocean, being the most southerly of the two which form New Zealand, and separated from the northern island by a channel called Cook's straits. It is about 500 miles in length, and from 55 to 140 broad.

TAVASTHUS, or KRONENBURG, a town of European Russia, in Finland, 80 miles E. N. E. Abo. Population 1700.

TAVASTLAND, the former name of a district of Finland, bounded by East Bothnia on the north, and by Nyland on the south.

TAUBER, a river of Germany. It rises in Franconia, and joins the Main.

TAUCHA, a small town of Germany, in Saxony, 6 miles N. E. Leipzig. Pop. 1300.

TAUD, a river of England, in Lancashire, which runs into the Dowles.

TAVE, a river of Wales, in Carmarthenshire, which runs into the Severn.

TAVERNA, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples. Population 2000.

TAVIRA, or TAVILA, a seaport of Portugal, in Algarva, at the mouth of the river Secqua. It is surrounded by a wall, and defended by a castle. It has two churches, an hospital, and five convents. Population 5000. 140 miles S. S. E. Lisbon.

TAVISTOCK, a well built market town and borough of England, in Devonshire, on the Tavy or Tave. It is one of the stannary towns. The church is a spacious building, dedicated to St Eustatius. It consists of four aisles, a chancel, and a tower at the west end, raised on arches. The abbey was at one time a very magnificent building. Various fragments of it are still in existence, though mostly incorporated with other buildings. Tavistock sends two members to parliament. Number of voters 110. Sir Francis Drake, the celebrated navigator, was a native of this place. Many of the inhabitants of the town are employed in the manufacture of serge for the East India company. Pop. 5483. 32 miles W. by S. Exeter.

TAULE, a town of France, department of Minsterre. Population 2500.

TAUNDA, a town of Hindostan, province of Oude, on the river Goggra, celebrated for its manufacture of cotton cloths.

TAUNTON, a market town and borough of England, county of Somerset, upon the river Tone. It extends in length nearly a mile from east to west, and consists of four principal streets, with various minor ones branching off. The country in the vicinity is most delightful; and the vale of Taunton is proverbial for its fertile soil and temperate climate. The public buildings are the churches, the market-house and town-hall, with the free grammar school. The parish churches are two in number, viz. St Mary Magdalen's and St James's. St Mary's is a very elegant and splendid building, in the Gothic style of architecture. At one end of it there is a lofty tower, 133 feet high, of truly magnificent workmanship. There are, besides, several dissenting meeting-houses in the town. The largest, as well as the oldest, is called Paul's meeting-house. The Baptist chapel is a large, expensive, and handsome building. The octagon chapel is a most building, in Middle-street, St James's; it was erected by the reverend Mr Wesley, in 1778. The Wesleyan Methodists, the Trinitarian Baptists, and the Quakers, have also meeting-houses. The market-house stands in the centre of the town, and is a handsome and commodious building, with several apartments for different purposes. The town has a free grammar school. The charitable institutions consist of several almshouses, two work-houses, and an hospital or infirmary. Part of the castle of Taunton still remains. It is now converted to various uses. Taunton for a long period manufactured coarse woollen goods, such as serges, carduroys, sagathies, druggets, shalloons, &c. The inhabitants are at present occupied in a great measure in the silk trade. Large quantities of malt liquor are sent from this town to Bristol for exportation. Taunton is an ancient borough by prescription. It sends two members to parliament. Number of voters 500. Taunton is a place of great antiquity, and numerous Roman coins have been found in the neighbourhood. Population 8534. 31 miles N. E. Exeter.

* TAUNTON, a post-township of the United States, and capital of Bristol county, Massachusetts, on the river Taunton.

TAUNTON, a river of the United States, which falls into Narraganset bay, at Tiverton, opposite the north end of Rhode Island.

TAVOI, a town of the Birman empire, province of Pegu, and district of Martaban. Long. 98. 20. E. Lat. 13. 28. N.

TAURUS, a government in the south of European Russia, which consists of the following parts:—1st, The peninsula of the Crimea; 2d, A considerable tract to the north of the peninsula, between the Dnieper and the Berda; 3d, The island of Taurum or Tmutarakan; 4th, The land of the Tatars nomorshi, or Black Sea Cossacs, lying to the east of the Crimea. This province lies between Long. 31. 30. and 40. 24. E. and between Lat. 44. 32. and 47. 56. N.; and has a superficial extent of 35,000 square miles. Population 200,000.

TAURIS, a great city of Persia, which at different periods has been the capital of the empire. It was once great and flourishing, but has suffered in a more than ordinary degree under those revolutions which have laid waste all the modern cities of Persia. It has suffered still more by earthquakes. The last, in 1724, is supposed to have destroyed 100,000 inhabitants. The wall that surrounds it is decayed, and it scarcely contains a decent house. The ruins of the ancient city cover a great extent of ground. Population 30,000. Long. 46. 37. E. Lat. 33. 10. N.

TAURUS, a town of Bohemia, 80 miles W. S. W. Prague. Population 4400.

TAUSTE, a town of Spain, in Arragon, on the Itiguel, 170 miles E. N. E. Madrid. Population 3200.

TAVERA, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Population 2100.

TAW, a river of England, in the county of Devon, which joins the Towridge.

TAWY, a river of Wales, which runs into the Bristol channel, at Swansea.

TAY, one of the largest rivers of Scotland. It has its rise on the frontiers of Lorn, in Argyllshire, and passes through Loch Dochart and Loch Tay. After being increased by various tributary streams, it advances to Perth; a little below which town it turns to the east, and receiving, as it proceeds, the waters of the Ern, and passing through the Carse of Gowrie, a fine level valley, it enlarges itself to about 3 miles broad; but contracts to 2 miles at Dundee; about 8 miles below which it opens into the German ocean.

TAY, a river of Ireland, in the county of Waterford, which runs into the sea.

TAY, LOCH, one of the most beautiful of the Scottish lakes, lies in Braidalbin, in Perthshire. It is 15 miles in length, and from 1 to 2 in breadth.

TAYNVILT, a small ill built village of Scotland, in Argyllshire, on Loch Fife.

TAZEWELL, a county of the United States, in the S. W. part of Virginia. Pop. 3007.

TEHANG-TCHAI, a city of China, of the first rank, in Hou-quang, 749 miles S. Peking.

TEHANG-TCHOU, a city of China, of the first rank, 930 miles S. Peking.

TEHANG-TCHOU, a city of China, of the first rank, in Kiang-nan, 825 miles S. S. E. Peking. Population 300,000.

TEHAN-KE, a city of China, of the first rank, in Honan, 355 miles S. S. W. Peking.

TEH-KIANG, a province of China, bounded N. and N. E. by Kiang-nan, E. by the sea, S. by Fokien, and S. W. by Kiangsoo; about 200 miles in length, and from 150 to 180 broad. Population 21 millions.

TEH-KIANG, a city of China, of the first rank, in Kiang-nan, 470 miles S. S. E. Peking.

TEH-KIANG-TCHOU, a city of China, of the first rank, in Hou-quang, 763 miles S. S. W. Peking.

TEH-KIANG-TING, a city of China, of the first rank, in Pe-che-lee, 137 miles S. S. W. Peking.

TEH-KIANG-TOU, a city of China, of the first rank, in Se-chuen, 810 miles S. W. Peking.

TEHONG-KING, a city of China, of the first rank, in Se-chuen, 750 miles S. W. Peking.

TEI-NAN, or TAI-NAN, a city of China, of the first rank, province of Shantung, 233 miles S. Peking.

TEA, a river of England, in Buckinghamshire, which runs into the Ouse.

TEA, a river of the north-west of Spain, in Galicia, which joins the Minho.

TEAM, UPPER and LOWER, two hamlets of England, in Staffordshire.

TEANO, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, 12 miles N. W. Capua. Pop. 3100.

TEARN, a river of England, in Staffordshire and Salop, which falls into the Severn.

TEATH, or TEITH, a river of Scotland, in Perthshire, which takes its rise from two sources: these uniting, join the Forth at the bridge of Drip.

TEBEREZI, a town of European Turkey, in Albania, 58 miles N. W. Joannina. Population 2000.

TECH, a river in the south of France, department of the Eastern Pyrenees, which falls into the Mediterranean below Boulon.

TECHU, a river of the United States, in Louisiana, which joins the Atchafalaya, about 15 miles above its entrance into the gulf of Mexico.

TECULET, a town of Africa, in Morocco, near the coast of the Atlantic, 15 miles E. Mogador.

TEDESLEY, a hamlet of England, in Staffordshire.

TENDINGTON, a hamlet of England, in Worcestershire.

TEDIF, a town of Syria, in the pachalic of Aleppo, 21 miles E. Aleppo.

TEDEX, a considerable river of Korassan, in Persia.

TEHMOO, a considerable city of Central Africa, capital of Fouta Jallo. Population 7000. 160 miles E. Sierra Leone.

TERNY, a small village of Ireland, in the county of Londonderry.

TESS, a considerable river of England, which rises in Westmorland, and falls into the German ocean, in a wide estuary called the Teesmouth.

TESSA, a considerable river of Bengal. It has its source in the Himalaya mountains; and joins the Ganges.

TESSIS, or TIPERS, a city of Asia, and capital of the kingdom of Georgia, visited in 1817 by Sir H. Kerr Porter, who describes it as situated on the precipitous and sublime banks of the Kur, at the extremity of a defile formed by two bold ranges of mountains, which gloomily overshadow it. The city was founded in the year 1063. The streets are, without exception, narrow, and intolerably filthy in wet weather, and dusty in dry. Since it has come under the dominion of Russia, this evil has been in some degree remedied. Other improvements were also going forward. Alterations have been made in the bazar, or great market-place for merchants, which has been totally roofed in, but with open circles left in the rafters, for the admission of air and light. The bazar is a narrow street, of a very long and winding extent. On each side of it are lines of shops of every description, such as fruiterers, grocers, barbers, cooks, mercers, saddlers, armourers, &c. all open, whose various articles are spread and displayed to the best advantage. Not far from the bazar is the public granary, where merchant-travellers take up their quarters. The residence of the governor-general is at a short distance from the body of the city, on the gentle slope of a hill, fronting the river, and commanding a fine view of the Caucasian mountains. This building, with the arsenal, hospital, churches, and a few villas in the neighbourhood, are the only erections in or near the place, that remind one at all of Europe. The rest is purely Asiatic, but very different from the ideas commonly received in Europe of that term—gray minarets, painted domes, and gilded trellis-work. Here is a collection of low flat-roofed dwellings, built of dun brick, mingled with stones and mud; the doors and windows exceedingly small; the latter covered with paper, glass being in little use, from its scarcity and dearth. Teflis has been long celebrated for its baths, which are situated at one extremity of the bazar. The citadel is situated on the summit of a very high promontory. It exhibits a mass of ruins grand and imposing. There are several fine churches, of different Christian persuasions, in Teflis; and that which is dedicated to the Roman Catholic mode of worship is one of the most beautiful. The cathedral of Holy Zion, the great Arminian church, is more extensive, but does not equal its tolerated rival in richness and grace of architecture. The noble waters of the Kur roll near its base, increasing in rapidity and sound as they pour onward amongst the closing in of the bold cliffs which embank the stream. At this narrowed point, a bridge of one single arch connects the town with a considerable suburb called Avlabar. It is chiefly inhabited by a colony of Armenians. Here also are the ruins of an ancient fort, church, and houses; and about two miles further from this side of the city, stand the remains of another sacred edifice of old times. Since the conquest of the Russians, it has been the residence of their governor and commander-in-chief, who has always a great force stationed here under him. The Asiatic manners of the inhabitants have been greatly changed by their intercourse with their European conquerors. Before its capture in 1797, by Aga Mahomed Khan, Teflis contained 4000 houses, and 22,000 inhabitants. The population does not now exceed 15,000, 1752 English miles from St. Petersburg. Long. 62. 40, E. Lat. 42. 45. N.

TEGHEO, a town of Austrian Italy, in the Valtellina, on the Adda. Pop. 1500.

TEHRAUX, a large city of Persia, which, during the two last reigns, has been the capital of the empire. It is about 4 miles in circumference, surrounded by a strong wall, flanked by innumerable towers, and a broad dry ditch. It contains no edifice of importance except the ark, which combines the character of citadel and royal palace. The Persian monarchs make it their residence. Population 10,000; in winter 60,000. Long. 60. 52. E. Lat. 35. 40. N.

TEHUACAN, a town of Mexico, in the intendancy of Mexico, and one of the most frequented sanctuaries of the Mexicans. It has four principal churches, besides convents. The streets, houses, and squares, are handsome. It contains many families of Spaniards, mulattoes, and mestizoes, besides above 2000 Indians.

TEHUACANTEPEC, a seaport town of Mexico, in the intendancy of Oaxaca, 180 miles S. E. Mexico.—There is a very large open gulf of the same name in the front of the above city.

TEIGN, a river of England, in Devonshire, of two branches, which fall into the English channel at Teignmouth.

TEIGNMOUTH, a seaport town of England, in Devonshire, at the mouth of the river Teign, a place of great antiquity, and now becomes one of the principal watering places on the south-western coast. It is divided by a small rivulet into East and West Teignmouth. The principal resort of visitors is to East Teignmouth, where the public rooms are situated. The church of East Teignmouth is a venerable structure, situated near the beach. The late church of West Teignmouth was a very ancient stone fabric, built in the form of a cross. It was taken down, and a handsome octagon edifice erected in its stead, which was opened in 1831. The chief trade of Teignmouth consists in the exportation of pipe or pottery clay to Staffordshire, Liverpool, &c. A great number of vessels are also sent hence to the Newfoundland fishery. The parishes of East and West Teignmouth contain 2030 inhabitants. 15 miles S. Exeter.

TEILZUR, a town of France, department of La Manche. Population 2408.

TEJUCA, a district of Brazil, of which the town of Tejuco is the capital; around which it extends 10 leagues from north to south, and about 8 from east to west. It is noted for its production of diamonds, and for the great works to which this branch of industry has given rise.

TEJUCO, a town of Brazil, and capital of the above district. Owing to its situation by the side of a hill, it is very irregularly built. Its streets are uneven, and the inhabitants idle. Tejuco may, however, be called flourishing, on account of the circulation of property created by the diamond works. The shops are stocked with English cottons, baizes, and cloths, and other manufactured goods; also hams, cheese, butter, porter, and other articles of consumption. This town being in the centre of the diamond district, is subject to the absolute government of the intendant of the province, in order to prevent any contraband trade in diamonds. The hubits of the people are social, and they visit each other with great freedom. Pop. 6000.

TEJUCOS, BAY OF, on the coast of Brazil, in South America, some miles to the north of the island of St. Catherine's.

TELESSE, a petty town of Italy, 17 miles E. N. E. Capua.

TELEPAIR, a county of the United States, in the south-west part of Georgia. Population 744, including 218 slaves.

TELEZE, or TELZER, a town of Westphalia, 6 miles E. Munster. Pop. 1500.

TELLICHEAV, a seaport town of the south of India, province of Malabar. It is a place of considerable consequence. Since the East India Company in 1800 transferred their factory from this place, it has much declined, but is still inhabited by a number of rich native merchants, and is the principal mart for sanial wood and cardomums. Long. 75° 30. E. Lat. 11° 44. N.

TELLICO, a river of the United States, in Tennessee, which joins the Tennessee.

TELTAU, a town of Prussia, 9 miles S. S. E. Berlin. Population 1800.

TELTICH, a town of Moravia, 50 miles W. Brunn. Population 3000.

TEMBLEQUE, a town of Spain, 40 miles S. Madrid. Population 4500.

TENE, or TEAM, a river of England, which runs into the Severn.

TENES, a navigable river of Hungary, which falls into the Danube, below Belgrade.

TENESSAR, BANAT, or BANAT OF, a province in the south of Hungary, bounded by Transylvania, and by the great rivers the Marosch, the Theysa, and the Danube. Area about 9450 square miles; population above 700,000. In 1779, the bannat was declared by the Austrian government to form part of Hungary, and divided into the three palatinates of Teronhal, Tennesvar, and Krasova.

TENESSAR, a town of Hungary, the capital of the county of the same name, and one of the strongest fortresses of the Austrian empire. It stands at the confluence of the rivers Temes and Rega. Of its public buildings, the chief are the cathedral, a Greek and a Catholic church, three monasteries, three hospitals, a synagogue, and extensive barracks for the garrison. The chief manufacture of the place is silk; but iron and woollens are also objects of traffic. Population 11,000, a mixed race of Roesian, German, and Greek origin. 72 miles N. E. Belgrade. Long. 39. 5. 38. E. Lat. 45. 47. 30. N.

TENESSAR, a palatinat of Hungary, occupying the central part of the bannat. Area 2480 square miles. Population 844,000.

TEPRIZOV, a town of European Russia, on the Mokcha, 350 miles E. S. E. Moscow. Population 3300.

TEPRIO, a town of Sardinia, 32 miles E. Sassari. Population 5000.

TEPPEL, two hamlets of England, in Dorset and Kent.

TEPPEL-COMBE, a village of England, in Dorsetshire.

TEMPLE, COWLEY, a hamlet of England, near Oxford.

TEMPLE HURST, a village of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

TEMPLEMORE, a neat modern well built village of Ireland, county of Tipperary, 75 miles S. W. Dublin.

TEMPLE NEWMAN, a hamlet of England, 4 miles E. by S. Leeds.

TEMPLEPATRICK, a village of Ireland, county of Antrim, 27 miles N. Dublin.

TEMPLETON, a post township of the United States, in Worcester county, Massachusetts. Population 1205.

TEMPLEVEVE, a town of the Netherlands, 9 miles E. Lille. Population 3300.

TEMPLIN, a town of Prussia, 42 miles N. Berlin. Population 2100.

TEMPO, a smart little village of Ireland, county of Fermanagh.

TEMENA, a large province in the empire of Morocco, bordering on the Atlantic ocean. Pop. stated by Mr Jackson at 1,160,000.

TEMURY, a market town of England, in Worcestershire, on the Tems, over which is a stone bridge of six arches. The church stands near to the river, and has suffered greatly from the floods which frequently occur. At present the Gothic tower and chancel remain, but the body of it has been fitted up with modern windows. The market-place is an ancient building. The trade of the town consists chiefly of hops and cyder. Population 1008. 15 miles W. by N. Worcester.

TEMBY, a market town and borough of Wales, in the county of Pembroke, situated in Caermarthen bay, at the mouth of the Bristol channel. It has been long noted for its trade, and of late years has become a very fashionable resort for sea-bathing. The town stands on a rocky promontory of considerable elevation, inclosed by the sea, on every side except the north, where a narrow isthmus connects it with the mainland. It was once surrounded by a strong and lofty wall, which in some places is yet nearly entire. The church extends 140 feet in length. At the west end is a large square tower, surmounted by a lofty spire, rising altogether to the height of about 150 feet. There were other ancient religious establishments. The remains of the castle of Tenby are yet considerable, though mostly in a very dilapidated state. A bastion and a square tower are the only portions now standing, that at all indicate its former state. Tenby was formerly a place of great trade, which has now declined. Splendid baths have been erected here by Sir William Paxton, both hot and cold, which greatly add to the attractions of the place. Tenby is one of the contributory boroughs, joined with Pembroke, in the return of the parliamentary representative for that place. Population 1554. 7 miles E. Pembroke.

TEMBY, a town of France, department of the Upper Loire. Population 4900.

TEMDA, a town of Piedmont. It is a gloomy and miserable place. Population 1500. 25 miles N. E. Nice.

TENELOS, a small rocky island of the Grecian archipelago, close to the coast of Asia Minor, and at a small distance from the entrance of the Dardanelles. Although the appearance of Teneios be rocky and barren, it is remarkable for producing the finest wine in the archipelago. Population 600 Turkish, and 300 Greek families. Long. 26. E. Lat. 39. 63. N.

TENERIFFE, a considerable island, forming part of the group of the Canaries, situated off the western coast of Africa. It is of a triangular form, each side being about 36 miles in length. As a natural object, it is chiefly remarkable by that lofty peak, of the sloping sides of which the island actually consists. The climate of Teneriffe is peculiarly delightful and salutary. By the rapidity of its rise, it presents, within a very short distance, every variation of temperature, from the colder climates of Europe to those of the equinoctial regions. The port of Santa Cruz indeed, from which the principal trade is carried on, is intensely hot. Laguna, however, elevated about 2000 feet above it, is cool and agreeable. The declivities and rising hills are covered with vines, and cultivated like a garden. Perpetual spring prevails in the district, and in the summer evenings the breeze from the sea comes loaded with delicious coolness. In this part of the island the date tree, the plantain, the sugar cane, the olive tree, the fruit trees of Europe, the vine, and corn, are cultivated. Above this fertile track rises what is called the region of the laurels, forming an extensive border that extends all around Teneriffe. Above this is a vast forest of fir and pine, those trees which characterise the colder regions of the earth; and above this is a vast plain, like a sea of sand, covered with the dust of pumice stone, which continually fills the air. At the top there is scarcely room to stand, and the crater is inclosed by a wall so steep, that it could not be entered, were there not a breach in one spot. The sides of the crater are almost perpendicular, though it can be descended by pieces of broken lava. This crater has long ceased to emit flames, and the heat is perceptible only in a few crevices, which give vent to aqueous vapours, with a peculiar buzzing noise. The view from the top of the Peak appears characterised by peculiar beauty, and is uncommonly extensive. The transparent atmosphere enables the spectator to distinguish even the houses, the sails of the vessels, and the tops of the trees. Beyond is discovered a vast extent of ocean, studded with the whole archipelago of the Fortunate Islands. The summit of the Peak may be considered as an extinguished volcano, having remained tranquil during many ages, and presenting no symptom threatening a new eruption, which, however, cannot be considered as impossible. The commercial importance of Teneriffe depends chiefly on its wine, which, though of an inferior quality to that of Maderia, yet being afforded at a cheaper rate, is in considerable demand. From 10,000 to 15,000 pipes are annually exported. Teneriffe exports also orchilla-wood, rose-wood, and a few other trifling articles. Santa Cruz affords beef and fish in plenty, and excellent water. A considerable trade is also carried on between this island and the Spanish West Indies.

TENERIFFE, a town of New Granada, in the province of Santa Martha, on the Magdalena, now reduced to a miserable village, 97 miles S. W. Santa Martha.

TENORATE, a seaport town of Ceylon. Population 500.

TENORATE, a town of Ceylon, in the province of Santa Martha, on the Magdalena, now reduced to a miserable village, 97 miles S. W. Santa Martha.

TENNESSEE, one of the United States, bounded N. by Kentucky, E. by North Carolina and Virginia, S. by Georgia, Alabama territory, and Mississippi state, and W. by the Mississippi. Long. 81. 25 to 91. 37. W. Lat. 35. to 36. 30. N. 490 miles long and 162 broad, containing 40,000 square miles. This state is divided by the Cumberland mountains into two divisions, East Tennessee and West Tennessee. It contains 31 counties; in West Tennessee 17, and in East Tennessee 21. This country is marked by bold and varied features. It is washed by the great river Mississippi on the west; and the fine rivers Tennessee and Cumberland pass through it in very serpentine courses. The western part is undulating; some of it level; in the middle it is hilly; and the eastern part, known by the name of East Tennessee, abounds in mountains, many of them lofty, and presenting scenery peculiarly grand and picturesque. The climate is generally healthy. In East Tennessee the heat of summer is tempered by the mountain air, and the winter resembles the spring in more northern countries. Copperas, alum, nitre, and lead, are among the minerals. Some silver has been found. Coal is supposed to be plentiful. Saltpetre is abundant. There are several mineral springs; and many valuable salt springs. The soil, in a country so uneven, must be very various. The western part of the state has a black, rich soil; in the middle are great quantities of excellent land; in the eastern part of the mountains are lean, but also many fertile valleys. Oak of different species, black and white walnut, beech, red cedar, black and honey locust, ash, elm, mulberry, dogwood, sassafras, maple, sugar-tree, paper, cherry, hornbeam, and cucumber tree, grow here. The wild plum and crab-apple, and the wild strawberry, are of a delicious flavour; and the wild grape vine yields tolerable grapes. The agricultural productions are wheat, barley, oats, rye, buckwheat, Indian corn, flax, hemp, tobacco, indigo, rice, and cotton. Fruit-trees succeed extremely. The animals are such as are generally found in other parts of the United States. The bison, the elk, the deer, are become scarce, except on the mountains. Bears, panthers, wild cats, and wolves, are yet seen in the forests, but seldom visit cultivated places; the beaver, otter, and muskrat, on the upper branches of the Cumberland. Murfreesborough is the present seat of government. The other most considerable towns in West Tennessee are Nashville, Franklin, Fayetteville, Shelbyville, Columbia, Clarksville, Carthage, and Gallatin; in East Tennessee, Knoxville, Jonesborough, Greeneville, and Rogersville. The legislature is composed of a senate and house of representatives. The principal rivers are the Tennessee, Cumberland, Holston, Clinch, French-Broad, Natchuck, Hiwassee, Tellico, Duck, Beelfoot, Obian, Forked Deer, and Wolf. This country, which formed a part of Carolina, according to the second charter of Charles II. was inhabited by the Cherokee Indians, by whom the first colonists, consisting of above 60 families in the year 1784, were nearly destroyed. Their settlements were not renewed till 1774. In 1789, the country was ceded by Carolina to the United States, and in 1790 was received into the federal union. The number of inhabitants in 1791 was 24,691; 1795, 77,262; 1800, 105,602; 1810, 261,717, of whom 44,535 were slaves. Of this number 101,367 were of East Tennessee, and 160,350 of West Tennessee.

TENNESSEE, a large and navigable river of the United States, in Tennessee, which rises in the mountains of Virginia and Carolina, and passing into the Alabama and Mississippi countries, it crosses the western parts of Tennessee in a northern direction, and after flowing 60 miles through Kentucky, joins the Ohio, 57 miles from the Mississippi, by an outlet 606 yards wide.

TENNIS, or TNIS, a seaport of Tlemcen, in Algiers, at the mouth of a river which falls into the Mediterranean, 110 miles W. Algiers.

TENNSTADT, a town of Prussian Saxony, 15 miles N. N. W. Erfurt. Pop. 3000.

TENOS, an island of the Cyclades group, in the Grecian archipelago, between Mycon and Andros. Population 25,000.

TENSAW, a small river of Louisiana, which falls into the Washita.

TENTERGATE, a hamlet of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

TENTERDEN, a market-town of England, in Kent, near the river Rother. The church is a large and handsome fabric, dedicated to St. Michael, and consisting of a nave, north aisle, chancel, &c. There are, besides, in the town, two chapels for dissenters. It has also a town-hall, built in 1792. Population 3359. 24 miles S. W. Canterbury.

TERAMO, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples. Population 3300.

TERREHA, a town of Mexico, in the district of Tlaxcala. The principal square is large; and in the middle of it is a fort, which served as a retreat and place of defence to Cortes and his army, upon his retiring from Mexico. This building is now in a state of great dilapidation, having undergone no repair whatever since that time. In one of the fronts of the said square is the convent of San Francisco, a large, magnificent, and beautiful building, founded entirely on arches, all the expenses of it having been defrayed by Cortes and his captains. On the other side of the square is the parish church. This city has several woollen cloth-manufactories. Population 700 families of Spaniards, Indians, and mulattoes. 66 miles E. by S. Mexico. Long. 90. 2. W. Lat. 19. N.

TERIC, a town of Mexico, and capital of a district of the same name, 344 miles N. W. Mexico.

TEPLITZ, TOEPLITZ, or TEPLICE, a town of Bohemia, 45 miles N. W. Prague. Population 2400.

TEPLITZ, which is derived from Torpet, a hot spring, is the name of several small towns and villages of the Austrian states.

TERECOTULA, a town of Mexico, 150 miles S. S. E. Mexico. Pop. 100 families of Spaniards, mestizoes, and mulattoes, and 717 of Indians.

TEQUEPA, a port of Mexico, in Mechoacan, on a river near the Pacific ocean, 60 miles S. E. Zacatula.

TER, a river of Catalonia, which falls into the Mediterranean.

TERAMO, a town of the kingdom of Naples. It has a cathedral, and several smaller churches. Pop. 5300. 115 miles N. Naples.

TERCERA, an island near the coast of Africa, forming part of the group of the Azores, and the seat of government. It is about 54 miles in circumference. The island also, though abundantly supplied with fine water, contains no boiling or mineral springs. Vines are cultivated; but the wine of Tercera is by no means excellent. Agriculture and pasturage are the chief employments. Wheat, Indian corn, and French beans, are raised. The only two places of consequence are Angra and Praya. Population 50,000.

TERCERO, a river of South America, province of Tucuman, which enters the Parana.

TEREK, a considerable river of Asiatic Russia, in the government of Caucasus. It rises amid snow-covered mountains. After passing Kizlar, it divides into three branches, and falls into the Caspian.

TERESA, a town of Spain, in Valencia. Population 3200.

TEROYINIA, a town of European Turkey, in Wallachia, on the river Jalomiza. It has several churches, and two convents. Population 5000. 180 miles E. N. E. Belgrade.

TERENTOEN, a small town of the Netherlands, 3 miles N. Breda. Population 1900.

TERLIZZI, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples. It has few manufactures. Population 3000. 60 miles N. W. Tarentum.

TRAMATI, a seaport of Sicily, in the Val di Mazzara, at the mouth of the river Trami. The public establishments consist of a Monte di Pietà, tobacco-shop, a few houses for families, several warehouses, and numerous other petty organizations. Population 5,000. Latitude 38° 45' N. Longitude 13° 45' E. Sea 20 to 30 fms.

TRAMATO, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Mazzara, 60 miles W. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, the northernmost of the Ionian Islands at the west end of Sicily, separated by the strait of St. Vincent from the adjacent Italian Islands. It was discovered by the Spaniards, and named after Don Juan de Tramata, who, however, intended by the name to signify a place of small extent, but high and rugged. It is a peak, which supports a single house. It was taken from the Turks in the course of the revolutionary war, but was restored in the peace of Amiens. It was again taken in August 1810, and was restored to the Turks with their other possessions in India, by the peace of Paris in 1815.

TRAMATZ, a town of the Netherlands, in South Brabant. Population 1,000.

TRAMATZ, a town of the Netherlands, 12 miles S. E. of Brabant. Population 1,000. Tramatz, a town of Italy, in the State of the Church, between two tributaries of the river Reno. It has a cathedral and three churches, but suffers much from the consequences of the position of the town. About 100 years ago it was destroyed among the ruins of the walls, and in 1799 it was a ruin.

TRAMATZ, a town of Prussia, in the Province of Pomerania, 10 miles S. E. of Stettin.

TRAMATZ, a town of Prussia, in the Province of Pomerania, 10 miles S. E. of Stettin. It is a town of 100 houses, and is the seat of a court of justice.

TRAMATZ, a town of Prussia, in the Province of Pomerania, 10 miles S. E. of Stettin. It is a town of 100 houses, and is the seat of a court of justice.

TRAMATZ, a town of Prussia, in the Province of Pomerania, 10 miles S. E. of Stettin. It is a town of 100 houses, and is the seat of a court of justice.

TRAMATZ, a town of Prussia, in the Province of Pomerania, 10 miles S. E. of Stettin. It is a town of 100 houses, and is the seat of a court of justice.

TRAMATZ, a town of Prussia, in the Province of Pomerania, 10 miles S. E. of Stettin. It is a town of 100 houses, and is the seat of a court of justice.

TRAMATZ, a town of Prussia, in the Province of Pomerania, 10 miles S. E. of Stettin. It is a town of 100 houses, and is the seat of a court of justice.

TRAMATZ, a town of Prussia, in the Province of Pomerania, 10 miles S. E. of Stettin. It is a town of 100 houses, and is the seat of a court of justice.

TRAMATZ, a town of Prussia, in the Province of Pomerania, 10 miles S. E. of Stettin. It is a town of 100 houses, and is the seat of a court of justice.

TRAMATZ, a town of Prussia, in the Province of Pomerania, 10 miles S. E. of Stettin. It is a town of 100 houses, and is the seat of a court of justice.

TRAMATZ, a town of Prussia, in the Province of Pomerania, 10 miles S. E. of Stettin. It is a town of 100 houses, and is the seat of a court of justice.

TRAMATZ, a town of Prussia, in the Province of Pomerania, 10 miles S. E. of Stettin. It is a town of 100 houses, and is the seat of a court of justice.

TRAMATZ, a town of Prussia, in the Province of Pomerania, 10 miles S. E. of Stettin. It is a town of 100 houses, and is the seat of a court of justice.

try is wild and inhospitable, and the inhabitants savage. Longitude 31. 30 to 33. W. Latitude 32. 30 to 33. N.

TRAMATA, a seaport of Sicily, Val di Mazzara, at the mouth of a river to which it gives name. Among its public establishments are a Monte di Pietà, a hospital, a tobacco-shop, and several small churches. Its population is 5,000. Latitude 38° 45' N. Longitude 13° 45' E.

TRAMATA, a small town of Italy, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of France, department of the Gironde. Population 1,000.

TRAMATA, a village in Lower Canada, 10 miles S. E. of the mouth of the Saguenay, and 10 miles S. E. of the mouth of the Saguenay.

TRAMATA, a village in the United States, 10 miles S. E. of the mouth of the Saguenay.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

TRAMATA, a town of Sicily, 27 miles S. E. of Palermo. It is the kingdom of Sicily, 20 miles S. E. of Palermo.

Lodon, Cohn, Wer, Mole, Yandle, Lea, Rodling, Darent, and Medway.

THAMES, a river of New Zealand.

THAMES, a river of the United States, in Connecticut, which flows south into Long Island sound. Also a river of Upper Canada, which falls into Lake St. Charles.

THAMES, one of a district of England, county of Kent, at the mouth of the Thames, and forming the north-eastern angle of the county. It is separated from the mainland by the river Stour on the south, and by a branch of it called the Niddington on the west. It extends about nine miles from east to west, and eight from north to south. The coast of this island terminating in a perpendicular cliff of chalk, the soil is dry, and the air remarkably pure and healthy. The country is open, the surface level, and the prospect extensive, comprehending in the interior an expanse of rich and highly cultivated fields, and towards the coast a delightful view of the ocean, varied with the shipping that are here constantly passing and repassing. Population in 1811, 10,369; in 1821, 20,481.

THAMES, a town of France, in Alsace, on the river Thurou. Population 4200.

THASOS, THASSUS, or TASO, an island in the north of Greece, in the gulf of Corinthus, only 4 miles from the mainland. Long. 94. 30. 5. E. Lat. 40. 46. 40. N. It is of an irregular shape, about 12 miles long and 6 broad. The village of Thaso has a tolerably good port, frequented by small vessels.

THATCHER'S ISLAND, a small island of the United States. It forms the northern limit of Massachusetts bay, and has two light-houses.

THAXTON, a market town of England, county of Essex, near the source of the Chelmer. Its parish church is a very large and beautiful structure in the Gothic style. Its length is 108 feet, its breadth 57, and the whole circumference 448 yards. The interior consists of a nave, transept, chancel, and side aisles. There is also a vestry, apartment for meeting-house, and another for the clerk, besides three houses, a school, and other edifices. The ancient guild-hall is now the new fish-workhouse. The vestry-hall is used for the school. Pop. 5018. 23 miles S. E. London.

THAXTON, the most headwater of Illinois river, which has its rise in Canada.

THAXTON, the Thaxton, the name of a river in Yorkshire and Hampshire.

THAXTON, a township of England, in Berkshire, 4 miles W. by S. Reading.

THAXTON, a hamlet of England, in Hampshire, 4 miles S. W. by S. Reading.

THAXTON, the remains of a great city, which at an early period was the capital of Egypt.

THAXTON, St. a town of France, department of Finistere. Population 3800.

THAMES, or TAMSA, a large river of Hungary, which rises from two springs, on the north-east frontier of the kingdom, called the Black and the White Thames. It flows into the Danube at Salankomen, below Titul. In this long course, above 500 miles, it receives many tributary rivers.

THELWALL, a hamlet of England, in Cheshire.

THESSEY, a town of France, department of the Two Sevras. Population 1500.

THESSEY, a hamlet of England, in Hertfordshire.

THESSEY, the capital of a district of Hindostan, and residence of the chief. It has 3000 houses. Long. 71. 58 E. Lat. 24. 37. N.

THESSEY, a town of Lower Austria, south of Vienna. Population 2700.

THESSEY, or THESSEY, a large town of the south of Hungary, in the palatinate of Bacs. It is an assemblage of villages, or rather one vast irregular village, consisting of 3000 cottages, inhabited by 22,000 inmates. The town is open, but has large barracks for lodging soldiers. It has a Catholic church for the Servians, a Greek for the Rascians, and a Franciscan monastery for Catholics. Weavers and tanners are the most numerous class. 100 miles N. by W. Belgrade.

THESSEY, a fortified place of Romania, in the angle formed by the Elbe and the Tisza at their junction, 31 miles N. N. W. Prague.

THESSEY, a small island of European Turkey, in the Archipelago, belonging to the Cretans, and situated about 40 miles N. W. of the island of Paros.

THESSEY, a pass in the north-east of Greece, at the base of Mount Ossa, famous for the fate of Leonidas and his 300 Spartans. It consists of a narrow passage, between high cliffs on one side, and on the other the sea, or an impassable marsh, formed by alluvial deposits.

THESSEY, an extensive province in the north of Greece, bounded E. by part of the Aegean which forms the gulf of Salonica; W. by high mountains of the Pindus range. By the Turkish division of Greece, it is comprehended in the sandjak or government of Trikala, an island town situated to the west. It is one of the finest provinces of Greece, containing fertile plains, watered by streams ascending from the mountains in the west, and flowing into the Aegean. These plains, equally renowned in ancient times for pasture and tillage, continue highly fertile, producing maize, wheats, rice, silk, cotton, and tobacco. Of the rivers, the most remarkable is the Peneus. Population 300,000. The principal town is Larissa. As to the present population, the inhabitants of that town are chiefly Thesians, those of the south and west of Thessaly, Greeks and Albanians.

THESSEY, a market town of England, in Norfolk, on the Ouse, at its confluence with the Thet. In late years the town is much improved in its general appearance. It has three churches, St. Peter's and St. Cathbert's, and St. Mary the Less. St. Peter's, commonly called the Black church, from its being built chiefly of flint, consists of a chancel, nave, two aisles, and a tower: the latter was rebuilt in 1770, and also a great part of the church. Of the monastery of St Sepulchre, which was founded in the year 1130, there are still some remains. The conventual church has been long converted into a barn. The site is called Canons. Of four other religious houses, no vestiges remain. At the eastern extremity of the town are some considerable remains of fortifications, consisting of a large artificial mound or keep, with lofty banks and deep ditches. The guild-hall, where the Lent assizes for the county are held, is a handsome building. The old guild-hall or council-house is in a dilapidated condition. It has a free grammar-school; a county jail, a bridewell, a work-house, an hospital, and various almshouses and other charitable donations. The Ouse is navigable up to the town. It sends two members to parliament. Pop. 2922. 20 miles S.W. Norwich.

THEUX, a town of the Netherlands, 13 miles E. S. E. Liege. Population 3100.

THEYA, a river of Germany, which consists at first of two branches, that unite and fall into the Morawa.

THEYE, a town of France, department of the Isere, on the Theye. Population 1800.

THIBET, or TIBET, a country of Asia, and part of Independent Tartary, extending from the source of the Indus to the borders of China, and from Hindostan to the deserts of Gobi; in length, from east to west, about 1500 miles; the breadth is unequal, and in many parts not known. The distinguishing feature of this extensive country is its great and general elevation, being part of that track in which arise not only the great rivers of India and China, but those also of Siberia and Tartary. Thibet strikes a traveller at first sight, as one of the least favoured countries under heaven. It exhibits only low rocky hills, without any visible vegetation, or extensive arid plains, both of the most stern and stubborn aspect, promising full as little as they produce. The usual crops are wheat, pease, and barley: in many parts these grains never ripen. The periodical rains give birth to a little herbage, whose growth stops immediately as they cease from the extreme dryness of the air; the grass then begins to wither, and at this time it may be crumbled between the fingers into dust; yet large droves of cattle are fed in this barren-land; for though the pasture be short and dry, it is esteemed singularly sweet and nutritive. The temperature is everywhere uniform, which prevails in Thibet passes a remarkable uniformity. The same division of time takes place here, as in the more southern region of Bengal; during the spring, a variable atmosphere; heat, thunder storms, and occasionally refreshing showers; from June to September, heavy and continued rains; from October to March, a clear and uniform sky. For three months of this season, a degree of cold is felt, far greater perhaps than is known to prevail in Europe. Its extreme severity is more, particularly confined to the southern boundary of Thibet, near that elevated range of mountains which divides it from Assam, Bactan, and Khyaul. The summits of these are covered all the year with snow, and their vicinity is remarkable, at all seasons, for the dryness of the winds. Thibet, though barren of vegetable produce, teems with animal life. The variety and abundance of wild fowl, game, and herds of grey, black, and white, is astonishing. Among the most remarkable animals are the cattle, which are extremely useful to the inhabitants. The bull is known by the name of the yak of Tartary, or bushy tailed bull of Thibet. He is about the height of an English bull, which he resembles in the general figure of the body, head, and legs; and there is no essential difference, except that the yak is covered all over with a thick coat of long hair. These cattle afford abundance of rich milk, from which excellent butter is made. The musk deer is also found in great abundance in the coldest parts of the mountains of Thibet. Another valuable animal is found in Thibet, namely, the goat, which yields the materials for the manufacture of the finest shawls. It is the most beautiful of the species of goats. Their colours are various, black, white, of a faint bluish tinge, and of a shade something lighter than a fawn. The material used for the manufacture of shawls is of a light fine texture, and clothes the animal next the skin. A coarse covering of long hair grows above this, and preserves the softness of the interior coat. They appear to be of the same nature as the vicuna of the Andes, which can only thrive in the coldest climates. Wild horses are seen in Thibet. They are uncommonly fleet, and are never taken alive to be tamed for service or domesticated. Among the valuable and useful animals of Thibet, their breed of sheep merits a distinguished rank. These flocks are numerous; and upon them their chief reliance is placed for present support, as well as for their winter food. Gold abounds in Thibet. It is found in large quantities, and frequently very pure. In the form of gold dust it is found in the beds of rivers. There are also mines of copper, silver, and lead. In many cases, these cannot be worked for want of fuel to cook the ores. The dung of animals is the only substitute they have for firewood; and with that dung they will now be able to extract a degree of heat sufficiently intense for such purposes. Thus situated, the most plausible discovery for them would be that of a coal mine. In some parts of China bordering on Thibet, coal is found and used as fuel. There is found in Thibet in inestimable quantities. It is a fossil brought to market in the state in which it is dug out of the hills, and afterwards refined into brick in this country. Rock-salt is likewise found in great abundance. The exports to China are gold dust, precious stones, musk, and woollen cloths. The imports are gold and silver brocades, silks, teas, tobacco, quinquina, China ware, furs, and some silver bullion. To Bengal the exports are gold dust, musk, thread; the imports from thence are broad cloth, trinkets, spices, particularly cloves, pearls, coral, amber, lincoils, Maulda cloths, Rangoon leather, tobacco, and indigo. The religion of the Tibetians appears, according to Turner, to be a schismatical offsprig of the religion of the Hindoos, deriving its origin from one of the followers of that faith, a disciple of Budh, who first broached the doctrine which now prevails over the wide extent of Tartary. In their domestic habits and life, the Tibetians are rude and ignorant; and, like all others in that situation, they are content with little. Thibet enjoys but the shadow of independence, being ruled by Chinese sovereigns, who obtained their ascendancy over it in 1730, by interfering in the intestine commotions by which the country was agitated.

TIJEL, a port town of the Netherlands, near the great river Waal. It has some manufactures. Pop. 4100. 30 miles S.E. Utrecht.

THIEKE, a town of the Netherlands, in West Flanders. It has considerable manufactures of linen and lace; also of soap, leather, and hats. Population 6000. 18 miles W. S. W. Ghent.

THIERS, a town of France, in Auvergne, department of the Puy de Dôme. The buildings in the outskirts of the town have a pleasing appearance, being painted in fresco in the Italian style; but the interior presents nothing but dark, crowded, and winding streets, bordered with gloomy and ill built houses. The principal branch of its industry is hardware. It has likewise extensive tanneries and paper manufactories. Pop. 10,000. 25 miles E. by N. Clermont.

THIENA, a village of the territory of Tunis, in Africa, 8 miles S. W. Bizerta.

THIRINGELL, OREAR and LITTLE, hamlets of England, in Herefordshire.

THIRSWALL, a village of England, in Cheshire, 5½ miles E. by W. Great Nexon.

THIRYVICTOR, a town of France, on the Moselle, over which it has a fine wooden bridge. It has manufactures of stockings, hats, &c. Pop. 8000. 17 miles N. Metz.

THIRD POINT, a cape on the west coast of Sumatra, in the straits of Banca. Long. 100. 30. E. Lat. 2. 21. S.

THIRLEBY, two townships of England, East Riding of Yorkshire.

THIRLWALL, a hamlet of England, in Northumberland. Thirlwall castle is about 30 yards long by 12 broad, with walls 9 feet thick. Population 203.

THIRSK, a market town and borough of England, in Yorkshire, on a brook called Coatsbeck, over which are two small but substantial stone bridges. In the centre of the town is the market-place. The church is a handsome Gothic building. The moat and rampart of an ancient castle is still to be seen, but no vestige of the building remains. Thirst contains meeting-houses for the Calvinists, the Quakers, and the Methodists. Here is also a school of industry, and a Sunday charity school. Old Thirsk, on the north-east side of the river, consists of a long range of cottages on each side of the turnpike road. Thirst returns 20 members to parliament. Population 2521. 20 miles N. E. York.

THIRSTON, East and West, hamlets of England, in Northumberland.

THIRSTONLAND, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 989.

THIRZLETON, a hamlet and village of England, in Lancashire and Rutlandshire.

THIVA, or STRAS, the ancient Thiver, a well known city of ancient Greece, which, in its days of prosperity, contained 40,000 inhabitants. It was sacked by order of Alexander the Great. At present it is built chiefly of wood, and contains, with its suburbs, between 4000 and 5000 inhabitants, a mixed race of Turks and Greeks. 30 miles N. W. Athens. Long. 23. 25. E. Lat. 38. 22. 30. N.

THIVINIA, a town of France, department of the Dordogne. Population 1600.

THIRREDALE, or THIRREDALE, a hamlet of England, East Riding of Yorkshire.

THOON, a town of the Netherlands, in the island of Tholen. Pop. 1900. 4 miles N. W. Bergen-op-Zoom.

THOON, a small island of the Netherlands, near the mouth of the Scheldt.

THORNTON, a township of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

THOUBA, a town of Portugal, in Estremadura. It has an establishment for spinning cotton, some soapworks, and a little trade in olive oil. Pop. 5000. 17 miles N. N. W. Abrantes.

THOMAS, St., a pretty considerable island in the gulf of Guinea, off the coast of Africa, being about 100 miles W. from the mouth of the Rio Gabon. It appears to be about 40 miles in length, and 30 in breadth. This island is situated immediately under the line. The excess both of heat and moisture renders it extremely pernicious to the health of European residents. The Dutch took possession of it in 1621; but were soon induced, by its unhealthiness, to abandon it. The greater part of St. Thomas is exceedingly fertile. Rice and millet were successfully cultivated by the Portuguese, though yams and other roots are chiefly used by the inhabitants, to supply the absence of bread. The only important article raised for exportation is sugar, for which the soil is extremely well suited. The inhabitants consist partly of Portuguese, the descendants of sailors and banished persons, and partly of negroes. On the eastern part of the island, facing the continent, is built the town of Povoação, consisting of 700 houses, and defended by several forts. Long. 6. 25. E. Lat. 0. 6. to 0. 25. N.

THOMAS, St., the principal of the Virgin Islands, in the West Indies, about 10 miles in circumference, belonging to the Brandenburgs and Danes, the former under protection of the latter. It abounds with potatoes, millet, manioc, and most sorts of fruits and herbage, especially sugar and tobacco, but is extremely infested with mosquitoes and other troublesome vermin. The town, which begins about 50 or 60 paces west of the harbour, consists chiefly of one long street, at the end of which is the Danish factory. In March 1801, it was taken by the British. It was given up at the peace of Amiens; but was again taken in the course of the subsequent war, and was restored to Denmark at the peace of Paris in 1814. Long. 64. 50. W. Lat. 18. 22. N.

THOMAS, St., a village of Lower Canada, delightfully situated on the southern bank of the St. Lawrence. Population 500.

THOMAS, SAN, a city of Guiana, on the Orinoco, about 244 miles W. of its mouth. It is well built. It is of a hot temperature, and very unhealthy, from the stagnant waters of the Orinoco. Long. 63. 55. W. Lat. 8. 7. N.

THOMASTOWN, a town of Ireland, in Kilkenny, on the Nore, over which is a beautiful bridge. 8 miles S. E. Kilkenny.

THOMASTOWN, a post township of the United States, in Lincoln county, Maine, on the river St. George. Population 2100. 190 miles N. E. Boston.

THOMPSON, a post township of the United States, and capital of Sullivan county, New York. Population 1250.

THOMPSON'S CREEK, three rivers of North America, one which joins the Missouri; the second, in South Carolina, runs into the Great Pedee; and the third into the Mississippi.

THORNE, a river of England, in Somersetshire, which passes by Taunton.

THORNE, a town of Savoy, 23 miles S. S. E. Geneva. Population 1350.

THORNE, NEYHEM and UFFEN, two townships of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

THORON, a town of Savoy, 20 miles E. N. E. Geneva. Population 1150.

THOR, a town of France, 9 miles E. by S. Avignon. Population 1800.

THORDA, a county of Transylvania, in the province belonging to the Magyars or Hungarians. Area 1455 square miles; population 100,000.

THORDA, the capital of the above county, near the Aranjoe. It has an extensive trade in salt, there being rich mines in the neighbourhood. Pop. 3000. 17 miles S. S. E. Clausenburg.

THORSTON, a hamlet of England, in Lincolnshire, about a mile N. E. Alford.

THREANST, a township of England, East Riding of Yorkshire.

THORIGNY, a town of France, department of La Manche. Population 2300.

THORNTON, a hamlet of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

THORN, a town of West Prussia, government of Marienwerder, on the Vistula, about 90 miles from the mouth of the river, over which is a wooden bridge of uncommon length. It was formerly considered a place of great strength. It has manufactures of woollens, linen, hats, leathers, gloves, starch; and exports moreover corn and wood. Its best edifices are of old date. The town was begun under the Teutonic knights in 1231. Pop. 6500. 92 miles S. Dantzic.

THORNS, a town of the Netherlands, in Limburg, 7 miles S. S. W. Kurenaende.

THORNTON, two hamlets of England, in Northumberland and Yorkshire.

THORNTON, a market town and borough of England, in Gloucester, near the Severn, on a rivulet that runs into it. The church is spacious and handsome. Here are, besides a free school and four almshouses, Thornbury is a borough by prescription, and is governed by a mayor and 12 aldermen; but the power of these officers is much limited by disuse. At the end of the town are the remains of the unfinished castle of Thornbury, begun by Edward Stafford, duke of Buckingham, but stopp'd by his execution in 1522. This castle is particularly deserving of notice, as it presents a happy specimen of the best style of Gothic architecture, as applied to castellated houses. Population 1125. 24 miles S. S. W. Gloucester.

THORNTON, a hamlet of England, in Bedfordshire.

THORNTON, a market town of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, a quarter of a mile from the river Don. The town is tolerably well built. It has of late years greatly improved in its appearance. Besides a neat church, it contains two chapels for the Methodists, and one for the Quakers. There is one fruit an extensive waste, called Thorne man, and is conveyed by the river to several parts of England. Thorne appears to be a thriving place. The quay is about a mile from the town, at the suburb called Haggish-hill, on the banks of the river; and here is a large dock-yard, where ships of considerable burden are built. Population 2500. 37 miles S. York.

THORNTON, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 700.

THORNTON, a village of England, in Dumfriesshire, 10 miles S. from the Nith. 10 miles N. Dumfries.

THORNTON, a village of Scotland, Perthshire, 10 miles W. Biding.

THORNTON and THORNTON, two hamlets of England, in Yorkshire and Durham.

THORNTON, a manufacturing village of Scotland, in Renfrewshire.

THORNTON, a village of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

THORNTON, a township of England, in Dorsetshire.

THORNTON, or THORN SHAP, a hamlet of England, in Westmoreland.

THORNTON, a village of England, Lincoln, 5 miles S. E. Barton-upon-Humber.—The name of various townships and parishes in England.

THORNTON, a village of England, in Oxfordshire, 2 miles N. Great Faringdon.

THORNTON, a hamlet of England, in Berkshire, 2 miles N. N. E. Epsom.

THORNTON, a village of England, in Nottinghamshire.

THORNTON, a town of the Netherlands, in West Flanders, 12 miles S. E. Ostend. Population 5000.

THORNTON, the name of numerous parishes, townships, and hamlets, in England.

THORNTON, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire. Population 1500.

THORNTON, a town of France, department of the Two Seines, 40 miles N. W. Paris. Population 3100.

THORNTON, a village town of England, in Northamptonshire, situated over which there is a handsome bridge of several arches. Population 1154. 21 miles N. E. Northampton, and 75 N. N. W. London.

THORNTON, or THORNTON, the ancient name of a lake in the central part of Italy, now called the lake of Perugia.

THORNTON, a township of England, in Lancashire, adjoining to Kirtlington. Pop. 764.

THORNTON, three small islands on the coast of Guinea, in the mouth of the E. equator. The name of various small islands in the Atlantic, the Eastern sea, &c.

THORNTON, three small islands in the South Pacific ocean, near the north coast of New Zealand, discovered by Tasman.

THORNTON, a river of one of the divisions of Lower Canada. It lies between those of Montreal and Quebec.

THORNTON, a town of Lower Canada, on the river St. Maurice, at the confluence with the St. Lawrence. The shops and warehouses are numerous, whither may be sent British goods of all denominations. Several inns afford to travellers very respectable accommodations. The principal public buildings in the town are the Grantham school, the Protestant and Catholic churches, the court-house, jail, and barracks. The taller part of the private dwelling houses, &c. are built of wood. The trade carried on here is chiefly in British manufactured goods, sent from Britain, principally the ribbons through the middle district of the province; the exports consist of wheat, timber, and the produce of its iron foundry, added to that of the mines of St. Maurice. Petty in small quantities is brought by the Indians from the northward. Several pot and pearl ash manufactories, two or three breweries, and an extensive brick manufactory, considerably increase the general trade of the place. It sends two members to the provincial parliament. Population 2500.

THORNTON, a river of England, in Norfolk, which runs into the sea, near Yarmouth.

THORNTON, a river of England, in Dorsetshire, which falls into the Severn.

THORNTON, a hamlet of England, Durham.

THORNTON, a village of England, in Oxfordshire, 2 miles N. Great Faringdon.

THORNTON, or THORNTON, a village of England, in Berkshire.

THORNTON, a river of England, in Devonshire, which joins the Tamar.

THORNTON, a town of France, department of the Ardèche. Population 2300.

THORNTON, a town of the Netherlands, on the Sandre, 4 miles S. W. Charleroi. Pop. 3000.

THORNTON, a river of Wales, in Glamorganshire, which runs into the Llogher.

THORNTON, a name given by the ancients to the most northern part of Europe.

THORNTON, a lake of Switzerland, 12 miles long, and 3 broad.

THORNTON, a river of North America, which falls into Lake Huron.

THORNTON, a rapid river of Switzerland, which falls into the Rhine.

THORNTON, a union of Switzerland. Area 354 square miles. Population 77,000.

THORNTON, the former name of an extensive tract of country in the central part of Germany, in Saxony.

THORNTON, a hilly and woody tract of country in the interior of Germany, extending through a number of petty principalities, Eisenach, Gotha, Weimar, Coburg, &c.

THORNTON, a large straggling town of Ireland, in the county of Tipperary, nearly divided into two equal portions by the river Suir. Here is a good market-house, a neat modern church, and a fine mansion. 70 miles S. W. Dublin.

THORNTON, a river of England, in Cumberland, which runs into the Derwent.

THORNTON, a township of England, in Yorkshire. Population 1524.

THORNTON, a small town of Germany, in Bavaria Franconia. Population 1300.

THORNTON, a district in the north-west of Hungary, lying between those of Trentin and Zips. Area 440 square miles. Population 40,000.

THORNTON, a market town and parish of England, in Essex, in a small creek of the Thames, navigable for boats and vessels of small burden. The church is built in the form of a cross, with a tower on the north side. Population 742.

THORNTON, a parish and town of Scotland, at the head of a spacious bay at the mouth of the river Thorne. The promontory of Holburnhead, the western boundary of this beautiful and romantic bay, at the distance of about a league from the town, forms the safe and commodious anchorage or harbour called Scrabster Mouth, bordering on the celebrated Pentlands firth. This excellent roadstead is capable of mooring from 80 to 100 sail of vessels. The town is irregularly built, containing no edifices of any note, except the church, which is an old substantial Gothic building, in good repair. But a new town, on a regular plan, is laid out on the west bank of the river, in a pleasant elevated situation. Adjoining to the old town on the south, many elegant houses have been already built, and it is extending rapidly. The principal manufacture of the town is coarse linen cloth. There is also a straw-plaiting manufactory, which at one time employed about 400 women and girls. There is a bleachfield, a tannery, a rope-work, and two distilleries, in the neighbourhood. There are Congregational, Anti-burgher, and Baptist places of worship. Population 4945. 20 miles N. W. Wick, and 220 N. Edinburgh.

THURSO RIVER, a river of Scotland, county of Caithness, which falls into the Pentland frith at the town of Thurso. It abounds with trout and salmon.

THURSTON-MERE, a river of England, in Cumberland and Lancashire.

TIBULA FOX, a hamlet of England, in Salop, 4 miles W. by N. Newport.

TIBUR, a celebrated river of Italy, which rises in the Apennines, flows to the west and south, and receiving a number of smaller streams, joins by Rome, and falls into the Mediterranean, about 15 miles below that city, in Long. 11. 8. E. Lat. 41. 47. N.

TIBURIA, a large lake in the northern part of Judea, celebrated in scripture history under the appellation of the sea of Galilee, or the sea of Tiberias.

TICAO ISLE, one of the Philippine islands, due south of the island of Luzon.

TICHBURN, a market town of England, in Southhamptonshire, near the Tichfield river. The church is a spacious fabric, the work of different ages. Besides the church, here is a charity school. Population 3633.

TICHVIN, a town of European Russia, government of Novgorod, on the Tichvinka. Population 3600.

TICINO, a considerable river of Italy, which flows into the Lago Maggiore.

TICINO, or TRISTAN, a considerable district in the south of Switzerland, situated between the central cantons and the frontier of Lombardy. It was formerly called the Italian bailiwick, and is a tract of mountainous territory acquired long since by the Swiss, but inhabited by Italian, and governed by temporary deputies from the respective cantons until 1815, when it was formed into an independent canton, divided into eight districts. Population 65,000.

TICHAHY, a town of Hindostan, province of Bahar. Longt. 84. 55. E. Lat. 24. 55. N.

TICKHAMPTON, a village and parish of England, in Rutlandshire.

TICKHURST, a market town of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire. It has a church, and the remains of an ancient castle. The church is a spacious and handsome building, with a lofty and beautiful tower. Population 1230. 4 miles N. Doncaster.

TICOMMOCOGA, a township of the United States, in Essex county, New York. Population 954.

TICOMMOCOGA, a fort of the United States, built by the French, in 1756, in Essex county, ty, New York. It is famous in the history of the American war, and is now in ruins.

TINEWALL, a market town of England, in Derbyshire. The church is a large and handsome structure. It has also a free school. Population 1543. 22 miles N. W. Derby.

TINI, a river of England, in the county of Cornwall, which joins the Lynher.

TINOUX, a small river of Italy, in the Sardinian states, which falls into the Po.

TIDORE, one of the Molucca islands, in the Eastern seas, about 21 miles in circumference. It is situated on the west coast of Gilolo, and is three leagues south from Ternate, from which it is separated by a narrow channel. It is very populous. The people are principally Mahometans, and there are said to be 25 mosques on the island. Long. 127. 25. E. Lat. 0. 45. N.

TIDWELL, a hamlet of England, Devonshire.

TIESSENDORF, a town of West Prussia, 20 miles E. S. E. Danzig. Population 1400.

TIERRE, a river of Paraguay, which falls into the Parana.

TIERA'S CREEK, a small stream of the United States, which enters the Ohio.

TIOGA'S VALLEY, a post village of the United States, in Harrison county, Ohio.

TIOZIOLE, a town of Piedmont. Population 2600.

TIORE, a large river of New Granada, which falls into the Amazon, in Lat. 4. 53. S.

TIORE, an extensive province of Abyssinia, which has now communicated its name to almost all the north-eastern districts of that great country.

TIORE, a huge and celebrated river of Western Asia, flowing along the boundaries of the Turkish and Persian empires. It rises in the mountains of Armenia, about 50 miles to the north of Diarbekir, and is to the east of the source of the Euphrates. At Korna it joins the Euphrates; and the united stream falls into the Persian gulf. This river rises higher in the year, first and most remarkably in April, in consequence of the melting of the snows in the mountains of Armenia; afterwards in November, through the accumulation of the periodical rains.

TIORE, an inland town of the Netherlands, in North Brabant, with a large castle, and about 10,000 inhabitants. It has extensive woollen manufactures.

TIORE, East, a village and parish of England, in the county of Essex. On the bank of the Thames, in this parish, opposite Gravesend, is Tilbury fort, originally built as a kind of block-house by Henry VIII., but enlarged into a regular fortification by Charles II. 20 miles E. by S. London.

TILBURY, WEST, a parish adjoining to the above. It appears to have been an episcopal seat of Cedd, bishop of the East Saxons. It is now a small village.

TILBURY ISLAND, an island of the United States, in the Chesapeake.

TILT, a river of England, in Northumberland, which falls into the Tyne.

TILLINGTON, two hamlets of England, in Staffordshire and Herefordshire.

TILLYCOURTAY, a parish and village of Scotland, in Clackmannanshire, 4 miles W. Dollar.

TILSIT, a town of Prussian Lithuania, on the Tilsa and the Niemen. The chief articles of trade are corn, wax, salt, salted provisions, hats, and leather. Its chief title to historical notice is from the treaty of peace concluded here on 1st July 1807, between France on the one hand and Prussia on the other. Population 9000. 40 miles E. S. E. Memel, and 56 E. N. E. Königsberg.

TILSON, TILSWOOD, TILSTON, and TILSTON FERNHALL, a village and three hamlets of England, the two first in Shropshire, the other two in Cheshire.

TILT, a rapid stream of Scotland, Perthshire. It joins the Garry near Oldcastle.

TILTS, a township of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire.

TIM, a town of Russia, government of Kursk. Population 3000.

TIMAHNE, a small village of Ireland, in Queen's county, 4½ miles N. W. Dublin.

TIMAVO, a river of Italy, which falls into the bay of Trieste.

TINDLE, GREAT and LITTLE, townships of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

TIMICOUATU, a lake of Canada, in Cornwallis county, 32 miles in length, by the average breadth three quarters of a mile.

TIMMISKAMIA LAKES, in Lower Canada, is about 30 miles long, and 10 broad.

TINOLIN, a village of Ireland, in the county of Kildare, 20 miles S. W. Dublin.

TIMOR, the southernmost, and largest of the Molucca islands, in the Eastern seas. It is 250 miles in a north-eastern direction, by from 30 to 60 in breadth. The interior part is a chain of mountains, some of which nearly equal the peak of Tenerife in elevation; whilst the shores on the south-east side are represented to be exceedingly low, and over-run with mangroves. Gold is said to be contained in the mountains; but the commerce is chiefly sandal-wood and wax. Another article of export is heha de men. Mountain rice is also produced, and grows on dry land, which is rather marginal. Sandal-wood, bees-wax, honey, and cloves, are exported; and rice, arrack, sugar, tea, coffee, betelnut, and the manufactures of China, with some from India and Europe, received in return. The Dutch established themselves in this island at Coepang, in 1631. Latitude of the extreme south-west point of Timor, 123 30. E. Lat. 10. 22. S.

TIMOR LANT, an island in the Eastern seas, 70 miles long, by 25 broad, between the 7th and 8th degrees of S. lat. and the 132d and 133d of E. long.

TINCHEWRA, a town of France, department of the Orne, on the Néreau. Pop. 3600.

TINTAG, one of the Ladrone islands, in the North Pacific ocean; about 42 miles in circumference, first discovered by the crew of a Manila ship, which was cast away here in the year 1638. The author of Anson's voyage gives a most romantic description of this island, as found by the crew of the Centurion, in the year 1742. But his account is not confirmed by future voyagers, who describe it as overgrown with thick forests, entangled with underwood. There were here also all sorts of venomous reptiles and insects. The climate was also excessively hot, and the rains violent.

TINNEVELLY, an extensive district of the south of India, province of the Carnatic, 150 miles in length by 60 in breadth, occupying the south-east extremity of the peninsula, and separated from Ceylon by the gulf of Mannar. Generally speaking, this district may be called an open and level country, although it contains some woods, and several hills. The population consists chiefly of Hindoos, who retain much of their primitive customs and manners.

TINNEVELLY, the capital of the above mentioned district. It is surrounded by extensive rice fields, and on the west by rocky ground; and is unhealthy for Europeans. Long. 71. 1. E. Lat. 8. 40. N.

TINTWIN, a small river of Scotland, in Roxburghshire, which joins the Liddell.

TIRTA, a province of Peru. See Tucum and Cachan. The capital of the province has also the same name.

TIRREHAN, a village of Ireland, in the county of Wickford, 26 miles W. Dublin.

TIRRE, a river of Spain, province of Seville, which runs into the Atlantic, to the west of the Guadalquivir, near the town of Moguer.

TIOGA, a county of the United States, on the north side of Pennsylvania. Pop. 1087.

TIOGA, a county of the United States, in New York. The area is 592 square miles, or 571,306 acres. Population, 7895.

TIOGA, a river of the United States, which joins the Alleghenian.

TIOGA, an island on the west coast of Sweden, 16 miles N. Gottingen, about 30 miles in circuit.

TIOUGAHOA, a river of the United States, which flows into the Chesapeake.

TIRUNA, called by the Mahometans Rodoc, noted a very extensive district of Bengal. It is situated on the eastern side of the Brahmaputra or Megna river, and between the 23d and 24th degrees of N. lat.

TIRUCAYON, a river of the United States, in Indiana, which joins the Wabash, about 420 miles from its mouth.

TIRREHAN, a county of Ireland, province of Munster, extending in a very irregular form between the King's and Queen's counties on the north, the latter county and that of Kilkenny on the east, the counties of Waterford and Cork on the south, and those of Limerick, Clare, and Galway, on the west. From the top latter counties the river Shannon forms a natural boundary; as the river Suir does from Waterford for about 16 miles on the south. The length from north to south is 73½ miles, and its breadth 39½. It contains 832,398 acres, or 1420 square miles, including bogs, mountain, and waste. The lands of Tipperary have been always ranked amongst the most productive in Ireland. It has, however, been always a great grazing county. It has also extensive tracts of bog and mountain. To the south of a range of bog, and situated between the small town of Killeenale and the county of Kilkenny, is the coal district. To the south of this, and in the south-eastern angle of the county, is Slieve-an-an mountain. On the borders of the county of Wexford, over the town of Clughen, are the Knockmole-down mountains. Nearly parallel to these, and north of them, are the fells of Galtymore. Between these and the town of Tipperary is the lower range, called Slieve-an-an-muck; but the greatest extent of mountain crosses the county from south-west to north-east, running from the county of Limerick to the Queen's county, and completely separating the two Ormonds from the rest of the county. The high hills adjoining Limerick are called the Keepe mountains, from the highest of them. In this district are lead and copper mines, and some parts of it afford fine mill-stones. The rivers are the Suir, and its tributary streams. The western division of the county has the Shannon for its boundary, and is well watered by the streams which flow to it from the range of mountains above mentioned. Its chief towns are Clonmell, Cashel, Thscrin, Nenagh, Tipperary, and Carrick. Population estimated at 206,000.

TIPPERARY, a market town of Ireland, in the above county. It is in a ruinous condition. 57 miles S. W. Dublin.

TIPSA, a town of Algiers, in the province of Constantine, the ancient Tipsa, of which it still presents most extensive ruins. 25 miles S. E. Constantine.

TIRAND, a town of Italy, in the Papal line, on the Adige. Population 2700.

TIRANPOL, a town of European Russia, in the Diocesis, 5 miles E. Bender. Pop. 3000.

TIRMOOT, an extensive district of Hindostan, province of Bahar, situated principally between the 25th and 30th degrees of northern latitude. Population 2,000,000.

TIRLEMONT, a town of the Netherlands, in Brabant, on the Geete. It has manufactures of woollens, also breweries and distilleries. Pop. 6000. 13 miles E. Brussels.

TIRRELL, a hamlet of England, in Westmoreland, 2½ miles N. S. W. Penrith.

TIRY, one of the Hebrides, on the coast of Scotland, and in the county of Argyll. It is about 13 miles long, and from 5 to less than 1 broad.

TISWORT, a village and parish of England, in Wilts. The church is a spacious building of great antiquity. Pop. 1123.

TITCHFIELD, a river of England, in Southamptonshire, which falls into the English channel east of Hamble.

TITICACA, a lake of South America, formerly in Peru, now in the viceroyalty of Buenos Ayres. It is situated in the plains that lie between the two Cordilleras, in the north-western part of the province of Los Charcas. In circumference it is about 240 miles, and in some parts from 70 to 80 fathoms in depth.

TITZINGHURST, a hamlet of England, in Northumberland.

TITZICHA, a town of Moravia, 31 miles E. Olmutz. Population 1300.

TIZICHA, the central province of the kingdom of Algeria, being that in which the capital is contained. It is about 60 miles long by 40 broad.

TIZICHA, a market town and borough of England, county of Devon, at the confluence of the Axe and Loham. It consists of four principal streets, which form a quadrangle. The principal public buildings are the castle, the church, and the free grammar school. The castle stands on the west side of the town, on an eminence well adapted for defence. From the present remains, and other circumstances, it appears to have been nearly of a quadrangular form, enclosing an area of about 20 acres, and surrounded by a strong wall, 20 ft. to 25 feet in height. The church, near the castle, is a very handsome structure, dedicated to St Peter. Its length is 158 feet, and its width 62. It is the work of different and distant ages, but is not uninteresting, pretty uniform in its architecture. The south side is ornamented with much curious sculpture, particularly the porch and the adjoining chapel. Contiguous to the church is the tower, a plain stone structure, ornamented with battlements and pinnacles. The height is 116 feet. In 1553, a chapel of ease was erected, which is a neat Doric building, covered with yellow English stone. The town contains, besides several meeting-houses for dissenters, also a free grammar school and a charity school, a free English school, and various almshouses. The town-house is a handsome building, divided into various apartments. The principal town-house is a regular brick building, 61 feet in length, and 24 in breadth. Tizicha has long been famous for its woollen manufactures, especially of hosiery. The trade is present, however, almost entirely in the manufacture of serge, broads, fustians, agateen, drapings, &c. It has many members to parliament. Pop. 10,000. 14 miles N. Exeter.

TIZICHA, a post-township of the United States, in Newport county, Rhode Island. Population 2337.

TIZICHA, a low island in the South Pacific ocean, 10 miles in its longest diameter, long 144 36 W. Lat. 4 33 S.

TIZICHA, a town of Italy, 12 miles E. by N. Rome. It is delightfully situated on an eminence covered with olives and fruit trees; but its greatest attraction now, as in former ages, consists in the falls of the Teverone

(the ancient Assa), which glides gently through the town, till reaching the brink of a rock, over which it precipitates itself nearly 100 feet in one mass, and after boiling up in its narrow channel, rushes through a chasm of the rock into a cavern below. On the summit of the steep bank stands a beautiful temple of the Corinthian order, built in the Augustan age. Near it are the remains of another ancient temple. It has a cathedral and several churches. Pop. 14,000.

TIVY, or TOWY, a river of Wales, in the county of Caernarvon, which falls into Caernarvon bay, in a large estuary.

TIXENDALE, or TIRIKENDALE, a town-ship of England, in Yorkshire.

TLAXCALA, or TLASCALA, a government of Mexico, in the intendancy of Puebla de los Angeles, which contained, in 1793, 89,177 inhabitants.

TLAXCALA, the capital of the above province, on a small river. When the Spaniards first arrived here, it is said to have contained 300,000 inhabitants. It is now so much reduced from its ancient grandeur, that it scarcely contains 3400 inhabitants, 64 miles E. Mexico. Long 93. W. Lat. 19. 30. N.

TLEMAM, or TLEMECEN, the most westerly of the three provinces into which the kingdom of Algiers is divided.

TLEMAM, or TLEMECEN, capital of the above province. It was once an important place; but having revolted, Hassan, then dey of Algiers, laid it in ruins, 320 miles N. N. W. Algiers.

TOBAGO, one of the Caribbee islands, in the West Indies, about 95 miles in length from S. E. to N. W., and about 12 in its greatest breadth. It was first settled by the Dutch, who were expelled by the Spaniards. It was then settled by the English, to whom it was finally ceded by the treaty of 1763. The climate is temperate, the heat being allayed by the sea breeze. Its soil is of different kinds, but in general the mould is rich and black, and proper for producing in the greatest plenty whatever is raised in other parts of the West Indies. The abundance of springs upon the island contributes to its healthfulness, and its bays and creeks are so disposed as to be very convenient for all kinds of shipping. Tobacco, sugar, and every kind of plant that grows in the Antilles, and besides, like Jamaica, the greater part of those which are peculiar to Spanish Guinea and Cape de Verde. It also abounds in fruits, as figs, pineapples, pomegranates, oranges, lemons, limes, plantains, bananas, grapes, guavas, tamarinds, prickly pears, pines, musk-melons, water-melons, gourds, cucumbers, pumpkins, &c. Here are likewise found peccoties, resembling swine, and didoes, guanoes, Indian rabbits, and indigenous fowls, cows, ewes, sheep, deer, goats, and rabbits, were probably introduced by the Dutch, and have multiplied exceedingly. The feathered race are in great variety.

In May 1781, the island was taken by the French. In 1793, it was retaken by the British, by whom it was retained at the peace of Amiens, and in whose possession it still remains. The value of its exports amounted in 1810 to £.70,787; that of its imports to £.290,090. Long. 60. 30. W. Lat. 11. 18. N. TOWNSHAY, a village of Scotland, in the island of Mull, in Argyleshire, lately built by the British society for the encouragement of fisheries, as a fishing station and seaport. It consists of about 50 houses, built with stone and lime, and covered with slate, besides about 30 huts or thatched houses.

TOWOI, a considerable river of Asiatic Russia, which flows near the Oural mountains. It joins the Irtysh, near Tobolsk, after a course of nearly 100 miles.

TOWOIS, the name of one of the two great governments into which Asiatic Russia is divided, forming the western part of that immense territory. The eastern is called Irkoutsk. On the W. the chain of the Oural separates this government from that of European Russia; it is bounded N. by a vast extent of the Northern ocean, broken into many deep bays, and extending from the mouth of the Ob to that of the Olenek; on the S. a frontier, consisting partly of mountains, partly of desert plains, separates it from Chinese and Independent Tartary; while on the E. a varying line divides it from Irkoutsk. This government includes the vast tracts watered by the Ob, the Irtysh, and the Yenisei; and within its bounds is contained most of the cultivated part of Asiatic Russia. From the banks of the Frozen ocean, as far as Lat. 44. N., the surface presents an aspect of the most dismal sterility. A great portion, on the other hand, of the most southerly districts, consists of valleys covered with saline lakes and marshes. The steps of Persia, and, on the contrary, which, in the eastern part of this government, occupies the middle between these two districts, is covered with the most luxuriant vegetation, and would be capable of large cultivation, if the country were the seat of industry and population. The Oural, through a great part of their life, produces iron and copper most abundantly; and in other parts there is an inexhaustible supply of various minerals, including an innumerable quantity of gold and silver. The widely extended forests and wastes of this region afford also ample opportunities of hunting. And all these natural advantages, Tobolsk enjoys under the want of a water communication, by which its surplus produce could be disposed of. By the enumeration of 1801, its fixed inhabitants did not exceed 22,423.

TOPOTON, a large city, capital of the government of the same name, and of Asiatic Russia in general, on the river Irtysh. It is composed of two parts, the high and the low town. The former is built on an elevated ridge, running parallel to the Irtysh, at a little distance; while the latter fills the level space between it and the river. The high town contains the residence of the governor, the tribunals, public offices, and the magazine of foreign merchandise. These, with two churches and a convent, are all the edifices composed of stone; the rest are of wood. The buildings being white, and the cupolas gilded, cause them, in this high situation, to make a very fine appearance from a distance. Here was formerly the citadel or krenlin. The low town may be considered as a sort of suburb, and, with the exception of a convent, is built entirely of wood. Connected with it is a large suburb, inhabited by the Tartars. These Tartars consist of the original inhabitants of the country at the time of the conquest, mixed with some Bucharians, who have come for the purposes of trade. The other residents are in a great measure descended of exiles sent hither by the Russian government. The largest colony ever transported hither consisted of the Swedish officers made prisoners at the battle of Pultawa. Tobolsk is a great thoroughfare for that limited trade which the situation of Siberia admits of. The most important is the one carried on, by an immense extent of land and river carriage, between European Russia and the frontier of China. The merchants from Europe arrive in spring, with their commodities destined for that distant market; and at the end of summer, the boats appear returning with their cargoes to be transported to Moscow and Petersburg. Population 16,209. Long. 66. 15. E. Lat. 58. 14. N.

Tonono, a large village of Spain, province of La Mancha, noted as the scene of the adventure of Don Quixote. Population 4000. 68 miles S.E. Madrid.

Tony's CREEK, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania, which runs into the Alleghany, 20 miles below Franklin.

Tocantins, a large river which has its head waters in the interior of Brazil, lat. 10. S. and carries its waters into the Plata.

Tocat, a large and commercial city in the interior of Asia Minor, in the pachlik of Sivas. It rises in the form of an amphitheatre, in a deep valley on the banks of the Jekil Irmaik, the ancient Iris. It has manufactures of vessels of copper, kettles, candlesticks, &c. Blue sugarco and silk stuffs are also manufactured. Tocat is the centre of a very extensive inland trade to and from all parts of Asia Minor. Population 60,000. 40 miles N.W. Syria. Long. 35. 28. E. Lat. 30. 35. N.

TODARA, a village of Brazil, in Minas Novas, at the conflux of the Tigtheninhim with the Rio Grande, chiefly supported by the diamond trade. 36 miles N. E. Tejus.

Tocuro, a town of South America, in the Caracaca, province of Venezuela, near the source of the river of its name. It is built in a valley. It has a well built parish church, on which depends one chapel of ease. The inhabitants have woollen manufactures; they also trade in salt, which they bring from the salt ponds of Coro. Population 16,209. 270 miles S. W. Caracas.

Tocuro, a river of South America, which has its rise in the vicinity of Lake Maracaibo, upwards of 60 leagues from the Caribbean sea, into which it is discharged, and 9 leagues E. of Coro.

Ton Huan, a cape on the east coast of Scotland, 5 miles S. Stonelaven.

Tonos Santos, a large and convenient bay on the coast of Brazil, and province of Bahia. It is 37 miles long from north to south, its greatest width from east to west is 27. The eastern part of the bay lies in Long. 38. 42. W. Lat. 12. 42. S.

TOKAY, a town in the north-east of Hungary, at the confluence of the rivers Bodrog and Theysse. It contains 4200 inhabitants, with 5 churches, for as many different sects. It has also two monasteries, and well frequented yearly fairs. This town, though small, has attained great celebrity for its wine, which is among the finest and most expensive in Europe. 114 miles E. N. E. Pest.

TOLIMA, a province in the central part of Spain, in New Castile, situated chiefly to the south of the Tagus. Its area (according to Antillon) is 9240 square miles; its population 374,000. Its surface consists partly of mountain tracts, partly of elevated and extensive plains. This province is mountainous. The Alberche, the Algodar, and the Tagus, traverse it; the northern, and the Guadiana approaches the southern part of the province. The scarcity of water is a great obstacle to the extension of tillage. But the pasturage is good, at least in particular situations: the flocks of sheep are numerous, and the wool of the best quality. Vines, silk, honey, wax, and fruits, adapted to the temperature, are the further products of this province.

TORRES, an ancient city in the interior of Spain, in New Castile, the chief town of the preceding province. It is situated on the sides and top of a steep hill, bathed by the Tagus. The vicinity of the hills, by concentrating the sun's rays, renders the heat in summer excessive. The houses are crowded, the streets narrow and steep, and though there are several public walks, they are at a distance from the centre of the town. Population 25,000, which it is evident was greater in former times, from the extent of the ruins in several parts of the town, particularly on the north side. These ruins continue to be in heaps, the rubbish being hardly ever removed. The chief attraction in Toledo is its public edifices. The Alcazar or palace is a large structure at the top of a hill, built with solidity, and decorated with statues. The cathedral is of great antiquity, the original structure having been founded in the year 630, and having served as a mosque to the Moors. There are in Toledo a number of churches, hospitals, monasteries, and convents. The hospital of St Cruz is an elegant building, of the 15th century; that of St John, built in the 16th, is equally rich, and in a better situation. Of Roman monuments there are here only the remains of a circus, an aqueduct, and a road. The walls, though ruinous, are of less remote date, having been erected by the Moors or the kings of Castile. The university of Toledo, formerly in repute, had long lost its estimation, and was entirely suppressed in 1807. Woolens, linen, and silks, are manufactured; and the Toledo swords, so noted throughout Spain, are now made in a large building on the banks of the Tagus. The secret of tempering them is said to have been recovered, and they fetch a very high price. Toledo is a place of great antiquity, and was successively the seat of government under the Goths, the Moors, and the kings of Castile. 40 miles S. & W. Madrid.

TORRENTINO, a town of Italy, 92 miles N. N. E. Rome. Population 4000.

TORNHAY, a petty town of the Netherlands, in Gelderland, on the Rhine.

TOLLAND, a county of the United States, in Connecticut. Population 13,779.

TOLLAND, a village and township of the United States, Connecticut, 83 miles W. R. W. Boston. Population of the township, 1610.

TOLLERTON, a hamlet of England, in Gloucestershire, near Minchinhampton.

TOLMEZZO, a town of Austrian Italy, 25 miles N. N. W. Udine. Population 8000.

TOLNA, a county in the south-west of Hungary, to the W. of the Danube. Area 1400 square miles. Pop. 150,000.

TOLOSA, a town of Spain, in Biscay, at the confluence of the rivers Ordo and Araxes. Its iron works are on a large scale. Population 4200. 39 miles E. by S. Bilbao.

TORN, a seaport of South America, in Carthagea, 55 miles S. Carthagea. Long. 74. 30. W. Lat. 8. 32. N.

TOLUCA, a regularly built town of Mexico, in the dependency of Mexico, 24 miles S. W. Mexico.

TOLVE, a town of the kingdom of Naples, 70 miles E. Salerno. Population 3000.

TOLZ, a town of Bavaria, on the Isar, 29 miles S. Munich. Population 2100.

TOMBIGHEE, or TOMBIGHEE, a river of the United States, in the Alabama territory, which joins the Alabama 48 miles above the head of Mobile bay.

TOMBUCTOO, a large city of Africa, which has for many centuries been the grand resort of the interior trade of that great continent. All attempts made during 200 years by European merchants and travellers to reach it, have been completely baffled; so that we have only shreds and fragments of information, and are unable to form any distinct idea of this great emporium of Africa. According to the accounts of Leo Africanus, the city contained many shops of artisans and merchants, and particularly numerous manufacturers of cotton cloth. There were in it many persons of great opulence, particularly foreign merchants, two of whom were reckoned so considerable by their wealth, that the king had given them his daughters in marriage. The king possessed an ample treasure, and held a very splendid and well regulated court. The houses of the ordinary inhabitants appear to have been built in a somewhat humble style. They were in the form of bells; the walls composed of stakes or hurdles, and the roofs of interwoven reeds. Stone, however, had been used in the construction of the principal mosque, and of the royal palace, the latter of which was designed by an artist from Granada. The city was extremely exposed to fire; and Leo, in one of his visits, had seen half of it consumed by a single conflagration. Since this period, Tombuctoo is supposed to have declined in importance; yet it continues still the chief emporium of Central Africa, and the grand medium of communication between it and the northern parts of that continent. Park, whose achievements eclipsed all those of former travellers, never was able to reach Tombuctoo. It was visited by Adams, a sailor, who, having been shipwrecked on the coast of Africa, was carried to Tombuctoo as a slave. He gives a very mean idea of the place. The king's palace, called the kusha, consists merely of a square space, inclosed by a mud wall, and containing eight small apartments on the ground floor. The houses of the chief citizens were built of wooden poles filled with clay and sand, and had only one story. The huts of the poorer classes consisted merely of branches of trees bent in a circle, covered with a matting of palmets, and the whole overlaid with earth. There are other accounts of it, derived from the information of the natives who have visited it, collected by travellers. It generally agrees with the other accounts received concerning this place. Its position is usually placed in about Long. 1. 20. E. Lat. 17. N.; about 1100 miles in the interior, from the mouth of the Senegal.

TOMINA, the capital of a province of the same name in South America, 55 miles E. Chuquisaca.

TOMTERRA, a county of the United States, in New York, formed in 1817, from a part of the counties of Seneca and Cayuga.

TOMTEK, a considerable city of Asiatic Russia, capital of an extensive district, on the Tom, 25 miles from its junction with the Obi. It was originally a mere wooden fort. The most considerable part of the town is built at the foot of a mountain, in the most irregular manner. The Kremlin, a fortress constructed in the 17th century, is now almost entirely in ruins. Within its circuit, however, are the cathedral church, the tribunal, the treasury, with the magazines of furs collected as tribute. The other principal edifice is the church of the resurrection; and there are two convents, the one of monks, and the other of nuns. In the centre also of the trade in brandy, or rather whisky; and habits of drunkenness are general. Besides Russians, the place contains a great number of Tartar, Bucharian, and Kalmuck merchants. Population 11,000. Long. 84. 10. E. Lat. 56. 30. N.

TONDERN, a town of Denmark, duchy of Sleswick, 37 miles S.W. Sleswick. Pop. 2000.

TONGARU, one of the Shetland islands.

TONT, a river of England, in Somersetshire, which runs into the Parrot.

TONGATAPU ISLAND, one of the Friendly islands, in the South Pacific ocean, first discovered by Taiman, who called it Amsterdam; seen by Captain Cook in the year 1773, and visited by him again in 1777. Tongatapu or Tonga is about 60 miles in circuit, somewhat oblong. The soil is everywhere prolific. The air is pure and wholesome, much sharper in the winter than might be expected. The island is in many parts high, the plantations, in the midst of which the principal houses are placed, being also very neatly inclosed. Of cultivated fruits, the principal are plantains, of which they have 15 different sorts or varieties; bread-fruit; two sorts of fruit found at Otaheite, and known there under the names of jambo and cevee, the latter a kind of plum; and a vast number of rhadlocks, which, however, are found as often in a natural state as planted. The only quadrupeds, besides hogs, are a few rats, and some dogs which are not natives of the place, but introduced from some left by Captain Cook. Fowls, which are of a large breed, are domesticated here. The birds are in great variety and beauty. The only noxious or disgusting animals of the reptile or insect tribe are sea-snakes, scorpions, and centipedes. The sea abounds with fish, though the variety is less than might be expected. The inhabitants usually go unarmed, but they have weapons of a very formidable nature. The manners of the lower classes are licentious in the extreme. This island was discovered 27th January 1643, by Abel Janssen Taiman, a Dutch navigator. It has since been visited by different navigators, by Captain Cook in 1773, and in 1777 by Perouse; in 1767, Captain Edwards; in 1791, M. de L'Entrecasteaux, and Flouat; in the French ships La Recherche and L'Esperance, in 1793; and by the missionary ship Duff, in 1767. Long. of the middle of the island 173. W. Lat. 21. 11. S.

TONGA, a village of England, in Kent, 14 mile E. Milton. Here are the ruins of a very ancient castle.

TOXER, two hamlets and a township of England, in Lancashire and L. Cheshire.

TOXES, Old and New, two villages of Holland, in the island of Ommelanden. Population 1400 and 600.

TOXOWAY, a village of North Brabant, 10 miles S. S. E. Bois le Duc. Pop. 300.

TOXOWAY, a town of the Netherlands, 22 miles W. S. W. Antwerp. Population nearly 1800.

TONSERS, or TONSERS, a town of the Netherlands, province of Limburg, on the Jant, 9 miles N. N. W. Liege. Pop. 4000.

TONKIN, a celebrated fortress, and capital of a district, of the Birman empire. Long. 101. 40. E. Lat. 18. 50. N.

TONG-TOU-CHEN, a city of China, of the first rank, in Szechuen. Long. 103. 2. E. Lat. 26. 28. N.

TOWNE RIVER, a river of North America, which, after a course of about 500 miles, falls into the Yellowstone.

TOUXAY CHARENTAIS, a town of France, department of the Lower Charente, on the river Charente, 4 miles E. Rochefort.

TOUXAY, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne, on the Garonne. It has manufactures of woollens and cordage. Population 6000. 35 miles S. E. Bourdeaux.

TOUXEY, a town of France, department of the Yonne, on the Armançon. It contains manufactures of glass, pottery, and hats. Population 4400. 30 miles E. by N. Auxerre.

TOUXEVOLD, a town of Denmark, in Sleswick, near the mouth of the Eyder. Population 2000. 46 miles E. by N. Heligoland.

TOXONU, an ancient city of the south of India, province of Mysore, celebrated for its magnificent reservoir.

TOXEN, a town of Norway, province of Agderhusia, on a bay of the Baltic, with 200 wooden houses. 43 miles S. Christiania.

TOXOVAT ISLAND, one of the Society islands, in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 210. 37. E. Lat. 23. 25. S.

TOORNA, one of the Friendly islands, visible from Ansonhook, by means of its height, and a volcano, which almost constantly emitted smoke, and sometimes threw up stones.

TOORSEPOON, a town of Hindostan, province of Auringabad. It contains a number of Hindoo temples. Long. 75. 57. E. Lat. 18. 17. N.

TOURNAVA, a village of Ireland, in Tipperary, 100 miles S. W. Dublin.

TOURNAPORE, a celebrated river of the south of India. It falls into the Kiasha below Kachera.

TOURNAPORE, a city of Independent Tartary, to the north of the Great Wall, 50 miles N. Bulkh.

TOURNE, TOURNE, a hamlet of England, in Surrey, near London.

TORCELY, a township of England, North Riding of Yorkshire, on the Swale. The church is large and rather handsome. Population 638. 24 miles S. York.

TORSELOV, in Denmark, a town in the N. of Humberg, on a river of the same name. The inhabitants are employed chiefly in the mines in the vicinity, of copper, iron, cobalt, and quicksilver. Population 4000. 100 miles N. N. E. Bude.

TORSTON, a market town and seaport of England, county of Devon, at the confluence of the Clyst and Exe. It consists chiefly of one long street, of irregular breadth. The church stands near the centre of the town, on a high cliff, which gives it a commanding prospect. The quay is spacious and commodious. Population 3156. 31 miles S. S. E. Exeter.

TORSTON, a township of the United States, in Orange county, Vermont. Population 814.—Another in Lincoln county, Maine. Population 1271.

Ton, an ancient town of Arabia, situated near the head of the Red sea. Since Suez became the emporium of the Red sea, Ton has sunk into a village. Long. 33. 28. E. Lat. 28. 19. N.

TORRAY, a fine and commodious bay of the English channel, on the coast of Devonshire, 5 miles N. E. Dartmouth, and formed by two capes, called Berry Point or Head, and Bob's Nose. It forms the general rendezvous of the British navy.

TORRAY, a town and bay on the south coast of Nova Scotia.

TORCELLO, a considerable town of Austrian Italy, delegation of Venice, in the marshy district called the Lagoon. Population 9000, who are partly employed in manufactures. The climate is extremely unhealthy. 7 miles N. Venice.

TORDESILLAS, a town of Spain, province of Leon, on the Douro, over which is a very fine bridge. Population 4000. 25 miles W. S. W. Valladolid.

TORRELLA, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples, 3 miles W. N. W. Canosa. Pop. 3300.

TORGAU, a town of Prussian Saxony, government of Merseburg, on the Elbe, 46 miles N. W. Dresden. It has been the scene of several sanguinary conflicts, the most remarkable of which was the victory obtained here on the 11th November 1700, over the Austrians, by Frederick II. of Prussia.

TORREJA, a river of Spain, which rises among the mountains in the province of Salamanca, and falls into the Douro on the borders of Portugal.

TORNA, the chief town of a palatinate of the same name in Hungary, 10 miles E. W. Caschau. Population 1300.

TORNEA, a small but remarkable town in the north of Finland, at the north extremity of the gulf of Bothnia. It stands on a small island in the large river Tornea, and having been built by order of government (in 1692), is regular in its streets; but the population does not exceed 700. It is a central spot for the exports and imports into a wild and very thinly peopled country. The exports consist of timber, fish, rein-deer, hides, furs, and tar; the imports, of salt, snuff, tobacco, groceries, and spirits. Long. 24. 6. 15. E. Lat. 65. 50. 50. N.

TORNEA LAPPMARK, the most northern of the six provinces of Swedish Lapland, lying between the river Tornea, Lulea Lappmark, and Norwegian Lapland.—There is a river named Tornea in Sweden, which forms the boundary between Russian and Swedish Lapland, and falls into the gulf of Bothnia, below Tornea.

TORO, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples. Population 2400.

TORO, the name of three districts, all situated in the north of Spain.

TORO, a city of Spain, province of Leon, and chief place of a district of the same name. It is situated on the Douro, over which it has a bridge of 22 arches. Toro is regularly built, with wide but dirty streets. It contains several churches and convents, and about 7500 inhabitants, whose chief employment is cultivating or trading in wine and corn. Linen weaving is also a branch of industry here. Here are the remains of an ancient Moorish castle, forming a square of 133 feet, with a round tower at each angle. 17 miles E. Zamora.

TORRELLA, a small town of Spain, in Catalonia, near the mouth of the river Ter.

TOROK-BETSE, or TORRISH BETSCH, a large village of Hungary, on the Theys, 28 miles N. N. E. Peterwaradin.

TOMAR, a county in the south of Hungary, including the western part of the Banat of Temeswar, lying along the east bank of the Theys, and intersected by the Bega. It forms a dead flat of 2300 square miles. Population 210,000.

TOMORAX, a town of European Russia, government of Pskov, on the Oropa. It has a cathedral, 18 parish churches, and two monasteries. Population 7000 or 8000. 245 miles S. St. Petersburg.

TOROX, a town of Spain, on the coast of Granada. Population 2800.

TORRICHEN, a decayed village of Scotland, in Linlithgowshire.

TORREAY, a village of England, in Devonshire, 124 miles S. by E. Exeter.

TORQUEMADA, a town of Spain, in Leon. Population 3500.

TORRE, a town of Piedmont. It has a population of 2100, and manufactures of silk, thread and chamois leather.

TORRE DEL GRECO, a town of Italy, at the foot of Vesuvius. Population 16,000, who are employed chiefly in fishing, navigation, and the culture of the vine. Torre del Greco was destroyed by an eruption of Mount Vesuvius in 1794, and still presents, in its scattered houses, half buried churches, and streets almost choked up with lava, a striking picture of the ravages of the volcano. 5 miles E. S. E. Naples.

TORRE DELLE MUNGATE, a town of Italy, near the foot of Vesuvius, 12 miles E. S. E. Naples. Population 3500.

TORRE DE MONCOYA, a town of Portugal, 87 miles E. Oporto. Pop. 2900.

TORRE DE CAS MALINAR, a town of Spain, province of Valencia, 20 miles S. E. Orihuela.

TORRE VELHA, a fort in Portugal, at the mouth of the Tagus, 3 miles W. by S. Lisbon.

TORRENT, a town of Spain, 5 miles S. W. Valencia. Population 6400.

TORREZ VEDIAS, a very old town of Portuguese Extremadura, 25 miles N. N. W. Lisbon. Population 2300.

TORREZ XIMENA, a town of Spain, in Andalusia. Population 4000.

TORRICELLA, a town of Naples, in Abruzzo Citra. Population 3000.

TORRICELLA, a town of Italy, 10 miles N. by W. Parma.

TORRINGTON, a market town of England, county of Devon, situated on an eminence, which forms the eastern bank of the river Torridge, over which is a stone bridge of four arches. On the south side of the town are some slight vestiges of an ancient castle, the origin of which is unknown. It has some almshouses, and a charity school. It has also some manufactures of woollen. Population 2590. 10 miles S. by W. Barnstaple, 194 W. by S. London.

TORNISDALE, a village of Scotland, in the shire of Aberdeenshire.

TORRYBURN, a parish and village of Scotland, Fifeshire, 4 miles S. W. Dundee. Population of the parish 1472.

TORSHUSLA, a town of Sweden, 40 miles W. Stockholm. Population 400.

TOUSHOK, a town of European Russia, government of Iver, on the Twarza, which divides it into two parts. It has manufactures of woollen, linen, and other coarse goods; also some ornamental articles, such as caps, embroidered purses, after the Turkish fashion, &c. The churches are numerous. Population 10,000. 43 miles N. W. Iver.

TORTHURWALL, a parish and village of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire. Pop. 1200.

TORRELA, one of the Virgin islands, 114 miles long, and 34 wide. Long. 64. 40. W. Lat. 16. 27. N.

TORTONA, a town of Italy, in the Sardinian states, near the Scrivia. It has a traffic in corn and wine. Population 2000. 60 miles S. E. Turin.

TORTORICI, a town of Sicily, Val di Demona. Population 8000.

TORTOSA, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, on the Ebro. It is divided into the old and new towns, both surrounded with walls. The population 11,000. 35 miles S. E. Saragossa.

TORTOSA, a supposed city, formerly called Orthosa, supposed to be built about the fifth or sixth century. It was formerly a place of great strength, of which the remains of the ancient walls still bear testimony. Nothing now remains of it, except a church, which bears marks of great antiquity. 35 miles N. Tripoli.

TORTUGA SACRA, an uninhabited island in the Caribbean sea, about 30 miles in circumference. Long. 64. 30. W. Lat. 11. 15. N.

TORTUGA, the island of the North Atlantic ocean, about 6 miles from the north coast of the island of Hispaniola, about 50 miles in circumference.

TORWORTH, a hamlet of England, in Nottinghamshire.

TOSA, a river in the north of Italy, which falls into the Lago Maggiore.

TOSA, a seaport town of Catalonia, 20 miles S. N. E. Gerona. Population 2000.

TOSCOLANO, a town of Austrian Italy, in the Milanese. Population 2000.

TOSSIDE, a hamlet of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

TOSSE, a small but rapid river of the Swiss canton of Zurich, which falls into the Rhine.

TOTANA, a town of Spain, in Murcia, 15 miles N. N. E. Lorca. Population 3900.

TOTHEA, a river of Wales, in Cardiganshire, which runs into the Pembrokeshire.

TOTTERY, a township of England, in Derbyshire, 6 miles N. W. by N. Chesterfield.

TOTTERA, a town of Russia, on the Suchona. Population 2000.

TOTTENHAM, a market town of England, in Devonshire, on the Dart. The church is a handsome structure, having a well proportioned tower at the west end, adorned with pinnacles. The church contains a town-hall, and a school-house. Some remains of its ancient castle are still standing. It sends two members to parliament. The woollen trade is rapidly increasing. Population 3123. 24 miles S. E. W. Exeter.

TOTTER, or TOTTERHAM, a hamlet of England, in Nottinghamshire.

TOTVILLA, a town of Spain, 83 miles N. N. W. Murcia. Population 2000.

TOUVEY, a town of France, department of the Yonne. Population 1200.

TOUZ, a town of France, department of the Meurthe, on the Moselle. The cathedral is a fine edifice. Population about 7000. 14 miles W. Nancy.

TOULON, a town of France, department of the Seine and Loire, 23 miles S. S. W. Avignon. Population 10,000.

TOULON, a well known seaport in the south-east of France, department of the Var, on a bay of the Mediterranean. It is built at the foot of a ridge of lofty, and in general arid mountains, which shelter it from the north. It is surrounded with ramparts, ditches, and bastions, and defended by a fine citadel, and a number of forts and batteries, distributed on the neighbouring mountains. The town is divided into two parts, the Old and the New. The former is still built; but the New town is better built, containing the public structures erected by Louis XIV.; several straight streets, and a square or rather oblong, called the Champ de Cassille, and used for exercising the militia. Toulon has no river; but several streams descending from the neighbouring mountains supply the fountain and fountains in different parts of the town. The principal public buildings are the arsenal, the dock, or arsenal, and the church and hospital. Toulon has long been one of the chief stations of the French navy, being on the Mediterranean coast. It is on the coast. It has two ports, called Grand Port and New Port. The Old port is a small, but very commodious, surrounded with a bastion and quay. The New port is one of the finest in Europe, and is said to be capable of containing 300 sail of the line. The arsenal of Toulon is spacious, and communicates with the other port by a narrow passage. The passage by which the two ports communicate with each other is also narrow. The arsenal, situated along the side of the New port, is a very large edifice, well filled with arms, naval stores, and every requisite for the equipment of vessels. Here are docks for ship-building; storehouses for timber; manufactures of canvas, cordage, ship-anchors, &c. The dry dock for the repair of ships of war, is a very interesting object. It has some trade in wine, oil, silk, and fruit of different kinds. The manufactures of the place are limited to soap, glass, hats, and caps. The tunny fishery is extensive. Population 22,000, exclusive of the workmen employed in the arsenal, who, with the addition of the galley slaves, give a farther number of 5000. It was occupied by the British in 1793, and was afterwards taken by the republicans. 30 miles S. E. Marseilles.

Toulouse, a town of France, now of the department of the Upper Garonne, on the right bank of the Garonne. The buildings are here almost all of brick; even the town walls are of that material. Of the streets, a few are tolerably broad; others are winding and irregular. The squares are here, as in other French towns, very small, so that the chief embellishments of the place consist in the public promenades, the river, the quays, and the bridge over the Garonne, the last a fine structure, 810 feet in length, and 72 in breadth. Toulouse is a place of antiquity, having been a Roman station. It has a number of public edifices; a cathedral, handsome, though somewhat irregular; and a number of churches, among which that of the Cordeliers is noted for its cavern, that of St Saturnin for its relics. The town-hall is large, and its facade forms the side of the square called Place Royale. In one of its halls are the busts of all the eminent natives of Toulouse since the days of the Romans. The other buildings worth notice are, the residence of the archbishop, the hospital, the mint, the exchange, the theatre. In antiquities, Toulouse presents only the remains of an amphitheatre, and some traces of an aqueduct. It contains a museum, a public library, a botanical garden, and an observatory. The manufactures of this place are various, consisting of silks, woollens, leather, linen; likewise of pottery, of copper works, and a cannon foundry. It is noted for an obstinate battle fought 10th April 1814, between the British under Lord Wellington, and the French under Soult. Population 50,000. 160 miles S. E. Bourdeaux.

Tour, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Population 1700.

Tour la Ville, a town of France, department of La Manche. Population 3400.

Tournaix, a town of France, department of the Seine and Marne. Population 1600.

Tournay, a large town of the Netherlands, province of Hainault. It is traversed by the Scheldt, on one side of which is a broad and handsome quay, almost the only embellishment of the town, which in general is ill built and gloomy. Its public buildings are a cathedral, the abbey of St Martin, and an hospital: it has also a lycee, a central school, and a public library. It has manufactures of carpets, stockings, caps, with woollen and cotton stuffs generally. It was formerly strongly fortified, and had one of the finest citadels in Europe, which was levelled by the French in the middle of the 18th century. Population 22,000.

Tournon, a town of France, department of the Ardèche, near the Rhone, 60 miles S. E. Lyons. Population 3500.

Tournus, a town of France, department of the Saone and Loire, on the Saone. Pop. 5200.

Tours, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Population 2000.

Tours, a town of France, the capital of the department of the Indre and Loire, on the Loire, over which is an elegant bridge, 1400 feet in length, a little above the spot where that river is joined by the Cher. The city is of an oblong form, and lies parallel to the course of the Loire. Part of the houses are low in structure; another part is very different, having been rebuilt in a beautiful manner. This part includes the Rue Neve, or Rue Royale, a street of great elegance: the houses in it are built of stone, like those of Bath, and on a uniform plan, which in a continental town is rare. At some distance, but in the same line, is the bridge over the Cher; and as the great walk called the Mail extends in a line with the bridges and the Rue Neve, nothing can be finer than the entrance into Tours, either from the north or south. The smaller streets to the right and left of the Rue Neve, are as narrow and gloomy as in other French towns. Its metropolitan church is remarked for its lofty spires, its ingenious clock, and its library. Tours was the scene of the repulse of the Saracens by Charles Martel in 732; and in subsequent ages, its castle, built on a rock, served more than once as a place of refuge for the royal family in times of commotion. The town-hall and the theatre are good provincial buildings; the other public structures are the residence of the archbishop, the hotel de l'intendance, the Jesuits' college, the Benedictine abbey. Here are also a race course, a botanical garden, and a museum. The principal manufacture of Tours is of silk. The other manufactures are woollens and leather; but the trade of the town is inconsiderable. Tours is a great resort of travellers, as well from the elegance of the town as the beauty of the surrounding country. Its environs contain a greater number of neat country houses than is common in French towns. Population 22,000. 145 miles S. S. W. Paris. Long. 0. 40. 38. E. Lat. 47. 23. 46. N.

Tourves, a village of France, department of the Var, 22 miles N. Toulon. Pop. 3000.

Towcester, a handsome market town of England, in the county of Northampton, situated on two streams, over which are three bridges. The town consists chiefly of one long and very broad street. It has manufactures of lace and silk. Population 2554. 29 miles S. Northampton.

TOWERIDGE, a river of England, county of Devon. It enters the Severn at Barnstaple.

TOWLESTON, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire.

TOWNSHEND, two post townships of the United States, in Massachusetts and Vermont.

TOWTON, a village of England, in Yorkshire, 3 miles S. E. Tadcaster.

TOWYNMY, a river of Wales, in Montgomeryshire, which runs into the Dowy.

TRACHENBERG, a town of Prussian Silesia, 24 miles N. Breslau. Pop. 2000.

TRADEWATER, a river of the United States, in Ohio.

TRAMETTA, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples. Population 3500.

TRAI ALGAR, a cape of Spain, on the coast of Andalusia, at the entrance of the straits of Gibraltar, opposite to Cape Esparte, noted for a great naval victory gained 21st October 1805, by Lord Nelson, over the combined fleets of France and Spain. Long. 68. W. Lat. 36. 10. N.

TRAGARTH, a river of Wales, in Brecknockshire, which runs into the Melta.

TRAGONIST, a small uninhabited island of European Turkey, in the Grecian archipelago, 2 miles from Myconi.

TRANGUERA, a town of Spain, in Valencia. Population 2000.

TRAINA, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Demona, on the Traina, 30 miles W. N. W. Catania. Population 6300.

TRAJANOPOLI, a town of European Turkey, in Rumania, on the Maritza. Population 15,000. 35 miles S. Adrianople.

TRALEE, a town of Ireland, county of Kerry, near a small river which discharges itself into the bay of Tralee. The jail and court-house form one side of a square, which stands in the centre of the town. There were formerly four strong castles erected in this town. The parish church is a plain and commodious structure, furnished with a neat gallery. This town was destroyed in the rebellion of 1641. Tralee sends one member to the imperial parliament. 144 miles S. W. Dublin.

TRAMEVES, a town of France, department of the Saone and Loire. Pop. 1800.

TRAMONTI, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples. Population 2900.

TRAMORE, a neat, regular, well built village of Ireland, county of Waterford, situated on a broad, open, and dangerous bay in St George's channel. It is much resorted to as a bathing quarter. It has a neat assembly-room for the amusement of its numerous fashionable visitors. 80 miles S. S. W. Dublin.

TRAMUTOLA, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples, 28 miles N. E. Policastro. Pop. 4000.

TRANCOSO, a town of Portugal, province of Beira, 9 miles W. Pinhel. Pop. 2000.

TRANENT, a parish and town of Scotland, in Haddingtonshire. It is a straggling town, built on no regular plan. Pop. of parish 3366. 9 miles E. Edinburgh.

TRANI, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples, on the Adriatic. The principal public edifice is the cathedral, a building adorned with marble pillars, a magnificent tower, and a variety of paintings. The principal square is handsome, and the castle has a claim to the notice of the traveller. Population 14,000. 125 miles E. by N. Naples.

TRANQUEBAR, a seaport town of India, in the Carnatic, at one of the mouths of the Caveri. It was originally a settlement of the Danes, who built a fort, the protection of which, and their own correct conduct, soon attracted population and commerce. The fort is kept in very neat order. Pop. 20,000. Long. 79. 55. E. Lat. 11. N.

TRANSYLVANIA, a large province of the Austrian empire, bounded N. and W. by Hungary, and E. and S. by European Turkey. It lies between 22. 46. and 26. 3. E. long., and between 45. 33. and 47. 37. N. lat. Its form is oblong. Area 23,700 square miles; population 1,600,000. The chief towns are, Cronstadt, containing 24,000 inhabitants; Clausenburg (the capital), 20,000; Hermannstadt, Maros Vasarhely, Vasarhely, Udvarhely, and Scheniburg. The Carpathian mountains surround Transylvania on the east, the south, and partly on the north; and as lateral chains branching off from this range, cross the country in every direction, the greatest part of it consists of alternate mountains and valleys, with few extensive plains. The principal rivers are the Maros, the Samos, and the Aluta: the Aranyos, the Lapos, the Sajo, and the two Kokels, are of inferior size. In the mountains of Transylvania are found marble, jasper, porphyry, slate, limestone, coal, sulphur, and petroleum. Rock-salt is found in many spots. This country has also mines of iron, copper, lead, silver, and even gold. In the mountains are dug up precious stones, such as topazes, chrysolites, garnets, opals, &c. Mineral springs are abundant. Wheat, oats, barley, and other corn, are the chief products of Transylvania. For maize or for vines, there is hardly sufficient heat. Manufactures and trade are extremely backward. The exports of the country are timber, metals, and a few manufactures. The imports are wool, cotton, skins, and a variety of manufactured articles from Vienna. As to religion, the followers of the Greek church, comprising the Walachians, Greeks, Bulgarians, and even Gypsies, are by far the most numerous. Next come the Catholics, among whom are ranked the Hungarians, and most of the Szeklers. Education has as yet made little progress in this country. There has been lately established at Clausenburg an academy, on a plan somewhat similar to the German universities. The large or central schools throughout the principality are only eight in number; and there are as yet only seven grammar schools.

TRAP, a village of the United States, in Frederick county, Maryland.

TRAPANI, the ancient Drepanum, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Mazzara, situated on a tongue of land projecting into the sea. It is of importance, both as a naval, military, and commercial position. It is in general better built than most towns of the island. Its streets are regular; its numerous churches, convents, and other public buildings, are in a style of considerable elegance. The harbour is good. Trapani is one of the most commercial towns in Sicily. Its exports consist chiefly of salt, soda, coral, and alabaster. Pop. 20,000. 40 miles W. Palermo.

TRAU, a town of Austrian Dalmatia, with a harbour, on the coast of the Adriatic. It stands on an islet, having on the one side the mainland, with which it is connected by a bridge, and on the other the island of Brač. Pop. 4000. 14 miles W. by N. Spalatro.

TRAVAGLIATO, a town of Austrian Italy, in the Milanese. Population 2000.

TRAVANCORE, a province situated at the south-west extremity of Hindostan, between the 8th and 10th degrees of N. lat. To the north it is bounded by the territories of the Cochin rajah, on the south and west by the sea, and on the east by a range of woody mountains which divide it from the British district of Tinnevely. Its length may be estimated at 140 miles, by 40 in breadth. It produces grain, sugar, salt, pepper, cardamoms, cocoa-nuts, cassia, frankincense, and other aromatic drugs. Besides other animals, the wild buffalo, tigers, and elephants, are found in the vicinity of the woods. Its timber forests are also a valuable source of revenue.

TRAVANCORE, the ancient capital of the above mentioned province, but much decayed since the rajah removed his residence. Long. 77. 22. E. Lat. 8. 25. N.

TRAVE, a river of Denmark, which passing Lubeck, falls into the Baltic, near the small town of Travemunde.

TRAVEMUNDE, a town of Germany, at the mouth of the Trave, belonging to the city of Lubeck, to which it serves as a port. 8 miles N. E. Lubeck.

TRAUN, a river of Upper Austria, which rises in Styria, and joins the Danube.

TRAVNICKA, a town of European Turkey, in Bosnia, 74 miles N. by E. Spalatro. Population 8000.

TRAUNSTEIN, a town of Bavaria, on the Traun. It has extensive salt-works. Population 2500. 48 miles E. by S. Munich.

TRAUTENAU, a town of Bohemia, 72 miles E. N. E. Prague. Population 2100.

TRAZ OS MONTES, a large province occupying the north-east of Portugal, and extending in a form nearly square, having to the south the course of the Douro, to the north the Spanish province of Galicia. Area, 6500 square miles. It is a mountainous country. Corn is cultivated; also fruits of various kinds; but the great commodity is wine. The chief rivers are the Sabor, the Tua, the Caroa, and the Tamega, large streams, flowing with rapidity from the mountains, and ill fitted for navigation. Population 350,000.

TREABHAVEN, a river of the United States, in Maryland. It joins the Choptank.

TREMA, a river of Italy, duchy of Parma, which falls into the Po above Piacenza. It is noted as the scene of Hannibal's second victory over the Romans, and was also the scene of Suwarrow's victory over the French in 1799.

TREBISOND, a fortified city of Asia Minor, on the coast of the Black sea. It is very ancient, and was known under the appellation of Trippeza. The houses are mean in their outward appearance, but comfortable within. Population 15,000. Turks, Greeks, Jews, Armenians, Georgians, Mingrelians, Circussians, and Tartars. The principal exports are silk and cotton stuffs, fruit, and wine. The imports are sugar, coffee, and woollen cloths, from Constantinople; corn, salt, and iron, from the Crimea and Mingrelia. There are 18 large mosques, 8 khans, 5 baths, and 10 small Greek churches, governed by a despot or metropolitan; the besestein is a huge square structure, with two small windows on each face, probably erected by the Genoese as a powder magazine. Long. 39. 43. E. Lat. 37. 23. N.

TREBISSEN, a town of Moravia, on the Iglawa. Population 3700.

TREFFERT, a town of Prussian Saxony, on a hill near the Weria, 29 miles S. S. E. Gottingen. Population 1800.

TREFORT, a large village of France, 11 miles N. E. Bourg. Population 2300.

TREGANNOV, a town of Wales, county of Cardigan, on the Berwin, which joins the Tive a little lower down.

TREGONY, a market town and very decayed borough of England, in the county of Cornwall, on the Fal. Population 1035. 243 miles W. S. W. London.

TREGUIER, a town of France, in Brittany, department of the Côtes du Nord, 60 miles N. W. St Brieux. Population 2100.

TREGUNNO, a hamlet of England, in the parish of St Breage, near Helstone.

TREIGNAC, a small town of France, department of the Correze. Population 2000.

TREIGNY, a town of France, department of the Yonne. Population 1800.

TREISAN, a small river of Germany, which rises in the Black Forest, and falls into the Rhine.

TREISHISH, or TREISHISHAN ISLES, a cluster of small islands of Scotland, in the Hebrides, belonging to Argyllshire. Long. 6. 25. E. Lat. 56. 30. N.

TRETON, a town of French Flanders, with 1000 inhabitants.

TREMADECK, a market town of Wales, in Caernarthenshire, recently built, chiefly through the efforts of Mr Madocks, who having obtained a grant from the crown, has recovered a vast tract of land from the sea. 20 miles from Caernarvon.

TREMBLADE, a town of France, department of the Lower Charente. Pop. 2300.

TREMENTINE, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire. Pop. 1700.

TREMITI ISLANDS, called by the ancients Dinnedisi Insule, three petty islands in the Adriatic. Long. 15. 30. E. Lat. 42. 10. N.

TREMOUILLE, a town of France, department of La Vendée. Population 800.

TREMSBUTTEL, a village of Denmark, 18 miles N. E. Hamburg.

TREMUDA, a river of Guatimala, which runs north.

TRENDLE, a hamlet of England, in the parish of Pitminster, Somersetshire.

TRENT, a river of England, in Staffordshire, which rises from three springs to the west of Leek, and flows past Trentham, to which it gives name, and from thence to Burton in Derbyshire, when it first becomes navigable. It winds round the town of Nottingham, giving fertility to an immense range of meadows, bounded by villas, villages, and comfortable farms. After a course of nearly 200 miles, it falls into the Humber.

TRENT, a city of Austria, in the Tyrol, on the Adige, not far from the borders of Italy. It stands in a small but delightful valley among the Alps. It has manufactures of silk, and cultivates vines and tobacco. The public buildings are, the palace of the archbishop; and the cathedral, a Gothic structure, not remarkable for its size or beauty. The great feature in the history of Trent is the assemblage of Catholic prelates which took place in it from all parts of Europe, in 1546. Pop. 10,000. 85 miles S. Innsbruck.

TRENTON, a handsome town of the United States, and the capital of the state of New Jersey, in Hunterdon county, on the Delaware, opposite the falls, where there is a bridge across the river. It contains a state-house, a jail, two banks, an academy, two large cotton manufactories, and four churches. Population 3063. 30 miles N. E. Philadelphia. —Ed. The capital of Jones county, North Carolina, on the Trent. Population 195.—The name also of several townships.

TRENTSCHIN, the chief place of a palatinate of the same name in Hungary, 67 miles N. E. Vienna. Population 3100.

TREPORT, a town of France, department of the Lower Seine. Population 2000.

TREPTOW, OLD, a town of Pomerania, on the Tollen-see, 43 miles S. Stralsund. Population 2000.

TREPTOW AM REGA, or NEW TREPTOW, a town of Pomerania, on the Rega, 32 miles N. N. E. Stettin. Population 2400.

TRESCAW, one of the Scilly islands, situated to the west of Annet. It contains about 40 families, and is extremely fertile.

TRETS, a town of France, 20 miles N. E. Marseilles. Population 2500.

TREVENEN'S ISLAND, the southernmost of the Marquesas, in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 220. 31. E. Lat. 2. 14. S.

TREVE, a district or government of the Prussian states, comprising the south-west part of the province of the Lower Rhine. It consists of part of the old electorate of Treves, and a small portion of the duchy of Luxemburg, along with some other petty districts in the county of Sponheim, the principality of Saarbrück, and the bishopric of Metz. Area 2430 square miles. Population 200,000.

TREVE, or TRIEVE, the most ancient, and one of the most celebrated cities in Germany, in the centre of a large valley lying along the Moselle. The streets are tolerably wide. The chief buildings are the elector's palace, now turned into barracks; and the church of Notre Dame, built about the year 1240, and affording a fine specimen of Gothic architecture. The cathedral is remarkable only for its altars, its marble gallery, and the uncommon size of the stones with which it is built. The environs of the town abound with gardens, and present prospects not unworthy of a comparison with Switzerland. It has manufactures of woollens, cotton, and leather. One branch of industry is the building of boats for the navigation of the Moselle. There is also some export of Moselle wine. It was anciently a Roman town, and few towns are richer in Roman antiquities: coins, medals, and inscriptions, are frequently dug up. The piers of the bridge on the Moselle are the work of either the Romans or Gauls. The university of Treves was founded in 1454, and greatly extended in 1723. After 1794, it was converted by the French into a central school. Population 10,000, or, including the adjacent villages, 13,500. 70 miles W. by S. Mentz.

TREVICO, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples. Population 2500.

TREVISO, a town of Austrian Italy, on the Sile and Piavenella, at their confluence. It is surrounded with a rampart, and tolerably well built; the streets, though irregularly laid out, are wide and well paved, and most of the houses have colonades or piazzas in front. Here is a large public square, a great number of churches, monasteries, and convents, four hospitals, a castle, and a theatre. It has manufactures of silk and cotton stuffs; likewise in cutlery. Population 12,000. 20 miles N. by W. Venice.

TREVOUX, a town of France, department of the Ain, on the Saône, 14 miles N. Lyons. Population 2000.

TREVA, an old town of Germany, in Hesse-Cassel, on the Schwalm, 30 miles E. S. W. Cassel. Population 1800.

TREAU, or MORAWKA TREKOWA, a town of Moravia, on the Trebawka. Pop. 8100.

TRIBOLI, or TRIBOLI, a town of Asia Minor, on the coast of the Black sea. It contains 400 families, and has two handsome khans. 72 miles E. Trebizond.

TRICALA, anciently called Tricon, a town of European Turkey, in Romania, 30 miles W. Larissa. Population 8000.

TRICARICO, a small town of Italy, kingdom of Naples, 75 miles E. Salerno.

TRICHINOPOLY, a celebrated city and fortress of the south of India, on the Cavery, opposite the island of Seringam, famous for its magnificent Hindoo temples. From the year 1751 to 1788, Trichinopoly was several times besieged by the French and other allies, but was saved by the assistance of the British under Lawrence, and other gallant officers. It is situated on a hill or rock about 350 feet high, and was esteemed impregnable by the natives. It contains a palace, a mosque, and two temples. Long. 78. 50. E. Lat. 11. 58. N.

TRIEL, a town of France, 20 miles W. by N. Paris. Population 1900.

TRIESCH, a town of Moravia, 8 miles S. W. Iglau. Population 2000.

TRIESTE, GOVERNMENT OF, a province of the Austrian empire, containing the southern half of the kingdom of Illyria, and bordering on the Adriatic, Croatia, and the government of Laybach. Its territorial extent is 5020 square miles, and its population 540,000. The principal rivers are the Karst, the Capella, and the Meralwoditza. The Save forms the northern boundary. The rivers that run into the sea are the Isonzo and the Quieto.

TRIESTE, a circle of the government of the same name, in Illyria.

TRIESTE, a large and thriving seaport of the Austrian dominions, the capital of a district in the Illyrian territory, near the north-west extremity of the gulf of Venice. The old town stands on a hill, with a castle on the top; the new town is on level ground, intersected by a canal, and built with neatness and regularity. Trieste, like the commercial seaports of Holland or England, has good streets, and a number of commodious buildings, but few that are large or striking, except the cathedral, the church that formerly belonged to the Jesuits, and the theatre: the cathedral is an ancient, the theatre a modern building. Among the public institutions of the place are an Episcopal chapter, a school, a society of arts and sciences, a public library, a large hospital, and a lazaretto for performing quarantine. Trieste is almost the only seaport for a very large track of country, the south of Germany, the Illyrian provinces, and part of the Slavonian. Among the exports are the produce of the mines at Idria, and even of Hungary; linen, tobacco, woollens from different parts of the Austrian dominions; also printed cottons from Switzerland. The imports consist of cotton wool, hides, raisins, silk, rice, oil from the Levant; wheat, chiefly from Odessa; sugar, coffee, and other tropical products from the West Indies and Brazil. The trade of the Adriatic is conducted in barks of 30, 30, or 40 tons; these and much larger vessels enter with ease the inlet, in the form of a canal, which leads from the sea into the town, and has on each side quays for vessels to load and unload. The harbour does at Trieste are inconsiderable. Each of the trading nations of Europe has a consul here.

Ship-building is carried on with activity at Trieste. The manufactures of the place are sugar refining, the making of white lead, soap, leather, paper, and wax. At some distance from the town are salt-works. Trieste is built on or near the site of the Roman colony of Tergeste; and there are some remains of the aqueduct, which brought water to it from a distance of six miles. Population 40,000: the great majority are Catholics; but places of worship are allowed to Protestants, Greeks, and Jews; also to Arminians. 212 miles S. S. W. Vienna. Long. 12. 58. 30. E. Lat. 40. 43. N.

TRIOTO, a river of Italy, kingdom of Naples.

TRILLO, a small town of Spain, province of Madrid, on the Tagus, now a miserable village. 68 miles E. N. E. Madrid.

TRIM, chief town of the county of Eastmeath, Ireland, on the Boyne. The jail is a handsome and strong building. The town was formerly walled and defended by a strong castle. There were also many religious foundations. Here are the ruins of different friaries, and of a large castle. There is a charter school for 40 children, and a barrack built on the site of the old abbey. 20 miles S. W. Drogheda.

TRINCOMALEE, a town, fortress, and excellent harbour of Ceylon, on the north-east side of the island. The town is of greater extent than Colombo, but contains fewer houses, and much less population. The fort is very strong, and commands the principal bays, particularly the entrance to the harbour. It has also a citadel, called Fort Ostenburgh, erected on a cliff which projects into the sea. The harbour of Trincomalee, from its convenient situation, is of great consequence to a maritime power. The great expectations that were formed of this place by the British government, have, however, not been realized. Few inhabitants have been collected, provisions are scarce, and there is nothing to attract merchants to settle there. The first settlers were the Portuguese. It was taken from them by the Dutch, with whom it remained till the year 1782, when it was captured by the British; but a very inadequate garrison having been left to defend it, it was taken with great ease by the French under Admiral Suffrein, who restored it to the Dutch. In the year 1795, it was taken by the British, after a siege of three weeks; and has ever since remained in their possession. Long. 81. 23. E. Lat. 8. 31. N.

TRINESTIA, or TRINASTI, a small town of European Turkey, in the Morea, 22 miles S. Sparta.

TRING, a neat market town of England, in Hertfordshire. The church is a venerable Gothic structure, with a square tower. Population 3364. 23 miles W. Hertford.

TRINIDAD, an island of the Atlantic ocean, opposite the coast of Cumana, from which it is separated by the gulf of Paria, which varies in its breadth, being on an average about 75 miles. At its southern and northern ex-tranities, however, Trinidad approaches to within 10 or 11 miles of the American land. The island is of an irregular square form, having two points stretching to the west from its north and south corners. It is 70 miles long, and 50 miles broad. It is the largest, most fertile, and most beautiful of all the Leeward Islands, and is full of forests, abounding in the finest woods. Trinidad yields cinnamon and the clove, and is capable of producing every article for the West India market, equally, if not superior in many, to any other of the Windward Islands. Its sugar is excellent; also the cocoa, indigo, and tobacco. All fruits or vegetables congenial to the tropics exist here, and even some European ones. The island has extensive wild savannahs, on which quantities of cattle, horses, and mules, are fed in common, but might be extended to exportation. The woods abound with game of different sorts, amongst which are deer, the lap or laba, the cuenca, a species of wild hog of exquisite flavour, and a variety of others of the same description. Among the feathered tribe are the wild turkey, the ramier, the parrot, &c. with which the markets are daily supplied. The lake Brea, or of pitch, is a most wonderful phenomenon; it is of considerable size, about 150 acres, and capable of supplying all the naval dock-yards of England, if not Europe. The north side of the island is a continued ridge of hilly mountains, from which abundance of the finest and clearest streams issue on both sides. Another ridge of hills commences at L'E-branche on the east side, and runs in a south-west course, called the Monserrat hills; the rivers or streams from which are distinguished by a yellow clayish colour. Various sorts of shell-fish are to be found on the coasts, including the finest lobsters, crabs, &c. as well as shrimps and prawns. The whale fishery might likewise be carried on with safety to great advantage at certain times of the year. The mornings and evenings in Trinidad are delightful, and the nights invariably cool and refreshing, although the heat is great during the day. Upon the whole, the island is undoubtedly fully as healthy as any part of the new world, and many are the instances of people arriving at extreme old age. The climate of Trinidad is less moist than that of Guiana, and not so dry as that of Cumana. During the spring, the thermometer is usually, in the day time, at 80 degrees of Fahrenheit, and during the night it falls to 60 degrees, and sometimes even to 50 degrees, in tolerably elevated spots. Trinidad was discovered by Columbus on the 31st July 1498. It was not, however, taken possession of by the Spaniards till the year 1568, when their establishment on it was preceded by the almost total destruction of the Indians. The full importance of this colony, however, was not discovered till the year 1763, when an edict was issued, inviting all traders and navigators of the nations which were at peace with Spain, to frequent the island, placing but a few restrictions on its commerce, which could be easily eluded. In consequence of this liberal policy, new colonists crowded from Europe. The inhabitants increased so rapidly, that, though in 1763 the whole amounted only to 2703, they were estimated six years afterwards at 2151 whites, 4467 people of colour, 10,160 negroes, and 2200 Indians; total 18,018. The encouragements granted to commerce and agriculture, soon changed the face of the island; and where a short time before were only some miserable huts of fishermen, there arose in the short space of four years, a town regularly built, which became one of the most commercial in the new world, justly meriting the name of Port Spain, from the mother country. In 1797 the island capitulated to a British force under the command of Sir Ralph Abercrombie, without any resistance. From this period till the peace of Amiens in 1802, the population increased from 18,018 to 24,239 inhabitants. The produce of sugar had also greatly increased, being almost doubled. Population in 1807, 31,000, of whom 21,000 were slaves. Trinidad has since this period remained in the hands of the British. The north-east point of the island is in Long. 60. 55. 25. W. Lat. 10. 51. N.

TRINIDAD, a city on the south side of the island of Cuba, and on the shore of a river of the same name, with a celebrated port, at which is carried on a traffic in sugar and tobacco, both of excellent quality. Long. 60. 6. W. Lat. 21. 42. N.

TRINIDAD, a city of Guatemala, province of Costa Rica, 82 miles E. S. E. Guatemala. Long. 90. 15. W. Lat. 13. 46. N.

TRINIDAD, a town of the kingdom of Guatemala, province of Sonsonate, 162 miles from Guatemala.—Also various rivers and settlements in South America.

TRINITY, or TRINIDAD, a river of Mexico, which takes its rise in Louisiana, and discharges itself into Galveston's bay, in Lat. 28. 30. N.

TRINITY, or LA TRINITE, a seaport town of the island of Martinico, with a good harbour. It is a thriving place. Long. 61. 8. W. Lat. 14. 33. N.

TRINO, a town of Piedmont, on the Po. Its only buildings worth notice are the churches. Pop. 5500. 28 miles E.N.E. Turin.

TRINOMALTA, a town and fortress of the south of India, province of the Carnatic, Long. 79. 10. E. Lat. 12. 16. N.

TRIPALL, a river of England, Northumberland. It joins the South Tyne.

TRIPERRY, a town of India, in the Carnatic, containing a celebrated Hindoo temple. Long. 79. 33. E. Lat. 13. 31. N.

TRIPOLI, an extensive territory on the northern coast of Africa, forming the most easterly of the Barbary states. It consists chiefly of a line of coast extending about 800 miles in length, or from Cape Razatin, in 11. 36. N. long. to Port Bomba in 32. 20. E. long. Its interior boundaries are, on the east the desert of Barca, on the south Fezzan, on the west Tunis and part of the Bled el Jorre, or country of dates. The habitable part of this country consists chiefly of the coast, which for a few miles inland is almost throughout of exuberant fertility; but beyond this limit, the productive qualities of the soil entirely disappear, and the interior is occupied either with deserts of sand, or with the mountainous districts of Garian and Masulata. The Tripolitan territory includes the country colonised by the Greeks, and celebrated by them under the name of Cyrena. It formed the eastern boundary of the Carthaginian dominion, and under the last Ptolemy, surnamed Apion, was converted into a Roman province. Under this administration it flourished exceedingly, as is still attested by many splendid monuments. It was early subjected to the power of the Saracens, and shared the vicissitudes experienced by their dynasties on the Barbary coast. It was governed by Turks till 1713, when it was erected into an independent state. The track along the coast of Tripoli produces, in the utmost luxuriance, every article peculiar to the finest tropical climates. Corn is produced in great abundance; but its exportation is prohibited. The same law applies to horses and mules, the breed of which is cultivated with the greatest care. Bullocks, sheep, and poultry, are reared in immense quantities. The date tree forms the staple of all the interior and sandy tracks. In the same districts is found the lotus. Fruits, as almonds, figs, apples, pears, plums, peaches, nectarines, grapes, and melons, are abundant, and of exquisite flavour. The vegetables also are very fine, and similar to those of Europe. The climate in general is very salubrious, the inhabitants being chiefly annoyed by the sirocco wind, which in autumn blows often for three days together. The basis of the population in Tripoli consists of a mixed race of Moors, Arabs, and Turks.

TRIPOLI, a considerable city, capital of the territory of the same name, in Northern Africa, built in a low situation, on a neck of land projecting a short distance into the sea. It is of great extent, though a large portion of the space inclosed within its walls being unoccupied, the population is not supposed to exceed 25,000. The caravanseras, mosques, houses of the foreign consuls, and of the higher ranks of the natives, are mostly built of stone, and regularly whitewashed twice a year. The lower ranks construct their houses of earth, small stones, and mortar; the height never exceeds one story. The roofs being flat, serve at once as an agreeable promenade, and as a receptacle for the rain water. Bazars or market-places occupy a considerable portion of the city, and are kept in excellent order. There is one very elegant mosque. The public baths, of which there are only two, and the caravanseras, are very spacious and convenient. The chief monument of antiquity is a superb triumphal arch, built of fine marble, and ornamented with several bas-reliefs, inscriptions, &c. In point of tranquillity and cleanliness, Tripoli might be a model for European towns; acts of violence are never committed in the streets, and robberies are altogether unknown. This is the result of a well regulated police. The harbour is formed by a reef of rocks, running in an eastern direction from the northern extremity of the town. Tripoli is surrounded by a high wall, flanked by six bastions. There are two gates, one on the south, and the other on the east; and the batteries are mounted altogether with about 80 pieces of cannon. The castle is an irregular and extensive square pile, when viewed from the port, it has a very respectable appearance. The body of the inhabitants of Tripoli consist of Moors. One of the most singular features of Mahometan belief is the sanctity ascribed to sultans, who are seen in great numbers in the streets, or at the gates, their apparent number being greatly multiplied by the respect paid to them. The general character of the inhabitants is not entitled to praise. Revenge, avarice, treachery, and deceit, are described as predominant vices. In their intercourse with Christians, particularly, all sort of chicanery and low cunning are employed. They do not even possess the Mussulman virtue of sobriety; winehouses being public, and intoxication as common as in Britain. The prince, as usual in Mahometan countries, enjoys an authority altogether despotic. The trade of Tripoli is chiefly confined to Malta, Tunis, and the Levant. The vessels employed in it are mostly Maltese and Ottoman, with only a few belonging to Tripoli. The exports are wool of excellent quality; senna, and several other drugs, madder roots, barilla, hides, goat and sheep skins dressed, salt, and natron, ostrich feathers, gold dust, ivory, gum, dried fruit and dates, lotus berries, cassia, saffron, bullocks, sheep, and poultry. The imports are, cloths of every quality and colour, sugar, tea, coffee, spices of all sorts, woollen and Manchester stuffs, damasks, silks of various colours and descriptions, gold and silver tissues, laces and threads, cochineal, indigo, iron, hardware of all kinds, small wines, spirits, capillaire, gunpowder, cannon, muskets, pistols, sword blades, naval stores of every description, planks and beams for building ships and houses; common looking-glasses, toys, cotton threads, and Tunisian caps. Tripoli is also the centre of a considerable portion of that caravan trade which is characteristic of Africa. Caravans come generally, twice a year, bringing all the commodities of interior Africa, slaves, gold dust, pearls, ivory, ostrich feathers, saffron, drugs, senna, camel's hair, camels, mules, antelopes, &c. which are exchanged for coarse European cloths, a few silks, baregans or cloaks of the country, Tunisian caps, powder, muskets (which ought to be very light, and have long barrels), pistols scimitars, hardware, glass, heads, toys, Venetian looking-glasses, &c. Long. 13. 18. E. Lat. 32. 54. N.

TRIPOLI, a seaport of Syria, capital of a pachalic of the same name, traversed by the small river Kadisha. It is situated at the foot of the branches of Lebanon, and along the edge of a small triangular plain, which extends between them and the sea, and terminates in a flat promontory, on which is situated the place of anchorage. The only fortification consists of the citadel, an old Saracen building, in a wretched state. The plain is entirely covered with trees, chiefly mulberry, planted in regular order, and serving for the production of silk, which forms the staple of Tripoli. The irrigation necessary for this culture, causes great unhealthiness. Tripoli enjoyed a considerable trade previous to the late war, which seriously injured it. Silk is largely exported, both raw, and in the form of handkerchiefs manufactured in the place. Soap is also made for exportation, to which may be added a few sponges, collected on the shore between Tripoli and Bairout. Long. 35. 44. E. Lat. 34. 28. N.

TRIPOLIZZA, a town of Greece, in the Morea, in a narrow valley, at the foot of Mount Menalus, 22 miles S. S. W. Argos. It is irregularly built, and paved only in the middle. The houses are built of large unburnt bricks, and many of the walls are rent by the shock of earthquakes. The best buildings are the residence of the Pacha, and a wooden structure in the form of a square, with walls and gates; the khan, or place of accommodation for travellers, is a stone building; and the bazar or market-place stands in the middle of the town. There are several mosques for the Turks, and churches for the Greeks. The fortifications of the place consist of stone walls, erected by the Albanians in the latter part of the 18th century; and of a small square fort built by them on an eminence to the south-east. Population 12,000.

TRIPPOON, a town of the south of India, province of the Carnatic, 80 miles W. by N. from Madras.

TRISTAN D'ACUNHA, the largest of three islands in the South Atlantic ocean, about 1600 miles from any land either to the west or north, very lofty, and about 15 miles in circumference. Long. 15. 46. W. Lat. 37. S.

TRISTE, an island on the coast of America, near the boundary of the provinces of Vera Cruz and Merida, in the lake or gulf of Terminos. It is 18 miles in circumference. Lat. 18. 20. N.

TRIVANDPATAM, a town of India, province of Travancore. Long. 76. 54. E. Lat. 8. 27. N.

TRIVENTO, a town of Italy, 60 miles N. N. E. Naples. Population 8100.

TRIVERO, a town of Piedmont. Pop. 3300.

TRIVIGLIO, a town of Austrian Italy, 20 miles E. Milan. Population 6000.

TROCHTELFINGEN, a town of Germany, 31 miles S. Stuttgart. Population 2300.

TROCHT, a town of Switzerland, canton of Appenzel, 6 miles N. E. Appenzel. Population 2300.

TROITSE, a town of Asiatic Russia, government of Orenbourg. Houses 500. Long. 55. 30. E. Lat. 54. 15. N.—Another town of Asiatic Russia; 90 miles W. of the former. Population 3000.

TROIZKE, a town of European Russia, 78 miles N. N. W. Penza. Population 3000.

TROIZKOI SERGIEV, a town of European Russia, 32 miles S. E. Moscow. It has a Greek monastery, the richest in the empire. Population 4000.

TROJA, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples, 60 miles N. E. Naples.

TROKI, a town of European Russia, in Lithuania, 20 miles W. Wilna. Pop. 3500.

TROMSØE, an island on the north-west coast of Norway. Population 3000 to 4000.

TROMN, St., a town of the Netherlands. It has a considerable manufactory of fire-arms, and an abbey founded in the 7th century. Pop. 7300. 20 miles W. Maestricht.

TRONTO, a river of Italy, States of the Church, which falls into the Adriatic.

TROZZANO, a town of Piedmont, province of Verelli. Population 2500.

TROOX, a promontory of Scotland, in Ayrshire, 5 miles S. Irvine.

TROREA, a town of the kingdom of Naples, 37 miles N. N. E. Reggio. It has manufactures of linen and damask. Population 4000.

TRORES, St., a seaport of France, department of the Var. Population 3700. 30 miles E. by N. Toulon.

TROPPAU, the capital of Austrian Silesia, at the confluence of the Oppa and Mohe. It is still surrounded with a wall, and has two public squares. It contains the ancient palace of the prince, three churches, several convents, a college, and a museum. Population 10,000. 162 miles E. Prague.—It is the name also of a principality and a circle of Austrian Silesia.

TROSACH, certain rugged and stupendous mountains of Scotland, in Perthshire, which have been greatly visited since they have been made the scene of the adventures of the Lady of the Lake.

TROTBV, a river of England, in Monmouthshire, which runs into the Wye.

TROTON, a hamlet of England, in Cumberland, 9½ miles N. E. Langtown.

TROUENEND, a township of England, in Northumberland. Population 307.

TROUF HEAD, a cape of Scotland, on the north coast of Banffshire.

TROUR, a village of Scotland, in Banffshire, on the sea coast, near Gardenston.

TROUTBECK, a river of England, in Cumberland. It joins the Irthing.—Another river of Westmoreland, which runs into the Eden.

TROUTBECK, TROUTSDALE, and TROWAY, three townships of England, in Westmoreland, Yorkshire, and Derbyshire.

TROWBRIDGE, a market town of England, in Wiltshire, on a rocky hill, near the river Were, which runs into the Avon, near Bradford, and over which it has a stone bridge. It is irregularly built, handsome houses being intermixed with old and shabby looking buildings. The church is a spacious structure, consisting of a nave, chancel, two side aisles, with chapels attached. There are, besides, several meeting-houses for dissenters. Trowbridge contains an almshouse; a school-house, which stands in the church-yard; and it had anciently a castle, no part of which, however, is now standing. The cloths now principally manufactured are superfine broad cloths and kerseymeres. Population 8646. 10 miles S. E. Bath.

TROY, a post township of the United States, in Bristol county, Massachusetts, 48 miles S. Boston. Population 1296.

TROY, a city of the United States, and capital of Rensselaer county, New York, on the Hudson. It is regularly laid out, and is a well built and flourishing town. It contains a court-house, a jail, a market-house, 2 banks, a Lancasterian school, and 5 churches for different denominations of Christians. In point of wealth and trade, it ranks the third town in New York. The Hudson is navigable for sloops to this place. Three weekly newspapers are published here. In the vicinity are flour-mills, an oil-mill, a distillery, a paper-mill, a cotton manufactory, a gun manufactory, a shovel manufactory, and 2 nail manufactories. Pop. 3395. 6 miles N. Albany.

TROY, a post township of the United States, and capital of Miami county, Ohio. —The name of various other townships.

TROYES, a large town of France, in Champagne, the capital of the department of the Aube, situated between two fine meadows on the Seine. It is ill built, the chief material being wood. It has considerable manufactures, particularly in cotton and cotton stockings. Woollen, linen, leather, and thread, are all made here, but on a smaller scale. Its chief edifices are its churches; in particular the cathedral, and the churches of St Etienne and St Urban. Its castle, now antiquated, was long the residence of the counts of Champagne. Its public mall, or walk, extends along the ramparts, and is of great length. Here are also a town-hall, a central school, a public library, and a society of arts. Pop. 27,000. 70 miles S. Rheims.

TRSTENNA, a town of Hungary, 48 miles S. by W. Cracow. Population 2700.

TRUSTACHEVSK, a town of European Russia, government of Orel. Population 3000.

TRUM, a small river of Scotland, in Inverness-shire, which falls into the Spey.

TRUMBULL, a county of the United States, in the state of Ohio. Pop. 8671.

TRUN, a town of France, department of the Orne. Population 1500.

TRURO, a market town and borough of England, in the county of Cornwall, at the confluence of the two small rivers Kenvyth and St Allen, which direct their streams on each side of the town, and at the bottom unite with a branch of Plymouth harbour commonly called Truro creek or river, and at every spring tide form a fine lake, 2 miles in length, and of sufficient depth to be navigable for vessels of upwards of 300 tons burden; and to this advantageous situation is chiefly to be ascribed the rapid improvement of the town. The houses are built on a regular plan, and faced with granite. Being nearly surrounded with water, the town is connected with the suburbs by short stone bridges. The church is a spacious and handsome fabric, of that elegant style of architecture which prevailed about the reign of Henry VII. It consists of two aisles of equal size, and a smaller one on the north side. The spire is of a more modern date than the main building, and is remarkably plain. Besides the church, the town contains meeting-houses for Independents, Baptists, Methodists, and other sects of dissenters. The town-hall is a plain substantial building of stone. The coinage-hall, where the process of coining the tin is carried on every quarter, is a heavy ancient building. Here the parliaments of the lord warden of the stannaries, and the courts of his vice-warden, are held, for the adjudication of all matters connected with the tin trade. The latter are held regularly the first Tuesday of every month, but the former are very seldom assembled. The castle of Truro is now entirely destroyed. It has a theatre, and various charitable institutions, namely, the county infirmary, the Truro humane institution, and an hospital for ten poor housekeepers of the parish. It has a grammar school, and a central school for boys and girls, on Dr Bell's plan. The trade of Truro consists chiefly in the exportation of tin and copper ore. Here is a manufactory for converting block tin into bars and ingots. A blowing-house for refining tin has lately been erected; also, near the quay, a foundry for casting iron tubes for the mines. Here is also a pottery and a carpet manufactory on an extensive scale. Truro returns two members to parliament. Population 2712. 11 miles N. Plymouth.

TRURO, a town of Nova Scotia, in Halifax county, 40 miles N. by W. Halifax. —Also a post township of the United States, in Barnstable county, Massachusetts.

TRUXILLO, TORRES JULIA, a town of Spain, in Extremadura, 44 miles N. N. E. Merida. Population 4000.

TRUXILLO, a city of the Caracas, in the province of Venezuela. This was formerly a splendid and flourishing city; but was sacked and entirely ruined by the buccaners. Since this period Truxillo has revived, but not to the same extent. The spot occupied by the city is shut in by two mountains, so as to give it the shape of a coffin. It has a parish church, and a chapel of ease; also a monastery of Franciscans, and one of Dominicans. The adjacent lands produce sugar, cacao, indigo, coffee, and in general all the productions of the torrid, and some few of the temperate zones. Agriculture is not the only occupation. Some raise sheep and goats; and the care they bestow in washing and carding their wool, enables them to fabricate goods from it, the sale of which is always certain and profitable. Population 7000. 105 leagues S. W. Caracas. Long. 70. 15. 30. W. Lat. 8. 33. N.

TREXILLO, a town of Guatemala, province of Honduras, 90 miles N. Valladolid. Long. 86. 8. W. Lat. 15. 51. N.

TREXILLO, the chief town of a district of Peru, at the distance of half a league from the sea, on a small river. The houses, chiefly of brick, have a very neat appearance, but are low, on account of the frequency of earthquakes. Pop. 5000. 400 miles S. Quito.

TRECHAYEV, or CHAYEV, a town of European Russia, 25 miles E. Mohilev. Pop. 3000.

TRECHOKANSKY, a town of European Russia, 80 miles W. Kasaan. Pop. 6000.

TRECHENIDSCHIL, a town of European Turkey, in Bosnia, on the Trepignizza, 15 miles N. E. Ragusa. Population 10,000.

TRECHERIN, a town of European Russia, on the Kolva, 85 miles N. N. E. Perm. Population 2500.

TRECHERIKOW'S ISLAND, in the North Pacific ocean, observed by Vancouver in 1794. Long. 205. 4. E. Lat. 55. 49. N.

TRECHERKASK, the capital of the Don Cossacks, a well known tribe on the banks of the river Don, in European Russia. The town is surrounded on every side by water and marshes, and is overflowed every year. After the peace of 1814, the capital was removed to New Trecherkask, at the confluence of the Aksai and Turlov. The streets in the New town are wide and straight; but the houses are merely wooden huts. Population 5000. That of Old Trecherkask, formerly 15,000, is at present reduced to 10,000. 250 miles E. S. E. Ekaterinoslav.

TRECHERKASSY, a town of European Russia, government of Kiev, on the Dniester. Population 3200.

TRECHETKE, a town of Hungary, 15 miles N. Gomer. Population 3000.

TRECHOUAYEV, a town of European Russia, on the Donetz. It is surrounded by a ditch and earthen wall. Population 9000. 25 miles E. Charkov.

TREONG-MING, an island near the coast of China, in the Eastern sea, near the mouth of the Yang-tee-Kiang river, about 50 miles in length, and 15 in breadth. Long. 120. 34. E. Lat. 31. 38. N.

TUA, a river of Portugal, which falls into the Douro.

TUAM, a large, populous, and well built town of Ireland, county of Galway, consisting of four main streets, which diverge nearly at right angles from the market-house. The archiepiscopal palace is a spacious venerable structure. The cathedral is a neat, but not very extensive edifice, adorned with costly spire and steeples. The Biscan school-house is a very handsome building.

The linen manufacture is extending in this neighbourhood. 17 miles N. N. E. Galway.

TUAKHMORE, a neat little village of Ireland, in the county of Londonderry.

TUAMBERG, a town of Germany, kingdom of Wirttemberg, on the Neckar, 50 miles E. Strasburg. It has woollen manufactures; but the chief income of the place is derived from the university. Population 6000.

TUCKERVILLAGE, a post village of the United States, in Wayne county, Georgia.

TUCKERTON, a post village of the United States, in Burlington county, New Jersey.

TUCUMAN, a province and government of the viceroyalty of Buenos Ayres, bounded N. E. by Chichas and Lipas in Charcas; N. W. and W. by Atacama; W. and S. W. by Cuvo or Cujor; and S. E. by the Pampas or territories inhabited by the Indians. Its extent is from Lat. 32. to 33. 10. S.; its length is 370 leagues; and its breadth 190 leagues from east to west.

TUCUMAN, or SAN MIGUEL DE TUCUMAN, the capital of the above province, situated in a pleasant plain, and containing a cathedral, a convent of Franciscans, one of La Merced, and a college, which was built by the Jesuits. It has a trade in mules, in oxen for the travelling waggons, and in the waggons themselves. 1170 miles in a direct line from Lima, and 200 E. Copiapo. Long. 64. 36. W. Lat. 26. 40. S.

TUDELLA, a town of Spain, in Navarre, at the confluence of the Quillon and the Ebro. A fine bridge, beautiful walks, and an advantageous situation, give it a picturesque appearance; but the look of the interior is spoiled by the narrowness of the streets. Population 7300. 45 miles S. Pampluna.

TUDELLA, a town of Spain, on the Douro, 5 miles E. Valladolid. Population 2000.

TVER, one of the central governments of European Russia, lying between the governments of Moscow and Novgorod, and extending from 56. to 58. 40. N. lat. and from 32. 20. to 33. of E. long. Area 24,100 square miles. Population 1,000,000. The principal rivers are the Volga, the Dwina, the Mota, the Tverza, the Mologa, and the Meduevitza.

TVER, a city of European Russia, the capital of a government, and an archbishop's see, at the confluence of the Tverza, the Volga, and the Tnaka, which divide the town into four parts, united by three bridges, the one over the Volga being of boats; that it may be removed during winter. Tver having in 1763 been consumed by fire, was rebuilt on a prescribed model, and, in consequence, is the most regular city in the empire, after St. Petersburg and Moscow. The houses are of brick, stuccoed white, and have an elegant appearance. There are also several handsome squares. The chief public buildings are the cathedral, which is old, and in the Gothic style; the palace, the courts of justice, the government offices, and the hospital. The seminaries consist of one for the clergy; another for education in classics, history, and philosophy; and a separate school for youths of rank. The manufactures of Tver are various, comprising linen, wax, leather, candles, and hardware. Population 20,000. 100 miles N. N. W. Moscow. Long. 35. 57. 23. E. Lat. 56. 51. 44. N.

TURBAN, a town of Spain, 45 miles N. W. Valencia. Population 2500.

TURBATO, one of the branches of the river Savanilla, which joins the Keowee.

TULA, a government or province in the interior of Russia, to the south of Moscow. It extends from 52. to 55. of N. lat. and has a surface of nearly 12,000 square miles, with a population of 950,000.

TULA, a town of European Russia, and the capital of the above government, at the confluence of the Tulpia and the Upa. It is called the Sheffield of Russia. Here is a cannon foundry, and a government manufacture of small arms. In the town there are about 600 workshops of smiths and others, for making fire-arms and cutlery for private use. There are also tanneries, breweries, and soap-works. There are several bridges, some of wood, some of stone, over the river, which connect one part of the town with the other. The public buildings are the churches, the residence of the bishop, the courts of justice, and the hospitals; there are also several seminaries. Pop. 40,000. 115 miles S. Moscow. Long. 37. 1. 34. E. Lat. 54. 11. 40. N.

TULA, a town of Mexico, Intendency of Mexico, 14 miles N. N. W. Mexico, containing 280 Indian families.

TULLAMORE, a neat and well built town of Ireland, in King's county, and nearly divided into two portions by a river of the same name. It owes its present thriving condition to the munificent liberality of Lord Charleville, who converted a straggling group of thatched cabins into stately streets. The linen manufacture has been introduced. The barracks are spacious and handsome. The Grand canal runs close by the town. 46 miles W. S. W. Dublin.

TULLE, a town of France, capital of the department of the Correze, at the confluence of the Correze and Solane. It is badly built, having crooked and angular streets, and no public buildings, except its churches and hospital. It has manufactures of woollen stuffs and paper; also of brandy, chocolate, and liquors. Pop. 3000. 42 miles S. E. Limoges.

TULLINS, a town of France, department of the Isere, 15 miles N. W. Grenoble. Population 1000.

TULLOW, a town of Ireland, county of Carlow, on the Slaney, over which is a bridge of six arches. At the foot of the bridge are the ruins of an old abbey. Here is a neat church, and a good market-house. 47½ miles S. S. W. Dublin.

TULUMBO, a town of the Caraccas, in Venezuela, 2 leagues from Maracay. It is quite modern, and well built. It has a handsome church, and many neat private buildings. Population 5000.

TULN, a town of Lower Austria, near the Tula, 14 miles W. N. W. Vienna. Population 1500.

TULPEHOCKER, a river of Pennsylvania, which runs east into the Schuylkill.

TULAZ, once a place of importance in Ireland, now a miserable hamlet.

TUMBAZ, a town of Peru, province of Piura, on the Rio Tumbes. Houses 70. 280 miles N. Truxillo. Long. 80. 2. W. Lat. 3. 6. S.

TUMBEK, an abundant river of the same province and kingdom, which rises in the Andes, and falls into the gulf of Guayaquil.

TUMENSK, a district of Tobolsk, in Asiatic Russia, with a capital of the same name, on the Tura, at its confluence with the Tumonka. It has nine churches, a convent, and nunnery. Houses 200. Long. 100. 14. E. Lat. 57. N.

TUMROOK, a town of Bengal, on the Ropnarain river. It is a flourishing town, and the station of the superintendent of the salt manufacture of the district. Long. 88. 2. E. Lat. 23. 17. N.

TUMSEY, a large river of Scotland, Perthshire, which issues from Loch Mannoeh, and falls into the Tay at Logierait.

TUNBRIDGE, a market town of England, county of Kent, on the river Tun, one of the five branches into which the Medway here divides itself, and over each of which is a stone bridge. The town consists chiefly of one long and wide street. The church is a large and handsome fabric. The free grammar school is also a capacious structure. Many charitable bequests have been made to the town by different persons. The remains of Tunbridge castle stand on the south-west side of the town. They consist principally of an entrance gateway, flanked by round towers, and tolerably perfect, and the artificial mount on which the keep stood. Pop. 7400. 14 miles S. S. W. Maidstone.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS, a town of England, in Kent, or rather the appellation given to a series of scattered villages or dwellings within five or six miles from the town of Tunbridge, immediately bordering on Sussex, and which owe their origin and importance to the celebrated mineral waters in the vicinity. They are situated in the three parishes of Tunbridge, Frant, and Speldhurst, and consist of four divisions, Mount Ephraim, Mount Pleasant, Mount Zion, and the Wells properly so called. The village is nearly two miles in length by one in breadth, and of late years the buildings have been rapidly increasing, many persons of rank and respectability having houses here for occasional or constant residence. The accommodations for visitants have been much improved, and the population is decidedly on the increase. During the last two reigns, the wells were frequently visited by different branches of the royal family. The new bath-house is a handsome edifice, lately erected over the wells, and containing hot and cold baths of the water. The parades, usually called the Upper and Lower walks, run parallel to each other, and are much frequented. On the right stands one set of the public rooms, opposite to which a new orchestra was built by the Jady of the manor, in which a band of music plays during the season, three times a day; and also the libraries, &c. with many neat little shops for the sale of jewellery, perfumery, and Tunbridge ware. On the left is the theatre, the lower set of assembly rooms, with several lodging-houses. It has also a chapel, and a charity school for boys and girls. The trade of Tunbridge Wells consists chiefly in the manufacture of a variety of toys in wood of different kinds, such as tea-chests, dressing-boxes of different kinds, children's toys, punch-ladles, snuff-boxes, and other articles.

TUNOURAUA, a large river of South America, which has its rise in Peru, and pours itself into the Amazon by an immense mouth, below the village of St Regis.

TUNOUAKA, a wandering native race of Asiatic Russia, who cover nearly the whole south-eastern portion of that vast territory. They are first found on the banks of the Yenisei, whence they extend all the way eastward to the sea of Okhotsk.

TUNOUAKA, the name of 3 large rivers of Asiatic Russia, all tributaries to the Yenisei.

TUNISIA, a considerable territory of Northern Africa, forming one of the most powerful of the Barbary states. It consists chiefly of a large peninsula, stretching into the Mediterranean in a north-easterly direction, and coming within less than a hundred miles of the coast of Sicily. The whole extent is about 600 miles. The cultivated part reaches from 200 to 250 miles into the interior, till it terminates with the chain of Atlas, and the vast dry plains of the Bled el Jercede. There are few countries more highly favoured as to natural beauty and fertility. It is watered by the noble river Mejeridiah. The tracks to the south called Bled el Jercede, or the country of dates, though not presenting the same rich and verdant aspect as those on the sea coast, yield in plenty, not only the date, but grain of different kinds, and contain a number of large villages. The mountains near Tunis contain mines of silver, copper, and lead; and there is one of quicksilver near Porto Turina; but these sources of national wealth are not turned to any account. Tunis was anciently the seat of Carthage. It then fell under the Roman power, was conquered by the Vandals, and afterwards by the Saracens. In 1574, Tunis, after being occupied by the troops of the emperor Charles V. was again annexed to the Turkish empire. It was governed for some time by its viceroys, called deys; but the people, or rather the soldiery, soon acquired the privilege of electing their own dey; and that officer may now be considered entirely independent of the Porte.

TUNIS, a large city of Barbary, capital of the territory of the same name. It is situated at the bottom of a bay, on a plain, surrounded on all sides, except on the east, by considerable heights, and is encircled by lakes and marshes, yet it is not unhealthy. It is supposed to contain 12,000 houses, and 120,000 inhabitants. Of these, 30,000 are Jews, and about 1500 Christians, of whom 1000 consider themselves the subjects of France. Tunis is built in the most irregular manner, and the streets so extremely narrow and filthy, that they can with difficulty be passed through. It is by no means a strong place. The citadel is much out of repair, and commanded by the neighbouring heights; there is also a rising ground on the north of the town, which commands both it and El Bardo, the fortified palace of the bey, two miles west of Tunis. This city is by no means distinguished by magnificent edifices: there is, however, one great mosque, and a number of smaller ones; and near the centre of the city is a piazza of vast extent, said to have formerly contained 3000 shops for the sale of woollen and linen manufactures. The finest structure, however, is the new palace, just built for the bey; this is very magnificent, in the Gothic or Saracenic style. The Moorish houses, according to the custom of Barbary, are only one story high, with flat roofs, and cisterns for the purpose of collecting the rain water. The city, however, is well supplied from a neighbouring spring, which is conveyed into it by a very fine aqueduct, built in the time of Charles V. Besides the mosques, there are a few colleges and schools. The police was never so well regulated as at present; and Christians may now walk the streets without the least fear of being insulted. Six miles to the west is the Goletta, the celebrated harbour and citadel of Tunis, and the great naval and commercial depot of that state. A basin has been formed here, sufficiently spacious to receive all the vessels of war and merchant ships belonging to Tunis. A large lake, separated from the sea by a very narrow isthmus, extends from Tunis to the Goletta. About four miles north of the Goletta is Cape Carthage, forming a high promontory stretching into the sea, on which that celebrated city was built. A more magnificent view cannot be conceived, than is commanded by it, of the vast and beautiful plain of Tunis, bounded at the distance of about 50 miles, with an amphitheatre of lofty mountains. The monarch of Tunis bears the title of bey, and enjoys the same absolute power as the other Barbary sovereigns. The mode of administration, the character and different classes of the inhabitants, are the same as at Tripoli, Algiers, and the other cities of Barbary. Tunis, however, is comparatively civilized and tolerant, and its sovereigns have been peculiarly zealous in their encouragement of trade. This city, accordingly, exports considerable quantities of grain, which is its great staple, and which is absurdly prohibited in the other Barbary states; also olive oil, wool, soap, and a considerable quantity of sponge. Orchilla weed is collected in considerable quantity, amid the ruins of Carthage. The caravans from Tombuctoo furnish the Tunisian merchants with gold dust, ivory, and ostrich feathers. The imports into Tunis consist of all kinds of European manufactures, colonial produce, and East India cottons. Long. 10. 30. E. Lat. 36. 44. N.

TUNIS, BAY OF, a large bay of the Mediterranean, comprehending a coast of 120 miles, in the most interior part of which is the city of Tunis. Fleets of any magnitude can find shelter throughout the year.

TUNJA, a town of New Granada, province of Santa Fe. Population 400. 60 miles N. E. Santa Fe. Long. 72. 56. W. Lat. 5. 5. N.

TUNKAT, a city of Independent Tartary, near the banks of the Sirr or Jaxartes, 250 miles N. E. Samarcand.

TUNQUIN, or TONGKIN, a large kingdom of Eastern Asia, bordering on the Chinese provinces of Quancee and Yunnan, and separating that empire from Cochinchina and Cambodia. It surrounds a large gulf of the Chinese sea, at the mouth of which is the island of Hainan. The frontier to the north and west consists of mountains of considerable height, the breezes from which, and from the sea, preserve always a tolerable degree of coolness. The central part of the country consists of a vast alluvial plain, traversed by numerous rivers, chiefly tributaries to the great one called Saigong, which flows through the whole breadth of Tunquin, and on which all the principal towns are situated. It produces rice; also potatoes, yams, and other roots. The usual tropical fruits abound. The tea tree is almost as common as in China. The name of Tunquin having the name of the kingdom, and called also Cachao or Kesho, is situated on the western bank of the great river, about 80 miles above its junction with the sea. It is said by one traveller to be equal in extent to Paris, and by another to contain only 48,000 inhabitants. The trade of Tunquin cannot be viewed as considerable. Scarcely any part of it is carried on by the natives themselves, but almost the whole by merchants from China and Siam. The attempts made by European merchants to establish an intercourse, have been transient and unsuccessful. The chief commodities to be got in Tunquin are silks and lacquered ware; also gold, earthenware, drugs, Chinese paper, dyeing woods, musk, rhubarb, tortoise shell, ginger, and cassia. They will take very few European commodities. The little broad cloth accepted of must be red, black, grass green, or blue. They take also pepper, saffron, ginger, chintz, guns, and some few other commodities.

TUNSTALL, the name of various hamlets, townships, and parishes, in England.

TURA, a considerable river of Asiatic Russia, which, after a course of about 200 miles, falls into the Tobol.

TURBET, or TARQUT, a city of Khorasan, in Persia, 50 miles N. E. Turshoon. Population 18,000.

TURCOING, a town of French Flanders, 6 miles N. N. W. Lille. It has manufactures of cotton, nankeens, satins, mixed woollen and silk stuffs. Population 11,000.

TURKINE, a town of France, department of the Correz. Population 1800.

TURON, a river of Wales, county of Montgomery, which falls into the Tanat.

TURONK, a river of Wales, county of Carmarthen. It runs into the Cothey.

TURIN, a large city in the north of Italy, in Piedmont, the capital and seat of the Sardinian monarchy, in a beautiful plain, on the Po, which here receives the waters of the Dora Ripuaria. The town is of an oblong form; its circumference about four miles. Its citadel and other fortifications were demolished by the French after the battle of Marengo. The entrance of the city from the west has an air of elegance which announces the seat of royalty; and the interior aspect of the town is elegant: its streets in general wide and straight, intersecting each other at right angles, and running in direct lines from one extremity of the city to the other. Several of them have at the sides arcades or piazzas. The principal square, near the centre of the town, ranks, both for its size and beauty, among the elegant squares of Europe. On one of its sides stands the royal palace; in the centre is the structure erected by the dukes of Savoy, and commonly called the Castello Reale. On three of the sides of the square are arcades, as in the palais royal at Paris. The Piazza di St. Carlo, though smaller, is entitled to notice, its façades being uniform, and its two longer sides having arcades supported by pillars. There are various public walks in the vicinity, much frequented. The materials of the public buildings are sufficiently rich, consisting of marble of every vein and colour. The cathedral is an old Gothic edifice, remarkable for nothing but its marble cupola. The church of Corpus Domini is very richly ornamented. Other churches claim attention only from their size, their pillars, or the variety of marble employed in their construction. The royal palace, situated in the central square, consists of three wings, surrounded by a court; its galleries contain a number of paintings of the Italian and Flemish schools. The Castello Reale and Palazzo Carignano, are both buildings of interest. The university contains a court surrounded with arcades, the whole covered with inscriptions and antique bas reliefs. The opera, or principal theatre, is of great size, and may be compared to Drury-Lane. In hospitals Turin is richly endowed. The city gates, four in number, were demolished by the French after 1796. The university was instituted in the beginning of the 16th century. Turin contains also a school for youths of rank, a lyceum, a seminary for the education of clergymen, and agricultural and veterinary schools. The manufactures of the place comprise woollens, cotton, leather, and stoneware; also silk stuffs, damask, and velvet. The smaller articles made here are liquors, chocolate, works in marble, wood, and wax; in one of the suburbs is a government manufactory of saltpetre and gunpowder; at some distance a government manufactory of tobacco and snuff; also paper-mills on a large scale. The foundation of Turin is of very remote date, Hannibal having found on its site a town, which he sacked. It was successively occupied during the last war by the French and Austrians, and remained in possession of Bonaparte till 1814. Pop. 90,000. 75 miles W. S. W. Milan.

TURINAK, a town of Tobolsk, in Asiatic Russia, on the Tura. Population 4000.

TURKISTAN, the name often given to an extensive region of Central Asia, the original or acquired seat of the great Tartar race called Turks or Torks.

TURKEY, a well-known empire, extending over the south-east of Europe and the contiguous parts of Asia and Africa; bounded W. by the Adriatic, and E. by Persia. It occupies a track of country extending from Long. 16. to 50. E. and from Lat. 23. to 43. N. It is divided into Turkey in Europe and Turkey in Asia.

TURKEY IN EUROPE is bounded N. by the southern limits of the Russian and Austrian dominions, E. by the Black sea and the Bosphorus, S. by the Mediterranean, and W. by the Adriatic. It is in length 370 miles; its breadth, in general less than half its length, is great only in Lat. 43. where its territory projects to the westward in Bosnia and Croatia. Area 200,000 square miles; population 10,000,000. Of this number, so inadequate to the advantages of the country in soil and climate, it is computed that little more than a third are Turks and Tartars; the rest are Christians of one or other denomination, principally of the Greek church. The chief towns are—Constantinople, containing 400,000 inhabitants; Philippopolis, 30,000; Eski Zaora, 30,000; Gallipoli, 17,000; Sophia, 50,000; Ciumla, 30,000; Rustachuk, 24,000; Widdin, 20,000; Nicopolis, 20,000; Nisibria, 20,000; Scopia, 8,000; Scraglia, 65,000; Belgrade, 16,000; Bucharest, 60,000; Jassi, 15,000; and Bender, 10,000. Turkey in Europe comprehends many tracts of country familiar to the readers of ancient history; Greece in the south; Macedonia, Epirus, and Thrace, in the centre; with Macedonia, part of Dacia, Pannonia, and Illyria, in the north. A division of more recent date, and the one currently used in maps and books of travels, is into the Morea, Livadia, Albania, Romania, Bulgaria, Wallachia, Moldavia, Servia, and Bosnia. These divisions are not, however, officially recognised by the Turks, who divide the whole of their European possessions into two beglerbeg-ships, Rum-ili, or Rumania, and Bosnia, under which they comprehend Servia,

Croatia, and their different acquisitions to the westward. Several districts, however, are not included in these divisions, viz. Constantinople and Adrianople, with their respective territories, Candia (Crete), with various islands in the Archipelago. The subdivision of the beglerbeg-ships is into sanjacks. Turkey in Europe is in general a mountainous country. It is traversed from east to west by a long chain, the eastern half of which is the ancient Hæmus. This great range is connected with the Carpathians by a chain which, running northward, separates Servia from Bulgaria. On the south side it sends out two secondary ranges, one of which traverses Albania, while the other, longer in its course, extends through the whole of Greece, and terminates in the extremity of the Morea. In soil and climate the Turkish dominions are highly favoured. The soil consists in many parts of a rich mould. The climate, warmer in general than in the south of France, is highly favourable to production. The great rivers in the north of Turkey, after the Danube, are the Pruth, the Sereth, the Aluta, the Morava, and the Save, all tributary to that great river. Other rivers, inferior to these, run northward from Hæmus ridge into the Danube. On the south side of that great range the outlet is the Archipelago; and the principal rivers that flow into it are the Marizza and the Vardar, the Hæmus and the Strymon of the ancients. Of the rivers in the west of Turkey, the principal are the Drino, the Naranta, the Viesza; in Albania, the largest is the Achelous. The lakes in Turkey are not considerable. The products of Greece, and of the maritime districts of Turkey in Europe, are sufficiently known; with the mineralogy and botany of the interior we are almost as little acquainted as with those of the wilds of America. In regard to fruit, chestnuts, apples, and pears, are found only in the northern provinces. The southern produce oranges, raisins, olives, figs, and almonds. The grape succeeds in almost every part of the empire; the pomegranate and the sugar cane only in its southern and warmest districts. Wheat, maize, rice, cotton, silk, and tobacco, are all natural to this country. Cattle and horses are reared in almost every part of the empire. The goat is a useful animal in the mountains; the ass and mule are like those of Italy. The government of Turkey is despotic, the power of the sultan being only virtually restrained by the ordinances of the Koran, and the decisions of the uléma and the mufti, and also by certain usages. But neither these ordinances nor usages protect property of individuals in the service of the state. To this the sultan is heir in the eye of the law, and may exercise his power over their lives and properties without any dread of general discontent. He may even delegate this dangerous authority to the vizier, the sanjak, and other functionaries. The grand vizir, or prime minister, is by his office commander of the forces. The divan, or cabinet council, was formerly composed of six pachas, of the first character for experience; but Selim III. changed its constitution, and it is now limited to the mufti, the vizir, and the kizla bey, who is the lieutenant of the vizir, and through whose hands all papers pass before coming into those of his superior. Another minister is the reis effendi, whose office corresponds in part to that of the chancellor, in part to that of the secretary for foreign affairs in Britain. The pachas or governors of provinces are charged not only with the civil and military, but, by a strange mixture of powers, act as farmers-general of the revenue for their respective provinces. A waywode is merely the governor of a provincial town, or of one of the districts which do not belong to any pachalic. The sangiac beys are the governors of districts under the pachas, and invested, like them, with both civil and military functions. There is in Turkey hardly any hereditary nobility, and very little distinction of rank, but what arises from holding a public office. Yet the eunuchs and scribes who can trace their genealogy to Mahomet, like the descendants of the celebrated vizirs, Ibrahim Khan Oglou, and Achmed Kimpri, enjoy certain privileges. The ulena are a numerous and respectable body, whose functions consist in expounding the Koran, and in applying its injunctions to the circumstances of the times. They thus combine the character of clergy and lawyers, having at their head the grand mufti, whose decrees are considered by the public as the voice of inspiration, though necessarily accommodated to the will of the court. The imams or priests are a body altogether inferior to, and distinct from, the ulena, their duty being merely to perform public worship in the mosques; but every law promulgated by the sultan, must be sanctioned by an act of approbation from the mufti, who, in addition to other functions, has that of presenting annually to the sultan a list of persons to fill the two high judicial stations of kadileskar of Europe and kadileskar of Asia. These officers remain in place only a year, but have the nomination of the kadi or inferior judges of the empire. The grand vizir is the official head of the administration of justice. An appeal from a lower to a higher jurisdiction is unknown in this country; and in case of fine, imprisonment, and even of death, a decision is frequently obtained only by bribery. The Christians and Jews remain more at the mercy of the executive branch than their Turkish fellow subjects. In Constantinople there exists a check on the officers of government, but in a provincial town their authority is in a manner unlimited, and is generally exercised without any regard to justice. The religion of the Turks is that of Mahomet, of the sect of Omar. The rule of their faith is the Koran, an incongruous mixture of sound and absurd doctrines, of grave and of trifling precepts. Their fusts are frequent and rigorous; the injunctions in the principal one (the Ramadan) being to taste neither food nor drink while the sun remains above the horizon. The lower ranks of the Turks are almost devoid of education; learning is confined to law and theology, which have here a close connection; for the lawyer must be skilled in the Koran; the divine learned in the law. They have colleges, at which youths intended for these professions are educated, and receive degrees. In philosophy and literature, the Turks have made little progress. In the arts, whether useful or ornamental, they are equally backward; nor are they better acquainted with navigation, engineering, fortification, or the art of casting iron. The public revenue of Turkey is derived partly from a capitation tax on Christians and Jews, partly from duties on tobacco and other articles of consumption. The amount of the whole is about 1,3,000,000 sterling, and the objects to which it is applied are the army, the navy, the fortifications, and a part of the household of the sultan. The private revenue of the emperor is derived from certain taxes on the mines, from the sale of public offices, from a duty of 10 per cent. on all legacies, and from the inheritance of the estates of the servants of government, or of persons who die without heirs; from fines, confiscations, and presents, whether from subjects or from foreign governments. The Turkish army is composed of a variety of troops; first of a kind of feudal corps, commanded by agas, who hold certain lands by the tenure of military service. The Sipahis are in general the sons of the rich Turks, the expectants of the vacant charges of the agas. The Janissaries, a corps originally formed of Christians and prisoners of war, now consist entirely of Mahometans. They seldom keep in the field so many as 100,000 men. The Turkish navy is inconsiderable, and seldom, even in time of war, amounts to 15 or 16 sail of the line. Their vessels are navigated chiefly by Greeks or Algerines. The earliest notice of Turks or Turkmen in history, is about the year 300, when, issuing from an obscure retreat, they obtained possession of a part of Armenia called from them Turcomania. They afterwards extended their conquests over the adjacent parts of Asia, Africa, and Europe, occupying Syria, Egypt, and eventually the territory that remained to the Greek emperors. In 1452, Constantinople was taken by Mahomet II. The Morea and the islands were afterwards overrun. The Turks have been engaged in frequent wars with the Austrians, and more lately with the Russians, in which their ill regulated valour has been obliged to yield to the superiority of European tactics. Over many of their remoter provinces they hold their authority very loosely. The Greeks have openly revolted against their authority; and are now maintaining a successful struggle, to all appearance, for their independence.

TURKEY IN ASIA.—Amid the falling fortunes of the empire, its dominions in Asia have been greatly circumscribed, though not quite in an equal degree as on the other frontier. Its boundary to the eastward has been formed by a varying line among the mountain of Armenia and Kurdistan, and the river courses of the Euphrates and Tigris. Bagdad and Bassora scarcely own the supremacy of the Porte; and the mountain districts are occupied by a number of petty and warlike chieftains. Western Arabia might at one time be considered almost as a Turkish province. The holy cities of Mecca and Medina, and the ports on the Red sea as far as Mocha, were occupied with garrisons. The devoted force of Turkey, with the growth of Wahabite power, have put a complete period to her empire in Arabia. She cannot now even send an armed caravan to Mecca. Asiatic Turkey is therefore reduced to Asia Minor and Syria, including Palestine.

TURKEY, AFRICAN.—At present this power can scarcely be said to have any footing in Africa. Mahommed Ali, who annihilated the power of the Mamelukes, has now set up an independent government, which the Porte appears to have little prospect of being able to shake.

TURKEY-FOOT, a post village of the United States, in Pennsylvania. Population 975. —The name of various other creeks and townships.

TURKHEIM, a town of France, 3 miles W. Colmar. Population 2000.

TURKHEIM, a town of the Bavarian circle of the Rhine. Population 3100.

TURK'S ISLANDS, a cluster of small islands among the Bahamas, the largest situated in Long. 71. 0. W. Lat. 21. 30. N.

TURINO, a village of South America, province of Tunja, containing 1000 housekeepers and 600 Indians.

TURNAU, a town of Bohemia, 44 miles N. N. E. Prague. Population 3800.

TURNAGO, a town of European Turkey, in the north of Greece. Population 3000.

TURNHAM GREEN, a hamlet of England, in Middlesex, on the road to Brentford.

TURNHOUT, a well built town of the Netherlands, province of Antwerp. It has manufactures of coarse linen. Population 11,000. 24 miles E. by N. Antwerp.

TURRIFF, a town of Scotland, Aberdeenshire, on a rivulet, about one mile above its confluence with the Dorrer. The principal manufacture is that of linen yarn, thread, brown linens, and coarse stockings. Population 922. 11 miles S. Banff.

TURSUZ, a considerable city of Kurdistan, in Persia, situated on the borders of the Great Salt Desert. It imports indigo and other drugs, wool, cloth, and rice. The chief export is iron. 160 miles W. N. W. Herat.

TURTLE CREEK, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania.—Also one in Georgia.—There are also several islands of this name in the Eastern and other seas.

TUWRY, a village of Ireland, in the county of Dublin, 9 miles from Dublin.

TUSCANY, a grand duchy of Italy, in the central part of the peninsula, extending from 43. 14 to 44. 12 of N. lat. Its physical boundaries are, on one side the Appennines, on the other the part of the Mediterranean called the Tuscan or Tyrrhenian sea. The chief towns are, Florence (the capital), 76,000 inhabitants; Leghorn, 50,000; Sienna, Pisa, Arezzo, Cortona, Piombino, and Porto Ferrajo. In Tuscany, as in most other parts of Italy, the face of the country is pleasantly diversified with hill, valley, and plain. The Appennines entering at its northern extremity, traverse it in a south-east direction. Besides the principal chain of the Appennines, there are several smaller ranges extending in different directions, and declining in height as they approach the sea. The only considerable rivers are the Arno, the Ombrone, and the Chiana. There are various other inferior streams. Tuscany is protected from extreme heat by the Appennines on the north and east, and by the Mediterranean on the west. Some parts of the low country are, however, liable to excessive heat. The sky is serene, the winter is severe only in the high lying tracks, and the country is healthy. The soil in the greater part of the Tuscan territory is a rich alluvial mould. The chief objects of culture are wheat, maize, beans, peas, and a variety of vegetables; also clover and other artificial grasses. The fruits are vines, olives, oranges, lemons, and figs. Rice is raised in marshy districts, particularly on level tracks adjoining the sea. The wine of Tuscany is in general good. The annual produce of olive oil is 100,000 casks. Raw silk is also exported. Pasturage in this warm climate is good. The breed of horses is wretched; that of mules, asses, goats, and swine, is tolerably good. The breed of horned cattle is, as in Lombardy, kept up by regular importations from Switzerland. Sheep are numerous in the mountainous districts, but their wool is in general coarse. The island of Elba contains iron mines. On the main land of Tuscany are found in particular spots mines of copper, lead, and quicksilver: in the Appennines are marble, alabaster, crystal, and rock salt. In manufactures Tuscany is no longer conspicuous. Its principal article is silk, made into a variety of articles—ribbons, stockings, gloves, as well as light and heavy stuffs; next come laces, and on a smaller scale woollens, with straw hats, perfumed essences, and liquors. Leghorn is the principal port. The territorial divisions of Tuscany are into the three provinces of Florence, Pisa, and Sienna. The form of the government is monarchical. The seat of government is at Florence. Tuscany is familiar to the readers of ancient history under the names of Etruria and Tyrrhenia. It was overrun by the barbarians in the fifth century. Held at first as a duchy and fief of Lombardy, it was afterwards ruled by the family of the Medici, and on their extinction, by a younger branch of the family of Austria. It was declared by Bonaparte an integral part of the French empire; but on his downfall in 1814, it was restored to the archduke Ferdinand. Area 6500 square miles. Population 1,200,000.

TUSCARAWAS, a county of the United States, in the state of Ohio. Pop. 1351.

TUSCARORA CREEK, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania.

TUTANA, or TOTANA, a mean looking town of Spain, in Murcia, with 8000 inhabitants, who form no exception in their mode of life to the general apathy and indolence of the Murcians. The public buildings are a church, a monastery, and an hospital; the last poor and insignificant. 18 miles E. N. E. Lora.

TUTINERY, or STURTESBURY, a market town of England, Staffordshire, on the Dove, over which is a stone bridge of nine arches. It is noted for its ancient castle, one of the most famous in England, but now in a ruinous condition. The unfortunate Mary queen of Scots was confined for some time in this castle. There was also a priory for monks of the Benedictine order. Scarcely a vestige of the ancient building now remains. The parish church, a large massive building, constitutes a portion of the old priory church. The town contains an excellent free school; also a meeting-house for dissenters. The principal business of the inhabitants consists in wool-combing. Population 1444. 15 miles E. Stafford.

TXETORD, a market town of England, in Nottinghamshire, 13 miles N. by W. Newark. Population 979.

TEXTILA, an Indian village of Mexico, in the intendancy of Vera Cruz.

TY, an ancient town of Spain, in Galicia, on a rising ground, at the foot of which flows the Minho. It is surrounded by good ramparts, and has a citadel. Population 1000.

TUY, a river of the Caraccas, in the province of Venezuela, which falls into the ocean 30 leagues E. of the port of Guaira.

TWEED, a large river of Scotland, which rises in Peebles-shire. It takes a course nearly north-east, being augmented by a number of small streams. A few miles below this town it leaves Roxburghshire, and forms for many miles the boundary between England and Berwickshire, until it falls into the German ocean at the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed.

TWEEDEN, a small river of Scotland, in Roxburghshire, which joins the Liddel.

TWICKENHAM, a village of England, in Middlesex, on the Thames, between Islington and Toddington. It is adorned with many handsome seats and villas, the principal of which was that of the celebrated Pope. Of late years the village has been considerably extended. The church, rebuilt some years ago by the contributions of the inhabitants, is a fine Gothic building. It is the burying place of Pope and his parents. Here is also a charity school for clothing and educating 50 boys. Population 4200. 11 miles S. W. London.

TWIGGS, a county of the United States, in Georgia. Population 3409.

TWISTON and TWISTON, two hamlets of England, in Lincoln and Gloucestershires.

TWITAM, a hamlet of England, Kent.

TWIZEL, a hamlet of England, in Northumberland, 8 miles S. W. by S. Morpeth.

TWO LICK CREEK, a river of the United States, in Indiana county, Pennsylvania.

TWY, a river of Wales, in Cardiganshire, which runs into the Irish channel.

TWYFORD, the name of various hamlets of England.

TYREE, an island near the coast of Georgia, at the mouth of the Savannah.

TYGON, a river of the United States, in South Carolina, which joins Broad river.

TYGON'S CREEK, two rivers of the United States, in Kentucky and Louisiana.

TYKOCIN, a town of Poland, on the Narw, 17 miles W. Bialystok. Pop. 2500.

TYNDLESTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 4325.

TYLER, a county of the United States, in the north-west part of Virginia, formed in 1814, from a part of Ohio county.

TYSSY, a small old village of Ireland, in Armagh, 60 miles N. N. W. Dublin.

TYNE, a river of Scotland, in Haddingtonshire, which rises in the county of Melrothian, and after a N. E. course of nearly 30 miles, falls into the sea 2 miles N. Dunbar.

TYNE, a considerable river of England, the chief river of Northumberlandshire. It consists of two branches, which unite near Nether Warden, above Hexham, and form a large river, which flowing to Newcastle, enters the German ocean by the estuary of Tyne-mouth.

TYNEMOUTH, a village of England, in Northumberlandshire, at the mouth of the river Tyne, about a mile below North Shields. It is chiefly noted for its ancient castle and priory, situated on a high rock, and inaccessible from the sea. Little remains of this ancient bulwark, except a strong gateway, the approach to which has been lately flanked with bastions. The monastery was within the castle, and it still presents many elegant remains of architecture. Tyne-mouth, from its exposed situation, is extremely bleak and uncomfortable in the winter season, but is much resorted to for sea-bathing during the summer. Good lodgings may be procured, and commodious baths have been erected within these few years; and there are delightful walks in the neighbourhood. Population 9456. 6 miles E. Newcastle.

TYRE, or SOUR, a seaport of Syria, which derives now its only importance from its occupying the site of the most celebrated commercial city of antiquity. Longitude 30. E. Lat. 33. 10. N.

TYRNA, a town of Hungary, on the river Tyrna, in a fertile but rather unhealthy district. It has an academy, a seminary for priests, and a school for young noblemen. Population 5100. 25 miles N.N.E. Presburg.

TYROL, a large province of the Austrian empire, bounded by Bavaria, Salzburg, Carinthia, Austrian Italy, and Switzerland, and lying between Long. 10. 2. and 12. 20. E. and Lat. 45. 46. and 47. 46. N. Its form approaches to the circular, but its boundary line is marked by frequent projections and indentations. Its area is about 11,000 square miles; its population about 720,000. It is divided into seven districts or circles. Of all the countries of Europe, Tyrol is the most exclusively mountainous. These mountains, with their ramifications, divide Tyrol into more than 20 vallies, the most remarkable of which are the three which contain the largest rivers, the Inn, the Eysach, and the Adige. The climate of Tyrol, in consequence of the height of the mountains, is cold, not only in winter, but in spring; in summer the vallies are hot, particularly when open to the south. In minerals Tyrol is doubtless rich, every species of ore, from gold to coal, having been found there. The only mines that have as yet been worked with advantage, are those of salt, iron, copper, and calamine. Mineral springs are abundant, there being no less than 60 in different parts of the country. Its agricultural produce is scanty, and corn is imported, in exchange for the wine and silk raised in the southern vallies. Flax, hemp, and tobacco, are also produced. It has few manufactures. Among the wild animals is the chamois, the Alpine goat, and the marmotte. The principal towns are Roveredo, containing 10,000 inhabitants; Inspruck, 12,000; Trent, 10,000; Schwatz, Botzen, Ala, Hall, and Fergina. By the treaty of Presburg (January, 1805) Tyrol was ceded to Bavaria. In 1815 the country was restored to Austria.

TYRONE, a county of Ireland, province of Ulster, bounded N.E. by Londonderry, E. by Long. Forest, S.E. by Anagh, S. by Monaghan, S.W. by Fermanagh, and W. by Donegal. It contains 35 parishes, is about 43 Irish miles in length, and from 14 to 33 in breadth. A great portion of it is rough and mountainous; in many parts the soil is rich and fertile, and equally calculated for tillage or for pasture. The principal rivers are, the Blackwater; the Foyle, known also by the names of the Cammon and the Mourne; the Mounterlouny and Drinna rivers, the Fentona, the Owenreagh, the Longfield, the Derg, and Fin; besides numerous streamlets, which descend from the mountains. The other rivers are the Farnan and the Cookestown. The linen manufacture is in a most flourishing condition through the whole extent of the district.

TYRONE, several townships of the United States, in Pennsylvania.

TYRRELL, a county of the United States, in North Carolina. Population 2364.

TYRRELL'S PASS, a neat small village of Ireland, county of Westmeath.

TYSMENKA, a small town of Austrian Galicia, on the borders of Russia. Population 3000.

TZSCHOPPAU, a small town of Saxony, on the Tzschoppau, 33 miles W.S.W. Dresden. Population 4000.

TZSCHOPPAU, a river of Germany, in Saxony, which joins the Elbe.

TZULIM, a river of Asiatic Russia, which runs through the province of Kolivan, and falls into the Yenisei.

U.

URAY, a large and copious river of Peru. Its mouth is in Lat. 11. 57. S.

URAVE, a river of France, department of the Lower Alps. It joins the Durance.

UREDA, a town of Spain, in Andalusia. It has manufactures of common woollen stuffs. It contains a number of religious houses, having eleven churches, great and small, several monasteries, and a large hospital. Population 16,000. 50 miles N.N.E. Granada.

UERLINGEN, a town of Germany, in Baden. Population 2400.

UCAYALI, a large and navigable river of South America, which enters the Amazons by the south side, in Lat. 4. 25. S.

UCITA, a river of Guiana, which enters the Ventuari.

UCKER, a river of Brandenburg, which falls into the Frische-Haff in Pomerania.

UCKENADT, a town of the Prussian states, government of Cologne. Pop. 2100.

UCKER MARK, that part of the electorate of Brandenburg which bordered on Pomerania, between the Oder and the duchy of Mecklenburg. It now forms the north-east part of the government of Potsdam.

UCKERMUNDE, a town of Pomerania, on the Ucker, 31 miles N.W. Stettin. Population 1800.

UDA, the name of two rivers in Asiatic Russia. The first falls into the sea of Okhotsk; the second falls into the Tunguska.

UDDEVALLA, a town of Sweden, province of Bahus, on both sides of a deep bay. It has a convenient harbour. Its manufactures are chiefly of corlage and iron articles. Population 4000. 205 miles W.S.W. Stockholm.

UNDINGSTONE, a small village of Scotland, in Lanarkshire, 7 miles S.E. Glasgow.

UNDESHOUT, a village of North Brabant, 15 miles E. Breda. Population 1700.

UDINA, a delegation or district of Austrian Italy, government of Venice. Area 2900 square miles. Population 270,000.

UDINA, a town of Austrian Italy, government of Venice, on the Lisonzo. It contains a cathedral, with several churches and convents. The best houses are decorated with fine paintings. Silk is reared in the neighbourhood, and forms, along with some woolen stuffs, and the liquors made from the fruits of the country, the chief branches of trade. In the mountains of the territory of Udina are quarries of marble, and minerals of various descriptions. Population 17,000. 58 miles N. E. Venice.

UDINSK, GREAT AND SMALL, the name of two towns of Irkoutsk, in Asiatic Russia, the former on the Uda. It is well fortified, and contains large magazines. Houses 100. Long. 107. 20. E. Lat. 51. 23. N. The latter, Nijnei-Udinsk, is a very small town, containing only a church and 10 houses.

UDVARNELY, the chief town of a district in Transylvania. Here are large tanneries. It also trades largely in honey and tobacco. Population 6000. 78 miles S. E. Clausenburg.

ULZEN, a town of Germany, in Hanover, 22 miles S. Lüneburg. Pop. 2000.

ULVERHOP, a market town and parish of England, in Devonshire. Pop. 1561.

ULWIND, a hamlet of England, in Northamptonshire.

ULIE, a river of Scotland, in Aberdeen-shire. It falls into the sea at Peterhead.

ULITSCH, a town of European Russia, government of Jaroslaw, on the Volga. It has manufactures of leather, soap, and paper. Pop. 5500. 95 miles W. by S. Jaroslaw.

ULTHORPE, a township of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

ULST, NORTH, an island of the Hebrides, belonging to Inverness-shire, Scotland, lying between the district of Harris on the north, and Benbecula on the south, from which last it is separated by a strand, dry at low water. It is of a very irregular shape, being 16 miles long and 14 miles in breadth. Area 118 square miles, including several fresh-water lakes. The general aspect is cheerless and gloomy. The crops cultivated are bear, oats, potatoes, and some rye. Kelp is made to the extent of more than 1200 tons yearly. Pop. 4971.

ULST, SOUTH, also one of the Hebrides, belonging to Inverness-shire, Scotland, lying in the district called the Long Island, between the isles of Benbecula on the north, and Barra on the south. It is 19 miles long, and is in some places nine miles broad. Area 127 square miles. The general aspect is mountainous and barren. The inhabitants manufacture 1100 tons of kelp annually. Population 6038.

USZANJA, or KONIGSBERG, a town of Hungary, on the Gran, 67 miles N. N. W. Budu. Population 3800.

USZELI, or SATORALLYA, a town of Hungary, on the Ronyu. It is celebrated for its wine. Pop. 6600. 21 miles N. N. E. Tokay.

UKRAINE, an extensive country in the south-east of Russian Poland, which, since the late division of the Russian empire, forms the four governments of Kiev, Podolia, Poltava, and Charkov. This country is situated between the 48th and 53d degrees of north latitude, and is subject, in summer, to great heat, and in winter to intense cold. In fertility it is not surpassed by any country in Europe. Wheat, oats, barley, and other products, are raised with comparatively little labour, and the pastures are in many parts of great luxuriance. Fruits are also abundant, and the kermes, or Polish cochineal, forms one of the products of Ukraine. The chief town is Kiev, once the capital of the Russian dominions in their circumscribed state. The river Dnieper intersects the country in a winding direction, and affords a channel for the conveyance of products to the Black sea, in which Odessa, situated between the mouths of the Dnieper and Dniester, forms the principal outlet.

ULÉABORU, an extensive province to the north of Finland, and extending along the south coast of the gulf of Bothnia. After being long subject to Sweden, it forms, since 1809, a circle of the Russian province or government of Abo; but it extends also into Lapland, occupying the country between 63. 30. and 67. N. lat. The population is thinly scattered, the chief part of the surface being covered with forests, marshes, and rocks. See Bothnia, Finland, and Sweden.

ULÉABORU, capital of the preceding province, on a peninsula where the river Ulea falls into the gulf of Bothnia. Its chief trade is the export of tar, pitch, salt fish, and salt butter. Population 3500. Long. 25. 23. E. Lat. 63. 40. N.

ULEY, a populous village and parish of England, in Gloucestershire, 105 miles W. London. Population 2653.

ULIETEA, one of the Society islands in the South Pacific ocean. The south extremity lies in Long. 181. 20. W. Lat. 16. 55. S.

ULLAROE, a village of Scotland, on the west coast of Ross-shire, 61 miles W. by N. Inverness, situated on Loch Broom. It is one of the fishing stations belonging to the British Society.

ULLAROE, a small river of Scotland, in Ross-shire, which falls into Loch Broom.

ULLINGTON and ULLOCK, two hamlets of England, in Gloucestershire and Cumberland.

ULM, a town of Germany, in Wirtemberg, on the Danube, at its confluence with the Blau, which flows through the town. It is an antique place, consisting of crooked streets, and of houses in the old German style. Here is a large Gothic church, or Münster, about 416 feet in length, and 160 in breadth. Several other churches are entitled to notice; and the secular buildings are the town-house, the arsenal, the theatre, the barracks, and the hospital. The manufacture of linen is still considerable. It was here that, in 1495, the errors of Mack, and the combinations of Bonaparte, led to the surrender of an Austrian army; and it has frequently been the scene of great military events. Population 15,000. 44 miles S. E. Stuttgart.

ULRICAHALL, a town of Sweden, in West Gothland. Population 800.

ULSTER, a province of Ireland, containing the northern counties of Donegal, Londonderry, Antrim, Tyrone, Fermanagh, Monaghan, Armagh, Down, and Cavan.

ULSTER, a county of the United States, in New York, bounded N. by Greene county, E. by Hudson, S. by Orange county, S. W. by Sullivan county, and N. W. by Delaware county. Pop. in 1810, 26,576.

ULSWATER, a lake of England, partly in Westmoreland, and partly in Cumberland, 8 miles in length.

ULUA, JUAN DEL, an island of Mexico, in the bay of Vera Cruz. A very strong fortress, called the castle of St. Juan d'Ulúa, now covers nearly the whole rock. It contains a giratory light-house of great utility in so dangerous a navigation as the channel of Vera Cruz is at all times. Lat. 15. 40. N.

ULVA, a small island of the Hebrides. Population 200 or 300.

ULVERSTON, an ancient market town of England, county of Lancaster, at the distance of about a mile from an arm of the bay of Morecambe, called Leven Sands. The town has greatly improved in appearance within the last 50 years. The church, almost wholly rebuilt in 1804, is a plain, neat structure; has three aisles, and a square tower. In this town is a small theatre, an assembly-room, and a public subscription library; also a clerical library. The principal trade of this place is in iron-ore, pig and bar iron, limestone, blue slate, wheat, oats, barley, and beans. The manufactures carried on are cotton, check, canvas, and hats. Population 4315. 18 miles N. N. W. Lancaster.

UNAN, a town of European Russia, government of Kiev. Population 2600.

UNHAGGÖ, a lake of the United States, in New Hampshire and Maine, 18 miles long, and, where widest, 10 broad.

UNBRIATICO, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples, in Calabria Citra, near the small river Lipuda. It is rarely visited by travellers. Population 10,000. 42 miles N. N. W. Squillacè.

UMEA, a seaport of Sweden, in West Bothnia, at the mouth of the river Umea. It has a good harbour, and its traffic is in wood and fish. Population 1000. Long. 29. 4. E. Lat. 63. 49. 46. N.

UMMERAPPOORA, the present capital of the Birman empire, on the shores of a romantic lake, near the Irrawaddy river. The city is divided into four distinct quarters, each of which is governed by its own officer; and no town in Europe can boast of a better police. The circumference of the city is about two miles. Population 150,000. Long. 96. 7. E. Lat. 21. 64. N.

UMSTADT, a town of Germany, in Hesse-Darmstadt, 12 miles E. Darmstadt. Pop. 2500.

UNADILLA, a river of the United States, in New York. It joins the Susquehanna.

UNARE, a river of South America, which divides the government of the Caracas from the province of Cumana.

UNGHVAR, a town of Hungary, capital of a palatinate of the same name, 62 miles N. by E. Debreczin. Population 5000.

UNIKEN, a seaport of Asia Minor, on the coast of the Black sea, the ancient Enoe. It is situated on a bay, with a range of finely wooded mountains behind. The inhabitants are wealthy, consisting of Turks, Greeks, and Armenians, who carry on a considerable trade with Constantinople and the Crimea. The exports are cotton stuffs from Tocat and Diarbekir, fruits, and wine; the imports, corn and oil from the Crimea; coffee, sugar, and European manufactures from Constantinople. 40 miles E. Samsoon.

UNION, four post villages of the United States, in the state of New York.—Also the name of various townships.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. These comprehend an extensive portion of North America; bounded N., since the acquisition of the Floridas in 1819, by the gulf of Mexico; E. by New Brunswick and the Atlantic ocean; W. by the territory inhabited by the Indians, although, with the exception of Louisiana, there are few settlers to the west of the Mississippi; and N. and N. W. by the river St. Lawrence, and a line drawn through the middle of lakes Ontario, Erie, Huron, and along the northern shore of Lake Superior, whence it is prolonged westward into the desert territory of the Indians. In the Michigan territory the settlers, however, are not numerous; and in the North-west territory, bounded N. by Lake Superior, and W. by Lake Michigan, population has scarcely begun. The following is the topographical division of the United States:—States—Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Maine, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Mississippi, Louisiana, Illinois. Territories—Alabama, Michigan, North-western, Missouri; District of Columbia. Area 2,407,698 square miles. The country is intersected in almost its whole length by the great chain of mountains called the Allegheny or Appalachian mountains, which extend 900 miles in length, from near the mouth of the St. Lawrence to the confines of Georgia, and are about 200 miles in breadth. They run nearly parallel to the shore of the Atlantic ocean, at the distance of from 80 to 130 miles. They are for the most part not above 2500 feet high. On the western side of the Allegheny chain, the country is spread out into that vast valley which is bounded by the Rocky mountains on the west, and which is from 1000 to 1500 miles in breadth. The great river the Mississippi, which runs generally in a direction from north to south, and falls into the gulf of Mexico, is the common channel through which all the waters of this vast valley flow out into the ocean. The Rocky mountains rise to an elevation of 9000 feet. The distance to the Mississippi being greater from the Rocky mountains than from the Alleghenes, the rivers to which they give rise have a greater distance to run before they reach the common recipient; and the rapidity of their descent being modified by this circumstance, they are equally navigable with those streams which issue from the lower range of the Allegheny mountains to join the Mississippi. For 250 miles above the mouth of the Mississippi, the country is a perfect flat, and it afterwards rises by a gradual ascent. In consequence of this favourable configuration of the ground, vessels may ascend by the course of the Mississippi, the Ohio, and the Allegheny rivers, an inclined plane of 2400 miles, to an elevation of 1200 or 1400 feet, without the help either of canals or locks. The following are the chief rivers which flow into the Atlantic:—The Penobscot, Kennebec, Androscoggin, Sagadahoc, Connecticut, Hudson, Delaware, Susquehanna, Potomac, James, Roanoke, Cape Fear, Pedee, Santee, Savannah, Altamaha. The following flow into the gulf of Mexico, the Mississippi, and its tributaries:—Appalachicola, Alabama, Tombigbee, Mississippi, Red river, Arkansas, White river, Ohio, Illinois, Moines, Tennessee, Cumberland, Wabash, Missouri, from its source to the Gulf of Mexico, Osage, Grand, Kansas, Platte, Yellowstone, Big Horn, and Quachitta. The following are to the west of the Rocky mountains:—Columbia, Multnomah, Lewis river, and Clark's river. With regard to soil, the territory of the United States may be classed under five general divisions. 1. That of the New England states, beyond the Hudson, where the Allegheny spread out into a broken hilly country. The soil here is in general rocky, has but little depth, is barren in many places, and better adapted for pasture than tillage. 2. The sandy soil of the sea shore, commencing from Long Island, and extending to the Mississippi, with a breadth varying from 30 to 100 miles. This tract, from the Potomac southward, approaches to a horizontal plain, very little raised above the sea, traversed through its whole breadth by the tide-water at the mouths of the great rivers. The surface, which consists of sea sand, is scarcely capable of cultivation, and produces nothing but pines, except on the banks of rivers, and in marshy spots, where rice is raised. 3. The land from the upper margin of the sandy tract to the foot of the mountains, from 10 to 200 miles in breadth, the soil of which is generally formed from the alluvion of the mountains and the decomposition of the primitive rocks beneath the surface. This tract is fertile, and generally well adapted for tillage. 4. The valleys between the ridges of the Alleghenes, the soil of which is various, but rather richer than that of the tract last mentioned. 5. The extensive region west of the Alleghenes, which is bottomed on limestone, is well watered, inexhaustibly productive, and contains, perhaps, as large a proportion of first rate soil as any country in the world. In a country so extensive there is a considerable diversity in the agricultural productions. The north-eastern states form a good grazing country, and beef, pork, butter, and cheese, are among their principal productions. Maize, or Indian corn, an indigenous American plant, is cultivated from Maine to Louisiana, but succeeds best in the middle and western states. The maple grows in all the states, but thrives best in the middle and western states. Wheat is also cultivated from one extremity of the Union to the other. The cultivation of tobacco begins in Maryland, about the parallel of 39 or 40 degrees, and continues through all the southern states, and partially through the western states, particularly Kentucky and Tennessee. Cotton and rice are the great staples of all the southern states, from North Carolina to Tennessee, and the leading export of the Union. The sugarcane grows in low and warm situations, as high as the latitude of 33 degrees. Oats, rye, and barley, are raised in all the northern, and in the upper districts of the southern states. The vine can be raised as far north as Pennsylvania, and grows spontaneously in most of the southern and western states. Hops also grow naturally in the middle and western states. Indigo was formerly cultivated as an article of export in the southern states, but has been generally abandoned. The mulberry tree grows spontaneously; and the trials made formerly, shew the practicability of establishing the manufacture of silk to any extent required. Great exertions have also been made to improve the breeds of domestic animals, and Pennsylvania particularly distinguished for the size and beauty of its horses and horned cattle. The United States have been not less favoured in their mineral riches, than in the fertility of their soil. Copper, iron, coal, lime, and salt, productions of primary necessity, exist in great abundance; as also lead, which is chiefly procured from Missouri, where the supply appears to be inexhaustible. Mercury is said to be found in Kentucky, and silver in several parts of the Union, but neither probably in quantities to be worked with advantage. The supply of coal is, perhaps, equal to that of any country in the world. The coal formation is believed to extend on the western side of the mountains, from Lake Ontario to the river Tombigbee, a distance of 800 or 900 miles. Limestone, gypsum, and slate, abound in many parts. Nitre, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Virginia, furnish quantities more than sufficient for the consumption of the whole states. Salt is imported or obtained from the sea, on the eastern side of the mountains; on the western side it is procured from salt springs, which are so numerous, and so copious in their produce, all over the western states and the Missouri territory, that it is believed a salt formation accompanies the great coal formation from Lake Ontario to the river Tombigbee, extending westward, perhaps, to the Rocky mountains. The climate of the United States is exceedingly favourable for the production of fruits, which abound throughout its whole extent. In the northern states, apples, pears, cherries, peaches, currants, gooseberries, plums, &c. are produced in great abundance. Towards the south, the fruits which flourish best are pears, pomegranates, and water-melons; the latter in particular grow to an enormous size, and are superior perhaps to any in the world. Other fruits are figs, apricots, nut-rings, olives, almonds, oranges, lemons, lime, and citron, which are abundantly produced in the southern states. In the pine barrens grapes grow to a great size, and possess an excellent flavour. The climate of the United States has the disadvantage of being liable to great extremes both of heat and cold; and the influence of cold is felt much further south than in the countries of the continent. In the north-eastern states, such as Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont, the cold is intense for three or four months. At Brunswick, in Maine, the greatest cold in January was 30 degrees below zero. In summer the heat is very intense during five or six weeks; and in low confined situations is nearly equal to that of the African coast, the thermometer rising 100 degrees in the shade. In the more southern states the cold in winter is extreme; the thermometer in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts, &c. falling in winter below zero, and rising in summer to nearly 100. The winter is, however, of shorter duration. In Virginia the cold in winter brings down the thermometer to six degrees, and in summer it rises to 96, and 98. In Georgia, &c. it ranges between 77 and 100 degrees; and still farther south, even in Louisiana, the winter is occasionally severe. It has been generally thought that the climate to the west of the Alleghany mountains was more temperate than in the eastern declivity; but from recent observations this seems doubtful. Lewis and Clark, when they were on their journey to the source of the Missouri, wintered on the Mississippi to the west of the Alleghany mountains, and they experienced an unusual degree of cold, fully equal to what takes place in the same latitude to the east of this mountain range. On the other hand, the same travellers experienced on the coast of the Pacific ocean, where they wintered also, a much milder climate than if they had been in the same latitude farther to the east. The quantity of rain which falls in the United States, is greater than in Europe; but there are not so many rainy days. The animals found in the interior of the United States are the bear, distinguished into the different species of black, brown, and grizzly. These are mostly carnivorous, of great strength, and very ferocious. The other animals are, the deer of various species; the antelope, seen by Lewis and Clark; the wolf, which is very fierce; the fox, the martin, the weasel, the badger, the ermine, and the pole-cat; also a species of panther, very destructive to domestic animals, when hungry attacking large cattle, seizing them by the throat with its mouth, throwing them on its back, and running to the woods with incredible swiftness. There are numerous other animals of prey, namely, the mountain cat, the wild cat of various species, the Virginia opossum, the beaver, the otter, the squirrel of different species, the porcupine, the fox, the rabbit, the hare, &c.

The commerce of the United States, with the exception of occasional intervals of stagnation, chiefly from war, has been regularly increasing since the first establishment of the colonies, and now forms an important part of the general commerce of the world. The value of the exports from the United States amounted—

In 1790, to 20,265,156 dollars.

1796, to 67,364,697

1802, to 74,353,100

1807, to 154,344,160

1813, to 17,850,997

1814, to 6,927,441

1817, to 87,671,660

The following were the principal articles of export in 1817—Cotton, wheat, flour, and biscuit; tobacco, lumber, rice, pot and pearl ashes, Indian corn and meal, dried and pickled fish, beef, tallow, hides, live cattle, skins and tanned, and rice, pork, bacon, &c. horses and mules, naval stores, flax seed, whale oil (common) and bone, spermaceti oil and candles, butter and cheese. The industry of the United States, which has been long turned to manufactures, now produces almost all the more necessary articles of domestic use, and many of the finer manufactures. The mechanical trades are everywhere carried on; and in many branches of industry, manufactures have been established on an extensive scale, which are extremely flourishing, and fully supply the home consumption. Clothing and furniture has long been manufactured, both for use and ornament; and in the great staples of wool, cotton, flax, hemp, iron, glass, &c. manufactures have been established, which have fairly taken root, and which will be daily improving. The shipping of the United States has increased with their commerce. The following is an account of the tonnage at different periods, from 1790:—

In 1790, 400,640

1800, 942,413

1810, 1,494,788

1816, 1,372,218

The American trade is spread over all parts of the world. The public revenues of the United States arise chiefly from duties on the importation of foreign men, hardware, from the post-office, and from the sale of the public lands. There were, besides those sources of revenue, during the war, other duties laid on all goods and wares manufactured within the United States. The debt of the United States amounted in 1791 to 74,125,596 dollars; in 1800 it was reduced to 48,154,189; but, owing to the war, in 1817, to 112,107,000; and in 1818 was again reduced to 80,004,800. The revenue of the United States in 1821 was estimated at 16,119,000 dollars; and the expenditure in 1822 at less than 15,000,000 of dollars. The American navy, previous to the late war with Great Britain, was in a very inefficient state. In 1818 it consisted of three 74s; five 44 gun frigates; three 36s; two 32s; one 20; ten 16s; besides several of 16, 14, 12, and smaller ones; four 74s on the stocks, and others smaller. Navy-yards are established at Portsmouth, Charleston, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Washington, and Norfolk. The United States have a military academy at West Point, New York, and extensive establishments for the manufacture of arms at Springfield in Massachusetts, and at Harper's Ferry in Virginia. The United States, while they have each separate and independent legislatures for the administration of local concerns, are ruled in all matters of imperial policy, by two houses of legislature, the senate and the house of representatives, to which delegates are sent from all the different members of the American confederacy. The senate consists of two members from each state, chosen by the local legislature for six years; while the house of representatives is chosen by the people for two years. The right of voting is in some of the states universal, in others it is restricted to such as pay a certain amount of taxes, or rent a tenement of a certain value. Another great and essential distinction of the American government is, that the first magistrate of the state is chosen every fifth year for this great office, by the free and unbiased voice of the people. In the European governments, it is not supposed safe to allow the prize of sovereignty to be contested by rival candidates; and the highest rank and power in the state is accordingly fixed in one family, by the principle of hereditary right; but the American constitution recognises no claim but that of merit; and the highest office of first magistrate in the republic, is given accordingly to him who is the most worthy of it. An able and wise government is the necessary result of this popular choice, and the vigour thus infused at the source, naturally pervades all the inferior parts of the system. In the United States there is no national establishment of religion, every one being left to support that form of religion which is agreeable to him, by his own voluntary contributions. Nor are there any exclusive tests to be taken, as qualifications for political access, every American citizen, of whatever religious profession, being capable of holding any office in the state. The great body of the people profess the Christian religion, and are divided into all the various sects and denominations to which the Christian religion has given rise. It is one great principle of the American government to give every possible degree of encouragement to the diffusion among its subjects of literature and science, well aware that it is among an enlightened people that the popular institutions of a free government can take root and flourish. In all the vacant lands which have been surveyed and offered for sale, an express reservation is made by the state, of a certain proportion of every township, for the endowment of schools and colleges, where the rising generation may have ample opportunities of instruction. There are, accordingly, in all parts of the United States, universities for the instruction of youth, as well as schools and other inferior seminaries. Considerable libraries have also been accumulated for the great end of public instruction. In the United States the progress of population is much quicker than in the old and long settled countries of Europe. The fertile and unoccupied countries which lie westward, afford an ample expanse, on which the overflowing population may freely spread itself. In 1790 the population of the United States amounted to 3,929,396, including 697,097 slaves; in 1800 to 5,306,006, including 896,840 slaves; in 1810 to 7,239,003, including 1,191,301 slaves. According to an act of the legislature, the population of the United States must be enumerated every 10 years. It now amounts to above 10,000,000. The principal towns are, New York, containing, in 1810, 90,373 inhabitants; Philadelphia, 92,247; Baltimore, 46,555; Boston, 33,250; Charleston, 24,711; New Orleans, 17,242; Salem, 12,613; Providence, 10,071; Richmond, 9,35; Albany, 9356; Norfolk, 9103; Washington, 8208; Newark, 8008; Newport, 7007; Newburyport, 7037; Alexandria, 7227; Portland, 7109; New Haven, 6967; Portsmouth, 6984; Nantucket, 6807; New Brunswick, 6312; Hartford, 6003; Gloucester, 5943; Marblehead, 5900; New Bedford, 5751; Peterburgh, 5600; Lancaster, 5405; and Savannah, 5195. In the United States, the circulation is carried on in a great degree by a paper currency. The number of banks throughout the United States is computed to amount to above 400. In 1816 the present United States' bank was established, with a capital of 25,000,000 dollars. The principal bank is at Philadelphia; and there are branches throughout the country. The colonisation of North America originated either in the religious persecutions carried on in England against the Puritans and other sectaries, or in the visionary schemes of adventurers, who set out to the new world in quest of settlements. It was the former cause which peopled the colony of Virginia; and it was from the latter that the colonies of New England drew their origin; and these, the one in the south and the other in the north, may be considered as the original and parent colonies. They struggled long with the hardships and difficulties incident to all new establishments on remote and barbarous shores; and at times they were so much reduced by sickness and disease, and the attacks of the Indians, that it was resolved to abandon the settlement of the country as impracticable. All these impediments, however, being gradually overcome by patient perseverance and industry, the colonies at last began to flourish, and to increase both in wealth and population. They continued to make a rapid progress in improvement, and in all the arts of civil life; and at the peace of 1763, they had risen to a state of great prosperity. It was about this period that they became involved in disputes with the mother country. These disputes increased, until they produced a war, which was terminated by the peace of 1762, when Great Britain acknowledged her former colonies as an independent power, under the title of the United States. After an interval of considerable agitation, the American army was disbanded, and the articles of the American constitution agreed upon. Under this constitution the United States continued to flourish, until they were again involved in the late wars that raged between Great Britain and France, and at last took up arms for the vindication of their rights as a neutral power. This war was terminated in 1814, after the general peace which had taken place among the European powers.

UNITY, a township of the United States, in Cheshire county, New Hampshire, 83 miles N. W. Boston. Population 1044.

UNKEI, a town of the Prussian province of the Lower Rhine, 25 miles S. S. E. Cologne.

UNNA, a considerable river of European Turkey, which falls into the Save at Cazbeza.

UNNA, a town of Prussian Westphalia. Population 2400.

UNST, the most northern of the Shetland Isles, being situated in 61. 12. N. lat. From south to north it is about 10 miles long, and in some places 7 miles broad. Area 40 square miles. The general aspect is diversified into hill and dale, with several small lakes; and the arable land is disposed in strips by the shore. Altogether it amounts to about 1875 acres, under crops of bear, black oats, and potatoes. The ling, cod, and tusk fishery, is prosecuted by the inhabitants; and they make about 10 tons of kelp annually. The exports, besides the fish and the kelp, are butter, beef, tallow, and a considerable quantity of soft and warm woollen stockings; the imports chiefly tea, sugar, and wines. Unst forms a parish of itself, which, in 1831, contained 300 inhabitants.

UNSTRUT, a river of Germany, which joins the Saale.

UNTERBEN, a town and bailiwick of the Swiss canton of Bern, on the Aar, 23 miles S. S. W. Lucerne.

UNTERWALDEN, a canton almost in the centre of Switzerland, to the east of Bern, and south of Lucerne. It is one of the smallest in the republic, containing only 300 square miles, with 22,000 inhabitants. It consists of four valleys, covered with meadows and pasture lands, and surrounded by the lofty Alps, which rise to various heights, from 3000 to 10,000 feet. Pasture being the chief occupation, the exports consist of cattle, hides, cheese, butter, tallow; the imports of corn, wine, and various manufactures, there being hardly a weaver, hatter, or potter in the canton.

UPHOE, a hamlet of England, in the parish of Lavendon, Buckinghamshire.

UPHOLLAND, a township of England, in Lancashire, 3 miles from Wigan.

UPLAND, a village of Scotland, in Renfrewshire.

UPLAND, a hamlet of England, North Riding of Yorkshire.

UPLAND, a province of Middle Sweden, bounded by the gulf of Bothnia, the Baltic, the lake of Malar, and Westmannland. It consists of an extensive plain, little elevated above the level of the sea, and in general fertile. Area 500 English square miles; population 230,000.

UPLEADON, two hamlets of England, in Gloucestershire and Herefordshire.

UPLEATHAM, a township of England, in the North Riding of Yorkshire.

UPPINGHAM, a neat and well built market town of England, in Rutlandshire. The church is an ancient Gothic structure. There is an hospital and a free school. Population 1630. 6 miles S. Oakham.

UPSAL, an ancient town of Sweden, province of Uppland. It is situated on the small river Sala, which divides it into two parts, and communicates with the lake of Malar. Most of the private houses are of wood; but the public buildings are of stone or brick. The cathedral is a large structure. The university of Upsal was founded in the 13th century. The other objects worthy of attention are the observatory, the botanical garden, the cabinets of natural history and mineralogy, the royal castle and gardens, and the residence of the archbishop. Population 5000. 35 miles N. Stockholm.

UPSALA, in Sweden, formerly the chief town of the province of Uppland, now an considerable place. 3 miles N. Upsal.

UPSALL, UPSALL CASTLE, UPSHAM, and UPSLAND, hamlets of England, Upsall in Essex; the others in the North Riding of Yorkshire.

UPSTAXEY, a hamlet of England, county of Kent, on the river Stour.

UPPROX, the name of various townships, parishes, and hamlets, in England.

UPTON UPON SEVERN, a neat and well built market town of England, in Worcestershire, on the Severn, over which there is a stone bridge of six arches. The church, built in 1758, is a handsome structure, with a square tower. There is a charity school for 16 girls. Population 2318. 10 miles S. Worcester.

UPWALTMAN, a village of England, in the county of Sussex, near Chichester.

URACH, a town of Germany, in Württemberg, on the Enns. Population 1700.

URANA, a river of South America, which runs into the Caribbean sea.

URANA, a post township of the United States, and capital of Champaign county, Ohio. It is a flourishing town, and contains a court-house, a jail, a Methodist meeting-house, &c. Houses 120.

URBANA, a post township of the United States, in Middlesex county, Virginia.

URNINO, a town of Italy, in the States of the Church, capital of the delegation of the same name. Population 4800. 40 miles N. by W. Ancona.

URCHAY, a river of Scotland, which falls into Loch Awe.

URDINGEN, a small fortified town of the Prussian province of Cleves and Berg, on the Rhine. Population 2200.

URK, or YOUNG, a river of England, in Yorkshire, one of the head branches of the Ouse.

URJEL, a strong town of Spain, in Catalonia, on the Segre. It has manufactures of linen and cotton. Population 3200. 78 miles N. N. W. Barcelona.

UR, a canton in the central part of Switzerland, bounded N. by the canton of Unterwalden, E. by the country of the Grisons. Its superficial extent is 640 square miles; population 14,000, being thinly scattered amidst bleak and barren mountains, some of which attain an elevation of 8000, 9000, or 10,000 feet.

URIDON, a hamlet of England, in Wiltshire, near Chippenham.

URJE, a considerable river of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire, which falls into the Don at the royal burgh of Inverury.

URNASCH, a large village and commune of Switzerland, canton of Appenzel, on the Urnsch. Population 2600.

URRIS, URRIS and LOWES, two villages of Switzerland, canton of the Valais.

URR, or ORR, a river of Scotland, in Kirkcubrightshire, which enters the Solway frith.

URRIS, a river of Ireland, in the county of Wexford, which runs into the Slaney.

URSEL, a town of the Netherlands, in East Flanders. Population 2100.

URUGUAY, a province or extent of country of South America, bounded N. by the province of Guaira in the government of Paraguay, S. by the mouth of the river La Plata, E. by the province and captainship of Rey in Brazil, and W. by the river Parana. Its length from north-east to south-west is somewhat more than 300 leagues, and its width from east to west about 130, although in some parts it is narrower. It is divided by the river of its name into east and west.

URUGUAY, a large, abundant, and navigable river of the province and government of Paraguay. It rises in lat. 26. 30. S., and collecting various other streams, traverses a vast extent of country to the south-east. Its length, in a direct line from its source to its mouth, is more than 620 miles, and it receives the waters of the Papiri, Ibicuiti, Tembey, Tibiquari, Ibicapiti, Negro, and others, as far as lat. 34. S. It enters the river La Plata, near Buenos Ayres, to the west-north-west of the colony of Sacramento, being joined a little below this place by the immense tributary stream of the Parana, which serves also to swell the river La Plata.

URUMEA, an extensive lake of Aderbiljan, in Persia, about 500 miles in circuit.

URUMEA, a very ancient city of Persia, on the south-western bank of the lake to which it gives name. 90 miles S. S. W. Tabreez.

URAN, a fishing village of Scotland, Forfarshire, 3 miles S. W. Montrose.

URKHOE, an island of Prussia, in Pomerania, formed by the Baltic and several inland waters, in particular the Great and Little Haff. Area 160 square miles. Population between 11,000 and 12,000.

URHANT, or ORHANT, a small island on the north-west coast of France, department of Finisterre, 10 miles in circuit, with a surface of 16 square miles. Population 1700.

URUSCHAI, an inland town of European Turkey, in Rumania, 70 miles S. S. W. Belgrade. Population 6000.

URK, a market and borough town of England, in Monmouthshire, on the Urk, at its confluence with the Birdlin. The remains of the castle stand on an abrupt eminence to the east of the river. The church was originally built cruciform, in the manner of a cathedral; but the building has since undergone many alterations. Urk has no trade, and only a small manufactory of Japan or Postypool ware. Population 989. 14 miles S. W. Monmouth.

UR, a river which rises in Wales, in Brecknockshire, and enters the Bristol channel.

URMAN, a town of European Russia, government of Tambov, on the Uman. Population 2500.

URMEL, a town of France, department of the Creuse, 40 miles E. by N. Uzerche. Population 3100.

URASOLIE, a town of European Russia, government of Simbirsk, on the Umolka.

URATITZ, a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Pop. 2000.

URATZ, a village of Switzerland, canton of Zurich. Population 3200.

URATICA (the ancient Eumimo), a small island in the Mediterranean, belonging to Sicily. It is fertile in wine, olives, and cotton; also in wheat. Population 1300. 43 miles N. Palermo.

URTING, VOLGA, or THE GREAT, a city of European Russia, government of Volodga, at the confluence of the Suchona and the Jug, which unite here, and form the Dwina. It has two cathedrals, and a number of churches or chapels, but most of its houses are of wood. It is a mart of the trade between the frozen regions of the north and the temperate provinces in the south. Its principal traffic is in corn and furs; also in fish, and in the furs and tea of China. Population 12,000. 410 mi S. E. St. Petersburg.

U'RU'RU, a town of European Russia, on the Volga, 118 miles E. Novgorod. Population 2000.

U'WONAN, GREAT and LITTLE, adjoining hamlets of England, county of Durham.

UTAWAS RIVER, a river in North America, which forms the boundary between the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, and falls into the St. Lawrence in the vicinity of Montreal.

UTER, a town of Italy, province of Nicosia, 18 miles E. by N. Nicosia. Pop. 1800.

UTICA, a port village of the United States, in Oneida county, New York, on the Mohawk. It is handsomely laid out, and well built, and contains five churches, an academy, a free school, a court-house, three banks, six manufacturing offices, several manufactories, and has an extensive trade. Population 1700. 53 miles W. by N. Albany.

UTIEL, a town of Spain, province of La Mancha, 58 miles S. E. Cuenca. Pop. 4000.

UTRECHT, one of the Dutch provinces, bounded W. by Holland, N. by the Zuyder Zee, and E. by Gelderland. Its surface is level, with the exception of the south quarter. It affords good pasture. Area 490 square miles. Population 110,000.

UTRECHT, a well known city of the Netherlands, and capital of the preceding province, on a branch of the Rhine called the Old Rhine, by which it is divided into two parts. The position of Utrecht is healthy. Nothing can surpass the beauty of the approaches to the town, particularly that from Amsterdam, which consists of a broad avenue, bordered with rows of trees. Utrecht is surrounded with an earthen mound and moat: it is of a form nearly square, and, exclusive of the suburbs, it is about three miles in circuit. Its aspect is antique. The houses are built chiefly of brick. The streets are of a tolerable width, and intersected by canals. Of the public edifices, the most remarkable is the cathedral, a considerable part of which is now in ruins, but the tower still remains entire. Its height is said to be 464 feet. The other churches are numerous. The town-house is a good structure. The other objects worthy of notice are the charitable establishments, hospitals, &c. The beautiful public walk called the Mall, outside the walls, is upwards of a mile in length, and bordered with a triple row of trees. The park is likewise a very agreeable walk. The university of Utrecht was founded in 1629, and has professors in the classical languages, mathematics, medicine, divinity, and law. It has a library, an anatomical theatre, a botanical garden, a cabinet of natural history, and an observatory. The town likewise possesses a gallery of paintings, schools for the fine arts, and several valuable private libraries and other collections. It is remarkable as the place where, in 1713, was concluded the well known treaty of peace between the allies and French. Population 35,000. 16 miles S. E. Amsterdam.

UTRINA, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, on a very steep eminence, the foot of which shows the Carbonel. It has two churches, and eight monasteries or religious houses. It is surrounded by a wall, and has a citadel. Pop. 9000. 14 miles E. S. E. Seville.

UTTOXETER, a market town of England, in Staffordshire, near the river Dove, over which is a noble stone bridge. It is well built, having a market-place in the centre, with three streets branching from it. Uttoxeter and its vicinity, particularly the latter, abound with iron forges. The church is an ancient edifice. Population of parish 4652. 13 miles N. E. Stafford.

UXBRIDGE, a township of England, on the Coln, Middlesex. The town consists of one street, nearly a mile in length. The church or chapel of ease is a good building; near it is a very commodious market-house. In the neighbourhood are many corn-mills, giving a great supply of flour to the metropolis. Population 2750. 16 miles from London.

UXBRIDGE, a post township of the United States, in Worcester county, Massachusetts, 49 miles S. W. Boston. Population 1404.

UXO, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 33 miles N. by E. Valencia. Population 2800.

U'LA, two small pasture islands in Shetland.

U'EL, a town of France, department of the Cotes du Nord. Population 1700.

U'ELACRE, a town of France, department of the Correz. Population 2400.

U'ERS, a town of France, department of the Gard. 12 miles N. Nimes. Pop. 6400.

U'ERNAL, a town of Switzerland, not far from the eastern extremity of the lake of Zurich, 23 miles S. E. Zurich.

V.

VA, a river of New Granada, which enters the Guaviare.

VAA, a town of France, department of the Marne. Population 1600.

VABRES DE SEVERALS, a town of France, department of the Tarn. Population 1700.

VACH, a town of Germany, on the Werra. Population 1500.

VACNE, or Cow's Island, an island ten miles long, about 12 miles from the south coast of Hispaniola.

VACNEY, a hamlet of England, in the parish of Cranley, county of Surrey.

VADONCHET, a town of the south of India, province of Alabar. Long. 75. 45. E. Lat. 11. 34. N.

VADO, a town of Italy, in Genoa, 27 miles W. by S. Genoa. Population 3040.

VAILL, a manufacturing place of the Netherlands, 8 miles W. Aix la Chapelle. Population 2500.

VAINKY, a town of France, department of the Vosges. Population 1800.

VAIRRIESEN, a town of Germany, on the Elbe, 11 miles N. W. Stutgard. Pop. 2790.

VAILLAC, a small inland town of France, department of the Lot. Population 2000.

VATSON, a town of France, department of the Vaucluse, near the small river Auzeze. Population 2200.

VAT DE PENWAY, a town of Spain, province of La Mancha. It has manufactures of wool in stuffs and soap. Population 8000. 90 miles S. E. Toledo.

Vaudsa, a canton in the south of Switzerland, bounded by the cantons of Uri, Bern, and Friburg, and in another direction by Solothurn and the lake of Geneva. It lies in the direction of north-east and south-west, and is of an oblong form, its length being about 100 miles, and its medium breadth from 25 to 36. It is the largest valley in Switzerland, watered in its whole extent by the Rhone, and bordered on the north, as on the south, by the loftiest mountains in Europe. Pop. 11,000. The capital is the small town of Sion.

VALPARI, a town of European Russia, government of Novgorod, on a beautiful and romantic lake, 170 miles S. S. E. Petersburg. Population 3100.

VALDEMORO, a town of Spain, 13 miles S. Madrid. Population 2800.

VALDIVIA, a province of Chili, on the sea coast, on both sides of the great river Valdivia.

VALDIVIA, the capital of the above province, a celebrated city, and strong fortress, on the river of its name, 3 leagues from the sea. It was founded in the year 1551, by the conqueror Pedro de Valdivia, who gave it his name, and obtained immense sums of gold from its vicinity. In 1590 it was taken and plundered by the Araucanians, the native inhabitants of the country. It was again rebuilt and fortified by the Spaniards. It has since suffered severely from fire, which has twice almost entirely destroyed it. The harbour is situated in a beautiful bay, formed by the river, and is the safest, the strongest from its natural position, and the most capacious of any of the ports in the South sea. The town contains a college built by the Jesuits, several convents, a parochial church, and a royal hospital. 103 miles S. La Concepcion. Long. 86. 5. W. Lat. 40. 5. S.

VALDIVIA, a river of Chili, which runs into the Pacific ocean, at the above place.

VALEDIA, a small seaport of the province of Dugessella, in Morocco, with a spacious natural harbour, now of little importance.

VALENCA, a small town and fortress of Portugal, on the Minho, 50 miles N. Oporto. Population 1000.

VALENCAY, a town of France, department of the Indre. Population 2500.

VALENCE, a town of France, department of the Drome, on the Rhone. It is old, ill built, and irregular, with narrow, winding, and dirty streets. The cathedral is an ancient building; but neither it nor the episcopal palace are distinguished for their architecture. The case is otherwise with the Gothic facade of an old castle at this place, which is said to be one of the finest specimens of that style in France. Its manufactures comprise silk, cotton, and leather. Population 8000. 12 miles S. W. Grenoble.

VALENCE D'AUDOUIN, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Population 2200.

VALENCIA, a large province in the east of Spain, extending in an oblong form from north to south with the sea on one side, and the Castilian provinces on the other. It lies between 1 to 37. 52. and 40. 50. N., and is in length no less than 250 miles, but its breadth seldom exceeds 50. Its area is about 8000 square miles; its population is stated at nearly 1,200,000. Valencia contains in some parts a number of mountains, but in others its surface is composed of plains and fertile valleys. It is watered by three great rivers, the Xucar, the Segura, and the Guadalquivir; also by the Muriedro, the Palemona, and the Megares. The temperature of the province is mild. In minerals, with the exception of iron, this province is not particularly rich. The products are grapes, olives, figs, mulze, wheat, wine, silk, flax, hemp, rice, &c.

VALENCIA, a large city in the east of Spain, the capital of the above province, 3 miles from the sea, in an open plain, on the Guadalquivir. It is still surrounded by a rampart, and made a considerable resistance to the French in the latter part of 1811. Its citadel is small and ill fortified, and does not even command the town. Population 100,000 in the city, and between 15,000 and 18,000 in the villages and environs. The interior, far from meriting the eulogium of Mariana, or the flattering epithet of Valencia la Bella, consists of narrow and winding streets, crossed by a multiplicity of lanes, in many of which there is no thoroughfare. Of the different public walks, the chief is that which extends along the banks of the river. Valencia contains a number of churches and convents, with several hospitals. It has a great number of public buildings, less remarkable for elegance than for antiquity and profuse decoration. The ancient palace, called El Real, is now the residence of the captain-general. The cathedral is a large but irregular Gothic building. The other remarkable structures are, a Moorish mosque; a church built for Christian worship in the time of the Goths; and several modern edifices, such as the college of Pio Quinto, the convent of the Carmelites, the lodge or place of meeting for the commercial court, the custom-house, the college of the patrimch, &c. The university of this city was founded in 1470, and is on an extensive scale, but the course of study is antiquated. Of manufactures, the only extensive one is of silk; but there are, on a small scale, fabrics of leather, woollens, cordage, and lace. In 1811 it was attacked by Suchet, and, after a vigorous siege and bombardment, it surrendered in January 1812. 170 miles E. S. E. Madrid.

VALENCIA, a city of South America, government of the Caraccas, and province of Venezuela, situated half a league west of the lake of the same name. The houses are in general low and irregular, though some of the streets are broad and well built. The parish church, and a handsome square in which it stands, form the principal ornaments of the city. In 1801, a church was built in the east extremity of the town. The inhabitants are commercial and industrious. Valencia, with the towns of Victoria and Barquisimeto, suffered very much from the earthquake which overthrew Caraccas. La Guayra, Merida, and several villages, on the 26th of March 1812. Pop. 8000. 77 miles S. W. Caraccas. Long. 61. 15. W. Lat. 10. 9. N.

VALENCIA, a beautiful lake of South America, in the government of Caraccas, and province of Venezuela, which stretches 13 leagues from E. N. E. to W. S. W., and its greatest breadth is 4. It has an oblong form, and is 1 league from Valencia, in a valley surrounded with mountains.

VALENCIA DE ALICANTARA, a small but strong town of Spain, in Estremadura.

VALENCIENNES, a fortified town of French Flanders, on the Scheldt. The form of the town is circular; its streets are narrow and crooked. The public square, the church of Notre Dame, the town-hall, the artillery-house, are deserving of attention. The chief manufactures are lace of great fineness; cambric, gauze, and linen stuffs. It was often taken and retaken during the revolutionary war. Pop. 17,000. 27 miles S. E. Lille.

VALENCIENNES, a town of France, department of the Lower Alps. Population 3400.

VALENTIA, an island in the Atlantic, near the south-west coast of Ireland, about 5 miles long, and 2 broad, south of Dingle bay.

VALENTIA ISLAND, an island off the coast of Abyssinia, about 25 miles long, and from 2 to 6 broad.

VALENTIGNY, a town of France, on the Garonne, 55 miles S. W. Toulouse. Population 1000.

VALENZA, a town of Italy, province of Alessandria, on an eminence near the Po. It contains several churches and other good things. Pop. 7000. 40 miles E. by S. Turin.

VALENZA, a town of Spain, province of - Population 3700.

VALENTY, St., a seaport of France, on the Somme, near its mouth, 50 miles N. W. Amiens. Population 3200.

VALENTY EN CAUX, St., a town of France, department of the Lower Seine, on the shores of the Channel. Population 5000. 33 miles N. by W. Rouen.

VALENTY, a town of France, 14 miles S. E. Nantes. Population 3100.

VALETTA, LA, the capital of the island of Malta, stands on the east side of the island, in Long. 14. 30. 45. E. Lat. 35. 53. 4. N. It consists of five parts, which are distinguished by particular names, and are often considered as separate towns: 1st, Citta Nuova, or La Valetta properly so called, built in 1666. It is situated on the side of a hill which runs out into the sea, forming a peninsula; and, besides its own fortifications, is defended by the castles of St Elmo, Ricasoli, and Floriana. 2d, Citta Vittoriosa, situated on a small tongue of land between two harbours called Marza and Marza Murzet, with a fort at the extremity, which defends the entrance into both. 3d, Senjcia, or the Isle of St Michael, also situated on a peninsula, and separated from Citta Vittoriosa by a canal called Porto delle Galere. 4th, Barmola, a small place of about 700 houses, situated in front of Senjcia, and surrounded by, 5th, Cottonera, which forms a kind of suburb to it. This last contains the castle of Santa Margaretha. Of these, Citta Nuova, Barmola, and Cottonera, contain in all about 23,000 inhabitants; Citta Vittoriosa about 4000, and Senjcia between 4000 and 5000. The situation of La Valetta is one of the finest in the world: the appearance of the town from the sea is beautiful, and the interior corresponds. The streets are regular, and well paved with lava. The quays and other public places contain large, and in some respects elegant buildings. The great drawback on La Valetta, until of late, was the want of cleanliness in the streets. Malta abounds in churches; and its capital contains no less than 20, great and small, exclusive of the cathedral. The other public buildings are, the residence of the grand master, now occupied by his successor, the governor of the island; the house in which the knights of the seven different nations composing the order of Malta had their respective halls of meeting. Next to these come the town-house, the Castellania, where the courts of justice are held, the arsenal, and a building situated in Citta Vittoriosa, formerly occupied by the Inquisition; The Jesuits' college, formerly taught by that order, is still a seminary, and serves for the education of Catholic clergy; but part of the building is converted to very different purposes, viz. an exchange and small theatre. The library of the knights amounts to 40,000 volumes. Charitable institutions, connected as they were with the objects of the order, were long on a liberal footing at La Valetta. The hospital of St John received between 100 and 300 patients. But the funds for the support of this institution were seized by the French, and the building was afterwards given by the British government, to the medical department of the civil staff. Here are also three other hospitals. La Valetta is, from its excellent harbour, of great importance as a naval station and a place of trade. On the south side of Città Nuova is one of the finest bays in the world. This beautiful basin is divided into five distinct harbours, all equally safe, and each capable of containing a number of vessels. The entrance is hardly a quarter of a mile wide, and is commanded on each side by very strong batteries. It is also fronted by a quadruple battery. In the centre is a small island, on which is a lazaretto and a castle. The harbour on the other side would be highly prized in any other part of the world, but is here used for fishing vessels and ships performing quarantine. The fortifications of the town of La Valetta are also of extraordinary strength. The trade of La Valetta is very considerable, partly as an entrepot for intercourse with the Barbary ports, partly as an intermediate station for the Indian Isles and the Levant. Since 1817 it has been, like Gibraltar, entitled to carry on mercantile intercourse with the East Indies.

VAREZZO, a town of Austrian Italy, government of Milan, on the Minchia, 14 miles N. Mantua. Population 4000.

VALGRANO, a town of Italy, in Piedmont. Population 1600.

VALKEI, a town of European Russia, on the Masha. It has five churches. Population 9300. 27 miles W. by S. Charkov.

VALLADOLID, an inland province of Spain, forming part of the kingdom of Leon, and lying between 41. 10. and 42. 30. of N. lat. This province lies in general high, and its soil is sandy and barren. It is traversed by the Duero, which is joined by the Pisuegra, the Esla, the Arlancon, and other rivers. Area 3400 square miles. Population 100,000.

VALLADOLID, an ancient city in the interior of Spain, in Leon, on the Esgueva, which divides it into two, and on the larger stream of the Pisuegra, which bathes its walls. It was formerly a town of great importance; but at present half finished edifices are almost the only indication of its ancient splendour. The streets are dirty, and many of the houses in decay. There are, however, two squares, one of which, the Plaza Mayor, contains some good buildings. The cathedral, begun by Philip II. has never been finished. The monastery of San Benito is a handsome building; and the church of St Paul contains some good sculptures and paintings. The town has six gates, one large bridge, and a number of small ones; also several churches and hospitals. The manufactures are silks, coarse woollens, and earthenware. Population 20,000. 100 miles N. N. W. Madrid.

VALLADOLID, one of the twelve intendancies into which the kingdom of Mexico is now divided, bounded N. by the Rio de Lerma, which, farther east, takes the name of the Rio Grande de Santiago; on the E. and N. E. it joins the intendancy of Mexico, N. the intendancy of Guanajuato, and W. that of Guadalajara. The greatest length of this province, in a direction from south-south-east to north-north-east, is 78 leagues. It is washed by the Pacific ocean for an extent of coast of more than 38 leagues. Situated on the western declivity of the cordillera of Anahuac, intersected with hills and delightful valleys, which exhibit to the eye of the traveller an uncommon appearance under the torrid zone, that of extensive and well watered meadows, the province of Valladolid in general enjoys a mild and temperate climate, exceedingly favourable to the health of the inhabitants. In extent Valladolid is nearly equal to Ireland. It contains three cities, three towns, 263 villages, 205 parishes, and 326 farms. The imperfect enumeration of 1793 gave a total population of 209,314, of whom about 80,000 were whites, and 120,000 Indians. Population in 1803, 376,100.

VALLADOLID, or MICHUACAN, an episcopal city of Mexico, and capital of the intendancy of Valladolid, on a river well stored with fish, near the west side of a lake, about 120 miles west of Mexico. It is adorned with a fine cathedral, and some handsome houses of rich Spaniards. It is elevated 6396 feet; and at this height, and under 19. 42. of latitude, snow has been seen to fall in its streets. Population 18,000.

VALLADOLID, a small town of Mexico, province of Merida or Yucatan.

VALLATA, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples. Population 3800.

VALLE DE MAIZE, EL, a town of Mexico, province of San Luis Potosi. It has a large square, with extensive well built edifices, and some handsome churches.

VALLE ROTONDA, a town of Italy, 30 miles N. N. W. Capua. Population 2800.

VALLE E SPIO, a town of Italy, in Naples. Population 2400.

VALLENDAM, a town of the Prussian province of the Lower Rhine, government of Coblenz, near the Rhine. Population 2500.

VALLERAUGUE, a town of France, 40 miles N. W. Nimes. Population 3200.

VALLIERE, ST., a town of France, department of the Rhone, on the Rhone. Population 1600.

VALLIQUIERVILLE, a town of France, department of the Lower Seine. Pop 1700.

VALLOIRES, a town of Savoy, province of Maurienne. Population 1900.

VALLON, a town of France, department of the Ardèche. Population 1800.

VALLORBE, or VAL D'ORBE, a village of Switzerland, Pays de Vaud. Pop 2700.

VALLS, a town of Spain, in Catalonia. It has a church and an infirmary, with several monasteries and poor-houses. Population 9000. 8 miles N. Tarragona.

VALMY, a village of France, department of the Marne, 8 miles W. by S. St Menchould.

VALOGNES, a town of France, in Normandy, in a valley on the small river Merderet. It contains an hospital, with several churches. Several Roman relics have been found here. The manufactures are woollens, linen, leather, glass, and pottery. Population 7000. 10 miles S. E. Cherbourg.

VALPARAISO, a city and port of Chili, province of Quillota, on a bay in the South Pacific ocean. It was formerly a very small village; but in process of time, the excellence of the harbour drew many foreign vessels to it, and the merchants built themselves houses, since which it has gradually increased, and is now large and populous. Valparaiso has a parish church, a convent of Franciscans, and one of Augustines, but very few monks; and the churches of the convents are small and badly built. It is inhabited chiefly by whites, mestizoes, and mulattoes. 225 miles N. Concepcion. Long. 71. 44. 30. W. Lat. 33. 2. 38. S.

VALPERGA, a town of Piedmont, 16 miles N. Turin. Population 3500.

VARENAS, a town of France, 32 miles N. E. Avignon. Population 3000.

VALS, a town of France, department of the Ardeche. Population 2000.

VALTELINE, a lordship of Austrian Italy, in the government of Milan, now forming the greater part of the delegation or district of Sondrio. Area 1270 square miles. Population 81,000. It consists of a long valley, traversed by the Adda.

VALVERDE, a town of Spain, in Extremadura, 14 miles S. Badajoz. Population 1800.

VAN, a large and fortified city of Turkish Armenia, situated on a lake of the same name. It is surrounded with a good wall and a deep ditch, and has four gates. To the north of the city, on a high and perpendicular rock, stands the castle. This city is well built; the houses of stone and tile; the streets spacious and well paved. Population 50,000, two-thirds of which are Turks, and the remainder Kurds and Armenians. 160 miles S. E. Erzerum.

VANDAL, a small river of England, in Surrey, which runs into the Thames.

VANDERLIN ISLAND, one of Pellew's group of islands, on the coast of New Holland, gulf of Carpentaria.

VAN DIEMEN'S LAND, an island in the Southern ocean, separated from New Holland by a navigable canal called Bass's straits. The country was first discovered by Tasman in 1633. In 1773 it was visited by Captain Furneaux, and by Captain Cook in 1777; since which period it has been visited by different navigators. Among others, Bruni D'Entrecasteaux, the French rear-admiral, made the coast of Van Diemen's Land in 1792, and afterwards revisited it in 1793. This coast was afterwards visited by Lieutenants Bass and Flinders, who made a more ample survey of it, and also of the coasts of New Holland, than had ever been attempted by any preceding navigator. Since this period, several colonies have been sent from the original establishment made by the British at Port Jackson, to this island. In 1804 Hobart's Town was founded about 9 miles up the Derwent; and another settlement, namely, Launceston, was founded about 30 miles from the mouth of Port Dalrymple, and 130 miles in a straight line from Hobart's Town. Van Diemen's Land is situated between 40. 42. and 43. 43. S. lat., and between 145. 31. and 148. 22. E. long. It has not so discouraging and repulsive an appearance from the coast as New Holland. Many fine tracts of land are found on the very borders of the sea, and the interior is almost invariably possessed of a soil admirably adapted to all the purposes of civilised man. This island is upon the whole mountainous, and consequently abounds in streams. Of these, the Derwent, Huon, and Tamar, rank in the first class. There is perhaps no island in the world of the same size which can boast of so many fine harbours: the best are the Derwent, Port D'Arcy, Macquarie harbour, Port Dalrymple, and Oyster bay. There is almost a perfect resemblance between the animals and vegetables found here and in New Holland. In the animals, in particular, there is scarcely any variation. The native dog, indeed, is unknown here; but there is an animal of the panther tribe in its stead, which, though not found in such numbers as the native dog is in New Holland, commits dreadful havoc among the flocks. Kangaroos are most abundant. In the feathered tribes of the two islands, there is scarcely any diversity; of this the wattle bird, which is about the size of a snipe, and considered a very great delicacy, is the only instance that can be cited. The climate is equally healthy, and much more congenial to the European constitution than that of Port Jackson. In this island, as in New Holland, there is every diversity of soil; but certainly, in proportion to the surface of the two countries, this contains comparatively much less of an indifferent quality. The Indian corn, or maize, is not cultivated here, the climate being too cold. Barley and oats, however, arrive at great perfection. The wheat is of much superior description to the wheat grown in any of the districts at Port Jackson. The fruits reared here are the apple, currant, gooseberry, and indeed all the fruits not suited to a warm climate. The two settlements on this island are in a very bad state of defence, having but two companies of troops for the garrison and protection of them both. They have consequently been subjected for many years past, by a handful of runaway convicts, who have endangered the person and property of every one who has cyphered himself hostile to their enormities. These wretches are known in the colony by the name of bush-rangers. The British colonies in Van Diemen's Land have of late received a great accession of settlers from Great Britain. According to the last accounts, they were gradually improving, and assuming more and more the appearance of a civilized community. From an account of a tour of inspection by Governor Macquarie, it appears that in July 1821, the population of the island amounted to 6372, exclusive of the civil and military officers; and that it contained 22,838 head of horned cattle, 182,408 sheep, 421 horses, and 10,683 acres of land in cultivation.

VANDOEUVRE, a town of France, department of the Aube, 22 miles E. S. E. Troyes. Population 1700.

VANDERVALE, a town of the United States, in Kentucky, on the Ohio. It has 20 log-houses, and some salt-works.

VANNES, a town of France, in Brittany, the chief place of the department of the Morbihan, at the bottom of a bay, interspersed with islets, about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles from the sea. Its houses are old fashioned, and its streets narrow, with the exception of two. The only public buildings are the cathedral, the hospital, the old castle, and the churches. The only manufacture is of coarse woollens. Population 11,000. 70 miles W. by N. Nantes.

VANS, a town of France, department of the Ardèche. Population 1700.

VAR, a river of France, which falls into the Mediterranean not far from Antibes.

VAR, a department of France, forming the south-east extremity of the kingdom, and bordered by the country of Nice on the east, by the Mediterranean on the south, and by a part of the Alps on the north. Branches of these mountains extend into the north and north-east divisions of this department; so that it is in general rugged and uneven, the only extensive levels being along the coast. The rivers are the Var, Verdon, Esteron, and Artubi, along with a number of smaller streams. The climate varies according to elevation. This department forms part of Provence. Area 2900 square miles. Population 225,000. It contains no town of consequence except Toulon.

VARADES, a town of France, near the Loire, 8 miles E. Ancenis. Pop. 3000.

VARELLO, a town of Italy, in the Piedmontese states, at the confluence of the Mastellone with the Sesia, 87 miles N. N. E. Turin. Population 3300.

VARALLVA, SRENYER, a town of Hungary, on the Sazonyer. Population 3000.

VARANAN, (the Arins of the ancients), a large river of European Turkey, which falls into the gulf of Salonica.

VAREL, a town of Germany, 17 miles N. Oldenburg. Population 2600.

VARETTE, a town of France, on the Allier. Population 2100.

VARENNES, a town of France, department of the Meuse, on the Aire, 160 miles E. N. E. Paris. Population 1500.

VARENNE, a town of France, department of the Upper Marne. Population 1300.

VARENT, St., a town of France, department of the Two Seines. Population 1200.

VARESE, a town of Austrian Italy, department of Milan, on the Verbano, 27 miles W. N. W. Milan. Population 7000.

VARINAN, a province of the Caracass, bounded N. by the provinces of Maracáibo and Venemela, E. by the plains of Caracass and the Orinoco, W. by Merida and New Granada, and S. by Juan de los Rios, or Casanare.

VARINAR, capital of the above province, about 500 miles S. E. Caracass. It has one parish church and an hospital. Population 6000. Lat. 7. 40 N.

VARNA, a large town of European Turkey, in Bulgaria, at the bottom of a bay of the Black sea, at the mouth of the river Varna. It is surrounded with walls, and defended by an old castle, with massive towers. It has twelve mosques, and 150 Greek churches. Pop. 16,000, composed of Greeks, Turks, and Armenians. Its harbour is large and commodious. 150 miles N. by W. Constantinople.

VARNITZA, a small town of Lower Moldavia, near Bender.

VARS, a town of France, 6 miles N. Angoulême. Population 1700.

VARZY, a town of France, department of the Nièvre. Population 2100.

VAR, a hamlet of Brazil, in the province of Rio Janeiro, a very short distance to the north of Villa de Principe. It was visited by Mr Mawe in 1800.

VAS ANTON, an island of Brazil, in the province of Pernambuco.

VASARIELLY, a town of Hungary, county of Csongrad, 21 miles S. S. E. Csongrad. Population 6000.

VAREUX, a river of the United States, in the state of the Illinois, which falls into the Mississippi some distance above Cape Girardeau.

VASALBOROUGH, a post township of the United States, in Kennebeck county, Maine, on the Kennebeck. Population 2003.

VASELOWER, a town of France, in Alsace, 14 miles W. by N. Strasbourg. Pop. 3600.

VASSY, a town of France, department of the Upper Marne. Population 2200.

VASAY, a town of France, department of Calvados. Population 3200.

VASTO, or VASTO D'ANNONE, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples, in Abruzzo Citra, on the coast of the Adriatic. Pop. 6000.

VATAN, a town of France, department of the Indre. Population 2000.

VATHI, a seaport of the Ionian republic, the chief place of the island of Ithaca. It occupies the site of the ancient capital of Ithaca. Population 3000.

VATHI, or VANTI, a seaport of the island of Samos. Houses 500.

VAVAO, or VAVOU, one of the Friendly Islands, in the South Pacific ocean. Lat. of the western point. 16. 31. S.

VAVETRE, a department in the south-east of France, in Provence, bounded on the south by the department of the Mouths of the Rhone. Area 1400 square miles; population about 210,000. Its surface in the north-east is mountainous, being traversed by branches of the Alps. The principal rivers are the Rhone and the Durance.

VAUCOUILLERS, a town of France, department of the Meuse, on the Meuse. Population 2200.

VAUD, PAYS DE, a canton in the west of Switzerland, bounded on the west by France, on the south by the lake of Geneva, while on the north it includes part of the lake of Neuchâtel. Area 1500 square miles; population 150,000. It is in general less mountainous than other parts of Switzerland, consisting of beautiful valleys and plains, intersected by small cultivated hills. The valleys and plains are appropriated to the culture of corn; the eminences and hills to that of vines.

VAUDÉMONT, a town of France, department of the Meurthe, 22 miles S. S. W. Nancy.

VAUDENRAY, a town of France, 9 miles S. W. Lyons. Population 2100.

VAGNARD, a town of France, 3 miles from Paris. Population 2800.

VAILLY, a town of France, department of La Creuse. Population 2300.

VALLMARCUS, a large and well built village of Switzerland, canton of Neuchâtel, 11 miles S. W. Neuchâtel.

VALLVILL, a town of France, department of the Gard, 22 miles E. by N. Montpellier. Population 3100.

VAUXHALL, a hamlet of England, in the parish of Lambeth, county of Surrey. It contains several extensive manufactures of pottery, stone, patent shot, and several distilleries; and here is the celebrated Vauxhall gardens.

VECHER, a village of the Netherlands, in North Brabant, 33 miles W. Breda. Population 3000.

VECHT, an arm of the Rhine, which separates from that river near Utrecht, and falls into the Zuyder Zee.

VECHTE, a river of the Netherlands, which falls into the Zuyder Zee.

VEDER, a town of the Netherlands, in North Brabant. Population 3000.

VEENDAM, a town of the Netherlands, in Gelderland. Population 5500.

VEENENDAEL, a village of the Netherlands, province of Utrecht, 20 miles E. by S. Utrecht. Population 2000.

VEERE, or TER VEERE, (in English Camper) a town of the Netherlands, province of Zealand, on the north-east side of the island of Walcheren. It has a good arsenal and town-house. Population 1500. 4 miles N. N. E. Middleburg.

VEGA, CONCEPCION DE LA, an ancient city and bishopric of St Domingo, in the north-east part of the island of St Domingo, near the head of Yuna river, which empties into the bay of Samana. It contains, with its district, 4000 inhabitants.

VEGETE, a town of Spain, province of Sevilla, between Cadiz and Gibraltar, 37 miles S. S. E. Cadiz.

VEGERSACK, a town of Germany, 10 miles N. W. Bremen. Population 1600.

VZELIA, an island in the Adriatic, at the north-west corner of the gulf of Quarnero, now belonging to Austria, and included in the government of Trieste, circle of Fiume. Area 210 square miles; population 16,000.

VEGLIA, the chief town of the above island, 22 miles S. S. E. Fiume. Pop. 1300.

VEGLIANO, a petty town of Piedmont, 11 miles N. Turin.

VELT, ST., a village of Austria, 5 miles W. Vienna, near Schonbrun.

VELBERT, a village and parish of the Prussian province of Cleves and Berg, 14 miles E. N. E. Dusseldorf. Pop. 5200.

VELENRYD, a river of Wales, in Merionethshire, which falls into the Irish sea.

VELEZ, a city of New Granada, in the province of Tunja, on the river Sarez. It has a very handsome church, besides two convents. Pop. 2500. 68 miles N. Santa Fe.

VELEZ MALAGA, a town of Spain, in Granada. It stands on the slope of a high hill, amidst vineyards and plantations. Population 16,000 till 1804, when nearly half that number were carried off by the dreadful fever which ravaged Cadiz, Malaga, and other parts of the south of Spain. 14 miles N. E. Malaga.

VELEZ GARCIBOLIO, a town of Spain, province of Granada, 23 miles W. by S. Lorca. Population 7800.

VELIKJA LOKI, a town of European Russia, government of Pakov. Population 3500.

VELIKOJE, a village of European Russia, government of Jaroslavl. Population 3000.

VELISH, a town of European Russia, government of Vitepsk. Population 4000.

VELLETRI, a town of Italy, States of the Church. The streets are narrow and dirty. There are, however, several detached buildings entitled to notice, such as the palazzo Ginetti, with its elegant front, and the palazzo Borgh, with its fine collection of paintings and antiques. The town-house is a good building. Population 12,000. 30 miles S. E. Rome.

VELLORE, a celebrated town and fortress of the south of India, province of the Carnatic. It is very strongly fortified. After the capture of Seringapatam in 1799, Vellore was fixed on for the place of confinement or residence of the family of Tippeo Sultan. On the 10th of July 1806, a very serious mutiny took place among the garrison, composed principally of native troops. Long. 79. 13. E. Lat. 12. 55. N.

VELLOUT, a town of the south of India, 18 miles from Madras.

VENARNO, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples, 43 miles N. by W. Naples. Population 2800.

VENAISIN, a district in the south-east of France, between Provence and Dauphiny. In 1793 it was incorporated with France.

and now forms part of the department of Vaucluse.

VENANGO, a county of the United States, in the north-west part of Pennsylvania. Population 3000.

VENARTE, St., a town of France, department of the Pas de Calais. Pop. 2100.

VENASCA, a town of Piedmont. Pop. 2400.

VENCE, a town of France, department of the Var. Population 2700.

VENDEE, a department in the west of France, comprising a part of Poitou, and bounded E. by the department of the Deux Sevres, and W. by the Atlantic. Area 2600 square miles. Its surface is almost entirely level, and it is divided into three parts, the wood, the marsh, and the plain. The principal rivers are the two Sevres, the Vendee, and the Aulise; but the general interconnections of the department are by small canals and ditches. It is noted for its resistance to the republican army in 1793, 1794, and 1795. Population 270,000.

VENDEE, a river of France, which falls into the Sevre Noiretoise.

VENDOME, a town of France, capital of the department of the Loir and Cher, on the Loir. It contains several churches, an hospital, and the remains of a once magnificent castle. Pop. 8000. 30 miles N. E. Tours.

VENEDUKHA, a small island of the Mediterranean, belonging to Naples, about 20 miles from the coast of Italy.

VENEV, a town of European Russia, government of Tula, on the Venevka. Population 2400.

VENEZUELA, a province of the captain-generalship of the Caracas, bounded N. by the Caribbean sea, W. by Maracalbo and Varinas, and S. by the great plains of Varinas and the Orinoco. The soil is fertile, and yields in abundance all the products of the West Indies, besides many others, which those islands do not possess. The climate is modified according to the situation of its districts in the mountains, on the coast, or in the plains. On the coast and in the plains, a scorching heat prevails, accompanied in the latter with deluges of rain. In the mountain valleys the air is in general pure and mild, and in some elevated parts even cold. The plains which stretch to the Orinoco are inhabited solely by herds of cattle, tended by assassins, who are as nearly in a state of nature as the beasts they guard. The lake of Valencia, a beautiful sheet of water, and of great extent, is the principal lake. The principal rivers are the Guayas, Tocuyo, Arica, Yacuary, and the Tuy. The rivers which flow to the Orinoco, are the Apure, with its tributaries, the Guarico, the Manacapa, the Portuguesa, the Iguaque, the Cachirama, and several others.

VENEZIA, a large and celebrated city in the north-east of Italy, situated near the northern extremity of the Adriatic. It is built on an island, or rather collection of small islands, separated from the mainland by shallows, of a depth of 3, 4, 5, or 6 feet. Its domes and spires, its churches and public buildings, appear to the spectator, particularly in approaching by sea, to float on the surface of the waves. This appearance is particularly striking at night, when the town is lighted. The length of the city is somewhat more than two miles, its breadth a mile and a half, its circuit six miles; so that its form, without being either square or circular, is compact. It is divided into two parts, nearly equal, by a great canal which winds through its whole length in a serpentine form. This canal is above 100 feet in width, and increased on one part by a bridge of a single arch, the celebrated Rialto. Every part almost of the town is intersected by smaller canals, navigated by gondolas, or by small barks. Exclusive of the general division into North and South by the great canal, Venice is separated for the purpose of police, into six parts. The aspect of Venice is stately, and even magnificent. In regard to the streets, it will hardly be credited, that their breadth is in general only four, five, or six feet; in many places still less. The only exception is in the street called the Merceria, from 12 to 20 feet broad, near the centre of the town, and containing shops of all kinds. The only open place entitled to the name of square is the Piazza di San Marco, an oblong of 280 feet in length, by nearly 100 in breadth, bordered by several handsome buildings. Of these, the principal are the churches of St Marco and Geminiano; the palace formerly occupied by the dogs; and the building fronted in the Grecian style, called the Procureria. This small but elegant square is bordered by arcades, containing elegant shops and coffee-rooms, which, when lighted at night, have a splendid appearance. It is the centre of gaiety and amusement; the sort of foreigners, and of loungers of every description. The Piazzetta is a smaller opening, leading from the square of St Marco to the sea, and having on the one side the palace of the doge, on the other the public library, with its pillars of granite. This spot presents, from the concourse of people, an animated and interesting scene. The only other open spaces in the city are in the front of some of the churches, and at each end of the Rialto. From the extreme narrowness of the streets, the houses are in general gloomy, and in the inside are miserably deficient in accommodation; that, and the enjoyment of good air, being sacrificed, that space may be found for magnificent statues, and other works of art. The general height is three or four stories. The churches are, with some exceptions, in the Gothic style. That of St Martin, Mark, or Marco, at one end of the Piazza di San Marco, is so loaded with ornaments, as to bear some resemblance to an eastern pagoda. Its Mosaics are surpassed only by those of St Peter at Rome. Its paintings are numerous and splendid. It is on the portico facing the piazza, that the Venetians once more see the bronze horses which, during 18 years (from 1797 to 1815), crowned the triumphal arch in the Place du Carrousel at Paris. The church of Santa Maria della Salute, the work of Palladio, is an elegant structure, open to the great canal, and built outside and in, of marble, with a moderate share of ornament. The church of l'Ascensione is also an elegant building. The cathedral of Venice is built of Istrian marble. The church of St George is remarkable for its front of marble and its cupola; that of St Giovanni and St Paolo is a large Gothic edifice, surmounted by a cupola. Of the palaces and other public structures, the most conspicuous is the palace of the doges. It is an ancient fabric, in the Gothic style, vast in its extent, and venerable in its appearance. Of the other palaces or mansions of the great families, the most conspicuous are those of Giustiniani, Tiepolo, Balbi, Cornaro, &c. all more remarkable for their size, than for elegance or symmetry. The arsenal of Venice is a commodious, and even a magnificent building, situated on an island near the eastern end of the city. It is defended by a rampart, as well as by the surrounding water; and has before its gates two great pillars, with the two gigantic lions in granite, which stood formerly on the Pireus at Athens. The Rialto consists of one great arch, of 90 feet span, equally remarkable by its height, its boldness, and solidity. It is wholly of marble, and is ascended at each end by a flight of steps. The public library stands in a fine marble structure, near the square of St Mark. Adjoining it is the mint, also an elegant building, with arcades. On the great canal, not far from the Rialto, stands the Fondaco di Tedeschi, long a depot for the goods of German merchants, now the council-house of the city. Of theatres, Venice has no less than eight great and small; but several of them are open only during the carnival. The hospitals and prisons of Venice are not on a good footing, the apartments being ill contrived, and in general devoid of a free circulation of air. The commercial greatness of Venice dates, like that of Bruges, Antwerp, and Pisa, from the middle ages. Since the discovery of the passage to India by the Cape of Good Hope, it has gradually diminished; at present the mercantile transactions are less active than those of Trieste, and are confined to intercourse with the Levant and other parts of the Mediterranean; to the import of hardware, linen, and other manufactures from the north of Europe; of East and West India goods, direct or through the medium of Malta; and finally, of salt fish from Newfoundland or England, for the use of the Catholics, during fast days and The manufactures of Venice, if not alive in any one branch, are of considerable diversity: they consist of woollens, naves, canvases, and ropes; gold and silver stuff, velvet, and silk stockings; and of lace. There are others also of less consequence, such as imitations of pearls and other precious stones; ornamental glass works, jewellery, and wax work. Printing is carried on here more extensively than in any other town in Italy. Venice cannot boast of many literary institutions. It is, however, the seat of an academy of the fine arts, of an atheneum, or seminary forming a medium between a great school and an university. It contains also a navigation school, and a female establishment called the conservatoire; the Rio de Pietà, where education is given gratuitously to more than 100 young women. The public library of Venice is extensive; and there are a number of private collections of curiosities and objects of art. Population 130,000; in former times it is said to have been more. The foundation of Venice was laid in 421 as a place of refuge during the invasion of Italy by Attila. The government was at first a democracy; but towards the middle of the 13th century (about 1247), it became a settled aristocracy. Venice was overturned in 1797. It remained subject to Austria till 1805, when, after the battle of Austerlitz, it was annexed to the French kingdom of Italy; but in 1814, it returned definitively under the power of Austria. 160 miles E. Milan, 246 N. Rome. Long. of St Marco, 12. 20. 39. E. Lat. 45. 25. 32. N.

VENZLOO, a strong town of the Netherlands, province of Limburg, on the Maese. It is conveniently situated for trade, having a commodious little port, and forming a depot for the merchandise from all the countries bordering on the Maese and the Rhine. It has some fine manufactures. Population 5000. 40 miles N. N. E. Maestricht.

VENLOON, or LOON, or ZAND, a town of North Brabant, 12 miles W. by N. Breda. Population 3500.

VENNINGEN, a small town of the Davaian circle of the Rhine, near Spire. Pop. 800.

VENNINGTON, a hamlet of England, in Salop, near Shrewsbury.

VENOSA, a town of Italy, kingdom of Naples, on the river Ofanto, 86 miles N. Naples. Population 3500.

VENT, a river of England, in Cumberland, which falls into the South Tyne.

VENIZIE, a town of France, department of the Pas de Calais. Population 2000.

VENYRON, a hamlet of England, in the Isle of Wight, Southamptonshire.

VENTRAI, an abundant river of Guiana, which enters the Orinoco, in Lat. 4. 30. N.

VENZONZ, a town of Austrian Italy, on the Tagliamento, 15 miles N. N. W. Udine.

VENZA, a market of Spain, in Granada, 40 miles S. by W. Laga. Population 5000.

VIXIA CAYZ, a province or intendancy of Mexico, situated under the tropics, and extending along the Mexican gulf, from the Rio Bandera (or de los Lagartos) to the great river of Pecos, including a very considerable part of the eastern coast of New Spain. Its length, from the bay of Terrisnos near the island of Carmen, to the small port of Tampico, is 210 leagues; while its breadth is only in general from 25 to 28 leagues. It is bounded E. by the peninsula of Yucatan; W. by the intendancies of Oaxaca, Puebla, and Mexico; and N. by the colony of New Santander. There are few regions in the New continent where the traveler is more struck with the assemblage of the most opposite climates, than in this province. All the western part of the intendancy of Vera Cruz forms the declivity of the Cordillera of Anahuac. In the space of a day the inhabitants descend from the regions of eternal snow, to the plains in the vicinity of the sea, where the most suffocating heat prevails. The province of Vera Cruz produces the myrtle, the cocoa, tobacco of an excellent quality; cotton, celebrated for its fineness and whiteness; sugar, indigo, &c. The intendancy of Vera Cruz contains within its limits two colossal summits, of which one, the volcano of Orizaba, is, after the Popocatepetl, the most elevated mountain of New Spain. The other summit, the Cofre de Perote, according to the measurement of Humboldt, is nearly 1312 feet higher than the Peak of Teneriffe. It has no metallic mines of any importance. Pop. 156,000.

VERA CRUZ, the grand seaport of Mexico, or New Spain, and the residence of the intendant of the province. It fronts the sea in a semicircle, and is inclosed with a simple wall or parapet, six feet high, and three feet broad, surmounted by a wooden palisade in great decay. On the shore to the south-east and north-west, are two redoubts, with some cannon to defend the port, which is not commodious, being merely a bad anchorage among shallows. Opposite Vera Cruz, at the distance of 400 fathoms, is an islet, on which stands the castle of St. Juan d'Ulloa, which is fortified with 300 pieces of cannon. Vera Cruz is one of the most considerable places for trade in the Spanish dominions, being the centre of European and West Indian commerce. The city is beautifully and regularly built. It is situated in an arid plain, on which the north winds, which blow with dreadful impetuosity from October till April, have formed hills of moving sand. These contribute very much, by the reverberation of the sun's rays, and by the high temperature which they acquire during the summer months, to increase the suffocating heat of the atmosphere. All the edifices of Vera Cruz are constructed of materials drawn from the bottom of the ocean; for no rock is to be procured in the environs of the city, although a good limestone has now begun to be brought from Compechy. In 1784, a project was formed for conducting part of the fine river of Xamapa to the port of Vera Cruz. On this undertaking large sums have been expended; yet notwithstanding this, the waters of the Xamapa are still more than 12 miles distant from the town of Vera Cruz. In the present state of things, the construction of this aqueduct is estimated to cost from L.208,000 to L.250,000. The habitual population, without including the militia and scattering people, is 18,000. The chief disadvantage of Vera Cruz is its unhealthy situation and climate. It is considered as the principal seat of the yellow fever, which prevails all over the eastern coast of New Spain, and to which thousands of Europeans landing during the hot season, fall victims. The quantity of rain which falls annually at this port amounts to 73 inches, which, joined to the heat of the climate, is extremely favourable to the progress of disease. The ascent from this city into the interior of the country, which is an elevated plain more than 8000 feet above the level of the sea, being through difficult and narrow roads, the merchants of Vera Cruz have lately set on foot the construction of a most magnificent causeway, which is to be continued into the interior as far as Mexico, a distance of more than 290 miles west, 150 miles E. S. E. Puebla. Long. 100. 40. 15. W. Lat. 19. 11. 52. N.

VERA PAZ, a province of Guatemala, bounded N. by the provinces of Chiapa and Yucatan; E. by Honduras and the bay or gulf of Honduras; S. by Guatemala; and W. by the same and Chiapa. It is about 120 miles in length, and 74 in extreme breadth. The country is rough and broken, full of deep ravines, with a plain, which is half a league in extent, and covered with thick and impenetrable woods. Half of this province is of a mild and benign temperature, and the other half is hot, and abounding in mosquitoes of various kinds. The rains here continue nine months in the year. The trade consists chiefly in drugs, cotton, cacao, honey, wool, &c.

VERA PAZ, the chief town of the above province, on the Rio Cohan, which falls into the gulf or lake of Dulce. 600 miles S. E. Mexico. Long. 91. 14. W. Lat. 15. 50. N.

VERAGUA, a province of Terra Firma, in South America, bounded N. by the Caribbean sea; E. by the province of Darien in South America, which is separated from Veragua by the ridge of Canatagua; W. by Costa Rica; and S. by the great Pacific ocean. Veragua is a mountainous, rugged country, covered with vast forests, beautifully interspersed with luxuriant and fertile valleys, wherein are found various estates and grazing farms, well stocked with cattle, from the abundance of excellent pastures. It rains almost continually in this country; and by this constant moisture, the heat of the climate, which is very great, is mitigated. Thunder storms, accompanied with frightful lightning, occur very frequently; and during these storms the torrents rush with such impetuous and overwhelming force into the valleys, from the surrounding mountains, that the country is impassable during the winter season.

VERAGUA, St. Jago de, the capital of the above province, is a handsome town, situated in a moist and warm climate. Its inhabitants are partly Spaniards, partly mulattoes.

VERDE, a town of Hungary, 40 miles N. N. E. Presburg. Population 3000.

VERCELLI, a town of Italy, capital of a Piedmontese district of the same name, at the confluence of the rivers Cervo and Sesia. It has a spacious market-place and several good buildings. The cathedral is one of the best in Piedmont; and there are three other churches entitled to the attention of the traveller, as well as the hospital, with its gardens and museum. It has 16,000 inhabitants, who spin and weave silk. 40 miles E. N. E. Turin.

VIRCHALIA, a town in the western frontier of Siberia, the first which occurs after passing the great chain of the Ourals, the boundary between European and Asiatic Russia. It forms, therefore, the custom-house of Siberia; and an impost of 10 per cent. is levied on all goods passing through it. It has 450 houses, four churches, and two convents. Near it are extensive mines. 120 miles N. Cathamburg. Long. 60. 14. E. Lat. 53. 45. N.

VERCHNEY-LOMOV, a town of European Russia, government of Penza, 60 miles W. by N. Penza. Population 4400.

VINDAS NOVAS, a village in the north of Portugal, 4 miles N. E. Oporto.

VLEDI, CAPE, a considerable cape of Africa, stretching out into the Atlantic, and forming the most westerly point of that continent. — It is the name also of various islands and capes on the coast of South America.

VIRDE, ISLANDS OF CAPE, a group situated in the Atlantic, about 80 miles west of the cape, on the coast of Africa, whence they derive their name. It consists of ten islands, of which the largest are, St Jago, St Antonio, and St Nicholas; the small, Mayo, Bona Vista, Sal, St Vincent, St Lucia, Brava, and Fogo. The large islands rise in the interior into very lofty mountains, from which they derive a copious supply of water. Fogo also, as its name expresses, is composed of a very formidable volcano, in a state of perpetual activity. The rest of the smaller islands, though rocky, are destitute of very considerable elevations, and are thus at once deprived of good water, and rendered highly unproductive. The only product for which their arid and stony soil is well adapted, is that of cotton. They also produce an excellent breed of mules and asses; great numbers of which are conveyed to the West Indies. The best parts of the islands are fruitful in Indian corn, which forms the staple food of the inhabitants. They have a good supply of fruits, as oranges, guavas, coconuts, limes, plantains, pine apples, and tamarinds. There is no want of cattle: the rocks are frequented by numerous goats, the skins of which form an article of exportation. Poultry also thrive in a remarkable degree. Turtles are caught so plentifully on the shores, that cargoes of them are sent to America. But the most valuable product of the islands is sea salt, the formation of which Mayo is peculiarly well adapted. The Cape de Verde islands have been subject to the crown of Portugal ever since their first discovery. At present, the Portuguese inhabitants are few, and very poor; and the negro and mulatto natives have become in a great measure independent. A governor-general, however, resides on the island of St Jago, at Porto Praya.

VERDE, RIO, a river of South America, which joins the Paraguay above Assumption.

VERDEN, the chief town of a district of the same name, in Hanover, on the Aller, 63 miles S. W. Hamburg. Population 3600.

VERDON, a river of France, department of the Lower Alps. It joins the Durance.

VERDUN, a town of France, department of the Meuse. It is traversed by the Meuse, which has extensive meadows along its banks. Verdun, though not in general a neat town, contains some good buildings, both public and private. It is well known as the place where the English were detained in France after the rupture of 1803. It has manufactures of woollen and leather. Population 9000. 35 miles W. Metz.

VERDUS, a town of France, on the Garonne, 20 miles N. W. Toulouse. Pop. 3500.

VERE, a river of England, in Herefordshire, which falls into the Coln.

VEREJA, a town of European Russia, government of Moscow, on the Protva. It deals in leather, corn, cattle, tallow, honey, wax, peltry, and linen. Population 6000. 60 miles W. & W. Moscow.

VERFILL, a town of France, department of the Upper Garonne, 12 miles N. E. Toulouse. Population 2200.

VERGARA, a town of Spain, in Guipuzcoa. It has manufactures of steel. Pop. 4000. 24 miles S. W. St Sebastian.

VERGATO, a town of Italy, 18 miles S. W. Bologna. Population 2600.

VERGREENE, a city of the United States, in Addison county, Vermont, on the Otter creek. It contains a woollen manufactory, extensive clothiers' works, iron-works, &c. Population 635. 26 miles S. Burlington.

VERIA, a town of European Turkey, in Macedon, a few miles from the coast of the gulf of Salonica. It has manufactures of cotton and cotton thread. Population 9000, mostly Greeks. 48 miles S. Salonica.

VERMAYOT, a town of France, department of the Yonne, 15 miles S. E. Auxerre. Population 2300.

VERNEJA, a river of Quito, province of Quisno and Macas. It joins the San Miguel.

VERTEJAS, a river of Brazil, in Rio Grande, which enters the Atlantic.

VERVINO, or RED RIVER, a river of South America, vicinaty of Buenos Ayres. It rises in Tarija, and joins the Paraguay.

VERMILLON, a river of the United States, in Louisiana, which discharges itself into Vermilion bay, in the gulf of Mexico.

VERMILLION RIVER, a river of the United States, in Louisiana, which runs into the Orange. In Ohio, which falls into Lake Erie. Also a tributary of the Illinois river, which it joins 150 miles from the Mississippi.

VERMONT, one of the United States, situated between 42. 44 and 45. of N. lat., and 71. 38 and 72. 27. E. long. from Washington, is a mountainous and inland country. The boundary line that separates it from Canada on the north is 90 miles long, and from Massachusetts on the south, 40 miles. It has New York on the west, and New Hampshire on the east; and its mean length from north to south is 137 miles. Area 10,237 square miles. It is divided into the following 13 counties:—Addison, Bennington, Caledonia, Chittenden, Essex, Franklin, Grand Isle, Orange, Orleans, Rutland, Washington, Windham, and Windsor. Pop. 217,914. The Green mountains, from 10 to 15 miles in breadth, traverse the whole length of this state. These mountains begin in the province of Canada; from thence they extend through the states of Vermont, Massachusetts, and Connecticut, and terminate within a few miles of the sea coast. They run nearly parallel with the course of Connecticut river, and are intersected by numerous vallies, the soil of which is deep, rich, and loamy. Adjoining the rivers are fine plains and meadows; and between the banks of Lake Champlain and the mountains, is a valuable tract of arable land, extending 100 miles in length, and 30 in breadth. The whole surface in its natural state is thickly wooded. All the streams and rivers of Vermont have their origin among the Green mountains. About thirty-five of them have an easterly direction, and fall into Connecticut river. About twenty-five run westerly, and discharge themselves into Lake Champlain. Two or three running in the same direction, fall into Hudson's river. In the north-easterly parts of the state, there are four or five streams which have a northerly direction, and run into the Lake Metaphremagog; from thence through the river St Francis, they are emptied into the river St Lawrence. The most considerable streams on the west side of the Green mountains are Otter creek, Onion river, the river Lamolle, and Michicouli. On the east side of the Green mountains are Wantastiquick, or West river, White river, and Pousoomstick. The river Connecticut, into which these rivers fall, forms the eastern boundary of the state. Lake Champlain is the largest collection of water in this part of the United States. The climate is healthy, but subject to great extremes of heat and cold. The snow lies from the middle of December to the middle of March, during which period it is customary to travel in sledges. The weather during this season is generally fair and constant, and rain seldom falls, though hail is not unfrequent. The extreme heat is 94 degrees of Fahrenheit; the extreme cold 27 below zero, the mean heat 45½. Iron ore exists in great abundance on the west side of the Green mountains, and near Lake Champlain. There are ores of lead at Thetford; and at Sunderland of copper, and of ochre red and yellow. Jasper of a beautiful red colour has been lately discovered. Porcelain clay is found, which retains its white colour in the fire; also soapstone, slate, whinstone, clay for bricks, pipe-clay, and mill-stones, and marl in several places. There are some lead and copper mines. There are 12 paper-mills in the state. Among the most considerable manufacturing towns are Middlebury, Bennington, Brattleborough, Burlington, and Montpelier. Large quantities of maple sugar are made in this state for home consumption, and some for exportation. There are two chalybeate springs. The forest trees are in great variety. Dr Williams, in his judicious account of this state, enumerates thirty-six species of quadrupeds, of which the most remarkable are the bear, black-cat, wild-cat, catamount, deer; fox, red, grey, cross, and black; hare, martin, ermine, mole, mouse, porcupine, rabbit, racoon, skunk; squirrel, grey, black, red, striped, and flying; weasel, wolf, and wood-chuck. In the rivers, ponds, and lakes, are the beaver, mink, muskrat, and otter. They also abound with fish. The soil is well adapted to wheat, rye, barley, corn, oats, peas, flax, hemp, and culinary plants. Potatoes thrive well without manure. The natural pasture is excellent. The manufactures which have been begun in this state are not considerable. Distilleries of spirituous liquors have multiplied to an almost incredible extent. Cider and beer are also made; but these wholesome beverages are not in general use. The most extensive brewery of porter is at Middlebury. The wild grape is used at table as a dessert, and a pleasant beverage is made of the gooseberry and raspberry. Ginseng, which grows in great plenty and perfection, is a valuable article of commerce. Pot and pearl ashes, and yellow ochre, are also manufactured. The exports consist of grain, flour, bar iron, nails, pot and pearl ashes, live cattle, horses, beef, pork, cheese and butter, lumber, peltry, and flax, which are sent to Montreal in Canada, and, by the cheapest river communication, to the cities and towns of New York, Portland, Hartford, and Boston. Flocks of cows and sheep are driven to the neighbouring states. The articles of import are rum, wines, brandy, gin, tea, coffee, and articles of British manufacture, such as coarse linens and woollens. Montpelier is the seat of government. The other most considerable towns are Burlington, Middlebury, Windsor, Brattleborough, and Bennington. There is no bank at present in this state. There are two colleges in Vermont, one at Burlington, and the other at Middlebury; and several academies have been established. The legislative power is vested in a house of representatives. Every town has the right to send one representative. The executive power is vested in a governor, lieutenant-governor, and 12 councillors. The first settlements began about the year 1724; and in 1760 a number of towns were already formed by emigrants from New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Connecticut. The value of the exports from Vermont amounted, in 1799, to 20,480 dollars; in 1803 to 117,450; in 1806 to 103,773; in 1810 to 432,031; in 1812 to 135,647; and in 1816 to 322,394. Population in 1790, 63,580, including 271 free blacks; in 1800, 154,465, blacks 657; and in 1810, 217,395, blacks 750.

VERNANTE, a town of Italy, 11 miles S. Coni. Population 2700.

VERNEUIL, a town of France, department of the Eure, on the Arve. It has manufactures of woollens, cottons, and druggs. Population 5300. 18 miles W. Droux.

VERNON, a town of France, department of the Eure, on the Seine, 28 miles S. by F. Rouen. Population 4000.

VERNON, a post township of the United States, in Oneida county, New York, 17 miles W. Utica. Population 1519.—The name of several other townships.

VERNOUX, a town of France, department of the Ardèche. Population 2200.

VEROCRA, a town of Slavonia, on the Drave, 63 miles W. N. W. Essek.

VEROLA-ALGHISE, a town of Austrian Italy, government of Milan, on the Savorola. Population 3000.

VEROLANO, a town of Italy, in Piedmonts. Population 4000.

VERON, a small town in the interior of France, department of the Yonne, with 900 inhabitants. 6 miles S. Sens.

VERONA, a delegation or province of Austrian Italy, government of Venice. Area 1330 square miles; population 285,000.

VERONA, the capital of the above province. The Adige, descending from Tyrol, flows with a full and rapid stream through the city, dividing it into two unequal parts. The form of the city is irregular, its circuit about 8 miles. It retains its former fortification of a moat and earthen mound, and has also two castles on high ground, with a third on the plain; but it is not at present capable of standing a siege. The Adige is here crossed by four different bridges of stone, which connect the respective divisions of the city. Verona has five gates, of which one called Porta del Paglio, is of elegant architecture. The interior of Verona does not correspond with the beauty of its position, several of the streets being narrow and dirty; others, however, are spacious and well paved. The houses, though built in general in an antique style, are of good appearance, from the quantity of marble employed in their construction; a consequence of the abundant quarries in the neighbourhood. Verona contains a cathedral and a number of churches, noted for their paintings; and their architecture. The church of St Zeno is remarkable for its facade, its vast portal, and the rows of marble columns which support its roof. The town-house has in the outside niches containing busts of statues of the distinguished natives of Verona.—Pliny the elder, Vitruvius, Catullus, and Cornelius Nepos. The building called the royal palace has never been completed. The Palazzo Bevilacqua, the oldest building in Verona, the Palazzo Canossa, admired for its front, and the museum of the academy, for its portico, with its peristyle of large Ionic columns, are worthy of note. Of all the monuments of Verona, the most interesting is the Roman amphitheatre, situated in the spacious square called the Piazza del Bra. This is one of the most magnificent remains of Roman architecture that has descended to modern times. The arena, situated in the centre, and of an oval form, is 220 feet in length, in breadth 136. The seats, rising in successive ranges from the arena, as well as the different passages, the stair-cases and galleries of communication, remain entire. The whole consists of vast blocks of marble, and forms a most solid mass, resting on a double row of masonry vaults, which, in former ages, were appropriated to the custody of the lions, tigers, and other wild beasts. The Academia Philharmonica, and the Philod., contain a number of ancient monuments, not only in Greek and Latin, but in the Punic and Egyptian languages. It has a lyceum or great school, a classical school, and an academy of painting. Here is a public library, and several private collections. Its principal manufacture is that of silk. The lesser manufactures are woollens, leather, gloves, and shoes. The date of the foundation of Verona is not known; but Julius Cæsar established a colony here. On the decline of the empire, it experienced the fate of the other towns in the north of Italy. In 1814, on the overthrow of Bonaparte, it fell into the hands of Austria. Pop. 45,000. 30 miles N. E. Mantua. Long. 11. 1. 15. E. Lat. 45. 35. 7. N.

VERONA, a post township of the United States, in Oneida county, New York, 30 miles W. Utica. Population 1014.

VERSAILLER, a well known town of France, 12 miles W. by S. Paris, and long the residence of the court. In 1668 it was little more than a village, with a hunting lodge for the royal family, when Louis XIV., pleased with the situation, and desirous of residing out of Paris, began to erect a splendid palace, which it required 13 years to build. Though uninhabited since 1789, it retains almost all its beauty. The situation of the palace is on a gradually rising ground. Its front and wings are built of polished stone, ornamented with statues, and a colonnade of the Doric order in the centre. The interior is equally grand and beautiful, the great hall being above 220 feet in length, with costly decorations in marble, painting, and gilding. It is approached by three great avenues, each lined with a double row of trees, and leading respectively from Paris, St Cloud, and Sceaux. Versailles having, from its situation, little water, it was necessary to bring a supply from a distance, by machinery. This was executed on a grand scale; and no city or royal residence can boast a greater display of reservoirs, fountains, and canals. The spacious park and gardens situated behind the palace, contain parterres, jets d'eau, cascades, and thickets in pleasant variety; also a magnificent orangery. In a retired spot are the two trianons, seats to which the king and queen retired, when desirous to lay aside their rank and state. Its streets cross each other at right angles. The old town contains the principal church, and the greater proportion of elegant buildings. A manufacture of firearms has been established here. Clocks and watches are also made; and the spinning and weaving of cotton, as well as the bleaching of linen, are carried on on a small scale; and since 1814 the chief benefit to the place has arisen from the visits and residence of English families. Versailles has a cathedral, with eight churches. It has a high school, several private seminaries of education, a valuable library, a cabinet of natural history, and a botanical garden. Population 30,000.

VERAILESSA, a town of the United States, and capital of Woodford county, Kentucky. Houses 100. Population 483. 13 miles S. W. Lexington.

VERETE, a town of Hungary, county of Temesvar. It has a school for the followers of the Greek church. Wine, rice, and silk, are cultivated in the environs. It has a manufacture of silk. Population 5000.

VERETION, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Pop. 2000.

VEREY BAY, or GREEN BAY, a bay of the Atlantic ocean, between Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, on the north coast. Long. 63. 54. W. Lat. 46. N.

VERTE RIVIERE, a river of Lower Canada, which falls into the St Lawrence.

VERTEUIL, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Population 1800.

VERTOU, a town of France, department of the Loire Inferieure. Population 4000. 4 miles S. E. Nantes.

VERTUS, a town of France, department of the Marne. Population 2600. 13 miles S. E. Epemay.

VERVA, a town of Piedmont, on the Po, with 1600 inhabitants. 30 miles N. E. Turin.

VERVASEN, a town of the Netherlands, on the Weerde. It has extensive manufactures of woollens; also dye, soap, vitriol, and aquafortis works. Population 10,000. 13 miles E. by S. Liège.

VERVISA, a town of France, in Champagne, 25 miles N. N. E. Laon. Pop. 3000.

VERZY, a town of France, department of the Marne, with 1600 inhabitants.

VBLOUL, a town of France, department of the Upper Saone, near the Durance. The town stands in a fertile district. Population 6000. 23 miles N. by E. Besancon.

VERASMOONSK, a town of European Russia, government of Tver, on the Mologa. Pop. 2000. 190 miles N. Moscow.

VEUVIE, a mountain in the south of Italy, about 5 miles S. S. E. Naples, celebrated for its volcanic eruptions. It rises in a gentle swell from the bay of Naples, to an elevation of nearly 3700 feet. The view from its summit is very beautiful, including Naples, with its bay, its islands, and its promontories, as well as the delightful scenery of the Campagna Felice. To the west the prospect loses itself in the immensity of the sea; to the east it extends far into the interior, until bounded by the Apennines. The upper part of the mountain is torn by a series of convulsions, and strewed with its own fragments; the part next in the descent is mixed with dried lava, extending in wide black lines over its surface; while the lower part of the mountain, as if danger were far remote, is covered with villages and country seats, with fields of maize, groves of fruit-trees, and other luxuriant productions, all displaying the great fertility given by the ashes to the soil. The summit of the mountain is in the form of a cone, and consists of masses of burned earth, ashes, and sand, thrown out in the course of ages by the volcano. The crater is extensive, nearly a mile and a half in circumference, but has not above 300 feet of depth or descent from the ridge. After the eruption of 1794, the cone lost much of its elevation; a portion of it, after being shaken, and even raised, by the convulsion, sinking down into the crater, and almost filling up the cavity. The fire raging in the hollow of the mountain, having thus lost its upward vent, poured out the lava from its side, which rolled down the declivity all the way to the sea. The total number of great eruptions on record is above 30, reckoning from the celebrated one of A. D. 79, which proved destructive to Herculaneum. One of the latest, though not most formidable eruptions, took place in the end of the summer of 1819.

VEVRAIN, a town of Hungary, 43 miles S. S. W. Raab. It has a cathedral. Population 4500.

VEVAY, a bailiwick and well built town of the Swiss canton of the Pays de Vaud, on the lake of Geneva. Population 3800. 10 miles E. Lausanne.

VEVAY, a post township of the United States, and capital of Switzerland county, Indiana, on the Ohio. It contains a courthouse, a jail, and had, in 1817, about 90 dwelling-houses.

VEVRES, a town of France, department of the Upper Alps. Population 1800.

VEYZE, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Population 2300.

VEZELAY, a town of France, department of the Yonne, 25 miles S. by E. Auxerre. Population 1600.

VEREILLI, a town of France, department of the Meurthe, 13 miles S. W. Lunerville. Population 3000.

VIANA, a considerable town of Portugal, province of Entre Dours e Minho, on the Lima. It contains 8000 inhabitants, chiefly occupied in navigation, fishing, and the sale of wine. 42 miles N. by W. Oporto.

VIANA, a town of Spain, in Navarre, 4 miles N. E. Logrono. Population 3400.

VIANNOSO, a seaport of Italy, in the duchy of Lucca. Population 2000. 16 miles N. by W. Leghorn.

VIASMA, a town in the interior of European Russia, in the province of Smolensko, at the junction of the rivers Vlasma and Bobri. It has 6000 or 7000 inhabitants, and numerous tanneries. It was the scene of partial engagements between the French and Russians in 1812. 115 miles E. by N. Smolensko.

VIATKA, a large government or province in the east of European Russia, bounded N. E. by the government of Perm, and S. by that of Kasan. It extends from 56. to 61. N. lat.; has an area of 47,000 square miles; and a population of 1,100,000. Of this great tract of country, several thousand square miles are occupied by hills and marshes, or by immense forests. The navigable rivers are the Kama, the Viatka, the Urichoma, and the Peschma. This government is divided into 10 circles.

VIATKA, the capital of the above government, at the confluence of the rivers Viatka and Chinoooka. It contains 3500 inhabitants, who send to Archangel large quantities of country produce, corn, flax, linseed oil, tallow, honey, and wax. 420 miles E. N. E. Moscow.

VIMAYE, a town of France, department of the Sarthe, with 2100 inhabitants. 25 miles E. La Mans.

VIC, a town of France, department of the Meurthe, 12 miles N. Lunerville. Pop. 3100.

VIC RIGORAN, a town of France, department of the Upper Pyrenees. Pop. 3100.

VIC EN CARLADEN, a town of France, department of the Cantal. Pop. 3100.

VIL LE COMTE, a town of France, in Auvergne, 17 miles S. E. Clermont. Population 3100.

VIC FRANKSAC, a town of France, department of the Gers, near the Pyrenees and the river Lese. Population 3100. 13 miles N. W. Auch.

VICKERSA, Sr. a province and captaincy of Brazil, bounded N. by Rio Janeiro, E. by Rio Janeiro and the sea, and W. by the Rio Grande. It is 300 miles from north to south, and 180 in breadth.

VICENTE, Sr. a city of Brazil, in the above province, and once the capital. It was formerly very rich. The cathedral church is handsome. Pop. 3000. Lat. 8. S.

VICENZA, a province of Austrian Italy, in the government of Venice. Area 1000 square miles; population 310,000.

VICENZA, the capital of the above province, at the confluence of two rivers, one of which divides the town into two parts, connected together by bridges. Its circumference is about four Italian miles; and, though not a place of strength, it is surrounded by a double wall, and defended by a fort. It contains several good streets, and has a market-place of an oblong form, of which the chief ornament is the front of the town-house. The town contains many public buildings of good architecture. The principal is the town-house, equally remarkable for the beauty of its architecture, and the value of the paintings contained in it; the Olympic theatre, built at the expense of the society, in the ancient Roman taste. The bridge of St Michele consists of one lofty arch, resembling the Rialto at Venice. Vicenza contains a number of churches and religious houses, some of elegant structure, and the work of Palladio; others of the Gothic taste, and more ancient. The cathedral is large. The church of della Gratie, inferior in style, is far superior in design and execution. Other churches of more recent date are elegant structures; and, on the whole, few towns can vie with Vicenza in the general taste of its architecture. It has a high school. Of its manufactures, the chief are of silk; woollen and leather are made to a small extent. Vicenza was a Roman station, and suffered greatly on the irruption of the northern tribes. In 1796 it was the scene of sanguinary conflicts between the French and Austrians. Population 25,000. 36 miles W. by N. Venice.

VICO, a town of Italy, with 3300 inhabitants. 2 miles E. by S. Mondovi.

VICO, a town of Naples, province of Capitanata. Population 3000.

VICTON, a post village of the United States, in Ontario county, New York.

VICTORIA, a village of the Caracas, in the province of Venezuela, on the road leading from Caracas to Puerto Cavello. This town was founded by the missionaries. The principal ornament of the place is a handsome church. 6 leagues E. Tulmore.

VICTORIA, a town of Mexico, province of Tabasco, 60 leagues from Campeche.

VIDIGUEIRA, a town of Portugal, in Alentejo, 13 miles N. Beja. Population 2500.

VIDIN, a considerable town of Bulgaria, on the Danube. It has a strong castle, and is in other respects well fortified. Its trade consists in the sale of rock salt, corn, wine, &c. Pop. 30,000. 104 miles E. S. E. Belgrade.

VIJIA, a populous town of Brazil, on the island of Tapoira or Ilhoerica. It has a brisk trade, whale fisheries, distilleries, &c. A strong fort commands the point on which the town is situated; near which are two churches, one of them lately rebuilt on a grand scale. Lat. 12. S.

VIENNA, the capital of the Austrian empire, in the province of Lower Austria, on the right bank of the Danube, which is joined by the Wien and Alster, two streams, small but rapid, which flow through the town. As Vienna is built on a plain, it is subject to inundation from each of these rivers, particularly from the Wien. The shape of this metropolis is not semicircular or regular, the city or original part forming a town distinct from the suburbs. The shape of the former is circular, its extent limited, being hardly a mile in any direction. Between it and the suburbs is an open space, also circular, and of the width of somewhat more than half a mile. The suburbs are now so connected as to form a continuous whole, surrounded on the outside by a wall which embraces a circuit of no less than 12 miles, or 4 times the extent of the city wall. The form of the whole city and suburbs together approaches to the circular, but with many irregularities in its contour. At present the ramparts serve only as public walks. The city or old part of Vienna has the houses high, and the streets narrow. In the suburbs the houses are not so high, the streets are wider, and many of the buildings are good. There is, however, in these quarters, a most heterogeneous mixture of family mansions, cottages, work-shops, and manufactories. Some of the streets here are not paved, and are consequently subject to all the disadvantages of dust in dry, and of mud in wet weather. The streets are all well lighted at night; and in the city there are large subterranean sewers, which discharge themselves into the Danube. Vienna has eight squares, but they are small and irregular, and encumbered rather than adorned by grotesque ornaments. The imperial palace is situated at the western extremity of the city, close by the ramparts. It is a square edifice of vast extent; but having been built at very different periods, the appearance of the exterior is very irregular. The interior contains valuable collections. The riding academy of Vienna is said to be one of the largest in Europe; but it is surpassed by an assembly-room called the hall of Apollo, which is said to be capable of containing 10,000 people. The Belvidere, a palace built by Prince Eugene, is in one of the suburbs. The imperial mews are capable of containing more than 400 horses. The arsenal contains an immense collection of arms, and many curious ornaments, all of iron. The churches constitute a prominent feature in the appearance of this city; the whole number is 23, besides 14 monasteries, and 3 convents. The cathedral, dedicated to St Stephen, is an ancient Gothic building, which dates from 1270. The interior is elegant and simple; it contains several monuments, in particular that erected to prince Eugene. Its tower is of enormous height. The church of St Peter is in the Italian style. That of the Augustinians contains a monument erected to the archduchess Maria Christina, by her husband, and considered one of the master-pieces of Canova. The charitable institutions at Vienna are numerous, and richly endowed. The great hospital, equal in extent to any in Paris or London, receives often 10,000 patients in the course of a year. There are separate hospitals for the soldiers, for Jews, for foundlings, orphans, and aged persons. Manufactures in Vienna, if not very extensive, are of great variety. They consist of silks, ribbons, gloves, lace, paper, earthen-ware, instruments, philosophical and musical; maps, engravings, coaches, and carriages in general. The number of wholesale mercantile houses hardly exceeds 200. There is here an exchange, a bank chartered so lately as 1817, and an establishment on the plan of the Lombard or pawn bank of Hamburg and other continental cities. The university of Vienna dates from 1387. It was once under the management of the Jesuits, but has been long taken from their superintendence. It has a botanical garden, a military hospital, an anatomical theatre, and a veterinary school; and it is by far the first medical school in Germany. It contains also public classes for philosophy, the classical languages, literature, law, and theology; the number of professors is fifty-four; that of assistants eighteen. Vienna has, on a small scale, a seminary for the oriental languages. A more extensive establishment is that of the academy of fine arts, and an institution formed in 1770, for the reception of specimens of manufacture. Greek literature is also cultivated here. Books are printed in Roman, and a correspondence kept up with several schools in Greece. The military institutions are, a school of cadets; and since 1810, a polytechnic school for engineers, civil and military. The imperial library is very extensive; it is contained in a large hall, 260 feet in length, and 150 in breadth; and is said to consist of 12,000 manuscripts, and 300,000 printed volumes. Next to this comes the library of the university, computed at 90,000 volumes. The imperial collection of medals and coins is reckoned the most complete in Europe. As to objects of natural history, the collection of animals is small; that of minerals abundant. The latter is decidedly the case in regard to collections, public and private, of paintings, engravings, original drawings, maps, and military plans. Vienna contains also a museum, or repository, formed by a society, for casts of statues and other antiquities, of which the originals can with difficulty be procured. The principal amusements of the people of Vienna are the public walks and the theatres. Of the latter, there are no less than five; two in the city, which belong to the court, and three in the suburbs; but all are below mediocrity. The public walks are much better calculated to afford gratification. The Prater is an immense park on the east side of the town, belonging to the court, but thrown open, with a commendable liberality, to the public. The Augarten is another place of public resort to the north of the Prater, and separated from it only by an iron railing. The Brigitten-Au is another agreeable walk; but both are much less frequented than the Prater. The environs of Vienna are very fertile and picturesque. To the north are the islands of the Danube; to the west, the lofty summit of the Kahlenberg; to the south, mountains covered with vineyards and extensive forests; and to the east, vast plains, bounded, however, at the farthest horizon, by hills. Vienna was, under the name of Vindobona, long the head quarters of a Roman legion, and afterwards fell successively into the hands of the Goths and Huns. In 791, Charlemagne attached it to his dominions. It was often threatened in the wars with the Hungarians and the Turks, who in 1620 destroyed the suburbs. In 1683, an attack by the Turkish army was repulsed. In 1741, though pressed by the Bavarians on the west, and the French and Prussians on the north, Vienna was preserved. In the present age, it was threatened by Napoleon in 1797, and occupied by him in 1805 and 1809. On both occasions proper discipline was observed by the invaders, and little injury was done. Pop. 270,000. 630 miles E. Paris, 896 S.E. London. Long. 16. 22. 31. E. Lat. 48. 12. 34. N.

VIENNA, a town of the United States, the capital of Green county, Kentucky, on Green river, 158 miles W. S. W. Lexington.—3d, A town of South Carolina, on the Savannah. 3d, A post town and port of entry in Dorchester county, Maryland, on the Nanticoke. Houses 20.—4th, A town of Washington county, Ohio, on the Ohio river. Houses 30.—Also the name of several townships.

VIENNE, a river of France, which joins the Loire, department of the Indre and Loire.

VIENNE, a department in the west of France, formed of the ancient province of Upper Poitou, bounded N. by the department of the Indre and Loire, and S. by that of the Charente. Area 2800 square miles. Population 252,000. The principal rivers are the Vienne, the Charente, the Dive, the Clain, and the Creuse. The soil is somewhat chalky and sandy, partly fertile, partly covered with heath. The principal productions are corn, pulse, potatoes, hemp, flax, and wine. The capital is Poitiers.

VIENNE, UPPER, a department in the west of France, including the greatest part of the Limousin, and traversed by the river Vienne, which flows northward to the Loire. Area 2230 square miles. Population 240,000. It is mountainous, produces comparatively little corn, but has extensive pasturages.

VIENNE, a town of France, on the Rhone. Its streets are in general narrow and steep, and it is still an indifferently built place, though some improvements have been recently made in the principal square, and the street traversed by the high road. The cathedral is a fine Gothic edifice, erected on an eminence. It has also two good churches. Here is a small theatre, a high school, and a museum of curiosities. The manufactures are of woollen, linen, hardware, leather, and coloured paper. But the pride of Vienna is in its antiquities, among which are the remains of a theatre and amphitheatre; several traces of aqueducts; arcades supposed to have belonged to a triumphal arch; and, on the opposite bank of the Rhone, the piles of an ancient Roman bridge. Inscriptions, relief, and medals, exist in various parts of the town; while bronzes, medals, remains of columns and statues, have been repeatedly dug up in the surrounding district. Population 10,300. 18 miles S. Lyons.

VIENNE LE CHATEAU, a town of France, department of the Marne. Population 1700.

VIENNE, a village of the Austrian states, in Tyrol. Population 2500.

VIENNE, a town of Prussian Westphalia, in Gelders. It has a Catholic and a Protestant church. Population 4500.

VIENNON, a town of France, department of the Cher, at the influx of the Eure into the Cher. It has manufactures of woollens and silk stuffs; also a cannon foundry. Population 2800. 22 miles N. Bourges.

VIESTE, a seaport of the Adriatic, kingdom of Naples, in the province of the Capitanata, at the extremity of the promontory of Monte Gargano. Population 4700. 22 miles N. N. E. Manfredonia.

VIENX MARCHEZ, a town of France, department of the Cotes du Nord. Pop. 3500.

VIF, a town of France, on the Greze, 12 miles S. Grenoble. Population 3300.

VIGAN, a town of France, department of the Gard, 28 miles N. N. W. Montpellier. Population 4000.

VIGEVANO, a town of Italy, capital of a district of the same name, near the Ticino, and somewhat more than a mile in circuit. It was formerly defended by a castle, and is still a walled town, but incapable of making a defence. It has a square, forming the points of junction of several streets. Its public buildings consist of the cathedral, a handsome edifice; two churches, and several convents. It contains also a classical school. Of its manufactures, the principal are of silk. Population 12,000. 15 miles N. W. Pavia.

VIGIANO, a town of Italy, in Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro. Population 5500.

VIGO, a town of Spain, in Galicia, on the Atlantic, 76 miles S. by W. Corunna. Population 2500.

VIGONA, an inland town of Italy, in Piedmont. Population 5300.

VIJAYAGRAM, a town of Hindoostan, province of the Northern Circars. Long. 83. 33. E. Lat. 16. 4. N.

VILCANAYO, URUBAMBA, or QUELLANAMBA, a large river of Peru, which falls into the Apurimac, at about Lat. 12. 30. S.

VILCAS GUAMAN, the capital of a province of the same name in Peru, which has a church, built on the ruins of a Peruvian fortress.

VILCAS, a river of the same province, which enters the Marañon or Amazon.

VILKOWIA, a small town of Russian Lithuania, on the river Svisla, 44 miles N. N. W. Wilna.

VILLA BOA, a town of Brazil, and capital of the government of Goyas, 430 miles N. W. Rio Janeiro.

VILLA CASTILLA, a town of Spain, province of Jaen, 18 miles N. E. Ubeda. Pop. 4500.

VILLA DO CARMO, a town of Brazil, in the government of Minas Geraes, 20 miles E. N. E. Villa Rica.

VILLA CASTIN, a large village of Spain, 52 miles N. W. Madrid. Population 1600.

VILLA DO CORDE, a town of Portugal, on the Ave, 18 miles N. Oporto. Pop. 4500.

VILLA FALLETTO, a town of Italy, in Piedmont, 16 miles E. Cuni. Population 2000.

VILLA FRANCA, a town on the island of St Michael, one of the Azores. Pop. 2000.

VILLA FRANCA, a town of Italy, in Piedmont, 2 miles E. Nice. Population 2200.

VILLA FRANCA, another town of Italy, in Piedmont, on the Po, 20 miles S. by W. Turin. Population 7000.

VILLA FRANCA DE PANADES, a town of Spain, in Catalonia. It has some linen manufactures. Pop. 6000. 27 miles W. Barcelona.

VILLA FRANCA DE XIRA, a town of Portugal, near the Tagus, 20 miles N. E. Lisbon. Population 3000.

VILLA HERMOZA, a town of Spain, in Valencia. Population 1100.

VILLA JOYOSA, a town of Spain, in Valencia. Population 4800.

VILLA DE LEON, an extensive, populous, and wealthy town of Mexico, intendency of San Luis de Potosi, 156 miles N. W. Mexico.

VILLA MAYOR, a small town of Spain, in Arragon, 3 miles E. Saragosa.

VILLA NOVA, a town of Italy, 2 miles N. Casale. Population 3000.

VILLA NOVA D'ANTI, a town of Italy, in Piedmont, 13 miles E. N. E. Turin. Pop. 2000.

VILLA NOVA DE CERVEIRA, a town of Portugal, province of Entre Douro e Minho, on the river Minho. Pop. 1000.

VILLA NOVA DE MILFONTES, a small town of Portugal, in Alentejo, 12 miles S. Lisbon.

VILLA NOVA DO PORTINHO, a town of Portugal, near the south coast of the province of Algarve, at the mouth of the river Sylva. Population 3600. 107 miles S. S. E. Lisbon.

VILLA NOVA DO PORTO, a town of Portugal, province of Entre Douro e Minho, on the Douro, opposite Oporto, to which it is now united. Population 10,000.

VILLA NUEVA, a town of Spain, in Valencia. Population 1300.

VILLA NUEVA, a seaport town of Spain, in Catalonia, 31 miles W. & W. Barcelona. Population 4500.

VILLA NUEVA DE LOS INFANTES, a town of Spain, province of La Mancha, 115 miles S. S. E. Madrid. Population 6400.

VILLA DE PRINCEPS, a town of the province and government of Rio de Janeiro, in Brazil, on the confines of the diamond district, visited by Mawe in 1803. It has a mint-master, to whom all the gold found in the neighbourhood is brought for permutation. As this town adjoining the diamond district, has no one, except travellers on business, with certificates to that effect, is suffered to proceed. Population 5000.

VILLA REAL, a town of Portugal, province of Trás os Montes, on the Corra. Pop. 4000.

VILLA REAL, a town of Spain, in Valencia, on the river Mijares. It has manufactures of woollens and silks. Population 7000. 20 miles E. Segorbe.

VILLA REAL, a town of Portugal, in Algarve. Population 2100.

VILLA RICA, a town of Brazil, and capital of the province of Minas Geraes, and the seat of its government. It is situated on the side of a large mountain, connected with others forming an immense chain, of which it is one of the highest. Most of the streets range, in steps, as it were, from the base to the summit, and are crossed by others which lead up the acclivity. The town is divided into two parishes, and contains about 30,000 inhabitants, of whom there are more whites than blacks. Owing to its elevated site, the temperature of the air is generally moderate. Villa Rica owes its origin to the rage for discovering gold mines. It is of considerable extent, but by no means so well peopled as when the mines were rich. The first colonists who adventured into the deserts of Brazil, were entirely prompted by the hope of finding gold. After various disturbances, a regular town began to be formed, about the year 1711. A government-house, a mint, and a depot for arms, were built; and as the trade of mining prospered, the town underwent many improvements; its streets were more regularly built, and some parts of the side of the mountain were levelled, to afford more convenient room for the construction of houses, and the laying out of gardens. Reservoirs were formed, from which water was distributed by means of conduits to all parts, and public fountains were erected in the most convenient and central situations. The mint and smelting-houses were enlarged, and rendered more commodious for the transaction of business. About this period the inhabitants amounted to 12,000 or upwards. Between the years 1730 and 1750, the mines were in the height of their prosperity; but they at length became gradually less abundant. Villa Rica at the present day scarcely retains a shadow of its former splendour. Its inhabitants, with the exception of the shopkeepers, are void of employment; they totally neglect the fine country around them, which, by proper cultivation, would amply compensate for the loss of the wealth which their ancestors drew from its bosom. Long, 46. 50. W. Lat. 20. 20. S.

VILLA RICA, a small town of Spain, 31 miles S. S. E. Madrid.

VILLA RICA DE LOS OJOS DE LA GODIANA, a small town of Spain, 82 miles E. Madrid.

VILLA SAVARY, a town of France, department of the Aube. Population 1900.

VILLA VERDE, a town of Portugal, 32 miles N. Lisbon. Population 1800.

VILLA VIGOSA, a small seaport of Spain, in Asturias, 23 miles N. E. Oviedo.—2d. A mean town on the Guadalquivir, 71 miles W. Cordova.—3d. A village of New Castile, 20 miles N. E. Guadalupe.

VILLA VIGOSA, a fortified town of Portugal, in Alentejo. It contains two churches, six convents, and 3000 inhabitants. 100 miles E. by S. Lisbon.

VILLACH, an old town of Austrian Illyria, in Upper Carinthia, at the confluence of the Drave and the Geyl, 23 miles W. Klagenfurt. Population 3000.

VILLACH, a circle of Austrian Illyria, in the government of Laybach. Area 2175 square miles. Population 120,000.

VILLAFRANCA, a town of Spain, 61 miles N. N. E. Valencia. Population 2300.

VILLAINES LE JUEL, a town of France, department of the Mayenne. Pop. 2200.

VILLALBONDO DE XUCAR, a town of Spain, province of Cuenca. Population 2200.

VILLALFANDO, a town of Spain, in Leon, on the Valdegragay, which falls into the Doura. Population 6700. 40 miles S. Leon.

VILLANDREAU, a town of France, department of the Gironde, on the Ciron. Population 2200.

VILLAR, a town of Spain, in Estremadura, 7 miles N. Plasencia. Population 2000.

VILLARD DE LANS, a town of France, 12 miles S. W. Grenoble. Population 2000.

VILLEUR AUBON, a town of France, 12 miles S. W. Chaumont. Population 1800.

VILLEHUEL LES POILES, a town of France, department of La Manche. Population 3000.

VILLEHANNAN, a town of France, department of the Charente. Population 1700.

VILLEFRANCHE, a town of France, department of the Rhone, at the foot of mountains, adjoining the small river Margon. It has a manufacture of linen, and also a sale of wine. Population 5000. 18 miles N. Lyons.

VILLEFRANCHE, a well built town of France, on the Aveyron. It consists of four streets and a square. Its principal church is remarkable for the bold architecture of its vaults. Pop. 10,000. 25 miles W. Rodez.

VILLEFRANCHE, a town of France, on the Lot, 20 miles S. E. Toulouse. Pop. 2100.

VILLEFRANCHE DE QUETRON, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Population 2500.

VILLEMER, an inland town of France, 20 miles N. Toulouse. Population 4000.

VILLENA, a town of Spain, in Murcia. It has a citadel, formerly considered very strong; 2 churches, 3 monasteries, and 12,500 inhabitants. It has manufactures of soap and coarse woollens; also some brandy distilleries. 66 miles S. S. W. Valencia. Long. 1. 2. W. Lat. 38. 35. N.

VILLENAUVE LA GRANDE, a town of France, department of the Aube. Pop. 2500.

VILLENEUVE, a town of France, department of the Hérault, 2 miles from Clermont Lodève. Population 1600.

VILLENEUVE, a town of the Pays de Vaud, on the lake of Geneva. Population 1600.

VILLENEUVE, a town of France, department of the Aveyron. Population 2100.

VILLENEUVE D'ARENES, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne, on the Lot. Wine and brandy form the chief articles of export. Population 5300.

VILLENEUVE D'AVIGNON, a town of France, department of the Gard, on the Rhone, 23 miles E. by N. Nîmes. Pop. 3300.

VILLENEUVE DE BERG, a town of France, department of the Ardèche. Pop. 2200.

VILLENEUVE LA GUYARD, a town of France, on the Yonne. Population 1700.

VILLENEUVE L'ARCHEVEQUE, another town of France, department of the Yonne. Population 2000.

VILLENEUVE SUR YONNE, a town of France, department of the Yonne. It has woollen manufactures. Population 4600.

VILLERS COTTERETS, a town of France, 14 miles S. W. Soissons. Pop. 2400.

VILLETTE, a village of France, 3 miles N. E. Paris. It has lately received the important addition of a large basin or wet-dock. Population 2000.

VILLINGEN, a small town of the west of Germany, in the mountainous district of the Black Forest. It is defended by a wall and moat; is very difficult of access, and has long been a military station of some importance. Pop. 3500. 58 miles S. S. W. Stuttgart.

VILS, a river of Bavaria, which falls into the Danube.

VILVORDEN, a town of South Brabant, on the canal of Brussels. It has manufactures of lace. Pop. 3000. 6 miles N. Brussels.

VIMEIRA, a village of Portuguese Estremadura, noted for the battle between the British and the French, in August 1808. 3 miles N. W. Torres Vedras.

VIMIEIRO, a town of Portugal, 16 miles W. S. W. Estremoz. Population 1600.

VIMOUTIERS, an ill built town of France, department of the Orne, on the Vire. It has manufactures of linen. Pop. 3100.

VINADIO, a town of Piedmont, on the Stura, 24 miles W. S. W. Coni. Pop. 2000.

VINAY, a town of France, on the Trez, 17 miles W. Grenoble. Population 2800.

VINCENNES, a town of France, near the confluence of the Seine and Marne, about 3 miles E. Paris. It is remarkable for its castle, built in a remote age. It continued a palace during three centuries; but has been since used as a state prison. It is still of considerable strength. It was here that the unfortunate Duke d'Enghien was shot on 21st March 1804. Adjoining to the castle is a fine park and forest. Population 1800.

VINCENNES, a post town of the United States, and capital of Knox county, Indiana, on the Wabash, 100 miles from its junction with the Ohio, in a direct line, and nearly 200 miles by the course of the river. It contains a court-house, a jail, &c. The plan of the town is handsomely designed: the streets are wide, and cross each other at right angles. It has a considerable trade in furs and peltry. Houses 130. Population 863. 120 miles W. Louisville.

VINCENT, St. an island in the West Indies, about 40 miles in length and 10 in breadth. This island was only inhabited by native Caribbs, till, in the latter part of the 17th century, a ship from Guinea, with a cargo of slaves, was either wrecked or run ashore upon the island of St Vincent, into the woods and mountains of which great numbers of the negroes escaped, whom the Indians suffered to remain. Partly by the accession of runaway slaves from Barbadoes, and partly by the children they had by the Indian women, these Africans became very numerous; so that about the beginning of the 18th century, they constrained the Indians to retire into the north-west part of the island. The Indians applied to the French for assistance, and the consequence was a long war between them and the negroes. In 1763, the island being ceded to the English: the first measure of the English government was to dispose of the lands, without any regard to the claims of the Charalies of either race; a war took place, which ended in a compromise, by which the Charalies, after surrendering part of their lands, were permitted to enjoy the remainder unopposed. On the 19th June 1779, St Vincent was captured by a French force from Martinico. It was restored to Britain at the peace of 1783. In 1810 above 18,000 hogsheads of sugar were produced; and at present the average quantity may possibly amount to 20,000 hogsheads. St Vincent contains about 84,000 acres, which are everywhere well watered; but the country is very generally mountainous and rugged. The intermediate vallies, however, are fertile in a high degree, the soil consisting chiefly of a fine mould, composed of sand and clay, well adapted for sugar. Its towns are Kingstown, the capital, and Richmond; the others are villages or hamlets, at the several bays and landing-places. In 1812 St Vincent was almost desolated by a most dreadful eruption of the Soufrier mountain, which had continued quiet for nearly a century before; but from which there now issued such a dreadful torrent of lava, and such clouds of ashes, as nearly covered the island, and had injured the soil in such a manner, that it has never recovered it. Population, whites, 327; free people of colour, 1400; negroes, 22,000. 20 miles W. Barbadoes. Long. 61. 15. W. Lat. 12. 17. N.

VINCENT, Cape St. the S. W. point of Portugal, noted for the naval victory gained off it on 14th February 1797, by Sir John Jervis. Long. 2. 55. 30. W. Lat. 37. 2. 54. N.

VINCENT, St. a district of Brazil, government of St Paul, 150 miles W. Rio Janeiro.

VINCENTE DE LA RANDEIRA, St. a sea-part of Spain, province of Burgos. Population 3000.

VINISIATURA, a town in Naples, province of Molise. Population 3400.

VINEYARD, a post village of the United States, in Mecklenburgh county, Virginia.

VISONIA, a town of Hindostan, in Behar. Long. 73. 47. E. Lat. 15. 40. N.

VITIMIGLIA, a town of Italy, duchy of Genoa, 60 miles S. W. Genoa. Pop. 5000.

VIZAY, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, on the Tet. It contains numerous manufactures of chintz. Population 8400. 37 miles N. by E. Barcelona.

VIZANCHIPURA, a town of India, in the Carnatic. Long. 78. 57. E. Lat. 12. 54. N.

VIRAKELLY, a town of India, province of Malabar. Long. 76. 10. E. Lat. 10. N.

VIRE, a town of France, near the river Vire, department of Calvados. It has manufactures of woollen. Population 7800. 36 miles S. W. Caen.

VIRGIN GORDA, or STATION TOWN, one of the Virgin islands, in the West Indies, 8 miles long. Long. 63. 43. W. Lat. 13. 30. N.

VIRGIN ISLANDS, a cluster of islands in the West Indies, situated to the east of Porto Rico. They are upwards of 100 in number, but for the most part desert and barren, and extend 60 miles in length, and upwards of 30 in breadth; but they are every way dangerous to navigators. The English and Danes divide most of them; but the Spaniards claim those near Porto Rico.

VIRGINIA, one of the United States, situated between 36. 30. and 40. 40. N. lat., and between 1. 40. E. and 8. 20. W. long. It is bounded N. by Maryland, Pennsylvania, and Ohio; S. by North Carolina and Tennessee; E. by Maryland and the Atlantic ocean; W. by Kentucky and Ohio. Its length, from the Atlantic on the east to the Cumberland mountains on the west, is 440 miles. Its greatest breadth, from north to south, is 200 miles; area 70,000 square miles. It contains the following counties:—

Accomack	Essex
Albemarle	Fauquier
Amelia	Fairfax
Amherst	Fluvanna
Augusta	Fredrick
Bath	Franklin
Bedford	Gloucester
Berkeley	Goochland
Botetourt	Grayson
Brunswick	Greenbrier
Buckingham	Greensville
Campbell	Giles
Caroline	Halifax
Charles City	Hampshire
Charlotte	Hanover
Chesterfield	Hardy
Cumberland	Harison
Culpeper	Henrico
Cabell	Henry
Diawiddie	Isle of Wigh
Elizabeth City	James City
	Jefferson

Kenhaw	Powhatan
King and Queen	Preston
King George	Prince Edward
King William	Princess Anne
Lancaster	Prince William
Lee	Prince George
Loudoun	Randolph
Louis	Richmond
Jamestown	Richbridge
Madison	Rockingham
Matthews	Russell
Mecklinburg	Scott
Middlesex	Shenandoah
Monongalia	Southampton
Monroe	Spotylvania
Montgomery	Stafford
Mason	Surry
Namson	Surrex
Nelson	Tazewell
New Kent	Tyler
Nicholas	Warwick
Norfolk county	Washington
Northampton	Westmoreland
Northumberland	Wood
Nottaway	Wythe
Ohio	York
Orange	Richmond City
Patrick	Norfolk Borough
Pendleton	Petersburg
Pittsylvania

The state of Virginia may be classed under four separate divisions, essentially differing from one another. The first, extending 100 miles inland, from the sea coast to the termination of tide at Fredericksburg, Richmond, &c., is low and flat, sometimes sunny, sometimes sandy, and on the margin of rivers composed of a rich loam, covered with a luxuriant and even rank vegetation. This part is unhealthy in the months of August, September, and October. The next division extends from the head of tide water to the Blue Ridge, 150 miles. The surface near the tide water is level; higher up the rivers it becomes swelling; and near the mountains it is often abrupt and broken. The soil is divided into sections of very unequal quality, parallel to each other, and extending throughout the state. The scenery of the upper part is highly picturesque and romantic. There is a vein of limestone running through the counties of Albemarle, Orange, &c. Pit coal of a good quality is found within 20 miles above Richmond, on James river. The third division is the valley between the Blue Ridge and North and Alleghany mountains; a valley which extends, with little interruption, from the Potomac, across the state, to North Carolina and Tennessee, narrower, but of greater length than either of the preceding divisions. The soil is a mould formed on a bed of limestone. The bed of the valley is fertile, producing good crops of Indian corn, wheat, rye, oats, buck wheat, hemp, flax, timothy, and clover. This valley has innumerable acres of excellent iron.

The fourth division extends from the Alleghany mountains to the river Ohio; a country wild and broken, in some parts fertile, but generally lean or barren; but having mines of iron, lead, coal, salt, &c. The country is well watered, is excellent for grazing, and has a very healthy climate. Virginia and Maryland lie between those parallels which include the finest climate in the old continent. Here, however, there are greater extremes of heat and cold. The pleasant months are May and June; July and August are intensely hot, and September and October are generally rainy. It is observed, that as agriculture advances, and the swamps are drained, the climate becomes gradually milder. Iron ore is in great abundance on the banks of James river. Copper, in a native state, has been found. Gold ore has also been discovered; and lead ore abounds in different parts. Manganese is found; also marble of a variegated appearance, limestone, slate, talc or soapstone, used for chimneys, tobacco pipes, &c. Coal is found in the western parts, and is in great abundance above Richmond, and on the Appomattox branch of James river. Saltpetre is found in subterraneous places in considerable quantity. There are many mineral springs in Virginia. The principal rivers are the Potomac, Shenandoah, Rappahannock, Mattaponi, Pamunky, York, James, Rivanna, Appomattox, Elizabeth, Nottaway, Meherrin, Staunton, Kenhawa, Ohio, Sandy, Monongahela, and Cheat. The bay of Chesapeake extends inland 200 miles, to its termination in Maryland. The principal forest trees are apple, wild or sweet-scented crab, ash, aspen, beech, black and white birch, catalpa, cherry, chestnut, horse-chestnut, cucumber tree, cypress, dog-wood, elder, elm, fir, hemlock, spruce, fringe or snow-drop tree, sweet gum, hawthorn, hickory, Indus' red-bud; juniper, or red or Virginia cedar; laurel swamp; linden, or American lime; locust, sugar and red flowering maple, red mulberry; black, chestnut, live, red and white oak; pecan, or Illinois nut; persimmon; black, spruce, white, and yellow pine; plane tree, poplar, black ditto, sassafras, spindle-tree, black and white walnut. The forests of Virginia have little underwood; and it is easy to travel through them on foot or on horseback, except on the lowlands in the eastern parts, which are covered with cedars, pines, and cypresses. Of shrubs, there is a great variety. The vine grows luxuriantly. The wild animals are still numerous in the western parts, namely, the wolf, the bear, the deer, the racoon, the squirrel, and the opossum. The feathered race are in great abundance and variety. The rivers contain ample supplies of fish. Some of the largest sturgeon weigh from 100 to 200 pounds. Among the fish peculiar to the United States, are the shor's head, bonita, hog-fish, rock-fish, pond-fish, chub, and four different kinds of perch; trout and eels, the largest of which are from five to six feet long. The shell-fish are oysters, lobsters, crabs, land-turtle, sea-turtle, loggerhead, and terrabin. The oysters, of which there are several varieties, are very fine. Indian corn is everywhere cultivated on the eastern side of the mountains. Wheat is also much cultivated. White buck-wheat, or French wheat, is of late raised in considerable quantities; oats for the use of horses only; rice, on the borders of the Delmar Swamp, where it is very productive. Hemp is cultivated to a considerable extent, and has become a great article of export to the northern states. Almost every planter cultivates cotton for his own use. The culture of indigo is now abandoned. Palma Christi is cultivated for the oil which it affords; and Beane, from the seed of which, a fine oil, equal to that imported from Italy, is extracted, in the proportion of three gallons to a bushel. Of esculent plants, there are, in the eastern parts, the sweet potatoes, red and white; the common, or Irish potatoes, which is in general use; melons, turnips, pumpkins, parsnips, carrots, artichokes, asparagus, cucumbers, lettuces, and onions. The fruit-trees are apple, pear, cherry, quince, nectarine, apricot, almond, plum, pomegranate, figs, and peaches. Here are manufactures of gunpowder, salt, and saltpetre; also of fire-arms. There are forges of different kinds in Shenandoah, and other counties; and part of the celebrated natural bridge is converted into a shot manufactory. Maple sugar is generally made, and distilleries and breweries are numerous. Ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent. At Portsmouth there is a navy and dock-yard of the United States, where many of the vessels called Baltimore flyers are built. There are various rope-walks. Sugars are boiled, baked, and refined, at Norfolk and Alexandria. More linen cloth is made in the mountains than is sufficient for home demand, and some of it is sent to Richmond and Petersburg. Steam-boats ply from Potomack creek to Washington city, and on James river, between Richmond and Norfolk, with transport boats attached. Wool-carding machines and spinning-mills are found in different parts. The chief exports are tobacco, wheat, Indian corn, lumber, tar, pitch, turpentine, beef, pork, &c. From the southern parts are sent to Europe tobacco, wheat, flour, Indian corn, cotton, peas, white oak, staves, tar, pitch, turpentine, pork, bacon, glowing, rattle and black snake root, indigo, oak bark, charcoal, lamp-black, peltries, deer, bear, racoon, muskrat, wild-cat or panther, wolf, and squirrel skins; from the northern parts, hemp, saltpetre, gunpowder, lead, coal, cypress, and pine, shipping to the north of Europe and West India islands. To the latter, butter has been sent; peach brandy to the north of Europe. The value of the exports amounted in 1791, to $131,965 dollars; in 1799, to $392,988; in 1811, to 4,622,307; in 1814, to 17,581; and in 1816, to $212,880. Richmond is the metropolis of the state. The other most considerable towns are Norfolk, Petersburg, Lynchburg, Fredericksburg, Winchester, Portsmouth, Williamsburg, Staunton, and Wheeling. There are four banks, with branches in different parts. Four colleges have also been established. The denominations of Christians in Virginia are Baptists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and Friends. There are also many Methodists, some Lutherans, Roman Catholics, Jews, &c. The legislature is composed of a senate and house of representatives. The senate consists of 24 members, chosen for four years, by districts, one-fourth being chosen every year. The representatives are chosen annually, two from each county, and one from several cities and boroughs. The governor is chosen annually by a joint ballot of both houses, and can hold the office but three years in seven. Population in 1790, 747,010; in 1800, 888,140; and in 1810, 974,622, of whom 392,810 were slaves. The increase of whites, in the last ten years, was 31,860, or 3.10ths per cent.; of blacks 83,003, or 15.2-16ths per cent. The first settlements were made here by Sir Walter Raleigh, in the year 1587. In the year 1606, a company of adventurers, having obtained a patent from James I., sent two vessels under the command of Captain Newport, with a number of men, who laid the foundation of James town, on the peninsula which advances into the river of the same name. By famine and other privations they were so reduced, that they were on the point of quitting the country for Newfoundland, when the arrival of Lord Delaware, with three vessels, containing provisions and stores, induced them to remain. In 1611, Lord Delaware, owing to bad health, returned to Europe, leaving about 200 men. Successive reinforcements afterwards arrived; and though the natives, jealous of the new settlers, plotted their destruction, the colony took root in the country, and gradually made its way, driving back the savages and wild beasts, as cultivation increased. Virginia showed great opposition to the arbitrary measures of the British government, in 1765 and 1769. In 1781, it became the theatre of war.

VIRGINIA, a town of Ireland, county of Cavan, 40 miles N. W. Dublin.

VIRIZU, a town of France, department of the Isere, 25 miles N. W. Grenoble. Population 4000.

VISCUNSKI-VOLOTSCHOK, a town of European Russia, government of Tver. Population 4000. 217 miles S. E. Petersburg.

VISK, or WEXAR, a town of the Netherlands, on the Maase, 6 miles S. Maastricht. Population 1800.

VIZU, a town of Portugal, province of Beira, 42 miles W. W. Oporto. Pop. 5000.

VISO, Et., a neatly built town of Spain, 150 miles S. Madrid. Population 3800.

VISTULA, the great river of Poland, which rises, however, not in that country, but in Austrian Silesia, at the foot of the Carpathians. Flowing eastward, it soon enters Poland at the southern frontier, passing the ancient capital Cracow. It afterwards passes Warsaw, and receiving the Bug, now becomes one of the greatest rivers of Europe. It passes the towns of Plock and Culm; and after flowing several hundred miles, with a wide channel and undiminished volume, divides, like the Rhine, into two branches, of which one, called the Nogat, and another the Old Vistula, flow eastwards to the Frische Haff, while the largest stream preserves the name of Vistula, and turning to the westward, falls into the Baltic at Dantzie.

VITERSK, a government of the north-west of European Russia, lying to the E. of Courland, and S. of Livonia, between 26. 30. and 31. 50. of E. Long. and 55. 3. and 57. of N. Lat. Area 20,000 square miles. Population nearly 750,000. Its chief rivers are the Dvina, the Ula, and the Vitchea.

VITERSK, a city of European Russia, and the capital of the government of the same name, on the Dvina, at the influx of the Vitchea, which divides it into two parts. Its houses are mostly of wood: Population 13,000. 322 miles N. Petersburg.

VITERBO, a town of Italy, in the States of the Church, the capital of the delegation of the same name. Its streets are broad and well paved, its market-place neat, and several of the principal buildings constructed with taste. It has manufactures on a small scale; but its chief attractions to strangers are the warm mineral springs in the neighbourhood. Pop. 10,000. 23 miles N. N. W. Rome.

VITOLANO, a town of Naples, in the Principato Ultra. It has manufactures of leather. Population 5500.

VITRE, a town of France, department of the Ille et Vilaine, on the Vilaine. It has manufactures of woollens, serge, flannel, canvas, and linen. Population 8000. 20 miles E. Rennes.

VITRY, a town of France, department of the Pas de Calais, on the Scarpe. Pop. 1800.

VITRY, or VITRY LE FRANÇOIS, a town of France, in Champagne. It has a bridge over the Aisne, which here becomes navigable for barges. Its trade is in corn and woollen goods, in cotton and other articles manufactured in the town. Population 7000. 20 miles E. E. Chalons.

VITTEAUX, a town of France, on the Brenne, 31 miles W. Dijon. Pop. 2000.

VITTORIA, a town of Spain, the chief place of the province of Alava. It is situated at the entrance of a beautiful valley, watered by the Zadora. It is, with some exceptions, a scattered and ill built place. The principal churches are those of the Carmelites and the Dominicans. It is noted as the scene of a battle, in which the French were defeated by Lord Wellington. Population 6500. 27 miles S. Bilbao.

VITTORIA, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Noto, little visited by travellers. Population 11,000. 40 miles W. by S. Syracuse.

VIC, a town of Piedmont, on the Chiara, 4 miles N. W. Turin. Population 3000.

VIVIERE, a town of France, on the Rhone, 6 miles S. W. Montelimart. Pop. 2000.

VIVONNE, a town of France, 12 miles S. by W. Poitiers. Population 2100.

VIX, a town of France, department of La Vendee. Population 2100.

YIKASAPATAM, the capital of a district of the same name, in Hindostan, and residence of the judge and civil establishment, nearly insulated by a small river. Long. 63. 24. E. Lat. 17. 42. N.

VIRIADROOG, a commodious seaport of Hindostan, province of Bejapore, situated south by east of Bombay.

VIZINTI, a town of Sicily, Val di Noto, seldom visited by travellers. Population 5000. 28 miles S. W. Catania.

VLAARDINGEN, a town of the Netherlands, on the Maesa. It has extensive fisheries. Pop. 6000. 6 miles W. by S. Rotterdam.

VLADIMIR, a government of European Russia, to the east of that of Moscow. Area 19,500 square miles. Pop. nearly 1,000,000. The chief rivers are, the Klianna and the Oka. It is divided into 13 circles.

VLADIMIR, a town of European Russia, on the Klianna, 112 miles E. by N. Moscow. Population 3000.

VLIELAND, a small island of Holland, at the entrance of the Zuyder Zee, 6 miles N. the Texel. Population 800.

VLIKINGEN, a town of the Netherlands in South Brabant. Population 3300.

VLODEZIMIR, or VLADIMIR, a town of European Russia, in Volhynia, on the Lug. Population 3200.

VOGHERA, a tolerably well built town of Italy, the chief place of a province of the same name, on the Staffora. It has a cathedral, built in the modern style. The principal branches of its industry are the spinning and weaving of silk. Population 10,000. 10 miles N. E. Tortona.

VOGTLAND, a circle or district of Germany, in the kingdom of Saxony, occupying a space of 700 square miles, with 90,000 inhabitants, in the S.W. corner of the kingdom.

VOIRON, a town of France, department of the Isere, on the Morgea. It has a manufactory of arms. Population 5400. 14 miles N. W. Grenoble.

VOLCANELLO, a small islet of the Mediterranean, belonging to the Lipari group, of volcanic origin.

VOLCANO, an island of the Mediterranean, belonging to Sicily, the most southern of the Lipari group. It consists of a single volcanic mountain, of a conical shape. In all parts of the island, the traces of fire are distinctly visible. It is about 2000 feet in height; the crater is very large; its form oval, its circuit about a mile, its depth about 400 yards. Long. 15. 13. E. Lat. 38. 32. N.

VOLCANO, LITTLE, one of the Lipari islands. Long. 15. 12. E. Lat. 38. 32. N.

VOLCHOV, a river of European Russia, government of Novgorod, which joins the lake Ladoga and Ilmen.

VOLHYNIA, an extensive government of the Russian empire, lying to the east of the kingdom of Poland, between the governments of Grodno and Podolia. Area 23,500 square miles. Population 1,300,000.

VOLKMANSTEIN, a town of Prussian Westphalia, on the Diemel. Population 2300.

VOLCA, a town of European Turkey. The city, 33 miles N. W. Larissa. Pop. 3000.

VOLGONA, a province or government of European Russia, lying to the south of that of Archangel, and to the east of those of Norgorod and Olonetz. It extends from Long. 33. 30. to 43. 30. E. and from Lat. 53. 30. to 63. N., being one of the largest, but worst peopled governments of the empire. Area 148,000 square miles. Pop. 654,000. The government is divided into ten circles.

VOLGONA, a town of European Russia, and the capital of the above province, on the river Volga. It has manufactures of silk, linen, canvas, dye-stuffs, and leather. Pop. 11,000. 368 miles E. by N. Petersburg.

VOLKOLANSK, a town of European Russia, 73 miles W. N. W. Moscow. Pop. 2000.

VOLPIANO, a town of Italy, 12 miles N. by E. Turin. Population 3700.

VOIAR, a town of European Russia, government of Sarator, on the Volga, 70 miles N. E. Sarator. Population 4000.

VOULT, a considerable river of Guinea, in Western Africa.

VOITERA, a town of Italy, in Tuscany, on the river Era. It contains a cathedral, an hospital, and several churches. It appears from its monuments to have been a place of great antiquity. Population 5000. 24 miles S. by W. Florence.

VOITIANO, a river of Naples. It falls into the gulf of Gaeta, 29 miles N. W. Naples.

VOIVIC, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Population 2100.

VONIKIA, a fortified town of European Turkey, in Epirus, 50 miles K. Joannina.

VOONBURG, a village of the Netherlands, 2 miles E. the Hague. Population 1700.

VOOAN, an island of the Netherlands, between two mouths of the Maese. It is tolerably fertile in corn. The chief place is Briel.

VOODST, a town of the Netherlands, 12 miles E. Arnheim. Population 4400.

VORABERGEN, a mountainous district of the Austrian states, bordering on Switzerland, the lake of Constance and Bavaria. Area 240 square miles. Population 25,000.

The chief town is Bregenz.

VORCHHARTZ, a town of Bavaria, on the Regnitz. Population 2300.

VONDER, a village of the Netherlands, 16 miles E. by N. Steynen. Population 2300.

VORHIMMEL, a seaport of Denmark, island of Zealand, 33 miles S. S. W. Copenhagen. Population 1900.

VORREY, a town of France, on the Roire, 9 miles N. W. Grenoble. Population 2100.

VORONKA, a river of European Russia, which joins the Don.

VORONKA, a province or government in the interior of European Russia, bounded E. by the country of the Don Cossacks, and lying between Lat. 43. and 44. N. Area 21,000 square miles. Population 600,000. It borders on the Ukraine, and, like that extensive country, is in general a good soil, and a steady stream of it is traversed by 3 navigable rivers, the Don, the Voronka, and the Dniez, besides a number of smaller streams.

VORONKA, the capital of the above government, on the river Voronka. Its principal buildings are the cathedral, the residence of the governor, and the public offices of the province. Here are classical and other schools. It has manufactures of glass, leather, and hardware. Population 12,000 or 13,000. 293 miles S. Moscow.

VOSORA, a great chain of mountains in the east of France, extending from north to south, in a line nearly parallel to the course of the Rhine, from Bale to Spire, attaining an elevation of 4000 or 5000 feet, and covered with snow during eight or nine months in the year. Length about 130 miles.

VOSORA, a department in the north-east of France, formed of a part of Lorraine, and adjoining the departments of the Meurthe and Upper Saone. Extent 2400 square miles. Population 334,000. The surface is rugged, consisting of mountains and forest land, interspersed with valleys of greater or less extent. Here are the sources of several large rivers, the Meuse, the Moselle, the Meurthe, and the Saone. The smaller streams and mountain torrents are very numerous.

VOUGA, a town of Portugal, on the Vouga, 37 miles N. Coimbra.

VOURLA, a seaport of Asia Minor, now a village of little importance. Houses 1000. 25 miles W. Smyrna.

VOUTEZAC, a town of France, department of the Corrèze. Population 1100.

VOUVRAY, a town of France, on the Loire, 6 miles N. E. Tours. Population 2500.

VRAKENS, a town of the Netherlands, in East Flanders, district of Bundermonde, 9 miles W. Antwerp. Population 4000.

VREDEN, a town of Prussian Westphalia, on the Breikela. Population 2000.

VRIESEN VREEN, a town of the Netherlands, province of Overijssel. Pop. 1800.

VRAVOVA, a town of the Austrian states, in Slavonia, on the Danube, at the influx of the small river Vuksa, which divides it into two parts. The chief manufacture is the twisting of silk. Population 5700. 21 miles S. E. Raab.

VRAVUARA, a town of Italy, in Naples, 63 miles N. E. Naples. Population 2300.

VRYZANA, a town of European Russia, government of Olorets, on the Vylogra. Population 2000.

W.

WAAO, a large river of Hungary, which falls into the Danube.

WAAI, a great river of the Netherlands, or rather branch of the Rhine, which leaves that river at Sebekeneschana, and joins the Maese, at the small island of Voorn. Separating afterwards from the Maese, it joins it at Worcum.

WAAIWYK, a town of North Brabant, 10 miles W. Bois le Duc. Population 1400.

WAARSCHOOT, a town of the Netherlands, 9 miles N. W. Ghent. Population 5300.

WABASH, a river of the United States, in Indiana, which waters the middle and western parts of the state, and flows into the Ohio, 30 miles above Cumberland river.

WABASH, LAFFLE, a river of the United States, in Indiana. It joins the Wabash.

WACHENHUT, a town of the Bavarian circle of the Rhine, 12 miles W. Mannheim. Population 1800.

WAGEN, a town of West Flanders, near the Lys, 10 miles S. W. Ghent. Pop. 2200.

WADDINGWIJN, North and South, two adjoining villages of South Holland; the one containing 1200, the other 600 inhabitants. 10 miles S. E. Leyden.

WADDINGTON, a township of England, in Yorkshire. Population 677.

WADDEA, a river of England and Wales, which falls into the Tag.

WADSWORTH, a town of Switzerland, on the lake of Zurich, 9 miles S. Zurich. Population 3300.

WADY, a country of Central Africa, situated to the west of Fezzan, and east of Fitter and Begemee.—The name also of various rivers in Africa.

WADSWELL, a river of the United States, in South Carolina.

WADSTENA, a town of Sweden, in East Gothland, on the lake of Wetter. Pop. 1500.

WAGENINGEN, a town of the Netherlands, in Gelderland, on the Leek. Population 3000.

WAGRAM, a village of Germany, in Lower Austria, on the river Rusbach, celebrated for a great battle between the Austrians and the French in July 1809. 16 miles N. E. Vienna.

WARREN, a town of Germany. 30 miles W. N. W. Strelitz. Population 3400.

WARTLINGEN, a town of Germany. 17 miles E. N. E. Stuttgart. Population 2300.

WARTHOVEN, a town of Germany, on the Ipe, 78 miles W. by S. Vienna. Pop. 3400.

WARTHOVEN, a town of Lower Austria, 65 miles W. N. W. Vienna. Population 2000.

WAINFLEET, a market town of England, in Lincolnshire. It had formerly two churches, only one of which now remains. Population 1400. 14 miles N. N. E. Boston.

WAITZEN, or VACE, a town of Hungary, on a bend of the Danube, 25 miles E. Presburg. Population 5200.

WAKATONIKA, a river of the United States, in Ohio, which joins the Muskingum.

WAKE, a county of the United States, in North Carolina. Population 17,500, including 5078 slaves.

WAKEFIELD, a large and well built town of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire.

Most of the streets are regular, handsome, and spacious. The market-cross is an elegant structure, being an open colonnade of the Doric order, supporting a dome. The parish church is a spacious and lofty Gothic structure, and the spire is considered the highest in Yorkshire. The date of this office is uncertain. About half a mile further to the north is the new church of St John, erected towards the close of the 16th century. In this town is a free grammar school, founded and endowed by Queen Elizabeth, but much improved by private benefactors. The school-house is a noble and spacious building. Here is also a charity school, founded for the instruction and clothing of poor boys and girls in Wakefield. The charitable donations to this town, indeed, are very considerable. At the bottom of Westgate, the principal street in the town, is the house of correction for the whole Riding. This prison is a large and noble structure of stone, surrounded by an outer wall, and contains above 150 cells. At the south-east entrance into Wakefield is a handsome stone bridge, over the Calder. It was built in the reign of Edward III., and is a fine specimen of the masonry of that age. In the centre of this bridge, resting partly on the sterlings, is an ancient chapel, built in the richest style of Gothic or Saracenic architecture. The most beautiful structure is ten yards in length, and about eight in breadth. The roof is a window, overhanging the river, is adorned with various and beautiful tracery, and the parapets perforated. The windows on the north and south sides are equally rich. But the west front, facing the passage over the bridge, exceeds all the rest in profusion of ornament. Within the last thirty years Wakefield has been greatly improved; a new town has been built, a great number of new streets opened and built, and much of the old town re-built. The court-house, the new banks, the corn and auction mart, and that elegant building appropriated to assemblies, rooms, new-room, library, and dispensary, have also been recently built. In the immediate neighbourhood is the asylum for the West Riding pauper lunatics, a most ex-temore and costly building. This town, like Leeds, is situated on the edge of the manufacturing district, of which the Calder here forms the eastern boundary. Wakefield being one of the greatest corn markets in England, contains immense corn warehouses, erected on the banks of the Calder. Population 16,764. 9 miles S. Leeds.

WAKEFIELD, a township of the United States, in Strafford county, New Hampshire. Population 1166.

WALACHIA, or WALACHIA, an extensive province in the north of Turkey, in Europe, situated between 44. 0. and 45. 52. of N. Lat. It is bordered on the N. by a range of mountains, separating it from Transylvania and Moldavia; on the S. by a boundary equally majestic, the Danube flowing from W. to E., and dividing it from the interior of Turkey. Its form is oblong; its length from west to east about 330 miles; its median breadth about 160. Its area is computed at between 21,000 and 23,000 square miles. The chief towns are Bucharest, Tergovista, Brailow, and Giurgiov. The face of the country is considerably diversified. In the north it is mountainous. The central and southern parts of the province are less uneven, consisting partly of valleys fertile and romantic, and partly of plains extensive and pregnant. Few countries are more indebted to nature, or might carry cultivation to a greater length, were the government enlightened, and property secure. At present, however, very little is done to correct physical defects. The extensive marshes are left undrained, while mountainous tracts are covered with forests. The principal rivers are, first, the Danube, which receives a number of tributary streams, both from north and south. These are the Alt or Aluta, the Dumbowitza, the Jalowitza, and the Serech. The climate of Walachia partakes of the extremes of heat and cold. Even in the most favoured tracts, the country appears deserted, and hardly ever discovers a trace of European culture. The source of this neglect, and of the very scanty population, is to be sought in the insecurity of property, arising from bad government, which perpetuates poverty from one generation to another, and accustoms the inhabitants to limit their exertions to the raising of the mere necessities of life. The agricultural products of Walachia consist chiefly of wheat, millet, maize, beans, and pease. Vines and fruits of various kinds are abundant here; but the chief wealth of this, as of other countries rich by nature, and little improved by industry, consists in its pasture, which feeds numerous herds of cattle and sheep. Of manufactures, Walachia is almost entirely destitute. The gypsies, who form here no inconsiderable part of the population (about 100,000), are partly employed in rude hardware work. The trade of the country, almost as backward as its agriculture and manufactures, is in the hands of Jews, Greeks, and Armenians. In religion, the Walachians are followers of the Greek church; but the population of the province is very mixed, comprising not only gypsies, but a number of descendants of Bulgarians and Rascians. Russia has of late years interfered, to assure to the inhabitants the enjoyment of a share of independence. They are governed, not directly by the Porte, like the interior provinces of Turkey, but by a Hospodar or prince, who is always of the Greek religion, and in general of a Greek family of rank. The Boyards or landholders are exempted from direct taxes. Three fall on the peasants, mechanics, and lower classes generally. Pop. supposed below 800,000.

WALDORF, a township of England, in Northumberland. Population 674.

WALCHEREN, an island of the Netherlands, in the province of Zealand, in the German ocean, at the mouth of the Scheldt. It is the most populous and best cultivated of the different islands composing the province of Zealand. It is about 13 miles long, and 8 broad. It lies low, and would be subject to inundations from the sea, were it not protected by strong dykes. This island contains the three towns of Middelburg, the capital, Flushing, and Veere. Agues and bilious complaints prevail in spring and autumn. Hence the general sickness prevalent among the British troops during their occupation of it in 1800.

WALCOT, the name of various parishes, townships, and hamlets in England.

WALD, a town of Prussian Westphalia, 9 miles E. S. E. Dusseldorf. Pop. 3100.

WALDAR, a village of the Prussian states, in Upper Lusatia. Population 1700.

WALDERA, PRINCIPALITY OF, a district in the west of Germany, consisting of two counties, Waldeck and Pyrmont. Area 456 square miles. Population 69,000. It contains towns of the same name.

WALDEN, a township of England, in the North Riding of Yorkshire.

WALDENBURG, a town of Saxony, 49 miles W. S. W. Dresden. Population 3600.

WALDENBURG, a town of Prussian Silesia, 10 miles W. S. W. Schweidnitz. Pop. 1700.

WALDRICHEN, a town of Germany, in Baden; on the Rh. Population 2100.

WALDOBOROUGH, a seaport of the United States, in Lincoln county, Maine, 180 miles N. E. Boston. Population 2100.

WALDRIDGE, a village of England, in Buckinghamshire, near Aylesbury.

WALEN, a principality in the west of the island of Great Britain. It forms nearly a peninsula, being washed on the north and west by the Irish sea, on the south and south-east by the Bristol channel, and limited on the east by the counties of Monmouth, Hereford, Salop, and Chester. It is situated between 51. 20. and 53. 25. of north latitude; and between 2. 41. and 4. 56. west longitude from Greenwich. The length from north to south extends, from 130 to 150 miles, and the breadth from 60 to 80; comprising an area of about 8125 square miles, equal to 5,206,900 acres of land. The principality of Wales is divided into North and South Wales, containing twelve counties; the division of North Wales comprehending the counties of Anglesey, Caernarvon, Denbigh, Flint, Merioneth, and Montgomery; and South Wales, the counties of Brecknock, Cardigan, Carmarthen, Glamorgan, Pembroke, and Radnor. The general aspect of Wales is bold, romantic, and mountainous, consisting of almost continued ranges of lofty mountains and impending crags, intersected by numerous deep ravines, with extensive valleys, and affording endless views of wild mountain scenery. Of these mountainous chains which intersect the country, it may be generally observed, that they extend in a direction from south-east to north-west, having their most abrupt declivity facing the latter quarter. The principal range in North Wales is that which is denominated the Snowdonian chain, from the circumstance of the lofty mountain Snowdon occupying its centre. Commencing at Barlley island, in the south-west extremity of Caernarvonshire, the line, varied at irregular intervals by conical peaks, extends in a north-easterly direction to the promontory of Penmaenbach, in the bay of Conway. The intermediate parts consist of the loftiest mountains in Wales. Ferwyn chain occupies the eastern part of Merionethshire, and branches out into Denbighshire. Its length is about sixteen miles, and the breadth varies from five to ten. Cader Ferwyn, Cader Ffronwen, and the Sylattin, are the most elevated points. Another line diverges off into Montgomeryshire, and joins the Breddin chain, extending into Shropshire. Another chain, or rather a continuance of the same, extends in a south-west direction from Penmaen, near the vale of Tanad, in Montgomeryshire, to the sea-coast near Llanyllin in Merionethshire. In this extensive ridge are conspicuous several lofty mountains, known under the appellation of the Arrans and the Arrenigs; the most eminent of which are Arran-beu-llen and Arran-forddy; and the extremity of the line is grandly marked by the triple head of the lofty Cefnair Idria. The celebrated Ffynhonnau proudly elevate his lofty crest above a range of table land, extending from the vicinity of Llanvair in the N. E., till they decline in the S. W., and end in the abrupt cliffs which bound part of the bay of Cardigan, near Aberystwith. An extensive chain of mountains stretches from Biddi forest, north-east of Llandudnod wells in Radnorshire; crosses the northern part of Brecknockshire; continues in a south-westerly direction through Carmarthenshire; and terminates in the conspicuous ridge of the Frocoel or Ffrincul mountain, in the county of Pembroke. The Ffowr hills on the eastern side of Brecknockshire commence another line, principally known under the general appellation of the Black mountains, from the appearance given to them by the dark vegetation covering of heath and ling. Numerous lakes are scattered among these mountains, which it would be useless to enumerate. Thus amounting, according to some accounts, to between 40 and 50. The principal rivers are the Severn, the Wye, the Conway, the Towy, and the Dyfi. There are numerous lakes, rivers, and streams of water, teem with almost every kind of fresh-water fish; while the sea, encircling the coast, affords a luxuriant addition. Of the number of tribes, many species, not found in other parts of the island, are inhabitants of this, and some animals rarely to be met with, still frequent the wilds of this diversified country; such as the goat, here found in his wild state. Roe-bucks were anciently numerous, but instances of seeing any are now extremely rare. Wales is distinguished for the abundance and value of its mineral productions, which form an inexhaustible source of wealth. These are found in great profusion throughout its mountainous districts. Silver is found in Cardiganshire. One of the mines produces silver ore, lead ore, and quartz. Other mines in the same county contain similar substances, though they are not equally productive in silver. Llanvair is at present the richest mine worked in the principality; comprising silver, lead, quartz, spar, with a small portion of copper, and yields about one-sixth of lead ore. There is a mine of copper in Cardiganshire, the ore of which contains one twentieth part of pure metal. Lead is found in a variety of places throughout Wales, but particularly in the counties of Flint, Caernarvon, Montgomery, Carmarthen, and Cardigan; indeed the latter may be considered as the most extensive and richest mining field in Britain. The principal iron-works are Mesthyr Ffwdil, Aberdare, and Cyfartha in Glamorganshire; and the Union, Llanelly, Beaufort works, and Gwernan furnace, in Brecknockshire. It has generally been remarked, that wherever iron is discoverable, coal is not far distant; rather underlying it, or lying in collateral strata. Coal is found in every county of Wales, except Cardigan, Merioneth, and Caernarvon. In North Wales, the principal coal-works are in the vicinity of Caerphilly, at Bagillt, near Holywell, and Brynion and Mostyn in the parish of Walsford, Flintshire; near Chirk, Ruseon, and Wrexham, in the county of Denbigh; at several places along the line of the canal in Montgomeryshire, and Maltravers, Anglesey. The agriculture of Wales may be considered as very far behind that of England. The implements employed are rude and ill constructed; and the Welsh farmer has no skilful mode of managing his land, which he exhausts by a succession of crops. Until of late years the roads throughout Wales were indifferent in the extreme. A great improvement, however, has taken place in this point. Numerous roads have been widened, short roads, and otherwise ameliorated, by the addition of drains, arches, bridges, &c. to the great accommodation of travellers, and general benefit of the inhabitants. Great improvements have also been made in the internal navigation. The junction of the navigation on the River Severn and Dee has been effected, by means of an aquatic communication through the counties of Denbigh and Flint, with various modifications into the mining and manufacturing districts in the adjacent counties. This plan was carried into effect by cutting a canal from the Severn near Shrewsbury, to the Dee in the vicinity of Chester. The act for this canal was obtained in 1784. It has 687 lockages, connecting the Severn with the Mersey, and sending out various internal branches at convenient points. The manufactures are numerous, for which Wales has been long celebrated; also stockings, wigs, gloves, and socks. Very considerable manufactures of cottons and cotton twist have also been established in the counties of Flint and Denbigh. Numerous manufactures of copper, iron, lead, tin-plates, &c. have been set up both in North and South Wales. The Welsh have many strange customs and peculiar superstitions. They are remarkably fond of poetry and music; and their language is said to be peculiarly adapted to poetical effusions. The ancient language of Wales is, however, getting fast into disuse through the principality, more especially the southern part. The gentry of the country are principally educated in England, and consequently few of them speak it. Family distinction is held in great estimation. Wales sends 24 members to parliament, viz. one for each county; and one for the principal town in each county, except that of Merioneth, in the room of which, two towns in the county of Pembroke send one member each. Llewellyn ap Gruffyth was the last prince who exerted himself in the independence of Wales; he was subdued by Edward I. in 1284, and fell in the field of battle. From that time Wales has been annexed to the English crown; but the union was not complete till the reign of Henry VIII. When the government and laws were formed agreeably to those of England. Population 717,454.

Wales New South, an extensive tract of country on the western coast of New Holland, discovered by Captain Cook in the year 1770, who sailed along the coast, and at length came to an anchorage in the only harbour which appeared to him commodious, and which he called Botany Bay. By his report of the country, the British government was induced to fix upon it, as the best adapted spot that could be found for a colony, to which they might transport convicts. According to this determination Governor Phillip was sent to this new settlement, where he arrived on the 26th of January 1788, with 1500 convicts, and a parcel of marines, and laid the foundation of the new settlement, which continued gradually to improve under his government, until the close of the year

1792. In 1800 it contained, including the settlers in Norfolk Island, 8000 inhabitants. According to the latest accounts, the number of inhabitants in the various towns and districts belonging to Port Jackson, amounted to 16,884, of whom there were 6297 convicts. The settlements of the British in New South Wales were first along Port Jackson and the Hawkesbury river; they have since extended backward into the country. For a long period the Blue mountains formed an impassable boundary to the east. A carriage road has now been constructed across these mountains, to the distance of 100 miles; and the population is spreading in the valleys beyond them. In 1817 and 1818 two expeditions were sent out to explore the course of the Lachlan and Macquarie to their termination, which was found to be in extensive valleys. The British settlements in this quarter exceed the town of Sydney, which is the capital of New South Wales, and is about 7 miles distant from the head of Port Jackson; also the town of Parramatta, which is situated at the head of Port Jackson harbour, at the distance of about 18 miles by water, and 16 by land, from Sydney; Windsor, which is 36 miles distant from Sydney westward, and is situated near the confluence of the South Creek with the Hawkesbury; Liverpool, 18 miles from Sydney. There is also a small settlement in the district of Coal river, about 40 miles northward of Port Jackson, where the town of Newcastle is situated. This is the place of transportation for criminals; from Botany Bay, and contains between 400 and 500 of these incorrigible offenders, besides 20 free settlers, and 80 troops. The settlements in Van Diemen's Land, which are also included in New South Wales, are described under their proper title. The climate of the colony, particularly in the inland districts, is highly salubrious, although the heats in summer are sometimes excessive, the thermometer frequently rising in the shade to 80, and even to 100 degrees and upwards of Fahrenheit. This, however, happens only during the hot winds; and these do not prevail, upon an average, more than eight or ten days in the year. The mean heat during the three summer months, December, January, and February, is about 65 degrees at noon, which is mitigated by a regular sea breeze. The three autumn months are March, April, and May. The weather in March is generally very unsettled. The three winter months are June, July, and August. During this interval the mornings and evenings are very chilly, and the nights excessively cold. Ice half an inch thick is found at the distance of 20 miles from the coast. The spring months are September, October, and November. In November the weather may be again called hot. The thermometer at day-light is seldom under 60, and frequently at noon rises to 80, 85, and even 90 degrees. In the inland districts to the westward of the mountains, the climate is about 5 degrees colder. The colony of New South Wales possesses every variety of soil, from the sandy beach, and the cold hungry clay, to the fertile loam and the deep vegetable mould. For the distance of 6 or 8 miles from the coast, the land is in general extremely barren, being a poor hungry sand, thickly studded with rocks. Beyond this barren waste, which thus forms a girdle to the coast, the country suddenly begins to improve. The soil changes to a thin layer of vegetable mould, resting on a stratum of yellow clay, which is again supported by a deep bed of schistus. This description of country, with a few exceptions, however, which deserve not to be particularly noticed, forms another girdle of about 10 miles in breadth; so that, generally speaking, the colony, for about 16 miles into the interior, may be said to possess a soil which has naturally no claim to fertility. At this distance, however, the aspect of the country begins rapidly to improve. The forest is less thick, and the trees in general are of another description; the iron barks, yellow gums, and forest oaks, disappearing, and the stringy barks, blue gums, and box trees, generally usurping their stead. Four miles further into the interior, the appearance of the country is truly beautiful. An endless variety of hill and dale, clothed in the most luxuriant herbage, and covered with bleating flocks and lowing herds, at length indicate the region to be inhabited by civilised man. The soil has no longer the stamp of barrenness. A rich loam, resting on a substratum of fat red clay, several feet in depth, is found even on the tops of the highest hills, which in general do not yield in fertility to the valleys. The alluvial lands which are on the banks of the Nepean and the Hawkesbury, are of far greater fertility, being a rich vegetable mould, many feet in depth, and have, without doubt, been gradually formed by depositions from them during the periods of their inundations. These plains gradually enlarge themselves until you arrive at the junction of the Nepean with the Hawkesbury, on each side of which they are commonly from a mile to a mile and a half in breadth. The banks of this latter river are of still greater fertility than the banks of the former. There are also various tracts of unappropriated lands. Of these is a tract called the Cow Pastures; also the district called the Five Islands. The Cow Pastures, reserved for such of the horned cattle as had wandered away from the settlers, and had run wild, and multiplied in that state, is about 30 miles distant from Sydney. It is bounded E. by the river Nepean, W. by the Blue mountains, of which this river, on the north side of the Cow Pastures, forms the base, so that they together form a northern boundary; and S. by a thicket of about 10 miles in breadth, which the cattle have never been able to penetrate. This fine tract of country contains about 100,000 acres of good land, a considerable portion of which is flooded, and equal to any on the banks of the Hawkesbury. The district of the Five Islands commences at the distance of about 40 miles to the southward of Sydney, and extends to Blood Haven river. The country to the westward of the Blue mountains ranks next in fertility to Sydney, and claims pre-eminence not to be derived from any superiority of soil in those parts of it which have been explored, as from its amazing extent, and great diversity of climate. It is in general perfectly free from underwood; and in many places is without any timber at all. Bathurst Plains, for instance, where there is a commandant, a military depot, and some few settlers established, have been found by actual measurement to contain upwards of 60,000 acres, upon which there is scarcely a tree. This country is admirably adapted for pasturage. Wheat, maize, barley, oats, and rye, are all grown in this colony; but the two former are most cultivated. Potatoes, cabbage, carrots, parsnips, turnips, pease, beans, cauliflowers, brocoli, asparagus, lettuces, onions, and in fact every species of vegetables known in Britain, are produced in this colony; many of them attain a much superior degree of perfection, but a few also degenerate. The colony is justly famed for the goodness and variety of its fruit: peaches, apricots, nectarines, oranges, grapes, pears, plums, figs, pomegranates, raspberries, strawberries, and melons of all sorts, attain the highest degree of maturity in the open air; and even the pine-apple may be produced, merely by the aid of the common forcing glass. The climate, however, at Port Jackson, is not altogether congenial to the growth of the apple, currant, and gooseberry. The increase of horses and cattle throughout the colony has been very rapid. Wages, as in all new colonies, are high. But as the governor fixes the wages to be paid to convicts, and as they are generally employed in common labour, their services may be got at a very reasonable rate. The price of provisions is liable to great extremes; a proportion of the land on which the colony depends for an adequate supply of food, being within reach of the inundations of the rivers Hawkesbury and Nepean, which frequently destroy in a moment the fairest hopes of the farmer. In 1800, wheat and maize sold at the exorbitant rate of 1.5 and 1.5 per bushel. By the last accounts received from the colony, good mutton and beef were to be had for 6d. per pound; veal for 8d.; and pork for 9d. Wheat was selling in the market at 3s. 1d. per bushel; oats at 4s.; barley at 4s.; maize at 4s. 6d.; potatoes at 5s. per cwt.; fowls at 4s. 6d. per couple; ducks at 5s. per ditto. The progress of this colony in wealth and population would have been much more rapid; but its advances have been obstructed by the most injurious and absurd restrictions on its industry. For a long time, the conversion of grain into spirits was prohibited, which deprived the colonists of a market for their goods, and proved extremely ruinous to the interests. Heavy export duties were also imposed on all the staple products of the country, which had the effect of discouraging industry, by depriving it of a market for its produce. Great quantities of coal, and also of timber, would have been exported to the Cape of Good Hope, and to the East Indies, had it not been for those prohibitory duties, as many of the ships from those countries returned in ballast. The coast and shores to the southward about 1 with whales and seals; and this fishery would have been eagerly prosecuted by the colonists; but it was, by indirect regulation, and under heavy prohibitory duties; and thus this lucrative trade was greatly discouraged.

In addition to the restrictions, the vessels of New South Wales are in effect prohibited by the 1st act renewing the charter of the East India company, from navigating the seas within the company's charter; & as those seas which it is most profitable for them to navigate. The act in question imposes on all vessels, whether belonging to Britain or her colonies, a absurd and impolitic restriction, that they must not be of the size of 350 tons, in order to qualify them for the navigation of the seas within the limits of the company's charter. Now, there are few or no vessels belonging to New South Wales of this size, which would be in the highest degree inconvenient; and their trade is indeed on such a small scale, that to lay them under the burden of furnishing out cargoes for such large vessels, is in many cases to stop it altogether.

WALBY, New, a name given to a part of North America, about 18° E. and S. W. of Hudson's bay, and divided into North and South. WALBY, a large city of Central Africa, capital of the kingdom of Hereroo, described to Mr Park as larger than Lombard.

WALFORD, a parish and hamlet of England, in Herefordshire.

WALKERSVILLE, a post village of the United States, in Centre county, Pennsylvania—2d. A post village of Lincoln county, Georgia.

WALL, a township of England, Northumberland—2d. A hamlet in Staffordshire.

WALLABROOK, a thriving and populous village of Scotland, in Ayrshire.

WALLASEY ISLE, in England, situated in the river Chooch, Essex.

WALLBOUN, a town of Germany, in Baden, with 2100 inhabitants.

WALLERENBORO, a town of Hungary, on the Hernuth. Population 2000.

WALLERSTATT, LAKE OF, a lake of Switzerland, open below long and wide.

WALLSTEDT, a town of Switzerland, in the canton of St Gall, on the lake of Wallenstadt, 48 miles E. S. E. Zurich.

WALKERN, a town of Bohemia, 53 miles N. S. W. Prague. Population 1700.

WALLESTEN, a town of Franconia, 4 miles N. Nordlingen. Population 1300.

WALLFETHWATER and WALLEY, two hamlets of England, in Yorkshire and Nottingham.

WALLINGFORD, a borough and market town of England, Berkshire, on the Thames, over which is a stately stone bridge, with 19 arches, one of the oldest structures of the kind on the river. The town has of late years been much improved, both in houses and inhabitants. It has much trade in malt, and is the conveyance of corn by water to London. Near the river side may yet be discovered the ruins of its ancient castle. Wallingford contains three churches, one of them rebuilt about 50 years ago, and ornamented with a spire of a singular form. The town contains, besides, meeting-houses for Quakers, Methodists, and Baptists. Here is a handsome market-house, and a town-hall; also six almshouses and a free school. It has sent two members to parliament from the 23d year of Edward I.: number of voters 150. Population 2003. 14 miles N. N. W. Reading.

WALLINGFORD, two post townships of the United States, in Vermont and Connecticut.

WALLINGTON, a township of England, in Northumberland, 14 miles W. Morpeth.

WALLINGTON, a hamlet of England, in Surrey. Population 217.

WALLIS'S ISLAND, in the South Pacific ocean, discovered by Captain Wallis in the year 1767, surrounded by a reef of rocks. Long. 177° W. Lat. 13° 10' S.

WALLKILL, a river of the United States, which flows into the Hudson, near Kingston. The name also of a post township.

WALMER, a village and parish of England, county of Kent. It is reckoned one of the members of the Cinque Ports. Here is an ancient castle, in which the lord warden of the Cinque Ports occasionally resides. Population 1500. 14 mile S. Deal.

WALNEY ISLAND, an island of England, in the north part of Lancashire. It is 10 miles in length, but hardly 1 in breadth. It has two or three small villages and a chapel.

WALNET, a small river of North America, which enters the Scioto from the east.

WALNUT, BIG, a river of the United States, in Ohio. It joins the Scioto.

WALNUT BRANCH, a post village of the United States, in Fauquier county, Virginia.

WALNUT COVE, a post village of the United States, Campbell county, Tennessee.

WALNUT CREEK, a river of the United States, in Ohio, which runs into the Scioto.

WALPOLE, a post township of the United States, in Norfolk county, Massachusetts. Population 1800.

WALPOLE, a post township of the United States, in Cheshire county, New Hampshire. Pop. 1304. 12 miles S. Charleston.

WALSLEY, a market town and parish of England, and borough, county of Stafford. It consists chiefly of 12 large and regular streets. It is a thriving and flourishing town, and has manufactures, chiefly the making of buckles, chases, snaffles, bridlebits, girths, stirrups, and all sorts of hardware, employed in saddlery. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, or All Saints, &c.

merly belonged to the abbey of Hales Owen. It is a building of great antiquity, in the form of a cross, but does not exhibit any traces of Saxon architecture. Besides the church, the town contains several places of worship for dissenters of different denominations; also an excellent free grammar school, founded by Queen Elizabeth, or her successor. Pop. of town, 6410. 15 miles S. Stafford.

WALSHAM, or NORTH WALSHAM, a market town of England, in Norfolk. It has a parish church, the tower of which fell down in 1794. There are, besides, meeting-houses for Quakers, Methodists, Presbyterians, and Baptists. Pop. 2303. 10 miles N. Norwich.

WALSINGHAM, GREAT, a market town and parish of England, in Norfolk, on a small river, which falls into the sea, about seven miles to the north. It is chiefly celebrated for its ancient monastery. The church at Walsingham is a large and interesting pile, displaying in its architecture, ornaments, monuments, and font, much to interest and gratify the antiquary. The latter is not only the finest specimen of the sort in the county, but perhaps in England. What is at present used as a bridewell, was also an hospital for lepers. Pop. 1061. 25 miles N. W. Norwich.

WALSROD, a town of Germany, in Hanover, on the Rhine. Population 1300.

WALTADT, GEFAT and LITTEL, two villages of Bavarian Franconia, on the Main. Population 5000.

WALTENHOF, a village of Upper Lusatia, on the borders of Bohemia. Pop. 3100.

WALTENHOF, WURIG, a well built village of Prussia in Silesia. Population 2000.

WATERSHAUSEN, a town of Germany, 7 miles W. S. W. Gotha. Population 2000.

WALTHAM, the name of various parishes in England.

WALTHAM, a post township of the United States, in Middlesex county, Massachusetts, on Charles river. Population 1014.

WALTHAM ABBEY, an irregularly built town of England, in Essex, near the river Lea. The abbey house is said to have been a very extensive building, but has been wholly demolished for many years. The abbey church, which was built in the usual form of a cross, and consisted of a nave, transept, choir, ante-chapel, &c. was a very considerable structure. The intervention of the transeps is still visible. Above this rose the ancient tower. Part of the tower falling through decay, the remainder was blown up by under-miners, and the whole choir, the tower, transept, and the east chapel, were demolished, so that nothing was left standing but the west end, which has since been fitted up, and made a church, and constitutes the present church. This venerable relic, though much damaged and mutilated, contains several interesting and curious specimens of the ornamental sculpture, semicircular arches, and other characteristics of the Norman style of architecture. Pop. 2097. 12½ miles N. E. London.

WALTHAMSTOW, a village and parish of England, in Essex, on the river Lea, near Layton, 6½ miles N. E. by N. St. Paul's, London. Population 404.

WALTON, the name of numerous parishes, hamlets, and townships of England.

WALTON, a post township of the United States, Delaware county, New York, on the Delaware. Population 1311.

WALTON, a county of the United States, in Georgia. Pop. 1026, besides 60 slaves.

WAWAN, a river of England, in the county of Chester, which falls into the Lea.

WALWORTH, a hamlet of England, county of Surrey. Of late years it has been rapidly increasing in buildings and population.

WAMERTINGHE, a town of the Netherlands, with 3000 inhabitants.

WAMPUL, a river of England, in Cumberland, which runs into the Eden mouth.

WANDIPOR, a town and fortress of Hindostan, province of Boctan. This town is principally inhabited by priests of the Grand Lama. Long. 89. 57. E. Lat. 27. 51. N.

WANDIRWASH, a town and fortress of the south of India, province of the Carnatic. In 1759, the British troops were repulsed in an attack on it, with great slaughter, but in November following, it was taken by Sir Eyre Coote. In January 1760, a decisive battle was fought near it, between the British and the French. Long. 78. 40. E. Lat. 12. 20. N.

WANDSFORTH, or WANDSFORD BRIDGE, a town of England, in Northamptonshire, on the Nene.

WANDSWORTH, a parish of England, in Surrey. Population 6702.

WANGARA, a large country, situated in the very heart of Central Africa, and much celebrated in the early descriptions of that continent, though it has not been reached, or even any distinct particulars obtained by modern travellers.

WANGEN, a town of Germany, in Wirtemberg. Population 1800.

WANGERE, a fortified town of Hindostan, province of Gujarat. It had 5000 houses, and a very handsome mosque. Long. 76. 58. E. Lat. 22. 37. N.

WANLOCK, a small river of Scotland, on the borders of Dumfriesshire and Lanarkshire, which joins the Carrick.

WANLOCKHEAD, a considerable village of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, about a mile south-west of Leadhills, on the above river. It is solely inhabited by the lead miners, who, with their families, amounted in 1810, to about 670 inhabitants.

WAXEN, a river of England, in Northumberland, which falls into the sea.

WAXTEAD, a village and parish of England, in Essex, and in the neighbourhood of the metropolis. Many of the houses in the parish are handsome buildings, the residence of opulent merchants and the families of London. The present church is a handsome structure of brick, and with Portland stone.

Wansted House, the residence of the family, is a very large and magnificent structure. Population 1334.

WASTAR, a very ancient market town of England, in Berkshire, supposed to have been Roman station. It is celebrated in history as the birth-place of the great Alfred, and in the time of the Saxons it was a royal residence; and after the conquest it was made a borough. On the west of the town commences the vale of White Horse, taking its name from a figure of a gigantic horse cut on the bos of a hill, in a galloping posture, covering near an acre of ground. This is supposed to have been cut as a memorial of Alfred's victory over the Danes, in 871. A manufactory of sack and foul weather cloth is carried on here. Population 2440. 26 miles N. W. Reading.

WATRAM, a river of England, forming a branch of the great river Stour.

WATZEN, a town of Saxony, government of Magdeburg. Population 2300.

WAPPING, a village and parish of England, in the county of Middlesex, on the east of the metropolis, and reckoned one of its out-parishes. It is situated on the north bank of the river Thames. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in trades connected with the shipping of the port of London, such as slop-sellers, ship-carpenters, tall-makers, chain-layers, &c. The new docks formed here, have been a great improvement to the place. The church of Wapping is a plain building, erected in 1790. Population 3078.

WAPPING CRICK, a village of the United States, Dutchess, New York.

WAPPING RIVER, a river of the United States, which runs into the Hudson.

WAPPONONG, a river of the United States, in Virginia. It joins the Potomac.

WARADFIN, GREAT, or NAU VASAR, a fortified town of Hungary, on the river Korosch. It is neatly, and even elegantly built. The cathedral, after lying many years in ruins, was rebuilt in 1776, on an elegant plan, and the archbishop's palace is a beautiful and large edifice. Here are several Catholic convents and schools. Population 7000. 35 miles S. S. E. Debrecin. Long. 21. 35. S. E. Lat. 47. 2. 34. N.

WARASIN, a town of Austrian Croatia, and capital of a palatinate or county of the same name, on the Drave, 132 miles S. Vienna. Population 4500.

WARBING, a seaport of Sweden, province of Halland, 34 miles S. Gottenburg. Pop. 1400.

WARWICK, a hamlet of England, in Lancashire, one mile N. N. E. Blackpool.

WARSAU, a town of Prussian Westphalia, on the Dyssel. Population 2300.

WARD'S CRICK, a river of the United States, in Virginia. It joins James river—22, in Maryland. It joins the Chesapeake.

WARDE, a small town of Denmark, near the west coast of Jutland, on the Warde.

WARD, there are several parishes of this name in England.

WARD, two townships of England, in Lancashire and Cheshire.

WARDSWORTH, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 6101.

WARDHURST, the chief town of a district of the same name, on a island in Norwegian Fjemark. Long. 31. 7. 30. E. Lat. 70. 22. 36. N.

WARDIN, or WARRIN, a watering village of England, in Northumberland.

WARZ, a well built market town of England, Hertfordshire, on the Iara. It consists of one principal street, nearly a mile in length, with several smaller very interesting it. There were anciently two religious establishments in this town, one of them a priory of Benedictines, some remains of the buildings of which are yet standing, adjoining the church, near the banks of the river. The church is a spacious edifice, dedicated to St. Mary, and consists of a nave, chancel, and aisles, with an embattled tower at the west end. Several almshouses, for poor widows, &c. are in different parts of the town. It has a considerable traffic in corn and malt. Population 2844.

WARZ, a river of the United States, in Worcester county. It joins the Chicopee.

WARWICK, a market town of England, county of Cornwall, partly in the parish of Egloskayle, and partly in that of St. Blaise. It is chiefly noted for its stone bridge, consisting of 17 arches, which crosses the Tamar, and connects those two parishes. It is nearly 220 feet in length, and was built in the reign of Henry IV. 238 miles W. S. W. London.

WARWICK, a market town and borough of England, in Dorsetshire, near the mouth of the river Frome, where it falls into Poole's harbour. The Fiddle passes it on the north, and both meeting together, form a bay on the east. Over the Frome is a bridge of 11 arches, near which is a commodious quay. There is another bridge of three arches on the north, without the wall, over the Fiddle. Warham had formerly 17 churches, though the number is now reduced to three. Its chief traffic consists in the digging of pipe-clay in the neighbourhood, and sending it to Cornwall. There is also some trade in stockings, iron, and coals. It sends two members to parliament; number of voters about 800. Pop. 1931. 9 miles W. S. W. Poole.

WARWICK, a town of Prussian Westphalia, on the Ems. Population 3300.

WARFORD, GREAT and LITTLE, two townships of England, county of Chester.

WARIA, a river of Guiana, which runs into the Atlantic.

WARD, a township of England, in the county of Northumberland.

WARDHURST, a township of England, in Northumberland.

WARDSWORTH, a hamlet of England, in Cumberland.

WARDWORTH, a parish of England, &c. nearly a square town in the county of Northumberland, on the Tyne. It is a market.

ly of one street. The church is a handsome building, having a spire 100 feet high. At the south end of the town stands Warkworth castle, the magnificent seat of the duke of Northumberland. Population 594. 5 miles S. E. Alnwick.

WARLEY, a hamlet of England, in Yorkshire, 11 mile S. S. W. Northallerton.

WARLEY, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 4982.

WARLEY-WIDONS, a township of England, county of Worcester. Population 578.

WARMIEN, a town of Silesia, 60 miles W. S. W. Breslau. Population 1800.

WARMELAND, a province of Sweden, in West Gothland, bounded S. by the lake of Wener, and W. by the mountains of Norway. It is about 230 miles in length from north to south, and 130 in breadth from east to west. Area 6686 square miles. Pop. 140,000.

WARMEVILLE, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 741.

WARMISTON, a market town of England, county of Wilts. The parish church is a spacious and handsome building. It has also a neat chapel. There are also four chapels belonging to the dissenters; a good market-house and assembly-room; and a free grammar school. It has a manufacture of broad cloth, which has been greatly reduced during the last 20 years. Population 5612. 22 miles N. N. W. Salisbury.

WARMSBURY, NORTH, a township of England, in Southamptonshire.

WARNE, a river of England, in Northumberland. It falls into the German ocean, about 4 miles S. Holy Island.

WARNER, a river of the United States, in New Hampshire, which joins the Contoocook.

WARREN, a town of the Netherlands, in West Flanders, on the Lys. Pop. 6300. 10 miles S. E. Ypres.

WARREN, a river of England, in Salop, which joins the Onny, near Hardwick.

WARREN, a town of the United States, in Trumbull county, Ohio, on the Mahoning, 77 miles N. W. Pittsburg. Houses 84.

WARREN, a county of the United States, in the north-west part of Pennsylvania. Population 827.

WARREN, the chief town of the above county, on the Alleghany river, at the entrance of the Conowingo. Houses 24.

WARREN, a county of the United States, in the south-west part of Ohio. Pop. 9926.

3d, In Kentucky, south of Green river. Population 14,957, including 1400 slaves. 3d, In the state of the Mississippi. Pop. 1560. 4th, In the north part of North Carolina. Pop. 11,004, besides 6262 slaves. 5th, In the central part of Georgia. Pop. 3720, besides 3044 slaves. 6th, In West Tennessee. Pop. 5726, besides 478 slaves.

WARREN, a post town of the United States, in Bristol county, Rhode Island, on Narragansett bay, 22 miles S. S. W. Boston. Population 1775. It contains two churches, and carries on a considerable trade with the West Indies.—It is the name of various townships.

WARRENTON, a post town of the United States, capital of Lancaster county, Virginia.

—2d, Capital of Warren county, North Carolina. It contains a court-house, a jail, a Methodist meeting-house, and two academies. 64 miles S. Petersburg. 3d, A post town in Warren county, Mississippi.

WARRENGTOWNS, a small neat town of Ireland, in the county of Down.

WARRINGTON, a large, populous, and thriving town of England, in Lancashire, on the Mersey. Some of the streets are wide, containing handsome modern buildings, while others are long and narrow, containing mean houses. The church contains many ancient and handsome monuments; and here are two chapels of ease. There are also places of worship for the Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, Anabaptists, Methodists, and Quakers. It has a manufacture of sail-cloth; also of coarse linens and checks; pin-making, glass-making, and iron-founding, are also carried on. Over the river Mersey is a handsome stone bridge. Pop. 12,670. 18 miles E. Liverpool.

WARRINGTON, a hamlet of England, in Buckinghamshire.

WARSAW, a large city, formerly the capital of the whole of Poland, and now of the kingdom of that name, on the Vistula, across which is a floating bridge 1500 feet long. It is an open town, and covers a great extent of ground, the length of the town and suburbs being between 3 and 4 miles; its breadth between 2 and 3; but in this are included large spaces occupied by gardens. The streets were long ungravelled. At present, however, considerable sums are expended by government on paving, and several of the streets are clean and well lighted. The town is divided into the Old and New, exclusive of four suburbs, of which one, Praga, lies on the right bank of the river. The Old town consists of one main street, with some smaller streets joining it on either side. It is miserably built, with the exception of a few public edifices, such as the council-house, St John's church, and a collegiate church, belonging formerly to the Jesuits. The New town is less badly built, and extends along the banks of the Vistula, in a winding form, to the extent of nearly 3 miles, including, however, a number of gardens. It contains several churches, public buildings, and barracks. Its largest edifice is the palace of the kings of the house of Saxony, now the residence of the viceroy. The extensive garden of this palace forms the only public walk of the place. The castle of Warsaw stands near the river, and is a large quadrangle, with halls where the two houses of parliament, (the diet and senate) hold their sittings. It contains several public halls, and is likely soon to receive great improvements. The suburbs are less badly built than the Old town; and Praga is memorable in history for the annals made on it in the au-turn of 1794, by the Russian army under Suwarrow; assaults too nearly resembling those on Ismail, in their fury and sanguinary result. Praga was on that occasion almost totally destroyed, and was long ere it rose from its ruins. Now, however, (in 1822) it is rebuilding on a neat and even elegant plan. Of the castles or mansions in the vicinity, the residence of Sobieski is still remarked for its beautiful gardens and statues. Of the public establishments of Warsaw, the principal in the offices of government, which, since 1815, have reassumed the royal form. Towards the end of 1816, there was established here a university; also schools for surgery and drawing, a high school, a college for the sons of the Catholic nobility, and a military academy. The removal of the court has occasioned the reduction or abandonment of the manufactures of certain articles. At present, woollen stuffs, soap, tobacco, gold and silver wire, are made here; also carriages, harness, and, to a small extent, carpeting. Here are likewise several wholesome manufactory houses. Since 1817, two great annual fairs have been established. Warsaw is a town of very old date, but was long an insignificant place. In 1793 Koscusko retreated on Warsaw, and defended it with success against the Prussians, during the summer of 1794. But on the arrival of Suwarrow and the Russians, Praga was taken by assault, and delivered to pillage. Since 1815, Warsaw has been the residence of a viceroy representing the emperor of Russia; also the place of meeting of the Polish parliament. Population 100,000. 320 miles E. Berlin, and 214 S. N. E. Dantzic. Long. 20. 2. 45. E. Lat. 52. 14. N.

WARZA, a river of Poland, which joins the Oder at Custrin.

WARZENBURG, a town of East Prussia, 60 miles N. Königsberg.

WARTON, two townships in Lancashire, and a hamlet in Northumberland, England.

WARTI, a river of Brazil, in the province of Santa, which enters the sea.

WARWICKSHIRE, an inland county of England, in the centre of the country, in a north-west direction from the metropolis. It is bounded N. E. by Leicestershire, E. by Northamptonshire, S. E. by Oxfordshire, S. W. by Gloucestershire, W. by Worcestershire, and N. W. by Staffordshire, being in length about 50 miles, and in breadth 33. It contains 101 square miles, equal to 639,760 square acres. The general aspect of this county is an agreeable alternation of hill and dale, eminently beautiful to behold, and remarkably conducive to the purposes of agriculture. The insulated situation of the county, and its freedom from any great inequalities of surface, render the climate mild, and vegetation early. The soil, as is usual with the midland district, possesses great variety. Indeed, nearly every species is to be seen. The greater part, however, is of a description highly amenable to the purposes of agriculture; and it may safely be asserted, that few counties possess less bad or sterile land in proportion to that which is really fertile and abundantly the husbandman's toil. The crops usually cultivated are wheat, barley, oats, peas, beans, vetches, and turnips. The crops partially raised are rye, potatoes, and flax. It has extensive pastures. The principal woodlands of this county are still to be found in the north and south of its former great forest, in the middle, western, and northern districts; but nearly every division is interspersed with valuable and ornamental timber. The principal rivers are the Avon, the Tame, the Leam, the Rea, the Stour, the Aise, the Arrow, the Anchor, the Blythe, the Swift, the Cole, and the Dove. The chief medicinal springs are those of Leamington and Newnham-Keggs. It has an extensive system of canal navigation. The best coal in the county is that found at Bedworth. The seam at this place is from 3 to 4 feet in thickness. It is also found at Chilvers Coton, Nuncaton Common, Hunt's Hall, Oldbury, and Griffhollow. Limestone abounds in many parts. Freestone rock is found in most divisions, where the soil is a light sand; also considerable quarries of blue flagstone. Manufactures of various descriptions are cultivated to a considerable extent. The manufactory of hardware goods at Birmingham has been long celebrated. Not less than 16,000 people, in the city of Coventry, and neighbouring towns and villages, are employed to be employed in the manufacture of ribbons. The manufacture of watches is likewise cultivated. At Warwick are manufactories of worsted for the hosiery trade; of calicoes, and other cotton goods, from yarn spun at Manchester and the neighbourhood; and a mill for the spinning of cotton yarn. At Alcester about 1000 persons are employed in the making of needles; and in other parts of Warwickshire there are considerable flax manufactures, and much linen yarn spun. It contains one city, Coventry; one borough, Warwick; and 11 other market towns, viz. Atherstone, Alcester, Birmingham, Colehill, Henley, Kington, Nuncaton, Rugby, Southam, Stratford-on-Avon, and Sutton Coldfield. Pop. 274,302.

WARWICK, a town of England, near the centre of the above county, on the Avon. It is of great antiquity, and justly celebrated for the grandeur of its castle, and its other public buildings. The town stands on a rocky hill, the acclivity of which, though somewhat abrupt, is not considerable. In 1094 Warwick was nearly destroyed by fire; and to this accident it is indebted for the regularity with which it is built. The streets meet near the centre of the town, on an eminence. The principal street is intersected by another street, which runs nearly north and south. At the eastern extremity of the first street is an ancient gate, the perspective effect of which has been injured by modern embellishments. At the western ex-trinity is another gateway, surmounted by a semicircular chapel, of a plain but impressive appearance. Nearly in the centre of the street, between the gates, is the court-house or town-hall, a respectable stone structure. The street which intersects this principal district, and passes nearly from north to south, contains in its northern division, many capacious and ornamental buildings. Warwick had formerly six parish churches, but it has now only two. The edifices of the early ages were all either for war, or religion: they were either churches or castles; and Warwick is fortunate in still preserving both a castle and a chapel, which rank among the brightest specimens of those two classes of architecture. The principal church is dedicated to St Mary. In the great fire of 1694, the larger portion of it perished in the flames; but the choir, some rooms on the north-east, and the chapel, happily escaped. A new church was begun and finished in the year 1704; but it is in no respect equal in architectural beauty to the old structure. At the west end is a square tower, the height of which, from the base to the top of the battlements, is 120 feet. The extreme length is about 100 feet; the breadth 66 feet; the cross aisle measures 100 feet 6 inches. The interior is rendered august by the remains of the ancient structure. The chapel of Our Lady, usually termed the Beauchamp chapel, adjoins on the south the chancel of St Mary's church. The building was begun in the 21st of Henry VI. and completed in the 3d of Edward IV. The exterior is a beautiful specimen of the decorated Gothic or English style, and is covered with tracery, panels, and other architectural enrichments. The church dedicated to St Nicholas is a respectable stone building, but by no means conspicuous for beauty. The court-house, or town-hall, is a creditable edifice. The county-hall is a spacious and ornamental structure. The market-house is of stone, with a piazza for the accommodation of traders. The county-jail adjoins the great hall, and is an extensive and well designed modern fabric. The bride-well is likewise spacious. Here are three charity schools, and several hospitals. Over the Avon is an elegant stone bridge of one arch. On the northern bank of the river stands the castle, on the solid rock, nearly 100 feet higher than the level of the Avon, but on the north side it is even with the town, and has a charming prospect from the terrace. Across the river, communicating with the castle, there was a stone bridge of 12 arches, which is gone to decay. It is supposed to have been originally built by Elizabeth, queen of Mercia, in the 10th century. William the Conqueror considered this castle of great importance, when he enlarged it, and put it in complete repair, giving it to the custody of Henry de Mesbury, on whom he bestowed the earldom of Warwick. It is at present one of the noblest castles remaining in England; the whole of the apartments are elegantly furnished, and adorned with many original paintings. Several hundred persons are employed in carding and spinning long wool, and in other branches relating to the preparation of worsted for the hosiery trade. There is also a mill on the river Avon, at the distance of one mile and a half from the town, for spinning cotton yarns. Warwick sends two members to parliament. Pop. 8233, 904 miles N. W. London.

WARWICK, a town of West Flanders, on the Lys. Tobacco is cultivated in the vicinity. Pop. 4200. 9 miles S. W. Courtray.

WARWICK, a county of the United States, in Indiana. Population in 1816, 3000.—2d. In the east part of Virginia. Population 1635. Slaves 1420.—The name of several townships.

WARA, a town of European Russia, in Finland, 180 miles N. Aba. Population 2600.

WARU, a river of England, in Rutlandshire, which joins the Welland.

WASHAWAY, a hamlet of England, in Cornwall, 3 miles N. W. Bolnin.

WASHBROOK, a hamlet of England, in Gloucestershire, 6 miles from Cirencester.

WASHBROOK, a river of England, in Yorkshire, which joins the Wharfe, near Otley.

WASHYK, a large and noted estuary in England, in Lincolnshire and Norfolk.

WASHINGTON, a village of England, in Durham, on the Wear. Population 1243.

WASHINGTON, a county of the United States, on the east side of Maine. Population 7870.—2d. In the central part of Vermont.—3d. In Rhode Island. Population 14,969.—4th. In New York, bounded N. by Essex county, E. by Vermont, S. by Rensselaer county, and W. by Saratoga and Warren counties. Its greatest length is 50 miles, and its greatest breadth 45. Population in 1810, 42,300.—5th. In the south-west part of Pennsylvania. Population 36,289.—6th. In the south-east part of Ohio.—7th. In Indiana.—8th. In the central part of Kentucky. Population 13,248. Slaves 2245.—9th. In the district of Columbia. Pop. 15,471.—10th. In Maryland. Population 18,730. Slaves 2656.—11th. In Illinois.—12th. In the south-west part of Virginia. Population 12,136. Slaves 1448.—13th. In North Carolina. Population 3464, besides 1287 slaves.—14th. In the central part of Georgia. Population 2846, including 3513 slaves.—15th. In the east end of East Tennessee. Population 7746, including 880 slaves.—16th. In Alabama. Chief town St Stephen's.

WASHINGTON, a post town of the United States, in Litchfield county, Connecticut. Population 1874. 10 miles S. W. Litchfield.—2d. A village in Watervliet, New York, on the Hudson, nearly opposite Troy, 5 miles N. Albany.—3d. A post town and borough, and capital of Washington county, Pennsylvania, on the head branches of Chartier's creek. It is a flourishing town, and contains a court-house, a jail, a college, and various other public buildings and manufacturing establishments. Houses 400. Population 2500. 25 miles S. W. Pittsburg.—4th, A village in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.—5th, A post town in Miami county, Ohio. Population 757.—6th, A post town, and capital of Mason county, Kentucky. It contains a court-house, a jail, and two houses of public worship. Population 818. 30 miles N. E. Lexington.—7th, A post town, and capital of Fayette county, Ohio.—30 miles N. W. Chillicothe.—8th, A post village in Culpeper county, Virginia.—9th, A seaport, and capital of Beaufort county, North Carolina, on the Pamlico. It contains a court-house and jail. Population about 600. 30 miles N. Newbern.—10th, A post town, and capital of Wilkes county, Georgia, on Kettle Creek. It contains a court-house and a jail. Population from 1000 to 1500. 50 miles W. N. W. Augusta.—11th, A post town in Rhea county, Tennessee.—12th, In Adams county, Mississippi, on St. Catherine's Creek. Jefferson college, in this town, was incorporated in 1802. Pop. 524. 6 miles E. Natchez.

WASHINGTON, the metropolis of the United States, in the district of Columbia. The city of Washington became the seat of the national government in 1800. It is situated on the Maryland side of the Potomac, 295 miles by the course of the river and bay, from the Atlantic, on a point of land between the Eastern Branch and the Potomac; and its site, as laid out, extends two or three miles up each of these rivers. It is separated from Georgetown by Rock Creek, over which are two bridges; and there is a bridge over the Potomac, more than a mile in length, leading to Alexandria. A canal is constructed from the Potomac, passing up the Tiber, a small stream which flows through Washington, and then across the plain of the city to the Eastern Branch, forming a communication between the two rivers. The natural situation of Washington is pleasant and salubrious; and it is laid out on a plan which, when completed, will render it one of the handsomest and most commodious cities in the world. A very small part of the plan only is as yet completed. The buildings, which cover but a small portion of the site, as laid out, stand in four or five separate divisions; and Washington at present exhibits the appearance, not of one regular city, but of a collection of villages, in which the splendid edifices appear of a disproportionate grandeur. The principal public buildings and institutions in the city are the capitol, the president's house, the buildings for the great departments of the national government, the general post-office, the navy-yard, extensive barracks for the marine corps, a jail, a theatre, a public library, four banks, including a branch of the United States' bank, and ten churches, two for Presbyterians, two for Episcopalians, two for Baptists, two for Methodists, one for Catholics, and one for Friends. In 1814, this city was taken by the British, who burnt the public edifices, not sparing even the national library. All these edifices are now rebuilt and repaired. Population in 1800, 3210; in 1810, 6203; and in 1815, about 12,000. Long. 77. 2. W. Lat. 38. 43. N.

WASLONNE, a town of France, on the Massick. It has various manufactures. Population 3100. 14 miles W. by N. Straburg.

WASLES, an inland town of the Netherlands, district of Tournay. Population 3300.

WASSAU, GREAT AND LITTLE, 2 islands in the Atlantic, near the coast of Georgia.

WASSENARE, a village of the Netherlands, 8 miles W. by S. Leyden. Population 1700.

WASSERBURG, a town of Bavaria, on the Inn, 20 miles E. Munich. Population 2000.

WATFORD, a market town and seaport of England, Somersetshire, on the Bristol channel. Pop. 1865. 14 miles N. N. W. Bridgewater.

WATERHOOD, an island in the South Pacific ocean, about 6 miles long and 4 broad, discovered by Captain Cook in 1777. Long. 153. 15. W. Lat. 20. 1. S.

WATERHOOK, a village of England, in Westmoreland, a little below Kendal.

WATNA EATON, three hamlets of England.

WATEREE, a river of the United States, which unites with the Congaree.

WATERFORD, a county of Ireland, in the province of Munster, bounded N. by Kilkenny and Tipperary, E. by Wexford, S. by the sea, and W. by Cork; 42 miles from E. to W., and from 8 to 22 broad, from N. to S. The country is in general mountainous. The soil is, however, fertile, and even on the sides of the mountains there is good pasture for cattle. Two members are returned to the imperial parliament. Pop. 110,000.

WATERFORD, a city and seaport of Ireland, and chief town of the county of Waterford, on the river Suir, which soon after joins the Barrow, and forms a bay called Waterford harbour. Its lately erected cathedral, adorned with an elegant steeple, is a chaste model of modern architecture. The episcopal palace is also a fine structure, built of hewn stone, and double fronted. There are three parochial churches, besides the cathedral, four Roman Catholic chapels, and different places of divine worship for various other sects. Its white glass and other manufactories are in a flourishing condition. Its exports are beef, butter, hides, tallow, pork, and corn, very considerable. This city employs about 70 vessels in the Newfoundland trade, whence they sail to the West Indies, and return with the productions of these tropical climates. Its numerous charitable institutions are well conducted and liberally supported. Here is a fine court-house, exchange, custom-house, jail, hospital, theatre, coffee-house, barracks, and assembly-rooms. Here the county assizes are held, and the county members elected. It returns one member to the united parliament. The harbour is deep and spacious; its entrance is effectually protected by Duncannon fort. The quay, about half a mile long, is considered the most beautiful in Europe. A fine wooden bridge has been erected here, to fa-

WELDON, GREAT, a market town and parish of England, Northampton. Pop. 339.

WELFORD, a hamlet of England, in the parish of Kempford, Gloucester.

WELLAND, a river of England, which enters the Wash, below Spalding.

WELLAND RIVER, formerly called CHURLEW, a beautiful river of Upper Canada, which falls into the Niagara.

WELLBOROUGH, a hamlet of England, in Leicestershire.

WELLBORNE HASTINGS, a village and parish of England, in Warwickshire. Population 600.

WELLSLEY'S ISLANDS, a group of islands, so called by Captain Flinders, at the head of the gulf of Carpentaria.

WELLSLEY, a port town and seaport of the United States, in Barnstable county, Massachusetts. Population 1492.

WELLINGBOROUGH, a market town of England, county of Northampton, nearly a mile north of the Nen. The town has been rebuilt, subsequently to the dreadful fire of 1738. The church is a large building, having at its west end a tower, surmounted by a handsome spire. There is a charity school for 40 children. The chief trade is in corn. Population 4454. 11 miles N. E. by E. Northampton.

WELLINGTON, a village of England, in Sussex, 2 miles from Lewes.

WELLINGTON, a large and populous market town of England, county of Somerset. It consists of four streets, the principal the High-street, which is wide and spacious. Its chief manufactures are serge, fringes, and earthenware. The church of Wellington is a handsome Gothic building, 110 feet in length, and 61 in breadth. It contains several monuments. Near it is an hospital. Pop. 4170. 14 $\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. S. W. London.

WELLINGTON, a market town of England, in Shropshire. The town of late years has been much improved. The church is a handsome building, supported with cast iron pillars. Near it is a very respectable charity school. The greater part of the inhabitants were returned as being employed in working coals and lime, and some mines of iron ore. Pop. 8390. 144 miles N. W. London.

WELLINGTON, a township of the United States, in Bristol county, Massachusetts, on Taunton river, 36 miles S. Boston.

WELLINGTON CHANNEL, a large opening on the north shore of Barrow's strait, discovered by Captain Parry. It is about 30 miles wide, and towards the north it presented an open sea, quite clear of ice.

WELLOP, a river of England, in Northumberland, which runs into the Wear.

WELLS, a city of England, in Somersetshire, at the southern base of the Mendip hills. It is chiefly noted for its cathedral, the greater part of which, as it now stands, was erected in the early part of the 13th century. The plan is in the form of a cross. Its internal length from east to west is 381 feet, and its breadth 131. In the centre of the transepts rises a large quadrangular tower, 178 feet high. The church contains a great variety of monuments. St Cuthbert's church is remarkable for little else but its lofty tower, which is finely proportioned. Near it are two almshouses; besides the hospital, which is endowed for 30 poor men and women. There is also in this city a charity school for 40 boys and girls, erected in 1714. The town-hall is situated in the market-place; and under it is Bishop Bubwith's hospital. On the east side of the city is a spacious open market-place, where formerly stood a curious cross, built in 1312. Pop. 3680. 19 miles S. W. Bath.

WELLS, a small seaport town of England, in the county of Norfolk. It has a harbour, and its traffic is now chiefly confined to the importation of coals. Population 2930. 34 miles N. W. by N. Norwich.

WELLS, a river of the United States, in Vermont, which runs into the Connecticut.

WELLSBOROUGH, a post township of the United States, and capital of Tioga county, Pennsylvania.

WELLSBURG, formerly CHARLESTOWN, a post town of the United States, in Brooke county, Virginia. It contains a court-house and jail. Houses 200.

WELS, a town of Upper Austria, on the Traun. It trades in timber, and has some powder-mills. Pop. 3300. 108 miles W. Vienna.

WELSHPOOL, a market town of North Wales, in Montgomeryshire. The town consists principally of one long, wide, and spacious street, with a gentle declivity. The county hall is a modern brick structure. Above is a large assembly-room, used also as a mart for the Welsh flannels. The manufacturing of Welsh flannels is principally confined to Newtown, Llanidloes, and the upper parts of the county, where it employs most of the population; but it is all brought down to Welshpool by the manufacturers, where a market for it exclusively is held on every alternate Thursday. The river Severn is navigable to Pool Quay, about 3 miles below Welshpool. There are few finer situations than Powis castle, the seat of the right honourable Viscount Clive. Offa's dyke, the ancient boundary between England and Wales, runs along the opposite bank of the Severn, at a short distance. Several spots in this neighbourhood are distinguished as the sites of ancient battles. Pop. of the parish 3460. 18 miles W. S. W. from Shrewsbury, and 140 from London.

WELTÖP, the name of several parishes and townships in England.

WEM, a market town of England, county of Salop, near the source of the river Roden. The church is a handsome structure, with a lofty tower steeple, and a chancel. Here is a good free school, and two dissenting meeting-houses. Pop. 1535. 9 miles N. Shrewsbury.

WEMMERS, a town of Bavaria, 10 miles N. Donauwörth. Population 2100.

WILKINS, FASTER, a small village of settlers on the River, 10 miles of Forth.
Pop. 40. — WILKIE, WILKIE, 1 mile W.
East Wilkie, with a small good harbor.
Fertile soil.

Wardens of English Boroughs. It has a turnpike road to the town of 1602.

...brumled
...provinces of
...Gothland.

11-10-68
Cody, Wyo. 82401
Walt
Lott

TOP SECRET

...the

WENTWELL, a firm in England, is the WATERBURY, a town in the West Riding of Yorkshire, which falls into the Yare.

...and, county ...
...members to ...
... ...
... ...

1. The first step is to identify the problem.
 2. The second step is to analyze the problem.
 3. The third step is to develop a solution.
 4. The fourth step is to implement the solution.
 5. The fifth step is to evaluate the solution.

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem. This involves gathering information about the situation and the people involved.

Pop. 1100. 12 miles from Hallandale.
WERRA, a community near Ft. Lauderdale, which joins the Ft. Lauderdale area.

shire, Wisconsin, and the Waukegan, Illinois, and den, Illinois, and the

Where the mouth of the Tigris River meets the delta of the Euphrates, at the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates, is a strongly fortified city.

WESTLY, a town of Minnesota, in St. Louis in the March, with 2,000 inhabitants.

many, formed by the junction of the W. and the Pukia. It enters the German sea.

WEST HART, a bay of the English Channel, on the coast of the counties of Dorset and Devon, of great extent.

WEST CARTHAGE, a town in the United States, in the State of New York. It enjoys a fine agricultural population 26,775. The chief towns are Bedford and White Plains.

Wm. G. Carter, a foreign born United States citizen, of Chester county, Pennsylvania. Age 41. 24 miles W. Philadelphia.
Wm. Carter, a teacher in the United States,

West Point, a post, village and military town of the United States, in Orange county, New York, on the Hudson.

WEST VIRGINIA, one of the villages of the United States, in New York and Maryland. West Virginia is one of the United States, which have been the of the United States.

The nation's largest steel mill is the United States Steel Corp. in the United States.

[illegible]

It is a small, quiet village in the United States, in Kansas County, North Carolina. It is a small, quiet village in the United States, in Kansas County, North Carolina.

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the problem.

100-443887-100

10-10-68

1000

from 1940 to 1942, and was a New York Times best-selling author. He died in General Hospital on 12/12/42 at the age of 55. His place: Exp. 1942.

1. W. J. van der Meer, of the Netherlands,
 14, rue W. J. van der Meer, Pop. 2000.
 2. W. J. van der Meer, of the United States, 14, rue W. J. van der Meer, Pop. 2000.

1997, 1998, 1999, 2000, 2001, 2002, 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009, 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015, 2016, 2017, 2018, 2019, 2020, 2021, 2022, 2023, 2024, 2025, 2026, 2027, 2028, 2029, 2030, 2031, 2032, 2033, 2034, 2035, 2036, 2037, 2038, 2039, 2040, 2041, 2042, 2043, 2044, 2045, 2046, 2047, 2048, 2049, 2050, 2051, 2052, 2053, 2054, 2055, 2056, 2057, 2058, 2059, 2060, 2061, 2062, 2063, 2064, 2065, 2066, 2067, 2068, 2069, 2070, 2071, 2072, 2073, 2074, 2075, 2076, 2077, 2078, 2079, 2080, 2081, 2082, 2083, 2084, 2085, 2086, 2087, 2088, 2089, 2090, 2091, 2092, 2093, 2094, 2095, 2096, 2097, 2098, 2099, 2100, 2101, 2102, 2103, 2104, 2105, 2106, 2107, 2108, 2109, 2110, 2111, 2112, 2113, 2114, 2115, 2116, 2117, 2118, 2119, 2120, 2121, 2122, 2123, 2124, 2125, 2126, 2127, 2128, 2129, 2130, 2131, 2132, 2133, 2134, 2135, 2136, 2137, 2138, 2139, 2140, 2141, 2142, 2143, 2144, 2145, 2146, 2147, 2148, 2149, 2150, 2151, 2152, 2153, 2154, 2155, 2156, 2157, 2158, 2159, 2160, 2161, 2162, 2163, 2164, 2165, 2166, 2167, 2168, 2169, 2170, 2171, 2172, 2173, 2174, 2175, 2176, 2177, 2178, 2179, 2180, 2181, 2182, 2183, 2184, 2185, 2186, 2187, 2188, 2189, 2190, 2191, 2192, 2193, 2194, 2195, 2196, 2197, 2198, 2199, 2200, 2201, 2202, 2203, 2204, 2205, 2206, 2207, 2208, 2209, 2210, 2211, 2212, 2213, 2214, 2215, 2216, 2217, 2218, 2219, 2220, 2221, 2222, 2223, 2224, 2225, 2226, 2227, 2228, 2229, 2230, 2231, 2232, 2233, 2234, 2235, 2236, 2237, 2238, 2239, 2240, 2241, 2242, 2243, 2244, 2245, 2246, 2247, 2248, 2249, 2250, 2251, 2252, 2253, 2254, 2255, 2256, 2257, 2258, 2259, 2260, 2261, 2262, 2263, 2264, 2265, 2266, 2267, 2268, 2269, 2270, 2271, 2272, 2273, 2274, 2275, 2276, 2277, 2278, 2279, 2280, 2281, 2282, 2283, 2284, 2285, 2286, 2287, 2288, 2289, 2290, 2291, 2292, 2293, 2294, 2295, 2296, 2297, 2298, 2299, 2300, 2301, 2302, 2303, 2304, 2305, 2306, 2307, 2308, 2309, 2310, 2311, 2312, 2313, 2314, 2315, 2316, 2317, 2318, 2319, 2320, 2321, 2322, 2323, 2324, 2325, 2326, 2327, 2328, 2329, 2330, 2331, 2332, 2333, 2334, 2335, 2336, 2337, 2338, 2339, 2340, 2341, 2342, 2343, 2344, 2345, 2346, 2347, 2348, 2349, 2350, 2351, 2352, 2353, 2354, 2355, 2356, 2357, 2358, 2359, 2360, 2361, 2362, 2363, 2364, 2365, 2366, 2367, 2368, 2369, 2370, 2371, 2372, 2373, 2374, 2375, 2376, 2377, 2378, 2379, 2380, 2381, 2382, 2383, 2384, 2385, 2386, 2387, 2388, 2389, 2390, 2391, 2392, 2393, 2394, 2395, 2396, 2397, 2398, 2399, 2400, 2401, 2402, 2403, 2404, 2405, 2406, 2407, 2408, 2409, 2410, 2411, 2412, 2413, 2414, 2415, 2416, 2417, 2418, 2419, 2420, 2421, 2422, 2423, 2424, 2425, 2426, 2427, 2428, 2429, 2430, 2431, 2432, 2433, 2434, 2435, 2436, 2437, 2438, 2439, 2440, 2441, 2442, 2443, 2444, 2445, 2446, 2447, 2448, 2449, 2450, 2451, 2452, 2453, 2454, 2455, 2456, 2457, 2458, 2459, 2460, 2461, 2462, 2463, 2464, 2465, 2466, 2467, 2468, 2469, 2470, 2471, 2472, 2473, 2474, 2475, 2476, 2477, 2478, 2479, 2480, 2481, 2482, 2483, 2484, 2485, 2486, 2487, 2488, 2489, 2490, 2491, 2492, 2493, 2494, 2495, 2496, 2497, 2498, 2499, 2500, 2501, 2502, 2503, 2504, 2505, 2506, 2507, 2508, 2509, 2510, 2511, 2512, 2513, 2514, 2515, 2516, 2517, 2518, 2519, 2520, 2521, 2522, 2523, 2524, 2525, 2526, 2527, 2528, 2529, 2530, 2531, 2532, 2533, 2534, 2535, 2536, 2537, 2538, 2539, 2540, 2541, 2542, 2543, 2544, 2545, 2546, 2547, 2548, 2549, 2550, 2551, 2552, 2553, 2554, 2555, 2556, 2557, 2558, 2559, 2560, 2561, 2562, 2563, 2564, 2565, 2566, 2567, 2568, 2569, 2570, 2571, 2572, 2573, 2574, 2575, 2576, 2577, 2578, 2579, 2580, 2581, 2582, 2583, 2584, 2585, 2586, 2587, 2588, 2589, 2590, 2591, 2592, 2593, 2594, 2595, 2596, 2597, 2598, 2599, 2600, 2601, 2602, 2603, 2604, 2605, 2606, 2607, 2608, 2609, 2610, 2611, 2612, 2613, 2614, 2615, 2616, 2617, 2618, 2619, 2620, 2621, 2622, 2623, 2624, 2625, 2626, 2627, 2628, 2629, 2630, 2631, 2632, 2633, 2634, 2635, 2636, 2637, 2638, 2639, 2640, 2641, 2642, 2643, 2644, 2645, 2646, 2647, 2648, 2649, 2650, 2651, 2652, 2653, 2654, 2655, 2656, 2657, 2658, 2659, 2660, 2661, 2662, 2663, 2664, 2665, 2666, 2667, 2668, 2669, 2670, 2671, 2672, 2673, 2674, 2675, 2676, 2677, 2678, 26 of the United States, in Hampden County, Massachusetts. Population 2130.

WESTHOREN, a town of France, 14 miles W. Strasburg. Population 2100.

WESTMANLAND, or WESTMANIA, an inland province of Middle Sweden, bounded by Gestricia, Dalecarlia, Upland, Nericia, Sudermanland, and Wärmeland. It is 110 miles long, and in some parts 80 broad. Area 5000 square miles. Population 110,000.

WESTMEATH, a county of Ireland, in the province of Leinster, bounded N. by Cavan, E. by Eastmeath, S. by King's county, N.W. by Longford, and W. by the river Shannon, which separates it from Roscommon. Its greatest extent from east to west is about 33 Irish miles, and from north to south about 27 Irish miles. Its surface comprises 249,942 acres, Irish plantation measure, including bog, mountain, and waste. It is agreeably interspersed with beautiful lakes. The Shannon is the most considerable river. There are also the Lany and the Brosna. It returns three members to the Imperial parliament.

WESTMINSTER, a city of England, county of Middlesex, which may be generally regarded as a part of the British metropolis. This city originated in a monastery, which was founded by Sebert, king of Essex, about 610, on a tract of land called Thorney island, on the north bank of the river Thames. Although it be now closely united and connected with London, it was formerly distinct and distant from it. Even as late as the reign of Queen Elizabeth, nearly the whole space from Temple-bar to the western end of Parliament-street; also Covent Garden, Piccadilly, and even Oxford Road, were fields. The first monastic institution by Sebert was a priory; but Offa changed it, in 788, to an abbey; and the abbots arose, in the course of a few years, to distinction. William the Conqueror, in 1066, was the first sovereign on record who was crowned there. To Edward the Confessor this abbey is principally indebted for its celebrity and splendour. In the reign of Henry III. the greater part of the present edifice was rebuilt, in the lofty, elegant style by which it is chiefly characterized. In 1540, the Abbey church was, by letters patent of Henry VIII. constituted a cathedral, and thus Westminster was first raised to the dignity of a city. The monastery was restored by Mary, who succeeded Henry VIII. On the 21st of May 1560, the monks were again displaced, and the church rendered collegiate, on a similar basis to that which had been established by Henry VIII. The present Abbey church consists of a nave and two side aisles, separated by ranges of lofty, slender clustered columns, supporting the roof, which is raised to a great elevation. The length of the whole edifice within the walls, is 360 feet; the breadth of the nave and aisles 72 feet; and the length of the cross or transept 193 feet. On entering the great western door, the body of the church presents an impressive appearance; lightness, lofty-ness, and elegance, are its distinguishing features; but these are much obscured by the numerous monuments which fill up the open spaces, and cover the walls. Very little has been done to the exterior of Westminster church, from the time of Henry VII. to that of George II., when many parts of it were coated with stone, and otherwise repaired, at the public expence. Previous to this, the two towers at the west end were completed from designs by Sir Christopher Wren, as they now appear. The choir of the church, in the form of a semi-octagon, was formerly surrounded by eight chapels; they are now reduced to seven; and that which was the central chapel, now forms the porch of that of Henry VII. In the south transept, called the poet's-courter, there are many interesting memorials of men whose genius and talents in science, literature, and the arts, entitle them to the honourable recollection of posterity. In other parts of the church there are also monuments to the memory of several distinguished heroes and statesmen. The magnificent chapel of Henry VII. is a most curious specimen of ecclesiastical architecture. It was built on the site of one formerly appropriated to the service of the Virgin, at the expence of the monarch, and founded by him on the 24th of January 1502-3. The chief object within the chapel is the tomb of the founder, inclosed by a screen of gilt brass, which is said to have been executed by Torregiano of Florence, the rival of Michael Angelo. The ashes of the jealous and vindictive Elizabeth here rest, near those of her hapless victim, Mary Stuart; and a few feet of earth separate the once formidable political antagonists, William Pitt and Charles James Fox. The bronze figure of Margaret Tudor, mother of Henry VII., is one of the finest pieces of casting in the whole building. Beneath this chapel is the vault prepared on the death of Caroline, consort of George II., in 1737, which contains the remains of several members of the present reigning family. The whole exterior of this chapel has been cased with Bath stone; and all the rich and elaborate sculpture of the canopies, pedestals, buttresses, windows, &c. have been carefully restored in imitation of the original building. The ancient chapter-house, which is of an octagonal form, with the roof supported by a branching central column, was erected in 1250, by Henry III. The celebrated school of Westminster, which was re-founded by Elizabeth in 1560, with an establishment for the classical instruction of 40 boys, also communicates with the cloister. Besides the youths on the foundation, from 200 to 400 others usually receive their education in the school, at the expence of their respective parents. Of the parish churches of Westminster, St. Margaret's, the original place of worship of the city, is a plain structure. One peculiar ornament of this church is a magnificent painted window, representing the crucifixion; it was executed in Holland as a present for Henry

VII. The church of St John, belonging to a parish formed out of St Margaret's, is a large and singular edifice, said to have been built from the designs of Mr Archer, and not Sir John Vanbrugh. St Martin's and St George's churches are remarkable for their noble ports are comparatively modern. Close to this edifice is the Horse Guards, which contains the chief departments of the War-office. Near this is the Admiralty, a lofty and spacious edifice. On the opposite side of the street is the magnificent pile of building known by

Danes, are placed in the midst of the great public street called the Strand. Independent of the churches and chapels of the establishment, Westminster contains places of worship for Christians of almost every sect, and of the most contradictory professions—from the mysterious Swedenborgian to the simple Unitarian. French, Dutch, Swiss, and German Protestants have also chapels, where the service is performed in their respective languages. The Quakers have a respectable place of assembly in St Martin's-lane; and various other chapels are open for the members of the church of Rome. In Denmark-court, in the Strand, is a well frequented Jewish synagogue. Of the public buildings, the ancient residence of the kings of England, and Westminster-hall, memorable for having been the scene of many important transactions, deserve particular notice. The latter was erected by William Rufus, or William I., about 1097, as an appendage to the old palace, or a part of a new project. Three centuries after its construction, it was altered by Richard II. Here, in separate chambers, both houses of parliament hold their meetings. The palace of St James was in its origin an hospital, out of part of which Henry VIII. constructed the present buildings, as an appendage to the palace of Whitehall. A spacious park adjoins this palace, in which is Buckingham-house. On the north of this park is another called the Green-park. Hyde-park, situated at the western extremity of the metropolis, adjoining Knightsbridge, anciently belonged to the Abbey church of Westminster, but became the property of the crown in the reign of Henry VIII. In exchange for other lands. The extent of this park is 394 acres, 2 roods, 38 poles; and the large sheet of water called the Serpentine river, forms nearly a parallelogram in its progress through the park, which, in fine weather, is a most delightful and fashionable promenade for persons of all classes. Carlton palace, the residence of his present majesty, stands between Pall-Mall and St James's-park. The chief front towards the street presents a lofty and highly enriched Corinthian portico, giving entrance into a low, rusticated edifice. The interior is fitted up in a most princely and splendid manner. The ancient palace of Somerset-house is no longer standing, but the site is now occupied by the magnificent structures composing Somerset-place. Part of the old palace of Whitehall may be traced in the building usually called the Treasury; but that portion of it which faces the parade in the park site of the cross, in the village of Charing, is erected another fine equestrian statue of King Charles himself. In the Hay-market is a handsome new theatre, erected in the year 1821. The king's theatre, or opera-house, originally built between 1703 and 1706, was nearly destroyed in 1793. It was rebuilt in the following year, from the designs of Sigüor Novatielski. In the Strand is the Adelphi theatre, formerly the Nane Perill. The English opera-house, or lyceum, is also in the Strand, and was first opened in the year 1838. Drury-Lane theatre was erected from the designs of Benjamin Wyatt, Esq. in 1811, and the following year; the old edifice having been destroyed by fire in February 1809. The exterior has a heavy, though substantial appearance. It is calculated to hold about 2000 persons. Covent-Garden theatre was likewise destroyed by fire in September 1808. The present extensive edifice was raised up in its stead. The interior is excellently adapted for theatrical displays and it is capable of affording accommodation for 3000 persons. The Olympic Pavilion in Wyeh-street, was erected by the late Mr Astley, in 1806. One of the greatest changes and improvements in modern London, is now in the progress of execution. It consists in the erection of a long and wide street, or rather a succession of streets, leading from Carlton-palace on the south, to Portland-place on the north. These magnificent buildings will, when completed, form perhaps, without exception, the finest street in Europe. Immediately fronting the palace is a spacious opening called Waterloo-place, which is equal in width to Pall-Mall, and crosses Piccadilly, where a circus is formed, which terminates in the county fine-office, a noble edifice, with a rusticated piazza. Hence turning towards the left, is a splendid colonnade, with pillars and entablature of the Doric order, called the Regent's Quadrant. This leads to a street also bearing the name of the Regent, where, amongst many other handsome buildings, are the Argyll-rooms. This street opens into the Regent's circus, which crosses Oxford-street, and forms a noble avenue into Portland-place. Westminster bridge was completed in 1750, until which time there was no other mode of communication across the Thames than by ferries. The opening of Blackfriars bridge proved a great accommodation to the inhabitants. On the 18th of July 1817, a new bridge was opened from the Strand, called the Strand or Waterloo-bridge, which is a structure of a novel description in this country. Each pier is externally ornamented with two Tuscan columns, supporting a square projection. Another bridge has also been constructed over the Thames, leading from Tothill-fields to Vauxhall, and thence properly named Vauxhall-bridge. An establishment of a peculiar character has lately been raised on the banks of the Thames. This is the Penitentiary, designed for the confinement, employment, and reformation of offenders of secondary criminality. In Tothill-fields is a bridewell, for the detention and temporary punishment of petty offenders, under the charge of the magistrates of the city and liberties. The charitable establishments of Westminster, for the education and maintenance of youth, and the consolation of age; for the relief of disease and accidental calamity, are much more useful and numerous than splendid. The Middlesex and the St. George's hospitals (not, however, properly within the town), the Westminster infirmary, &c. are excellent institutions. In the Adelphi is a handsome edifice, belonging to the society for the encouragement of arts, manufactures, and commerce. In the great hall is a series of paintings, unique in modern times, by the late James Barry. The academy of painting, sculpture, and architecture, is a valuable institution for the promotion of science and the fine arts. There are also many distinguished private mansions of noblemen and others. Population 162,000.

WESTMINSTER, two post townships of the United States, in Vermont and Massachusetts.

WESTMORELAND, a county of England, bounded N. by the counties of Durham and Cumberland, W. by Cumberland and Lancashire, S. by Lancashire and Yorkshire, and E. by Yorkshire and Durham. The greatest breadth of this county is thirty-two miles; and its greatest length, from east to west, is forty miles. Area 844 square miles. It sends four members to parliament. It is a region of lofty mountains, naked hills, and black barren moors. The valleys in which the rivers run are tolerably fertile. The south-western side is fertile, with a warmer climate than the eastern. These two sides of the county, where the fertility lies, are divided by lofty fells and barren moors, intersected with pastoral vales. The climate of this county is exceedingly humid, owing to its contiguity to the western ocean. According to an estimate of the bishop of Llandaff, three-fourths of Westmoreland consists of uncultivated lands; but very extensive inclosures have taken place since this calculation. In some parts of this county, considerable portions of land are covered with copse-wood, consisting principally of oak, ash, alder, birch, and hazel. Veins of metallic ore, chiefly copper and lead, have been occasionally discovered; and some unsuccessful attempts have been made to work them. The strata of coal in this county are too compact in their nature to promise pit coal, either of a good quality or in any abundance. The mountainous parts of Westmoreland abound with various sorts of slate, all of which are used by the inhabitants of that county for covering the roofs of their buildings, as well as for other purposes. The principal rivers are the Eden, the Lune, the Ken, and the Egmout. Westmoreland is celebrated for its extensive lakes, which during the summer season attract numerous visitors. Windermere is the most extensive piece of water in England, being 10½ miles in a straight line down its middle, and from one to two miles in breadth. Its depth is 13, 23, 29, and 31 fathoms. Ullswater is about 9 miles in length, and varies in breadth from a quarter of a mile to two miles. There are various other smaller lakes. It contains one borough, Appleby, and seven market towns, Ambeside, Brough, Burton, Kendal, Kirby Lonsdale, Kirby Stephen, and Orton. Traces of two Roman military roads are still visible in this county. Population 51,330.

WESTMORELAND, a county of the United States. Pop. 26,392. Chief town, Greensburg.—21. In the north-east part of Virginia. Pop. 3102. Slaves 4030. Chief town Lees.—The name of several post townships.

WESTON, the name of numerous townships, parishes, and hamlets, in England, mostly insignificant.

WESTON, three post townships of the United States, in Vermont, Massachusetts, and Connecticut.

WESTPHALIA, CIRCLE OF, an extensive country in the north-west of Germany, varying in its boundaries and extent very materially, in different periods of its history. Area 27,000 square miles. The Westphalian territory now belongs chiefly to Prussia, Hanover, and Oldenburg. Population 2,500,000.

WESTPHALIA, a duchy in the west of Germany, having on the west the circle of the Upper Rhine, and on the three other sides, that of Westphalia; but belonging politically to the circle of the Lower Rhine. Extent 1700 square miles. Pop. 140,000.

WESTPHALIA, PROVINCE OF, a province of the Prussian states, constituted in 1816, and bounded W. by the Netherlands, and E. by Hanover and Hesse-Cassel. Extent 8360 square miles. It is not generally a fertile soil; particular spots, however, are found of great productiveness. It contains mines of iron, lead, copper, and coal; also extensive salt-works. The manufactures are linen and hardware. Population 1,600,000.

WESTPORT, a regular and well built seaport town of Ireland, county of Mayo, at the mouth of a stream, which forms a fine bay within Clew Bay. 113 miles W. N. W. Dublin.

WESTPORT, a seaport of the United States, in Bristol county, Massachusetts. 60 miles S. Boston. Pop. 2503.—2d. A post village in Essex county, New York.—3d. A post town of Henry county, Kentucky, on the Ohio.

WESTRAY, one of the Orkney islands, about 20 miles N. from Kirkwall. Population 1020.

WESTRAAKEN, a village of the Netherlands, in North H. land. Pop. 2500.

WETHERBY, a market town and parish of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, on the Wharfe. At some distance below the town is a valuable mineral spring. Pop. 1217. 14 miles S. by W. York.

WETHERSFIELD, a post township of the United States, Connecticut. Pop. 3961.

WETTERAVIA, in Germany, originally the small district lying along the river Wetter, but afterwards comprising all the country between the Lahn, the Rhine, and the Maine.

WETTEREN, a town of the Netherlands, on the Scheldt. It has manufactures of linen, lace, and woollens. Population 7400. 7 miles E. by S. Ghent.

WETTER, a town of Saxony, on the Saale, 20 miles W. N. W. Leipzig. Pop. 2700.

WEYZAR, a town of Germany, on the Lahn, 25 miles N. Frankfurt on the Maine. Population 4300.

WEYELONGHEM, a town of West Flanders, on the Scheldt. Pop. 3100.

WEYER, a river of England, in Devonshire, which runs into the Colaniff.

WEYERHOUT, a village and parish of England, in Cheshire, on the Weyer. Pop. 2450.

WEYERY, a river of Wales, in Brecknockshire, which runs into the Wye.

WEXFORD, a county of Ireland, in the province of Leinster, bounded E. by St George's channel, S. by Waterford bay, S. W. by the county of Cork, and N. by the county of Wicklow. It extends 53 Irish miles in length, and 24 in breadth. It contains 315,396 Irish plantation acres. It has two boroughs, namely, Wexford and New Ross. The Nore and Barrow are the chief streams. It sends two members to the imperial parliament, besides the towns of Wexford and New Ross one each.

WEXFORD, a seaport town of Ireland, at the mouth of the Slaney, chief town of the above county, with a large and beautiful harbour, in St George's channel. It is irregularly built, with narrow streets. It has, however, some handsome buildings. On the site of the old castle the barracks are erected. The church, situated in the main street, is an elegant modern structure. The market and court-houses are likewise tasteful new edifices. But the chief ornament of Wexford is its wooden bridge, thrown over an arm of the sea, 2100 feet long. The harbour, though spacious, is shallow, the mouth being choked with a bar. This town was stormed by Cromwell in 1643. The trade is considerable. It returns one member to the imperial parliament. Much woollen cloth is manufactured in the town and neighbourhood. 25 miles W. N. W. Waterford.

WEXIO, a town of Sweden, in Smaland. Pop. 1200. 40 miles N. N. W. Carlscrona.

WEY, a river of England, Dorsetshire. It runs into the sea at Weymouth. 2d, A river of Surrey. It joins the Thames at Weybridge.

WEYBRIDGE, a village and parish of England, in Surrey, 29 miles S. W. London.

WEYTHILL, a village of England, in Southampton, chiefly noted on account of its great annual fair, held from the 9th to the 15th of October, for cattle, store-sheep, Sussex and Kentish hops, Wilts, Somerset, and Gloucester cheese. 3 miles W. Andover.

WEYMOUTH, a seaport, borough, and market town of England, in Dorsetshire, at the mouth of the Wey, celebrated as a fashionable bathing place. It is situated on the British channel, at the western side of a most beautiful bay, well protected from the north winds by hills. It communicates with Melcombe Regis, to which it is united by a handsome new bridge. Weymouth became a place of fashionable resort, in consequence of its being frequented by George III., and is now greatly enlarged by the addition of many new and elegant buildings. The church is a low structure, and consists of three aisles. East of the church are some buildings connected with a Dominican priory, which are now parcelled out in tenements. The Quakers and the Independents have each a meeting-house here. At the west end of the town is a small town-hall. The theatre is neatly fitted up, and the assembly-room is lofty, light, and spacious. The fashionable promenade is on the esplanade, which is a beautiful raised terrace, of considerable length and breadth, kept in the most perfect repair, with a slope gradually descending to the sands. Here is likewise a battery, mounting 21 small guns. In the vicinity is a battery of heavy cannon, and some cavalry barracks. The site of this town appears to have been known to the Romans. Weymouth furnished 20 ships, and 204 mariners, towards the siege of Calais; and in the year 1688 it contributed 6 ships to oppose the Armada. The two boroughs of Weymouth and Melcombe Regis possess, as one borough, the privilege of sending four members to parliament. Number of voters 200. Pop. 2370. 9 miles S. Dorchester.

WEYMOUTH, a post township of the United States, in Norfolk county, Massachusetts.

WHANDON, a hamlet of England, in Buckinghamshire. Pop. 525.

WHALLEY, a township of England, Lancashire. The parish church is very ancient. Pop. 1058. 6 miles N. E. Blackburn.

WHALSBAY, a small island in Shetland, on the east coast of the Mainland.

WHARFON, a township of England, in Northumberland, 7 miles S. W. Morpeth.

WHANGPOA, a seaport of China, about 2 miles below Canton.

WHARF, a river of England, in Yorkshire, which discharges itself into the Ouse.

WHARTON, or WARTON, a township of England, in Cheshire. Pop. 863.

WHARTON, 3 townships of England, Herefordshire, Lincolnshire, and Westmoreland.

WHEATHAMSTEAD, a village and parish of England, in Hertfordshire, on the Lea. Population 1584.

WHEATON, AGTON, a township of England, in Staffordshire. Pop. 710.

WHEELER, a river of Wales, in Denbighshire, which runs into the Chryd.

WHEELING, a port town of the United States, in Ohio county, Virginia, on the Ohio, at the mouth of the Wheeling. Houses 200. 28 miles W. by S. Washington.

WHEELING, two tributaries of the Ohio, in the states of Virginia and Ohio.

WHEELOCK, a river of England, in Cheshire, which runs into the Dan.

WHIDAN, a considerable country of Western Africa, the most important of those comprehended under the general appellation of the Slave coast of Guinea.

WHITBY, a seaport and market town of England, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, on the river Esk, which forms the harbour. It is very closely and irregularly built. The town-hall is a heavy pile. It has a poor-house, which is on an extensive plan; a dispensary for administering advice and medicines to the poor; and several other charitable and pious institutions. The town has a respectable subscription library, and a commodious news-room. The parochial church was originally of Gothic architecture; but it has undergone many modern alterations. It contains a handsome monument, erected in 1772, over the grave of General Lascelles, who was a native of Whitby. A spacious chapel of ease has been erected in the lower part of the town. It has, besides, churches for Presbyterians, Independents, Roman Catholics, and Quakers. The Methodists have two churches. Of the ancient abbey of Whitby, nothing now remains but the ruins of the church, which was formerly 100 yards in length, and 21 in breadth, exclusive of the transepts, which extended 12 yards further on each side. This venerable ruin stands in a commanding situation, on a high cliff, on the east side of the town, which it overlooks. In the year 1640, Whitby was only a fishing town. The important discovery of the alum mine at Guisborough, at the close of the reign of Elizabeth, raised it from its obscurity. Another alum work was begun in 1616, within three miles of Whitby. In consequence of this extended speculation, two great branches of trade were opened at the port of Whitby; one for supplying the works with coal, and the other for conveying the alum to distant parts. About the beginning of the last century, to restrain the violence of storms in north-easterly storms, the east pier was built, extending 200 yards westerly to the channel of the river Esk. On the west side of the river, a western pier was also formed, extending more than 200 yards towards the sea, and running contiguous to the channel of the Esk. This pier was afterwards lengthened 100 yards, and it now makes a very beautiful appearance, being regularly built of squared stone, and extending nearly 620 yards, including the length of a spacious quay. It terminates in a strong rounded head, with embrasures for a battery. By these two piers, the entrance of the harbour is well secured.

In spring tides, the depth of water is from 15 to 18 feet. During strong northerly gales, there is a great swell in the outer harbour. The inner harbour, above the draw-bridge constructed over the Esk, is, however, capacious and secure. Here are erected dark-yards for the building of ships, on both sides of the river. Here are also commodious dry-docks; and the business of ship-building is generally carried on to a very considerable extent. This town has suffered much from the ocean, particularly in 1787, when a strong new built quay, supporting a pile of buildings 80 feet above the level of the sea, was destroyed. Population 8697. 48 miles N. N. E. York, and 217 N. by W. London.

WHITCHURCH, a borough and market town of England, in Shropshire. Its church is a handsome modern building, of the Tuscan order. In this town was formerly a baronial fortress, which is now in ruins. Here is an excellent free school, with houses for the master and usher. There are also meeting-houses for Protestant dissenters, and several charitable institutions. Population 6376. 20 miles N. Shrewsbury.

WHITCHURCH, a market town and borough of England, county of Southampton. The church is a low building, but of some extent; and there are, besides, meeting-houses for Baptists, Methodists, Quakers, and Independents. The town contains manufactures of shalloons, serges, &c. and an extensive one of paper. It sends two members to parliament. Number of voters 70. Population 1434. 24 miles N. E. Salisbury.—The name of various parishes and hamlets of England.

WHITE, a county of the United States, in West Tennessee. Pop. 4028.—2d. In Illinois.

WHITFERN, a parish and village of Scotland, in West Lothian. Population 1060.

WHITEHALL, formerly SEENESBOROUGH, a post township and village of the United States, in Washington county, New York, at the south end of Lake Champlain. It is the great thoroughfare between New York and Montreal. Pop. 2116. 170 miles N.W. Boston.

WHITEMALL, a post village of the United States, in Mecklenburg county, N. Carolina.

WHITERAVEN, a large, populous, and improving seaport and market town of England, in Cumberland, situated on a bay of the Irish sea. The town is built on a regular plan; the streets are generally spacious and clean, and cut each other at right angles. There are 3 churches, besides several meeting-houses, a Roman Catholic chapel, a public dispensary, a free school, many endowed, charity schools, &c. Here is a commodious residence of the Earl of Lonsdale, called the Castle, which possesses some splendid paintings of the old masters. To the improvements of its harbour in the reign of Queen Anne, the town owes its present thriving condition. The piers, or moles of the harbour, have since been greatly enlarged and improved; and foundations were laid down in 1829, for further altering the harbour. Here are three breweries. Whitehaven contains yards for ship-building; also sail-cloth manufactories, and three large breweries. A very handsome theatre was built in 1769. On both the Old and New quays are erected light-houses; and the entrance of the harbour is defended by four batteries, mounting in all 68 cannon, among which are 12 forty-two pounders, and 18 of thirty-six. The coal-worka, being near the sea, are very convenient for shipping; some of these mines are wrought a great distance under the sea, and others beneath the town; owing to which circumstance, some years ago, the ground under several of the houses gave way. About 18 houses were in this manner destroyed, and the pavement in one of the streets was rent in several places. Whitehaven has risen, within the last 170 years, from a few huts to a wealthy and flourishing town. The exportation of coals to Ireland is a great source of wealth to Whitehaven; but its trade is now extended to Africa, America, the West Indies, and almost every commercial town in Europe. Population 12,436. 40 miles N. W. Carlisle.

WHITBULL, a considerable fishing town of Scotland, in Banffshire.

WHITDOWN, a small island of Scotland, near the coast of Wigton.

WHITE MOUNTAINS, or WHITE HILLS, a range of mountains of the United States, in New Hampshire, 20 miles long, and 10 broad.

WHITE PLAINS, a post township and village of the United States, in West Chester county, New York, noted for a battle between the Americans and British, in 1776. Population 693. 14 miles S. Bedford.

WHITE RIVER, a river of the United States, in Vermont. It joins the Connecticut.—2d, A river in Indiana, which runs into the Mississippi.—3d, A tributary of the Mississippi, in the Missouri Territory.

WHITENOROUGH, a post village of the United States, in Oneida county, New York. Houses 100. 97 miles W. by N. Albany.

WHITE SEA, called by the Russians Bela More, a great gulf of the Northern ocean, penetrating into the Russian territory, 800 or 400 miles. It extends from Long. 32 to 46. E. and from Lat. 63. 43. to 68. 23. N.

WHITESTONE, a river of the United States, in Louisiana, which runs into the Missouri.

WHITWATER, a river of the Isle of Man, which runs into the sea at Douglas.

WHITWATER, a river of the United States, in Indiana. It runs into the Great Miami.

WHITWORTH, a parish and royal burgh of Scotland, in Wigtonshire, seated on the bay of Wigton, on a small stream which forms a safe harbour. It has a good hall for public meetings, adorned with turrets and a spire. It unites with the burghs of New Galloway, Wigton, and Stranraer, in sending a member to the British parliament. It was a Roman station. Pop. 2301. 11 miles S. Wigton.

WHITLEY, the name of various hamlets, parishes, and townships in England, mostly inconsiderable.

WHITSAND BAY, a bay of Wales, in Pembrokeshire, near St David's. At its entrance lie the rocks called the Bishop and his Clerks.

WHITSTAPLE, a seaport, village, and parish of England, in Kent, 6 miles N. Canterbury.

WHITTADEN, or WHITT-WATER, a river of Scotland, in Berwickshire, which falls into the Tweed, about 5 miles above Berwick.

WIJCKM, a village of the Netherlands, in Gelderland. Population 1700.

WICK, a parish and royal burgh of Scotland, in Caithness, at the mouth of the Wick. The harbour has been much improved; Wick has, in consequence, greatly increased, and many buildings are at present going on. The chief branch of commerce and industry is the Fisheries. It is one of the northern districts of burghs, and, with Kirkwall, Dornoch, Dingwall, and Tain, sends a member to parliament. Pop. 6713. 204 miles S. Thurso.

WICK, a river of Scotland, in Caithness, which falls into the sea at the town of Wick.

WICKFORD, a post village of the United States, in North Kingston, Rhode Island.

WICKTOW, a county of Ireland, in the province of Leinster, bounded N. by Dublin, E. by the Irish sea, S. by Wexford, and W. by Kildare and Carlow; about 32 miles from N. to S., and from 15 to 26 in breadth, from E. to W. It contains 54 parishes, about 11,550 houses, and 50,000 inhabitants. Great part of this county is mountainous, with a mixture of rocks and bogs, so as to be ill adapted for cultivation. The chief rivers are the Liffey and Slaney, with some others. It returns two members to the imperial parliament.

WICKTOW, a seaport of Ireland, in the county of that name, on a small harbour in the Irish sea, boldly situated on the declivity of a lofty mountain. The Black Castle is a huge rock, rising perpendicularly from the sea, on whose platform a castle seems to have been constructed. The church is pleasantly situated on a lofty eminence; it has a high square steeple. The jail, the court-house, and the market-house, are modern edifices. About a mile from the town are erected two light-houses. 41 miles N. Wexford.

WICKWANE, a market town of England, Gloucestershire. The church is a spacious building. Pop. 919. 17 miles N. E. Bristol.

WICOMICO, a river of the United States, in Maryland, which falls into the Chesapeake.

WIERICZA, a town of Austrian Poland, in Galicia, noted for its salt mines. Population 2290. 7 miles S. E. Cracow.

WIERHOEK, an island in the Zuyder Zee, 6 miles long, and 2 broad. Population 1500.

WIKESBERG, or MOSONY, the chief town of a county of Hungary, on the Danube, 21 miles S. S. E. Presburg. Population 2600.

WIMSE, CIRCLE, or TUE, a district of the grand duchy of Baden, of which it forms the south-west corner. Population 117,000.

WIOAX, a borough and market town of England, county of Lancaster, near the small river Douglas. The town has a neat though ingular appearance, and has been lately much improved. It has manufactures of coarse home made linens, checks, calicoes, fustians, and other cotton goods. Here are also large brass and pewter works. The parish church is commonly considered a handsome structure, composed of a nave, a spacious chancel, and two side aisles. Within the town is a chapel of the establishment; also five dissenting meetings, and two large Roman Catholic places of worship. It has also a town-hall, a free school, a commodious work-house, and a dispensary. At the north end of the town is a monumental pillar, erected in 1679, to commemorate the valour of Sir Thomas Tyldesley, who was slain on this spot in 1651, in the action wherein the Earl of Derby was defeated by Lilburne. It returns two members to parliament. Number of voters about 200. Population 17,719. 39 miles S. Lancaster.

WIGHT, Isle of, an island of England, lying on the coast of Hampshire, from which it is separated by a channel varying in breadth from 2 to 7 miles. From the eastern to the western angle it measures nearly 23 miles, and from the north to the southern about 13. Its superficies is supposed to include 105,000 acres, of which about 75,000 are arable, and 20,000 are in pasturage. Through the middle of it, in the longest direction, extend a range of high hills, affording excellent pasturage for sheep, and commanding views over every part of the isle, with the ocean on the south side, and on the north the beautiful coasts of Hampshire. The face of the country is very diversified; bold hills of various elevations, intersected by rich and highly cultivated vales, the swelling promontories and the fertile glens, appear in quick succession, to animate and give interest to the prospect. The land around the coast is in some parts very high, particularly on the south, or back of the island, as it is commonly termed, exceeding at St Catherine's 700 feet above the sea. These cliffs are frequented by immense numbers of marine birds, as puffins, razor-bills, will-waxes, gulls, cormorants, Cornish-Loughs, daws, starlings, and wild pigeons, some of which come, at stated times, to lay their eggs and breed, while others remain there all the year. The sorts of grain chiefly cultivated are wheat, barley, oats, beans, and peas; turnips, clover, trefoil, vetches, rye-grass, and potatoes, are also grown here. All the higher parts of the isle are composed of an immense mass of calcareous matter, of a chalky nature, incumbent on schistus. The lime-stone is burnt for manures. A stratum of coal has also been discovered, but it has never been worked. Freestones of several descriptions are found, but none of superior quality; also red and yellow ochres. Native alum is found in large quantities in Alum bay. Here also, and at Freshwater, are immense beds of micaceous or silvery sand, great quantities of which are annually shipped off for the glass and china manufactories of London, Bristol, and Worcester. Small masses of native sulphur are frequently picked up on different parts of the shore, as well as copperas stones. Argilla pyra, or pipe-clay, is likewise very plentiful in different parts of the isle. Several chalybeate springs have been found in different parts of the island. The principal rivers are the Medina, the Yar, and the Wooten. Great variety of fish is found on the coast, and in considerable abundance. The lobster and crab are of uncommon size, and extremely fine. The Isle of Wight prawns and cockles are very celebrated; the scallop is also very plentiful; the cuttle-fish is occasionally taken. The trade of the Isle of Wight is flourishing; the harbour of Cowes is particularly convenient for shipping and unshipping merchandise. The chief imports are coals, timber, deals, iron, hemp, and flax; the principal exports wheat, flour, barley, malt, and oil. The chief manufactures are those of flax, powder, and salt; the making of spirits, &c. has been carried to some extent in the house of industry; and lately a considerable lac-manufactory has been established near Newport. The island contains three boroughs, Newport, Newtown, and Yarmouth; the whole containing 31,616 inhabitants. West Cowes, the principal port, is in Long. 1. 17. W. and in Lat. 50. 46. N.; and lies 12 miles S. by E. Southampton, and 66 S. W. London.

WIGTOW, a county in the south-west of Scotland, bounded E. by Kirkcubbin-shire, S. and W. by the Irish channel, and N. by Ayrshire; lying between 54. 20. and 55. 4. N. lat. and between 4. 16. and 5. 6. W. long.; and containing 1511 square miles, or 280,000 acres. It is of an irregular form, deeply indented with bays, and lies 20 miles from north to south, and about 30 from east to west. It may be divided, according to the situation of its principal towns, into the three districts of Wigtown, Whithorn, and Stranraer. Wigtown, the eastern division, is watered by the river Cree, and several small streams, which descend from the mountains of Carrick. Whithorn, the south-east division, is of a triangular form, bounded by the bays of Wigtown and Glenelg; towards the south it terminates in a promontory called Burrowhead, near which lies the small island of Whithorn. Stranraer, also called the Ryndes or Rhinnes of Galloway, extends 20 miles from north to south, and is nearly separated from the rest of the county by Glenelg bay and Loch Ryan. The Mull of Galloway is the south, and the Corran, or Fairland point, the north, extremity of the peninsula. The surface of the county is diversified by numerous hills, none of which are supposed to rise more than 1000 or 1100 feet above the level of the sea. The richest lands lie near the coast; also on the banks of the rivers. The rising ground in the east of the county, through the parishes of Wigtown, and the lower part of Penningham; are for the most part arable. The Rhinnes, with the exception of the greatest part of Portpatrick, is in general a very arable district. The hills along the whole of this peninsula rise to a considerable height, and seem as if intended by nature to form a strong barrier against the westerly winds. The northern territory, called the Moors, is bleak and hilly, extending over three-fourths of the county, and containing only a few detached spots of arable land. The rivers in this county are the Cree, the Bladenoch, the Tarff, the Luce, and other streams of little note. The coast is deeply indented by navigable bays and inlets of the sea. Wigton bay and Luce bay advance far northward into the county. The Mull of Galloway is the south point of Scotland, between Luce bay and the Irish sea. Some districts contain slate quarries and marble. Population 133,249.

WILLOW, a parish and ancient royal burgh of Scotland, in Wigtownshire, near the mouth of the river Bladenoch. Along with Whithorn, Stranraer, and Ken Galloway, it sends a member to parliament. Pop. 2942. 105 miles S. W. Edinburgh.

WIGTON, a market town and parish of England, in Cumberland, situated 112 miles from Carlisle, and 345 from London, on the river Wiza, which bounds the north and west sides of the town. Wigton has greatly increased, owing to the increase of manufactures for printed cottons, singings, checks, calicoes, &c. and the inclosure of extensive common lands, within the last 10 years. In 1776 it was an elegant church was built; also a handsome Sunday school in 1820. There are some well built houses in the place. Population 1694.

WIGTON RIVER, a fine river in Scotland, of considerable extent, running northward from the Solway firth into the interior of Galloway. It possesses several good harbours, particularly at Isle of Whithorn, Wigtown, Galloway, Cree town, and Gatehouse.

WILDERVANK, a town of the Netherlands, in Groningen. Population 2700.

WILKES, a county of the United States, in the north-west part of North Carolina. Population 9054, besides 1194 slaves.

WILKES, a county of the United States, in the north-west part of Georgia. Population 14,867; slaves 7244.

WILKESMERE, a post town of the United States, and capital of Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, on the Schuylkill river. It contains a court-house and a jail. Pop. 1225. 113 miles N. E. W. Philadelphia.

WILKINSON, a county of the United States, in the south-west corner of Mississippi. Population 7275.

WILKINSON, a county of the United States, in the south-west part of Georgia. Population 2154, besides 316 slaves.

WILKINSONVILLE, a town of the United States (see Johnson county, Illinois, on the Ohio River), Essex, a fortress of Scotland, situated at the eastern extremity of Loch Lomond, where it receives the river Lochy. It received its name in honour of King William. 74 miles N. Inverary.

WILLIAM'S RIVER, a tributary of the Connecticut, in Vermont.

WILLIAMSBURG, the capital of Granville county, North Carolina, on a creek which falls into the Roanoke, 30 miles N. Raleigh. It contains a court-house, jail, &c.

WILLIAMSBURG, a post town of the United States, Ohio, 30 miles E. N. E. Cincinnati.

WILLIAMSBURG, a borough of the United States, in James county, Virginia, between two rivulets. It is regularly laid out. It contains a state-house, a court-house, a jail, an hospital, a college, and an Episcopal church. The college of William and Mary was founded here in 1691. Pop. 1300. 12 miles W. Yorktown.

WILLIAMSBURG, a district of the United States, in the north-east part of South Carolina. Pop. 6571, besides 1543 slaves.

A post town and capital of Williamsburg district, 12 miles N. N. E. Charleston, and a village of Jackson county, Tennessee.

WILLIAMSON, a county of the United States, in West Tennessee. Pop. 13,000, besides 4333 slaves.

WILLIAMSPORT, a borough of the United States, in Lycoming county, Pennsylvania, on the Susquehanna. Pop. 344.

WILLIAMSPORT, a post town of the United States, in Martin county, North Carolina, on the Roanoke. Pop. 300.—The name of several post townships.

WILLINGTON and WILLINGTON, the names of several parishes and hamlets of England.

WILTON, a village and parish of England, Warwickshire, on the Grand Junction canal, 11 miles S. E. Coventry.

WILTON, a village and hamlet of England, in Nottinghamshire.

WILTON, a small river of England, in Yorkshire, which runs into the Swale.

WILTS, a river of England, in Wiltshire, which runs into the Upper Avon.

WILMINGTON, a borough of the United States, and port of entry, in New Castle county, Delaware, between the Brandywine and Christina rivers, 2 miles W. of the Delaware.

It is regularly laid out, and contains a town-house, a spacious church-house, 2 market-houses, and 10 churches for different sects, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, &c. The trade of the town is considerable. On the Brandywine, separated at a little distance from the body of the town, there is a village of about 100 houses. Pop. 4116. 23 miles S. W. Philadelphia.

WILMINGTON, a post town of the United States, and capital of Clinton county, Ohio. Houses 40. 64 miles N. E. Cincinnati.

WILMINGTON, a post town and port of entry of the United States, New Hanover county, North Carolina, on Cape Fear river, 50 miles S. E. Fayetteville.

WILNA, an extensive province or government of the north-west of Europe, in Russia, containing the north part of Lithuania.

extends from 53. 40. to 50. 18. of N. lat.; has an area of 2369 square miles; and a population of 1,000,000.

WILNA, a city of Russian Lithuania, the chief town of a province or government. Its circuit is nearly 4 miles. Population in 1700, 21,000, at present nearly 30,000. Like other towns in Poland and Prussia, it is built chiefly of wood, very deficient in cleanliness, and exhibits a striking contrast of wretchedness in some buildings, and tawdry magnificence in others. The inhabitants are a mixture of Catholics, Jews, and followers of the Greek church. The trade of the place consists in the export of corn, hemp, flax, honey, wax, and other products of the surrounding country. Its university, established in 1570, was now modelled by the Russian government in 1803. There is in Wilna also a classical school, a seminary for the education of the Catholic clergy, another for those of the Greek church, and an institution for youths of good family. 400 miles S. S. W. Petersburg, and 195 E. Königsberg.

WILSON, a county of the United States, in West Tennessee. Pop. 11,552. Slaves 2297.

WILSONTOWN, a village of Scotland, in Lanarkshire, 23½ miles S. W. Edinburgh.

WITTEBA, a town of Denmark, in Holstein, near the Elbe. Population 1600.

WILTUN, an ancient borough and market town of England, county of Wilts, near the confluence of the rivers Nadder and Wilty, formerly noted for its abbey, of which no part is now remaining. Its carpet and clothing manufactures have now declined. It has an inconsiderable trade in flannels and fancy woolsens. The principal public buildings are the parish church and town-hall. There are, besides, two chapels, one belonging to the Methodists, and another to the Independents; a free school, and eight almshouses for poor people. Wilton sends 2 members to parliament. It is the county town of Wiltshire. Adjoining the town is Wilton-house, the splendid and interesting seat of the earls of Pembroke. Population of the borough and parish, 2034. 34 miles W. by N. Salisbury.— It is the name of several parishes and townships.

WILTSHIRE, an inland county of England, bounded N. and N. W. by Gloucestershire; S. W. by Dorsetshire; S. and E. by Hampshire; and N. E. by the county of Berks. Its form is nearly oval. Some estimate it at 39 miles from N. to S., and 30 in breadth from E. to W.; while others, apparently on better grounds, give it 54 miles of length, and 34 of breadth. Area 1572 square miles. Wiltshire may be said to be naturally divided into two portions, by an irregular range of hills, which extends transversely through the greater part of the county, in a direction inclining from the N. E. to the S. W. These districts are usually denominated South and North Wiltshire. South Wiltshire presents to the eye, when surveyed from a distance, the appearance of a large elevated plain. On a nearer inspection, however, it appears to be indented by numerous, and frequently extensive valleys, and to display an almost continual series of gentle eminences, with now and then a bolder height rising above the others, but never to a mountainous elevation. In some parts the hills assume the form of rotund knolls, and are separated by smoothly sided hollows, which vary considerably both in depth and extent. At other places they range along for a short distance in connected ridges, shewing on one side of the range rather a rapid declivity, from the top of which, on the other side, the hills sink in irregular gradation, till at length they frequently shelve into a perfect flat. North Wiltshire differs completely from the southern division of the county in its general appearance. Instead of a constant series of "chalky waves," the aspect of this district, which extends from the verge of the Downs to the hills of Gloucester-Lane, is nearly that of a perfect flat. The country here, moreover, is so extremely close, and well wooded, that when viewed from any of the surrounding hills, it appears like one vast plantation of trees. If examined in detail, however, it is found also to contain many extensive tracks of rich pasture land, situated on the banks of the Lower Avon and the Thames, and of such smaller streams as flow into the one or the other of these rivers. It likewise comprises a number of corn fields, exhibits some very fine scenery of the milder kind, and is abundantly supplied with towns and villages. The climate of this county is not characterized by any very peculiar quality, except that the air in South Wiltshire, as on all open downs, is generally cold and sharp. With regard to agriculture, the southern district may almost be regarded as one vast sheep farm; the greater part of its extensive downs, and many portions of the vales, being devoted to the rearing and feeding of that useful animal. In the south-west portion of Wiltshire, adjoining to Dorsetshire, a considerable number of cows are kept for the purpose of making butter. With respect to the arable cultivation of this district, the most general crops on the high white lands are wheat and barley, and on the grounds, in the valleys, green crops for the winter maintenance of the sheep and cattle. Potatoes are likewise planted in considerable quantities. The distinguishing feature of the agriculture of North Wiltshire is the pasturage or grazing system; which is conducted principally with a view to the supply of the dairy with milk for the manufacture of cheese. The cheese of North Wiltshire has long been deservedly famed. On these lands cattle are also fed for sale. Pigs are reared in vast numbers in different parts of the county, and particularly constitute essential appendages to the dairy farms of its northern division. On the western side of the county, bordering on Somersetshire, are many freestone quarries, where vast quantities of fine stone are obtained. The principal rivers in Wiltshire are the Thames, the Upper and Lower Avon, the Bourn, the Willy, the Nadler, and the Kennet. The canals which intersect the county of Wilts are, 1st, The Thames and Severn canal, which passes through a very small portion of the northern boundary of Wiltshire; 2d, The Kennet and Avon canal, intended to connect the navigation of these two rivers. The manufactures of Wiltshire are various, and of great extent, consisting of flannels and fancy woollens; of cutlery and steel goods; of dowlas and bed-ticks; of broad cloths, kerseymeres, and fancy cloths; of cotton goods, of which fustians and thicksets form the most valuable portion; also of gloves. Wiltshire abounds in the most curious and interesting remains of antiquity. Of these the most remarkable are the stupendous monuments at Avebury and Stonehenge, both of which are commonly regarded as Druidical temples. Wiltshire is comprehended in the western circuit, and sends 34 members to parliament, viz. 2 knights of the shire, 2 citizens for Salisbury, and 2 burgesses for each of the following boroughs: Chippenham, Calne, Cricklade, Devizes, Heytesbury, Hindon, Downton, Great Bedwin, Marlborough, Malmesbury, Ludgershall, Westbury, Wilton, Weston-super-Mare, and Old Sarum. Wiltshire is divided into 20 hundreds. Population 222,157.

WILTZ, a town of the Netherlands, in the duchy of Luxembourg. Population 2000.

WINDLENOX, a village and parish of England, county of Surrey, noted for the numerous elegant villas and mansions which it contains. Windlestone church is a new building, in the Grecian style. In the village are some copper-mines, a manufactory for painting calicoes, and another of japanned ware. Pop. 2195.

WIMBORNE-MINSTER, a market town of England, in Dorsetshire, situated between the rivers Stour and Allen, over each of which it has a bridge. It is as clean a little town as any in the county; there are many improvements made within the last two years, and others still making. It has very little trade; and what little it has consists chiefly in the woollen manufacture, and the knitting of hosiery. The minster is a venerable structure, said to have been erected, and the monastery built, between the years 705 and 723. The church is built in the form of a cross, with two quadrangular towers, one of them standing on the middle of the roof, and the other at the west end. The former was adorned anciently with a spire, said to have been of an extraordinary height. The whole building is divided in the manner of a cathedral, and consists of a chancel, nave, choir, and side aisles; a transept or cross aisle, and three porches. Its length, from east to west, is 160 feet. In this church numerous royal and noble personages have been buried, most of whom were anciently commemorated by suitable monuments. There are also three meeting-houses for Presbyterians, Methodists, and Anabaptists, and a large, common, dious poor-house. Population 3363. 20 miles E. N. E. Dorchester.

WIMPERN, a town of Germany, in Hesse-Darmstadt, 65 miles N. Heilbronn. Pop. 2000.

WINDERMERE, or WINNANMER, a parish of England, in the county of Westmoreland, which takes its name from the famous lake of Windermere. This lake is the most extensive in England, being about 18 miles in length from north to south, and about one mile broad at an average, although in many places it is not more than 500 yards. It is famous for its fine charr, and abounds also with trout, perch, pike, and eels.

WINCANTON, a market town and parish of England, in Somersetshire. It has a church, with a square tower and six bells, and a neat market-house. It has manufactures of ticks and dowlas, serges, and stockings. Population 2143. 21 miles S. Bath.

WINDCHESTER, a market town and parish of England, Gloucestershire, on the I-bourne, which runs into the Avon. The church is a noble Gothic structure. Population 2240. 16 miles N. E. Gloucester.

WINDHURST, a borough and market town of England, county of Sussex, is a place of great antiquity, and was once populous and flourishing, but is now reduced to only 126 houses. Of the ancient town little more is known. It is a member of the Cinque Ports. The town suffered from an inundation of the sea, which took place about the end of the 12th century. It was also twice pillaged, first by the French, and again by the Spaniards, who landed near Farley Head; and to complete its misfortunes, the sea deserted its neighbourhood, and left in its place a dreary marsh. In the middle of the town was a large square, in the centre of which stands the church, dedicated to St Thomas, which, from its remains, appears to have been a beautiful edifice, originally built in the form of a cross. The court-house and jail are of great antiquity, as the round arches to the doors evince. The three gates which defended the approaches to the town are yet standing, though in a very ruinous condition. Near Camber Point stands Winchelsea or Camber castle. The town returns two members to parliament. Pop. in 1811, 652. 8 miles N. E. Hastings.

WINCHESTER, an eminent and ancient city of England, in Hampshire, situated on the eastern declivity of a hill gradually sloping to the river Itchen. Most of the buildings have an appearance of antiquity, and the streets are broad and clean. It is about half a mile long from east to west, and contains 8 churches. It was known in the time of the Romans, and is supposed to have been the site of a Roman encampment. During the reign of Egbert it became the metropolis of the Kingdom, but was soon rivalled by the growing importance of London. Its commerce was also obstructed by various adverse accidents; and in the reign of Henry VIII. it received another blow in the dissolution of monasteries, and the consequent destruction of religious houses; after which, Winchester contained scarcely any thing more than a mere shadow of its former grandeur. During the succeeding reigns it still continued to decline; and in the eventful times of Charles I. the city and castle of Winchester were secured for the parliament by Sir William Waller. After the battle of Naseby, the place surrendered to Cromwell, after a short siege; and the works of the castle were destroyed, together with the fortifications of the city, the bishop's castle of Wolvesey, and several churches and public buildings. The cathedral of Winchester is one of the most interesting buildings in England. It is an instructive example of architecture, whether of the Saxon, Norman, or English styles; but particularly of the latter, both in its early and improved state. The original structure, built by the Saxon Kings Kinga and Kenelwich, is entirely destroyed; but of that built by Ethelwold, the crypt beneath the high altar is yet remaining. In the 11th century the cathedral was rebuilt, or greatly enlarged and improved, by Bishop Walkelin, whose buildings were completed in 1093. The next improvement of the cathedral was undertaken by William de Edington, treasurer to Edward III., and was finished by Bishop Wickham in 1364. The west end of the cathedral was now complete in its kind; but the eastern part of it, from the tower to the low aisle of De Lucy, was far from being conformable to the rest, when it was rebuilt by that great and good prelate Fox, at the beginning of the 16th century, with all the finished elegance that the English style had at that period acquired. The dimensions of the cathedral are as follow: whole length of the cathedral, 545 feet; length of the nave, from the west porch to the iron door at the entrance of the choir, 351 feet; length of the choir, 136 feet; length of the chapel of Our Lady, 54 feet; breadth of the cathedral, 87 feet; breadth of the choir, 40 feet; length of the transept, 106 feet; height of the tower, 150 feet. The ecclesiastical buildings in this city and its suburbs were formerly extremely numerous; the churches and chapels alone amounting to upwards of 90, and several having colleges and monasteries attached to them. Scarcely 12 of them now remain; the others having been destroyed by the effects of war, or otherwise. The mother church of Winchester is St. Lawrence: it consists of one large aisle, with a lofty square tower, containing five bells. St. Thomas's is an ancient structure, consisting of two aisles, divided by round pillars of the Gothic order; the tower is a low ordinary building. St. Maurice's was originally a priory, and consists of two aisles, one of which is very spacious; the tower is strong. St. Michael's is a low and ancient building, tiled, having two good aisles, and a tower containing five bells. St. Swithin's is erected over a position called Kingsgate, and consists of a large neat room, ascended to by a stone staircase. St. Peter's Church-still consists of two aisles, of different sizes, both neat, but plain: it has a tower, containing three bells. St. John's at Hill is divided into three aisles, by round Gothic pillars: the tower is remarkably strong, finished with a turret, containing a clock. St. Martin's Winall was rebuilt in 1730, and consists of one aisle, having a small tower at the west end, containing one bell. Here are several meeting-houses for dissenters of different denominations; the principal of which is the Roman Catholic chapel, dedicated to St. Peter, and standing in the street of that name. At a short distance north-east from the college are the ruins of the celebrated Episcopal residence called Wolvesey castle, destroyed by Cromwell in 1646. Winchester castle, of which scarcely any parts are now standing, was built by William the Conqueror, and occupied the commanding spot at the south-west angle of the city, where the king's house, or palace, erected by Charles II., now stands. This fortress has been the scene of many important transactions. The whole area of the castle was about 430 feet in length, north and south, and 250 in breadth, east and west. The chapel belonging to the castle has been converted into a county-hall. At the east end is suspended the famous curiosity called Arthur's Round Table, which tradition has attributed to King Arthur, but modern inquiry, with more accuracy, to King Stephen, who appears to have introduced the use of the Round Table into this island, to prevent disputes for precedence among the chivalrous knights of his age. In the High-street stands the city cross, an elegant specimen of the style of the age in which it was built, that of Henry VI. The town has a college or almshouse, founded by Bishop Morley in 1672; besides which, there is a number of private charities, and three well endowed charity schools. The public infirmary is a handsome edifice. In the town-hall are the city archives, the original Winchester bushel given by King Edgar, with other measures, both for quantity and length, fixed as standards by succeeding princes, and various curious memorials of antiquity. In front is a good statue of Queen Anne. There is a new spacious county jail, erected on the Howardian plan, in the court of which is a neat chapel. There is also a bridewell for the city, and another for the county. The theatre is a handsome structure, built in 1783. On the site of the castle a royal palace was begun in 1683, the principal floor of which is a noble range of apartments, and contains in all 160 chambers; this has often been occupied by prisoners of war, on their parole. At the west end of the town is an obelisk, having an inscription commemorative of the calamities occasioned by the plague in 941, 1348, and 1668. Two members are sent to parliament. Winchester has very little trade. An ancient wool combing manufactory still exists in it: and of late years the silk manufacture has been introduced. All the public business of Hampshire is, however, transacted here. Its cathedral and its college insure to it the residence also of a considerable number of superior clergy, with their families. Pop. 7733. 114 miles S. N. E. Southampton.

WINCHESTER, a post town and borough of the United States, and capital of Frederick county, Virginia. It is a handsome and flourishing town, and contains a court-house, a jail, an alms-house, &c. and 6 churches. The principal street is well paved, and the town is well built. Pop. in 1812, about 2000. 70 miles W. N. W. Washington.

WINCHESTER, a post town of the United States, in Clark county, Kentucky. Population 538.—Also one in Missouri Territory.

WINDAR, a town of Courland, on the Baltic. Pop. 1000. 70 miles W. N. W. Mittau.

WINDHAM, a county of the United States, in the south-east part of Vermont. Population 26,700.—2d, in Connecticut, bounded N. and E. by Massachusetts. Pop. 22,611.—The name of various townships.

WINDLE, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 4826.

WINDRUSH, a river of England, in Oxfordshire, which runs into the Thames.

WINDSHEIM, a town of Franconia, on the Aisch. Pop. 4500. 30 miles S. E. Würzburg.

WINDSON, a town of New South Wales, formerly called the Green-hills, near the confluence of the South Creek with the river Hawkesbury, which is here navigable. It stands on a hill 100 feet above the level of the river, at low water. The bulk of the population is composed of settlers, who have farms in the neighbourhood, and of their servants. There are, besides, a few inferior traders, publicans, and artificers. Pop. 600.

WINDSON, a county of the United States, on the east side of Vermont. Pop. 34,677. Chief towns, Windsor and Woodstock.

WINDSON, a post town of the United States, in Windsor county, Vermont, on the Connecticut. Pop. 2757. 112 miles N. W. Boston.—The name of various post townships.

WINDSOR, New, a borough and market town of England, in the county of Berks, on the river Thames, 22 miles from London. This town consists of six principal streets, and several inferior ones. The guild-hall is a stately fabric, supported with columns and arches of Portland stone. The room wherein the corporations meet for the transaction of public business, is spacious and convenient. It is adorned with the portraits of the sovereigns of England, from James I. to Queen Anne. The church is a neat, handsome, Gothic building. A good organ, removed from St George's chapel, was presented to the parish by his late Majesty. There is a neat free school, erected in 1704, and an hospital for sick-soldiers. In 1805 an elegant small theatre was erected here. In 1796 extensive and convenient barracks were built for 750 infantry, and a large building has been since erected, for 450 cavalry. Windson contains many handsome buildings; but its chief ornament is its castle, which owes its origin to William the Conqueror. Henry I. considerably improved the edifice, which his father had erected, enlarged it with additional buildings, and, for greater security, surrounded the whole with a strong wall. Great improvements were made by Edward III. which extended to nearly the whole of the ancient fabric. Windsor castle is most delightfully situated on the summit of a hill, whose base towards the north is lavied by the waters of the Thames. The prospects to the east, west, and north, are extensive and beautiful. On the south, the view is bounded by the wild and picturesque scenery of the forest. On the declivity of the hill on which the castle is built, is a terrace, faced with a rampart of freestone, being 1470 feet long. Adjoining this walk is a gate leading into the park, which are four miles in circumference, and surrounded by a brick wall. The castle is divided into two court-wards, with a large round tower or keep between them, the whole occupying about 12 acres of land, and having many batteries and towers for its defence. The upper court is a spacious quadrangle, composed of the round tower on the west, the private apartments of their majesties, &c. on the south and east, and the royal apartments, usually shown to strangers, St George's hall, and the chapel royal, on the north. The keep or tower is the lodging of the constable or governor, built in the form of an amphitheatre, screened by a flight of stone steps. Here is the guard-room or magazine for arms, curiously arranged. The lower court is larger than the upper, and is divided into two parts by St George's chapel, which stands in the middle, and is reckoned one of the finest Gothic structures of the kind known. The royal apartments are on the north side of the court called the star building, from having the star and garter in gold on the outside. Almost every room in this division of the castle is ornamented with paintings. The chapel of St George was erected by Edward III. on the site of a smaller structure, built by Henry I. and dedicated to Edward the Confessor. The origin of its magnificence, however, may be attributed to Edward IV. by whom it was very considerably enlarged, and rendered one of the most beautiful structures of that era. In the reigns of Henry VII. and his successor, it underwent several alterations; but it is indebted for the improved and highly elegant state in which it now appears, to the taste and magnificence of George III. who expended nearly 120,000 in its repairs and embellishments. At this period it may be considered as the most complete and elegant specimen of what Mr Wharton termed the florid Gothic, in the kingdom. The inside of the chapel is singularly neat. This chapel has been the burial-place of several royal and illustrious personages. At the east end of the north side the remains of Edward IV. are deposited. Henry VI. was also buried in this chapel. Here lie interred under the choir, the bodies of Henry VIII. and Jane Seymour, Charles I. and a daughter of Queen Anne. Many other distinguished persons are interred within this fabric. Adjoining the east end is a neat building, erected by Henry VII. as a burial-place for himself and successors, which is now the royal museum, and in which their late majesties, Princess Charlotte, and others, have been interred. On the south side of this town is Windsor Great Park, well stocked with deer, in which is situated his present majesty's cottages. At the entrance of this park is the queen's lodge, of recent erection. Windsor forest being a circuit of 56 miles, was originally formed for the exercise of the chase, by our ancient sovereigns; and this was also a favourite amusement of his late majesty. Edward I. constituted the town a free borough. It sends 2 members to parliament: number of voters about 400. Pop. 5000. 20 miles E. by N. Reading, and 22 W. by S. London.

WINDSOR, Olin, a small village of England, in Berkshire, on the Thames, to the south-east of New Windsor.

WINDSOR FOREST, an extensive forest in the east part of Berks, England.

WINDWARD ISLANDS, in opposition to Leeward. These islands, in the West Indies, extend from Martinico to Tobago.

WINDWARD PASSAGE, a name given to a course from the south-east angle of the island of Jamaica, in the West Indies, and extending from 160 leagues to the north side of Crooked island, in the Bahamas.

WINEGAW RIVER, a river of America, which runs from Winnebago Lake to Green Bay, in Lake Michigan.

WINNER, a town of Germany, 12 miles E. N. E. Stuttgart. Population 2500.

WINGFORTH, a village and parish of England, in Suffolk. The church is built of various coloured flints and stones. Pop. 574.

WINGHAM, a village and parish of England, in Kent, near the Stour. Pop. 1000. 62 miles E. by S. London.

WINNIKI, a village of Austrian Poland, to the south of Lemberg. Population 2500.

WINKFORD, a river of England, in Lancashire, which runs into the Lune.

WINNICUP LAKE, a lake of North America, in Upper Canada, N. W. of Lake Superior. It is 217 miles long, and 100 broad.

WINNICUP RIVER, a river which runs into the lake of the same name.

WINNIPICOUKE, a lake of the United States, in Strafford county, New Hampshire. — Also a river in New Hampshire, which runs into the Merrimack.

WINSCHOTEN, a small but fortified town of the Netherlands. Population 3700.

WINSLOW, a market town and parish of England, county of Buckingham. The church is a large pile of building, consisting of a nave, two aisles, and a chancel, with a square tower, embattled at the west end. Population 1200. 10 miles W. N. W. London.

WINSTAD, a village of the United States, Litchfield county, Connecticut.

WINSTER, a market town of England, in Derbyshire. Pop. 928. 27 miles N. W. Derby.

WISTEN, a river of England, in Lancashire, which runs into the Ken.

WISTENBOURN, a hamlet of England, in Berkshire. — The name of various parishes.

WITZENTHA, a town of Switzerland, canton of Zurich. Population 3300. 21 miles N. W. Constance.

WITTHOR, a post town of the United States, in Kennebec county, Maine. Population 1444. 160 miles N. N. E. Boston.

WITTON, a post town of the United States, Hertford county, North Carolina.

WITZENHEIM, a town of France, department of the Upper Rhine. Pop. 2200.

WIPPE, a river of the Prussian states, in Pomerania, which falls into the Baltic.

WIPPERMUNT, a town of the Prussian province of Cleves and Berg, on the Wipper. 22 miles E. N. E. Cologne. Population 4900.

WINKWORTH, a market town of England, Derbyshire, principally supported by working the lead mines. The church of St Mary is a Gothic structure of the 14th century. It has some manufactories for cotton and worsted breeches. Population 3767. 13 miles N. N. W. Derby.

WIRTEMBERG, a state in the south-west of Germany, which, since 1806, has borne the title of kingdom. It forms part of the old circle of Suabia, having Bavaria on the E. and the long narrow territory of Baden on the W. It extends from Long. 8. 7. to 10. 30. E. Lat. 45. 36. to 49. 45. N. Area 6000 square miles. Pop. 1,400,000. Its territorial division is into the four circles of the Jaxt, the Neckar, the Black Forest, and the Danube. These are further divided into 12 small counties, each of which is subdivided in bailiwicks. The foundation of this state was the old duchy of Wirtemberg, augmented since 1801, by various towns of the empire acquired, and abbey, priories, and other ecclesiastical possessions secularized, in the present age. The towns of Wirtemberg are thinly scattered; the principal are Stuttgart, the capital, containing 22,000 inhabitants; Ulm, 15,600; Tubingen, 6700; Hall, 6500; Ludwigsburg, 5500; Hohenheim, 4400; Kirchheim, 4100; Schorndorf, 3500; Calw, 3400; Crefeldheim, 3100. The two principal rivers are the Danube and Neckar. The other rivers are the Enz, the Muhr, the Kocker, the Jaxt, and the Tauber. The king of Wirtemberg is a member of the Germanic confederation, and holds the sixth place in the diet. The executive power, by the new constitution agreed on in 1819, is vested in the monarch, controlled by a representative body. The dukes of Wirtemberg were Protestant until 1772, when the reigning prince became a Catholic. In the wars of the French revolution, Wirtemberg was repeatedly traversed by the hostile armies. The duke was aggrandized by Bonaparte, whose alliance he was pledged.

When his power began to decline, he went over to the allies.

WISNADEN, a town of Germany, 8 miles N.W. Meitz. Population 3500.

WISNIECH, a market town of England, county of Cambridge, and Isle of Ely, among the fens on the river Ouse or Wis, which flows through it, and falls into the sea at the distance of eight miles. Over this river was built, in 1767, a stone bridge of one elliptical arch, in room of an old wooden one. The church is a spacious fabric. The nave is lofty. The tower is generally supposed to have been erected in the year 1111. There are, besides, churches for Quakers, Baptists, Anabaptists, and Methodists. It has a theatre and a free school; also two charity schools. Pop. 6515. 32 miles N. W. Cambridge.

WISNY, a seaport and old staple town of Sweden, island of Gothland. Pop. 4000.

WISCASSET, a post town and port of entry of the United States, Lincoln county, Maine. Pop. 2033. 160 miles N. E. Boston.

WISCHAN, a town of Moravia, 18 miles E. by N. Brunn. Population 3000.

WISMAN, a seaport of Germany, grand duchy of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, on the Baltic. It has a safe harbour, and manufactures of woollens and linens. Population 6700. 30 miles E. Lubek.

WISNOWITZ, a town of Moravia, 50 miles E. Brunn. Population 2500.

WITGENSTEIN, a county in the Prussian States, adjoining the west part of the province of Upper Hesse. Area 200 square miles. Population 15,000.

WITHAM, a pleasant town of England, in Essex, on a branch of the Blackwater. The church is a neat Gothic structure. Pop. 2578. 37½ miles N. E. by E. London.

WITHAM, a considerable river of England, in the county of Lincoln. It passes the town of Grantham; and after various windings, continues in a south-easterly direction to Boston, and unites its waters with the sea, at a place called Boston Deep.

WITLEY, a village and parish of England, in the county of Surrey. Pop. 1264.

WITNEY, a market town of England, in Oxfordshire, on the river Windrush, noted for its manufactory of blankets, which flourished extremely during the last war. In the reign of Queen Anne, the blanket weavers were incorporated. They have their hall, in which they regulate all matters respecting the measure, mark, and quality of their staple commodity. This hall is a handsome edifice. The town-hall is a handsome modern building of stone. It has a free school, and a charity school. Witney church is a large and handsome building. There are meeting-houses for Quakers, Presbyterians, and Methodists. Pop. 3327. 11½ miles W. N. W. Oxford.

WITTENBERG, a city of Prussian Saxony, government of Meisselurg, on the Elbe. It is situated on a level and sandy spot, which, since the shade walks around the town were cut down by the French, for the purpose of defence, in 1813, presents little variety of interest. It has some linen manufacteries. Wittenberg is a place of some antiquity. Its university, founded in 1502, is memorable as the cradle of the reformation. Luther and his rilkler associate Melancthon, are buried in the university church. In 1621, a monumental colossal statue of Luther was erected in Wittenberg, with great solemnity. Pop. 3000. 60 miles N. N. W. Dresden.

WITTENHALL, a township of England, in Staffordshire. Population 3063.

WITTINGAU, a town of Bohemia, 74 miles S. by E. Prague. Population 2000.

WITTSTOCK, a town of Prussia, on the Deme, 56 miles N. W. Berlin. Pop. 3000.

WITTEHAUSEN, a town of Germany, 15 miles E. Camel. Pop. 2500.

WIVELISCOMBE, a market town of England, in Somersetshire. An episcopal palace, built here in 1336, is now in ruins. Besides the church, there are dissenting meeting-houses; also an almshouse. Its trade in shrouds, blanketings, kerseys, and balise, has suffered greatly. Pop. 2701. 11 miles W. Taunton.

WIVERNOR, a village and parish of England, in Essex. Population 1267.

WISS, a river of England, in Cumberland, which runs into the Waver at Holme.

WISTHOE, or LIANOE, one of the Sandwich Islands. Pop. 60,000. Long of the anchoring place, 262. 0. E. Lat. 21. 43. N.

WOBURN, a market town of England, county of Bedford. In June 1724, great part of it was destroyed by fire; but many houses were afterwards rebuilt in a more convenient and handsome manner. The church furnishes a whimsical instance of capricious taste. It consists of three aisles and a chancel. The munificence of the Russels has been of singular benefit to this town. It has a free school, a charity school, and 12 almshouses. The chief business of the poor is straw-hat and lace-making. Pop. 1656. 14 miles N. W. by S. Bedford. About a mile from the town is Woburn Abbey, the splendid seat of the Duke of Bedford.

WOERDEN, a town of the Netherlands, on the Old Rhine. Pop. 2700. 15 miles S. Amsterdam.

WOKEY, or OKEY, a village and parish of England, in Somersetshire. Pop. 1040.

WOLINGHAM, or OLINGHAM, a town of England, county of Bucks, in the precincts of Windsor Forest. The market-house is an ancient building. The church is a large, handsome edifice. Wolingham has a good free school, and various charity schools; also an hospital. Pop. 2420. 7 miles E. S. E. Reading.

WOLF ISLAND, a small island in the Atlantic, near the coast of Georgia. 21. An island near the east coast of Labrador. 22. An island in the gulf of St. Lawrence.

WOLF ISLAND, or GRAND ISLE, an island of North America, in Lake Ontario, which fronts the harbor of Kingston, 20 miles long and 6 broad.

WOLF RIVER, a tributary of the Mississippi, in the United States.—2d. A river of Mississippi, which runs south into the gulf of Mexico.

WOLFFENBUTTEL, or BRUNSWICK WOLFFENBUTTEL, an independent duchy of Germany, composed of several scattered territories in the circles of Upper and Lower Saxony, and Westphalia. It contains 1616 square miles, and 210,000 inhabitants.

WOLFFENBUTTEL, a city of Germany, and the capital of the principality of the same name, on the Oker, 27 miles E. & E. Hanover. Its fortifications are now neglected. It is divided into the citadel or fortified part, and two suburbs. The public buildings are, the castle, the three parish churches, the chancery, and the arsenal. It has various schools, and a Lutheran convent. Pop. 6700.

WOLFHAGEN, a walled town of Germany, in Hesse-Cassel, on the Elbe. Pop. 2100.

WOLGA, a river of Russia, which has the longest course, and, with the exception of the Danube, the largest volume of water of any river in Europe. It rises among the Volga mountains, in Lat. 57. N., and takes a direction in general to the eastward, but with many windings, until reaching the city of Kazan. Below Kazan it receives the Kama, and flowing northward, with a great volume of water, it approaches the Caspian, after expanding into a greater number of branches than the Nile or the Danube, and discharges itself into that sea near Astracan. Its course is computed at 2700 miles.

WOLGAST, a seaport of Pomerania, on the Pome, 4 miles from the Baltic, and 50 E. & E. Stralsund. Population 4000.

WOLLIN, the chief town of an island of this name, in Pomerania, on the Diwelow, 20 miles N. Stettin. Population 2300.

WOLLESTEIN, a town of Prussian Poland, 14 miles W. S. W. Posen. Pop. 2000.

WOLFFENSTADT, a town of Prussian Saxony, on the Ohre. Population 2300.

WOLLENGHAM, a town and parish of England, in the county of Durham, on the Wear. Population 2107.

WOLVERHAMPTON, a market town of England, county of Stafford. It is a well built and healthy town, notwithstanding its vicinity to numerous coal mines. The trade which it carries on in locks, keys, and such like articles, is truly astonishing. This town does not increase rapidly in houses, owing to the land being almost wholly church land, which is not a tenure sufficient to encourage people to lay out their money in erecting buildings. The buildings are tolerably good, of brick and tile, but have a sombre appearance, and the streets are narrow and dirty. It has two churches. The collegiate church is a fine building, consisting of a lofty nave, two aisles, and a chancel. It has a very fine Gothic tower, embattled at the top, and richly ornamented, rising from the centre. The other church, dedicated to St John, is built of stone, according to the taste of modern times. There are three chapels besides. The dissenting chapels are numerous. It has a free school, and two charity schools; also a hospital and workhouse. Wolverhampton is a place of great antiquity. Two canals, the Staffordshire and Worcestershire Grand Trunk, and the Birmingham canal, pass in this immediate vicinity. Population 18,000. 16 miles S. Stafford.

WOLVERLEY, a township of England, in Worcestershire. Population 1529.

WOLVER, a village and parish of England, Warwickshire. Population 4312.

WORMBOY, a village of England, in Somersetshire, 14 miles from Bridgewater.

WOSWAT, a village of North Brabant. Population 2300.

WOOD, a county of the United States, in the north-west part of Virginia. Population 3050. Slaves 430.

WOOD CREEK, two rivers of the United States, in New York, which run, the one into Lake Champlain, the other into Oneida lake.

WOODBRARY, a township of the United States, in Pennsylvania. Population 1107.

WOODHAMPTON, a market town of England, county of Suffolk. The streets are narrow, but they contain many good houses, and are tolerably well paved. The market-place is clean and well built; and in the middle of it is an ancient shire-hall; and under the roof-house is the market-hall. The church, a spacious and noble structure, is conjectured to have been built in the reign of Edward III. It consists of a nave and two aisles, the roofs of which are supported by ten beautiful Gothic pillars, and four demy ones. It has a large quadrangular tower, 100 feet high, which forms a conspicuous object at sea. On the south side of the church formerly stood a priory of Augustines. Here are also independent, Baptist, Methodist, and Quakers' meeting-houses; a grammar school, two almshouses, three public fire-offices, and two banks. It has a considerable traffic, and a dock for building vessels, with convenient wharfs and quays. Population 4000. 24 miles N. N. E. Ipswich.

WOODHURST, a post township and village of the United States, in Middlesex county, New Jersey. Population 1247.

WOODHURST, a post town of the United States, and capital of Gloucester county, New Jersey, 9 miles S. Philadelphia. It contains a court-house, a jail, and 100 houses.

WOODHURST, a village and parish of England, Gloucestershire. It has manufactures of silk and fine broad cloth. Pop. 520.

WOODCOTE, the name of several townships and parishes in England.

WOODROSE, the name of several parishes and townships in England.

WOODROW, a county of the United States, in the central part of Kentucky. Population 6600. Slaves 2416.

WOODHURST, a small village of Scotland, in Fife-shire, on the Tay, opposite to Dundee.

WOODS LARK, a lake of North America, the most northern in the territory of the United States.

WOODSTOCK, a borough and market town of England, in Oxfordshire. The town-hall is a handsome stone building. Beneath the hall is a piazza, used as a market-place. The parish church or chapel is a handsome structure. It has a grammar-school, and several almshouses. Woodstock has two manufactures, those of polished steel and gloves; the former much decayed. It returns two members to parliament. Population 1455. 8 miles N. N. W. Oxford.

WOODSTOCK, a post town and village of the United States, Windsor county, Vermont. Pop. 2672. 18 miles N. W. Windsor.—2d, In Shuamond county, Virginia, 30 miles S. S. W. Winchester. Houses 104.

WOODVILLE, a post village of the United States, in Warren county, Tennessee.—2d, A post village of Hanover county, Virginia.—3d, A post town and capital of Wilkinson county, Mississippi.

WOOLU, a market town of England, in Northumberland, on Wooler water, near the Cheviot hills. It has a parish church, and chapels for the Presbyterians, Relief, Burghers, Baptists, and Catholics. Here are also the ruins of a very old tower or castle. Pop. 1630. 45 miles N. N. W. Newcastle.

WOOLRIT, a village and parish of England, in Suffolk, 79 miles N. E. London. Pop. 801.

• WOOLWICH, a market town of England, county of Kent, on the Thames, 8 miles below London. This place, like Deptford, was originally only a small village, inhabited by fishermen; and, like that also, owes its consequence to the establishment of a royal dock, in the reign of Henry VIII. Since that era, it has gradually attained to its present size; but its progress has been more particularly rapid during the past century, in consequence of the establishment of the arsenal, and the augmentation of the royal artillery, who have their head-quarters here. The dock-yard, in its present state, includes about five furlongs in length, by one in breadth; within which space there are two dry docks, five ships, three masted, a mould-loft, store-houses of various descriptions, mast-houses, sheds for timber, dwellings for the various officers, and a very complete smithery, newly erected, and furnished with extensive machinery, worked by steam, for the manufactory of anchors, &c. The church, dedicated to St Mary Magdalen, is a spacious building of brick. It consists of a nave, chancel, and aisles, with a plain square tower at the west end. The principal charitable establishments are an almshouse and two schools. Between the dock-yard and the royal arsenal is an extensive building, about 400 yards in length, including a rope-walk. The military and civil branches of the office of ordnance, have been established at Woolwich since the accession of George I. The original foundry which government possessed for brass ordnance, was in Upper Moorfields,

London; but an accident having happened on recasting some of the guns taken by Marlborough, of which a foreman of the name of Schales gave warning to Churchill, he was offered a commission to make choice of any spot within 12 miles of London, for the erection of a new foundry, and also to be made superintendent of the whole concern. He fixed on the Warren at Woolwich, as the most eligible situation. This arsenal is the grand national depot for every species of ordnance, both military and naval; and the immense quantity of guns which it contains, presents a curious spectacle to persons unaccustomed to sights of this nature. In other parts of this vast depot are extensive stores of gun carriages, military waggon, and every thing which appertains to the department of the ordnance. The arsenal includes nearly 60 acres, and contains various piles of brick building, among the oldest of which are the foundry, and the late military academy. In the foundry are three furnaces, and a machine for boring cannon; the largest furnace will melt about 17 tons of metal at one time. In another quadrangular range of building, at a short distance from the foundry, are two other boring machines, and various workshops, where the ordnance, after being proved, are properly finished for service. Brass ordnance only are made here; and those, though so called, are wholly formed of a composition of tin and copper. Nearly adjoining to the foundry is the laboratory, where fire-works and cartridges, for the use of the navy and army, are made up; and bombs, carcasses, granadoes, &c. charged. The other structures in the arsenal consist of store-houses and offices of various descriptions, together with numerous workshops. At Woolwich, also, is situated the royal military academy, which was instituted about the year 1719, but not finally arranged till 1741. This establishment contains at present 100 pupils, who are called cadets. The young gentlemen who are admitted as cadets, are of the most respectable families. The military academy is built in the castellated form, from designs by Wyatt; and consists, in front, of a centre and two wings, united by corridors, with a range of building behind, containing the hall, servants' offices, &c. About 40 years ago, a piece of ground, of about 50 acres, was taken by government on lease, and spacious barracks erected for the accommodation of the officers and privates of the regiment of artillery. Since that period many alterations have been made, and many additional buildings raised, particularly within the last 20 years; the whole comprising, in its present state, a very extensive structure of surprising form, whose principal front, which faces the south, is nearly 400 yards in length. The regiment of artillery consisted, during the war, of nearly 17,000 men, including the horse brigade, but it is now reduced to about 7000, which are formed into six battalions. The parade is in front of the barracks, and the soldiers are frequently exercised in throwing shells, for which the open space on the common affords sufficient room. On the east side of the barracks, on the descent leading to the arsenal, is the ordnance hospital, which is an extensive edifice, calculated to contain about 700 men. Several detached buildings, for the use of the artillery, have also been raised on different parts of the common; among which we may mention a veterinary hospital for the horse brigade; but the most conspicuous of these is a pagoda, used as a repository for models; it is 115 feet in diameter, and was removed here from Carlton-house gardens, where it served as a banqueting-room to the sovereigns who visited this country after the battle of Waterloo. On the west side of the town there are also barracks, and a handsome hospital, erected for the fourth division of marines, who have their head-quarters here. Population 17,008.

WOOSTER, seat town of the United States, and capital of Wayne county, Ohio, on the Killbuck. Houses 70. 45 miles S. Lake Erie.

WOOTTON-BASSETT, an ancient borough and market town of England, in Wiltshire. It sends two representatives to parliament. Population 1701. 69 miles W. London.

WOOTTON-UNDER-EDGE, a borough and market town of England, in Gloucestershire. It is well built, and has a handsome church. In the town and neighbourhood are several clothing manufactories. Population 5004. 19 miles S. S. W. Gloucester.

WORCESTER, an inland county of England, very near the centre of the kingdom, with Herefordshire separating it from Wales on the S.W.; Shropshire lying to the N.W.; Staffordshire bounding it on the N.; Warwickshire stretching to the E.; and Gloucestershire on the S. In longitude it extends from 1. 30. to 2. 30. W.; and its latitude is from 52. to 53. 30. N. It is altogether of a very irregular shape. Its medium length is stated by some to be 38 miles, and its breadth 34 miles. Area 480,000 acres. It contains one city, 11 market towns, besides 300 villages and hamlets, and 153 parishes. Its towns, besides the city of Worcester, are Evesham, Droitwich, and Bewdley, which return members to parliament, and the market towns of Upton, Tenbury, Kidderminster, Dudley, Stourbridge, Bromsgrove, Pershore, and Shipston-upon-Stour. The general aspect of the country is rich and beautiful. The air is generally pure and mild, though in some parts, as on the north-west range of the Broadway hills, there is a degree of cold bleakness that reminds the traveller very much of the mountainous tracts of Derbyshire. The Malvern hills, though nothing more than sheep walks, have yet a most salubrious climate; and the north-western parts of the county, particularly about Abberley, though of equal elevation to any other district, seem to have a much warmer aspect than either the Lacey or Broadway hills. The soil is various, consisting chiefly of rich loamy sand, in those districts immediately north of Worcester, mixed with a small proportion of gravel; there is also some very light sand, with a few spots of clay, and some of peat earth, towards the east. In the eastern district, indeed, the soil is in general a strong clay; but the waste land, which at one time was very considerable, was principally of deep, black, peat earth. In other parts the soil is red marl, and partly strong clay, with some sandy loam. The sandy loam consists of lime-stone. As to the mineralogy of this county, little can be said. There is no scarcity of clay fit for brick, nor of lime-stone in the hills. Some coal is raised in the north-western district. Freestone fit for building is found in different parts. In Clevee Prior parish are quarries of very good stone, fit for barn floors and other uses; some of it bears a fine polish like Derbyshire marble, and not inferior to it. At Droitwich there are most productive salt-pits, which are worked to a great extent. There are mineral wells at Malvern; also several useful chalybeates in Kidderminster parish, of which that at Sandbourne is the strongest. The canals in this county are, 1st, the Trent and Severn, or Staffordshire and Worcestershire, or as, indeed, it is more commonly called, the Stourport canal; 2d, the Droitwich canal; 3d, the Worcester and Birmingham canal, not yet finished; 4th, the Dudley Extension canal; 5th, the Leominster canal, near Tenbury. Its principal rivers are the Severn, Avon, Stour, and Teme. The commerce and manufactures are very considerable. It exports great quantities of hops, fruit, cyder, and perry. It also exports a considerable surplus of its own manufactures, in the article of Kidderminster goods, Worcester gloves, in China and glass-ware, and in nails, and the smaller articles of iron-work, as well as barred and sheet iron, for the northern parts. We must not omit the great quantities of salt from Droitwich, of oil and oil-cake from Evesham, and of clover and grass-seeds, corn, beans, flour, malt, salmon, fat cattle, sheep, lambs, hogs, hay, timber, large and small, from the county in general. That Worcestershire was known to the Romans, is evident from vestiges of roads, and also from coins which have been found. Population 184,424.

WORCESTER, the chief town of the above county, and one of the most ancient cities in England, agreeably situated in a beautiful vale on the eastern banks of the Severn, from which it rises gradually. Being an ancient fortified place, this city had a very strong wall of which some remains may yet be seen. The streets are in general broad, so as to admit a free circulation of air, though some are not remarkable either for airiness or regularity. The cathedral is a noble specimen of Gothic simplicity; the outside is extremely plain, and devoid of all laboured ornaments. Its beauty consists in its height, space, and the lightness of its architecture, which is greatly aided by the lofty pinnacles rising from every termination of the building. The cathedral was first erected by Ethelred, king of Mercia, in 670, when it was a convent of secular priests. It was burnt down and rebuilt before the conquest, and was again reduced to ashes in 1113. It was again burnt down in 1212, with all the adjacent offices of the monastery, and part of the city; but being again rebuilt, and King John buried there, it was, in the presence of Henry III. his son, and of many bishops, abbots, and nobles, solemnly consecrated in 1218. After that, a general repair took place, and a complete new front was given to it. It suffered considerable damage and dilapidation during the civil war in the reign of Charles I. It is still, however, an object of great interest to the man of taste. Its form is that usual one of a double cross, displaying the grand features of the Gothic style, which consist in extent and strength, and to which we may add the solemnity of the high pointed arch, and the beauty of diminutive ornament. The proportions of the exterior are on a grand scale; it is in length 514 feet; in breadth 78; and in height 68; and the tower, which rises from the centre of the cross aisle to the altitude of 200 feet, is ornamented at the corners by four lofty pinnacles, and with elegant battlements of light open work. The cathedral contains many handsome monuments, and is adorned with a variety of sculptures. On the south side of the cathedral is College Green, an open airy place, surrounded by the church and some rows of good houses. But the principal object of attention is Edgar's tower, a strong portal, and part of the ancient castle, but now in part occupied by the registrar's office. The bishop's palace stands near the cathedral, in a most commanding situation, on the banks of the Severn, which flows at the bottom of the garden. It has been greatly altered by modern improvements, so that it presents in several parts a disagreeable admixture of modern repairs with the ancient Gothic. Of the castle which once stood in this vicinity, there are scarcely any remains. Part of the ditch may yet be discerned, and some remains of the ancient walls may be traced in the county jail. Of the parish churches, there are 9 within the walls, and 2 without. St Michael's is a very ancient specimen of ecclesiastical architecture. St Andrew's church is remarkable on account of its lofty spire, considered as one of the most perfect in form and construction of any in the kingdom. All Saints church, rebuilt in 1742, is now a handsome edifice, in the modern style. St Martin's church is a modern brick building, with a stone foundation. St Nicolas church is next most conspicuous in the inside; and its style of architecture, executed in stone, very pleasing. Of the other public buildings, the guild-hall standing on the west side of the High-street, is a handsome structure, finished in 1723. The county jail was repaired and enlarged in 1793. The new jail is on the Howard plan, consisting of a central house for the jailer, with four wings spreading from the centre, yet detached and airy. The city jail is an ancient building, and unfortunately in a very crowded situation. Part of it is very ancient. On the eastern side, part of the old city wall may be seen; and the court in the centre is curious. This is also the city bridewell. The debtors' free ward is spacious, but the accommodations for criminals ought to be much amended. Here are various charitable institutions, namely, the house of industry, established in 1784; the infirmary, and various hospitals, charity schools, and almshouses. A school has also been established on the plan of Mr Lancaster. There are meeting houses here for various sectaries, as also for Roman Catholics. It has a hop market, the most considerable of any in the kingdom. There is an elegant bridge over the Severn, built in 1700, and consisting of five arches. The trade of Worcester is very considerable. The porcelain and glove manufactures are carried on to a great extent. It sends two members to parliament; number of voters 1700. Population 17,023. 111 miles N. W. by W. London.

WORCESTER, a county of the United States, in Massachusetts. Pop. 64,010—2d. In Maryland Population 16,971, including 4437 slaves.

WORCESTER, a post town of the United States, and capital of Worcester county, Massachusetts. It contains an elegant courthouse, a jail, and three churches. Population 2677. 40 miles W. by S. Boston.

WORKINGTON, a seaport and market town of England, in Cumberland, near where the Derwent and Cocker fall into the ocean. Many of the streets are narrow and irregular; but some are elegant and neat. The coal trade to Ireland is its chief support. A few vessels are, however, employed in the Baltic trade. The principal manufactures are of sail-cloth and cordage. The public buildings are modern. The church is a handsome structure, with a tower or steeple in the Gothic style. Here is a small but neat assembly-room, and a play-house. The quays have been much widened and lengthened within the last 30 years. There is a school on the Lancelotian plan; also a female seminary. A little above Workington are three large works called Bolton iron-works. Pop. 4438. 34 miles S. W. by W. Carlisle.

WORKSOP, a market town of England, in Nottinghamshire. It had formerly a priory, of which the ancient church is now a ruin. Pop. 4438. 264 miles N. Nottingham. WORKSOP, or WORKSOP, a town of East Prussia, on the Drwęca. Pop. 2100.

WORKSOP, a town of Flanders. Pop. 2100. 46 miles N. W. Dordrecht.

WORKSOP, a city of Germany, on the Rhine. The streets are dirty and narrow. The cathedral is a ponderous Gothic building, with decorated walls. The public buildings are the mint, the town-house, in which Luther appeared before the diet in 1521, and the new church. Pop. 5706. 25 miles S. Montz.

WORTHAM, a town of England, county of Norfolk. Population 706.

WORTHING, a hamlet of England, in Sussex, 11 miles from Brighton.

WORTLEY, a hamlet of England, in Gloucestershire.—2d. A township of Yorkshire, 3 miles S. W. Leeds. Pop. 3178.

WORTON, a hamlet of England, in the parish of Isleworth, Middlesex.

WRAGENY, a market town of England, in Lincolnshire, 11 miles E. Lincoln. Pop. 633.

WRAY, CARP, the north-west corner of the mainland of Scotland, in Sutherlandshire. Long. 4. 58. W. Lat. 58. 46. N.

WREXIN, a river of England, in Lancashire, which falls into the Mer.

WRETHAM, a post township of the United States, Norfolk county, Massachusetts.

WREXHAM, a market town of Wales, in Denbighshire. The streets, crossing each other at right angles, are spacious, and the buildings in general good. It has a handsome structure of the Doric order, the upper apartment used as a municipal hall. The church is elegant. It is 178 feet long and 72 broad, and has a tower 188 feet high. Here are also two large meeting-houses. It has a neat and convenient town-hall, and a well endowed free school. Wrexham is a great mart for flannel; and in the vicinity are several manufactories of warlike instruments, particularly a large cannon foundry. Pop. 3661. 188 miles N. W. London.

WREXHAM, a town of Prussia, on the Oder, 37 miles E. by N. Berlin. Pop. 3200.

WREXTON, a market town of England, county of Somerset, among the Mendip hills. The streets are irregularly built, and most of the houses thatched. The church is a stately building, 120 feet long and 52 wide. The tower, 140 feet high, is one of the finest in the kingdom. Here is a free school, for six boys and as many girls. Population 1342. 13 miles S. Bristol.

WREYFATH, a town of Prussian Westphalia. Pop. with its parish, 4600.

WRYTH, the name of three rivers in Germany, which join the Ammer, the Neckar, and the Roor.

WREYTH, a city of Franconia, situated on the Maine, by which it is divided into two parts, joined by an elegant bridge. It stands in a hollow. The Maine is here a large and noble stream, presenting, with its boats and barges, an animated picture. On the left bank is a hill, with a castle, formerly the episcopal residence, now a citadel. The town itself is still surrounded with a moat and moat. It is beautifully built, having no regular streets, and hardly any stone buildings, except the great palace and the church. The public works are on the same plan as the town itself. The buildings called the palace and church, stand up to the sky, afterwards, to the church. It is of no great long, on the plan of the palace at Versailles, and of great extent. Next ranks the hospital, a large and regular structure. The cathedral is also large, but in an indifferent style of architecture. The churches are numerous, but none remarkable. Pop. 20,000. 130 miles N. N. W. Munich.

WREYTH, a town of Saxony, on the Mulda, 14 miles E. Leipzig. Pop. 2400.

WREYTH, a town of Prussia, 18 miles S. S. E. Berlin. Pop. 2100.

WYACONDA, a river of the United States, in Louisiana, which joins the Mississippi.

WYSONA, a town of European Russia. Pop. 3400. 98 miles N. W. Petersburg.

WYBORG, a town of Denmark, in North Jutland. Pop. 2400. 120 miles N. Sleswick.

WYCOMBE, CHIFFIN or HICH, a borough and market town of England, in Buckinghamshire, on a small rivulet which falls into the Thames. The town-hall is a large brick-building, supported on 34 stone pillars. The church is a handsome structure of stone. It returns two members to parliament. Pop. 2864. 31 miles S. S. E. Buckingham.

WYCOMBE, WREY, a village and parish of England, in Buckinghamshire. The village is seated under a steep eminence, partly covered with wood, whence the mausoleum, and the small tower of its beautiful but singular church, rebuilt in 1763, seem to emerge. Pop. 1543. 24 miles N. W. by W. from High Wycombe.

WYE, a parish and town of England in Kent, near the Stour, over which is a bridge. Population 1508.

WYE, a river of South Wales, which falls into the Severn below Chepstow.

WYE, a river of England, in Derbyshire, which falls into the Derwent.

WYER RIVER, a village and parish of England, in Dorsetshire.

WYLAND, a township of England, in Northumberland. Pop. 722.

WYMONDHAM, or WINDHAM, a market town of England, in Norfolk. The town arose from the erection of a monastery here, in the time of Henry I. A. D. 1130. The present church consists of a nave with aisles, a large western tower, and another at the intersection of the nave with the transepts. The inhabitants are employed in various branches of weaving; in making spindles, tops, and other articles of wooden ware. Pop. 4768. 9 miles S. W. Norwich.

WYOMING, a general name formerly given to a tract of country in Pennsylvania, situated on the Susquehanna, with a fort, 2 miles above Wilkesbarre. In the year 1778, this fort was taken by a party of British and Indians; and the greatest barbarities were practiced on the garrison.

WYOMING CREEK, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania. It joins the Susquehanna.

WYOMING, a county of the United States, in the south-west part of Virginia. Pop. 2356. Area 1187. Chief town Evansville.

X.

XADRAQUER, a small town of Spain, in Guadalupe, 69 miles E. N. E. Madrid.

XANTRES SANTOS, three small islands of the West Indies, to the south-east of Guadeloupe. Long 61. 32. W. Lat. 15. 55. N.

XALAPA, a considerable town of Mexico, in the intendency of Vera Cruz, formerly famous for the fair held on the arrival of the stated fleets from Europe, and still a mart for European commodities. It stands on the southern skirts of a mountain, in a beautiful climate. The richest merchants of Vera Cruz have country houses at Xalapa, in which they enjoy a cool and agreeable retreat; while the coast is almost uninhabitable, from the mosquitoes, the great heats, and the yellow fever. Here there is an excellent school for drawing. Xalapa is situated about half way up the Table-land, being 4264 feet above the level of the sea. Pop. 13,000. 40 miles N. W. Vera Cruz, and 80 E. Mexico.

XALOV, a considerable river of Spain. It falls into the Ebro, above Saragosa.

XARAMA, or JARAMA, a river in the interior of Spain, which falls into the Tagus.

XAVIERE, NAN, a river of Mexico, in North America, which falls into the De los Dolores.

XAVIER, ST., a town of South America, in the audience of Quito.—It is the name of various small towns in South America.

XAUZA, the capital of a district of the same name in Peru, near the river Xauza.

XAUZA, a large and abundant river of Peru, which enters the Apurimac.

XENIA, a post town of the United States, in Green county, Ohio, on the Shawnee Creek. It contains a court-house, a jail, and an academy. Population 600.

XERES DE BADAJOZ, or XERES DE LOS CARABEROS, a town of Spain, in Estremadura. It has manufactures of linen and leather. Pop. 8700. 90 miles N. N. W. Seville.

XERES DE LA FRONTERA, a large and ancient town in the south-west of Spain, in Andalusia, 16 miles N. N. E. Cadix. It is agreeably situated on the banks of the small river Guadalete. The interior is hotter than that of most Spanish towns. The town is surrounded with a wall, contains a large square, and has a very neat council-house. Here are four churches of considerable size. The apartment of the Carthusians is a magnificent building, two miles from Xeres, containing a number of beautiful paintings. Xeres is a place of great antiquity; it is supposed to be built on the site of the ancient Am Raris. The chief trade of the town is in wine. Population between 20,000 and 30,000.

XERICA, or ZARICA, a walled town of Spain, in Valencia. Pop. 2300.

XERTROFF, a village of France, department of the Vosges. Population 2000.

XICORO, or SIXORR, an island, the smallest of the three which compose the empire of Japan, 100 miles in length, and 60 in breadth.

XIMO, or KIMU, an island of Japan, second in magnitude to Nippon, 200 miles in length, and about 100 in breadth.

XIMONOEZURE, a seaport on the south-west coast of Nippon, in Japan.

XIXONA, an inland town of the east of Spain, in Valencia, among the mountains. Pop. 5000. 15 miles N. N. W. Alicante.

XOCNIMILCO, one of the five lakes in the valley of Mexico, 64 square leagues in extent.

XUCAR, a large river of Spain, which discharges itself into the Mediterranean.

XULI, a town of Peru, near the west coast of Lake Titicaca, 100 miles N. N. W. La Paz.

XULIA ISLANDS, in the Eastern sea, to the south-east of the Molucca passage.

XUXUY, or JUJUY, SAN SALVADOR DE, a city of South America, in the province of Tucuman, containing about 200 houses, and 3000 inhabitants, who trade with Potosi. 61 miles N. N. E. Salta. Lat. 23. 15. S.

Y.

Y, an arm or inlet of the Zuyder Zee, on the shore of which stands Amsterdam.

YAKOOTSK, an extensive province of Asiatic Russia, forming one of the four into which the government of Irkoutsk is divided. The Lena traverses it through its whole extent from north to south.

YAKOUTSK, capital of the province of the same name, on the Lena. It contains 500 or 600 houses, and 3000 inhabitants. It forms theemporium of all the furs collected in the extensive regions to the north.

of the Russian trade with Kamtschatka and the western coast of America. The soil is extensive. Long 140. 5. E. Lat. 66. 2. N.

YALLAN'S BAY, a bay of the island of Sumatra, on the south coast.

YALLAN'S POINT, a cape on the coast of Jamaica, 12 miles S. E. Kingston.

YALLAN'S RIVER, a river of Jamaica, which runs into the sea near Yallan's Point.

YALDER, a river of England, in Devonshire, which enters the sea, near Plymouth.

YALTOUMATA, a fortress in the government of Tomsk, and district of Blisk, to the right of the Irtysh. 200 well built houses are attached to it. Long. 77. 50. E. Lat. 60. 12. N.

YANG-TSU-KIAHO, a river of China, the largest of that empire. It flows, during the first part of its course, along the borders of China; after which it enters the empire, and passing through the grand central provinces, it falls into the gulf of 'Foong-ming, in the Eastern sea.

YARU, a large and abundant river of St Domingo. It falls into the sea on the N. coast.

YARACUY, a river of South America, in the province of Venezuela, and government of the Caracas, which enters the sea in the bay of Burhurata, between Port Cabello and the Point of Chiribiche.

YARUEN, a city of Cashgar, in that part of Chinese Tartary which goes commonly by the name of Little Bucharia, on the great range of the Himalieh mountains. It has become a kind of emporium for the inland trade of Asia. A river, bearing the name of the city, passes by, and flows eastward.

YARLEY, (Githorn), a hamlet of England, in Northamptonshire. Population 565.

YARE, a river of England, in Norfolk, which enters the German ocean below Yarmouth.

YARM, or YARUM, a market town of England, in the North Riding of Yorkshire. Owing to the low situation of the town, it has suffered at different times greatly by inundation; and to this cause may be ascribed the decline of its trade and importance. It has no manufacture of any consequence. The entrance into the town, from the county of Durham, is by a bridge of five arches, built over the Tors about the year 1400. In 1603 and 1704, a bridge of cast iron was erected, which fell about midnight, January 12th 1806, owing to the insufficiency of the abutments to resist the great lateral pressure of the arch. The stone bridge was in consequence widened and repaired. The parish church is a neat modern structure. Population 1504. 45 miles N. N. W. York.

YARMOUTH, commonly called GREAT YARMOUTH, a seaport and borough of England, in the county of Norfolk. It is in the form of an oblong quadrangle, extending more than a mile in length, and half a mile in breadth. It comprises 33 acres, from the shape of the peninsula on which it stands, having the sea on the east, and on the west the Yare, over which river there is a handsome drawbridge. It contains four principal streets, running parallel, which are crossed at right angles, by 186 narrower ones, denominated rows. The whole is flanked by a wall on the east, north, and south sides, 2240 yards in length. The church of St Nicholas, erected in the year 1100, and greatly enlarged in 1230, consists of a nave, two aisles, a transept, and had lately a spire, 130 feet high, which was taken down in the year 1603. In 1716, a handsome chapel was erected. The quay of Yarmouth is justly the pride and boast of the inhabitants; for it is allowed to be equal to that of Marseilles, and the most extensive and finest in Europe, except the far famed one at Seville in Spain. Its length, from the south gate to the bridge, is 1014 yards, beyond which it extends, for smaller vessels, 1016 yards, making a continuation of one mile and 270 yards. In many places it is 150 yards broad; and the southern part of the line is decorated with a range of handsome buildings. Yarmouth has long been much frequented as a fashionable watering-place, and furnishes every accommodation for the health, comfort, and amusement of its visitors. A neat theatre was erected in the year 1773. It has a commodious bathing-house on the sands. There are various other public buildings, namely, the fisherman's hospital, of a quadrangular form, and containing 20 rooms, each intended for an old fisherman and his wife; the hospital school, for feeding, clothing, and educating 30 boys and 20 girls; also a charity school. The town-hall is a handsome building, with a portico of the Tuscan order in front. The grand plan of the new harbour was executed under the direction of Josias Johnson, a Dutchman, who was brought from Holland to conduct the work. The principal, or north pier, is at bottom 40 feet wide; at top 20 feet; and in length 235 yards. For the defence of this pier against the rage of the ocean, a jetty was erected, in breadth at the base 16 feet; at the upper part 6; and in length 265 yards. The south pier, which is 140 feet built than the north pier, is 310 yards in length, 30 feet broad, and 30 deep; 24 feet of the depth is generally under water, which, previous to the erection of this pier, was seldom more than three. This was intended for preventing the water of the old haven from running out south, in their progress to the sea. These piers, &c. have been considerably improved at different periods since their erection, particularly in the majority of additional Mounds. The extent of the haven, between the north and south piers, is 1111 yards. During the late wars, the importance of Yarmouth was greatly increased, owing to its being a grand station for part of the British navy; the roads opposite the town affording safe anchorage for a numerous fleet. The harbour is perfectly secure against every danger, and is provided with two light-houses, one at Calster, and one at Garleston. The coast is the most dangerous in Britain, and has been often the scene of the most melancholy shipwrecks. This place is advantageously situated for commerce, particularly to the north of Europe. Besides fishing smacks, upwards of 300 vessels belong to this port. Yarmouth was early distinguished, and still remains unvalued, in the herring fishery. It has also a considerable coal trade. The first mention of Yarmouth is in Domesday book, whence we may infer that it was founded in the early part of the Anglo-Saxon dynasty. In 1265, walls were begun to be erected, and the place was surrounded by a moat. The modern defence of Yarmouth is by three forts, which were erected on the verge of the beach, during the American war, and mounted with 32-pounders. Barracks capable of containing 1000 men, are built on the beach; and an armoury has lately been erected, under the direction of Mr Wyatt. It returns two members to parliament, chosen by the burghers at large. Population 18,040. 22 miles E. by S. Norwich.

YARMOUTH, or SOUTH YARMOUTH, a small seaport, borough, and parish of England, on the north-western part of the Isle of Wight, Southamptonshire. It has a quay, where small vessels may unload. It sends two members to parliament. Population 564. 69 miles S. W. London.

YARMOUTH, a seaport of the United States, Massachusetts, 20 miles S. E. Boston. Population 2134.

YARMOUTH, a town on the west coast of Nova Scotia, 25 miles W. Shelburn.

YARROW, a celebrated pastoral stream of Scotland, in Selkirkshire, which joins its waters to the Etterick, two miles above Selkirk.

YAXLEY, a small but neat town of England, in Huntingdonshire, near the river Nen. It has a handsome Gothic church, with a lofty spire. Barracks were erected here for the security of French prisoners. Population 1070. 2 miles N. E. Stilton.

YAZOO, a river in Georgia West Territory, which enters the Mississippi.

YARMLEY, a township of England, in Yorkshire, 6½ miles S. W. Holmsley.

YECIA, a town of Spain, in Murcia, with 2200 inhabitants.

YELL, or ZEIT, one of the most northerly of the Shetland Isles, about 20 miles long and 12 broad. Population 1724.

YELLOW BARTONS CREEK, a tributary of the Susquehanna, in Pennsylvania.

YELLOW CREEK, GRAND and LITTLE, two streams of the United States, in Ohio, which flow into Ohio river.

YELLOW RIVER, a river of Ireland, King's county. It joins the Boyne.

YELLOWSTONE RIVER, a large river of North America, which falls into the Missouri, about the 47th degree of north latitude.

YEZES, a river of Spain, in the province of Salamanca, which falls into the Douro.

YEZES, a country of Arabia, forming the south-eastern division of that part of Asia, situated partly upon the Red sea, and partly on the Indian ocean. It was celebrated by the ancients, under the flattering title of the Happy Arabia. It is, however, by no means exempted from that curse of aridity by which Arabia generally suffers. The plain of the Tehama, which forms a broad belt along the whole of the coast, consists almost entirely of a waste of unproductive sand. The Djilal, or mountainous district in the interior, presents in many parts a more agreeable aspect. Its lower declivities are covered with trees and aromatic shrubs; and the mountain chains are divided by fine valleys, which being watered by numerous streams, can be advantageously cultivated. The grains chiefly raised are barley, millet, and dhourra; the supply of water being insufficient for the culture of rice. The most valuable and celebrated products of this region consist of the aromatic plants which grow upon the sides of the hills. The coffee of Yemen has always possessed a flavour which that of no other part of the world can rival. Europe, indeed, is now chiefly supplied from the West Indies; but in the east, the coffee of Mocha is always eagerly sought after. The balm of Mecca, and the tree bearing incense, are also the products of Yemen. It is one of the few parts of Arabia which have been formed into a considerable and monarchical state. It is subject to a sovereign, who assumes the most title of Imam, or doctor, but exercises over his subjects an authority nearly absolute. The principal cities of Yemen are, in the interior, Sana, the capital, and Taro; on the coast, Mocha and Aden.

YENNON, a river of England, in Staffordshire, which falls into the Churn.

YEVREBY, a small village of England, Northumberland, near Wooler.

YEWELL, a market town of England, in Somersetshire. It consists of upwards of 20 streets and lanes. It has an almshouse. The church of Yewell is a handsome old building, of the lighter Gothic order. It consists of a nave, a large chancel, north and south side aisles, and a transept, all of which are covered with lead. The length of the whole is 140 feet, and the breadth 60; the transept measures 80 feet. It is 90 feet in height, and has a stone balustrade on the top. There is a well end and free school in this town. There are four meetings for dissenters of different denominations, and also one for the Society of Friends. The market-house is an extensive open building, supported by two rows of stone pillars. There are also rows of butchers' shambles. The town was formerly noted for its manufacture of woollen cloth, but its principal mart now is that of ladies' gloves. An almshouse for the support of four aged females, is attached to it. Population 4650. 122 miles W. S. W. London.

YETHAM, a village and parish of Scotland, Roxburghshire, on the Nonsum water, 8 miles S. Kelso. Population 1280.

YEYEN, a city of Persia, in the province of Irak, on the frontier of Seistan. Being a great emporium of the trade between Hindostan, Bukharia, and Persia, it is large and flourishing; and is supposed to contain not less than 21,000 houses. The chief manufactures of the place consist in silk stuffs, which are superior to any in Persia.

YESSA, a river of Lower Canada, which falls into Lake St Peter.

YOCUM, a river of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, tributary to the Rhin.

YONON CREEK, a river of the United States, Virginia. It joins the Potomac.

YONG-KING, a city of China, of the first rank, in Yunan, on the borders of Tibet.

1095 miles S. W. Peking. Long. 100. 24. E. Lat. 27. 40. N.

YONG-RING, a city of China, of the first rank, in Pe-che-lee, on a river which runs into the gulf of Loo-tong. 116 miles E. Peking. Long. 118. 34. E. Lat. 29. 58. N.

YONG-TSIANG, a city of China, of the first rank, in Yunnan, 270 miles S. W. Peking. Long. 99. E. Lat. 25. 6. N.

YONG-TZOU, a city of China, of the first rank, in Hou-quang. 282 miles S. S. W. Peking. Long. 111. 16. E. Lat. 26. 10. N.

YONNE, a department in the interior of France, in the western part of Burgundy and Champagne, situated nearly half way between Paris and the frontier of Switzerland. Its extent, equal to two of our larger counties, is about 2000 square miles. The principal river is the Yonne. The climate is temperate, and of sufficient warmth for the vine; the quantity of wine made annually, exceeding 100,000 hogsheads. Its quality is in general good. Population 330,000.

YORK, a maritime county of England, inhabited, prior to the Roman invasion, by the populous and powerful Brigantes, and far exceeding in magnitude any of the other counties in the kingdom. It extends 100 miles in length from east to west, 75 in breadth from north to south, and 380 in circumference. It is bounded E. by the German ocean; S. by the river Humber, which separates it from Lincolnshire, and by the counties of Nottingham and Derby; W. by a small part of Cheshire, by Lancashire, and by Westmoreland; N. by Westmoreland, and the county or bishopric of Durham. It is divided into 23 wapentakes, exclusive of the Ainsty of the city of York; contains one city and 59 market towns, of which latter, 12 are boroughs; and sends thirty-two members to parliament. Area 3,698,380 acres. Pop. 1,173,500. As the three Ridings (the North, the East, and the West), into which Yorkshire is subdivided, are distinguished by various topographical peculiarities, they are entitled to a distinct description.

The North Riding, extending in length from east to west 83 miles, and 38 in breadth from north to south, is bounded N. by the river Tees, which separates it from the county of Durham; N. E. and E. by the German ocean; S. E. and S. by the East Riding, the Ainsty, and the West Riding; and W. by the county of Westmoreland. It contains 1,311,187 acres, of which about one-third (432,262) remain uncultivated, and the rest are distributed into inclosed lands, open fields, woods, and roads. The face of the country from Scarborough northward, is bold and hilly, the cliff being generally from 60 to 150 feet high. At Skarpe or Skarpe Head, about 14 miles north of that place, it is stated to rise to the stupendous height of 800 feet. Inland from these lofty crags, successive hills rise themselves one above another, till they descend and form a part of the fertile plain, forming a space of about 30 miles from east to west, by 15 from north to south, and penetrated occasionally by romantic and fertile dales. Iron-ore is found in various parts of the district. The Vale of York, with some irregularities of surface, slopes southward from the Tees, as far as York, where it sinks into a nearly perfect flat. Of this tract, the northern part is bounded on each side by the Moorlands, except where it opens into Cleveland, or is divided from Ryedale by the Howardian hills. Within 10 miles of York, however, it expands into a wider breadth, extending eastward as far as the Wolds in the East Riding, and to the Humber on the south. The Western Moorlands form a part of the long range of mountains stretching northward from Staffordshire to Scotland. These being chiefly calcareous, surpass in fertility those in the eastern part of the Riding; and various rich and romantic vallies are found among the mountains. Among these stands Wensleydale, a track of fat pasturage, through which the Ure winds its way, forming in some places beautiful cascades. Next to Wensleydale in extent, and not much inferior to it in fertility, must be placed Swaledale; though, from the circumstances of its being much narrower, and bounded by hills of a much steeper ascent, it is by many deemed more romantic. The smaller dales, which are numerous, exhibit the same general appearances. Of the different minerals of the North Riding, the alum-rock on the east edge of the Eastern Moorlands, and the lead in the district of Richmondshire, are the chief. A mine of fine copper was formerly worked. Several parts of these Moorlands appear also to contain large quantities of iron-stone, limestone, and freestone. The climate, in consequence of the different elevations of different parts of the county, and other topographical circumstances, includes considerable varieties, being mild and temperate, except near the Moors, and on the high grounds, where the influence of the winds is sometimes severely felt. The principal rivers of the North Riding are the Swale, the Tees, and the Derwent. It is divided into 12 wapentakes. Population 163,624.

The East Riding is bounded on the north and the west by the little river Hartford and the Derwent, which separate it from the North Riding, as far as the vicinity of Stamford Bridge. An irregular line from the Derwent to the Ouse, commencing about a mile from that place, and joining the latter river a little below York, forms the remaining limit between these two Ridings. From that point it is bounded on the west and south-west by the Ouse, which divides it from the West Riding; on the south by the Humber; and on the east by the German ocean. This division of Yorkshire, though far less conspicuously marked by the bolder features of nature than the other parts of the county, contains scenes of great extent and magnificence, especially when the sea or the Humber enter into the view. It may be considered as consisting of three different districts; the Wolds, a range of chalky hills extending from north to south, through nearly the whole of the Riding; and the two level tracts which lie to the east and west of them respectively. In few parts of England has agriculture been conducted on a larger scale, or brought to a higher degree of perfection, than in the East Riding of Yorkshire, particularly upon the Wolds. It furnishes wool in large quantities to the West Riding clothiers; and great numbers of horses are purchased at the York and Howden fairs, by the London dealers. Hull is its grand emporium of foreign trade. The chief manufacture of the Riding is established at Wansford, near Driffield, for carpets and spinning cotton. Pop. 180,449. It contains three boroughs, Beverley, Hedon, and Hull.

The West Riding, far exceeding in size the two other divisions of the county, is computed to contain about 1,668,000 statute acres. It is bounded N. by the North Riding, E. by the East Riding and Lancashire, S. W. by Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire, and W. by Cheshire, Lancashire, and Westmoreland; and may be divided into three extensive districts, varying from a level and marshy, to a rough and mountainous region. The level part, of unequal breadth, extends westward from its eastern side, along the banks of the Ouse, to within three or four miles of an imaginary line drawn from Doncaster to Sherburn. Its middle district rises gradually into hills, and is beautifully variegated; after which, proceeding still farther westward, we find the surface in the third division extremely rugged and barren. Beyond Sheffield, black moor, running to the north-west, unite with the lofty hills of Blackstone Edge, on the borders of Lancashire; while the western part of Craven presents a confused heap of rocks and mountains; among which, Pennine, Ryedale, and Wharfedale, stand eminently conspicuous, being estimated at the heights of 3930, 3987, and 4052 feet respectively. Amidst these dreary regions, however, occur many romantic vallies, presenting the most picturesque and beautiful scenery; the greatest part of them being inclosed, well wooded, and thickly studded with flourishing and almost continuous villages. The climate of the West Riding is as various as its surface. Towards the banks of the Ouse, it resembles that of the East Riding on the opposite side of the river; and damps and fogs frequently prevail. In the middle district the air becomes clearer and more healthful. On its western margin rains and storms are predominant. In the middle and western divisions of the West Riding are found great quantities of coal, ironstone, and lead, with vast quarries of limestone. The soil in this extensive district includes almost every variety, from the deep strong clay and rich loam, to the most barren species of peat earth. Almost all the arable land is inclosed with hedges or stone walls; the former prevailing in the eastern, and the latter in the western parts. Upon these lands, wheat is the general produce; oats, indeed, are cultivated to a considerable extent. The turnip has hardly been generally adopted throughout the Riding. In the eastern part, potatoes form a great object of attention. Flax is also extensively cultivated in the same neighbourhood. This division of Yorkshire may safely be pronounced one of the greatest manufacturing districts in the world. On every side the raw materials abound; and coals, an article of indispensable necessity, are plentiful and cheap. These manufactures, carried on principally at Leeds, Wakefield, Bradford, Halifax, Huddersfield, and the adjoining country, comprise broad and narrow cloths of all qualities, shalloons, calimancoes, and flannels, with every kind of woollen goods. From Sheffield, cutlery and plated goods are exported to all parts of the globe. The West Riding is likewise distinguished for its valuable rivers; the Ouse, the Don, the Calder, the Aire, and the Wharfe. Yorkshire contains, likewise, numerous canals, by which its produce is distributed throughout the kingdom. In addition to the towns above-mentioned, may be named as manufacturing places, Knaresborough, Keighley, Barnsley, Motherham, and Pontefract. The West Riding is divided into ten wapentakes. Population 799,357.

York, the capital of Yorkshire, inhabited successively by Hadrian Severus and other Roman emperors, pleasantly situated on the rivers Foss and Ouse, and, in point of rank, classes as the second city in the kingdom; but it is far surpassed in wealth and populousness by many of the more modern trading towns. It is entered by four principal gates or bars. There were likewise, till lately, five porterns; but the last was taken down in 1808. Of the six bridges of York, one alone crosses the river Ouse. The other five bridges are thrown over the Foss. But the cathedral is justly esteemed the glory, not only of York, but of Great Britain. Some of its principal dimensions are as follow:—The whole length from east to west is 524½ feet; breadth of the eastern end, 103; breadth of the western end, 169; length of the cross aisle, from north to south, 222; height of the grand lantern tower, 213; height of the two western towers, 106; height of the nave, or body of the church, 69; height of the eastern window, 75; breadth of the eastern window, 32. Of this magnificent structure, the western front is particularly superb. The eastern end, being of somewhat later date, displays a more florid style of architecture, enriched with elegant niches, and airy pinnacles. Over its incomparable window is seen the statue of the venerable founder of the choir, the bishop Thoresby (who laid its first stone July 19th 1301). This window is unrivalled in magnitude and in beauty, upwards of 100 compartments being filled with tions of the Supreme Being, of monarchs, mitred priests and saints, and of most of the principal events recorded in Scripture. The great tower, or lantern steeple, supported within by four massive columns, is finished in a style very different from that of the western towers. With the splendid exterior its interior perfectly corresponds. The cross aisle exhibits a superb specimen of the style of architecture which prevailed in the latter years of the reign of Henry III. The screen, which separates the nave from the choir, is a very curious piece of workmanship; but its history is unknown. The chapter-house is a magnificent structure, and singular in its kind. Its form is an octagon of 63 feet in diameter, and nearly 68 in height, estimated to the centre knot in the roof. The vestry contains several antiquities, viz. silver chalices, found in the graves of archbishops; a wooden head, supposed to be part of the effigy of archbishop Rotherham, who died of the plague in 1500; several ancient rings; a pastoral staff of silver, given by Catherine, queen dowager of England, to her confessor, on his nomination to the see in 1687, and wrested from him by the Earl of Derby, on his way to the cathedral; a chair, of the date of the heptarchy, in which several Saxon kings were crowned, &c. But the most important relic is a large horn, made of an elephant's tooth, by which the church of York holds several lands of great value, bestowed about A.D. 1036. The library, originally founded by archbishop Egbert in 740, was totally consumed by fire in the year 1600. A second met with the same fate. The present library originated about A.D. 1620. The chapter of York, in addition to the archbishop, includes a dean, four archdeacons, a precentor, a chancellor, a subdean, 29 prebendaries, a succentor, 8 vicars choral, &c. Besides the cathedral, York contains 20 parish churches within the walls, and 3 in the suburbs. The church of All Saints, in North-street, divided by pillars into two spacious aisles, has some well preserved painted glass in the windows, and a fine spire. St Mary's, in Castlegate, is chiefly distinguished by its lofty spire. All Saints, in the Pavement, is an ancient rectory. Its tower is esteemed an exquisite piece of Gothic architecture. St Denys, in Watergate, is principally remarkable for a large blue marble, bearing two effigies with a brass inscription around it, now totally defaced. The church of St Margaret, in the same street, is celebrated for its singular Saxon porch. Of the ruined abbey of St Mary, which, next to the cathedral, merits the greatest attention, there now remains only a small part of the abbey church or cloister, of which the divisions appear from an accurate measurement, to have been 371 feet in length, and 60 in breadth. The castle of York is of great antiquity. The present site was selected, according to some writers, in the time of William the Conqueror; but the fabric of that date falling to decay, it was repaired or rebuilt under Richard III. It was wholly taken down, and the existing structure erected in 1701. The prison for debtors is scarcely anywhere equalled. In the left wing is a chapel. The Basilica, or new county-hall, is of the Ionic order, 150 feet in length, and 45 in breadth. The other buildings are the mansion-house; the guild-hall, erected in 1446, and regarded as one of the finest Gothic halls in the kingdom; the theatre, and the assembly-room in Blake-street. Although the foreign commerce of York is totally annihilated, it still retains a considerable river trade; and vessels of 120 tons burden come up to the Ouse as high as the bridge, near which there is a convenient quay. Some business is also transacted in gloves, linens, livery lace, glass, and drugs; and printing and bookselling are conducted on a large scale. It derives its principal support, however, from its fairs, assizes, and races, and the winter residence of many of the provincial gentry, by whom it is regarded as a kind of northern metropolis. Besides the above specified public buildings, there are two well conducted receptacles for lunatics, the asylum and the (Quakers) retreat; a county hospital, and a city dispensary; 'a blue-coat boys', and a grey-coat girls' charity school, great national schools for boys and girls, &c.; a savings-bank, a subscription library, a city jail, and a house of correction; with various chapels for Roman Catholics, Wesleyan Methodists, Quakers, Presbyterians, and Independents; and about three miles from York stands Bishopthorpe, the magnificent palace of the honourable Edward Venables Vernon, archbishop of York. Population 34,731. 193 miles N. by W. London.

YORK, the capital of Upper Canada, on the coast of Lake Ontario, on the N. side of an excellent harbour. It is very regularly laid out, with the streets running at right angles, and promises to become a very handsome town. Its houses are mostly of wood. The public edifices are a government-house, the house of assembly for the provincial parliament, a church, a court-house, and a jail, with numerous stores and buildings for the various purposes of government. The harbour is nearly circular. It incloses a beautiful basin, about a mile and a half in diameter, capable of containing a great number of vessels, and at the entrance of which ships may lie in safety during the winter. No place in either province has made so rapid a progress as York. Population 2500.

YORK, a county of the United States, in Maine. Pop. 41,577. Chief towns York and Alfred.—2d. On the south side of Pennsylvania. Pop. 31,938.—3d. On the east side of Virginia. Population 6167. Slaves 2931.

YORK, a seaport of the United States, and capital of York county, Maine. It contains a court-house and a jail. Population 3046. 67 miles N. N. E. Boston.

YORK, a borough of the United States, and capital of York county, Pennsylvania, on Codorus creek. It is a pleasant and flourishing town, regularly laid out, and contains a court-house, a jail, a market-house, an almshouse, an Episcopal academy, and eight churches. Pop. 2847. 48 miles N. Baltimore.

YORK, a short and navigable river of the United States. It flows into the Chesapeake.

YORK, a district of the United States, in the north part of South Carolina. Population 10,032, including 3164 slaves.

YORK, a post town of the United States, and capital of South Carolina.

YORKTOWN, or YORK, a post town of the United States, a port of entry, and capital of York county, on the south side of York river, which affords at this town the best harbour in Virginia. It is a place of some trade. This town is famous for the capture of Lord Cornwallis and his army by the Americans, on the 19th of October 1781. Pop. 700. 12 miles E. S. E. Williamsburg.

YOUGHALL, a seaport town of Ireland, in the county of Cork, near the mouth of the Pay, on the south side of the Blackwater river. It consists of a very large street, and suburbs. Its custom-house is large and convenient. The collegiate church is a very ancient Gothic structure; its nave is 132 feet long and 66 high; it has a square tower on the north side, 32 feet high. It had many other religious structures, of which there are now few remains. In the civil wars it yielded to Cromwell's usurpation. Youghall sends one member to the imperial parliament. 31 miles S. W. Waterford.

YPRES, a considerable town of the Netherlands, in West Flanders, on the Yperle. It has the advantage of water communication, being connected by a canal with Bruges, Ostend, and Newport. It is fortified, and, on the whole, well built. Its chief structures are the town-hall, built in the Gothic style, an elegant cathedral, and other churches, which contain, as usual in Belgium, good paintings. The other buildings are the exchange, the chamber of commerce, and the college or public school. It has manufactures of linen, lace, cotton, thread, and, in a small degree, of silk. Pop. 15,500. 20 miles S. Ostend.

YRIIX, St., a town of France, in the department of the Upper Vienne, on the Loue. It has five churches, an hospital, and 5000 inhabitants. It has manufactures of linen, druggets, flannel, hats, and leather. 20 miles S. by W. Limoges.

YSAAR, a town of Spain, 30 miles N. N. W. Segovia. Population 6000.

YSSIMONAEUX, a town of France, in Auvergne, department of the Upper Loire, 286 miles N. E. Paris. Population 6300.

YSTADT, a town of Sweden, province of Schonen, on the Baltic, 46 miles S. S. W. Christianstadt. Population 2700.

YTHAM, a river of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire, which falls into the sea at Newburgh.

YUCATAN, the most easterly province of New Spain. It is in the form of a peninsula, jutting out into the gulf of Mexico from the mainland of the isthmus. It is surrounded on the north-west by the waters of the Mexican gulf, by the bay or gulf of Honduras on the south-east, the province of Vera Cruz bounds it on the south-west, and Vera Paz in Guatemala on the south. Here it is connected with the continent of North America, by an isthmus of about 120 miles in breadth. The English have settlements extending a short distance along the east coast of Yucatan, opposite Ambergris Key. The soil of this peninsula is very prolific, and, when under proper cultivation, produces great crops of corn, maize, indigo, and cotton. The climate is hot. The chief towns are Campeachy, or St. Francisco de Campeche, Merida de Yucatan, and Valladolid. Here are, besides, some Indian villages. The logwood cutting establishments are under the Spanish governor; but by the treaty of peace in 1763, the British were allowed the privilege of cutting it without being molested. Population, including the Indians, 465,000.

YUEN-YANG, a city of China, of the first rank, in Houquang, 517 miles S. S. W. Peking. Long. 110. 29. E. Lat. 32. 00. N.

YVERNOY, a neatly built town of the Swiss canton of Vaud, at the south extremity of the lake of Neuchâtel. Population 2500. 48 miles N. N. E. Geneva.

YVETOT, a town of France, department of the Lower Seine, 22 miles N. W. Rouen. It has manufactures of linen, muslins, druggets, and distaffs. Population 10,000.

YVSA, a large river of St. Domingo, which enters the sea in the bay of Samana.

YU-KAN, a city of China, of the first rank, and capital of the province of the same name. Long. 102. 26. E. Lat. 25. 6. N.

YU-KING, a city of China, of the first rank, in Honan, watered by a river called Yuh.

YVOIX LE PRE, a town of France, department of the Cher. Population 2400.

Z.

ZAAZ, a district of Algiers, in Africa, lying immediately south of the province of Constantine, and consisting of a narrow track of land, under the Atlas.

ZAGHDAH, or SAANDAM, a town of the Netherlands, in North Holland, on the Zaan near its junction with the Y. It consisteth properly of two great villages, called East and West Zaanland, containing together 10,700 inhabitants. The houses are for the most part of wood. They are curiously painted on the outside. It has manufactures of rope, tobacco, and paper; but the most important branch of its industry is, and has long been, ship-building. 5 miles N. by W. Amsterdam.

ZAR, a river of Kurdistan, which, joining with the Altun su, their united streams reach the Tigris.

ZAR, GREAT, a river of Kurdistan, which falls into the Tigris.

ZABBAR, a town of the island of Malta, finely situated between Cottovera and Zejtone. Population 2400.

ZACATECAS, one of the intendancies into which Mexico is now divided. This province is a mountainous and arid tract, with a rigorous climate, and is singularly ill peopled. It is bounded N. by the intendancy of Durango, E. by the intendancy of San Luis Potosi, S. by the province of Guanajuato, and W. by that of Guadalajara. Its greatest length is 85 leagues, and its greatest breadth, from Southwester to the head of Ranos, 51 leagues. Population 153,000.

ZACATECAS, the capital of the above intendancy, about 120 miles N. Guadalajara, and 240 N. W. Mexico. It is, after Guanajuato, the most celebrated mining place in New Spain, and contains at least 35,000 inhabitants. It consists chiefly of one street, in a deep passage, between high rocks, crowned with cottages.

ZACKEN, a river of Prussian Silesia, which joins the Elber.

ZADRON, or CADRON, a river of Portugal, which falls into the ocean at St Ubes.

ZADORA, a river of Spain, in the province of Alava, which flows past Vittoria.

ZAGRA, a town of Spain, in Extremadura, on an eminence. It has only one church, but contains seven monasteries. Pop. 6000.

ZAGHAWA, a kingdom of Central Africa, described by the Arabian writers as situated on the eastern part of the course of the Niger.

ZAGRAU, or AGHAM, a city of the Austrian states, the capital of Croatia, and the chief town of the county of Agram. It contains the cathedral, the episcopal residence, and two inferior churches. Population 17,000. 144 miles S. Vienna.

ZAGTYA, a large river in the interior of Hungary, which joins the Theys at Szolnok.

ZAHARA, a small town of Spain, in the province of Seville, near the source of the river Guadalquivir. It stands on a hill, and the houses are scooped out of the solid rock. 40 miles S. E. Seville.

ZAIAR, a large river of Africa, which rises in the country of Matamba, about Lat. 10. S. and takes a northerly course to Lat. 2. in the Kingdom of Congo, after which it turns south-west, and enters the Atlantic, in Long. 12. 30. E. Lat. 2. S.

ZAKATYKA, a town of Transylvania, in the county of Lower Weissenburg, on the small river Ampey. Population 4000.

ZAKOBYNIA, a town of Austrian Poland, on the Dniester, frontiers of Moldavia. Population 5500.

ZAMBEZE, or CIAMA, a large river of Eastern Africa, which falls into the Indian ocean, in Long. 37. E. Lat. 19. S.

ZAMORA, a town of Spain, capital of a province of the same name, near the Douro. It has narrow streets, and a gloomy interior. It has a few manufactures of serge and linen, and a school for engineers. Population 9000. 33 miles N. Salamanca.

ZAMORA, a well built town of Mexico, and capital of a jurisdiction of the same name, in the intendancy of Valladolid, on the Rio Grande. It extends a quarter of a league from N. to S., and some what less from E. to W. Pop. 300 families of Spaniards, mustees, and mulattoes. 155 miles W. N. W. Mexico.

ZAMORA, a town of Quito, province of Jaen de Bracamoros, on the river Zamora. 234 miles S. Quito.

ZAMORA, a large river of Quito, which falls into a tributary of the Amazons.

ZAMUSKI, a town in the south-east of Poland, 47 miles S. S. E. Lublin. It has long been considered a military station of importance. In 1656 it was unsuccessfully besieged by the Swedes; in 1715 it was surprised by the Saxons; and in the civil contests of 1771, the Poles were defeated in its vicinity, by the Russians. In 1812 it was one of the few towns in which the French left a garrison, after their retreat from Russia. It has a stately cathedral, several churches, a lyceum, and classical school. Pop. 6000. Long. 23. 15. E. Lat. 50. 43. N.

ZAMPAT, CHEMPALIA, or ZEMPOALA, a city of Mexico. When Cortez landed in the year 1519, it was a large city, and its inhabitants amounted to 20,000 or 30,000. 50 miles E. Puebla de los Angeles.

ZAREVILFE, a port town of the United States, and capital of Muskingum county, Ohio, on the Muskingum, over which are two bridges. It contains a court-house, two banks, two printing offices, a woollen manufactory, two glass manufactories, and 317 houses, many of which are handsome. There is a copperas mine near the town. 70 miles N. E. Chillicothe.

ZANGHEAR. This term, which signifies literally the country of the Blacks, has been vaguely applied to a large extent of the eastern coast of Africa, between Mozambique and the Red sea.

ZANKABADA, a village of European Turkey, in Greece, province of Magnesia. Houses 400.

ZANT, the ancient Zacynthus, an island of the Mediterranean, forming a part of the Ionian republic, and situated at a short distance to the south of Cephalonia, and to the west of the ancient Elis, in the Moræ or Peloponnesus. Its form is irregular; its length 15 miles; its breadth above 8; its circumference more than 30; its area about 160. In its aspect it is the finest of the Ionian islands, presenting, when viewed from the sea above the town of Zante, a prospect of valleys and endurances richly cultivated, and covered with hamlets or villages, embosomed in olive plantations. Zante has no large rivulets. The climate, though extremely hot in summer, is not unwholesome. Like the neighbouring islands, it is subject to frequent shocks of earthquakes. Its chief products are currants, olives, and other fruits of a warm latitude (39. N.) Cotton and silk are cultivated to a small extent; and pasturage is very scanty, in consequence of the droughts of some years. Goats are the only live stock. Population 40,000. Of these, above 16,000 reside in the town of Zante; the rest in villages, hamlets, and scattered habitations, many of which are pleasantly situated along the coast. The island fell into the hands of the British, in October 1807. It sends seven deputies to the Ionian parliament, and is similar in mode of government, to the other islands of that republic.

ZANTE, the Zagynthus of the ancients, the capital of the foregoing island, on the eastern coast, about 12 miles nearly west of Cape Tormese, in the Morea. It is pleasantly situated at the bottom of a small bay. In its appearance, Zante resembles an Italian town. The principal street, which traverses it in its whole length, is broad and handsome; it is bordered with well built houses and churches, some supported by colonnades; others provided with piazzas, which, in a sultry climate like this, are of incalculable benefit. The market-place, situated near the sea, is spacious and well laid out. The houses are built, partly of brick, partly of wood; and, on account of the frequency of earthquakes, seldom exceed one or two stories in height. Of the churches, several are well built, but none particularly striking. The harbour is capacious. The environs of Zante are extremely pleasant and picturesque. Pop. 18,000.

ZANTHAR, an island in the Indian ocean, near the coast of Africa, about 45 miles in length, and 15 in breadth.

ZARA, the capital of Austrian Dalmatia, on the shore of the Adriatic, 90 miles S. N. E. Fiume. It stands on a point of land which runs out into the sea, and forms an excellent harbour, capable of containing a whole fleet. It is strongly fortified. Zara has several good edifices, in particular the cathedral, and its five churches. The public establishments are a gymnasium, a high normal school, the government offices, and the courts of appeal. Population 8000.

ZARAGOZA, a city of New Granada, province of Antioquia, between the rivers Cauca and Magdalena. It has 200 house-keepers.

ZARCA, a town of European Turkey, in Thessaly. Population 5000.

ZAREVO-KOONCHATA, a town of European Russia. Population 5000.

ZAREVO-SANTICHURSK, a town of European Russia, government of Viatska, on the Kokchaga. Population 3200.

ZARITSKY, a town of European Russia, government of Saratov. Population 2300.

ZARKE, a town of Poland, 43 miles N. N. W. Cracow. Population 2300.

ZARUMA, a town of Quito, in the province of Loja, 30 miles N. W. Loja. Pop. 10000.

ZAVULA, a town of Mexico, 243 miles W. with a slight elevation S. of Mexico. Population 500 families.

ZDZEW, a town of Prussian Poland, on the borders of Silesia, 39 miles N. N. E. Breslau. Population 3500.

ZEALAND, a province of the Netherlands, which comprises the ancient county of Zealand and Dutch Flanders, and is bounded W. by the sea, N. by Gorée and Overflakke, and E. and S. by Heilant and Flanders. The chief part of this province consists of islands at the mouth of the Scheldt, viz. Schouwen, Duiveland, Tholen, Walcheren, North and South Beveland, and Wollersdyk. The continental part is merely a strip lying along the south bank of the Hond or West Scheldt. Area of the whole 570 square miles. Population 111,000. The surface is level throughout, and lies so low, that it is necessary to protect the country from storms by large dykes, which run along the coast and the sides of the rivers, and are kept up at great labour and expence. Different parts of this province have been at times exposed to heavy calamities, from the sea breaking over the dykes in storms at high tides, particularly in 1302, 1399, 1522, 1552, and 1518. In these catastrophes whole towns and districts have been overflowed and abandoned. The soil of Zealand is a rich black mould, excellent for pasturage, and the culture of such crops as madder, flax, and cole seed, which require a very heavy soil. Wheat is raised chiefly in South Beveland. It carries on a very considerable trade, and exports large quantities of corn, madder, flax, salt meat, linen yarn, rape-seed, and oil. Its chief towns are Middelburg, Flushing, and Zierie Zee.

ZEALAND, the largest of the Danish islands, is situated between the Cattegat and the Baltic, and is separated from Sweden by the Sound, and from Funen by the arm of the sea called the Great Belt. It extends from 65. 2. to 56. 8. N. lat.; has an area of 2600 square miles, with 310,000 inhabitants; and contains the Danish capital Copenhagen.

ZEALAND, NEW, two islands in the South Pacific ocean, first discovered by Tasman. In the year 1642; he traversed the eastern coast from lat. 34. to 43., and entered the strait called Cook's strait. It was Cook who, in 1769 and 1770, discovered that they were two islands, having sailed completely round both. The northernmost of these islands is called by the natives Ekehinomauwe, and the southernmost Taval, or Tovy Poonamou. Upon referring to the map of this country, it will be seen that Ekehinomauwe, or the northern island, running from the North Cape, which is in Lat. 34. 20. S. to Cape Pailier, in 41. 30. S., contains 138 miles in length; and taking the medium breadth, which varies from five miles at Sandy Bay

100 at the East Cape, at about 60 miles, this extent will include 26,160 square miles, or 16,742,400 square acres; while Tawai Poehammon, the southern island, extending from 41. 30. to 47. 25. S., stretches 360 miles in length, and estimating its medium breadth at 100 miles, contains not less than 36,000 square miles, or 23,040,000 square acres. These islands were visited by Mr Nicolas in the years 1814 and 1815, for the purpose of establishing missionaries among the natives. The general face of the country, as far as they had an opportunity of exploring it, is undulating; and the hills rise with a varied ascent, from inconsiderable eminences to lofty mountains. The whole of the northern island, if we except a few spots on the western side, appears admirably well adapted for the purposes of cultivation; but the southern island is described by Captain Cook as mountainous, and apparently barren. Even here, however, the astonishing height of the trees found growing upon it, as well as their great abundance, would seem to indicate a fertile soil. Mr Nicolas mentions, that, in their excursions into the interior of the northern island, they found that the soil varied in its quality, but generally appeared extremely fertile. Everywhere a fine rich verdure met the eye, and gave a favourable impression of the genial influence of the climate. Though not removed farther than 11 degrees from the tropics, the climate was found by the missionaries to be delightful; the thermometer varying between 74 degrees, its height in summer, and 63 degrees, its height in winter. The plantations looked as flourishing and green as they would in Britain in the latter end of spring, or in the beginning of summer. This verdant and fertile appearance was not in the least diminished by the heats of summer; for there were occasionally soft and mellow showers that descended to refresh the lands, and several days of continual rain were also experienced. The country produces trees of an amazing growth, which rise in wild luxuriance in every direction. Pines of different descriptions are here to be met with, soaring to a height which leaves no similarity between them and the tallest that ever grew on the mountains of Norway. Many trees are admirably adapted for ornamental works requiring a fine grain, the wood being of this nature, and susceptible of a high polish. The animal kingdom in New Zealand includes but few species, and the quadrupeds in particular are very scarce, amounting only to five, a rat, a small bat, the sea-bear, or urine seal; the fourth, the animal called by Lord Anson the posidon; and the guano or lizard. The birds, though not so numerous as in some other parts, possess some of them both a melodious voice and a beautiful appearance. Around the coast there is the most remarkable abundance of fish; nor is the profusion more remarkable than the variety. Every creek swarms with fish, which are not only whole some, but equally delicious with those of Europe. "The ship seldom anchored (says Captain Cook) in any station, or, with a light gale, passed any place that did not afford us enough with hook and line to serve the whole ship's company, especially to the southward." Several missionary stations have been established in New Zealand, for the double purpose of civilising the ignorant natives, and instructing them in the truths of the Christian religion; and the missionaries continue still struggling against the serious obstacles opposed to their progress, from the ferocious habits and superstitions of the natives, by whom they are frequently ill-treated and abused. It was in the year 1814 that the first missionary settlers were established among the New Zealanders, on the Bay of Islands, by the Rev. Samuel Marsden, well known for his unwearied perseverance in this enterprise, and for the skill with which he has conducted it. Many difficulties were encountered; but the settlers still continued their efforts. The settlements were again visited in 1819 by Mr Marsden, when a track of land, consisting of thirteen thousand acres, was purchased from one of the chiefs, and the missionaries were settled on it. He also undertook a journey across the island, on which he discovered a large river, making its way, with its tributary streams, into the sea, on the opposite shore. This river he named Gambier. He has since visited the settlements, for the purpose of superintending and encouraging the missionaries; and several New Zealanders, who were brought to New Holland, and had there an opportunity of witnessing the arts and improvements of civilised life, have been of great service to the missions. On the part of the missionaries there has been no want of perseverance or of courage. But the warlike habits and savage manners of the natives oppose great obstacles to their exertions. They are in all respects savages, possess their characteristic cruelty, improvidence, and brutality—their hatred of industry—and their disposition to rob and steal wherever they can. The missionaries having, of course, no force to oppose for their protection, are frequently maltreated by them, and abused when they refuse to comply with their requests for iron tools, or any other article they may take a fancy to; and their lives do not appear to be in great security, stationed as they are among such a horde of merciless savages. The progress they have already made, under so many discouragements and obstacles, is certainly astonishing. Among other enterprises, they have succeeded in reducing to writing the language of the natives, and have constructed a New Zealand grammar, for the benefit of such new missionaries as may incline to adventure on this field of missionary enterprise. Pop. calculated from 100,000 to 150,000.

XXBRY, a town of the island of Malta, said to contain 1000 inhabitants.

ZENEN, a town of Hungary, on the river Tarza. Population 2100.

ZENID, a city of Arabia, once the capital of Yemar, and the seat of a most extensive trade. 52 miles N. Mocha.

ZERU ISLE, one of the Philippine islands, situated about Long. 123. or 124. E. It is 108 miles in length, by 24 in breadth.

ZEIDEN, a town of Transylvania, north-west of Cronstadt. Population 3200.

ZELA, a seaport, capital of the Kingdom of Adel, situated to the south of Abyssinia.

ZEITUN, SEITIN, or ISHIN, a town of Greece. It is an open town, and contains 4000 inhabitants, who export silk, cotton, and corn. 18 miles S. by E. Larissa.

ZEITUN, a town of Malta. Pop. 3200.

ZEITZ, an ancient town of Prussian Saxony, on the Elbe, 67 miles W. Dresden. It has manufactures of woollens, leather, and earthenware. Population 5400.

ZELAYA, a town of Mexico, intendency of Valladolid. Pop. 600. 110 miles N.W. Mexico.

ZEIHEM, a village of the Netherlands, in Gelderland. Population 2200.

ZEHL, or CEHL, a city of Germany, in Hanover, at the confluence of the rivers Pubbe and Aller. It is surrounded with a mound and moat. It has several charitable institutions, an orphan-house, a lunatic-hospital, a poor-house; also a school of surgery, and a society of agriculture. Pop. 3200. 65 miles S. Hamburg.

ZELLERFELD, a town of Germany, in Hanover, in the Upper Hartz. Pop. 3200.

ZEMKO, a town of Austrian Illyria, in Liria, with 2600 inhabitants.

ZENGO, a town of Austrian Croatia, 42 miles S.E. Fiume. Pop. 2200.

ZENST, a town of Germany, duchy of Anhalt-Dessau, on the river Nutla. Pop. 3000. 63 miles W. S.W. Berlin.

ZERNOWITZ, a town of Hungary, on the river Gran. Population 4000.

ZERUMA, a village of New Granada, province of Guayaquil. Pop. 6000.

ZIELENRODE, a town of Germany, principality of Reuss. Pop. 3600.

ZIA, or ZEA, the ancient Cos, an island of the Greek archipelago, in the group of the Cyclades, situated to the south-west of Negroponte, and about 10 miles from Cape Colonna. Its length is 15 miles; its breadth 8. It is fertile, and tolerably cultivated. Its products are vines, mulberries, figs, cotton, and corn. Pop. 600. Long. 24. 24. E. Lat. 37. 30. N.

ZIEHL, or THIELER, a river in the west of Switzerland, which joins the Aar.

ZIELENSFELD, a town of Prussia, 22 miles E. N. E. Frankfurt on the Oder. Pop. 3100.

ZIERIKSEE, a town of the Netherlands, province of Zeeland, on the island of Schouwen. Its public buildings are the church-hall and the principal church. Pop. 6300. 30 miles S. W. Rotterdam.

ZIMTI, a town of South America, province of Carthagena. 120 miles S. S. E. Carthagena.

Zirs, a palatinate in the north of Hungary, bordering on Poland. Area 1800 square miles; population 160,000.

Zir, a river of Africa, between Foz and Taflet. It flows southwards, and loses itself in the sands of Taflet.

ZITANA, a village of South America, in New Granada, 120 miles S. W. Santa Fe de Antioquia.

ZITTAU, a town of Germany, in Saxony and Upper Lusatia, on the Maudan. It is tolerably built, contains a work-house, an orphan-house, a theatre, and several schools. Pop. 7200. 47 miles E. by S. Dresden.

ZIZ, a town of Moravia, 13 miles N. N. E. Hradisch. Population 1900.

ZIZCZOW, a circle of Austrian Galicia, on the borders of the kingdom of Poland. Area 2000 square miles; population 200,000.

ZIZCZOW, a town of Austrian Poland, and the capital of a circle of that name. It has a large public school; also a manufacture of canvas. Population 6200.

ZKAYM, the chief town of a circle of the same name, in Austria, near the Theya. It contains some good public edifices, such as the Carthusian monastery, the abbey of Jaka, an old palace, and a council-house. Population 5200. 46 miles N. N. W. Vienna.

ZOETTERVOUR, a village of the Netherlands, 3 miles S. Leyden. Pop. 2000.

ZORKIEW, a town of Austrian Poland, 10 miles N. Lemberg. Pop. 2200.

ZOMBOR, a town of Hungary, in the palatinate of Bacs or Batsch. It is nothing more than an assemblage of cottages, with few public buildings, except a Catholic and a Greek church, along with the government offices. Pop. 15,000.

ZOPFINGEN, an ancient town of Switzerland, near the river Aar. Pop. 1100. 24 miles S. N. W. Lucerne.

ZORRIG, a town of Prussian Saxony, government of Merseburg. Population 1700.

ZORSTOUR, a village of Prussia, province of Brandenburg, 6 miles N. by E. Custring; noted for the defeat of the Russians by the king of Prussia, in 1758.

ZORRUA, a town in the island of Malta, which contains 3500 inhabitants.

ZOU-WAN, a flourishing little town of Tunis, in Africa, 35 miles S. W. Tunis.

ZUENNA, a town of Italy, in the Piedmontese province of Biella, on the Arol. Pop. 5000.

ZUCKMANTH, a town of Silesia, 17 miles N. W. Jagerndorf. Population 3000.

ZUZCO, a town of Spain, in Cordova, 27 miles S. E. Cordova. Population 3000.

ZUFFENHARH, a town of Hindostan, province of Allahabad. Population 20,000. Long. 82. 40. E. Lat. 25. 40. N.

ZUG, the smallest of the Swiss cantons, in the interior of the country, surrounded by the cantons of Zurich, Schwitz, Lucerne, and Argow. Area 120 square miles. Pop. 15,000. Its lakes are those of Zug and Lugano.

Zug, capital of the preceding canton, on Lake Zug, 75 miles S. Zurich. Pop. 1000.

ZUGLA, a town of Prussia, in Germany, on the railway route to Mourzonk, 48 miles E. N. E. Mourzonk.

ZULLICHAU, an island town of Prussia, in Brandenburg, 48 miles E. S. E. Frankfurt on the Oder. Population 3300.

ZUTZ, a town of Austria-Silesia, 30 miles E. S. W. Oppeln. Population 2300.

ZUMANGO, one of the five lakes in the valley of Mexico, about 10 miles from that city.

ZVERNIX, a town of European Turkey, in Bosnia. It stands on a steep rock, on the Drina. Population 14,000. 76 miles W. by S. Belgrade.

Zurich, a canton in the north of Switzerland, having that of Thurgau to the E., that of Aargau to the W. Its area, 946 square miles, is somewhat smaller than the average size of an English county; but its population, 163,000, is such as to rank it among the best peopled tracts of the continent of Europe. It is fertile and well cultivated. The general aspect of its territory is pleasant, though without that bold and magnificent scenery, which marks the frontier and south of Switzerland. The hills, which do not rise above 3200 feet, are separated by beautiful valleys and lakes. Rich pastures and extensive orchards meet the eye of the traveller in every direction. Its territory was the scene of important military operations in 1705 and 1798.

Zurich, the capital of the above canton, stands on the river Limmat, at the northern extremity of the lake of Zurich, in a narrow valley between hills. Zurich contains few public buildings of note. The town-hall is large and well situated, but inelegant; and of the four churches, none are entitled to notice. On the other hand, the beauty of scenery is striking, and there is a number of beautiful promenades around the town. Zurich has long been a place of manufacture and trade. Its silk-works, for which it was noted, have been lately replaced by cotton-works, which are carried on to a considerable extent. Few places of the size of Zurich have surpassed it in the cultivation of literature. It contains extensive collections of books, manuscripts, paintings, and antiques. The town library contains 40,000 volumes; that of the cathedral is also considerable. Of schools and literary establishments, great and small, there are here no less than 30. It has a post-office and express-house. Pop. 11,000. 30 miles E. N. E. Bern.

Zurich, a lake of Switzerland, extending in the form of a crescent, chiefly through the cantons of Zurich, but partly also through those of Schaffhausen and St. Gall. It is 15 miles long, and 10 miles wide. It is the source of the Rhodan and Limmat rivers, and is the only lake in Switzerland which, though situated in a mountainous tract, is not a mere reservoir for the waters of the surrounding mountains.

The length is about 30. This lake, which rivals those of Geneva or Lucerne in aerial sublimity of scenery, is still one of the loveliest in Europe, being surrounded by a population and well cultivated country, and the prospect on its banks being richly varied. It abounds in fish.

ZURPHEN, an inland town of the Netherlands, in the province of Gelderland, on the IJssel, where it is joined by the Berckel, which fills the ditches, and flows through the town. Zutphen is fortified and strong by its situation, which is in the midst of drained fens. The manufactures are very limited, consisting of cotton weaving on a small scale, the making of glue, and brewing. 10 miles S. Deventer. Long. 6. 11. 52. E. Lat. 52. 8. 26. N.

ZUYDER-ZEE, an inland sea or gulph of the German ocean, surrounded chiefly by the Dutch provinces of Holland, Overijssel, and Friesland. Its length from N. to S. is about 60 miles; its breadth varies from 15 to 30. The trade of Amsterdam is carried on along the Zuyder-Zee, the entrance to which is at the Texel. The communication of this sea with the lake of Haarlem is by the south.

ZWALUWE, a village of the Netherlands, in North Brabant, with 2100 inhabitants.

ZWARTKOP RIVER, a small river in the eastern part of the territory of the Cape of Good Hope, which forms a bay of the same name, called sometimes Algoa bay.

ZWILLINGEN, a district in the settlement of the Cape of Good Hope, extending eastward from Cape Town, and bounded N. by the Zwarte Berg, or Black Mountains. The length is about 380 miles, and its breadth 60.

ZWENITZ, a town of Saxony, 45 miles W. S. W. Dresden. Population 1200.

ZWICKAU, a town of Saxony, on the Mulde, 63 miles W. S. W. Dresden.

ZWICKAU, a market town of Bohemia, 4 miles W. Gabel. Population 1700.

ZWITTAU, a walled town of Moravia, 37 miles W. N. W. Olmutz. Population 2600.

Zwell, a town of the Netherlands, the chief place of the province of Overijssel, on the river Aa. It is intersected by two canals, and strongly fortified. The interior is well built; it contains eight churches and a work-house; but the only remarkable structure is the church of St. Michael. Outside of the walls are three suburbs. It has a pretty active trade. The principal manufacture is refining of sugar. Population 12,000. 48 miles E. by N. Amsterdam.

ZWONITZ, a town of Saxony, 47 miles E. W. Dresden. Population 1200.

ZWYLL, a town of the Netherlands, 18 miles E. N. E. Heerle. Population 2300.

ZYDACHNA, a town of European Russia, in the province of Volhynia, on the Tseret. It has some traffic in woolen, silk, linen, cotton, and wine. Population 2000. 210 miles S. by E. Minsk.

